Seidel, M. & E. Mendelson. eds. Homer to Brecht. Jan.
Spengemann, W. C. The Adventurous Muse. Apr.

PHILOSOPHY & RELIGION

Arlington House
Wurmbrand, R. My Answer to the Moscow Atheists. Feb.

Brigham Young Univ Pr
Bitton, D. Guide to Mormon Diaries and Autobiographies. Feb.

Cornell Univ. Pr.
Dillon, J. The Middle Platonists. Mar.
Hallett, G. A. Companion to Wittgenstein's "Philosophical Investigations". Apr.
Malcolm, N. Memory and Mind. Feb.
Malcolm, N. Thought and Knowledge. Feb.
Parke, H. W. Festivals of the Athenians. Feb.
Schwartz, S. P. ed. Naming, Necessity, and Natural Kinds. Feb.
Steintrager, J. Bentham. Jun.
Tragesser, R. S. Phenomenology and Logic. Apr.
Vesey, G. Personal Identity. Feb.

Dutton
Pearce, J. C. Magical Child. Apr.

Farrar
Merton, T. Secular Journal. Apr.

Fortress
Braaten, C. E. The Flaming Center. Jun.
Coats, G. W. & B. O. Long. Canon and Authority. Aug.
Hengle, M. Christ and Power. Mar.
Holl, K. What Did Luther Understand by Religion? Apr.
Houlden, J. L. Patterns of Face. Apr.

Klein, C. Anti-Judaism in Christian Theology. Aug.
Loehman, J. Encountering Marx. Apr.
Perrin, N. The Resurrection According to Matthew, Mark, Luke. Mar.
Raitt, T. M. A Theology of Exile. Aug.
Reumann, J., ed. The Church Emerging. Apr.
Robertson, D. The Old Testament and the Literary Critic. Apr.
Sanders, E. P. Paul and Palestinian. Jul.
Sapp, S. Sexuality, the Bible, and Science. Jun.
Schlerermacher, F. The Christian Faith. May.
Stuhlmacher, P. Historical Criticism and Theological Interpretation of Scripture. May.

Gordon & Cremonesi
Faber-Kaiser, A. The Kashmir Hypothesis. Mar.

Hastings
Merrill, J. C. Existential Journalism. Jan.

Knopf
Leboyer, F. Inner Beauty, Inner Light. May.

Macmillan
Mirsky, M. J. My Search for the Messiah. May.

Pantheon
Sartre, J. Life/Situations. Apr.
Watts, A. Tao. Mar.

Penguin
Narayan, R. K. The Ramayana. Jun.
Thomson, J. A. K. trans. The Ethics of Aristotle. Jun.

Princeton Univ. Pr.
Clark, J. The Philosophical Anarchism of William Godwin. Apr.
Corbin, H. Spiritual Body and Celestial Earth. May.
Teixidor, J. The Pagan God. May.
Wolff, R. Understanding Rawls. Apr.

Random
Chung, G. C. C. The Thousand Songs of Milarepa. Vol. I. Apr.
Hoover, T. Zen Culture. Apr.
Kongtrul, J. The Torch of Certainty. May.
Lauf, D. I. Secret Doctrines of the Tibetan Books of the Dead. Jun.

Reader's Digest
Kaufmann, W. Religions in Four Dimensions. Apr.

Scribners
Fuller, R. The New Testament in Current Study. Jul.
Grant, M. Jesus of Nazareth. Apr.

S & S
Graham, D. He Walks With Me. May.
Ginsburgh, I., Ph.D. First, Man. Then, Adam! Feb.
Jones, M. The Eastern Way of Love. Apr.

Stein & Day
Lucas, J. & D. Washburn. Theomatics. Jun.

Univ. of Illinois Pr.
Marcovich, M. ed. Illinois Classical Studies. Apr.
Suppe, F. ed. The Structure of Scientific Theories. May.

Univ. of Massachusetts Pr.
Kaplan, E. K. Michelet's Poetic Vision. Jun.
Prior, A. N. & K. Fine. Worlds, Times and Selves. Apr.

Wesleyan Univ. Pr.
Barfield, O. Rediscovery of Meaning and Other Essays. Mar.

Westminster
Childs, B. S. Old Testament Books for Pastor and Teacher. Apr.
Danielou, J. The Origins of Latin Christianity. May.
Danielou, J. The Theology of Jewish Christianity. May.
deVaux, R. The Early History of Israel. May.
Ernst, E. G. Without Help or Hindrance. Mar.
Glyn, C. In Him Was Life. Mar.
Griffin, D. R. & T. J. Altizer. eds. John Cobb's Theology in Process. May.
Hayes, J. H. & J. M. Miller. eds. Israelites and Judean History. Jul.
Kee, H. C. Community of the New Age. May.
Kenney, L. F. Memories and Meditations. Mar.
Lonergan, B. J. F. Way to Nicea. Mar.
Martin, G. Spiritus Contra Spiritum. Apr.
Menendez, A. J. Religion at the Polls. Apr.
Meves, C. Bible Answers Us with Pictures. Apr.
Mooney, C. F. Religion and the American Dream. Mar.
O'Collins, G. The Calvary Christ. Mar.
Otwell, J. H. And Sarah Laughed. Apr.
Pannenberg, W. Faith and Reality. May.
Rogers, J. & others. Case Studies in Christ and Salvation. Apr.
Troeger, T. H. Meditation: Escape to Reality. Mar.
Wogaman, J. P. Christian Method of Moral Judgement. Mar.

Yale Univ. Pr.
Edwards, J. Apocalyptic Writings. Vol. 5. May.
Outka, G. Agape. Apr.
Wilson, R. R. Genealogy and History in the Biblical World. Jun.

POETRY

Atheneum
Bell, M. Stars Which See, Stars Which Do Not. Feb.
Hecht, A. Millions of Strange Shadows. Feb.
Merwin, W. S. The Compass Flower. Jan.

Braziller
Dubie, N. The Illustrations. Mar.
Simic, C. Charon's Cosmology. Apr.

Cornell Univ. Pr.
Bloom, H. Wallace Stevens. May.

Dodd
Frost, R. North of Boston Poems. Mar.

Dutton
Kavanaugh, J. Winter Has Lasted Too Long. June.

Evans
Larrick, N. Crazy to be Alive in Such a Strange World. Mar.

THE UNIVERSITY

OF MASSACHUSETTS

PRESS

SPRING — SUMMER

1977

AMHERST, MA 01002

FROM THE GHETTO: The Fiction of Abraham Cahan
Jules Chametzky 176 pp., cloth, $10.00, ISBN 0-87023-225-8, March

RUTH V. HEMENWAY, M.D.: A Memoir of Revolutionary China, 1924-1941
Ruth V. Hemenway, M.D., Edited by Fred W. Drake 216 pp., cloth, $12.50, ISBN 0-87023-230-4, April

CHANGING RURAL LANDSCAPES Edited by Ervin H. Zube and Margaret J. Zube 160 pp., cloth, $10.00; paper, $4.95, ISBN (cloth) 0-87023-228-2; (paper) 0-87023-235-5, April

WORLDS, TIMES AND SELVES A.N. Prior and Kit Fine
170 pp., cloth, $10.00, ISBN 0-87023-227-4, April

YOUNG MAN THOREAU Richard Lebeaux
256 pp., cloth, $12.50, ISBN 0-87023-231-2, May

A RAINBOW FOR THE CHRISTIAN WEST René Depestre
Translated with an introduction by Joan Dayan 272 pp., cloth, $12.50, ISBN 0-87023-229-0, May

THE SURREALIST VOICE OF ROBERT DESNOS Mary Ann Caws
208 pp., cloth, $12.50, ISBN 0-87023-223-1, May

MICHELET'S POETIC VISION: A Romantic Philosophy of Nature, Man, and Woman
Edward K. Kaplan 256 pp., cloth, $12.50, ISBN 0-87023-236-3, June

NEW ENGLAND'S PROSPECT William Wood
Edited with an introduction by Alden T. Vaughan 160 pp., cloth, $12.50, ISBN 0-87023-226-6, July

HORMONE ACTION IN THE WHOLE LIFE OF PLANTS Kenneth V. Thimann
390 pp., cloth, $35.00, ISBN 0-87023-224-X, August

Farrar
Berryman, J. The Freedom of the Poet. May.
Berryman. J. Henry's Fate and Other Poems. Apr.
Lowell, R. Selected Poems. Aug.
Solzhenitsyn, A. Prussian Nights. Apr.
Walcott, D. Sea Grapes. May.

Stephen Greene
Beston, H. Especially Maine.

Houghton
Rilke, R. M. Duino Elegies and the Sonnets to Orpheus. Feb.

Knopf
Updike, J. Tossing and Turning. May.

Liveright: Norton
Cummings de Foret, N. Charon's Daughter. Jun.

Macmillan
Montague, J., ed. The Book of Irish Verse. Feb.

Morrow
Simpson, L. Searching for the Ox. Mar.

Norton
Ammons, A. R. The Snow Poems. Jun.
Brown, R. Cora Fry. Mar.

Pantheon
Lindbergh, A. M. Gift from the Sea. Mar.

Princeton Univ. Pr.
Bachman, I. Song Above the Dust. Jul.
Blackmur, R. P. Complete Poems of R. P. Blackmur. Jul.
Gonzalez, A. "Harsh World" and Other Poems. Mar.
Perse, St. J. Canto for an Equinox. May.
Richardson, J. Reservations. Apr.

Random
Jordan, J. Things That I Do in The Dark. Jun.
Koch, K. I Never Told Anybody . . . . Mar.
Koch, L. The Duplications. Apr.

Univ. of Illinois Pr.
Morgan. F. Poems of the Two Worlds. Feb.

Univ. of Massachusetts Pr.
Caws, M. A. The Surrealist Voice of Robert Desnos. May.
Depestre, R. A Rainbow for the Christian West. May.
McHugh, H. Dangers. Mar.
Williams, C. K. With Ignorance. May.

Vanguard
Heyen, W. The Swastika Poems.

Viking
Ashberry, J. The Double Dream of Spring. Mar.
Ashberry, J. Rivers and Mountains. Mar.
Bogan, L. The Blue Estuaries. Mar.
Gilbert, C. Queen of Darkness. Jun.
McElroy, D. Making It Simple. Mar.
Plumly, S. Out-of-the-Body Travel. Mar.
Schmitz, D. Goodwill, Inc. Mar.
Shapiro, D. Lateness. Aug.
Stanford, A. In Mediterranean Air. May.

Wesleyan Univ. Pr.
Edson, R. The Reason Why The Closet-Man Is Never Sad. Mar.
Genser, C. Taking on The Local Color. Mar.

Yale Univ. Pr.
Broumas, O. Beginning with O. Apr.
Taylor, E. The Poems of Edward Taylor. Apr.

POLITICAL SCIENCE & PUBLIC ADMIN.

Arlington House
Brown, H. The Reconstruction of the Republic. Mar.
Toledano, R. The Greatest Plot in History. Feb.

Brigham Young University Press
Leroy, F. Without Fear or Favor. Mar.

Cornell Univ. Pr.
Colbert, E. Southeast Asia in International Politics, 1941-1956. Mar.
Riviere, C. Guinea. Jun.

Crown
MacDougall, M.D. We Almost Made It. Mar.

Facts on File
Sobel, L. A. ed. Jobs, Money & Pollution. Jul.
Sobel, L. A. ed. Medical Science & the Law. Aug.

Gordon & Cremonesi
Green, D. Land, Power and Politics. Apr.

Stephen Greene
Smallwood, F. Free & Independent.

Greenwood
Helmreich, W. B. comp. Afro-Americans and Africa. May.
Jackson, H. F. The FLN in Algeria. Apr.

Internat. Arts & Sciences
Perolle, P. M. Fundamentals of the Chinese Communist Party.
Schiller, H. I. Communication and Cultural Domination.
Sombart, W. Why is There No Socialism in the United States?

Knopf
Naipaul, V. S. India: A Wounded Civilization. Jun.

KTO
Hill, R. A. Social and Political Forces in Dependent Areas of the Caribbean. Jun.
Kopelev, Lev. To Be Preserved Forever. Feb.
Roberts, G. W. Women in Jamaica. Jun.

Macmillan
Harkabi, Y. Arab Political Strategies and Israel's Response. Mar.

Morrow
Clark, M. & R. Maxa. Public Trust, Private Lust. Jun.
Stroud, K. How Jimmy Won. Feb.

National Council for the Social Studies
Grambs, J. ed. Teaching About Women in the Social Studies.
Libbelohde, C. ed. Values of the American Heritage.

Norton
Harris, F. R. Potomac Fever. Apr.
Nelson, R. R. The Moon and the Ghetto. Mar.
Woll, P. American Bureaucracy. 2nd ed. Apr.

Ohio Univ. Pr.
Treverton, G. F. The Dollar Drain and the American Forces in Germany. May.

Penguin
Coulam, R. Illusions of Choice. Mar.
Ingelhart, R. The Silent Revolution. Jun.
McAuley, M. Politics and the Soviet Union. Apr.
Moore, J. N. The Arab-Israeli Conflict. Apr.
Ralph Nader Congress Project. Ruling Congress. Jun.
Schandler, H. The Unmaking of a President. May.

Random House
Writers & Scholars. Index on Censorship. Vol. 6. No. I. Feb.
Writers & Scholars. Index on Censorship. Vol. 6. No. 2. Apr.
Writers & Scholars. Index on Censorship. Vol. 6. No. 3. Jun.

S. & S.
Ben-Veniste, R. & G. Frampton. Stonewall. Apr.
Carter, J. A Government as Good as Its People. Mar.

Stein & Day
Li, V. Law Without Lawyers. May.
Schram, M. Running for President 1976. May.

Touchstone: S & S
Goldfarb, R. L. & L. R. Singer. After Conviction. Mar.
Harrington, M. The Twilight of Capitalism. Mar.

Univ. of Illinois Pr.
Davis, M. Interpreters for Nigeria. Apr.
Robinson, G. Tito's Maverick Media. Apr.

Univ. of Massachusetts Pr.
Yergin, D. Shattered Peace. May.

Univ. of Notre Dame Pr.
Baskir, L. M. & W. A. Strauss. Reconciliation after Vietnam. Feb.
Littlewood, T. B. The Politics of Population Control. Jun.

Vanguard
Parry, A. Terrorism

Viking
Chaliand, G. Revolution in the Third World. May.
Silvert, K. The Reason for Democracy. Mar.
Witcover, J. Marathon. Jul.

Yale Univ. Pr.
Bullitt, S. To Be A Politician. Mar.
Clark, M. Antonion Cramsci and the Revolution that Failed. Mar.
Diamond, I. Sex Roles in the State House. Jun.
Fiorina, M. P. Congress—Keystone of the Washington Establishment. Apr.
Goldstene, P. N. The Collapse of Liberal Empire. Mar.
Perlmutter, A. The Military and Politics in Modern Times. May.
Tarrow, S. Between Center and Periphery. May.

PSYCHOLOGY & PARAPSYCHOLOGY

Arco
Silver, Rabbi S. M. Mixed Marriage Between Jew and Gentile. Mar.

Cornell Univ. Pr.
Morton, J. & J. C. Marshall, eds. Psycholinguistics. Apr.

Crowell
Sklar, D. Gods and Beasts. Jun.

Crown
Daley, M. & B. Lochner. How To Get a Man After You're Forty. Apr.
Elliot, R. Astrology for Everyone. Feb.
Martino, M. with H. Martino. Emergence. Jun.
Perls, F., M.D. Gestalt Therapy. Feb.
Puner, M. Getting the Most Out of Your Fifties. Apr.
Schiff, H. S. The Bereaved Parent. Mar.
Sharpe, R. & D. Lewis. Mar.

John Day
McGivern, A. B. & others. Language Stories. Mar.

Delacorte
Rogers, C. Carl Rogers on Personal Power. Mar.

Dial
Rothenberg, M. Children with Emerald Eyes. Jun.
Vogh, Arachne Rising. May.

Dutton
Grof, S., M.D. The Human Encounter with Death. May.
Tanzer, H., D.V.M. Your Pet Isn't Sick (He Just Wants You to Think So). May.

Evans
Baldwin, C. One to One. Mar.
Dethlefsen, T. Voices from Other Lives. Apr.
LeShan, L. You Can Fight for Your Life. Apr.
Willwerth, J. Badge of Madness. Apr.

Farrar
Abrahamsen, D. Nixon vs. Nixon. Mar.

F. & W.
Corriere, R. The Dream Makers. Mar.
Dyer, W. W. & J. Vriend. Counseling Techniques That Work. May.

Gordon & Cremonesi
Liungman, C. What Is IQ? Mar.

Grove
Kerr, C. Sex for Women. Apr.
Walkenstein, E. Don't Shrink to Fit! Feb.
Wyckoff, H. Solving Women's Problems. May.

Houghton Mifflin
Jaynes, J. The Origin of Consciousness in the Breakdown of the Bicameral Mind. Jan.

Seymour Lawrence: Delacorte
Green, E. A. Green. Beyond Biofeedback. Jul.
Pelletier, K. R. Mind as Healer, Mind as Slayer. Mar.

Lippincott
Johnson, S. First Person Singular. May.
Offit, A. The Sexual Self. May.

McGraw-Hill
Aylesworth, T.G., Ph.D. The Story of Vampires. May.
Eimers, R. & Aitchison, R. Effective Parents/Responsible Children. Feb.
Hyde, M. O. Brainwashing and Other Forms of Mind Control. Apr.

Macmillan
Szasz, T. Psychiatric Slavery. Feb.

William Morrow
Goldstine, D. & others. The Dance-Away Lover. May.

Norton
Anglin, J. M. Word, Object, and Conceptual Development. Apr.
Erikson, E. H. Toys and Reasons. Feb.
Hacker, J. J., M.D. Crusaders, Criminals, Crazies. Jan.
Kardiner, A. My Analysis with Freud. Mar.
Lacan, J. Ecrits. May.
May, R, The Meaning of Anxiety. Rev. May.

New from Syracuse . . .

THE ARAB LEFT

Tareq Y. Ismael

Ismael examines the markedly leftist orientation of contemporary Arab nationalism, and in particular the origins of the radical New Left. He analyzes how various nationalistic ideologies have responded to three basic questions which have confronted all Arab nations since World War II: Arab unity, the Palestinian question, and the issue of social transformation. Ismael has used Arabic sources for which he provides English translations. 224 pages

Cloth ISBN 0-8156-0124-7 $15.00
Paper ISBN 0-8156-0125-5 $ 5.95

TOMATOES WERE CHEAPER

Tales from the Thirties
Charles A. Jellison

Jellison recaptures the flavor of American life as it was during the depression-ridden decade of the 1930s. He recalls certain events or persons, not because they were "important," but because each has something special to say about the mood of the country, or about the hopes and fears of everyday people. A collection of heroes, villains, and politicians parades through the book—a corrupt judge who took the money and presumably ran, a poor Southern farm boy who changed baseball forever, a gang of small-time bandits who wanted to make Dillinger "look like a piker," the men of the veterans' bonus march, and many others. Jellison uses newspapers, popular literature of the day, and personal interviews to recreate that unique and unforgettable decade in American history.

March
240 pages
ISBN 0-8156-0130-1 $10.95

"...AND THE HITS JUST KEEP ON COMIN'"

Peter E. Berry

A fusion of definitive statistics and commentary ". . . And the Hits Just Keep on Comin' " spans twenty-two years of popular music history, 1955-1976. Peter E. Berry, a radio personality known as The Flying Dutchman, complements his text with a detailed discography of leading artists and their greatest hits, their million sellers, and their gold and platinum albums. Each chapter is a graphic look at an individual year of American musical taste. To simplify the statistics Berry provides annual charts of the top fifty songs, the week-by-week number-one songs, the most significant artists, and the Grammy and Oscar winners. He presents a musical "world book of records." Included are sixteen pages of photographs of the period's most popular groups and individual recording artists.

March
294 pages
Cloth ISBN 0-8156-0134-4 $12.95
Paper ISBN 0-8156-0135-2 $ 5.95

From your local bookseller or prepaid from
SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY PRESS
Syracuse, New York 13210

Watzlawick, P. & Weakland, J. H. eds. The Interactional View. Feb.
Williams, J. H. Psychology of Women. Apr.

Pantheon
Collier, A. R. D. Laing. Apr.
Kovel, J. A Complete Guide to Therapy. May.
Roman, K. G. Handwriting. Feb.

Parker: Prentice-Hall
Billion. The New Zarrow Miracle Psychic Healing Power. Jun.

Penguin
Fenwick, Dr. S. Getting It. May.
Lee, P. and others. Symposium on Consciousness. Apr.
Naranjo, C. & R. E. Ornstein. On the Psychology of Meditation. Apr.

Prentice-Hall
Steiner, L. R. Psychic Self-Healing for Psychological Problems. Jun.

Princeton Univ. Pr.
Whitmont, E. The Symbolic Quest. Apr.

Random
Jones, M. E. How to Learn Astrology. Jun.
Jones, M. E. Occult Philosophy. Apr.
O'Brien, P. Staying Together. May.
Redd, W. H. & Sleator, W. Take Charge. Feb.
Rodman, R. Not Dying. Apr.

Reward: Prentice-Hall
Novell. 100,000 Dreams and How To Make It Come True.

Scribners
Miller, M., M.D. If the Patient is You (Or Someone You Love). May.

S. & S.
Lilly, J. C., M.D. The Deep Self. Jun.
Silva, J. with Miele, P. The Silva Mind Control Method. May.

Stein & Day
Brennan, J. H. Getting What You Want. Jun.
Brenton, M. Sex Talk. May.
Driberg, T. Ruling Passions. Jun.
Freeman, L. The Casanova Complex. May.
Margolis, S. Fame. Jun.
Martin, J. M. Actualizations. May.
Shev, E. E., M.D. Good Cops/Bad Cops. Jun.

Univ. of Massachusetts Pr.
Long, K. Johnny's Such a Bright Boy, What a Shame He's Retarded. May.

Universe Books
Aitchison, J. The Articulate Mammal. Apr.

Vanguard
Atkin, E. & E. Rubin. Part-Time Father.

Viking
Piaget, J. The Development of Thought. Aug.

Walker
Bord, J. & Bord, C. The Secret Country. Feb.
Swain, J. From My Word to Yours. Mar.
Lindsay, R. Alone and Surviving. Apr.

Yale Univ. Pr.
Eissler, R. S. and others. eds. Physical Illness and Handicap in Childhood. Apr.

WESLEYAN Spring 1977

American History

A LYME MISCELLANY 1776-1976
Edited by George J. Willauer, Jr. with Introduction by John P. Demos
Essays by Bernard Bailyn, Christopher Collier, John W. Ifkovic, Jackson Turner Main, Minor Myers, jr., Harold E. Selesky, and Bruce Stark.
May ISBN 0-8195-5009-4
$15.00

Historiography

ESSAYS IN ANCIENT AND MODERN HISTORIOGRAPHY
by Arnaldo Momigliano
March ISBN 0-8195-5010-8
$20.00

Maritime History

THE REPUBLIC'S PRIVATE NAVY
The American Privateering Business as Practiced by Baltimore in the War of 1812
by Jerome R. Garitee
American Maritime Library, VIII
Published for Mystic Seaport, Inc.
April ISBN 0-8195-5004-3
$17.50

Philosophy

REDISCOVERY OF MEANING AND OTHER ESSAYS
by Owen Barfield
March ISBN 0-8195-5006-x
$12.50

Photography

PHOTOGRAPHS OF ARCHITECTURE
by Philip Trager with Introduction by Samuel M. Green
February ISBN 0-8195-5003-5
$24.95

The Wesleyan Poetry Program

RUSSELL EDSON
The Reason Why the Closet-Man Is Never Sad

CYNTHIA GENSER
Taking on The Local Color

March each Cloth $7.50 Paper $3.45

Wesleyan University Press
Middletown, Connecticut 06457

Provence, S. and others. The Challenge of Daycare. Apr.
Eissler, R. S. and others. eds. Psychoanalytic Assessment. Apr.
Senn, M. J. Speaking Out for America's Children. Apr.

SCIENCE & TECHNOLOGY

Arco
Bavousett, G. B. World War II Aircraft in Combat. Feb.
Bock, Dr. R. F. Vitamin E: Key to Youthful Longevity. Feb.
Chaitow, L. The Acupuncture Treatment of Pain. Mar.
Flato, Dr. E. Warning: Sex May Be Hazardous to Your Health. Feb.
Goldstein, Dr. J. Triumph Over Disease By Fasting & Natural Diet. Jun.
Hardy, M. J. The De Haviland Mosquito. Jan.
Hoehn, Dr. G. Acne Can Be Cured. May.
Kingsford, E. Treatment of Exotic Marine Fish Diseases. Feb.
Miyares & Alba, Drs. Science Students. Jan.
Mullish, H. How to Use a Pocket Calculator. Jun.
Null, G. & S. Null. How to Get Rid of the Poisons in Your Body. May.
Shugar & Bauman. How to Get into Medical and Dental School. Apr.
Solomon, L. College Board Achievement Test: Biology. Jun.
Solomon, L. College Board Achievement Test. 2nd ed. Chemistry. Jun.

Arlington House
Allen, J. & others. Build a Better—and Slimmer—You. May.
Taylor, M. D. Dr. Taylor's Self-Help Medical Guide. Apr.

Atheneum
Burns, T. S. The Secret War for the Ocean Depths. May.
Kezdi, P. You and Your Heart. Jun.
Newbold, H. L., M.D. How To Master the Food Allergies That Make You Fat. Apr.
Seaman, B. & G. Seaman. Women and Crisis in Sex Hormones. Apr.

Brigham Young University Press
Welsh, S. L. & B. Ratcliff. Flowers of the Canyon Country. Mar.

Cornell Univ. Pr.
Comstock, A. B. Ways of the Six-Footed. May.
Goodwin, D. Pigeons and Doves of the World. 2nd ed.
Parker, H. W. & A. G. C. Grandison. Snakes. 2nd ed. Mar.
Phelan, R. M. Automatic Control Systems. Apr.

Crowell
Bracken, J. Your Window Greenhouse. Mar.

Crown
Duplaix, N. World Guide to Mammals. Mar.
Galton, L. Save Your Stomach. Mar.

Delacorte
Walworth, R. F. & G. W. Sjostrom. Subdue the Earth. Mar.

Dodd
Rorvik, D. M. & L. B. Shettles. Choose Your Baby's Sex. Feb.
Ruggieri, S. J. & others. The Healing Sea. Jun.

Domus
Ewers, W. L. Solar Energy.

Dutton
Berry, A. The Iron Sun. Jul.
Lee, L. Walking Through the Fire. May.
Masters, G. & N. L. Browning. The Masters Way to Beauty. Apr.
Reichman, S. J. Great Big Beautiful Doll. May.
Ursin, M. J. A Guide to the Fishes of the Temperate Atlantic Coast. Jul.
Warren, F. Z., M.D. & W. I. Fischman. Sexual Acupuncture. Jul.

Eleanor Friede: Delacorte
Gribbin, J. White Holes. Aug.

Farrar
Boland, M. & Boland, B. Old Wives' Lore for Gardeners. Apr.
Frankel, M. & G. Naftalis. The Grand Jury. May.

F. & W.
Berkson, D. The Foot Book. May.
Gifford-Jones, W., M.D. What Every Woman Should Know About Hysterectomy. Mar.
Huard, P. M. Wong. Oriental Methods of Mental and Physical Fitness. Mar.

Hastings
Gifford, F. Tape. Mar.
Ray. S. F. The Lens and All its Jobs. May.
Samuelson, D. Motion Picture Camera and Lighting Equipment. Apr.
Souto, H. The Technique of the Motion Picture Camera. 3d ed. rev. ed. Mar.
Wilkie, B. Creating Special Effects for TV and Films. Apr.

Houghton
Jerome, J. Truck. Feb.

Knopf
Bull, J. & Farrand. The Audubon Society Field Guide to North American Birds. Jul.
Lanson, L. From Woman to Woman. Mar.
Lawrence, R. D. Paddy. Apr.
Rudloe, J. The Living Dock at Panacea. Apr.
Schafer, R. M. The Tuning of the World. Jun.
Silverman, A City Herbal. Apr.
Udvardy, M. D. F. The Audubon Society Field Guide to North American Birds. Jul.

Lippincott
Bierman, J. and B. Toohey. The Diabetic's Sports and Exercise Book. Mar.
Dank, Milton. The Glider Gang. Mar.
Reader, J. and H. Croze. Pyramids of Life. Mar.
Roberts, E. & others., comp. & ed. The Horse World Catalog. Apr.
Rockwell, F. & E. Grayson. The Complete Book of Bulbs. Aug.
Rosenthal, S. Cosmetic Surgery. Jun.
Thomas, B. The Complete World of Kites. Jun.
Taylor, D. Zoo Vet. Apr.

McGraw
Burstein, J. Mr. Slim Goodbody Presents the Inside Story. Apr.
Catchpole, C. Birds of Prey. Feb.
Cloudsley-Thompson, J. L. Crocodiles and Alligators. Feb.
Cohen, D. The Science of Spying. May.
Joseph, J. M. & Lippincott, S. L. Point to the Stars. 2d ed. Mar.
Pine, T. S. & J. Levine. Measurements and How We Use Them. Apr.
Schwartz, J. Earthwatch. Jun.
Simon, S. Discovering What Puppies Do. Apr.

Macmillan
Applewhite, E. J. Cosmic Fishing. Apr.
Crockett, L. J. Wildly Successful Plants.
Dorian, M. The Seasons. Apr.
Gelatt, R. The Fabulous Phonograph, 1877-1977. Apr.

Morrow
Corea, G. The Hidden Malpractice. Apr.
Dunkell, S. Sleep Positions. Mar.
Ferris, T. The Red Limit. May.
Hitching, F. Earth Magic. Apr.
Horowitz, S., M.D. & N. Offen. Calling Dr. Horowitz. Feb.
Kurland, H. D., M.D. Quick Relief Without Drugs. Jan.
Millman, M. The Unkindest Cut. Jan.
O'Neill, G. K. The High Frontier. Jan.
Riker, T. & H. Rottenberg. The Guide to Buying Plants. Jan.

Norton
Dahlberg, C. C. & Jaffe, J. Stroke. Apr.
Doxiadis, C. A. Action for Human Settlements. Mar.
Doxiadis, C. A. Building Entopia. Mar.
Hayes, D. Rays of Hope. May.
Jastrow, R. Until the Sun Dies. Jun.
Knowles, J. H., M.D. ed. Doing Better and Feeling Worse. Apr.
Moore, P. ed. Modern Astronomy. Mar.
Moore, P. New Guide to the Moon. Mar.
Moore, P. ed. 1977 Yearbook of Astronomy. Jan.
Nader, R. & J. Abbotts. Malignant Giant. May.

Pantheon
Bertherat, T. The Body Has Its Reasons. Jun.
Dychtwald, K. Bodymind. May.
Papanek, V. & J. Hennessey. How Things Don't Work. Jun.

Parker: Prentice-Hall
Handley. The New Talk-A-Matics. Jun.
Lucas. Secrets of the Chinese Herbalists. Jun.

Penguin
French, B. M. The Moon Book. Apr.
Michell, J. Secrets of the Stones. May.
Pitt, V. H. ed. The Penguin Dictionary of Physics. May.
Restak, R. M. Premeditated Man. Apr.
Ridley, B. K. Time, Space and Things. Apr.
Warner, W. Beautiful Swimmers. Apr.

Prentice-Hall
McQueen-Williams, M., M.D. & B. Apisson. A Diet for 100 Healthy Happy Years. Jul.

Princeton Univ. Pr.
Cook, T. D. ed. & others. Stratigraphic Atlas. Jul.
Endler, J. Geographic Variation, Speciation, and Clines. Apr.
Kirby, R. & L. Siebenmann. Foundational Essays on Topological Manifolds, Smoothings, and Triangulations. Apr.
Shuffelton, F. Thomas Hooker, 1586-1647. Jul.

Random
Faulkner, P. T. ed. The Silent Bomb. Jun.
Matson, P. A Place in the Country. Jun.
Phelan, J. Howard Hughes. Feb.
Sagan, C. The Dragons of Eden. May.
Trungpa, C. Born in Tibet. Jun.

Reward: Prentice-Hall
Delaney. Ultrapsychonics.
Hurdle. A Country Doctors Commonsense Health Manual.

Rutgers Univ. Pr.
Jumikis, A. F. Thermal Geotechnics. Apr.
Leck, C. The Birds of New Jersey. Mar.
Tedrow, J. C. F. Soils of the Polar Landscapes. Jan.

Scribners
Chapman, C. Inner Plants. Jul.
Milne, L. J. & M. Milne. Ecology Out of Joint. Jun.
Mitton, S. Exploring the Galaxies. Mar.
Moore, P. A-Z of Astronomy. Jun.
Thomson, Wm. A., M.D. Herbs that Heal. Mar.

S. & S.
Beadle, M. The Cat. May.
Harshbarger, G. F. McCall's Garden Book. Mar.
Hersey, J. The Woman's Day Book of Annuals and Perennials. Apr.
Riotte, L. Planetary Planting. Feb.
Rood, R. Possum in the Parking Lot. Jul.
S & S. Simon & Schuster's Complete Guide to Freshwater and Marine Aquarium Fish. Apr.

Smithsonian (G.P.O.)
Hines, N. O. Fish of Rare Breeding. Dec.
Skrentny, J. Zoobook. Dec.
Walker, E. H. Flora of Okinawa and the Southern Ryukyu Islands. Dec.

Spectrum: Prentice-Hall
Bennet, C. Spaces for People. Mar.
Hinton, J. & H. Oliver. The Aluminum Foil Book. Apr.
Jeffrey, D. B. & R. Katz. Take It Off and Keep It Off. May.
Menning, B. E. Infertility. May.
Thoresen, C. E. & J. C. Thomas. How To Sleep Better. May.

Stein & Day
Gots, R. E., M.D. & Gots, B.A., M.D. Caring for Your Unborn Child. Jul.
Greif, M. comp. The Gay Engagement Calendar 1978. Aug.
McCosker, J. E. & E. Janss, Jr., photog. Undersea Life Calendar 1978. Aug.

Sterling
Bechtel, H. Cactus Identifier. Apr.
Cowle, J. Discover the Trees. May.
Millard, A. Dogs—In Fact & Legend. Apr.
Sherwin, K. To Fly like a Bird. Mar.
Tichy, W. Poisons, Antidotes & Anecdotes. May.
Webster, R. Gem Identification. Mar.
White, W., Dr. Jr. American Chameleon. Apr.
White, W., Dr. Jr. Cycle of the Seasons. Jun.

Touchstone: S & S
Rosen, S. Future Facts. Mar.

Universe Bks.
Brown, L. Eagles of the World. Apr.
Clarke, R. Technological Self-Sufficiency. Jul.
Dalvi, M. & P. Hills. Urban Transport Planning. Mar.
Daintith, J. A Dictionary of Physical Sciences.
Dickson, D. The Politics of Alternative Technology. Feb.
Friedlander, C. The Biology of Insects. Apr.
Hills, L. D. Fertility Without Fertilizers. Jun.
Martin, E. A Dictionary of Life Sciences.
Perelman, M. The Myth of Agricultural Efficiency. Mar.
Romberger, D. Virology in Agriculture. Jan.
Stiegeler, S. A Dictionary of Earth Sciences.
Whitney, P. J. Microbial Plant Pathology. Apr.
Willoughby, L. Freshwater Biology. Apr.

Univ. of Illinois Pr.
Nader, I. Intraspecific Variation in Kangaroo Rats Dipodomys Spectabilis Merriam.

Univ. of Massachusetts Pr.
Agran, L. The Cancer Connection. Apr.
Halle, L. J. Out of Chaos. Apr.
Lappe, F. M. & J. Collins. Food First. Jun.
Milunsky, A., M.D. Know your Genes. Apr.
Moss, S., Dr. Your Child's Teeth. Jun.
Pasquier, R. F. Watching Birds. May.
Thimann, K. V. Hormone Action in the Whole Life. Aug.

Univ. of Nebraska Pr.
Prescott, G. W. & others. A Synopsis of North American Desmids, Part II. Desmidiaceae. Apr.

Viking
Calder, N. The Key to the Universe. Apr.
Throckmorton, P. Diving for Treasure. Aug.

Walker
Asimov, I. Collapsing Universe. Apr.
Asimov, I. How Did We Find Out About Outer Space? Apr.
Aylesworth, T. G. Science at the Ballgame. Apr.
Jick, H. Aspirin. Aug.
Quinn, J. R. Nature's World Records. Jun.
Schindler, P. E. In your Medicine Chest.
Selsam, M. & J. Hunt. A First Look at Flowers. May.
Simon, S. Beneath Your Feet. Aug.

SOCIAL SCIENCES

Arlington House
Fordham, Jim and Andrea Fordham. The Assault on the Sexes. Jun.
Schlafly, P. The Power of the Positive Woman. Jul.

Atheneum
Barzini, L. The Italians. Feb.
Briffault, R. The Mothers. Feb.
Colman, H. Hanging On. May.
Harragan, B. L. Games Mother Never Taught You. May.
Napolitane, C. & V. Pellegrino. Living and Loving after Divorce. Mar.
Striker, J. M. & A. O. Shapiro. Getting Yours Without a Lawyer. Jun.

Cornell Univ. Pr.
Gould, W. B. Black Workers in White Unions. May.
Hunt, E. The Transformation of the Hummingbird. Mar.
Hurst, J. W. Law and Social Order in the United States. Apr.
Konvitz, M. R. ed. Liberian Law Reports. Vol. 20. Mar.
Turner, V. The Ritual Process. Apr.

Crowell
Holland, B. The Human Scandals. Apr.
McCarthy, B. What You Still Don't Know About Male Sexuality. Jul.
Still, H. Surviving the Male Mid-Life Crisis. May.

Delacorte
Peck, E. The Joy of the Only Child. May.

Dial
Kappelman, M. M.D. & P. Ackerman. Between Parent and School. Apr.
Livsey, C. G., M.D. Real Marriage. Jun.

Dodd
Printz, P. & P. Steinle. Commune. Mar.

Dutton
Charles, G. & A. Goldberg. Streetfighter in the Courtroom. May.
Harrison, M. I. Sherlock Holmes. Apr.
Langley, R. & R. C. Levy. Wife Beating. Apr.

Facts on File
Sobel, L. A. ed. Palestinian Impasse. Jun.

Farrar
Beller, A. S. Fat & Thin. May.
Bierhorst, J. The Red Swan. May.
Blair, T. L. Retreat to the Ghetto. May.
Condominas, G. We Have Eaten the Forest. Jun.
Noonan, J. Persons & Masks of the Law. Jun.
Schwartz, H. E. Lawyering. May.
Starr, R. America's Housing Challenge. Aug.
Voinovich, V. Ivankiada. Jun.

F. & W.
Tennov, D. Super-Self. Mar.

Greenwood
Abel, E. L. & B. E. Buckley. The Handwriting on the Wall. Jun.
Afflerbach, L. & M. Franck, ed. & comp. The Emerging Field of Sociobibliography. May.
Berndt, H. E. New Rulers in the Ghetto. Apr.
Overbeek, J. ed. The Evolution of Population Theory. Feb.
Pescatello, A. M. ed. Old Roots in New Lands. Jun.
Radine, L. B. The Taming of the Troops. Feb.
Walsh, M. E. The Fence. Jan.

Grove
Rechy, J. The Sexual Outlaw. Apr.

Internat. Arts & Sciences
Sik, O. The Third Way.

Knopf
Bragg, M. Speak for England. Feb.
Douglas, A. The Feminization of American Culture. May.
Hayward, B. Haywire. Mar.
Hentoff, N. Does Anybody Give a Damn. Mar.

KTO
Post, K. W. J. "Arise Ye Starvelings." Jun.
Sheppard, J. The Redlegs of Barbados. May.

Lippincott
Becker, J. Hitler's Children. Jun.
Brandon, R. A. Capitalist Romance. Apr.

Liveright: Norton
Jungk, R. The Everyman Project. May.

McGraw
Eisler, R. Dissolution. Jan.
Goldsen, R. G. Television. May.
Pfeiffer, J. The Emergence of Society. Mar.
West, U. If Love is the Answer, What is the Question? Apr.

Macmillan
Brown, V. Peoples of the Sea Wind. May.
Croft-Cooke, R. & P. Cotes. Circus. Mar.
Ebert, A. The Homosexuals. May.
Gunther, M. The Luck Factor. May.
Kiev, A., M.D. A Strategy for Success. Feb.
Segal, M. Virgins. May.
Shook, R. L. Winning Images. Apr.
Weiner, M. A. Beer. Jun.

Morrow
Blandford, L. Super-Wealth. Mar.
Hampden-Turner, C. Sane Asylum. Jun.
Hoffer, E. In Our Time. Jun.
Worthy, W. The Rape of Our Neighborhoods. Jun.

Norton
Attenborough, D. The Tribal Eye. Apr.
de Laguna, F. Voyage to Greenland. Apr.
Milgram, M. Good Neighborhood. May.
Nevin, D. The American Touch in Micronesia. May.
Pierce, N. R. & M. Barone. The Mid-Atlantic States of America. Apr.

Pantheon
Ruddick, S. & P. Daniels, eds. Working It Out. Jun.
Turner, J. Housing by People. Feb.
Wertheimer, B. M. We Were There. Apr.

Parker: Prentice-Hall
Homola. Dr. Homola's Fat Desintegrater Diet. Jun.
Morris. The Amazing Power of Solar Kinetics. Jun.
Schneider. Old Fashioned Health Remedies That Work Best. Jun.
Stoessel. Metaphysical Magnetism. Jun.
Van Eleet. Extraordinary Healing Secrets from a Doctor's Secret Files. Jun.
Wade. Brand Name Handbook of Protein, Calories & Carbohydrates. Jun.
Young. Zodic Force Control. Jun.

Penguin
Brody, H. The People's Land. Apr.
Connerton, P. ed. Critical Sociology. Feb.
Garson, B. All the Livelong Day. Feb.
Kasson, J. F. Civilizing the Machine. May.
Young, M. & P. Wilmott. The Symmetrical Family. Mar.

Prentice-Hall
Blockson, C. L. with R. Fry. Black Genealogy. Jun.
Dunn, R. & K. Dunn. How To Raise Independent and Professionally Successful Daughters. Jun.
Laydon, M., M.D. Escaping from the Hostility Trap. May.
Loovis, D. Straight Answers About Homosexuality for Straight Readers. Jul.
McCaffree, M. J. & P. Innes. Protocol. Jun.
Muggenthaler, A. K. German Raiders of World War II. Jul.
Roberts, J. The Unknown Reality. Vol. 1. Jul.
Wood, P., M.D. & B. Schwartz. How To Get Your Children To Do What You Want Them To Do. May.

Princeton Univ. Pr.
Eckstein, S. The Poverty of Revolution. Apr.
Westoff, C. & N. Ryder. The Contraceptive Revolution. Mar.

Random House
Chalidze, V. Criminal Russia. Jun.
Countryman, V. The Douglas Opinions. Jun.
Morgan, R. Going Too Far. Jun.
Phillips, S. No Heroes, No Villains. Apr.
Tiger, V. & G. Luria. Everywoman. Feb.

Reader's Digest
Ellis, A. How To Live with—and Without—Anger. May.
Kappelman, M. M., M.D. Sex and the American Teenager. May.
Kaufmann, W. The Future of the Humanities. Feb.
Moore, R. S. & D. N. Moore. Better Late Than Early. Apr.
Moss, N. The Pleasures of Deception. May.
Rositzke, H. The C.I.A.'s Secret Operations. Mar.
Westin, A. P. & B. Mahoney. The Trial of Martin Luther King. Feb.

Reward: Prentice-Hall
Bennett & Corrigan. Successful Communication & Effective Speaking.

Scribners
Fleming, J. & C. Washburne. For Better, For Worse. Jul.
Habachi, L. Obelisks of Egypt. Jul.

S. & S.
Erikson, K. T. Everything in Its Path. Feb.
Owens, B. Working. May.
Watson, L. Gifts of Unknown Things. Mar.

Smithsonian (G.P.O.)
Sorenson, R. E. The Edge of the Forest. Dec.

Spectrum: Prentice-Hall
Amundsen, K. A New Look at the Silenced Majority. Mar.
Cartwright, R. D. Night Life. Feb.
Cohen, S. Special People. May.
Henley, N. R. Body Politics. Feb.
Losoncy, L. E. Turning People On. May.
Norton, R. Parenting. Feb.
Poduska, B. You Can Cope. Mar.
Rogers, J. W. Why Are You Not a Criminal? Mar.
Troll, L. E. & others. The Older Woman. Feb.

Stein & Day
Comfort, A. The Koka Shastra. May.
Cowell, A. The Tribe That Hides From Man. Apr.
Fast, J. The Do-It-Again Book. Aug.
Fox, S. C. Joys of Fantasy. Apr.
Hayflick, L. Why Grow Old? Aug.
King, F. Wasp, Where is Thy Sting? May.
Macksey, J. & K. Macksey. Book of Women's Achievements. Apr.
Mandel, L. Driven. Jun.
Morgan, E. Falling Apart. Apr.
North, R. C. Prospects for Survival. Apr.
Patterson, O. Ethnic Chauvinism. Jun.
Summer, C. With A Book in My Hand. Aug.
Van den Haag, E. The Jewish Mystique. rev. ed. Mar.

Touchstone: S. & S.
Curtis, J. Working Mothers. Mar.
Gordon, S. Lonely in America. Feb.

Universe Bks.
North, M., ed. Time Running Out. Mar.
Reubens, B. Bridges to Work. Jan.

Univ. of Illinois Pr.
Lewis, O. & others. Four Men. Mar.

Univ. of Massachusetts Pr.
Smitherman, G. Talkin and Testifyin. May.

Univ. of Nebraska Pr.
Powers, W. K. Oglala Religion. Jul.

Univ. of Notre Dame Pr.
Liu, W. T. & others, eds. Abortion. Jun.

Viking
Leys, S. Chinese Shadows. Jul.
Newfield, J. & P. Dubrul. The Abuse of Power. Jun.
Sampson, A. The Arms Bazaar. Aug.

Shaw, A. D. Sound of Impact. Mar.
Sheresky, N. On Trial. Apr.
Westoff, L. A. The Second Time Around. May.
Winn, M. The Plug-In Drug. Mar.

Walker
Caldwell, B. & D. Stedman, eds. Infant Education. Jun.
Cross, L. & K. Goin. Finding and Helping Handicapped Children. Jun.
Traub, N. Recipe for Reading. Mar.

Yale Univ. Pr.
Ackerman, B. A. Private Property and the Constitution. Apr.
Bickel, A. M. The Morality of Consent. Apr.
Chang, K. D., ed. Food in Chinese Culture. Apr.
Cohen, M. N. The Food Crisis in Prehistory. Apr.
Eckhardt, B. & C. L. Black, Jr. The Tides of Power. Apr.
Gilmore, G. The Ages of American Law. Apr.
Markides, K. C. The Rise and Fall of the Cyprus Republic. Jun.

SPORTS & RECREATION

Arco
Adams, J. Complete Home Plumbing & Heating Handbook. Jun.
Ballantyne, V. How and Where to Find Gold. Mar.
Carter, C., ed. Motocourse 1976/77. Mar.
Casperze, D. The Scottish Terrier. Jan.
Chaneles, S. Collecting Movie Memorabilia. Jun.
Cocannouer, J. A. Better Vegetable Gardening the Organic Way. Feb.
Cutter, R. A. The New Guide to Motorcycling. Feb.
Day, R. Easy Things to Make with Concrete & Masonry. Mar.
Day, R. How to Remodel Your Attic or Basement. Mar.
Day, R. Remodeling Rooms. Mar.
Devlin, J. Magic of the Masters. Feb.
Diskin, E. Yoga for Children. Mar.
Dow, S. Breeding Angelfish. Feb.
Dwight, S. Western Horsemanship & Equitation. Jun.
Engel, L. K. The Incredible A. J. Foyt. Mar.
Frankling, E. Practical Dog Breeding & Genetics. Feb.
Garcia, F. How to Detect Crooked Gambling. Jun.
Goldstein, F. Karate for Kids. Jun.
Graham, R. The Mating & Whelping of Dogs. Feb.
Green, Carol. Dressage Explained. Apr.
Green, Carol. Jumping Explained. Jan.
Green, Carol. Training Explained. Jan.
Harmar, H. Showing & Judging Dogs. Mar.
Hertzberg, R. The Modern Handgun. Mar.
Holmes, E. Horse & Pony Care in Pictures. Mar.
Hyman, R. Ceramics Handbook. Mar.
Kauffman, S. Riders Digest. Jun.
Lamb, S. H. Mathematical Games, Puzzles & Fallacies. May.
Manners, D. X. How to Plan and Build Your Workshop. Mar.
Manners, D. Teach Your Child Self-Defense. Jan.
Manners, W. Wake Up and Write. Mar.
Merrill, B. Vacationing with Saddle & Packhorse. Feb.
Nehrling, A. & I. Nehrling. The Picture Book of Animals. Mar.
Nehrling, A. & I. Nehrling. The Picture Book of Perennials. Mar.
O'Connell, R. F. The Freshwater Aquarium. Jun.
Partridge, M. Motorcycle Pioneers. Jan.
Reshevsky, S. Great Chess Upsets. Apr.
Riches, R. J. Breeding Snakes in Captivity. Feb.
Summerhays, R. S. The Problem Horse. Mar.
Vine, L. L. Behavior & Training of Dogs & Puppies. Jun.
Vine, L. L. Breeding, Whelping & Natal Care of Dogs. Jun.
Zimmerman, W. J. Coin Collector's Fact Book. May.

Atheneum
Counsilman, J. The Complete Book of Swimming. Apr.
Kramer, J. with L. Sheehan. Your Tennis Game Is Better than You Think. Jun.
Lehrman, S. & J. Allis. The Bicycle Book for You. May.
Murray, T., ed. All Time All Stars. May.
Toski, B. Play like the Pros. Jun.

Crowell
Cargo, J. Junior Show Jumping. Jun.
Cleminshaw, C. H. The Beginners Guide to the Skies. Feb.
MacFall, R. P. Gem Hunter's Guide. Mar. 5th rev. ed.

Crown
Berney, E. S. Collector's Guide to Pressing Irons and Trivets. May.
Di Noto, A. & C. Cashion. Trash or Treasure. May.
Haywood, D. Contemporary Crazy Quilt. Feb.
Meilach, D. Z. Decorative and Sculptural Iron Work. Feb.
Meilach, D. Z. Plant Hangers. May.
Newman, T. R. & J. Hartley. The Container Book. Apr.
Ramo, S. Extraordinary Tennis for the Ordinary Player. Mar.
Wallace, F. R. Poker. Mar.
Wing, M. How To Paint on Fabrics. Mar.

Delacorte
Crenshaw, M. A. Shape Up for Super Sex. Apr.

Dial
McCarthy, C. The Pleasures of the Game. May.

Dodd
Bowden, G. H. More Morgan. Feb.
Burgess, R. F. They Found Treasure. May.
D'Imperio, D. The Country Antiques Companion. Mar.
Jordan, P. Broken Patterns. Feb.
Whiting, R. The Chrysanthemum and the Bat. May.

Domus
Ewers, W. L. Guide to Beer Can Collecting. Apr.

Dutton
Birks, T. The Potter's Companion. Mar.
Davidowitz, S. Betting Thoroughbreds. May.
Deindorfer, R. The Incompleat Angler. Jul.
Hendry, M. D. Cadillac. 2d ed. May.
Hoyt, N. The 12-Meter Era. May.
Jacobson, C. L. Wilderness Canoeing and Camping. Mar.
Kahn, M. Manya Kahn's Body Rhythms. Mar.
Ludvigsen, K. Excellence was Expected. May.
Shattuck, D. The Hangers-On. Jun.

Eleanor Friede: Delacorte
Collins, R. L. Flying Safely. Jun.
Taylor, R. L. Understanding Flying. May.

Evans
Cooper, K. H. The Complete Book of Aerobic Fitness. Jun.
D'Amato, A. & J. D'Amato. Italian Crafts. Apr.
Rosenberg, M. Sixty-Plus and Fit Again. Mar.

Farrar
Cohen, S. More Than A Game. Aug.

F. & W.
Cartier, J. O. The Modern Deer Hunter.
Dalrymple, B. W. How To Rig and Fish Natural Baits. Mar.
Marshall, M. How To Make Your Own Lures and Flies. Mar.

Gordon & Cremonesi
The Chinese Art of T'ai Chi Ch'uan. Mar.

Stephen Greene
Bengtsson & Atkinson. Orienteering.
Brandreth, G. Games for Rains, Plane and Trains.
Caldwell, J. The New Cross-Country Ski Book.
Evans, J. Kayaking.
Tolman, B. & R. Page. The Country Dance Book.

Harmony: Crown
Make It with Mademoiselle. Apr.

Hastings
Durant, J. Highlights of the Olympics. 5th ed. Apr.
Tingay, L. Tennis. Mar.

Knopf
Blaisdell, H. F. The Art of Worm Fishing. Jun.
Clark, C. L. The Make-It-Yourself Shoe Book. Jun.
O'Connor, J. The Rifle Book. Jun.

Lippincott
Henkin, H. The Complete Fisherman's Catalog. Mar.
Livingston, A. Tying Bugs and Flies for Bass. Jul.
Migel, M. The Masters on the Dry Fly. Aug.
Schiotz, A. A Guide to Aquarium Fishes and Plants. Apr.

Liveright: Norton
Pierot, S. W. What Can I Grow in the Shade? Apr.

McGraw
Antonacci, R. J. Baseball for Young Champions. 2d ed. Jul.
Finkle-Strauss, L. House Plants. Apr.
Gladstone, L. The Inside Kid. Apr.
Segura, P. & G. Heldman. Pancho Segura's Championship Strategy. Mar.

Macmillan
Falls, J. The Boston Marathon. Apr.
Meves, E. Guide to Backpacking in the United States. Mar.
Nemec, D. King of the Road. Mar.
Petty, R. The Absolutely Most Challenging Baseball Quiz Book Ever. Mar.
Schwartz, G. Soccer. Apr.

Morrow
Adams, F. I Took a Hammer in My Hand. Apr.
Johnson, B. Chinese Wand Exercise. Jun.
Wallechinsky, D. & others. The Book of Lists. May.

Norton
Automobile Association of England. Book of the Car. 3d ed. Feb.
Bavier, R. N., Jr. The New Yacht Racing Rules, 1977-1980. Apr.
Creagh-Osborne, R. This Is Racing. Jun.
Grainger, S. E. Creative Ropecraft. Mar.
Petzoldt, P. The Wilderness Handbook. Jan.
Rogoff, M. Calculator Navigation. Jul.
Rosenow, F. The Ditty Bag Book. Mar.
Roth, H. After 50,000 Miles. May.
Woods, S. Blue Water, Green Skipper. May.

Pantheon
Iwamoto, K. Go for Beginners. Mar.
Fisher, J. Never Give a Sucker an Even Break. Mar.

Penguin
Bochroch, A. R. American Automobile Racing. Apr.
Cash, A. The Second Penguin Book of The Times Crosswords. May.
Elffers, J. Tangram. May.
Thompson, T. Saloon. Jul.

Prentice-Hall
Hill, D. & N. Seitz. Teed Off. Jun.
Ryan, N. & J. Torre with J. Cohen. Pitching and Hitting. Jun.
Talbert, P. Secrets of a Winning Serve and Return. Jun.

Random
Bonington, C. Everest The Hard Way. Mar.
Daley, R. Treasure. May.
Kowet, D. The Rich Who Own Sports. Apr.
McClintock, J. The Book of Darts. May.
Selsam, M. & D. Peterson. The Don't-Throw-It- Grow-It Book of Houseplants. May.

Reward: Prentice-Hall
Baker, S. How To Play Golf in the Low 120's

Rutgers Univ. Pr.
Sloane, B., ed. Cavers, Caves and Caving. Apr.

Scribners
Baker, M. & M. Lunt. Blue and White. Jul.
Berloquin, P. 100 Games of Logic. Apr.
Cath, S., M.D. & A. Kahn, M.D. Love and Hate on the Tennis Court. May.
Chatterton, P. Scandinavian Knitting Designs. Apr.
The Companion Guides. 5 vols. Apr.
Donington, R. String Playing in Baroque Music. May.
Feirer, J. Cabinetmaking and Millwork. Mar.
Feirer, J. & G. Hutchings. Carpentry and Building Construction. Mar.
Gottshall, F. Wood Carving and Whittling for Everyone. Jul.
Gourguechon, C. Journey to the End of the World. Jun.
Griffiths, P. C. The Endings. Mar.
Harris, S. E. Grooming to Win. Jul.
Haslam, M. Marks and Monograms of the Modern Movement, 1875-1930. Mar.
Hirsch, J. D. Complete Book of Car Repair and Maintenance. Jul.
Kaestner, D. Designs for Needlepoint and Latch Hook Rugs. May.
Kern, B. & K. Kern. The Owner-Built Homestead. Jul.
Morgan, M. & D. Mosteller. Trapunto Quilting. Apr.
Petrakis, J. Design in the Needle Arts of Greece. Jun.
Philpott, B. Making Model Aircraft. Apr.
Prockter, N. J. Simple Propagation. Apr.
Sacks, R. J. Welding—Principles and Practices. Mar.
Stratton, D. Jugs A Collector's Guide. Mar.
Stratton, D. Mugs and Tankards—A Collector's Guide. Mar.
Tenenbaum, F. Plants from Nine to Five. Mar.
Thompson, B. & J. Charlton. Croquet—Complete Guide to History, Strategy, Rules and Records. Mar.
Vicary, R. Manual of Advanced Lithography. Jun.

Wall, M. Creative Needlepoint Borders. May.
Winks, R. An American's Guide to Britain. May.

S. & S.
Angell, R. Five Seasons. May.
Blalock, J. & D. Netland. The Drive to Win. May.
Consumer Guide., eds. CB Operator's Manual and Log. Apr.
Corcoran, J. & E. Farkas. The Martial Arts Book of Knowledge. Jun.
Farrar, M., ed. The Crossword Puzzle Book. Series 113. May.
Farrar, M. Crossword Treasury No. 18. Apr.
Farrar, M., ed. Crosswords from the Times (Daily). Feb.
Farrar, M., ed. Crosswords from The Times (Sunday). Jul.
"J." Total Loving. Jun.
Loeb, J. & P. Loeb. You Can Train Your Cat. Jun.
Maleska, E. T. The Crossword Book of Quotations. Feb.
Maller, D. & J. Feinman. 21 Days to a Trained Dog. Apr.
Middleton, T. H. Simon and Schuster Crostics. Series 77. Apr.
Morehouse, L. E. & L. Gross. Maximum Performance. Jun.
Nicklaus, J. & K. Bowden. Jack Nicklaus' Lesson Tee. Mar.
Ozel. The Belly Dancer in You. Apr.
Spanier, D. Total Poker. Mar.
Waterman, C. F. The Practical Book of Trout Fishing. May.

Spectrum: Prentice-Hall
Hendricks, G. & T. B. Roberts. The Second Centering Book. May.

Stein & Day
Cobb, H. H. How to Paint Anything. May.
Fast, J. The Pleasure Book. May.
Hoffman, G. & others. The Art of World Team Tennis. Apr.
Kaye, M. The Handbook of Mental Magic. May.
Kaye, M. The Story of Monopoly, Silly Putty, Bingo, Twister, Frisbee, Scrabble, Et Cetera. Apr.
Lebo, F. The Every Other Day Exercise Book. Apr.
Lewis, S. & L. Oppenheimer. Folding Paper Puppets. May.
Lewis, S. & L. Oppenheimer. Folding Paper Toys. May.
Mathewson, C. Pitching in a Pinch. Apr.
Neal, C. D. Do-It-Yourself Housebuilding. Apr.
Poppke, W. R. How to Catch a Crab. Feb.
Reinfeld, F. Chess for Amateurs. Mar.
Reinfeld, F. A Chess Primer. Mar.
Reinfeld, R. Great Moments in Chess. Mar.
Schultheis, I. Slimming With Weights. Mar.
Strung, N. & M. Roscoe. Spin-Fishing. Apr.

Sterling
Arnold, R. Better Roller Skating. May.
Gibson, W. B. Junior Magic. Apr.
Majax, G. Secrets of the Card Sharps. May.
Clarke, R. & B. Raelene. Successful Track & Field. Mar.
Zafferano, G. J. Handball Basics. Apr.
McWhirter, N. & R. McWhirter. Guinness Sports Record Book 1977-78. Mar.
Dobereiner, P. Golf Explained. Apr.
Jeffs, A., ed. Creative Crafts. May.
Johnson, D. E. Collector's Guide to Militaria. Mar.
Shirts, M. A. & K. E. Myers. Call it Right! Apr.
Pfluger, A. Karate Kiai! May.
Campbell, G. Marathon. May.
Tomassi, F. Horseback Rider's Basic Training Manual. May.
Solvit, M. Pictures in Patchwork. May.

Universe Bks.
Bodger, L. Paper Dreams. Apr.

Univ. of Massachusetts Pr.
Ensminger, M. E. Horses and Tack. Apr.
French Blake, R. L. V. Intermediate Dressage. Jun.
Kramer, J. Silhouettes. Mar.
Swan, S. Home-Made Baby Toys. Mar.

Vanguard
Andersen, I. Turning the Tables on Las Vegas.

Viking
Ruhe, B. Many Happy Returns. Apr.
Vines, E. & G. Vier. Tennis. Jun.

Walker
Abisch, R. & B. Kaplan. The Make It, Play It, Show Time Book. May.
Gault, F. & C. Gault. The Harlem Globetrotters. Feb.
Holt, M. Math Puzzles and Games. May.
Loewer, H. P. Discovering the Ornamental Grasses. Jun.

Weybright & Talley: Dutton
Schwiebert, E. Trout. 2 vols. Apr.

TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY

Harvard Univ. Pr.
Baldessarini, R.J. Chemotherapy in Psychiatry. May.
Berger, M. Real and Imagined Worlds. Apr.
Bowersock, G. & others, eds. Edward Gibbon and the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Apr.
Brantlinger, P. The Spirit of Reform. May.
Burkhardt, R. W., Jr. The Spirit of System. Jun.
Chan, W. K. K. Merchants, Mandarins, and Modern Enterprise in the Late Ch'ing China. Feb.
De Felice, R. Intrepretations of Fascism. Jul.
Dunn, J. Distress and Comfort. Apr.
Dworkin, R. Taking Rights Seriously. Apr.
Emerson, R. W. The Journals and Miscellaneous Notebooks of Ralph Waldo Emerson. Mar.
Fox, J. J. Harvest of the Palm. May.
Garvey, C. Play. Apr.
Gilbert, F. History. Mar.
Goldman, M., ed. Modern Chinese Literature in the May Fourth Era. Apr.
Hitchins, K. Orthodoxy and Nationality. Apr.
Hofheinz, R., Jr. The Broken Wave. Jun.
Hough, J. F. The Soviet Union and Social Science Theory. Jul.
Hsiao, C. C. The Military Establishment of the Yuan Dynasty. Aug.
Hurlburt, S. The Jussel Cookbook. May.
James, W. A. Pluralistic Universe. Jun.
Keller, M. Affairs of State. Feb.
Klein, B. H. The Elements of Dynamic Economics. Jul.
Lipton, M. Why Poor People Stay Poor. Mar.
Loftis, J. Sherdian and the Drama of Georgian England. Mar.
Macfarlane, A. The Psychology of Childbirth. Apr.
Maynard, J. Browning's Youth. Mar.
Novak, S. J. The Rights of Youth. Mar.
Pike, F. B. The United States and the Andean Republics. Jun.
Pingree, D. The Yavanajātaka of Spujidhvaja. Aug.
Rabe, V. H. The Home Base of American-China Missions, 1880-1920. Apr.
Reischauer, E. O. The Japanese. May.
Roonwal, M. L. & S. M. Mohnot. Primates of South Asia. May.
Ruddick, L. The Seen and the Unseen. May.
Scarlatti, A. The Operas of Allesandro Scarlatti. Apr.
Schaffer, R. Mothering. Apr.
Sigurdson, J. Rural Industrialization in China. Mar.
Smith, W. J. Behavior of Communicating. Apr.
Solberg, W. U. Redeem the Time.
Torbert, P. M. The Ch'ing Imperial Household Department. Jul.
Tsurumi, E. P. Japanese Colonial Education in Taiwan, 1895-1945. Mar.
Veatch, R. M. Case Studies in Medical Ethics. May.
Vernon, R. Storm over Multinationals. Jun.
Viraphol, S. Tribute and Profit. Aug.
Webb, R. C. Government Policy and the Distribution of Income in Peru, 1963-1973. Mar.
Wechsler, H. & others, eds. The Horizons of Health. Apr.
Wilkinson, E., tr. Landlord and Labor in Late Imperial China. Aug.

Indiana Univ. Pr.
Carter, G. M. & P. O'Meara, eds. Southern Africa in Crisis.
Catford, J. C. Fundamental Problems in Phonetics.
Clark, T. D. Indiana University.
Cole, R. W., ed. Current Issues in Linguistic Theory.
Davidson, R. H. & W. J. Oleszek. Congress Against Itself.
Furniss, N. & T. Tilton. The Case for the Welfare State.
Gillis, R. J. Children's Books for Times of Stress.
Hailman, J. P. Optical Signals.
Hardy, B. The Advantage of Lyric.
Kraus, S., ed. The Great Debates.
Landon, H. C. R. Haydn.
Lazarus, A. L., ed. The Indiana Experience.
McCourt, K. Working-Class Women and Grass-Roots Politics.
McPherson, A. & S. McPherson. Wild Food Plants of Indiana and Adjacent States.
Mahl, M. R. & H. Koon, eds. The Female Spectator.
Olshavsky, R. W. No More Butts.
Pratt, M. L. Toward a Speech Act Theory of Literary Discourse.
Pullias, E. V. & J. D. Young. A Teacher Is Many Things.
Pushkarev, B. S. & J. M. Zupan. Public Transportation and Land Use Policy.
Sebeok, T. A., ed. How Animals Communicate.
Sebeok, T. A., ed. A Perfusion of Signs.
Spilka, M., ed. Towards a Poetics of Fiction.
Stone, E. & K. Stone, eds. The Writings of Elliott Carter.
Suslov, I. Here's To Your Health, Comrade Shifrin!
Thorelli, H. B., ed. Strategy + Structure = Performance.
Valdman, A., ed. Pidgin and Creole Linguistics.
Vicinus, M., ed. A Widening Sphere.
Weisbord, V. B. The Radical Life.
Worner, R. B. Student Diagnosis, Placement, and Prescription.

Johns Hopkins
Schlossberg, L. & G. D. Zuidema, M.D. The Johns Hopkins Atlas of Human Functional Anatomy. Jan.

Kodansha
Chibbett, D. The History of Japanese Printing and Book Illustration. Apr.
Cuisenier, J. French Folk Art. Apr.
Fujioka, R. Shino and Oribe Ceramics. May.
Iten-Maritz, J. Turkish Carpets. Apr.
Mori, H. Japanese Portrait Sculpture. May.
Naito, A. Katsura. May.
Okazaki, J. Pure Land Buddhist Painting. May.
Seidensticker, E. G. Genji Days. Jul.
Shiroyama, S. War Criminal. Mar.
Takeda, T. Kano Eitoku. May.

New York Graphic Society: Little
Adams, A. & M. Austin. Taos Pueblo. Jun.
Berlant, A. & M. H. Kahlenberg. Walk in Beauty. Jun.
Fox, W. & others. The Mill. Mar.
Hobbs, R. Odilon Redon. Apr.
Homer, W. I. Alfred Stieglitz and the American Avant-Garde. Apr.
Maddow, B. Faces. Apr.
Mathieu, P.-L. Gustave Moreau. Apr.
Mookerjee, A. & M. Khanna. The Tantric Way. May.
Novak, B. & others. The Natural Paradise. Jan.

Rodale
Belanger, J. D. Raising the Homestead Hog. Mar.
Bradbury, M. The Shepherd's Guidebook. Mar.
Carmen, R. Our Endangered Hearing. Apr.
Foster, C. O. Plants-a-Plenty. Apr.
Goldstein, J. Sensible Sludge. May.
Golueke, C. G. The Biological Reclamation of Solid Wastes. Apr.
Hare, J. R. From Katahdin to Springer Mountain. Mar.
Kinderlehrer, J. The Art of Cooking with Love and Wheat Germ. Feb.
Laws, P. W. X Rays. Apr.
Logsdon, G. The Gardener's Guide to Better Soil. Feb.
Logsdon, G. Small-Scale Grain Raising. Mar.
MacLatchie, S. Gardening with Kids. May.
Moyer, A. Better Food for Public Places. Mar.
Moyer, A., ed. The Green Thumb Cookbook. May.
Organic Gardening and Farming Eds. Build It Better Yourself. Mar.
Organic Gardening and Farming Eds. Organic Farming. Apr.
Stoner, C. H., ed. Stocking Up. May.
Telleen, M. The Draft Horse Primer. Apr.
Vivian, J. The Manual of Practical Homesteading. Feb.
Wolf, R., ed. Managing Your Personal Food Supply. Feb.

Sheed, Andrews & McMeel
Chirico, P. Infallibility.
Coyne, J. R., Jr. & P. Coyne. The Big Bust-Up.
Fetter, F. A. Capital, Interest, and Rent.
Jones, T. The Incredible Voyage.
Maury, E. A. Wine Is the Best Medicine.
Millar, J. & B. Hinds. God Intended Blond Boys To Be Quarterbacks.
Millar, J. & B. Hinds. Shoot, Tank, Shoot!
Shedd, C. The Best Dad Is a Good Lover.
Stark, N. The First Practical Pyramid Book.
Trudeau, G. B. & D. Levinthal. Hitler Moves East.
Ungar, J. And You Wonder, Herman, Why I Never Want To Go to Italian Restaurants.
Walsh, B. Noah and the Ark and The Prodigal Son.
Wendland, M. The Wendland CB Glove Compartment Bible.
Wilson, T. Pets Are Friends You Like Who Like You Right Back.

Univ. of Nebraska Pr.
Hunt, J. D. The Pre-Raphaelite Imagination. Apr.
Moler, K. L. Jane Austen's Art of Allusion. Jun.
Riesman, D. Constraint and Variety in American Education. Jun.
Turner, F. J. Frederick Jackson Turner's Legacy. Jun.

BOOKS FOR BUSINESS

Third edition just published . . .

Encyclopedia of Business Information Sources

A Detailed Listing of Primary Subjects of Interest to Managerial Personnel, with a Record of Sourcebooks, Periodicals, Organizations, Directories, Handbooks, Bibliographies, and Other Sources of Information. Third edition. Edited by Paul Wasserman. 600pp. 1976. $42.00. (Available on Standing Order)

The fully-revised third edition—the first new edition since 1970—contains 17,000 entries on over 1,280 specific subjects. Provided for each subject are lists of the best sources of current information.

WILSON LIBRARY BULLETIN: "Though it is already well known in business libraries, libraries in general collections should be reminded of its wider usefulness for factual information sources. . . . It is superb as an acquisition tool" (March 1972).

☆ ☆ ☆

Latest volume in the MIG series . . .

Executive and Management Development for Business and Government

A Guide to Information Sources. Edited by Agnes O. Hanson. (Management Information Guide Series, No. 31.) 357pp. Annotations. Indexes of Authors, Titles, Subjects, and Proper Names. 1976. $18.00.

Emphasizing fundamentals, this new guide furnishes annotated listings of staff development information sources useful to all levels of management in today's business world. Material is arranged in sections covering such major topics as Management Thought; Organization; The Company, Government, and Society; Management by Objectives and Results; International Management and Multinational Corporations; etc.

☆ ☆ ☆

Enlarged edition in print . . .

Statistics Europe

Sources for Social, Economic, and Market Research. Third edition. Edited by Joan M. Harvey. 467pp. Annotations. Organization, Title, and Subject Indexes. Published by CBD Research Ltd. Distributed in America by Gale. 1976. $40.00. (Available on Standing Order)

The third edition contains 1,441 entries—more than double the number included in the previous edition. Given for each country are annotated entries covering: central statistical office and other important organizations that collect and publish statistical data, principal libraries housing collections of statistical data, principal bibliographies, and major statistical publications.

☆ ☆ ☆

Revised guide to 5,314 firms and individuals . . .

Consultants and Consulting Organizations Directory

A Reference Guide to Concerns Engaged in Consultation for Business, Industry, and Government. Third edition. Edited by Paul Wasserman and Janice McLean. 1,034pp. Subject Index of Firms by Location. Alphabetical Index of Individuals. 1976. $78.00. (Available on Standing Order)

The directory gives pertinent data on 5,314 consulting firms and individuals: name, address, phone number, date founded, principals, branch offices, description of types of services and clients, and code indicating subject specialties. New Consultants is published between editions of the directory to keep subscribers informed of new consulting organizations. Inter-edition subscription (four issues), with binder for new subscribers, $65.00.

CHOICE: "Recommended for academic and reference libraries, particularly those serving a business clientele" (November 1973).

WRITE FOR OUR COMPLETE CATALOG CONTAINING FULL DESCRIPTIONS OF THESE AND OTHER GALE REFERENCE BOOKS— ALL AVAILABLE ON 30-DAY APPROVAL.

GALE RESEARCH CO. BOOK TOWER • DETROIT, MICH. 48226

For customers in the U.K., the Continent, and Africa, order direct from:
Gale Research Co. • c/o European Book Service • P.O. Box 124 • Weesp, The Netherlands

BOOK REVIEW

The Contemporary Scene

Carmichael, Joel. Arabs Today.

Anchor: Doubleday. 1977. 216p. bibliog. index. LC 76-41554. ISBN 0-385-11351-X. pap. $2.95.
CULTURAL STUDY

Carmichael has studied, taught and written about Arabs for years, and has made important contributions to our knowledge of Arabs. In this book he explores a range of ideas and themes about Arab history and current activities, and presents illuminating insights and perceptions, but unfortunately also includes misleading distortions and superficialities. His attention moves quickly among unconnected points: e.g., in the chapter entitled "Decay and Growth, the Arabs Today" subheadings include "The Muslim Town," "The Legacy of the Bedouin Past," "Women and Polygamy," "Village Life," and "The New Playboys." Carmichael's emphasis on social and cultural evolution is a valuable step in moving beyond straight political chronicling, but his broad generalizations are more provocative than satisfying. Although an interesting book to read through, this should not be relied upon for affording a real understanding of the Arabs.—Elizabeth R. Hayford, Assistant Dean for International Education, Oberlin Coll., Ohio

Clecak, Peter. Crooked Paths: reflections on socialism, conservatism, and the welfare state.

Harper. 1977. 224p. index. ISBN 0-06-010838-X. $10.95. SOC SCI/POL SCI

Clecak reflects on the achievements, shortcomings, and future prospects for the U.S. on the 200th anniversary of the Revolution, and concludes that the past decade has marked the unprepared passage of America from a time of affluence and abundance to one of anxiety over anticipated scarcity. Thus, the traditional ideas forming the framework of American political debate—liberalism, conservatism, and socialism—all appear to some as passé. While he acknowledges the inadequacies of these ideas, and admits a distrust of each, Clecak still suggests they comprise a "rich legacy." The book is a thoughtful treatment and deserves to be read by all concerned and thinking individuals.—Alvin R. Sunseri, Dept. of History, Univ. of Northern Iowa, Cedar Falls

Eisler, Riane Tennenhaus. Dissolution: divorce, marriage, and the future of American women.

McGraw. 1977. 228p. bibliog. index. LC 76-41416. ISBN 0-07-019142-5. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-07-019150-6. $3.95. SOC SCI

The author, an attorney specializing in family law, takes a searching look at its present state. The adversary proceedings and inequitable settlements under present law leave women and children ill-provided for. There are few precedents and little protection for single parents, homosexual parents, and those in communal or other nontraditional living arrangements. Eisler believes that current statutes and their often sexist interpreters reinforce an archaic patriarchal system rather than reflecting newer realities. She urges remuneration for housework, passage of the ERA, and sweeping family law reform. Not a self-help manual, this is a valuable legal and sociohistorical survey. Well-written, readable, and recommended.—Mary Pradt Ziegler, Brooklyn P.L.

Howe, Russell Warren & Sarah Hays Trott. The Power Peddlers: how lobbyists mold America's foreign policy.

Doubleday. Feb. 1977. bibliog. index. LC 76-18353. ISBN 0-385-11289-0. $12.50. POL SCI

This is a fascinating, fact-filled, and important book. It should be read by any concerned citizen whose feelings of frustration over government run to a suspicion that there is much more going on than meets the eye. It is a book which can be profitably read by the new administration, since it is the first major work since James Deakin's modest The Lobbyists (LJ 10/1/66) to document and explain the activities of the Washington policy influence managers, especially those active in the business of guiding foreign policy into avenues of special interest. This book, coming as it does on the heels of the South Korean scandals, will be controversial because it tells a disturbing tale of ongoing pressure politics.—R. F. Delaney, U.S. Naval War Coll., Newport, R.I.

Muir, William Ker, Jr. Police: streetcorner politicians.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. Mar. 1977. 297p. bibliog. index. LC 76-8085. ISBN 0-226-54632-2. $15.
LAW ENFORCEMENT

This case study of the moral development of 28 young policemen in a middle-sized city in response to the multiple dilemmas of "achieving just ends with coercive means" is analytically sound, intellectually creative, and morally moving. The generalizations about power (many cops, like most of us, resist using it), varying styles of response to pressure or danger, the nature of true "professionalism," and how either a "tragic" or "cynical" perspective grows to affect police work are all imaginatively documented. Paradoxes abound—"reformed" police departments are not sufficient to insure rendering of "street" justice; a "liberal" chief detested by his men may nev-

CONTENTS

The Contemporary Scene	367
Reference	368
Art	372
Biography	374
Business & Economics	377
Education	378
History	378
Home Economics	383
Literature	384
Music	388
Philosophy	389
Poetry	389
Political Science & International Affairs	390
Psychology & Psychiatry	392
Religion	393
Science & Technology	395
Social Science	398
Sports & Recreation	400
Theater	401
Fiction	402
Mystery, Detective & Suspense	406
Book Review & Professional Reading Author Index	408

Library Journal reviews are indexed in Book Review Index and in Book Review Digest.

THE CROWELL CORNER

Verdicts on Lawyers

edited by
Ralph Nader
& Mark Green

VERDICTS ON LAWYERS
Edited by
Ralph Nader & Mark Green
"Of the 26 contributors... all but two are identified as having legal training, and all are deeply involved in the legal system. Their contributions are well written and uniformly critical... well documented... startling and hard-hitting."
—Library Journal

ISBN: 0-690-01006-0 $10.00
LC: 75-23292

T. Y. Crowell
666 Fifth Avenue New York N.Y. 10019

LJ RECOMMENDS

HOW TO MAKE MEETINGS WORK

The New Interaction Method
Michael Doyle and David Straus

"The jargon-free style and the wealth of down-to-earth ideas, such as how to cope with the doubting Thomas, whisperer, loudmouth, or busybody in your group, should make this book useful in public, as well as college and business school libraries."
—Library Journal

ISBN 0-671-22403-4 LC 76-40185

$10.95

WYDEN BOOKS
Distributed by Simon & Schuster

ertheless profoundly affect them (for the better); wise use of force may be preferable to undiscerning sympathy—but, as the author convincingly demonstrates, paradox itself lies at the heart of both the human condition and the good cop's perception of it.—Isidore Silver, Dept. of History, John Jay Coll. of Criminal Justice, CUNY

Solomon, Robert. The International Monetary System, 1945-1976: an insider's view.

Harper. 1977. 350p. index. LC 76-10094. ISBN 0-06-013898-X. $17.50. ECON

This is a fascinating book, understandable to an audience far broader than international financiers and economists. Solomon provides a detailed narrative, drawn largely from his own experience with the Federal Reserve and the International Monetary Fund. The scholar will find much new information, including a helpful chronology of events in international finance and numerous citations of relatively unused sources. More importantly, Solomon communicates clearly the close relationship between the political aspects of foreign policy and the international money markets. In places the style has some of the "officially fuzzy" sound of a government report, but on the whole the book is not only useful but enjoyable. Some readers may find the detail overwhelming and unnecessary; however, this work is likely to become a classic in international finance precisely because of this detail and the author's close association with his subject.—Robert J. Caswell, Dept. of Economics, Ohio State Univ., Columbus

Strick, Anne. Injustice for All.

Putnam. Mar. 1977. 244p. ISBN 0-399-11860-8. $8.95. LAW

Strick argues persuasively that the adversary system of court trials produces many cruel injustices. An example of what she opposes: lawyers for a man accused of killing a teenage boy concealed his confession that he had also killed two girls. Meanwhile, the girls' parents held out hope for months that the girls were still alive somewhere. Strick advocates "cooperative exploration" rather than the pursuit of winning at the expense of truth-seeking. While neither her thesis nor her proposed remedies are novel, her book is comprehensive and comprehensible to the layman. For large public libraries.—Marcie Stevenson Kingsley, Univ. of North Carolina Lib., Greensboro pub. for the Office of Population Research by Princeton Univ. Pr. Mar. 1977. 384p. index. LC 76-27840. ISBN 0-691-09371-7. $18.50.

Westoff, Charles F. & Norman B. Ryder. The Contraceptive Revolution.

HEALTH/SOC SCI

The sociological questions raised here (How extensive is contraceptive use? Does use correspond to attitudes? Do age, education, race, religion affect use?) are ones Westoff and Ryder have been asking for a long time; and the answers unshockingly point to continuation of trends previously identified: fewer Catholics now act in conformity to Church teaching, views of abortion and sterilization are liberalizing, women's income and fertility relate inversely, the Pill is associated with higher coital frequency. The book is thus not revolutionary. It is, however, necessary. Carefully, thoroughly, and impressively, it reports on the most recent fertility survey of national scope. It will be valuable to teachers, students, health professionals, community planners—and indeed to anyone who happens to believe in the revolutionary potential of the contraceptive promise.—Ellen Peck, Co-Director, Consortium on Parenthood Aptitude, New York

REFERENCE

American Men and Women of Science, 13th ed. 6 vols. + Discipline and Geographic Indexes.

Bowker. 1976. 5043p. ed. by Jaques Cattell Pr. LC 6-7326. ISBN 0-8352-0865-6. Index 733p. ISBN 0-8352-0872-9. ea. vol: $50; 7 vol. set $300. SCI/REF

Recent editions of the now standard biographical reference set, American Men and Women of Science (AMWS), were widely purchased and used by libraries. The simultaneous publication of all seven volumes of the 13th edition (AMWS 13) some three years after the last volume of the 1971–1973 12th edition (AMWS 12) should prove no exception.

AMWS 13 differs in scope from AMWS 12, which attempted to separate scientists into either the physical and biological sciences or into the social sciences. AMWS 13 is to consist of three separate directories, this basic set and two others on engineering and economics. Data are provided in the present volumes on 110,000 individuals working, in order of coverage, in 79 selected disciplines of the physical, biological, applied, health, and social sciences. Scant attention is given the major social sciences; AMWS editors feel these fields are "fully covered by membership directories." As a result, an average user of this set will not understand why all members of the National Academy of Sciences are not included; or why, although Computer and Information Sciences is one of the 79 included disciplines, less than 25 percent of the National Research Council's Committee on International Scientific and Technical Information Programs is listed. Unless a library has funds to purchase all three directories, coverage will be unsatisfactory.

Yet the usefulness of this set is considerable. More emergent scientists are included. The discipline index now covers broad specialties and lists subspecialties under major headings. Page references to the subspecialties are not, unfortunately, given. Welcome additions include a new geographic index and the use of boldface type for each name in Volumes 1–6. Other useful changes are seen in arrangement of biographical information (e.g., a mailing address, rather than just an "address," is provided); in the inclusion of deceased AMWS 12 scientists in the alphabetic array rather than in a separate necrology; and in referrals back to AMWS 12 for persons believed to be active, but for whom no updated information was available. A necessary purchase for all libraries with substantial sci-tech collections. Other libraries may prefer to remain with AMWS 12.—Dade T. Curtis, Illinois State Univ. Libs., Normal

Ash, Joan & Michael Stevenson. Health: a multimedia source guide.

Bowker. 1976. 185p. index. LC 76-28297. ISBN 0-8352-0905-9. $16. HEALTH/REF

This book is a timely guide to selected organizations which librarians can contact themselves or to which they can refer inquiries for print and nonprint health information sources. It includes publishers, audiovisual distributors, libraries, government agencies, corporations, associations, and research centers. The information was obtained via a questionnaire survey distributed to sources primarily in the U.S. The resulting annotated list is organized according to type of source, with necessary cross references for resources providing more than one type of information. In addition, the book contains an alphabetical index to the 700 sources, a selected listing of sources that provide free or inexpensive pamphlet material, and subject index. Though this guide is not comprehensive, as it is based on replies from organizations listed, it does include many of the key resources and is convenient to use. Recommended for any library which gets requests for health information for nonprofessional audiences.—Jane Port, Levy Lib., Mt. Sinai Sch. of Medicine, New York

Emmett, Kathleen & Peter Machamer. Perception: an annotated bibliography.

Garland. (Reference Library of the Humanities, Vol. 39). 1976. 177p. index. LC 75-24086. ISBN 0-8240-9966-4. $20. PHIL/REF

A solid bibliography directed toward philosophers and focusing on work in the period from 1935 to 1974. In addition to full length works, articles from 28 major journals have been included. The 1485 entries are arranged alphabetically, numbered consecutively, and most are annotated. A subject index is provided, but a title index is not. One might quibble with some of the selections, but the work should prove useful for upper division undergraduate and graduate collections, even those with Philosopher's Index. Recommended.—Alfred N. Garwood, Randolph Township P.L., N.J.

Herman, Valentine in collab. with Françoise Mendel. Parliaments of the World: a reference compendium.

De Gruyter. 1976. 985p. ed. by Inter-Parliamentary Union. bibliog. index. LC 76-17574. $70. POL SCI/REF

Detailed information on the parliamentary countries of the world is usually scattered and difficult to find. Now, however, we have an up-to-date compilation of 70 tables and explanatory narrative which bring together the data most frequently desired by students and political analysts. Information concerning the electorate's qualifications, balloting procedures, methods of voting, publication of debates, volume of legislation, preparation of the budget, dissolution of parliament, salaries of legislators, the nomination of government officials and judges, quorums and voting majorities, and more is included. A special boon for researchers and interested laymen, this work will be useful to all interested library users. The major drawback is the high price, which will make it too expensive for smaller libraries. It is also, unfortunately, the type of work which will need revision and updating in a few years. Otherwise, it is one of the finest political reference books to come along in some time.—Eugene A. Engeldinger, Univ. of Wisconsin Lib., Eau Claire Hutcheson, John D., Jr. & Jann Shevin. Citizen Groups in Local Politics: a bibliographic review.

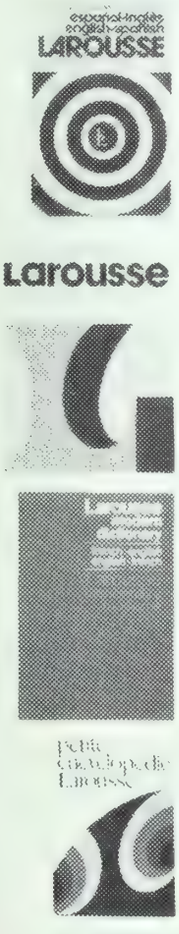
ABC-Clio. 1976. 155p. index. LC 76-23441. ISBN 0-87436-231-8. $19.75. POL SCI/REF

This bibliographic study focuses on the organization, activities, strategies, and impact of citizen groups attempting to influence local politics and decision-making processes. Included are books, monographs, journals, government documents, professional papers, and dissertations published since 1950, with emphasis on the period since 1960. Most of the entries are annotated, and when applicable, the methods, objectives, and results of the research are included. Only materials available in Eng-



NEW DICTIONARIES FROM LAROUSSE

DICCIONARIO LAROUSSE MODERNO ESPANOL-INGLES ENGLISH-SPANISH

The Larousse DICCIONARIO MODERNO ESPANOL-INGLES ENGLISH-SPANISH fulfills every conceivable need of those involved in the study, translation and teaching of Spanish and English. Reflecting the evolution of both languages, it includes the everyday language of the media as well as the classical language. Special attention has been given to new technical and scientific terms, and Latin American variations are clearly discussed. Forty-three extensive vocabulary lists of special subjects such as anatomy, economy and politics and 16 color plates further enhance one's knowledge of technical terms. Also included are detailed résumés of both Spanish and English grammar, and tables of equivalent weights, measures and monetary units for all Spanish-speaking countries, the U.S., Canada and Great Britain. $25.00, 6" x 9", ISBN 2-03-020605-9, 2,088 pages, Title No. 21914

DICCIONARIO NUEVO LAROUSSE MANUAL ILUSTRADO. REVISED EDITION.

This all Spanish reference work now contains 54,000 entries, 4,200 illustrations, plus a new Color Atlas and Compendium of Spanish Grammar. As both an encyclopedia and a dictionary, this is a concise reference of art, science, geography and history. $17.95, 6" x 7⅞", ISBN 2-03-020546-x, 1,090 pages, Title No. 21121

PETIT LAROUSSE ILLUSTRE 1977

The definitive authority for over 100 years, the Petit Larousse Illustré has been called "perhaps the most remarkable of all compact general reference works" by SATURDAY REVIEW. With over 70,500 entries, 5,500 illustrations and 1,981 pages, the famous PETIT LAROUSSE ILLUSTRE has added 97 new words, 44 new accepted expressions and 98 new proper names for its 1977 edition. Hardbound with line drawings, photographs in black and white and color, charts, maps and the well-known "section rose". $29.95, 6" x 8¼", ISBN 2-03-020110-3, 1,981 pages, Title No. 3077

LAROUSSE MODERN FRENCH-ENGLISH ENGLISH-FRENCH DICTIONARY

The best-selling bilingual reference work for scholars, individuals and students, backed by the name Larousse. $14.95, 6½" x 8¾", ISBN 0-88332-003-7, 1,520 pages, Title No. 3763

LA PETITE ENCYCLOPEDIE LAROUSSE

Here is a one-volume encyclopedia, all in French, the perfect and indispensable complement to the Petit Larousse Illustré. With it, the reader can approach any subject and effortlessly assimilate its basic elements. Or he can enhance his previous knowledge of the subject by putting it into a clearer perspective. Its format makes it easily manageable; its presentation is clear and enriched by numerous color illustrations. $42.00, 6⅛" x 9", ISBN 2-03-029611-2, 1,487 pages, Title No. 3528

Larousse & Co., Inc.
572 Fifth Ave., New York, New York 10036 Tel. (212) 575-9515 Telex 12335

PUBLICATIONS FROM UNITED NATIONS

STANDING ORDER

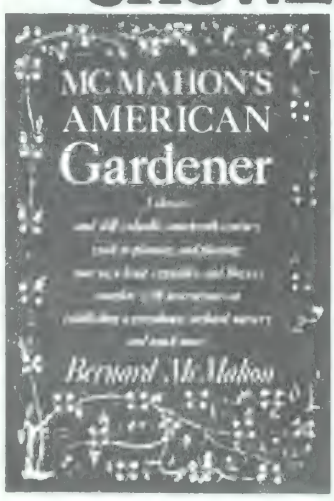
The United Nations, as a result of its manifold activities, publishes a great number of titles in many categories, such as: Economics, Social Questions, International Law, Human Rights and International Statistics, among others.

To facilitate ordering, and to be sure of getting all publications in your field of interest, use the Standing Order Service. By ordering once, you can receive all titles in any category you choose, or even single recurrent titles, just as soon as they are off the press. Publications on the Standing Order Service receive the same automatic shipment accorded to the official delegations to the United Nations.

Send for the Standing Order Service Guide, which describes in detail how the Service works.

United Nations Publications
Room LX-2300
New York, N.Y. 10017
or
United Nations Publications
Palais des Nations
1211 Geneva 10, Switzerland

THE CROWELL CORNER · FUNK & WAGNALLS



McMAHON'S
AMERICAN GARDENER
Bernard McMahon

"An extraordinary book to be cherished ...First published over a hundred years ago when gardeners had no chemicals, no aids but their ingenuity and enthusiasm. The text is a delight, the advice sound, the organization by months of the year still one of the most sensible ever devised, and the picture of an earlier America is valuable in itself."~The Booklist

ISBN: 0-308-10223-1 $10.00
LC: 75-29506

Funk & Wagnalls
666 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10019

lish are cited. Suggested for citizen group leaders, public officials, and researchers in this field.—Barbara Lande Turman, Univ. of Texas Lib., Austin

Hutchinson, William K. History of Economic Analysis: a guide to information sources.

Gale. (Economics Information Guides). 1976. 243p. index. LC 73-17578. ISBN 0-8103-1295-6. $18. ECON/REF

This sourcebook is intended for the beginning student in the history of economic analysis. Annotated entries include journal articles and books on some of the major schools of economic thought: mercantilism, physiocracy, socialism, the historical school, the Austrian school, the institutionalists, and 20th-Century British economic thought. The majority of the entries are secondary rather than primary sources, and all cite only works available in English. Author, title, and subject indexes conclude the book.—Barbara Lande Turman, Univ. of Texas Lib., Austin

The Johnson Years.

721p. LC 76-20898. ISBN 0-87196-451-1.

The Kennedy Years.

621p. LC 76-20897. ISBN 0-87196-450-3.

ea. vol.: Facts on File. (Political Profiles). 1976. ed. & pref. by Nelson Lichtenstein. bibliog. index. $45; set $79.90. GOVT/REF

These are the first volumes in a series that will provide biographical material on individuals politically involved during the Truman, Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon, and Ford Presidencies. If the Kennedy and Johnson volumes are true indicators, the series will be very good. These profiles form a comprehensive who's who of the individuals involved in politics, the federal government, and the domestic scene. The profiles are signed, and if the individual was important there are bibliographic entries for further reference. The profiles are cross-referenced to other administrations; but while this provides good coverage of the individual, it indicates that to have a complete biographical sketch you will need all six volumes. It is to be hoped that when the series is completed, a master index to all the volumes will be available. Each volume contains a detailed introduction, several appendixes, a comprehensive bibliographic essay, a career index, and a general index. The appendixes that will prove to be extremely useful are the chronology and the list of the individuals in the executive departments and regulatory commissions. These volumes are well done and are highly recommended for public and academic libraries.—Robert E. Schnare Jr., U.S. Military Academy Lib., West Point, N.Y.

Kettler, Ellen L. & Bernard D. Reams Jr., comps. Historic Preservation Law: an annotated bibliography.

Preservation Pr. 1976. 115p. index. LC 76-3202. ISBN 0-89133-034-8. pap. $4. LAW/REF

This working bibliography is organized into sections on historic preservation legislation at the local, state, and federal levels; legal techniques such as eminent domain; historic district zoning; easements; architectural controls; taxation; aesthetic zoning; and transfer of development rights. Other sections include: urban renewal; case studies in historic preservation law; archeology and standing to sue. There are several valuable indexes, covering geographical references, major legislation affecting historic preservation, relevant federal agencies, and court cases. Suggested for lawyers or layperson interested in preservation law.—Barbara Lande Turman, Univ. of Texas Lib., Austin

Lacey, A. R. A Dictionary of Philosophy.

Routledge & Kegan Paul. 1976. 239p. ISBN 0-7100-8361-0. $9.75. PHIL/REF

Lacey aims his book at laymen and students. He stresses epistemology and logic which he believes to be central to philosophy. The text is clear, has helpful cross-references, and lists the names of major works that are relevant to the entries. The book, in short, is a good one. Its title, however, is misleading, for the book concerns only Western philosophy. Even here, it has noticeable omissions, especially if it is to be used by laymen and students. Missing completely are: "the absolute," "analogy," "class struggle," "deism," "dialectical materialism," "number," "relativism," and "G. Santayana"; and missing as entries themselves, though discussed under other entries (which laymen are not likely to know enough to look under) are: "dualism," "God," "innate idea," "materialism," and "verifiability." Moreover, a few entries are too brief to be really useful, e.g., "recursive" and "reductionism." Although I share both Lacey's belief about what is central to philosophy and his apparent preference for 20th-Century analytic philosophy, I do believe that his Dictionary should have included more of what does not populate our philosophical heaven and earth. Still, the shortcomings are minor; and Lacey has accomplished his task of writing a book that will help the philosophy student (though not the layman, I suspect) to understand some important terms in contemporary English-speaking philosophy and to connect them to the problems associated with them.—Robert Hoffman, Dept. of Philosophy, York Coll., CUNY

Lives of the Stuart Age, 1603-1714.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1976. 500p. comp. by Lawrence Urdang Assocs. ed. by Edwin Riddell. illus. index. LC 75-39126. ISBN 0-06-494330-5. $27.50. HIST/REF

The first published volume of a projected five-volume period-by-period dictionary of English biography. Focusing on 322 personalities whose major achievements occurred between the accession to the throne of James I and the death of Queen Anne, this readable, well-researched work is useful because it selectively updates the multivolume Dictionary of National Biography, incorporates bibliographies that include standard biographies and definitive editions of works where applicable, and gives locations of portraits for major figures of the period. Its major value, however, is that it uniquely meets a need of the scholarly community for a high-quality biographic reference tool that is specific to a time and place, selective, current, and not prohibitively expensive. Highly recommended.—Dorothy Sternlicht, SUNY at Oswego Lib.

Rockland, Mae Shafter with Michael Aaron Rockland. The Jewish Yellow Pages: a directory of goods & services.

Schocken. 1976. 212p. illus. index. LC 76-26524. $15; pap. $7.95. REL/REF

Reflecting the vitality, creativity, and variety of Jewish life in America, this handsome and helpful book is divided into five categories: "Creating" (from buildings to kiddush cups); "Learning" (from books to courses); "Buying" (from greeting cards to antiques); "Playing" (from summer camps to music); and "Observing" (from charitable organizations to kosher food). For each listing the name and address of the artists or organization is given, and there are representative black-and-white illustrations of the works described. The text, from a few lines to half a column in length, gives background information and details the work or services being offered. The author, herself an artist, has also written The Hanukkah Book (LJ 10/1/75) and The Work of Our Hands (LJ 7/73). Recommended for general Judaica collections and for YA's.—Gerda Haas, Bates Coll. Lib., Lewiston, Me.

Soltow, Martha Jane & Mary K. Wery. American Women and the Labor Movement, 1825-1974: an annotated bibliography.

Scarecrow. 1976. 247p. index. LC 76-40169. ISBN 0-8108-0986-9. $8. LABOR/REF

Libraries owning Soltow's Women in American Labor History, 1825-1935 (Michigan State Univ., 1972) will want to supersede it with this expanded work. Approximately 700 entries (an increase of about 50%), logically arranged, are made eminently accessible by thorough indexing. Again, the bibliography's strengths are its sharply defined scope and its annotations in the form of abstracts; but, inexplicably, the section on archival holdings shows no updating. Other weaknesses, however, reflect the publisher's standards: wasted space gives the appearance of padding, the otherwise admirable system of indexing by entry number rather than page number becomes amateurish when "deletion" entries remain, and last minute insertions disrupt the sequence in spite of the cutoff date, which seems to have been no later than December 1975. Nevertheless, this selective bibliography is important for any library whose collections relate at all to women's studies or labor history.—Sally Linden, Wellesley Coll. Lib., Mass.

Terrace, Vincent. The Complete Encyclopedia of Television Programs, 1947–1976. 2 vols.

A. S. Barnes. 1976. Vol. 1, 450p. Vol. 2, 464p. illus. LC 74-10022. ISBN 0-498-01561-0. $29.95. COMM/REF

Terrace has compiled this catalog of more than 2700 entertainment programs seen on TV from January 1, 1946 to January 1, 1976, in order to "evoke long-forgotten and long-neglected memories." While the work may succeed in this, it is lacking as a reference tool. Programs are listed alphabetically with brief summaries and character lists. Dates of broadcast are noted, but the number of episodes is not. Some entires are incomplete: for instance, Phyllis is not listed as a spin-off of The Mary Tyler Moore Show, although Rhoda is. News programs such as "Sixty Minutes" are omitted. This title is of limited usefulness unless the user's primary interest is in situation comedies and game shows.—Lucy Caswell, formerly with Ohio State Univ. Journalism Lib., Columbus

Webster's Secretarial Handbook.

Merriam. 1976. 546p. ed. by Anna L. Eckersley-Johnson. index. LC 76-22498. ISBN 0-87779-036-1. $8.95. REF

A great deal of thought, care, and hard work has been put into this entirely new handbook, and the result is definitely not for secretaries only. For example, the chapter on effective business English (grammar, punctuation, capitalization, etc.) is a tight and intelligent presentation of current style and usage. Other chapters discuss and illustrate such topics as letter writing and correspondence, telecommunication systems, basic accounting, record keeping and filing systems, travel planning, and arranging meetings. There is information on office equipment and supplies, including such modern technology as automatic typewriters, calculators, and photocopiers. There is an excellent index. This handbook should find a happy home in any library.—John D. Campbell, Occidental College Lib. Los Angeles

The Writer's Manual by Roy E. Porter & others.

ETC Pubs. 1977. 987p. index. LC 75-43588. ISBN 0-88280-044-2. $27.95; pap. ISBN 0-88280-045-0. $19.95. REF

Written for the novice, this guide offers the collective advice and expertise of professional writers, agents, editors, educators, et al., on a wide range of topics. Emphasis is on the commercial market. The book covers everything from how to write fiction, plays, and poetry to the academic press and composition and style. Wide-ranging, though not definitive, the work, which was written mostly in 1973 and 1974, is subdivided into nearly 100 chapters ranging from the elementary to the practical and theoretical. Libraries on a limited budget will prefer A. S. Burack's Writer's Handbook 1976 (Writer), which combines similar information with market sources.—Peter P. Olevnik, SUNY at Brockport Lib.

Recently Revised Reference Works

Clutton, Cecil & others. The Vintage Car Guide. 2d ed.

Doubleday. 1977. 224p. illus. LC 76-14573. ISBN 0-385-12576-3. $7.95. TECH/REF

In this edition of a work first published in 1959 as The Vintage Motor Car Pocketbook "most of the pictures are different . . ., but the subject matter . . . has not been altered very much."

THE CROWELL CORNER

SECOND SUPPLEMENTED EDITION

Dictionary of AMERICAN SLANG

Compiled by Harold Wentworth and Stuart Berg Flexner

DICTIONARY OF AMERICAN SLANG
Second Supplemented Edition
Harold Wentworth and Stuart Berg Flexner

"A good record of slang in use today. It augments standard English-language dictionaries. . . . An important resource for anyone who wants to become familiar with the increasingly complex world of current slang. Recommended for home and library."
–ALA Booklist

ISBN: 0-690-00670-5
LC: 75-8644
$12.95

T. Y. CROWELL
666 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10019

COMMUNITY LAW REPORTS, INC.

A people-oriented reference series

Dunlap, Mary C., ed.,
SEX DISCRIMINATION IN EMPLOYMENT: Application of Title VII.
ISBN 0-89035-001-9. Library Edition.
CIP. 62 pages. $22.00

"This is an excellent manual for the literate layperson or the professional lawyer unfamiliar with Title VII . . . A practical, well-wrought alternative for the library without a comprehensive law collection." —Choice.

COMMUNITY LAW REPORTS, INC.
P.O. Box 1234, Santa Cruz, CA 95061

THE BOOK OF Winchester Engraving
By R.L. Wilson

Over 750 photos, more than 60 in color, over 400 pages. The definitive work on all major Winchester engravers as well as the history of engraving at Winchester. An important documentary work on many of the great engravers as well as their work. A comprehensive, fundamental source reference book.
ISBN 0-917714-01-6
$39.95

Beinfeld Publishing, Inc.
DEPT. LJ
13222 Saticoy Street
North Hollywood, Ca. 91605

NEW . . . NEW . . . NEW

THE HANDCRAFTER'S CREATIVE OJO BOOK

52 pages, 25 color illustrations, 73 easy-to-follow diagrams.

Newest manual in the Creative Ojo Book series by Diane Thomas. Designs for making a total of 122 God's Eye hangings are carefully diagrammed in the 4 books. With flat binding for easy handling, each book measures 8½x11 inches. Ojos are shown in 4-color illustrations.

$2.95 retail

OTHER BOOKS IN THE SERIES
The Creative Ojo Book
The Advanced Creative Ojo Book
The Regional Creative Ojo Book

Write for our attractive dealer discounts.

HUNTER PUBLISHING CO.
P.O. Box 9533
Phoenix, AZ 85068
Ph. (602) 944-1022

Congressional Quarterly. Guide to Congress. 2d ed.

Congressional Quarterly. 1976. 719p. + appendixes. index. LC 76-41925. ISBN 0-87187-100-9. $49.50. GOVT/REF

This edition of a "comprehensive, well-organized, indexed guide suitable for quick reference" (LJ 10/15/71) contains new material on Watergate, impeachment developments, war powers legislation, the budget, the intelligence community, campaign finance legislation, etc.

Encyclopedia of Swimming. 2d ed.

St. Martin's. Mar. 1977. 302p. comp. by Pat Besford. illus. index. LC 76-16687. ISBN 0-312-25060-6. $10. SPORTS/REF

LJ recommended this "labor of love" (LJ 3/15/72), which has now been revised and updated. The index contains about 3600 name entries.

Westrup, J. A. & F. Ll. Harrison. The New College Encyclopedia of Music.

Norton. 1976. 608p. rev. by Conrad Wilson. intro. by Andre Previn. illus. LC 76-22891. ISBN 0-393-02191-2. $19.95. MUSIC/REF

While seeking to preserve the flavor of the original edition (LJ 9/1/60), Wilson has updated and revised entries, dropped minor figures of the early 20th Century in favor of major figures of today, made many reassessments, included key jazz figures, etc.

Winter, Ruth. A Consumer's Dictionary of Cosmetic Ingredients. new, rev. & expanded ed.

Crown. 1976. 260p. LC 76-17846. ISBN 0-517-52736-7. $7.95; pap. ISBN 0-517-52737-5. $4.95. SCI/REF

Includes new cosmetic ingredients being used since publication of the first edition in 1974 and covers the new cosmetics labeling law, which went into effect in November 1976.

—This highly selective listing was compiled by Robert R. Harris

ART

Dali, Salvador. Salvador Dali.

175p. text by Robert Descharnes. tr. by Eleanor R. Morse. LC 74-4257. ISBN 0-8109-0222-2.

Schmalenbach, Werner. Fernand Léger.

173p. tr. by Robert Allen with James Emmons. LC 75-5520. ISBN 0-8190-0252-4. ea. vol: Abrams. (Lib. of Great Painters). 1976. illus., some color. bibliog. index. $22.50. ART

Following the usual format of this popular series, both volumes provide a scholarly analysis of the artistic development of their respective subjects. Lacking in both is an attempt to recreate the social atmosphere which influenced the artist's work; mention is made of only several of the numerous poets and painters who reacted to and with the artists in question. A section is devoted to drawings followed by color reproductions of individual paintings accompanied by a descriptive and explanatory text. The selective bibliographies are exceptionally skimpy.—Lamia Doumato, Museum of Modern Art Lib., New York

Highwater, Jamake. Song from the Earth: American Indian painting.

New York Graphic Society. 1976. 212p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 75-37201. ISBN 0-8212-0698-2. $19.95. ART

In the brief introductory chapter, Highwater presents a cogent political analysis of Indian art in the context of a dominant white society, emphasizing the otherness of Indian experience. For the Indian, great art does not involve "beauty" but contains "good spirit." A "beautiful" work would appear superficial in a culture where all of life has cosmic significance, where art is part of ritual, where the function of art is to make visible the whole life process translated into human experience. Highwater then surveys Indian art from pre-Columbian (rock art, mimbres pottery, kiva murals, etc.) through 18th-Century ledger drawings by Indian prisoners in Florida to more recent and contemporary Indian art. Entering into the controversy surrounding contemporary Indian painting (with dissenters charging that such art betrays Indian values and ideals in its apparent acceptance of Western views), the author suggests—in contrast to his egalitarian introduction—that the uninitiated have little business evaluating art works. Nevertheless, the book's overall fairness and perceptiveness, the useful information it presents, its insightful interviews with Indian artists, well-chosen illustrations, and appendix listing places with important holdings of Native American art make it a valuable work for public libraries as well as art and ethnological collections.—Mary Mallory, Harvard Univ. Libs.

Islamic Painting and the Arts of the Book by B. W. Robinson & others.

Scribners. (Keir Collection). 1976. 322p. + 157 plates. ed. by B. W. Robinson. intro. by Ivan Stchoukine. illus., some color. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-571-10866-0. $95. ART

The excellence of the Keir collection is undisputed, but the text of this third of a projected four-part catalog is in part disappointingly brief and some of the catalog entries lack substance. The collection includes unusually strong (qualitatively and quantitatively) holdings of Fostat paper fragments. Ernst J. Grube's text with its copious notes providing a wealth of bibliographic information, his catalog and bibliography of these fragments make important contributions to Islamic art studies and, along with his section on pre-Mongol and Mamluck painting, is superior to the sections by the other authors (G. M. Meredith-Owens, B. W. Robinson, and R. W. Skelton). All four authors employ an iconographic approach to their catalog listings, but only R. W. Skelton emphasizes attributions. Indexes of artists, calligraphers, scribes, and finally of texts and subjects illustrated are included. The list price seems exorbitant considering the fact that the quality of the 44 color and 157 monochrome plates is often disappointing, but research libraries have little choice since many of the items in de Unger's subjectively chosen collection are of priceless importance to Islamic studies.—Jacqueline D. Sisson, Ohio State Univ. Libs. Columbus

Tao-Chi. Returning Home: Tao-Chi's album of landscape and flowers.

Braziller. 1976. 91p. illus. map. LC 76-15911. ISBN 0-8076-0827-0. $17.50. ART

An important figure in the history of Chinese painting, Tao-chi (1641-ca. 1710, also known as Shih-t'ao), was a strong exponent of self-expression. Proabaly self-taught, this monk-artist advocated in his perceptive writings and paintings that inspiration is derived directly from nature and not through the more common practice of copying the masters until, to put it in modern terms, the artist found a spin-off style. Tao-chi's lack of roots—resulting from a lifetime of restless wanderings—was a source of sadness in his old age, a sadness poignantly expressed in the 12 poems and paintings reproduced in this handsome, diminutive facsimile edition. The introduction and commentaries by Wen Fong of Harvard University are succinct and informative, although he does not state whether the album has been reproduced in exact size nor mention the album's present owner. The publisher and designer of this facsimile edition are to be commended for its simplicity and beauty.—Jacqueline D. Sisson, Ohio State Univ. Libs., Columbus

Decorative Arts & Crafts

Better Homes and Gardens Creative Crafts and Stitchery.

Better Homes and Gardens: Meredith. 1976. 288p. illus., mainly color. index. LC 76-19163. ISBN 0-696-00381-3. $12.95. CRAFTS

This compendium is truly exciting in scope and quality. There are chapters on embroidery, needlepoint, appliqué, sewing, knitting, crocheting, hooking and weaving, framing, and woodworking, and a catchall chapter, "More Craft Techniques," that tells about restoring old trunks, metalwork, rosemaling, stenciling and painting, decoupage, art from the oven, and sculpting. For each technique there are several projects, presented in the same format—a photograph of the finished work, a brief introductory paragraph, a list of materials needed, directions, and where needed diagrams and illustrations to clarify particular processes or to illustrate patterns to be used in the project. There is a glossary of terms for each technique, and drawings of stitches or procedures. With the above any person could try any of the projects, although some previous experience would be helpful. While some of the projects are old standbys—stuffed dolls, sweaters, etc.—many are original and innovative, like a shower curtain with appliquéd doilies, a comforter made from bandannas, and pillows made of chamois cloth. A good choice for appropriate collections.—Bonnie Naifeh Hill, Boston Univ. Libs.

Garner, Philippe. Emile Gallé.

Rizzoli. 1976. 167p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 76-11257. ISBN 0-8478-0036-9. $30. DEC ARTS

Perhaps the highest achievement of French Art Nouveau is the work of Emile Gallé and the school of Nancy. Gallé combined a pantheistic love of nature with an extensive study of botany and horticulture. He was also deeply influenced by Symbolist literature. The result of this heady mixture is an art, chiefly in glass and inlaid furniture, of evocative plant and insect forms. There are vases and bowls and desks and firescreens. These are sensual and chaste, limpid and disturbing: the forms of the lily and of the vampire bat. Garner has written a text of spare and lucid elegance in counterpoint to the gorgeous, almost surreal, color and black-and-white plates representing the best of Gallé's oeuvre. He treats Gallé's life, the influences on his work, his faience, wood, and glass in separate chapters. Rarely has the power of Art Nouveau, as opposed to its decorative aspects, been shown so well in two dimensions.—Grace Anne A. DeCandido, N.Y.P.L.

Ley, Sandra. Russian and Other Slavic Embroidery Designs.

Scribners. 1976. 95p. illus., some color. bibliog. LC 76-12479. ISBN 0-684-14734-3. $12.50.

Ramazanoğlu, Gülseren. Turkish Embroidery.

Van Nostrand Reinhold. 1976. 104p. illus., some color. index. LC 74-33892. ISBN 0-442-26799-1. $10.95. CRAFTS

Although neither of these books is an essential library purchase, one of them is a pleasant survey of an ethnic tradition while the other is an overpriced travesty. The latter, Ley's book, spends 16 pages on stitch and fabric advice which is available in any basic embroidery book. The designs are not shown to be related to any historical patterns and the reader is given no clue as to which design is inspired by which Slavic tradition. The diagrams are clear and the coaster project on page 65 is attractive but the book is a rip-off.

Ramazanoğlu's book, by contrast, gives the reader a brief history of the Turkish use of embroidery and explains the unique stitches used. The sources for the designs are shown, as are some elegant uses for the patterns. Too many pages are devoted to modern fashion display and too few to museum pieces, but the book is an attractive introduction to a little-known tradition. Libraries with extensive collections of ethnic crafts may want to consider it.—Dorothy E. Wynne, SUNY at Buffalo

McCall's Embroidery Book.

S. & S. Jan. 1977. color illus. ISBN 0-671-22342-9. $9.95. CRAFTS

A vast selection of embroidery projects covering the spectrum from home decoration to clothing and conveniently organized in chapters by category. Some patterns are old favorites from past issues of McCall's Needlework magazine but most are new. The directions are presented in the same way that they appear in the magazine. Each project is accompanied by ample drawings and graphs for design enlargement plus a picture of the finished product. Readers familiar with the magazine will be comfortable with this book. And for the price, it's a good buy.—Lois Horowitz, Univ. of California Lib. at San Diego

Artists Series

Full-color reproductions suitable for framing. Text discusses the painter's life, techniques, works.

96 pages, 9⅜″ x 9¼″ $10.95 ea.

DURER ROUAULT
MILLET TURNER
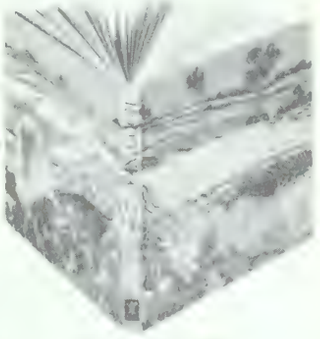
REMBRANDT

ART NOUVEAU
by Bernard Champigneulle
A thorough look at the movement.
266 illustrations; 30 in full-color
Paper $10.95
Cloth $13.95

LETTRES A GIORGIO by FOLON
43 full-color envelope designs some done with Milton Glaser, Roy Lichtenstein, others.
92 pages, 4-3/16″ x 9-3/16″, $14.95

THE DEATH OF A TREE by FOLON
24 watercolors
68 pages, 11″ x 14″ $29.95



VAN GOGH
Lavish full-color, full-page illustrations in a clothbound, boxed edition. 12″ x 12″, 152 pages. $59.95

BARRON'S
Woodbury, New York 11797

JOHN F. KENNEDY

by Donald C. Lord
Chm., Arts and Humanities, Unity Coll.

The Probing Analysis of a President's Crises and Accomplishments

An unsentimental study of JFK that begins with his family background, continues through his political offices, and ends with his assassination, with emphasis given to current views of his achievements.
Illustrated, $9.95 cloth

BARRON'S
Woodbury, New York 11797

NEWSWORTHY

MAO TSE-TUNG
The Man in the Leader
Lucian W. Pye

Much of what is happening in China today, says leading Sinologist Lucian Pye, can be understood through the all-too-little known personality of Mao. This fascinating biography is the first to relate the private man—his maternal attachment, his clashes with his father, his three marriages—to the public figure of Mao. "Excellent." —Robert Kirsch, Los Angeles Times. "Uniquely perceptive." —Zbigniew Brzezinski

$12.95 at bookstores, or direct from the publisher

BASIC
BASIC BOOKS INC.
10 EAST 53RD ST.,
NEW YORK 10022

McElroy, Joan. Joan McElroy's Dolls' House Furniture Book.

Knopf. 1976. 222p. illus., some color. index. LC 76-13703. ISBN 0-394-40057-7. $15. CRAFTS

This is an attractive and imaginative guide for the construction of miniature furniture. Although the author's primary interest is in dolls' houses, her techniques could be applied to the making of miniatures for other purposes. All of the pieces illustrated were made by the author, who gives good detailed instructions. A list of suppliers is included. Similar in content to Ann Kimball Pipe's Reproducing Furniture in Miniature (LJ 6/1/76) and Marian Maeve O'Brien's Make and Furnish Your own Miniature Rooms (LJ 1/1/77), this book has enough new material to recommend it for purchase for collections having a demand for this subject.—Constance Ashmore Fairchild, Univ. of Illinois Lib., Urbana

Warren, Geoffrey. A Stitch in Time: Victorian and Edwardian needlecraft.

Taplinger. 1976. 144p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-12187. ISBN 0-8008-7435-8. $9.95.

CRAFTS

Much more than a social history of period English needlecraft than Molly G. Proctor's Victorian Canvas Work (Batsford, 1972), A Stitch in Time tells of both leisure-time and occupational needlework. The tragedy of poor women ruining their eyesight for below survival wages while middle class women and children endure the boredom of hours of unnecessary embroidery is made clear in spite of Warren's light tone. The author briefly covers the economic, artistic, and social impact of the development of needlework machinery and touches on the use (and abuse) made of hand-sewed items in homes and wardrobes. This informative book is not an essential purchase although libraries with extensive collections of needle-art history or women's studies might find it a compact, lively addition.—Dorothy E. Wynne, SUNY at Buffalo

Wilkinson, Jean with Katharyn Duff. Flower Fabrications: forty hand fashioned flowers to create including silk tulips, organdy roses, gingham cornflowers and crepe paper daisies.

Butterick Pub. 1977. 206p. illus., some color. index. LC 76-26364. ISBN 0-88421-025-1. $12.95.

CRAFTS

The basics of flowercraft. Thorough, methodical directions supplemented by line drawings illustrating techniques permit the user to create with as little difficulty as possible any of 40 handfashioned blossoms (natural looking and stylized). Life-size petal and leaf patterns eliminate the guesswork of enlarging small, bothersome charts. Everything one needs to know for making a single, surefire posy or an elaborate centerpiece is here. At the same time, superb color photos display to full advantage an assortment of attractive floral arrangements. A sprightly book, brimming over with exciting ideas that are bound to have wide appeal.—Monica F. Hashimoto, formerly with Los Angeles P.L.

Photography

Feininger, Andreas. Light and Lighting in Photography.

Amphoto and Prentice-Hall. 1976. 296p. illus., some color. index. LC 76-16449. $11.95.

PHOTOG

The well-known Life photographer has written a comprehensive work on light, the fundamental component of photography. The virtually encyclopedic treatment considers all aspects of light: its functions, qualities, forms, and sources. These categories and their numerous subdivisions are treated in a logical and analytical manner. Feininger wishes to build the theoretical foundations before he considers any "how to" applications. However, only one chapter deals with specific techniques of using lighting in photography, and most of it is devoted to tutorial exercises and to special lighting situations. Only about 15 pages are concerned with portraiture and many readers will consider this inadequate. On the whole, the average photographer will find the book somewhat formidable.—Frank Davidoff, Staff Consultant, CBS Television Network

Gowin, Emmet. Photographs.

Knopf. 1976. 101p. LC 76-13696. ISBN 0-394-40195-6. $17.50; pap. ISBN 0-394-73249-9. $8.95. PHOTOG

Gowin works with simple everyday people and objects: his wife, Edith; their children and relatives; the houses, porches, screens, fields, and roads in his native Danville, Virginia. But from such innocuous material has come a highly satisfying volume of images that run dark, wide, and deep. The snapshot quality to the poses is altered, made rich and resonant, through a disquieting ambiguity in composition and frequent use of a circular format. The portrait and nude studies of Edith which pervade the book (Gowin acknowledges a debt to Harry Callahan) are especially intense and compelling. The photographs also gather strength from their intelligent organization here: the images flow easily one to the other, building upon a sense of time, a dramatic and haunting continuity.—Thomas D. Bedell, Editor, "Valley Stream MAILeader," N.Y.

BIOGRAPHY

Graves, Richard Perceval. Lawrence of Arabia and His World.

Scribners. 1976. 127p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-7183. ISBN 0-684-14726-2. $8.95.

HIST/BIOG

The text, a brief, sympathetic survey of Lawrence's life, emphasizing his daring exploits during the Arab Revolt and his later search for obscurity in the ranks, adds nothing to the more extensive studies already published, including an outstanding recent work, John E. Mack's A Prince of Our Disorder (LJ 4/1/76). However, Graves' book contains 98 illustrations that make it an attractive complement to other Lawrence works. The photographs add many visual details to the Arab phase of Lawrence's life in particular, and a welcome human touch to a story that has become something of a myth.—Elizabeth R. Hayford, Oberlin Coll., Ohio

Heacox, Cecil E. The Education of an Outdoorsman.

Winchester, dist. by Scribners. 1976. 191p. illus. by Wayne Trimm. index. LC 76-40911. ISBN 0-87691-187-4. $8.95. CONSERVATION/PER NAR

Here is the story of a conservationist's life from his college graduation to his rise to deputy commissioner in the conservation department of the State of New York. It is an interesting story, written in an easy-to-read, friendly manner. Heacox, who worked his way up from part-time help to upper administrative positions, tells of the failures as well as the successes of early conservation methods. As an added bonus he gives a short, informal history of early conservation work in this country, though more specifically in New York state. As the book tends to be regional, the Northeastern United States will have more call for it; but any library with an interest in wildlife and conservation will do well to have it.—Steve George, Yuma City-County Lib., Ariz.

Kennedy, Flo. Color Me Flo: my hard life and good times.

Prentice-Hall. 1976. 170p. photogs. LC 76-17893. ISBN 0-13-152471-6. $7.95; pap. ISBN 0-13-152363-5. $4.95. AUTOBIOG

Kennedy's book is exactly as she is: dynamic, forceful, outspoken, and funny. It isn't the best-organized or best-written book ever published, but it has a lot to say that is worth hearing. It describes Kennedy's childhood in Kansas City and her law career in New York, but most of all it dwells on her flamboyant present, bringing political pressure to bear to help effect rapid social change. Kennedy's favorite targets are sexism, racism, controls of big business, and big government, and she likes to attack these by exerting pressure on their most sensitive areas (a tactic she calls the "testicular approach"). The second half of Color Me Flo contains some of Kennedy's speeches and articles. The volume is profusely illustrated.—Jean Alling Thompson, Tampa P.L., Fla.

Kistiakowsky, George B. A Scientist at the White House: the private diary of President Eisenhower's special assistant for science and technology.

Harvard Univ. Pr. 1976. 448p. index. LC 76-19013. ISBN 0-674-79496-6. $15. PER NAR

This is a fascinating account of the period from 1959 to 1960 when the author served as chairman of the President's Science Advisory Council. It deals with a time which is not well documented, but which was important because it was a transition period for atomic delivery and weapons systems. It seems ironic that this diary clearly brings out Eisenhower's fear that misplaced power might rise from "the unwarranted influence . . . by the military-industrial complex." The introduction by Charles Maier places the diary in perspective and provides a useful analysis of the value of this type of book. Political scientists, historians, and almost anyone involved in the government will enjoy the insights this work provides.—Hilary Burton, Data Systems Application Div., U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, Beltsville, Md.

Morgan, Kay Summersby. Past Forgetting: my love affair with Dwight D. Eisenhower.

S. & S. 1977. 285p. photogs. ISBN 0-671-22358-5. $9.95. MEMOIR

Morgan was Eisenhower's driver and later personal aide during most of World War II. In this book, completed just before her death in 1975, she breaks the restraints of her earlier book Eisenhower Was My Boss (1948) and tells the full story of her love affair. It was a bittersweet romance, because Ike, in his 50's, absorbed in military matters, and scarred by his unhappy marriage (says Morgan), was not able to love her as openly or completely as they both wished. Given today's insatiable appetite for sexual revelations, it was inevitable that this suppressed story would be aired. We should be grateful Morgan revealed the details herself, for she has written a touching account of a classic human predicament. Yet, pehaps a magazine article would have been a better form for her memoir, which is, after all, only a footnote to history. Most public libraries will have a popular, if short-lived demand.—Barbara Conaty, formerly with Madison P.L., Wisc.

Nevelson, Louise as told to Diana MacKown. Dawns + Dusks.

Scribners. 1976. 210p. illus. LC 76-20634. ISBN 0-684-14781-5. $12.95. ART/PER NAR

Beginning with her earliest childhood memories (when she already considered it to be her destiny to become an artist) up to the present day, Nevelson recounts the important people and events in her life. These naturally flowing, engrossing reminiscences do not delineate dry, traditional art theory. They consist of very personal fleeting evocations of powerful emotions which, in a lifetime of search and discovery, became the elements that nurtured the haunting forms created by this free-spirited, free-thinking artist. Illustrated with examples of her work and other interesting photos, this volume will give enjoyment and inspiration to many.—John Harvath, Jr., Houston P.L.

Olmstead, Alan H. In Praise of Seasons.

Harper. Mar. 1977. 96p. illus. by Hamilton Kahn. LC 76-23515. ISBN 0-06-013284-1. $6.95. NAT HIST/PER NAR

Olmstead's second book (his first was Threshold: The First Days of Retirement, LJ 8/75) is a series of sparingly constructed, finely honed poetic essays, giving us portraits of nature and revealing the author's philosophy. Olmstead stresses his relationship with "garden soil and hill and sky and bird and weather," and manages to capture very well the mood of the days and natural events he describes. There is much pleasure and food for thought in the

HAMLYN AMERICA'S Cornucopia of Expert, Easy-to-use Craft Books

"Libraries with limited book budgets can afford these recent volumes from Hamlyn America, when most craft books cost more than $14. ...Color photographs abound and there are plenty of other illustrations."—ALA BOOKLIST

LEATHERWORK: A STEP BY STEP GUIDE
Mary and E. A. Manning
How to make a variety of functional gifts and accessories—both simple and advanced. Describes the kinds of leather available, techniques of joining and sewing and offers easy-to-follow instructions plus patterns for making durable clothes and toys. 80 pp. 8 pages of color illustrations plus drawings.
ISBN 0-600-38099-8 $4.95

QUILTING: A STEP BY STEP GUIDE
M. J. Cutbush
A wealth of easy-to-master stitchery techniques and designs for quilting everything from napkins to pillows and bedcovers. Clear instructions, diagrams and modern ideas! 80 pp. 8 pages of color illustrations and drawings.
ISBN 0-600-38177-X $4.95

COLLAGE: A STEP BY STEP GUIDE
Valerie Janitch
Full details on the delightful art of constructing pictures out of paper, fabric and objects of varying sizes, shapes and textures. Basic techniques, materials and how to make 23 collages. 80 pp. 8 pages of full color illustrations and line drawings.
ISBN 0-600-38097-1 $4.95

ORIGAMI A STEP BY STEP GUIDE
Robert Harbin
A simple and fun-to-follow guide to the ancient Japanese art of paper-folding by a world-renowned authority. Basic folds, methods and projects ranging in difficulty from easy to intricate. 80 pp. 8 pages of full-color illustrations plus line drawings.
ISBN 0-600-38109-9 $4.95

STEP BY STEP GUIDE TO EMBROIDERY
Barbara Chandler
Here's a beginner's guide to the wide range of working methods from simple borders to counted-thread work, applique and free-style embroidery, needlepoint, openwork, feltwork. Tips on basic stitches, traditional and modern design, equipment and patterns to follow. 80 pp. 8 pages of color illustrations and drawings.
ISBN 0-600-38074-2 $4.95

Distributed by A & W PROMOTIONAL BOOKS
95 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10016

LIPPINCOTT

A tonic for cynical and disheartened readers

19 STEPS UP THE MOUNTAIN

The Story of the DeBolt Family

Joseph P. Blank

With tough-minded determination and tender-hearted love, Dorothy and Bob DeBolt have taught their 13 racially mixed or multiple-handicapped adopted children a special kind of courage, independence and pride. "The DeBolts are doing something special for the cause of human dignity." — The Kirkus Reviews. "Tells clearly what it takes to be a successful parent." — Publishers Weekly.

LC 76-22659

ISBN 0-397-01155-5 $7.95

J B Lippincott Company
East Washington Square
Philadelphia, Pa. 19105

"Lively and highly readable."
— Library Journal

"Gilbert de Lafayette is an intriguing subject....Gerson, author of 'The Velvet Glove' and 'Swamp Fox' has done him full justice."

— Publishers Weekly

STATUE IN SEARCH OF A PEDESTAL

A Biography of the Marquis de Lafayette

NOEL B. GERSON

$7.95

DODD MEAD

reading. Recommended for general collections.—Evelyn G. Callaway, formerly with Nebraska Lib. Commission, Fairbury

Plowden, Alison. The House of Tudor.

Stein & Day. 1976. 224p. illus. index. LC 76-6936. ISBN 0-8128-2079-4. $16.95. BIOG

Henry VII and his strong-minded descendants ruled England for 128 years, leaving an indelible stamp on the history of the entire world. This attractive, readable work outlines the personalities, relationships, and some of the accomplishments of the Tudor monarchs, including Henry VIII's sisters, Mary and Margaret. It traces the machinations of monarchs, nobles, and civil servants, and the resulting complexity of English government during the Tudor era. Though there is little new or controversial in Plowden's treatment of the subject, the book is an interesting, largely sympathetic account of people and their pursuit of power. Serious students will find more factual information about England during that period in Christopher Morris' The Tudors (Macmillan, 1955); but the subject is so popular that most libraries will want Plowden's work as well.—Katharine Garstka, San Diego Zoo Lib., San Diego, Calif.

Richardson, Joanna. Victor Hugo.

St. Martin's. Feb. 1977. 334p. illus. bibliog. index. $14.95. LIT/BIOG

One of the difficulties of writing a sensible biography of Hugo is balancing his long, eventful life against his diminishing literary talent, and Richardson has met this challenge in her succinct book. She deals frankly and equitably with the man, the prophet, and the legend; places Hugo strategically among family, friends, artistic contemporaries, politicians, enemies, et al.; and paints a portrait of a self-centered, often self-seeking genius, who became a cultural phenomenon. Good reading for those interested in 19th-Century European arts and letters; it is much better than a popular biography but something short of a definitive study.—Hubert F. Babinski, Dept. of Comparative Literature, Columbia Univ.

Schor, Joel A. Henry Highland Garnet: a voice of black radicalism in the 19th century.

Greenwood. (Contribs. in American History, 54). Mar. 1977. 256p. bibliog. index. LC 76-8746. ISBN 0-8371-8937-3. $15.95. HIST/BIOG

Garnet (1815-1882) was a black Presbyterian minister and leader. Schor discusses Garnet's role in the vanguard of black abolitionists, explores his frequent disagreements with Frederick Douglass, and shows that though Garnet's views were ahead of his contemporaries', they were eventually adopted by them. For example, Garnet supported the Liberty party and advocated political abolition in the 1840's, interpreted the Constitution as an anti-slavery document, early urged civil disobedience and armed resistance to slavery, and worked for the limited voluntary emigration of blacks to West Africa. Schor clearly explains the evolution of Garnet's ideas in their historical context. His study is a political and intellectual biography, however, not a total biography, and it does not go beyond 1865. Written for scholars and serious students, it is recommended for academic libraries and public libraries with in-depth black history collections.—Charles A. D'Aniello, Richmond P.L., Va.

Seward, Desmond. The Bourbon Kings of France.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1976. 332p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-40528. ISBN 0-06-496185-0. $18.50. BIOG

Already the author of a popular biography of one Bourbon king, Henry IV (The First Bourbon; Gambit, 1971), Seward now gives us this history of the Bourbon dynasty. As one might expect, he refrains from drawing any general conclusions about the reigns of nine Bourbon monarchs (including one pretender) that covered nearly three centuries. Instead, he treats each king in a separate chapter, discussing the main events during his rule as well as describing any physical irregularities or unusual mannerisms exhibited by the monarchs or by their children, relatives, or numerous mistresses. These vignettes show the Bourbon kings as they were: an unusually interesting and unpredictable lot. As a result Seward has produced a lively treatment suitable for public libraries.—Robert O. Lindsay, Dept. of History, Univ. of Montana, Missoula

Shepard, Tim. Peaches Point.

Crowell. 1976. 267p. LC 76-4521. ISBN 0-690-01168-7. $9.95. PER NAR

Larger than life and twice as real is Grandfather Shepard, whose ruggedly individual ways are fondly and often hilariously chronicled by his grandson in this book. Wherever he was, but especially in his summer world on Boston's North Shore, surrounded by a very extensive clan, faithful retainers and irascible neighbors, Grandfather set the tune and pace for all. Not exactly a tyrant, this wealthy, sport-loving gentleman did what he wanted, ignoring all possible consequences including the wrath of the local constabulary. Only in his relationship with his artist son was he unable to exercise control. This unhappy situation counterpoints the comic opera events in which Grandfather Shepard played a starring role. The author has written a book that is both amusing and touching, about a world that no longer exists and one of the giants who created it. If "Life with Grandfather" seems sometimes exaggerated, why so it was.—Mary J. Mayer, New York City Dept. for the Aging

Trevino, Elizabeth Borton de. The Hearthstone of My Heart.

Doubleday. 1977. intro. by Margaret Cousins. LC 76-18348. ISBN 0-385-03550-0. $7.95. AUTOBIOG

This third volume of memoirs by the author of My Heart Lies South (LJ 9/15/53) and Where the Heart Is (LJ 10/15/62) casts a nostalgic and somewhat sentimental look at Trevino's life up to the time of her marriage. She grew up in akersfield, then a wild and woolly own, where her lawyer father had set p his practice. Summers were spent in Monterey, a welcome relief from Bakersfield in those pre-air-conditioning ays. After graduation from Stanford revino studied violin at the Boston onservatory of Music. Her reviews of oncerts led to employment on the Boston Herald, where she interviewed film ars and other greats and near-greats. Her career as a novelist began when he was asked to continue the Polyanna series; from there she went on o her own books for juveniles. Of special interest for some readers for its perspective on early Bakersfield.—rances Seamster, Kern County Lib., akersfield, Calif.

Wilkinson, Burke. The Zeal of the Convert: the life of Erskine Childers.

Luce, dist. by McKay. 1976. 256p. photogs. bibliog. index. LC 76-3922. ISBN 0-88331-086-4. $9.95. HIST/BIOG

A career member of Britain's Civil Service, Childers was a Secretary to the House of Commons. He served in the British Army during the Boer War and in the Royal Navy's air arm during World War I. But between those two wars he, his wife, and their yacht ran guns for the Irish Volunteers. In 1919 Childers moved to Ireland, joined Sinn Fein, and eventually became a member of the Irish delegation at the conference which produced the Anglo–Irish treaty of 1921. In the civil war which ensued Childers took the side of the die-hard Republicans. As one of the leaders of that group he was executed in 1922 by the Free State government; but in his case, personal antagonisms seem to have played a part in the government's resort to capital punishment. Wilkinson has marshaled all the facts of Childers' life, but his offer of "the zeal of the convert" as an explanation of its contradictions seems inadequate. As the only full-length biography to date, however, it should be purchased for Irish history collections.—John Moran, SUNY at Fredonia Lib.

BUSINESS & ECONOMICS

Cochran, Thomas C. 200 Years of American Business.

Basic Bks. Feb. 1977. 274p. bibliog. ISBN 0-465-08814-7. $13.95. HIST/BUS

In this brief "bicentennial" history of American business, Cochran sketches the major forces and decisions which have shaped the course of business development, forces which he perceives as human relations and organizational innovation. He differentiates business history from economic history, with the former chiefly involving policy decisions, the organizational structure of the enterprise, and the methods of selling; and the latter production and transportation. For each of the main periods of American business Cochran depicts the major developments in management, marketing, and finance, as well as in social customs, values, and types of government. His comparisons of American business practices with those in Britain, France, Germany, and Japan add a valuable dimension. Admittedly neither definitive nor detailed, Cochran's account, nevertheless, is suggestive and stimulating. It should be welcomed by all students of the entire American experience, not only by specialists in business history. While the writing is not very graceful, it is generally straightforward, but some passages suffer from compression.—Harry Frumerman, Dept. of Economics, Hunter Coll., CUNY

Holmes, Graeme M. Britain and America: a comparative economic history, 1850-1939.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1976. 224p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-06-492941-8. $12.50. HIST/ECON

Holmes provides an overview of the different performances and changing nature of the economies of Britain and the U.S. in areas such as banking, overseas trade, agriculture, labor unions, finance, and entrepreneurship. The emphasis is not so much on a recitation of facts as on "topics for discussion." The aim may be noble but the execution is execrable. This harsh judgment is based on three major problems with the book. First, the chapters read like disorganized lecture notes. Major topics such as agriculture, finance, and industry are split among chapters covering overlapping chronological periods. Second, the author is niggardly in citing sources and other evidence. Last, a number of the statistics mentioned are either in error or the result of typographical errors. Not recommended.—Ted Samore, Sch. of Library Science, Univ. of Wisconsin, Milwaukee

Leontief, Wassily & Herbert Stein. The Economic System in an Age of Discontinuity: long-range planning or market reliance?

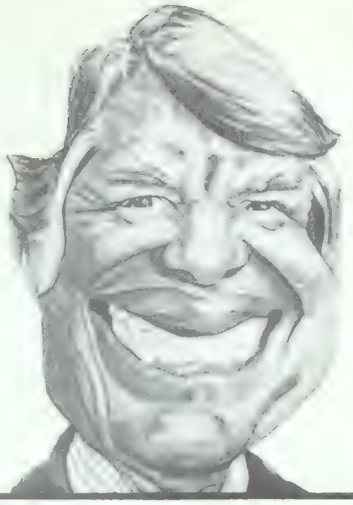
New York Univ. Pr. 1976. 148p. LC 76-15856. ISBN 0-8147-4970-4. $7.95. ECON

Some books are inflated pamphlets; this one is a prime example. In order to provide a respectable number of pages, the publisher has included a reprint of a symposium from Challenge magazine, the full text of the Balanced Growth and Economic Planning Act of 1975 (Humphrey-Javits bill), as well as generous margins. The core of the volume consists of two lectures by Leontief and Stein. In the first, Leontief claims that planning is essential for a healthy economy. The real trouble, he says, is "that government not only does not know what road it wants to follow but does not even have a map." He calls for the development of feasible scenarios for a range of possible future directions of the economy. Stein, on the other hand, finds little evidence to support such a view, and argues that the consequences of planning would be more inflation, more economic instability, and more government control over

We are seeking qualified individuals to review works of general economic theory (including fiscal and monetary policy), as well as reference books in Business and Economics. Please write to Philip Mattera, The Book Review.



A penetrating look at the life and political career of JIMMY CARTER.

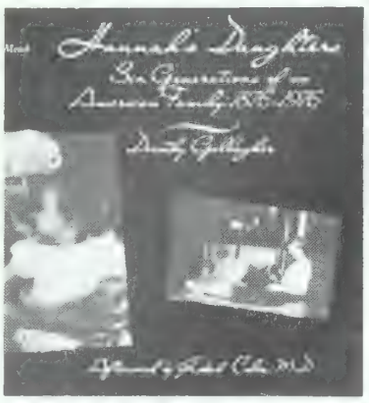
With emphasis on his record in office, his presidential campaign, and a look toward his new administration.

"The Wheeler book is the best, most objective report on Carter."
Peggy Constantine, Chicago Sun-Times

JIMMY WHO? by Leslie Wheeler
Over 50 photographs, $2.95 paper

BARRON'S
Woodbury, New York 11797

THE CROWELL CORNER



HANNAH'S DAUGHTERS
Six Generations of an American Family:* 1816-1976
Dorothy Gallagher
Afterword by Robert Coles, M.D.
"A uniquely emotive book.... From Hannah down to her great-great granddaughter, a thread is seen running through the generations of the distaff side of the Lambertson family: trying to make do with meager sustenance but more or less accepting things as they are.... A revealing human-interest look at ordinary yet certainly not nondescript people." –ALA Booklist
Photographs
ISBN: 0-690-01103-2 $10.95
LC: 75-38557

T. Y. Crowell
666 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10019

our personal lives. Both men are persuasive, but I suspect that the "right" answer falls between the two sides. Recommended for large libraries.—Ted Samore, Sch. of Library Science, Univ. of Wisconsin, Milwaukee

Schwarz, Ted. The Successful Promoter: 100 surefire ideas for selling yourself, your product, your organization.

Regnery. 1976. 223p. index. LC 76-6285. ISBN 0-8092-8090-6. $9.95. BUS

Despite the snake-oily subtitle, this primer on advertising techniques is competently done and quite useful. Basically, it is a book for the small business owner and for the person who is interested in publicizing some event or activity. The author contends that many businesses and other ventures fail because not enough thought goes into planning effective publicity campaigns. Most of the familiar topics turn up—preparing advertising copy, arranging window displays, writing newsletters, etc.—but the book is especially good for its suggestions on how to go about getting free publicity and for its insight into the operations of various communications media. There is a separate chapter on promoting nonprofit and charitable organizations.—A. J. Anderson, Sch. of Library Science, Simmons Coll., Boston

Tweeten, Luther & George L. Brinkman. Micropolitan Development: theory and practice of greater-rural economic development.

Iowa State Univ. Pr. 1976. 456p. illus. index. LC 76-163. ISBN 0-8138-1850-8. $20. ECON

One of the most significant demographic trends of recent years has been the accelerated urbanization of society. Yet, while much attention has been focused on the conditions of people in urban areas, the serious difficulties besetting those remaining in rural locations have been the subject of only fragmentary investigation. Tweeten and Brinkman provide a comprehensive examination of the persistent problems of depopulation, underemployment, and institutional inadequacy in micropolitan (as opposed to metropolitan) regions. This holistic analysis of development in sparsely populated communities provides a useful survey of the subject.—Steven Wecker, Lehman Coll. Lib., CUNY

HOW THE EXPERTS BEAT THE MARKET
The strategy and tactics for greatly increasing the odds in your favor
by Thomas C. Noddings
Written for the serious and patient investor who is willing to devote time and energy towards achieving above-average, long-term investment profits through planned and systematic investment in convertible securities. Once the author's techniques are mastered—and they are not really too difficult—the average investor can expect to have a very substantial advantage over the rest of the investment community. $12.95
Dow Jones-Irwin
1818 Ridge Road, Homewood, Ill. 60430

EDUCATION

Gamberg, Ruth. Red and Expert: education in the People's Republic of China.

Schocken. Feb. 1977. 280p. fwd. by William Hinton. illus. LC 75-34876. $13.50; pap. $6.95. REGIONAL STUDY/ED

In a society undergoing revolutionary transformation, education extends far beyond the classroom. New values, skills, and attitudes are taught almost everywhere. By pointing this out, Gamberg, who teaches in the education department of Dalhousie University in Halifax, Nova Scotia, has provided a useful introduction to Chinese education as the Chinese government would like us to see it. That she has done no more is not surprising. Someday, perhaps, publishers will stop issuing books by instant experts whose knowledge of China appears to derive from quick guided tours and is supplemented only by enthusiasm, unadulterated by sober judgment. From the gossamer threads of their faith, authors like Gamberg build ladders to help us scale the walls of the New Jerusalem and get a glimpse inside. However, the rungs will not support those of us without faith. Thoughtful Chinese would be the first to admit that their educational system is more complex and less perfect than Gamberg would have us believe. Accomplishments are many, but real issues persist and form the stuff of policy debates in Peking of which Gamberg has nothing to say.—Steven I. Levine, East Asian Inst., Columbia Univ.

HISTORY

Adams, William Y. Nubia: corridor to Africa.

Princeton Univ. Pr. Mar. 1977. 772p. illus. bibliog. index. $35. HIST

This book grew out of Adams' seven-year involvement as director of UNESCO's Nubian archaeological salvage operations. It is Adams' view that until now Nubian history has lacked a coherent focus around which to arrange its facts. He therefore aims to present Nubian history as the "continuous narrative of the cultural development of a single people." Adams covers Nubia's history from the prehistoric period through the 20th Century, stressing the ancient and medieval periods and the supporting archaeological evidence. Whether or not one concurs with the theory of history advanced by this anthropologist-turned-historian, one must still admire his detailed, enormously useful record of a little-known region. Ostensibly written with the general reader in mind, Adams' book is suitable as an introductory work for university students or scholars.—Paul H. Thomas, California Inst. of Technology Lib., Pasadena

We are looking for qualified persons to review books in all areas of military history, both U.S. and foreign. Please contact Philip Mattera, The Book Review.

Aptheker, Herbert. Early Years of th Republic: from the end of the Revolutio to the first administration of Washingto (1783-1793).

Internat. Pubs. (History of the Americ People). 1976. 167p. bibliog. index. LC 7 40213. ISBN 0-7178-0480-1. $7.50; pap. ISBN 7178-0471-2. $2.75. HIS

Like its predecessors, this third volum of Aptheker's history of the America people is worth owning. The wor serves a double purpose, for in additio to his own conclusions about th achievements and failures of the Art cles of Confederation, the author pr vides a concise and lucid guide to th tangled historiography of the perio The insistence upon the seriousness threats to the new nation from interna forces, as well as from abroad, is vali and helps to explain both the natur and the appeal of the Constitution to di verse elements within society. The dis cussion of the treatment of blacks, In dian peoples, and women during thi period is especially interesting.—Rob ert L. Burr, Coll. of William & Mar Lib., Williamsburg, Va.

Blocker, Jack S., Jr. Retreat from Re form: the prohibition movement in th United States, 1890-1913.

Greenwood. (Contribs. in American History No. 51). 1976. 261p. bibliog. index. LC 76-5325 ISBN 0-8371-8899-7. $14.95. HIS

In this carefully researched study Blocker focuses upon the intricacies o political prohibition, the Prohibitio Party, and its loss of power to the non partisan Anti-Saloon League. H traces this process from the Prohibitio Party's unsuccessful efforts to establish a mass political movement, through th Anti-Saloon League's more successfu lobbying method, and to the 1913 shif toward a national prohibition amend ment, ultimately achieved in 1919 Firmly placed within the best recen Progressive historiography, Blocker' work, due to its political emphasis, i clearly not the still-needed sociocultur al synthesis of Prohibition. The work is scholarly and supported by quan tification that is obviously directed only to the expert. The author's textual ex planations, however, compensate fo this difficulty, and the excellent bibliography and index make the book a valuable source.—Carol M. Petillo, Dept. of History, Rutgers Univ., New Brunswick, N.J.

Brownell, Blaine A. & David R. Goldfield, eds. The City in Southern History: the growth of urban civilization in th South.

Kennikat. (Interdisciplinary Urban Series) 1976. 228p. index. LC 76-41235. ISBN 0-8046 9078-2. $13.50; pap. $6.95. HIST

This compilation of essays is an excellent addition to a growing and important field of historical investigation. Each of the historians writing here comments upon one historic segment of Southern urban development, beginning with the colonial period and extending to the present day. They are eclectic in their uses of methodological techniques derived from other disciplines, especially urban geography. Yet the authors' efforts are not limited

Private spaces versus public policy making

Boulding, Elise. The Underside of History: a view of women through time.

Westview Pr. 1977. 850p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-30558. ISBN 0-89158-009-3. $24.75. SOC SCI/HIST Boulding's book is the first comprehensive study of human history as shaped and experienced by women. We are fortunate that she is a mature scholar who points out her own limitations: indeed, for one person to cover all of the world through all of time is a monumental task. The sections on prehistory avoid the feminist tendency to romanticize a golden matriarchal past; Boulding deals sensibly (if speculatively) with the available facts. The book is controlled by an attempt to understand the history of social stratification, and therefore deals particularly with women's contrasting roles: with their restriction to private spaces versus their participation in public policy making, in economic life, and in religious movements. The great names of women's history, we learn, were not simply isolated freaks: there was a school of Sappho, and other man-and-wife scientific teams existed besides the Curies. Boulding is especially good on women's organizations—religious sisterhoods, the YWCA, and even the WCTU no longer seem insignificant in her hands. As is inevitable with a macrohistory, specialists will object to some interpretations and omissions, but for the moment, for the study of all history, the book is essential.—Sally Mitchell, Bloomington, Ind.

merely to physical descriptions of urban growth, for they continually probe into those economic, social, and political developments which have influenced the changing character of Southern urban life. It is further to their credit that they have neglected neither the diversity of Southern cities nor the comparative relationship of Southern urban development to other sectors of the U.S.—Samuel Shannon, Dept. of History & Geography, Tennessee State Univ., Nashville

Costello, John & Terry Hughes. Jutland 1916.

Holt. Feb. 1977. 240p. photogs. bibliog. index. LC 76-15599. ISBN 0-03-018466-5. $12.95. HIST

Jutland was the last major battle between large, sea-bound naval forces without the aid of bombing aircraft, and hence it will always be a fit subject for analysis and argument. This new volume begins with the German drive for sea power prior to 1900 and follows the development of the Kaiser's navy through the first two years of World War I. The authors also trace the effects in Britain of First Sea Lord John Fisher's modernization of the Royal Navy and the launching of the first dreadnoughts. About half the volume is concerned with naval developments and engagements prior to Jutland, but the great battle itself is narrated clearly, along with an analysis of the British tactical plans and the host of miscalculations and errors on both sides. Interspersed throughout are observations by participants, battle diagrams, and nearly 200 photographs. Much has been written about this battle, but this book will be helpful in libraries with small collections.—John Buechler, Univ. of Vermont Lib., Burlington

Dank, Milton. The Glider Gang: an eyewitness history of World War II glider combat.

Lippincott. Mar. 1977. 272p. photogs. maps. index. ISBN 0-397-01161-X. $10.95. AERONAUTICS/HIST

An affectionate history of the men who flew the lumbering, powerless Horsas and Wacos into combat, crawled out of the broken carriers, and fought their way back only to fly again. Their battles were few but big—Normandy, Bastogne, the Rhine. Unfortunately, chaotic organization and high casualties dogged these operations throughout the war. Dank writes carefully and well, dovetailing hundreds of personal accounts with some precise historical research. The Glider Gang is a paean to the daring of the glider pilots and an indictment of the generals who persisted in experimenting with these ill-conceived airborne assaults.—R. T. Dillon, Dept. of English, Univ. of Colorado, Denver

Davis, Harold E. The Fledgling Province: social and cultural life in colonial Georgia, 1733-1776.

pub. for the Inst. of Early American History & Culture by Univ. of North Carolina Pr. 1976. 306p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-2570. ISBN 0-8078-1267-6. $16.95. HIST

Davis has done a fine job of creating a narrative from diverse primary sources, but his generalizations frequently do not follow from the particulars he has presented. For example, at the conclusion of Chapter 4, he quotes export statistics from the Georgia Gazette of 1769 to show how agriculture has flourished since the legalization of slavery in the 1750's; yet no other statistics are quoted for comparative purposes. Thus it is impossible to determine whether or not the generalization is true. This expensive volume is for large collections only.—Jerry V. Caswell, Univ. of Wisconsin Libs., Madison

Dobyns, Henry F. & Paul L. Doughty. Peru: a cultural history.

Oxford Univ. Pr. (Latin American Histories). 1976. 336p. maps. index. LC 76-9224. ISBN 0-19-502089-8. $12.50. HIST

This is another worthy addition to a useful series. It is competently written and chronologically arranged, with a useful collection of maps and tables. The text serves as an excellent introduction to Peruvian history, and the authors have provided a 21-page selective guide to the literature on Peru, which will take the advanced reader into an extensive array of English and Spanish sources. Both authors are an-

Scandal in Jefferson's family!
And murder was only the beginning...

"A brilliant and exciting work that is at once a mine of information and a dramatic record of a family tragedy —that of Lilburne and Isham Lewis, nephews of Thomas Jefferson....Merrill allows his drama to emerge from a double portrait of the scenes in Virginia and Kentucky and one family's strange fortune. A fascinating narrative culminating in natural cataclysm and human tragedy."—Publishers Weekly

"Historically and psychologically fascinating."
—Robert Penn Warren

JEFFERSON'S NEPHEWS / A Frontier Tragedy
By BOYNTON MERRILL, JR.

ISBN: 0-691-04640-9 • $16.50
PRINCETON UNIVERSITY PRESS, Princeton, New Jersey 08540

thropologists, and their interest in Indian cultures is evident in the close attention paid to the Incas and other Indian groups. Recommended for most undergraduate and public libraries.—Carol B. Fitzgerald, Cuny Grad. Sch. Lib.

Febvre, Lucien & Henri-Jean Martin. The Coming of the Book: the impact of printing 1450-1800.

Humanities. (Foundations of History Library). 1976. 378p. ed. by Geoffrey Nowell-Smith & David Wootton. tr. by David Gerard. index. $27. PUBLISHING/HIST

First published in 1958 as L'Apparition du Livre, this work had a strong impact on the historiography of books and printing. The authors made a pioneering effort to place the book in economic and intellectual context; subsequent years have brought important work by historians like Natalie Z. Davis, Elizabeth L. Eisenstein, and Rudolph Hirsch. Gerard's translation is smooth and readable. More care should have been taken with technical terms: printers' marks are "devices" and notches on type are "nicks." And for the price should not the buyer expect the plates and preface by Paul Chalus found in the first edition, and the improved bibliography included in the second edition? In spite of the exclusions this is still an important contribution to collections on the history of the book.—Paul S. Koda, Univ. of North Carolina Lib., Chapel Hill

"Recommended to all libraries."—CHOICE

The History of Anti-Semitism

Volume 1: From the Time of Christ to the Court Jews

Volume 2: From Mohammed to the Marranos

Volume 3: From Voltaire to Wagner

by LÉON POLIAKOV

"A solid study. It is written in a very readable way and contains detailed notes and an index. . . . It deals with a topic far too important to be ignored."—Choice

Volume 1—$10.00;
Volumes 2 & 3—$15.00

THE VANGUARD PRESS, Inc.
424 Madison Ave., New York 10017

Howard, Philip. London's River.

St. Martin's. Feb. 1977. 258p. illus. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-312-49595-1. $15. HIST

In length and volume the river Thames is small compared to giants like the Amazon and Nile, and yet it is generally accepted as one of the great rivers of the world. Howard's book deals with the 42 miles of the Thames flowing through the greater London area. It traces historically the river and the people along its banks, offering anecdotes of great houses like Hampton Court and Strawberry Hill, as well as descriptions of the docks and industry of the East End of the city of London. The book is well-written, and it includes an interesting selection of illustrations and a good chart of the Thames, indicating places of interest along its route. While it lacks the detail and documentation that would make it valuable to the scholarly community, it is a pleasant, if undramatic, addition to the already large literature about this popular river. Recommended for the general reader.—Sheila R. Herstein, C.C.N.Y. Lib.

Hudson, Charles. The Southeastern Indians.

Univ. of Tennessee Pr. 1977. 573p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-30729. ISBN 0-87049-187-3. $23.50. SOC SCI/HIST

As few scholarly works have been written on southeastern Indians, this book fills an important need in the literature of the field. Anthropologist Hudson traces the main outlines of their prehistory, belief system, social organization, subsistence, ceremony, art, and recreation, and briefly discusses the history of their lives as a conquered people. This volume is well researched, thorough, and carefully documented, yet it is not meant only for the scholar. Lucidly written with many excellent and pertinent illustrations, diagrams, and maps, it would make an excellent addition to high school, public, and university libraries, in spite of the price.—Mary Ann Miya, Loyola Univ. of Chicago Lib.

Jackson, Robert. Dunkirk: the British Evacuation, 1940.

St. Martin's. Feb. 1977. 206p. maps. bibliog. index. LC 76-11705. ISBN 0-312-22190-8. $8.95. HIST

Relying extensively on lengthy quotations from the personal accounts of survivors of the debacle of the British Expeditionary Force in France, Jackson presents a detailed account of the British retreat and ultimate evacuation from the beaches of Dunkirk. The drama and heroism of those dark and desperate days is movingly described. Unfortunately, most readers will be thoroughly confused by the details of small unit engagements, since the necessary detailed maps required to grasp such actions are absent. The account also suffers from its excessive emphasis on what the British were doing and thinking, while ignoring what was happening on the other side of the hill. Yet, World War II buffs will probably enjoy this work.—Warren E. Gade, Dept. of History, California State Univ., Fresno

Keith, Robert G. Conquest and Agrarian Change: the emergence of the hacienda system on the Peruvian coast.

Harvard Univ. Pr. (Historical Studies). 1976. 176p. bibliog. index. LC 76-7354. ISBN 0-674-16293-5. $17.50. SOC SCI/HIST

This monograph—based upon extensive use of primary materials, documents, and manuscripts—examines in detail the changing socioeconomic conditions leading to the emergence of landed oligarchy in colonial Peru. In contrast with certain other areas of the Americas, there the Spanish conquerors were able to utilize systems of labor to redistribute and collect the existing surplus because of the dependable indigenous labor supply. With native depopulation through devastating epidemics and flight, the growing European immigration, and increasing market demands, systems of land appeared. Keith follows this process, and then skillfully studies the differing impact of sugar, wheat, cattle, and wine upon subsequent land organization and utilization. His careful, well-organized and factual work is adequately supplemented by maps and an extended bibliography. Of particular value for the Latin Americanist.—Joseph A. Ellis, Dept. of History, C.C.N.Y.

Leigh, Michael. Mobilizing Consent public opinion and American foreign policy, 1937-1947.

Greenwood. 1976. 187p. bibliog. index. LC 75-44656. ISBN 0-8371-8772-9. $14.50. POL. SCI/HIS

Leigh studies four major turns of policy in the World War II period, focusing on the influence of public opinion, the process of decision making, the transmission of public opinion to the policy makers, and the diffusion of foreign policy information to the public. He concludes that "the more highly developed the government's information function the weaker the public opinion constraint appears to be," thus challenging the notions that public opinion serves as a constraint upon leaders or that leaders manipulate public opinion in order to implement their policy. While the author relies on a few new sources the book does not offer novel interpretations and will be of interest only for the specialized student.—Albert Erlebacher, Dept. of History, DePaul Univ., Chicago

Lenton, H. T. German Warships of the Second World War.

Arco. 1977. 397p. illus. bibliog. LC 76-13609 ISBN 0-668-04037-8. $19.95. REF/HIS

After a brief survey of the German shipbuilding program between the wars Lenton begins a detailed and thorough examination of the German Navy of World War II—from its battleships to its ferries and auxiliary vessels. For each class of ship he gives details of size, machinery, armament, armor, names of ships within the class, dates and places of launching, and the ultimate fate of each ship. Most of the classes of ship are illustrated by either clear photographs or simple line plans. A short narrative description accompanies each class, while a longer analysis of the construction and devel opment of German submarines outlines the changes that occurred in design from 1934 to 1945. Technically competent and well-illustrated, this book is an excellent reference volume and is far superior to many recent works on the weaponry of the war.—John Buechler, Univ. of Vermont Lib., Burlington

Lesberg, Sandy. Assassination in Our Time.

Bobbs. 1976. 255p. photogs. index. LC 76-10528. ISBN 0-672-52262-4. $14.95. POL SCI/HIST

Lesberg has assembled an illustrated history of 20th-Century political assassinations that should satisfy even the most ardent students of the topic. Sweeping from the 1914 murder of the Archduke Franz Ferdinand to the 1975 killing of Saudi Arabia's King Faisal, the book profiles the deaths of 20 different global figures. Treating each murder in quick succession, Lesberg describes the importance of each victim, the aims of his murderers, and the operation of the assassination. The lessons she draws are few, but the implications of her work are many. Seen collectively, assassination appears as a mainstay feature of 20th-Century political life. Political murder is no aberration. It is rather—like terrorism—an unpredictable but integral feature of political systems which assume that violence works.—Charles DeBenedetti, Dept. of History, Univ. of Toledo, Ohio

Lucas, Marion Brunson. Sherman and the Burning of Columbia.

Texas A&M Univ. Pr. 1976. 188p. fwd. by Bell I. Wiley, illus. maps. bibliog. index. LC 76-17979. ISBN 0-89096-018-6. $10.95. HIST

Columbia, South Carolina remained one of the Confederacy's most valuable cities when the Yankee invader finally pushed into the heart of the Deep South in 1865. The burning of the city in February of that year has long been the center of controversy among historians. Lucas concludes that only one-third of the city actually burned, and that the fire was an accident of war brought about by cotton (which covered the town "like snow"), bad winds, and whiskey. This well-written, thoroughly researched, convincing monograph reflects commendable scholarship and considerable story-telling ability.—Herman Hattaway, Dept. of History, Univ. of Missouri, Kansas City

Marks, Sally. The Illusion of Peace: international relations in Europe 1918–1933.

St. Martin's. (The Making of the 20th Century). 1976. 184p. bibliog. index. $15.95; pap. $4.95. INT AFFAIRS/HIST

The Illusion of Peace summarizes diplomacy in an era of international affairs dominated by Germany's refusal to accept an inferior position incongruent with her history and resources. Here is diplomatic history in the traditional mode, with accounts of treaties, conferences, and statesmen. Economic currents and the social revolution ignited by World War I are underemphasized; and consideration of the psychology of the "war guilt" controversy is missing. Bibliographically, this book is sound and current. Although there is little new here, those seeking a concise tour of the diplomatic labyrinth between Versailles and Hitler's advent may find this title useful.—David J. Martz Jr., Brown Univ. Lib., Providence

Miller, Wilbur R. Cops and Bobbies: police authority in New York and London, 1830-1870.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. Feb. 1977. 222p. index. ISBN 0-226-52595-3. $12.95. LAW ENFORCEMENT/HIST

This is a solid, useful historical analysis of the development of policing in 19th-Century London and New York, cities representative of two societies which "shared a cultural heritage" but which "diverged in . . . ideologies, political institutions, and class relationships." Miller shows that although police were supported by the property-conscious middle and upper classes, their activities became broadly sanctioned by an increasingly active (though not always powerful) and socially contented working class. English police overcame hostility by stressing neutrality and impartiality, while their American urban brethren became subject to political control. ("Partisanship was normal in American democracy.") While much of the story is familiar to scholars in the field, the author supplies numerous details to document the undeniable truth that policing, as much as any other institution, "reflected the broad social trends of two societies." A valuable contribution to our understanding of the historical growth of social order in modern democratic, industrial society.—Isidore Silver, Dept. of History, John Jay Coll. of Criminal Justice, CUNY

Petit, Paul. Pax Romana.

Univ. of California Pr. 1976. 357p. tr. by James Willis. LC 74-182280. $19.50. HIST

This is the long-needed translation of a 1967 work which covers the Roman Empire from 31 B.C. to A.D. 193. Following recent scholarly trends, the author concentrates on economic, social, and religious aspects. The bibliographic section (thoroughly updated for this edition) is formidable, citing primary sources, 781 items in general and specialized bibliography, plus a supplementary listing of works which have appeared since the French edition. Numerous further titles are added in the notes. Works by Soviet and East European scholars are included and analyzed, thus heightening Western comprehension of the period. The translation is excellent.—Francis D. Lazenby, Dept. of Modern & Classical Languages, Univ. of Notre Dame

Skard, Sigmund. The U.S. in Norwegian History.

Greenwood. (Contribs. in American Studies, No. 26). Feb. 1977. 224p. bibliog. LC 76-5263. ISBN 0-8371-08909-8. $12.95. HIST

The author, one of Norway's outstanding scholars, is deeply interested in the relationships between the U.S. and European countries, which he considered in his American Studies in Europe (Univ. of Pennsylvania Pr., 1958). Here he focuses on Norwegian-American relations, surveying cultural, histor-

LIPPINCOTT

"Vividly recaptures the modern frontier spirit"*

AFTER THE GOLD RUSH

Archie Satterfield

"Retracing the route of the Klondike gold rush . . . Satterfield recounts some favorite yarns of the North, visits some oldtime 'loners' and recent settlers, recalls the old steamboats . . . a mixture of nostalgia and adventure." —*Publishers Weekly. "No one who loves the fading northern frontier . . . can afford to miss this book."—Loren Eiseley.

LC 76-13642
ISBN 0-397-01142-3 $8.95

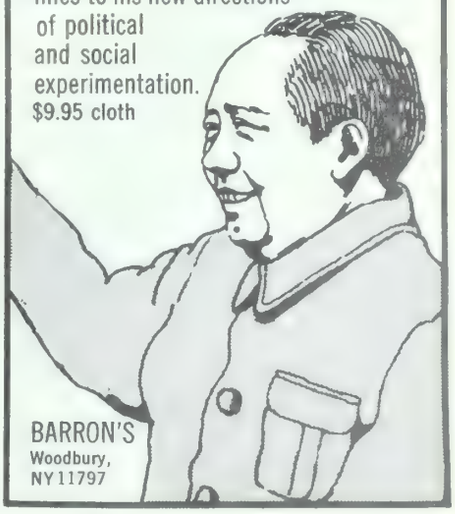
J. B. Lippincott Company
East Washington Square
Philadelphia, Pa. 19105

MAO

and the Perpetual Revolution

by Franz Michael
Dir., Inst. for Sino-Soviet Studies, George Washington Univ.

The first book to de-mythologize MAO TSE-TUNG and place him in world history.
A unique revolutionary leader is shown from his early struggles to move away from Marxist-Leninist lines to his new directions of political and social experimentation.
$9.95 cloth



BARRON'S
Woodbury, NY 11797

ical, and other contacts—such as the impact of emigration and immigration—from the 18th Century to the present. The book is most effective in the latter portions; the first section appears to have suffered in the translation and condensation of the simultaneously published Norwegian version. When the chronology moves past the American Civil War and, particularly, into the 20th Century, the work becomes a fascinating study of cultural intermingling. It describes the impact of American business philosophy, the admiration for American writers of the Twenties such as Eugene O'Neill, and the interest in political developments. Although he is himself an admirer of much that is American, Skard concludes by raising some important questions about the values of the middle class in this country, the future of our democracy, and our leadership role in relation to Norway as well as to the developing nations.—Erwin K. Welsch, Univ. of Wisconsin Memorial Lib., Madison

Smith, Bradley F. Reaching Judgment at Nuremberg.

Basic Bks. 1977. 328p. bibliog. index. LC 76-26715. ISBN 0-465-06839-1. $15. LAW/HIST Historian Smith's newest book is essentially an assessment of the judgments made at the Nuremberg tribunal. The author covers the post-Axis-surrender developments that led to the need for a trial of war criminals, the choice of site, the prosecution-team appointments, and the selection of defendants. He reveals the generally hard-line approach of the Soviets, the surprisingly lenient attitude of the French, and the difficulty experienced by the Americans in getting their allies to understand the "conspiracy" concept of prosecution. In three chapters on the individual defendants, each of the accused Germans is accorded his own section on his Nazi career and why it led to hanging, to a prison term, or to one of the few acquittals. Smith doesn't hesitate to point out the trials' inadequacies—he argues, for example, that Julius Streicher may have been out of place on the dock as a major war criminal. This very readable book is a good addition to academic and public library collections.—Craig H. Little, Orleans, Mass.

Tindall, George Brown. The Ethnic Southerners.

Louisiana State Univ. Pr. 1976. 251p. index. LC 76-40474. ISBN 0-8071-0258-X. $11.95.

SOC SCI/HIST

Tindall is a major writer, but this collection of 11 of his essays seems a brazen attempt to capitalize on his name and on recent interest in the South. None of the essays is original, and they are all ones for which scholars have easy access to the original versions that include the footnotes omitted here. Worse still, several of the essays seem dated or superficial. The title is meant to cover a variety of essay topics, most within a broad definition of economic history. The best are a study of the nearly forgotten pioneer sociologist (Howard Odum) and a vivid narrative of the 1920's Miami real estate boom. But, in general, the volume is superfluous.—James Levin, Dept. of Special Programs, C.C.N.Y.

Trevor-Roper, Hugh. Princes and Artists: patronage and ideology at four Habsburg courts, 1517-1633.

Harper. (Yaseen Lectures, 1). 1977. 176p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-34681. ISBN 0-06-014362-2. $20. HIST

In this study of artistic patronage in Habsburg courts between the Reformation and the Thirty Years' War, the emphasis is on the political and ideological context of art rather than on formal analysis. The connoisseurship of Charles V and the Escorial as embodiment of Philip II's world-view are relatively familiar subjects. Less familiar and equally interesting is the predatory patronage of Rudolf II, who, along with his intellectual milieu, has recently begun to attract scholarly attention. The work concludes with the patronage of the arts, and principally of Rubens, by the Habsburgs at Brussels. The subject is of great interest; and this excellent, lively presentation is solidly grounded in scholarship. The black-and-white illustrations are numerous, well chosen, and often unusual.—Neal R. Shipley, Dept. of History, Univ. of Massachusetts, Amherst

Walters, Ronald G. The Antislavery Appeal: American abolitionism after 1830.

Johns Hopkins. Feb. 1977. 224p. illus. index. ISBN 0-8018-1861-3. $11. HIST

Several years ago, historians claimed that there was nothing fresh left to say about the abolitionists; this perceptive, compelling book shows that their judgment was premature. Walters departs from the current vogue of discovering cleavages among American reformers, who supposedly dissipated their energies in violent internecine quarrels over means and ends. In his suggestive chapters on American attitudes toward sexuality, evangelical religion, motherhood and family, science and "pseudoscience," race, economic progress, and nationalism—all set in the fluid, turbulent America of the period from the 1830's to the 1860's—Walters argues that abolitionists, their differences over means notwithstanding, shared common values concerning the nature of American institutions and sought to secure America's future as a progressive, Christian, capitalistic, and egalitarian society. Walters has written an immensely important book which will define the debate on linkages between culture, community, values, and motivation for many years to come. Highly recommended for all college and graduate school libraries.—Randall M. Miller, Dept. of History, St. Joseph's Coll., Philadelphia

Wieczynski, Joseph L. The Russian Frontier: the impact of borderlands upon the course of early Russian history.

Univ. Pr. of Virginia. 1976. 108p. index. maps. LC 75-43753. ISBN 0-8139-0681-4. $9.50. HIST

In considering some of the implications of Frederick Jackson Turner's American frontier thesis for parallel developments in Russia, Wieczynski argues that the borderlands surrounding early Russian states provided a "safety valve" for peasants and merchants seeking refuge from centralized autocracy. In this brief essay he touches on those areas and periods of Russian history where frontier life was most active and points to unbridled individualism and the quest for goods in trade as the factors attracting population movements past the southern and eastern limits of czarist authority. In the process a Russian presence was established from the sourthern Steppe to the Pacific Ocean. One aspect of frontier life that might also have been mentioned is the military, commercial, and cultural interaction of Russian settlers with frontier nationalities and the progressive incorporation of non-Russian national groups into the Russian empire. Of interest to academic libraries.—John R. Broadus, Dept. of History, Univ. of Chicago

Woodman, Jim. Nazca: journey to the sun.

Pocket Bks: S. & S., dist. by Pocket Bks-Ace. Feb. 1977. 208p photogs. ISBN 0-671-80895-8. pap. $1.75. PER NAR/ARCHAEOLOGY

"Few symbols . . . that ancient man has left us . . . are as dramatic, as intriguing, as mysterious, as unforgettable as are those at Nazca." Intrigued by the ancient Peruvian designs traced on the land which can be appreciated only from the air, the International Explorers Society sponsored Project Nazca "as an adventure in experimental archaeology." Project Nazca, in an effort to supply alternatives to the explanations of "astro-archaeologists" such as von Däniken, organized a smoke-balloon ascent using materials and technology that could have been within the capabilities of the Nazca Indians 2000 years ago. Written by one of the organizers and balloonists, this book recounts the details of the flight with immediacy and enthusiasm. Because the evidence of prehistoric balloon flight is circumstantial the mystery of Nazca remains, but the Project story is compelling true adventure.—Joan W. Stevenson, Yonkers P.L., N.Y.

Travel, Exploration & Adventure

Louis, Victor & Jennifer Louis. The Complete Guide to the Soviet Union.

St. Martin's. Feb. 1977. 369p. illus. index. LC 76-16686. $17.95. TRAV

The authors have prepared a comprehensive reference source on traveling in the Soviet Union. The heart of the book is an alphabetical guide to virtually all Soviet cities which have been opened to foreign tourists. Every entry includes information on history, and places of interest, major hotels and restaurants. Maps and descriptions of side trips accompany many city entries. The book also includes general travel information, Russian and dialect vocabulary for tourists, lists of foreign embassies and consulates, and descriptions of major railway journeys in the U.S.S.R. While this is expensive for a travel guide, it gives such excellent and thorough coverage that it is highly recommended.—Gilda Turitz, San Francisco P.L.

Matthew, Christopher. A Different World: stories of great hotels.

Paddington Pr: Two Continents. 1976. 351p. photogs. by Ben Martin. LC 76-3802. ISBN 0-8467-0135-9. $19.95. PHOTOG/TRAV

A collection of sketches of 51 luxury hotels in Europe and America. In each there's a little history, some local color, and a statement of present policy, all accompanied with many gorgeous photos and plenty of name-dropping. Unfortunately Matthew's writing lacks the grace and sense of style that he admires in the hotels; his text is pedestrian and perfunctory.—R. T. Dillon, Dept. of English, Univ. of Colorado, Denver

Vuilleumier, Marion Rawson (text) & Pierre DuPont Vuilleumier (illus.) America's Religious Treasures.

Harper. (Spiritual Heritage Travel Guide). 1976. 286p. illus. index. LC 76-9342. ISBN 0-06-068940-4. $9.95; pap. ISBN 0-06-068941-2. $4.95. REL/TRAV

Here is a travel guide to some of America's historic places of religious significance: The simple early meeting houses, historic places of worship, and memorials and shrines commemorating important religious events or personages. No detectable bias was exercised toward any religion. The guide is organized into nine geographical sections. Sites were chosen according to their interest, accessibility, and proximity to traveler's services and lodgings; and an appendix lists places not described elsewhere in the book. Helpful maps and illustrations accompany capsule descriptions of each site. Recommended as a supplement to conventional U.S. travel guides.—Evelyn G. Callaway, formerly with Nebraska Lib. Commission, Fairbury

Worsley, F. A. Shackleton's Boat Journey.

Norton. Feb. 1977. 192p. narrative intro. by Sir Edmund Hillary. photogs. ISBN 0-393-08759-X. $8.95. PER NAR/EXPLORATION

The autobiographical account, written in the 1920's, and appearing now for the first time in the U.S., of the skipper of the Endurance, the ship used by Shackleton in his 1914–1916 expedition which tried, unsuccessfully, to cross the Antarctic continent. The Endurance was crushed by ice, and the ship's party of 28 drifted on an ice floe for five months, finally reaching an uninhabited island. From there Shackleton, Worsley, and four others sailed in a small boat to South Georgia, 800 miles away, to find rescue. Their ordeals didn't end when they reached South Georgia, but eventually all 28 men were rescued. Hillary provides background information in his introduction, and sets the stage for Worsley's narrative, which starts at the point where the expedition leaves the ice floe. Worsley is not a great writer, but he is sometimes eloquent in his tale of great suffering and endurance and of Shackleton's indomitable leadership. One of the great survival stories of all time, this should appeal to readers of polar exploration narratives.—Jonathan F. Husband, Boston State Coll. Lib.

Home Economics

Ross, Bob & Carol Ross. Modern and Classic Woodburning Stoves and the Grass Roots Energy Revival.

Overlook, dist. by Viking. 1977. 144p. illus. by Graham Blackburn. bibliog. index. LC 76-11431. ISBN 0-87951-049-8. $10.

Sherman, Steve. The Wood Stove and Fireplace Book.

Stackpole. 1976. 128p. illus. by Julia Older. index. LC 76-16790. ISBN 0-8117-2125-6. pap. $4.95.

Vivian, John. Wood Heat.

Rodale. 1976. 320p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-28539. ISBN 0-87857-131-0. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-87857-148-3. $4.95. TECH/HOME ECON

The current interest in wood heating, with its potential hazards, makes a wood-stove book a necessity for most libraries. These three books all discuss proper installation and operation, fire safety, BTU's of various woods, wood cutting and splitting; all have lists of manufacturers' and importers' addresses.

Sherman's oversize paperback is set in large, well-spaced type, is written in a chatty style, and contains many large illustrations which are not always useful. It is most likely to appeal to those who need quick information but don't enjoy reading. The Rosses' book, on the other hand, is set in smaller type, factually written, and except for some fine cuts of ornate old stoves from an 1895 catalog, instructively illustrated. It includes complete directions for fabricating Ken Kern's ingenious multiuse barrel stove; and tells of new developments, efficiency boosters, water-heating attachments, and houses especially designed for wood heat. The chapter on stove selection gives excellent comparisons of various models, as does Sherman's.

Vivian's entertainingly phrased book lacks these comparisons, but has more information, overall. There are precise instructions on building chimneys and fireplaces; on rehabilitating old stoves; and on wood-range or open-flame cooking. There is even a discussion of the "fringe benefits" of wood heat—such as wood ashes. This delightfully illustrated book would be my first choice; the Rosses', a close second.—Mary Lynn Dufur, Dolores P.L., Colo.

Cookery

Bumgarner, Marlene Anne. The Book of Whole Grains.

St. Martin's. 1976. 322p. illus. by Maryanna Kingman. index. LC 76-10549. $8.95; pap. $4.95. COOKERY

Most of mankind lives on grains: rice, barley, wheat, oats, rye, millet, and some that are less well known. The book has recipes ranging from blintzes and breads to tuo zaafi (a North African millet porridge), including a fascinating variety of cornmeal dishes from colonial, native, and Spanish American sources. Chapters on the home grinding of flour and on bread baking supply advice on the pitfalls encountered by novices. There is also information on how to plant, harvest, and store grains and how to buy edible whole grains cheaply from feed companies, making the book essential for serious, self-sufficient vegetarians as well as an interesting collection of recipes for almost any cook.—Sally Mitchell, Milwaukee, Wis.

Dyer, Ceil. The Eat To Lose Cookbook.

Mason/Charter. 1976. 224p. ISBN 0-88405-361-X. $7.95. HEALTH/COOKERY

This glib little book presents Dyer's personal philosophy of eating less but enjoying it more, and there are some good Italian, French, "California," and Oriental recipes (most use quite a bit of wine, sherry, or other spirit). However, there are unscientific suggestions (such as the popular but mistaken notion that iodine-rich foods can step up one's metabolism and promote weight loss), no calorie counts for any recipe, and no clear suggestions for a daily or weekly diet plan. Dyer's rapturous descriptions of various cuisines and delicious meals are amusing, but this is hardly a substantial addition to a diet collection.—Frances S. Worthington, formerly with P.L. of Nashville & Davidson Co., Tenn.

Haller, James. The Blue Strawbery Cookbook: cooking (brilliantly) without recipes.

Harvard Common Pr., The Common, Harvard, Mass. 01451. 1976. index. LC 76-23990. ISBN 0-916782-06-9. $12.50; pap. ISBN 0-916782-05-0. $6.95. COOKERY

Haller is a free spirit in the kitchen who says that recipes are not necessary. In french provincial cuisine

French Provincial Cuisine
by Christian Délu $15.95 hardcover
CLASSICS IN CUISINE
Le Répertoire de la Cuisine
by Louis Saulnier
$6.95 std. edition
Introduction by George Lang &
Jacques Pépin.
$10.95 deluxe
"... any eater who wants to know his way around a French menu will find it a good investment."
Mimi Sheraton, N.Y. Times
Louis Saulnier
Le Répertoire de La Cuisine
BARRON'S
Woodbury, NY 11797

fact this is a book of recipes with many suggestions for variations. Measurements are sometimes precise, sometimes given in pinches, dashes, and handfuls. His ideas about what combines well with what are, well, odd. Curried chocolate brandy and mushroom sweet potato soup, for example (chocolate brandy is one of his favorite ingredients), or watermelon in orange juice and beer. Haller is an original and he is right in thinking that it would do most cooks good to loosen up a bit. But he has loosened up too much, in food combinations and in methods. I would like to try out the Blue Strawbery restaurant, where he is chef, but I can't recommend his book.—Ruth Diebold, Finkelstein Memorial Lib., Spring Valley, N.Y.

Hush, Joanne & Peter Wong. The Chinese Menu Cookbook: including an introductory course in Chinese cooking.

Holt. 1976. 274p. illus. index. LC 75-21469. ISBN 0-03-014931-2. $9.95.

Lee, Karen with Aileen Robbins Friedman. Chinese Cooking for the American Kitchen.

Atheneum. 1976. illus. by Sidonie Coryn. fwd. by Grace Chu. ISBN 0-689-10751-X. $12.95.

COOKERY

With quite dissimilar approaches, these books provide introductions to Chinese cooking with explicit directions, good ingredient explanations, helpful substitution suggestions, and a balanced selection of standard recipes.

Lee, a disciple of Mme. Grace Chu, straightforwardly examines various aspects of Chinese cooking before proceeding with 75 or so recipes. Her explanations are obsessively comprehensive (including flat-bottomed woks, sharpening cleavers and water-chestnut powder) and even clearer than those found in Gloria Bley Miller's classic, The Thousand Recipe Chinese Cookbook (LJ 12/1/66). To aid the small-town resident and/or novice, Lee has convinced a New York grocer to organize two mail-order Chinese ingredients kits (one "essential," the other "complete"). The book ends with 12 dinner party plans with work schedules beginning at least a week in advance. Because of its outstanding clarity and attention to detail this would be an excellent first purchase or good addition to any heavily used collection.

"Delicious Contemplation"
Wall Street Journal

Waverley Root &
Richard de Rochemont
EATING IN AMERICA
A History

$16.95

"A definitive history of American eating habits."
Publishers Weekly

William Morrow

The Chinese Menu Cookbook uses a programmed-learning approach. One learns by preparing a progression of 18 meals. Each meal uses a new technique or is more difficult so that, by the end, cutting, stir frying, steaming, etc. have all been mastered. Additional recipes and more ideas are appended. This would be good for a novice to buy and work through, but it doesn't really present information not already found in most existing collections. Not an essential purchase.—Frances S. Worthington, formerly with P.L. of Nashville & Davidson Co., Tenn.

Nelson, Kay Shaw. The Delectable Vegetable.

John Day. 1976. 256p. LC 76-3728. ISBN 0-381-98292-0. $8.95.

COOKERY

Nelson, a food columnist for the Washington Post, presents a variety of vegetable recipes from all over the world. There are a few old classics such as celery Victor and red flannel hash, but there are many exotic dishes such as old-fashioned turnip custard and dal (lentil puree). The recipes are well and clearly written. I'd vote for this as runner up to Alex Hawkes's A World of Vegetable Cookery (S.&S., 1968).—Johanna Ezell, Washington County Free Lib., Hagerstown, Md.

Reingold, Carmel Berman. Cuisinart™ Food Processor Cooking.

Delacorte. 1976. 250p. photogs. index. LC 76-41290. ISBN 0-440-01605-3. $9.95; pap. $4.95.

COOKERY

The title of this book implies a limitation but the recipes are adapted for a number of different food processors. The author includes a short chapter on the basic equipment, optional attachments, and functions of eight other food processors—Bosch Magic Mixer, Braun, Kitchen Aid, NuTone, Oster, Starmix, Sunbeam, and Vita Mix. (Inclusion of approximate prices would have been helpful.) There are under 200 recipes, but many are unusual—e.g., spicy lettuce bars. The instructions are clear but perhaps too concise—there are no baking directions for a French apple pie. The indexing is deficient since many recipes are indexed by title rather than main ingredient. Although Yvonne Young Tarr's The Great Food Processor Cookbook (LJ 11/15/76) is specifically for the Cuisinart, Kitchen Aid, and Starmix, it still is the best book in this burgeoning field.—Christine Bulson, SUNY at Oneonta Lib.

Literature

Barnett, George L. Charles Lamb.

Twayne. (English Authors). 1976. 171p. bibliog. index. LC 76-47526. ISBN 0-8057-6668-5. $7.95.

LIT

The Calvinistic Carlyle called Lamb a drunkard and a fool, but Thackeray once breathed "Saint Charles" while holding one of Lamb's letters to his forehead. Choosing to soft-pedal or even omit negative elements of Lamb's life, Barnett, a Lamb scholar, gives us a wealth of detail in this brief but otherwise excellent introduction to Lamb's life and works. He suggests reasons for Lamb's success as an essayist and reminds us of Lamb's epistolary gifts and extraordinary critical skills, his role in reviving interest in Elizabethan drama, and his influence on the Romantics—he "improved" Wordsworth, "refined and guided" Coleridge, and stimulated Hazlitt's development. Well-indexed, with a fully annotated bibliography, this study is recommended.—Douglas W. Cooper, Randolph-Macon Coll. Lib., Ashland, Va.

Bellas, Ralph A. Christina Rossetti.

Twayne. (English Authors). Feb. 1977. 168p. bibliog. index. LC 76-29711. ISBN 0-8057-6671-5. $7.95.

LIT

Bellas has done a workmanlike, if somewhat unenthusiastic, job of sketching Rossetti's life and of summarizing the course of her literary career. The book would have been better had more attention been paid to the life, where the explanation for the poet's depression is to be sought. It methodically reviews the whole body of Rossetti's poetry, quoting often enough to give a thorough sample. But there is too much attention to the surface; one finishes with the sense that Rossetti's failures have been glossed over, her idiosyncrasies left unexplained. Not recommended.—Stephen R. Rounds, Dept. of English, Kansai Gaidai, Hirakata, Japan

Carter, Everett. The American Idea: the literary response to American optimism.

Univ. of North Carolina Pr. Feb. 1977. 328p. bibliog. index. LC 76-13867. ISBN 0-8078-1279-X. $14.95.

LIT

The "idea" Carter traces throughout American literary history is the writer's preoccupation with optimism, the virtue of progress, and the essential goodness of man. Carter describes the source of the idea in the American Puritan heritage and the unique response to the Enlightenment. From these roots "styles of affirmation" emerged in the 19th Century. Although they were ardently defended by some (e.g., Emerson, Thoreau, the Brahmins), they were rejected by others on differing ground (e.g., Poe's aestheticism). While the idea survives in the contemporary milieu (e.g., in Bellow), it has for the most part been distorted by those writers who embody a sense of doom and despair. Carter documents ad nauseam a relatively traditional view of American literary themes. He supports his position thoroughly; whether the position requires such support in 1977 is another question.—Bert C. Bach, Dean of Arts & Sciences, Univ. of Tennessee, Chattanooga

Chandler, Raymond. The Notebooks of Raymond Chandler and English Summer: a gothic romance.

Ecco Pr., dist. by Viking. 1976. 113p. ed. by Frank MacShane. illus. by Edward Gorey. LC 76-3322. ISBN 0-912-94633-4. $10.

LIT

It is a little disconcerting to a Chandler fan to see a book like this published, since it contains sections of Chandler's notebooks that he specifically requested be destroyed. Although it is pleasant and amusing to see such items as a stunning little parody of The Sun Also Rises, most of this material is not Chandler's best. English Summer can do little but tarnish a well-deserved reputation for excellence. The only excuse for this type of miscellany can be to aid the cause of literary scholarship, but the bits and pieces included here are too sparse to show any real development in Chandler's skill as a writer. Literary researchers will be much better served by MacShane's The Life of Raymond Chandler (LJ 4/15/76).—Sheila Pepper, McMaster Univ. Lib., Hamilton, Ontario, Canada

Clemens, Samuel Langhorne. The Comic Mark Twain Reader: the most humorous selections from his stories, sketches, novels, travel books, and lectures.

Doubleday. Feb. 1977. ed., intro. & notes by Charles Neider. illus. ISBN 0-385-11334-X. $8.95. LIT

Although serious students of Mark Twain are quick to fault Neider's dozen volumes of selections from the works for their total disregard of professional editorial principles, their corruption of already corrupt texts, their neglect of annotations, and their stale introductions, all would have to confess that they make frequent use of some of those editions. His editions of The Autobiography of Mark Twain (Harper, 1959) and The Complete Essays of Mark Twain (Doubleday, 1963), to cite two examples, contain material nowhere else available in print. For The Comic Mark Twain Reader, however, there is no defense. It is guilty on all the counts usually brought against Neider, and every item in it is available in one of his earlier collections.—Robert Regan, Dept. of English, Univ. of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia

Donaldson, Scott. By Force of Will: the life and art of Ernest Hemingway.

Viking. Mar. 1977. 352p. ISBN 0-670-19824-2. $12.50. BIOG/LIT

Donaldson records Hemingway's opinions on a variety of subjects (fame, money, sports, politics, war, sex, religion, art, etc.) and discusses how they are presented in his works. He illuminates the complexities of Hemingway's personality, showing the admirable aspects as well as the unpleasant sides; probes Hemingway's subconscious motivations; and searches his upbringing for the key to his attitudes. The contrast between Hemingway's idealized self-image and his actualized self emerges vividly from this well-written, readable, sometimes humorous study, which shows evidence of serious scholarship. Donaldson makes use of a considerable amount of new material, and the separation between fact and legend is always clear. Useful for students of Hemingway's work.—Jacqueline M. Courbin, Dept. of English, Ottawa Univ., Canada

Ferlazzo, Paul J. Emily Dickinson.

Twayne. (U.S. Authors). 1976. c.175p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-8057-7180-8. $7.95. LIT

To encompass in a slim volume such as this one the life and work of Dickinson is a formidable task. Ferlazzo does as well as can be expected with his overview, although there are few exciting new insights here. After opening with a chapter comparing the "myth of Emily" with the known facts of her life, Ferlazzo presents five thematic chapters (e.g., on love, death, nature) in which analyses of poems (including many of her major ones) related to these subjects are provided. These discussions reflect both Ferlazzo's and other critics' opinions. This book will not be as interesting to Dickinson buffs as were John Cody's After Great Pain (LJ 11/15/71), Jean McClure Mudge's Emily Dickinson and the Image of Home (LJ 2/1/75), or Inder Nath Kher's The Landscape of Absence (LJ 1/15/75); but along with George F. Whicher's This Was a Poet (1938), it will serve as a good introduction for the layman and student.—Larry Earl Bone, Southwestern at Memphis Lib.

Hollowell, John. Fact & Fiction: the new journalism and the nonfiction novel.

Univ. of North Carolina Pr. Mar. 1977. 216p. bibliog. index. LC 76-20826. ISBN 0-8078-1281-1. $11.95. LIT

Hard on the heels of Mas'ud Zavarzadeh's The Mythopoeic Reality (LJ 12/15/76) comes this new study of the nonfiction novel. Hollowell explores the social currents in American culture that produced the new form. He illuminates the differences between the old and new journalism in handling the explosive, ever-changing events of the 1960's, and shows how the contemporary social historian willingly becomes as much the center of attraction as the thing he is reporting on. In the second half of the book the author examines in detail the major writings of Capote, Mailer, and Tom Wolfe, focussing on their utilization of novelistic techniques to make their reportage more "fictional." This is a far better close-up of the new art form than is The Mythopoeic Reality. It is more clearly written, contains more information on all aspects of the subject, and lacks the existentialist hang-ups that plagued Zavarzadeh's text. An excellent bibliography adds to the volume's value. Recommended for all literature collections.—Morris A. Hounion, New York City Community Coll. Lib/Learning Resource Center, CUNY

Honigmann, E. A. J. Shakespeare: seven tragedies; the dramatist's manipulation of response.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1976. 215p. index. LC 75-46319. ISBN 0-06-492965-5. $22.50. THEATER/LIT

The continuing fascination of Shakespearean study is the periodic appearance of original thinking after 400 years of investigation by some of the finest minds in English letters. Honigmann's current work contributes an examination of the playwright's considerable technical skill in controlling audience response in the seven tragedies written from 1599 to 1608. In-depth studies of Brutus, Hamlet, Iago, Othello, Lear, Macbeth, Antony, Cleopatra, and Coriolanus in terms of audience acceptance or rejection make this a must for serious actors and directors as well as

Highly Recommended Columbia Titles

THE NOVELS OF ANTHONY POWELL

James Tucker. "This book of criticism is marked by a readable, pleasant writing style (and) a useful 30-page who's who index to the many characters in Powell's magnum opus (A Dance to the Music of Time). Tucker, while concentrating on this mammoth work, does include some highly perceptive discussions of Powell's early novels and preliminary techniques...Tucker is also amazingly even-handed in his evaluation of Powell, seeing both the cleverness of his irony and the narrowness of his ironic range. Highly recommended for libraries with major collections on the modern British novel."

—Library Journal

LC 76-15201 $12.00

OJIBWAY HERITAGE

Basil Johnston. "This compilation of the basic beliefs, ideals, values, and ceremonies of a large North American native group is a beautiful and sacred document. Johnston, who himself is Ojibway, here records and explains many facets of the rich Ojibway heritage from the oral tradition, including the concept of Kitche-Manitou (Great Spirit)...The wisdom of many of these stories may be understood by humans of all ages. These insightful views of life and its meanings should be read and reread by those seeking a better understanding of American Indians and themselves. Recommended for most libraries."

—Library Journal

LC 76-26101 $11.95

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY PRESS

Address for orders:
136 South Broadway
Irvington, New York 10533

scholars. The work belongs in all Shakespeare collections. Too bad the prohibitive price may limit purchase.—Helen Gregory, Albion P.L., Mi.

Keene, Donald. World Within Walls: Japanese literature of the pre-modern era, 1600-1867.

Holt. 1976. 606p. bibliog. index. LC 75-21484. ISBN 0-03-013626-1. $22.95. LIT

One of the foremost Western interpreters of Japanese culture presents the first of his projected four-volume study of Japanese literature. He offers both a description of Japanese literary development during the Tokugawa period and an exposition that is not reluctant to analyze relevant literary problems. Thus it serves as guide and introduction for students and laymen and will also interest scholars. The high points of Keene's story are the essays on the literary giants of the Genroku era. With the same grace and style, Keene also discusses the development of poetic forms, drama, and the various forms of popular fiction (few of which are available in translation); and he still finds space and energy for descriptions of the work of the national scholars and Japanese literature in Chinese. The deceptive ease with which Keene sets out his story, the sureness and richness of detail, the humor, the perspective and balance, all bespeak the consummate scholar who is himself a literary artist. The chapter notes and bibliographies, an appendix containing summaries of plays discussed, and a glossary are models of unobtrusive, helpful scholarly apparatus. A landmark in the history of Western appreciation of Far Eastern culture.—Warren Collins, Honolulu

Klein, Holger, ed. & intro. The First World War in Fiction: a collection of critical essays.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. Feb. 1977. 246p. bibliog. index. LC 76-28822. ISBN 0-06-493792-5. $21.50. LIT

Klein collects 17 essays that discuss a wide range of Anglo-American and Continental-European fiction in order to "give fresh impetus to the comparative approach to war literature." Studies of well-known novels such as A Farewell to Arms and All Quiet on the Western Front, as well as essays on overlooked works such as Dos Passos' Three Soldiers and Jean Giono's Le Grand Troupeau, provide an international perspective, free from nationalistic bias. The result is a valuable, but overpriced, book, recommended for large library collections of comparative literature and modern fiction.—Gregory S. Sojka, Dept. of English, Bowling Green State Univ., Ohio

Knight, Damon, ed. Turning Points: essays on the art of science fiction.

Harper. Feb. 1977. 352p. LC 76-5135. ISBN 0-06-012432-6. $12.50. LIT

This collection of 23 essays is designed to give the reader a view of science fiction as seen and criticized by its major practitioners, tempered with a sampling of later criticism. The essays span the period from 1947 through 1976; unfortunately lacking are recent papers, especially from the three critical journals on sf—Extrapolation, Science Fiction Studies, and Foundation. The collection discusses what sf is, how it came about, how to write sf, and the relationship of sf and science; and it includes "confessions" of four writers. It is an enjoyable and informative book that will be popular among sf enthusiasts and that will fit well in general literature collections.—H. W. Hall, Texas A & M Univ. Lib., College Station

Little, Roger. Guillaume Apollinaire.

Humanities. (French Poets). 1976. 145p. bibliog. index. $12.50; pap. $5.75. LIT

Fulfilling admirably the goals of the series, Little's monograph provides pertinent biographical information and sound analysis of selected poetical works. It explicates clearly poems contained in the collection Alcools and certain "Calligrammes," elucidating images and themes while analyzing form and style. The study is further enhanced by a frank evaluation of Apollinaire as prose writer, dramatist, and critic. Through succinct appraisal Apollinaire is effectively situated in historical, social, and intellectual context. The final chapter "Points of View" rounds out this authoritative introduction, with which students of French poetry can come to grips with much of Apollinaire's literary creation.—Anthony S. Caprio, Dept. of Foreign Languages, Cedar Crest Coll., Allentown, Pa.

Mac Adam, Alfred J. Modern Latin American Narratives.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. LC 76-8098. ISBN 0-226-49993-6. $10.95.

McMurray, George R. Gabriel Garcia Márquez.

Ungar. 160p. LC 76-20409. ISBN 0-8044-2620-1. $7.

ea. vol: Mar. 1977. bibliog. index. LIT

In his fine study McMurray presents an enlightening biography of García Márquez and historical background on the works. He then traces the thematic and stylistic evolution of García Márquez' works from the decay and loneliness portrayed in his first novel, on to the first hints of humor through hyperbole, and then to his trend toward the fantastic. McMurray's analysis is generally relevant and well organized, but he does have a tendency, on occasion, to give too much plot summary.

Mac Adam wisely limits the number of authors and works discussed in his excellent and detailed book. He also manages (unlike McMurray) to keep plot summary to a minimum and concentrates on analysis. Among the authors he studies are Machado de Assis, Rulfo, Cortázar, and García Márquez. Mac Adams comments on and compares such varied topics as the interplay of fantasy and reality, the use of the narrator, and the fragmentation of time. He offers a wealth of information as he utilizes many critical and fictional sources to reinforce his judgments. Both works are worthwhile additions to collections of literary criticism.—James J. Troiano, Dept. of Foreign Languages & Classics, Univ. of Maine, Orono

Mihailovich, Vasa D. & others, comp. & ed. Modern Slavic Literatures. Vol. 2: Bulgarian, Czechoslovak, Polish, Ukrainian, and Yugoslav Literatures.

Ungar. (Lib. of Literary Criticism). 720p. index. LC 72-170319. ISBN 0-8044-3175-2. $30. LIT

This volume offers a representative picture of the national literatures written in Slavic languages other than Russian (which was covered in Volume 1). Language, rather than nationality of an author, is a criterion for inclusion and classification. The excerpts (many of them translated into English for the first time) come from many sources: full-length critical studies, introductions to books, articles in literary periodicals, and book review sections of popular magazines. They present excellent insight into the authors' works, relating them to the works of their contemporaries and establishing their place in literary history. The book is an extremely valuable source not only for those studying Slavic literatures, but for anybody interested in comparative literature. Highly recommended for academic and public libraries.—Jitka Hurych, Northern Illinois Univ. Lib., DeKalb

Miller, Joaquin. Selected Writings of Joaquin Miller.

Urion Pr. 1976. 268p. ed., intro. & notes by Allan Rosenus. drawings by the author. photogs. LC 73-88918. ISBN 0-913522-05-8. $9.95. LIT

Interest in Miller's flamboyant and eccentric life has generally outlived that in his work. A brilliant self-promoter and splendid poseur, he reached the apogee of his career during his remarkable London journey of 1871 when many acclaimed him as America's most important poet—a judgment which now appears grotesque. This volume brings together selections of what Rosenus feels is the best of Miller's prose, arguably his principal accomplishment, though never fully acknowledged by his own generation. The journal selections include accounts of the London trip and of his experiences with the Indians and miners in California, and the stories are celebrations on a heroic scale of the freedom and beauty of the old West. All meld fact and fiction freely; and their qualities of humanness, humor, and idealism are worthy of notice. It is doubtful, however, that this fresh look at Miller's prose will elevate him above the colorful footnotes of our literary histories which he now occupies.—Richard J. Kelly, Univ. of Minnesota Lib., Minneapolis

Noel, Ruth S. The Mythology of Middle-Earth.

Houghton. Feb. 1977. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-395-25006-4. $7.95. LIT

A readable, fun book for any Tolkien aficionado. To my knowledge it is the first popular book in the field of Tolkien studies to address itself exclusively to sources for The Lord of the Rings and related works. It briefly discusses Tolkien's utilization of mythologies; relates his major themes to mythic and epic sources; identifies and attempts to locate (either geographically or conceptually) Middle-earth, Númenor, and the Blessed Realm; seeks sources for "The Living beings of Middle-earth"; and examines "a number of things" which "are given special significance. . . . dragons, Rings of Power, weapons, and barrows." The book is always interesting (but not always thorough), and it's recommended for Tolkien collections.—Dorothy Sternlicht, SUNY at Oswego Lib.

O'Connell, David. Louis-Ferdinand Céline.
Twayne. (World Authors). 1976. 176p. bibliog. index. LC 76-26059. ISBN 0-8057-6256-6. $7.95. LIT

Critics have had their hands full with Céline. Only Patrick McCarthy's Céline (LJ 6/1/76) has done justice to this enigmatic man and his dense, difficult works. O'Connell's critical introduction emerges as a qualified success. Like McCarthy, O'Connell discusses Céline's polemical writings and their anti-Semitism in a level-headed and objective manner. Further, his treatment of Journey to the End of the Night is a fully realized and finely wrought piece of criticism. Unfortunately, the handling of the other novels, particularly Death on the Installment Plan, provides at best a brief overview, at worst a haphazard synopsis. Finally, though, it is the ability to recognize that Céline's fiction can be compassionate as well as splenetic which offsets the book's shortcomings, and makes it a worthwhile addition to the growing body of Céline criticism.—William Ott, Timberland Regional Lib., Lacey, Wash.

Orel, Harold. The Final Years of Thomas Hardy, 1912-1928.
Univ. Pr. of Kansas. 1976. 151p. illus. index. $14.

Pinion, F. B. A Commentary on the Poems of Thomas Hardy.
Barnes & Noble: Harper. Feb. 1977. 293p. illus. maps. index. LC 76-15684. ISBN 0-06-495572-9. $25.

Richardson, James E., Jr. Thomas Hardy: the poetry of necessity.
Univ. of Chicago Pr. Mar. 1977. c. 150p. index. ISBN 0-226-71237-0. $12. BIOG/LIT

In a skillful examination of the man and his work, Orel provides a biographical picture of Hardy's last two decades of life. While Orel considers Hardy's outward life, he concentrates on Hardy's inner life as seen through a critical analysis of the poems of this period. Orel examines Hardy's feelings about Emma, the poet's backward look at his childhood and its contrast with a changing England, the value of his occasional poems as statements on the human condition, his attitude toward structured religion, and his revulsion for World War I. Orel never loses sight of Hardy's philosophical flexibility as he shows Hardy's ability to rethink positions and values.

For Richardson, Hardy's questioning of values becomes the focus for an intense investigation. This work centers on Hardy's paradox: the inevitability of what is and the ease with which the present could have been different. From this paradox emerges Hardy's preoccupation with time, a preoccupation that appears in the very style and metrics of the poems. Throughout the book, Richardson contrasts and compares Hardy's thematic concerns and stylistic techniques with those of Shelley and Browning. The abstruse nature of this book and the substantial emphasis on Shelley and Browning make the work more valuable for those well versed in both the Romantic and Victorian periods.

Pinion's volume is a significant aid to a fuller understanding of Hardy's poetic production. He comments on virtually every poem in the eight volumes of Hardy's published poetry, as well as on a small number of recently collected poems. The explications range from the definition of a single word in a poem to a rather full discussion of more complex pieces. This work not only provides insight into Hardy's poetic style and the influences on his poems, but also establishes a pattern of philosophical thought which is of consequence in interpreting the later novels.—Colin McLeod, Dept. of English, Virginia Polytechnic Inst. & State Univ., Blacksburg

Paananen, Victor N. William Blake.
Twayne. (English Authors). Feb. 1977. bibliog. ISBN 0-8057-6672-3. $7.95. LIT

Drawing on the important scholarship of the last 50 years, Paananen has written a concise and reliable introduction to Blake's life and writings. He clearly explicates the major themes, the complex mythology, and the visionary mode of Blake's poetry. And he correctly sees Blake's advocacy of a visionary and imaginative Christianity and his repeated opposition to the habits of empiricism and rationality that oppress and limit perception as the most significant aspects of the poet's thought. The once obscure and neglected Blake is now an accessible and popular poet among readers of English literature, and this fine introductory study should continue the trend.—Joseph J. Branin, Kent State Univ. Lib., Salem, Ohio

Perkins, Michael. The Secret Record: modern erotic literature.
Morrow. 1976. 227p. bibliog. index. LC 76-18832. ISBN 0-688-03121-8. $7.95. LIT

For those libraries containing erotic literature, The Secret Record will be a welcome addition to their collection. Such subjects as Dionysian literature, Victorian erotica, erotic poetry, the woman's role (novelist and victim), homosexual erotic fiction, and the "metasexual" novelist are covered. A selected bibliography and an index of authors are included. Although this is not a book that all libraries will want, those with information on erotic literature will wish to buy it.—Charles M. Lonnberg, Indiana State Univ. Lib., Evansville

Priestley, J. B. English Humour.
Stein & Day. 1976. 224p. illus., some color. index. LC 76-12982. ISBN 0-8128-2093-6. $16.95. HUMOR/LIT

Since his last book on English humor, 50 years ago, Priestley has observed a change in the temperament of the Eng-

DISTINGUISHED NEW PUBLICATIONS FROM NORTHLAND PRESS

VOICES FROM THE SOUTHWEST
Southwestern prose, poetry, and art collected in honor of Lawrence Clark Powell. Frank Waters, Paul Horgan, Ansel Adams, and Jake Zeitlin are among the contributors.
180 pages $12.50

FRED ROSENSTOCK by Donald Bower
Foreword by Frank Waters
A portrait of the renowned bookman who became one of the foremost authorities on Western American art and literature. 194 pages $12.50

FROM THE HEARTLAND
by Lawrence Clark Powell
illustrated by Bettina Steinke
Essays including studies of literary figures Henry Miller, Gertrude Stein, and Edward Abbey plus beautiful vignettes on the Southwest and Portugal.
180 pages $9.50

P. O. BOX N, FLAGSTAFF, ARIZONA 86002

Four Visions of America
Erica Jong
Thomas Sanchez
Kay Boyle
Henry Miller

A four-cornered view from two generations of American writers. Intense new music from a surprising quartet.

$8.95 cl., 3.95 pbk

CAPRA PRESS
631 State Street
Santa Barbara, CA 93101

lishman that makes it difficult to discuss the subject, mainly the loss of affection. The present, however, does not obscure his discussion of the past. Priestley traces the development of English humor from Chaucer to Dickens with liberal excerpts from works to strengthen his analysis. At mid-19th Century, he turns from authors and books for there is a decline of notable humorists and an appearance of "hard-working funny men." In the latter category he places Wodehouse, Morton, Waugh and others who imitate the best techniques of the great humorists of the past. He observes, finally, that the works of major humorists will persist because their humor is centered in the universal frailties of human nature that every generation appreciates, but the work of "funny men" will fade because their humor is centered in the passing fashions of the day. For university libraries.—Roger L. Brooks, Howard Payne Univ., Brownwood, Tex.

Ritchie, J. M. German Expressionist Drama.

Twayne. (World Authors). 1977. bibliog. index. LC 76-46324. ISBN 0-8057-6261-2. $8.50. LIT

Ritchie has produced an exceptionally fine study of German Expressionist drama, a movement of the early 20th-Century only slightly familiar to most Americans. Ritchie presents the significant credos and sources of the movement, as well as contemporary criticism of the dramatists and their work. He also clarifies ties to other forms of Expressionist art. This succinct, yet highly informative, work is supplemented by an index, a topical chronology of the period, and a well-annotated bibliography of primary and secondary sources available in English and German. Highly recommended for academic libraries.—Janet C. Muller, Frederick Cancer Research Lib., Md.

Sherman, G. W. The Pessimism of Thomas Hardy.

Fairleigh Dickinson Univ. Pr. 1976. 518p. bibliog. index. LC 74-4982. ISBN 0-8386-1582-1. $22.50. LIT

This large, awkwardly written book attempts to argue that Hardy's art and vision were greatly influenced by the social problems and dislocations of Victorian England. After all, "bourgeois society was teeming with industrial conflicts." Sherman's main strategy is to mention Karl Marx whenever he feels like it. This is a book lacking in literary sense or critical tact.—Keith Cushman, Dept. of English, Univ. of North Carolina, Greensboro

Souza, Raymond D. Major Cuban Novelists: innovation and tradition.

Univ. of Missouri Pr. 1976. 120p. bibliog. LC 76-16497. ISBN 0-8262-0210-1. $10. LIT

This historical outline of Cuban literature focuses on some of Cuba's finest authors, as well as the theme of slavery in various novels. It concentrates on three contemporary novelists (Alejo Carpentier, Lezama Lima, and Cabrera Infante) and compares and contrasts how the writers deal with man's attempts to find order and meaning in a confused and often chaotic world. The analysis is generally effective, particularly when the reader is led through Infante's complex world. The text at times becomes burdened by too much plot summary; this is particularly true in the introduction and the section on Carpentier. Nevertheless, the overall quality of the study makes it worthwhile for specialized collections of literary criticism.—James J. Troiano, Dept. of Foreign Languages, Univ. of Maine, Orono

Steadman, John M. Epic and Tragic Structure in "Paradise Lost."

Univ. of Chicago Pr. 1976. 189p. bibliog. index. LC 75-43234. ISBN 0-226-77134-2. $15. LIT

Paradise Lost has been analyzed and interpreted by so many different modern critical techniques—anthropological, archetypal, linguistic, psychological, et al.—that it is refreshing to see it analyzed as Milton designed it: an epic poem written in the 17th Century. Steadman reviews Renaissance (specifically Italian) interpretations of the Poetics and Milton's familiarity with these views. He examines the plot in terms of reversal, recognition, and "scene of suffering" (pathos) as these were understood in Renaissance literary theory. Milton's assimilation into heroic poetry of other literary modes and his fusion of epic and tragic elements in the scope and action of the poem are likewise treated. Some readers may have difficulty with the (untranslated) Italian and Latin passages. Recommended for its insight into Milton and Renaissance literary theory.—Gerald L. Evans, Dept. of English, Marietta Coll., Ohio

Turner, Paul. Tennyson.

Routledge & Kegan Paul. (Author Guides). 1976. 198p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-7100-8371-8. $9.50. BIOG/LIT

An up-to-date and authoritative account of Tennyson's life and an examination of his poetry. Turner believes that while Tennyson's reputation reached its nadir in the 1930's it has shown a sharp resurgence in the last two decades. As a result critics no longer sneer at Tennyson as old fashioned. However, they labor under the delusion that they are a "superior species to the Victorians"; and, moreover, Turner feels they have an "inadequate understanding of the literary and historical context in which his [Tennyson's] poems were written." Turner attempts to rectify these failings. He stresses that Tennyson is not a modern poet either in his poetic method or in his manner of thought. Thus, Turner gives the reader a brief but valuable insight into Tennyson's life and the Victorian age, and he establishes the relationship of the poetry to the ideas and events of Victorian England. Moreover, he strongly emphasizes the importance that classical literature plays in understanding Tennyson's poetry. Though some critics will argue with Turner's view, this is an excellent, lucidly written study that is highly recommended for large public and university libraries.—David A. Dillon, Univ. of New Orleans Lib.

MUSIC

Dalton, David & Lenny Kaye. Rock 100.

Grosset. 1977. 470p. illus. LC 74-27945. ISBN 0-448-12228-6. $17.95; pap. ISBN 0-448-12240-5 $7.95. MUSIC

One hundred well-written narrative essays which blend bits of biography, musical analysis, and other commentary on rock groups and personalities. The authors are knowledgeable enthusiasts who have managed to find 20 common chapter themes in grouping their disparate subjects by type of music. Although the coverage is selectively broad, some is curious: there are entries for the likes of Fabian, Pat Boone, and Lesley Gore, but none for Neil Diamond, Steppenwolf, or the Moody Blues. Also, it seems that some of the information could have been more up to date, and the lack of discographies is a secondary weakness. Nonetheless, a good, lucid look at the history of rock 'n' roll for libraries lacking earlier encyclopedic works by Irwin Stambler, The Encyclopedia of Pop, Rock and Soul (LJ 12/15/64) or Lillian Roxon, Lillian Roxon's Rock Encyclopedia (LJ 2/15/70).—Paul G. Feehan, Univ. of Miami Lib., Coral Gables, Fla.

Kooper, Al. Backstage Passes: Rock 'N' Roll life in the sixties.

Stein & Day. Feb. 1977. 209p. LC 75-11758. ISBN 0-8128-1840-7. $10. PER NAR/MUSIC

Al Kooper—not to be confused with Alice Cooper—is something of a rock 'n' roll Renaissance man: composer, arranger, producer, instrumentalist, vocalist, supersession man. A blues enthusiast, he has performed and recorded with Bob Dylan, the Rolling Stones, Blood, Sweat & Tears, Don Ellis and a host of lesser names. Written in colloquial style, Kooper's reminiscences of the musical Sixties offer offbeat glimpses of his mild-mannered self and other recording stars at home, in the studio, and at concerts. In a sense, his career is inspiring: it shows that, in contrast with the vulgar notoriety so often associated with rock popularity, a combination of talent, versatility, self-assertiveness, and good taste can succeed. A commendable title for pop music collections.—Paul G. Feehan, Univ. of Miami Lib., Coral Gables, Fla.

Murray, Albert. Stomping the Blues.

McGraw. 1976. 264p. photogs. index. art directed by Harris Lewine. LC 76-14949. ISBN 0-07-044074-3. $17.50. MUSIC

This is not another explication of blues lyrics or a historical analysis of the musical form, thank goodness, but an intense examination of the blues spirit and blues as a cultured art form. Critic and novelist Murray views the music not as a primitive musical expression of black suffering but as an antidote to the bad times—active good-time music, music to be danced to, music that, because of its substance and talented exponents, has emerged the most significant American music. He points to the importance of the performing style and he music itself over the lyrics and so-ial or political connotations of the lues as significant factors in its expres-ion as an art. This is a notable contri-ution to the understanding of the blues n its broadest context, although it is omewhat marred by the author's over-xuberant, dogmatic style. The illus-rative selections are superb—more han 250 photographs of performers nd reproductions of record labels.—tephen M. Fry, UCLA Music Lib.

Westernhagen, Curt von. The Forging f the "Ring": Richard Wagner's com-osition sketches for "Der Ring des Nib-l ungen."

Cambridge Univ. Pr. 1976. 248p. tr. by Arnold & Mary Whittall. bibliog. index. LC 76-7140. ISBN 0-521-21293-6. $18.95. MUSIC

The writer is one of the foremost Wag-ner experts, author of a host of books on Wagner as well as the Wagner entry n Die Musik in Geschichte und Gegen-wart. The present study first appeared n German in 1973. The extant composi-ion sketches for the Ring music dra-nas are carefully analysed in an effort o find new meanings and understand-ngs of Wagner's creative processes nd to show how he often worked out whole acts on the basis of short sketches. The same approach has been uccessfully followed in Beethoven tudies since the time of Nottebohm; or the advanced Wagner student, this vill be a valuable book. In general, the ranslation is excellent despite occa-ional infelicities. One big improve-nent in this edition is the regular use of unning titles, something lacking in the riginal edition.—William Shank, UNY Graduate Sch. Lib.

Philosophy

Fogelin, Robert J. Wittgenstein.

Routledge & Kegan Paul. (Arguments of the Philosophers). 1976. 223p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-7100-8426-9. $11. PHIL

This is a clear and careful analysis of he Tractatus and the Investigations, lus a chapter on Remarks on the Foun-lations of Mathematics. Fogelin's nethod is to cite and to explain pas-ages that express major theses of the works and then critically to evaluate he theses. He deliberately abstains rom criticizing competing inter-retations, though he occasionally re-ers to other commentaries. His main opics are atomism, the picture theory f meaning and Wittgenstein's later crit-cisms of it, the nature and logic of propositions, scepticism, understand-ng, private language, and philosophi-al psychology. A stimulating and in-ightful work. The book is printed in old-type and the binding of my copy did not inspire confidence in its durabili-y.—Robert Hoffman, Dept. of Philoso-hy, York Coll., CUNY

Hallett, Garth. A Companion to Witt-genstein's "Philosophical Investiga-ions."

Cornell Univ. Pr. Mar. 1977. 808p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-8014-0997-7. $27.50. PHIL

After a 35-page general introduction that sets out the background of the Investigations, Hallett turns to a painstaking, extensive examination of the work itself. He divides Wittgenstein's text into 41 sections, corresponding to the subjects discussed therein, introduces each section with a general commentary, and then comments in detail on individual expressions, statements, and paragraphs of the text. The Companion is full of useful backward and forward references from one part of the commentary to another and has an appendix that both mentions authors known by Wittgenstein and explains why they are referred to in the commentary. The Companion is a work whose vast scope and insight will be appreciated by anyone who seriously works his way through Wittengenstein's labyrinth.—Robert Hoffman, Dept. of Philosophy, York Coll., CUNY

Linsky, Leonard. Names and Descriptions.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. Feb. 1977. bibliog. index. LC 76-8093. ISBN 0-226-48441-6. $13.50. PHIL

This book is about singular reference, i.e., proper names and definite descriptions. Part I (about two-thirds of the book) deals with the logical form of negative existential sentences, examining accounts by Mill, Russell, Frege, Wittgenstein, and others of how proper names can denote things that do not exist. No account is found to be totally satisfactory. Part II deals with reference and modality, e.g., failure of substitutivity in referentially opaque contexts. Here, Linsky discusses primarily the work of Quine, arguing that some of the problems he poses (e.g., how to individuate possibilia) are pseudoproblems that require decision, not demonstration. A technical appendix on quantification closes the book. The work is lucid, thorough, and stimulating, but presupposes familiarity with the subject.—Robert Hoffman, Dept. of Philosophy, York Coll., CUNY

Livingston, Donald W. & James T. King, eds. Hume: A Re-evaluation.

Fordham Univ. Pr. 1976. 421p. LC 76-13968. ISBN 0-8232-1007-3. $25; pap. ISBN 0-8232-1008-1. $8. PHIL

This collection contains 19 essays (16 new, one revised, and two reprinted from relatively inaccessible journals), covering such topics in Hume as skepticism and reasonableness; perception, passions, communication; philosophical psychology and metaphysics; aesthetics and ethics; philosophy of religion; and social philosophy. The pieces vary in clarity, subtlety, and challenge; but the book does include several essays worth careful reading. This volume belongs in major library collections and on the shelves of Hume specialists. It is not aimed at the general philosophical reader, though he will find some interesting things in it.—Robert Hoffman, Dept. of Philosophy, York Coll., CUNY

Malcolm, Norman. Thought and Knowledge.

Cornell Univ. Pr. 1976. 224p. index. LC 76-25647. ISBN 0-8014-1074-6. $9.75. PHIL

The book reprints eight previously published and one forthcoming essay. The subjects are: how Descartes might have taken himself to have shown that his essential nature is thinking; his thesis that animals are automata; his proof that "this I" is a nonmaterial thing; logical behaviorism; Wittgenstein on the privacy of experience; Wittgenstein on psychological concepts, plus criticisms of some psychologists; language and thought, pace Chomsky and Lenneberg; Moore's defense of common sense and Wittgenstein's On Certainty; and religious belief and "form of life." The papers exemplify Malcolm's well-known sustained and lucid argument, grounded in ordinary usage.—Robert Hoffman, Dept. of Philosophy, York Coll., CUNY

POETRY

Corman, Cid. 'S.

Elizabeth Pr. 1976. unpaged. $16; pap. $8. POETRY

Corman writes tightly constructed and focused poems, revealing the complexities of a life that does not seem easy to understand, that does not freely give man meaning and significance. It is poetry of a man groping for a pattern, a plan as in "Parabola:" "What did you think/ I meant? What does/ any of us// mean? The point that/ holds between us/ a distance we// may move towards/ but never reach—/ the meanness of// significance/ in the face of actual death." The futility of his action is evident: "I sit on/ a rock/ in the shade//and am/ content not/ to think.// Why make more/ of life/ than death does?" But even so the poems keep coming: "After a/ heavy day/ clouds rise from/the skyline/ glowing// toward/ sundown as/ if there were// something more/ than there is." 'S is representative of Corman's strength as a poet, a strength derived from his intenseness of thought and image. "Night arrives./ It is not/ far to be// going. It/ is not far/ to have gone."—Gary Hotham, Laurel, Md.

Lorca, Federico García. Lorca/Blackburn: poems by Federico García Lorca; translations by Paul Blackburn.

Mulch Pr. 1976. 112p. LC 76-3166. ISBN 0-913142-22-0. pap. $3.95.

Lorca, Federico García. Songs.

Duquesne Univ. Pr., dist. by Humanities. 1976. 186p. ed. by Daniel Eisenberg. tr. by Philip Cummings with the assist. of the author. illus. LC 75-33155. ISBN 0-391-00414-X. $9.50. POETRY

In the canon of Lorca translations, these two efforts, although not major contributions, are of considerable interest. Both volumes focus on the early, pre-1928 poems, overlapping to some extent (17 of Blackburn's 36 selections appear among Cummings' 90 poems), but there the likeness ends.

In 1929 Lorca visited the Cummings family in Eden Mills, Vermont, following a teaching engagement at Columbia University. Philip, then 23, translated the Canciónes, 1921-24 in a feverish week's collaboration with Lorca. The product, now published for the first time, is earnest, full of solecisms and post-Edwardian sentimentality, and marred by curious errors (e.g., "Al Oído de una Muchacha" becomes "To the Hate [odio] of a Girl"). Apparently the communication between the poet, whose English was marginal, and his youthful translator was quirky and tenuous, a fact which would be more apparent had the Spanish text been provided in this edition.

By contrast, the late Paul Blackburn's small bilingual selection is direct and colloquial—closer to Lorca in spirit but lacking the Spaniard's intuitive grace of expression. Blackburn's strident, urban voice intrudes upon Lorca's Andalusian nuances in some lyrics, though it confers a rough energy on others. The best Lorca translations are still the prose versions of J. L. Gili and Stephen Spender, made in 1939, while the renderings by Rolfe Humphries of A Poet in New York (and later by Ben Belitt) are also excellent. Meanwhile, the present approximations of Lorca's early lyricism testify to the universality of his appeal to poet-translators of widely differing temperaments and talents.—Rosemary Neiswender, UCLA

Lucretius. De Rerum Natura: the poem on nature.

Dufour. 1976. 210p. tr. by C. H. Sisson. LC 75-43094. ISBN 0-85635-1156. $8.95. POETRY

Since this translation is furnished with neither notes, line numbers, nor bibliography, it is apparently intended for the casual reader of Roman poetry in English. The brief introduction will serve such readers admirably; with grace and sensitivity, Sisson outlines the purpose and excellences of the poem and modern attitudes toward it. The translation itself is disappointing. Sisson tries both to stay close to the Latin and to present a style "masculine, plain, concentrated, and energetic." The result is ungainly English verse, a vocabulary sometimes pompous (e.g., "effluence," "verdescent") and sometimes flat ("comfortable Venus"), and misleading interpretations (e.g., a "trembling" girl is described as "wriggling").—Elizabeth A. Fisher, Dept. of Classics, Georgetown Univ., Washington, D.C.

Pasternak, Boris. My Sister, Life and Other Poems.

Helen & Kurt Wolff: HBJ. 1976. 119p. ed. & texts by Olga Andreyev Carlisle. color photogs. by Inge Morath. ISBN 0-15-163964-7. $14.95. PHOTOG/POETRY

Son of a painter, Pasternak had an intense visual sense, which is communicated with post-Impressionist brilliance in this marriage of text and pictorial gloss. Carlisle, granddaughter of playwright Leonid Andreyev, has chosen 11 poems from My Sister, Life (written in the summer of 1917 and published in 1922) and the remainder from later volumes, concluding with "Hamlet" (1953). Her renderings are spirited, but excessively free, correctly disavowing any duplication of the Russian rhyme scheme but disregarding simple line-by-line correspondences as well. (The title poem inexplicably omits four lines of the translation, although the Russian text is printed intact.) The difficulty here, as in other Pasternak translations by J. M. Cohen and by Eugene Kayden, is that none offers bibliographic notes on the Russian sources; indeed, Carlisle cites only dates of composition. The arrangement of photos and text is idiosyncratic; a photo precedes the first poem, with text and translation on the facing page, but the Russian text of the second poem is separated from its translation by four pages of photos. Though the illustrations are not always keyed to the lyrics, the volume is an exceptionally beautiful example of the printer's art, and a loving tribute to perhaps the supreme poet of Soviet Russia.—Rosemary Neiswender, UCLA

Wright, Jay. Soothsayers and Omens.

Seven Woods Pr. 1976. 76p. ISBN 0-913282-10-3. pap. $4.25. POETRY

Wright gives testimony to the vitality and richness of black poetry. His work sparkles in places and shows dull spots in others; the language is sometimes cumbersome. But that doesn't block the clarity of his poetic vision. Like Hayden's and Harper's, Wright's work is deeply rooted in history and experience. He is seldom rhetorical. Two impressive poems evoke Benjamin Banneker: "So they call you, knowing you are intimate with stars, to create this city, this body." And: "Solid, these calculations verify your body on God's earth." Wright's explorations into African philosophy and the poems that result must be considered bridges healing the wounds that exist within the souls of black Americans. This book offers the reader something more than words. It is a good omen.—E. Ethelbert Miller, Afro-American Studies Dept., Howard Univ., Washington, D.C.

Political Science & International Affairs

Allison, Graham & Peter Szanton. Remaking Foreign Policy: the organizational connection.

Basic Bks. 1976. 238p. index. ISBN 0-465-06908-8. $10.95. POL SCI

This Council on Foreign Affairs book follows in the high and serious tradition of seminal works on U.S. foreign policy in its critical examination of the organizational fragmentation of decision-making. This work, with its expert understanding of resistance to change, is the sort of treatise the new administration should take seriously if a new start, as promised, is to be made. The issues run the gamut from nuclear options to the new economic realities, and the authors press their case with examples of imbalance and lack of competence in application. Altogether, a stimulating, important work which ge to the heart of the foreign affairs estal lishment. An important addition for a college libraries.—R. F. Delaney, U.S Naval War Coll., Newport, R.I.

Arens, Richard, ed. Genocide in Para guay.

Temple Univ. Pr. 1976. 171p. illus. index. 1 76-5726. ISBN 0-87722-088-3. $10.95. ANTHROPOLOGY/POL S

This volume examines from sever vantage points the treatment of th Aché (Guayaki) Indians in eastern Para guay—a situation first brought to publi attention by German anthropologis Mark Munzel in 1972. While importan in terms of the evidence of the brut extermination of a forest Indian popu lation and the lack of public outrag over this fact, the essays become repet tious. There are only so many ways t say that crimes against humanity hav been and are being committed. It i true, as Arens points out, that a worl conditioned to the Nazi holocaust, t My Lai, and to any one of a number o other modern horrors is not pleasant t contemplate. At the same time, stretches comprehension a bit to sug gest, as Elie Wiesel does in his ep logue, that the refugee Nazis in Para guay are somehow involved in anothe Final Solution. One can only hope tha the publication of this collection wi bring the problem to the attention of more concerned public and contribut to appropriate U.S. policy changes.—J E. Cadenhead, Jr., Dept. of History Univ. of Tulsa, Okla.

Barnett, Marguerite Ross. The Politic of Cultural Nationalism in South India

Princeton Univ. Pr. 1976. 368p. bibliog. index LC 76-2457. ISBN 0-691-07577-8. $22.50. POL SC

The development of the modern India state of Tamil Nadu, formerly Madras is investigated by Barnett through an examination of the interaction of th various nationalist political proponent and the phenomenon of "cultural na tionalism in a heterogeneous natio state." Based upon surveys, inter views, and a two-year stay, the investi gation of the Dravida Munnetra Kazha gam party is the center of the study Recommended for academic librar ies.—Ed Kleppinger, California Poly technic State Univ. Lib., San Lui Obispo

Bryson, Thomas A. American Diplo matic Relations with the Middle East 1784–1975: a survey.

Scarecrow. 1977. 431p. bibliog. index. LC 76 44344. ISBN 0-8108-0988-5. $17.50. HIST/INT AFFAIRS

Bryson's book provides a long-awaited look at the decisions and policies that have placed the U.S. in its present precarious position in the Middle East. Extensive footnotes, bibliography, and index combine to make this an invaluable tool for scholars of U.S. diplomacy and the Middle East. Unfortunately, Bryson's textbook style may discourage the less dogged reader; and his occasional tendency to jump back and forth in time may confuse the unwary. On the whole, however, this would make

ECONOMIC & POLITICAL PEACE

Vol. II by Shirley Telford. Some new ideas on Marxist planning and value theory. Jan. 1977, 160 pp., cloth, $6.95.

WILLIAM & RICHARDS, PUBLISHERS
P.O. BOX 327,
PORTLAND, ORE. 97207

excellent addition to U.S. diplomacy and Mideast collections.—David P. ider, Mesa P.L., Ariz.

awisha, A. I. Egypt in the Arab orld: the elements of foreign policy.

Halsted: Wiley. 1976. 234p. bibliog. index. LC 76-7517. ISBN 0-470-19960-1. $24.50. INT AFFAIRS his book seeks to apply a theoretical odel of foreign policy making and imementation—considering domestic, gional, and international influences, olicy-making structure, tools of implentation, constraints on action, c.—to Egypt during Nasser's period. he first 59 pages present an interetative history of Egyptian–Arab relaons, with an epilogue on Sadat; the reainder of the text consists of a topical eakdown according to the model. he volume is based not on primary ources or field work, but on press and condary sources. Still, it is well writn, brief, and often interesting, not erly technical, and offers perbectives useful to students and to polital scientists not familiar with interrab politics. Unfortunately, it offers few new facts and ideas that its xorbitant price cannot be justified.—avid W. Littlefield, Lib. of Congress etente and Defense: a reader.

American Enterprise. 1976. 445p. ed. & intro. by Robert J. Pranger. LC 76-44607. ISBN 0-8447-3227-3. pap. $4.50. INT AFFAIRS his compendious volume (19 reprint- and original articles, 13 official docuents) marks what may be the end of n era in our diplomatic and defense osture. With contributors ranging om Nixon to Solzhenitsyn, and inuding many of the best-known hawks" and "doves" (Fulbright, rzezinski, and Laird, for example) of he past decade, it neatly expresses the ontinuing debate as to the primacy of onciliation or belligerency. Coming om a leading conservative "think nk," it is surprisingly well-balanced. seful for any academic or large public brary and, happily, low-priced: buy it ven if you already have such collecons as American Defense and Detente Harper, 1973) or the American Dense Policy (Johns Hopkins, 1965).—li M. Oboler, Idaho State Univ. Lib., ocatello raper, Hal. Karl Marx's Theory of evolution. Vol. 1: State and Bureaucra-. Pt. 1: The Political Development of e Young Marx. Pt. 2: Marx's Theory the State.

Monthly Review. Feb. 1977. index. bibliog. LC 76-26319. Pt. 1: 384p. ISBN 0-85345-404-3. $14.25. Pt. 2: 352p. ISBN 0-85345-405-1. $14.25. 2 pt. set (Vol. 1): ISBN 0-85345-387-X. $28.50. POL SCI his is the first installment of an amitious project by Draper, the second vo volumes of which will cover, rebectively, "Classes and Revolutionary olitics" and "The Road to Socialism." n the first part of this first volume, raper's scholarship is impressive; ut his painstaking analysis of the mments on the state in the writgs of the young Marx is so thorough at it borders on the tedious. For Draper seems to find it difficult to go beyond explication de texte—except in the helpful, albeit few discussions of the political etymology of such terms as "democracy" and "socialism." His inclination toward exegesis is less marked in the second part but not absent. Here he reconstructs in a cogent manner Marx's theories concerning Bonapartism (what Draper calls the "autonomized" state) and Oriental despotism. Yet what is lacking is an adequate discussion of Marx's general theory of the state to supplement the excellent glosses on his analyses of these specific forms. Draper doesn't address this matter fully until the very last page of his text, where even then he does little more than affirm Engels' comment that the state is, in the last analysis, "the executor of the economic necessities of the national situation." To be fair to Draper, it must be admitted that his expressed aim is simply to examine Marx's various political texts; but most readers will be less interested in the usefulness of those texts for understanding Louis Bonaparte and Bismarck than for finding a way to grasp the state in all its forms, and thus for understanding Carter, Brezhnev, and Hua Kuo-feng. Nevertheless, Draper's work will be of enormous value to students of Marxology.—Philip Mattera, "Library Journal"

Haseler, Stephen. The Death of British Democracy: a study of Britain's political present and future.

Prometheus Bks. 1976. 262p. index. ISBN 0-87975-087-1. $13.95. POL SCI

A young, disillusioned Labourite offers a morbid view of Britain's growing crisis. He sees a "Social Democratic Age" of economic prosperity and consensus politics shattered by recent developments. Ulster turmoil, Scottish and Welsh separatism, and most importantly, labor-union defiance of the government are leading to a weakening of Parliament's will and ability to govern. Haseler perceives an ominous Marxist penetration of the Trades Union Congress and Parliamentary party. To abort an alleged totalitarian menace, he urges the formation of a grand political coalition of moderate anti-Marxist forces drawn from the three major parties. Such a realignment, Haseler argues, could rally a clear electoral majority for a safe and sane Britain, based on the rule of law, Parliamentary authority, a mixed economy, and civil liberty. Some sound analysis, especially of trends within the three main political parties, is contained here. Unfortunately, Haseler's avowedly "Cold War liberal" perspective leads to a superficial treatment of the left-wing Labourites' very relevant socialist approach to a capitalist crisis. Recommended for large collections.—Donald J. Murphy, Dept. of History, Chabot Coll., Livermore, Calif.

Parry, Albert. Terrorism: from Robespierre to Arafat.

Vanguard. 1976. 624p. photogs. index. LC 76-12006. ISBN 0-8149-0746-6. $17.50. INT AFFAIRS

In this attempt at a comprehensive history of the subject, terrorism is defined in the widest sense, to include political violence in all its manifestations. The emphasis is on leftwing violence: Marx and Lenin are seen as the inspirers of modern political terrorism and the Soviet Union is held primarily responsible for allowing it to continue. Parry favors the Israeli "no concessions" response to terrorists (see Frederick Hacker's Crusaders, Criminals, Crazies, LJ 1/1/77, for an opposite view) but is pessimistic about the future. Although much information is presented, this is a one-sided account, far too long and annoyingly shrill: the Black Panthers, for example, are characterized as a "Red storm lashing the land" in 1970. Despite some bibliographic citations, many assertions are not documented. Not recommended for a general audience.—Gregor A. Preston, Pennsylvania State Univ. Libs., University Park

Solzhenitsyn, Aleksandr. Détente: prospects for democracy and dictatorship.

Transaction. (Issues in Contemporary Civilization). 1976. 112p. commentary by Alex Simirenko & others. LC 76-15233. ISBN 0-87855-177-8. $5.95. INT AFFAIRS

This small volume consists of two addresses given before meetings of the AFL-CIO in 1975. The Soviet leopard, Solzhenitsyn warns, has not shed its spots; it is still the predatory beast of yore. Detente, thus, is not to be regarded as a reciprocal lessening of tensions, but rather as a device for lulling the West into a false sense of security. Communism, wherever found, is a malign and immoral force. Ironically, this

Just Published!
Second Edition

Guide to Congress
Second Edition

1,100 pp. 8½" x 11". $49.50

Just published, an extensively revised edition of the work widely accepted as the reference on the U.S. Congress. Includes major Congressional reforms enacted in the aftermath of Vietnam and Watergate. How Congress works, its powers, history and the pressures upon it.

This is no coffee-table edition. It belongs in every high school, college and public library.

Please order directly from:

Congressional Quarterly Inc.
Box 77, 1414 22nd St. N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20037

renowned Russian expatriate came to the U.S. at a time when large segments of the educated classes began to regard their own country with contempt, no better and perhaps even worse than the Soviet Union. Such views can be found in the section of this book devoted to a critique of Solzhenitsyn. Little wonder, perhaps, that he chose to speak to organized labor.—Fred E. Friedel, Dept. of History, Bellevue Community Coll., Wash.

Thurow, Glen E. Abraham Lincoln and American Political Religion.

State Univ. of New York Pr. 1976. 133p. bibliog. index. LC 76-12596. ISBN 0-87395-334-7. $10. HIST/POL SCI

This concise volume explores Lincoln's thought, as exemplified in his speeches and writings, especially the Gettysburg Address and the Second Inaugural Speech. The author tries to demonstrate through Lincoln's ideas that American political thought possesses a theology all its own, based on certain sacred and immutable principles—equality, justice, reverence for the laws, etc. Recommended for academic library collections in American history and culture.—Ronald J. Kaye, Prince George's County Memorial Lib. System, Hyattsville, Md.

Welch, Claude E., Jr., ed. Civilian Control of the Military: theory and cases from developing countries.

State University of New York Pr. 1976. 337p. index. LC 76-40278. ISBN 0-87395-348-7. $20. POL SCI

The theme tying these essays together is the role of the military in Third World politics, except in Africa, where the newly independent states have not had civilian governments of sufficient duration to draw conclusions about their viability. The contributors are generally academic international affairs specialists. But the essays are more lucid than one might expect from writers of this type and reflect good judgment and skill on the part of the editor. Given the volatile politics of Third World countries, however, some of the essays are doomed to be outdated within two or three years.—Michel Ridgeway, U.S. Military Academy Lib., West Point, N.Y.

Whetten, Lawrence L., ed. The Future of Soviet Military Power.

Crane, Russak. 1976. 208p. index. LC 75-39978. ISBN 0-8448-0909-8. $14.50. INT AFFAIRS

This is not a book for the casual reader, but it should be read by everyone interested in public affairs. Included here are nine papers which were presented at a conference of Western scholars and diplomats in 1975. Each author presents a large amount of data pertinent to his area of concern, much of it from Soviet sources; each studies all parts of the Soviet military effort, especially organization, training, and capabilities; and each emphasizes that Soviet strategy is not based on the same assumptions as those of the West. This book is a useful counterbalance to ones like Alva Myrdal's The Game of Disarmament (LJ 12/1/76) and should be in most libraries.—Edward Gibson, Washington Coll. Lib., Chestertown, Md.

Is Your Child's Speech Normal?

Jon Eisenson

A prominent psychologist and speech specialist has written "this comprehensive volume to answer parental questions regarding normal childhood speech development . . . includes a section on advice for seeking professional assistance."
Library Journal

128 pp. LC 76-5078
$7.95 hardcover
ISBN 0-201-01917-5
$3.95 paperback
ISBN 0-201-01916-7

ADDISON-WESLEY
Reading, Massachusetts 01867

Psychology & Psychiatry

Ashcraft, Norman & Albert E. Scheflen. People Space: the making and breaking of human boundaries.

Anchor: Doubleday. 1976. illus. ISBN 0-385-11229-7. pap. $2.50. SOC SCI/PSYCH

Scheflen, a psychiatrist and communications specialist, and anthropologist Ashcraft identify poverty, scarcity of resources, ethnic differences, violence, crowding, and privacy as human problems of cultural rather than biological origin. Based on audiovisually-aided studies of people in their homes and public places, the book uses the concept of territoriality to explain certain human behaviors, pointing out that major or minor problems result when the territory of an individual or group is invaded, whether as a result of intention or error (often failure to recognize invisible boundary lines). This concept of territoriality goes beyond that of Lorenz, including way of life as well as actual physical space. It states, as have other social scientists, the necessity of interpreting human actions in space in a total cultural context, not as isolates. Real or imagined, planned and unplanned intrusions into another's territory can be handled better only if the nature of the context is thoroughly understood. Written for the general reader as well as the specialist, this work will supplement, rather than supplan existing literature.—Suzanne W. Woo SUNY at Alfred Lib.

Gambrill, Eileen D. & Cheryl A. Ric ey. It's Up to You: developing assert social skills.

Les Femmes. 1976. 168p. bibliog. LC 75-370 ISBN 0-89087-913-3. pap. $4.95. PSY

This volume is intended for adult m and women, but its serious limitatio restrict its use to those women only cently converted from the social r expectation of being the receiver of i tiatives from men, and to those lacki in self-motivation who might be volved in groups specifically arrang for the purpose of social skill traini and self-enhancement. The book effe tively uses behavior modification tec niques to provide step-by-step guid lines for skill-level assignments a self-reinforcement, but the problems disingenuousness and interperson commitments are glossed over, and t sample situations are commonpla and hardly merit the term "assertive The authors treat shyness as a soci disease, but fail to place it in the co text of today's friendships, which a proving as fragile as today's family tie New, radical modes of socialization a needed if social contacts have come be limited to nothing more than initia ing a conversation in a queue.—W liam Abrams, Portland State Uni Lib., Ore.

Jaynes, Julian. The Origin of Co sciousness in the Breakdown of the cameral Mind.

Houghton. 1977. illus. index. ISBN 0-395-207 0. $7.95. PSY

This is an exciting, ingenious, heavi documented, beautifully written, ar "utterly preposterous" (to use the a thor's term) theory of the developme of human consciousness. The autho who teaches psychology at Princeto argues that consciousness is an only r cently evolved capacity of the huma brain and that going back a mere 40 years, and even less, most huma beings acted not under their own co scious control but followed the con mand of voices—auditory (schizophr nia-like) hallucinations—that they pe ceived as coming from the gods. Th earlier "bicameral mind" was not co scious but consisted of a commandin half and an obeying half. Jaynes pr sents evidence for this daring hypothe sis from man's prehistory, archeology art, and early literature (the Iliad, th Bible, ancient Egyptian chronicle Eastern religious writing, etc.). One first inclination is to reject all of it o of hand as science fiction, imaginativ speculation with no hard evidence; bu curiously, if one is patient and hea out the story (Jaynes's style is irresis ible) the arguments are not only ente taining but persuasive. After all, co sciousness is a mystery, hypnosis an schizophrenia are not understoo thought is still considered by some t be internal vocalization, etc., and thi explanation, outlandish and purely co relative as it is, may be very usefu This could be a Velikovsky kind c ook, provocative and controversial.—eorge Adelman, Neurosciences Research Program, M.I.T., Boston ee, John Alan. The Colors of Love.

Prentice-Hall. 1976. 282p. LC 76-16788. ISBN 0-13-152348-1. $8.95. PSYCH he author, a University of Toronto sociologist, identifies seven "lovestyles" rived from Greek concepts: eros, dus, storge (the affection between sibgs or childhood friends), mania (love frenzy sent from the gods), agape, agma (compatibility and common nse), and ludic eros ("less fussy and rious than eros"). He compares them colors, the first three being primary, e last four secondary. His discussion cludes ". . . any intimate adult affiliaon which a person believed was an exrience of love, whether it was heteroxual or homosexual. . . ." The purose of this identification and scussion of lovestyles is to help the ader choose a style which appeals to m and select a partner whose loveyle complements his own. A series of sts is included to aid in this choice. op psychology for the Playboy readship.—Eleanore Singer, formerly ith Univ. of Western Ontario Libs., ondon, Canada antini, Rosemarie. The Secret Fire: a ew view of women & passion.

Playboy, dist. by S. & S. Jan. 1977. LC 76-25076. ISBN 0-87223-474-6. $8.95. PSYCH antini's thesis is that women still act n the belief that true eroticism for omen comes from the combination of ve and suffering. She characterizes e sex lives of a portion of the thouand women she interviewed to subantiate this theory. Her vignettes of dividuals are grouped into chapters n types of eroticism: some are behavral, such as masochism, dominance, nd exhibitionism, and others deal with atus, such as marriage, professional omen, older women, and lesbians. he women portrayed do, in fact, repreent a great deal of suffering, deprivaon, and depression in their interrsonal relationships, though not necssarily in their sex lives. The final hapter is an equally depressing picture f the eroticism of the "male stud/playoy." The author makes little attempt synthesize or explain these unhappy ories, nor does she put them in any erspective. The lack of any conluding statements and the lack of even token good or honest sexual relationip seriously flaws the book. If you ant a book on female sexual behavior, suggest The Hite Report as at least ore representative.—JoAnn Brooks, ducation Reading Room, Indiana niv., Bloomington

arapsychology & Occultism

t. Clair, David. Pagans, Priests, and rophets: a personal investigation into e living traditions of occult Mexico.
Prentice-Hall. 1976. 284p. illus. LC 76-26457. ISBN 0-13-647727-5. $8.95.
ARCHAEOLOGY/OCCULTISM
ypical of many works on the occult, is book is replete with speculation, earsay, and fallacy. Ranging in time from pre-Columbian to contemporary Mexico, it covers a multitude of topics, such as spiritualism, witchcraft, and hallucinogens. Much of the text is simply a description of Indian religious ceremonies, past and present; hardly a subject deserving of the term occult. Lack of documentation and the author's complete ignorance regarding the anthropology/archaeology of Mesoamerica combine to cast serious doubt upon the veracity of the entire work. (St. Clair states that "A carbon-14 test indicated that [a stone tool] was about 250,000 years old!" Carbon-14 is only accurate, at the outside limits, to 70,000 years before present. Furthermore, as a dating method carbon-14 may only be applied to organic artifacts, a category from which stone is excluded.) While the occult is certainly in need of basic scientific research, understanding of the subject is hindered rather than enhanced by works such as St. Clair's.—David R. McDonald, Kansas State Univ. Lib., Manhattan

Spangler, David. Revelation: the birth of a new age.
Rainbow Bridge, dist. by Book People. 1976. 256p. ISBN 0-914198-09-2. intro. by William Irwin Thompson. pap. $4.95.
PARAPSYCH/OCCULTISM
A difficult, relatively inaccessible book in which a mystic visionary attempts to clarify the nature of revelations he has received and to describe the nature of the receiving process itself. He includes transcripts of five revelations given in 1970 and one in 1975, together with commentaries. Books of this kind are of necessity based in assertions about the divine. But Spangler writes like a technician discussing his specialty; he creates no adequate links to the understanding and experience of his readers. Nevertheless, the author is a fellow of the Findhorn Community in Scotland, which is a major force in what is called the "new consciousness," and this will therefore be an important book for readers interested in that field.—Rosemary Feitis, Member, Rolf Inst., New York

religion

Grant, Michael. Saint Paul.
Scribners. 1976. 250p. bibliog. index. LC 76-6024. ISBN 0-684-14682-7. $14.95. REL
This study is a theological treatment of Saint Paul, with a brief biographical introduction. One's reaction to Grant's method is a divided one: he often, seemingly on subjective grounds, either discounts the credibility of portions of his primary sources (Gospels and Acts) or uses them in a tendentiously selective manner; on other occasions, he is guilty of an extreme and unjustifiable literalism in interpreting his sources, with startling, though sometimes thrilling, results. For all of Grant's tendency toward a Bultmannian understanding of Saint Paul's message, his exposition of the significance of the Crucifixion, Resurrection, and Ascension constitute thrilling exegesis

Religion & Philosophy

THE FAMILY TOGETHER
Jack and Sharee Rogers
Inter-Generational Church School
$4.95 paperback
ISBN 0-89202-001-6

ORAL
Wayne A. Robinson
Tough, intriguing biography of big-time religion's Oral Roberts
$5.95 hardcover
ISBN 0-89202-003-2

LITURGY AS LIFE-JOURNEY
William B. Oden
Theology of liturgy and liturgical renewal in the church
$4.95 paperback
ISBN 0-89202-004-0

THE WORKBOOK OF LIVING PRAYER
Maxie Dunnam
Varied aspects of prayer and how they relate to daily life
$3.95 paperback, photographs
ISBN 0-89202-006-7

IMAGES: Women In Transition
compiled by Janice Grana
Struggles and Joys of womanhood in poetry and prose
$3.95 paperback, photographs
ISBN 0-89202-005-9

1888 Century Park East • (213) 553-7012
Los Angeles, California 90067
Acton House
PUBLISHERS

PHILOTHERAPY By
I. E. BREITNER M.D.

"a new revolutionary approach to Psychotherapy by a L.I. Psychiatrist"—Mass Physician.

"an important message"
—Psychiatry.

"a new method and technique"
—Adolescence.

$12.00 ISBN 0-914252-003

THE LIFE OF THE VICTIM
by I. E. BREITNER M.D.

All of us are victims, struggling with external and internal forces through the Three Phases of Human Life

Prepub . . . $9.50 ISBN 0-918066-07-7

IMIBOOKS PUBLICATIONS
Box 9 New York 11548.

written in a style that conveys something of the dramatic power that must have characterized Saint Paul's own preaching. Paul is, in this exposition, a theological (not a political) revolutionary who became the vital ideological foundation for historic Christianity even more than did the life and teachings of Jesus of Nazareth. In this Grant comes perilously close to the old antithesis of Paul versus Jesus. Does it need to be either/or—why not both/and? Grant has hardly proved a necessary contradiction.—R. Vernon Ritter, formerly with Westmont Coll. Lib., Santa Barbara, Calif.

Holmer, Paul L. C. S. Lewis: the shape of his faith and thought.

Harper. 1976. 116p. LC 76-9985. ISBN 0-06-064005-7. $6.95; pap. ISBN 0-06-064004-9. $3.95. LIT/REL

After the recent studies of Lewis by Roger L. Green, Carolyn Keefe, Clyde S. Kilby, and Corbin S. Carnell, not to mention older works, one might wonder what remains to be said about even so seminal a thinker, so brilliant a critic, and so able a defender of the faith. Yet Holmer has provided a useful study, pleasurable to the reader already acquainted with Lewis, and helpful as an introduction to those yet to discover him. A point especially well taken is that Lewis is not classifiable: the catholicity of his vision, his approach to theology—which manages to be original and orthodox at the same time—make it impossible to pin any label upon him. Lewis' objection to the modern notion that every particular human situation can be explained by a general law, and his rejection of the distinction between facts and values are among the many other salient points developed in this brief, closely argued study.—Douglas S. Marsh, Memphis & Shelby County P.L., Tenn.

Kelsey, Morton T. The Other Side of Silence: a guide to Christian meditation.

Paulist Pr. 1976. 314p. LC 76-9365. ISBN 0-8091-0208-0. $8.50; pap. ISBN 0-8091-1956-0. $5.95. PSYCH/REL

This book will serve those who look for help in practical attitudes and methods of meditation which are both within the Christian tradition and partake of the discoveries about the human soul made by modern depth psychology, especially Jung's. The author, an Episcopal priest, college professor, and Jungian analyst offers a basic perspective on meditation, emphasizing Western over Eastern attitudes. He then provides specific guidance in preparing for and practicing the inward journey, integrating the use of dreams, imagination, and a religious journal into the more traditional aspects of Christian spirituality. Though rich in illustrative material, this is not a simple how-to book. It will be most useful for motivated readers with some experience in paying attention to their inner life process.—Brewster Y. Beach, Member, New York Assn. for Analytical Psychology

Oden, Thomas C. Should Treatment Be Terminated?

Harper. 1976. 128p. ISBN 0-06-066345-6. pap. $2.95. PHIL/REL

In this cautious, responsible approach to a serious moral question, Oden offers the reader no fewer than 42 guidelines to apply in answering the question which constitutes his title. He makes it clear that he is not opposed to termination of treatment in every case, but is worried about the possible implications of the practice in a society which is, as he puts it, "trigger-ready to devalue life because of the population explosion, the world food crisis, lifeboat ethics and the triage mentality." Oden is aware that no simplistic set of rules can be devised to cover all cases. He rejects both the idea of preserving every life at any cost, and the opposite notion that any combination of human beings has a right to end life as though it were a matter of convenience, with no reference to social or religious implications. The author served as chairman of the Drew University Interdisciplinary Study of Treatment Termination, which was designed to determine the relative weight of the factors which cause people to decide upon treatment termination, and which found that the severity of impaired understanding was the factor given most weight.—Douglas S. Marsh, Memphis & Shelby County P.L., Tenn.

Pereira, Jose, ed. & intro. Hindu Theology: a reader.

Image: Doubleday. 1976. illus. ISBN 0-385-09552-X. pap. $2.95. REL

This excellent inexpensive volume renders into readable English important texts devoted to the major schools of Hinduism which have not been previously available in English. Works on Hinduism have neglected the systematic theologies of the 12th through the 17th centuries. Pereira's finely written and edited work presents a remarkably lucid overview of Hindu theology as well as comprehensive outlines of these systematic theologies in schematic form, integrating concepts with pictorial symbols. His book will be useful to anyone interested in a readable compendium of Hindu religious thought as well as to the student of theology in general.—Dennis Ryan, Dept. of Religious Studies, College of New Rochelle, N.Y.

BASIC FLUID SYSTEM ANALYSIS

WITH HP-25 & SR-56 CALCULATOR PROGRAMS

LIQUID & GAS FLOW

G.A. PATTERSON, Aerospace Systems Analyst

· Opens the door to practical engineering ·

— Surge, Jet Pumps, Two-Phase —

HARDCOVER, APPROX. 95 PAGES

12

BASIC SCIENCE PRESS

1608 VIA LAZO, PALOS VERDES ESTATES
CALIFORNIA 90274

Ram Dass, with Stephen Levine. Gr for the Mill.

Unity. 1977. ISBN 0-913300-17-9. $7.95; p ISBN 0-913300-16-0. $3.95. PHIL/

Ram Dass's latest book continues a amplifies the ideas expressed in his p vious works. Minimizing perso "his-story," he emphasizes explo tion of the routes a spiritual seeker c use to reach God. He does include ecdotes of experiences with his guru well as with well-known figures such Elizabeth Kubler-Ross and othe Since the methods by which one m "become God" vary with the indivi ual, Ram Dass catalogs the numero "lineages" such as Zen, Hindu, a Sufi, to which one may be drawn as t spiritual journey progresses. Anticip ing the doubts of skeptics, Ram Da deliberately avoids "coming on" to t reader. His primary audience, ho ever, will be those who have alrea had some exposure to mysticism. Mike Fichtelman, Lynbrook P.L., N.

Towner, W. Sibley. How God Dea with Evil.

Westminster. (Biblical Perspectives on Curr Issues) 1976. index. ISBN 0-664-24127-1. pa $4.95. R

One of the least tractable problems Christian apologetics is the one of pa and evil. This latest effort at an answ is not so much a theodicy as it is an e ercise in biblical theology attempting show that ultimately wrath and jud ment have no significance because t Bible places the motif of divine retrib tion within the larger framework God's redemptive purpose. The i tended audience is ministers, theolog cal professionals, and interested la men. Towner is nontechnical and co cise, but his Barthian presupposition get in the way of his critique of the hi toric Christian position. However, th logic of abler innovators than Towne has faltered on the orthodox creeds. C S. Lewis' The Problem of Pain is muc more sympathetic and intellectually sa isfying.—Joseph McDonald, Learnin Resources Center, Triton Coll., Rive Grove, Ill.

Washbourn, Penelope. Becoming Wom an: the quest for wholeness in female ex perience.

Harper. 1976. 176p. index. ISBN 0-06-069259-4 $8.95. PSYCH/RE

Becoming Woman reflects the author' profound personal honesty and th depth and richness of her religious philosophical, and psychological back ground. She investigates our Weste culture's destructive mythology con cerning the nature of women, and it lack of ritualized events to help woma pass "gracefully" through the critica stages of feminine initiation (such a menstruation, first sexual intercourse childbirth). Courageously, Washbour proposes a new spiritual definition o the feminine, which breaks through so cial expectations and aims at a fuller more conscious individual participatio in the sacredness of the female biologi cal processes, the acceptance of the ne cessity for each woman to develo growth goals toward her own persona centering, and the enrichment of th gnificant relationships in her life. I eartily recommend this work to any eader, male or female, interested in ne rebirth of truly feminine values in n age still dominated by patriarchal at- tudes.—Julie Bresciani, Dept. of Psychology, Marymount Manhattan Coll., New York

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

erendzen, Richard & others. Man Discovers the Galaxies.

Science History Pubs., 156 5th Ave., N.Y.C. 10010. 1976. 228p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-4688. ISBN 0-88202-023-4. $15.95; pap. $6.95.
HIST/ASTRONOMY

y focusing on the "great debate" of 920 between Harlow Shapley and H. . Curtis, Berendzen and his colagues clarify the similarities and differences among theories concerning ne size, shape, and structure of the Milky Way and extragalactic nebulae. hough structured to be used as a text or courses on the history of astronoy, the book is equally suited for use y interested lay readers. It is well illusrated and replete with references and hort biographies of important astronoers and physicists. The only shortomings are a too-brief index and a cattering of irritating typographical erors. Recommended for public, high chool, and college libraries.—Joel Davis, formerly with Ventura Lib. Services Agency, Calif.

Haining, Peter. The Compleat Birdman: an illustrated history of man-powered flight.

St. Martin's. Feb. 1977. 160p. illus. index. LC 76-26718. ISBN 0-312-15610-3. $8.95.
HIST/AERONAUTICS

Through the centuries humans have ried to get off the ground via some variation of flapping their arms or working evers or pedaling; but with a regularity ard to find in any other enterprise, heir efforts have not worked. British uthor Haining attempts in this episodic chronology to sketch this odd branch of aviation, and finds it difficult to maintain an air of whimsy with the veritable ain of wing-festooned unfortunates who have optimistically thrown themelves off assorted high places. Haining ives less attention to modern efforts han to the ancients, and he includes eferences to literary and mythical liers. Though well illustrated throughout, this work resembles some of the levices it describes: it barely gets off he ground.—Mel D. Lane, Sacramento, Calif.

The International Book of Wood.

S. & S. 276p. 1976. color illus. index. LC 76-15048. ISBN 0-671-22436-0. $29.95.
CRAFTS/TECH

The subject is wood, from its anatomy nd folklore to its myriad uses in art, architecture, industry, and recreation. The format gives preeminence to rather well-done illustrations, but this is not a "picture book" in the strictest sense. A fascinating variety of information is presented in 100 brief essays on such diverse topics as "Veneering" and "Wood in Flight," and the book's final section offers a detailed survey of the characteristics and uses of 144 different wood types. Most enjoyable, but the price tag is rather high.—Philip M. Fragasso, Woburn P.L., Mass.

Botany & Horticulture

Fenten, DX. Greenhousing for Purple Thumbs.

101 Productions, dist. by Scribners. 1976. 192p. drawings by Maggie Baylis & Roy Killeen. index. LC 76-26055. ISBN 0-89286-105-3. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-89286-104-5. $4.95.
HORT

Although this book bills itself as "a guide to buying, building, and maintaining a home greenhouse," the sections on buying and building are a little skimpy. Its outstanding feature is the wealth of information it provides on growing different plants under greenhouse conditions. Recipes are given for mixing soils; a section is provided on growing vegetables in the greenhouse; and an excellent "bug chart" depicts insects and diseases, the damage they inflict, and methods of control. Good details are offered for building three redwood greenhouses. A source list is included for locating accessories and seeds. This attractively produced title would make a good addition to collections needing more coverage in this area.—Annette M. Milliron, formerly with Douglas County P.L., Castle Rock, Colo.

Heriteau, Jacqueline. The Office Gardener.

Hawthorn. Feb. 1977. 192p. illus. by Howard Berelson. ISBN 0-8015-5481-0. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-8015-5482-9. $4.95.

Tenenbaum, Frances. Plants From Nine to Five: growing greenery where you work.

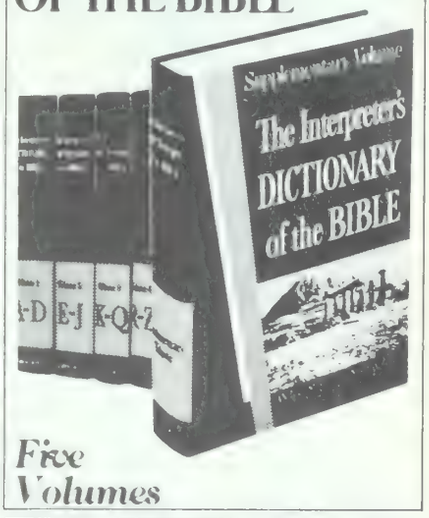
Scribners. Mar. 1977. 128p. illus. index. ISBN 0-684-14819-6. $6.95.
HORT

Here are two guides solely devoted to the concept of growing house plants in offices. The Office Gardener will be most helpful to office (or home) workers looking for solid information on adaptable, easy-to-grow trees and shrubs. Heriteau combines personal experience with the advice of professional interior landscapers into an intelligent discussion of cultural requirements, aesthetic groupings, and suitable decorative containers. Different plant varieties are carefully identified in terms of appearance; the inclusion of several common names along with the correct botanical name should aid plant identification. The "resumes" on smaller plants, however, merely repeat information readily available elsewhere. Furthermore, several plants are included that require a terrarium and/or special care, and this seems beyond the scope of minimum-care gardeners. In a separate section Heriteau provides shopping lists and assembly instructions for plant projects such as dish gardens, room dividers, and floor gardens.

Plants from Nine to Five offers about ten percent of the information available in The Office Gardener. The book has one plus: nice, homey black-and-white photographs showing real office ar-

THE INTERPRETER'S DICTIONARY OF THE BIBLE



Five Volumes

NOW completely up-to-date!

NEW SUPPLEMENTARY VOLUME

The more than 650 entries in this new volume update the original four volumes of The Interpreter's Dictionary of the Bible with information on the most recent archaeological discoveries and the best of contemporary biblical studies. 271 expert contributors, eight pages of new, full-color photographs, and eight pages of new, full-color Hammond maps make this supplement a must for every four-volume IDB owner! General Editor, Keith R. Crim; New Testament Editor, Victor Paul Furnish; Old Testament Editor, Lloyd R. Bailey. $17.95

THE FIVE-VOLUME SET

A complete treasury of knowledge for the serious Bible student! Explains and defines every Bible person, town, region, hill, stream, plant, animal, mineral, daily household object, and biblical doctrine. Also offers general articles on each Bible book, the Apocrypha, and other extra-canonical manuscripts. Five-volume set (including Supplementary Volume) $74.50

abingdon
Nashville, Tennessee in canada g.r.welch co., ltd

LIPPINCOTT

"An American pastime"

THE JOY OF RUNNING

Thaddeus Kostrubala, M. D.

"The testimony of a formerly overweight psychiatrist who bounced back from a heart attack to run marathon races, get skinny, and generally improve his disposition by jogging three times a week... His cheery, enthusiastic little handbook might inspire someone who thought of running as a bore to give it a try."—The Kirkus Reviews. "Mingles the experience of an accomplished runner with medical and professional knowledge." Library Journal

LC 76-9835

ISBN 0-397-01110-5 $8.95

ISBN 0-397-01169-5 (LP-102) $3.95 paper

J. B. Lippincott Company
East Washington Square
Philadelphia, Pa. 19105

A new resource . . .

MANAGING LIVESTOCK WASTES

An important new reference for research, technical and rural libraries. The Proceedings of the 3rd International Symposium on Livestock Wastes (ISLW-75) contain 180 papers that provide studies of complete waste management systems and report major research projects. These proceedings reflect a current technology in guidelines for designing economical livestock waste management systems compatible with environmental needs. Comprehensive subject matter includes treatment, economic impacts, legal restraints, uses as feed and energy, runoff control and other pertinent information vital to poultry, beef, dairy and swine systems. 8¼ x 11¼ in., 624 pages.

ISBN 0-916150-00-3 $32.50

American Society of Agricultural Engineers
P.O. Box 410 St. Joseph, MI 49085

rangements—many done by amateurs. Growing instructions for specific plants here range from good to vague to nonexistent; especially odd is the fact that no information is given about the different varieties of chlorophytum, dieffenbachia, and plectranthus australis. There is little in this book to justify the purchase price.—Judith Israel, Dare County Lib., Manteo, N.C.

Kramer, Jack. Your Window Greenhouse.

Crowell. Mar. 1977. 160p. photogs. drawings by Adrian Martinez. LC 76-27884. ISBN 0-690-01193-8. $7.95; pap. ISBN 0-690-01199-7. $4.95. HORT

In previous works, the prolific Kramer has written about growing plants in regular and underground greenhouses. He now turns to window greenhouses, those attached to the outside or inside of a regular window in the house. In the first fourth of the book he describes various types of structures, lists materials and tools needed, and shows how to construct several different greenhouses. Some of his statements seem rather unnecessary: for example, when discussing pots, Kramer says, "Select containers of suitable colors and materials that harmonize with the room." This portion of the book might be of use to those interested in building a window greenhouse. Unfortunately, the remaining three-quarters of Your Window Greenhouse consists of lists of plants, with a few cultural hints; and this information is available in many other plant books in more detail. This title is not worth the price for the small amount of new and useful information it contains.—Marilyn Chandler, Brooklyn P.L.

Health & Medicine

Brody, Jane E. with Arthur I. Holleb, M.D. You Can Fight Cancer and Win.

Quadrangle, dist. by Harper. Feb. 1977. 225p. illus. index. LC 76-9693. ISBN 0-8129-0659-4. $12.50. MED

Brody, science writer for the New York Times, and Dr. Holleb, of the American Cancer Society, cover just about everything the general reader might want to know about the causes and prevention of cancer, the various therapies currently used, and the possibility of future control of the disease. Much of this has been well covered in Ronald Glasser's recent The Greatest Battle (LJ 12/1/76) and in Ernest Rosenbaum's Living with Cancer (LJ 9/15/75), but Brody and Holleb provide, in addition, information on finding the best treatment, with lists of cancer centers and hospitals with approved cancer programs. They include excellent advice on giving up smoking, rehabilitation after surgery, avoiding quacks, returning to work, financing treatment, and helping both patient and family cope with stress and emotional problems. The book is often repetitious and occasionally oversimplified, but it is very readable, and the endorsement of the American Cancer Society makes it undoubtedly authoritative.—Peggy Champlin, California State Univ. Lib., Los Angeles

Chafetz, Morris, E., M.D. Why Drinking Can Be Good For You.

Stein & Day. 1976. 191p. index. LC 76-1593 ISBN 0-8128-2108-7. $8.95.

Fajardo, Roque. Helping Your Alcoholic Before He or She Hits Bottom.

Crown. 1976. 178p. index. LC 76-15380. ISB 0-517-52682-4. $7.95.

Shore, Richard S., M.D. & John M Luce, M.D. To Your Health: the pleasures, problems, and politics of alcohol.

Continuum: Seabury. 1976. 252p. index. LC 7 16050. ISBN 0-8164-9298-0. $11.95. HEAL

No single model, simple or complex yet satisfactorily explains the causes o human alcoholism. As a corollary, n single effective program exists in this o any other country to combat the prob lem. These three titles propose diffe ent "treatment" methods.

Chafetz, a psychiatrist with blue-rib bon credentials in the field of alcoho and drug abuse study, firmly believe that sociocultural pressures shape ou drinking patterns. This book is largel an attempt to educate individuals in th truths, half-truths, and fallacies whic surround our nation's boozing habits It recognizes that alcohol is here t stay, whether obtained from fortifie pop wines, from the haut-Médoc, fron your own dandelion patch, or else where. Rational examples are present ed from the disciplines of law, medi cine, economics, and psychology t persuade readers that moderation is th key. Unfortunately, no suggestions ar offered for getting this pitch to the read ers who could most benefit. Recom mended for secondary school and pub lic libraries.

Fajardo, a counselor at and directo of the Azalea Center in Nashville, of fers moralistic pap for relatives of alco holics. His program of "guided inter vention" subjects alcoholics to a "love cure" reminiscent of Mrs. Wood's East Lynne. Unless "your beloved alcohol ic" kicks the "loathsome disease" and joins Alcoholics Anonymous or group therapy sessions, all familial love and support is withdrawn. Remember dearie, that though you may "cry a little inside," you must "give him up because you love him." If the poorly designed and poorly described therapy is effective, you can take him back if he agrees that "the only no-no is not keeping up with the therapeutic activity you have urged." Recommendation: no-no!

Drs. Shore and Luce, from their long experience in working for private and public drug and alcohol abuse programs in California, seriously review alcohol and alcoholism for other health professionals. Introductory chapters provide an interesting, if long-winded, history of the drug from its earliest use up to the present time. Several succeeding chapters cover ethanol's metabolic, pharmacological, physical, behavioral, and mental effects. The polish and clarity of these pages rank them among the best now available on the subject. Past and present etiological thinking is next explained and correlated with earlier material. It suggests that for every person who is alcohol dependent, there is somewhere a program developed to solve the case. Ten proposals are made to deal with problem drinking: four fos on the production, advertising, and stribution of alcoholic beverages; ree cover legal actions open to the ates; and three deal with needed so- medical action. All are reasonable. l are stopgaps until political, scientif-, educational, anthropological, psy- ological, cultural, and personal view- ints are merged. Recommended for search libraries.—Dade T. Curtis, Illi- is State Univ. Libs., Normal onley, Bernard E. Social and Econom- Aspects of Drug Utilization Research.

Drug Intelligence Pubs., Hamilton, Ill. 62341. 1976. 276p. index. LC 76-9598. ISBN 0-914768-02-6. $47.50. SOC SCI/MED harmacologist Conley provides the se- ous student and professional with a mprehensive overview and analysis 1960–1975 literature on federally sup- rted research on the socioeconomic pects of drug utilization. Where pos- le, the significance and accomplish- ents of the projects are outlined. Ex- ptionally broad in scope, this practi- l digest of scientific literature is ranged around ten areas of endeavor, ith numerous subdivisions covering search in drug education, distribu- n, formulary systems, insurance, d surveillance. Considerations of anpower problems and pharmaceuti- l economics and practice are also in- uded. Full bibliographic references ith an author and project-director in- x are provided. This should be a very eful guide for pharmacists, physi- ans, nurses, and allied personnel.— te W. Bestehorn, P.L. of Cincinnati Hamilton County oehn, Gustave H., M.D. Acne Can Be ured.

Arco. Mar. 1977. 128p. ISBN 0-668-04113-7. $6.95; pap. ISBN 0-668-04153-6. $2.95. HEALTH ermatologist Hoehn presents an ex- emely interesting theory of the most mmon cause of acne. Based on exten- ve observation and work with his own tients, he has concluded that fats and ls which are solid at room temper- ure—butter, lard, hydrogenated vege- ble oils—are the primary villains be- use they eventually cause plugging of l glands. His treatment includes a diet an (liquid oils, nonfatty meats, many uits and vegetables, little sugar) and metimes recommends temporary use tetracycline or strong facial cleans- s. Recipes for salads, nonfatty main shes, and breads and desserts using ght oils instead of butter are ap- ended. Although Hoehn's suggestions em sound and quite healthful, no con- usive, controlled experiment has yet en done to prove or disprove them. is book is worth considering for rger collections offering a variety of inions on a disease not yet fully un- rstood.—Frances S. Worthington, rmerly with P.L. of Nashville & Da- dson County, Tenn.

healy, C. Norman, M.D. 90 Days to elf-Health.

Dial. Feb. 1977. 256p. bibliog. ISBN 0-8037-6386-7. $7.95. PSYCH/HEALTH healy believes that most physical dis- ases have some emotional basis, and that ll health is a rare state among individ- uals in our stressful society. In working with patients in chronic pain, (he is the Director of the Pain Rehabilitation Center in LaCrosse, Wisconsin), he has developed a progressive training system for relaxation of body, mind, and spirit. This system synthesizes aspects of auto-suggestion, progressive relaxation, autogenic training, biofeedback, and psychosynthesis in order to achieve a relaxed body and alert, peaceful mind (not the "empty" mind of TM). Shealy also prescribes systems of nutrition, physical exercise, and habit regulation. His system has been proven workable; but, sadly, few readers will be motivated enough to spend three 15-minute periods per day to experience continuous well-being.—Roger Thies, Depts. of Physiology & Psychiatry, Univ. of Okla. Health Science Center, Oklahoma City

Shurtleff, William & Akiko Aoyagi. The Book of Miso.

Autumn Pr., dist. by Independent Publishers Group. 1976. 254p. illus. by Akiko Aoyagi. index. LC 76-19599. $14.95; pap. ISBN 0-914398-08-3. $6.95. COOKERY/HEALTH

As in their first work, The Book of Tofu (LJ 5/1/76), Shurtleff and Aoyagi have thoroughly investigated a food from the Far East which could be used to ease the world protein shortage, and written about it cogently and fascinatingly. Miso is fermented soybean paste, a nutritious source of protein which, like cheese, comes in hundreds of varieties differing in saltiness, sweetness, spiciness, and consistency. Recipes are given for spreads, sauces, soups, stews, desserts and some very un-Japanese things like avocado-tofu-miso dip. Many dishes, like spicy, chunky miso on eggplant, are immediately savored by Westerners while others, like miso–seaweed soup, take some getting used to. In the U.S., a few varieties of miso are available at some Oriental and health food stores, but directions for making it at home or even commercially are appended. The comprehensive explanations, historical notes, illustrations and varied recipes make this an excellent choice for collections serving Oriental cooks, vegetarians, nutritionists, and students of Japanese life.—Frances S. Worthington, formerly with P.L. of Nashville & Davidson Co., Tenn.

Studt, Ward B., M.D. & others. Medicine in the Intermountain West: a history of health care in rural areas of the West.

Olympus. 1976. 336p. index. LC 76-28520. ISBN 0-913420-66-2. $10.95. HIST/HEALTH

Medical care in the "Intermountain" region of the U.S.—Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Utah, Wyoming, New Mexico, and Arizona—has lagged considerably behind that of the East and West Coast states. The first third of this volume consists of interesting historical chapters which, though based largely on secondary sources, serve mainly to document this fact. The second third of the book presents statistical evidence to describe the amount of health care presently available and to document the consequences of this pau-

The gentleman on the right gives not even the slightest hint of the richness of the 148 full-color illustrations to be found in a valuable new reference work we have just published.

The Johns Hopkins Atlas of Human Functional Anatomy is available in both hardcover and paperback editions. It is illustrated by world-renowned medical illustrator Leon Schlossberg, with text edited by George D. Zuidema, M.D., professor and director of the department of surgery of The Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine.

With the 148 color illustrations showing all systems and organs of the human body, this totally new atlas will be an indispensable reference for students and all others who need a succinct yet comprehensive guide to human anatomy. The labeled illustrations and accompanying descriptions, each written by a leading specialist from the Johns Hopkins faculty, have been carefully prepared to aid understanding of the physiology and interrelation of all bodily systems. The emphasis throughout is on functional living anatomy.

The Johns Hopkins Atlas of Human Functional Anatomy. Leon Schlossberg and George D. Zuidema, M.D.
120 pages. 8½ x 11. LC 76-17236
0-8018-1802-8 $16.50
0-8018-1878-8 $ 6.95 paperback

The illustrations in the atlas are also available as a set of forty color slides conveniently packaged in a binder. They may be obtained unlabeled $45.00 labeled $55.00

Please write to us for a full-color brochure which gives a complete list of plates and information about contents and contributors, as well as sample color illustrations suitable for posting. We will also be glad to send, upon request, a catalog describing other recent medical titles.

from Johns Hopkins

The Johns Hopkins University Press
Baltimore, Maryland 21218

city on the health of the people of the region. The final portion outlines various strategies used throughout the nation to provide health care in thinly populated regions. The book succeeds in providing a broad perspective on the area's health problems and in describing realistic means of coping with them. Rather than attempting to defend certain approaches or to argue against others, the authors have chosen to let the facts speak for themselves. There are good bibliographic references at the end of each chapter. This work should be of value to citizens and health professionals concerned with the Intermountain region. Recommended for university libraries and for public libraries within the states covered.—Frank N. Egerton, Division of Social Sciences, Univ. of Wisconsin-Parkside, Kenosha

Taylor, Robert B., M.D. Welcome to the Adult Generation: a doctor's guide to the middle years.

Acropolis. Feb. 1977. 200p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-39649. ISBN 0-87491-171-0. $10. PSYCH/HEALTH Taylor, a family physician, discusses the physical and psychological phenomena of aging—change of life, physical fitness and appearance, dietary needs—and admonishes midlifers to avoid overindulgence in such things as food, drink, tobacco, drugs, and even work. In a light, nontechnical style he reviews the rather depressing mechanisms and therapies of diseases that threaten the beginning-to-be-old—diabetes, heart disease, cancer, etc.—and he writes briefly about common emotional and adjustment problems. A fairly complete how-to book for general readers.—George Adelman, Neurosciences Research Program, M.I.T.

Natural History & Zoology

McClung, Robert M. Lost Wild Worlds: the story of extinct and vanishing wildlife of the Eastern Hemisphere.

Morrow. 1976. 288p. illus. by Bob Hines. bibliog. index. LC 76-25851. ISBN 0-688-22090-8. $8.95; lib. ed. ISBN 0-688-32090-2. $7.46. CONSERVATION/NAT HIST

This book is a companion volume to McClung's Lost Wild America (Morrow, 1969). Unfortunately, trying to cover the entire Eastern Hemisphere in one volume has forced McClung to greatly compress his material. For each region he provides a sketch of the human history and follows this with histories of individual species and a brief summary. The story that emerges is one of human greed, blood sportsmanship, and ignorance. The popular style of the text and approach make Lost Wild Worlds suitable for public libraries and especially for browsing and YA collections.—Murray S. Martin, Pennsylvania State Univ. Libs., University Park

Mohr, Charles E. The World of the Bat.

Lippincott. 1976. 162p. illus. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-397-00800-7. $8.95. ZOOLOGY

Mohr, naturalist, speleologist, and author of many articles on bats and caves, describes his work with bats, as well as the work of other researchers. Bats are the only flying mammals, and this makes the discussion of their anatomy particularly interesting. Mohr's enthusiasm for his subject is contagious; and to aid those he inspires he provides an extensive bibliography. There are numerous black-and-white photos showing various species of bats and their habitats. This is a good book for those wanting an easy-to-read yet scientific account of bats and current research on chiropteran behavior, echolocation, and conservation.—Katharine Garstka, San Diego Zoo Lib., Calif.

Quinn, John R. The Winter Woods.

Chatham, dist. by Dutton. 1976. 124p. illus. by the author. bibliog. LC 76-18486. ISBN 0-85699-138-4. $8.95. NAT HIST

This season numerous books have appeared telling us that the great outdoors does not disappear in cold weather. Quinn has produced four pleasant, low-key essays on the hows and whys of enjoying the winter woods—centering around his home in New Hampshire. His writing is articulate and informative without being overbearing, and his own illustrations complement the text well. This is not a field guide; it belongs on the shelf along with such recent books as Donald W. Stokes's A Guide to Nature in Winter (LJ 1/15/77). A little expensive for what you get, but a nicely done piece of work which deserves a wide reading—despite the book's regional orientation.—Malcolm K. Hill, Haverhill P.L., Mass.

Social Science

Culture and Its Creators: essays in honor of Edward Shils.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. Mar. 1977. 296p. ed. by Joseph Ben-David & Terry Nichols Clark. LC 76-610. ISBN 0-226-04222-7. $15. SOC SCI

For three decades Shils has been absorbed in the study of ideology, culture, social consensus, and the intellectual in contemporary society. Now colleagues and friends, eminent in their fields (primarily sociology but also economics, anthropology, and literature) offer this Festschrift to him and these themes. With scholarship and astuteness they assess "the-end-of-ideology" (Raymond Aron, Seymour Lipset), the impingement of ideology on journalism (Morris Janowitz) and economics (Shmuel Eisenstadt), the institutionalization of science (Joseph Ben-David), the ideological roots of American education (Talcott Parsons). All contributions are fairly long and substantial, but variations in perspective offer diversity: Aron and Lipset are the most theoretical; Clifford Geertz and Reinhard Bendix, the most historical and cross-cultural. Saul Bellow, an unexpected treat in a sociology title, is decidedly personal and American. The viewpoint on the political commitment of the intellectual underlying many of these essays reflects Shils's association with the "conservative" Left. A biographical note on Shils beyond the brief introduction would have been helpful.

Recommended for academic and lar public libraries.—Phyllis R. Pose Queens Borough P.L., Jamaica, N.

Harbison, Robert. Eccentric Spaces.

Knopf. Feb. 1977. 161p. index. $8.95. LIT/SOC

This book is an unusual and spec pleasure. Harbison thinks on, around, through, and with speci spaces and things—specific garde rooms, machines, cities, novels, pai ings, maps, museums, and catalogs. creates a concatenated series of essa or meditations on "trying to live in t world," on "the domestication of re ity," on the complex intercourse th goes on among facts, feelings, a ideas, interiorizations and exteriori tions, art and reality. Yet though h themes may be abstract, his book not: free of the jargon and technicaliti of esthetics, literary criticism, psych ogy, or philosophy, it is a very perso al, intelligent, and stimulating ramb through the spaces the mind and bo inhabit.—Richard Kuczkowski, Dep of English, Bronx Community Col CUNY

Russell, Diana E. H. & Nicole Van V Ven, eds. Crimes Against Women: pr ceedings of the International Tribuna

Les Femmes Pub. Feb. 1977. 320p. ISBN 89087-921-4. pap. $5.95. PER NAR/SOC

Every library must have by now ma first person accounts of the injustic done to women in this male-dominat world. The bulk of this book is ma more such accounts, given as testim ny at the five-day Tribunal on Crim Against Women held in Brussels March 1976. The particular virtue this collection is that it inte nationalizes one's consciousness of th disregard in which women are held. U like "professional feminists" or del gates to the International Women Year Conference, many of these wor en, representing 40 countries, were dinary people speaking straigh forwardly about their personal expe ences of clitoridectomy, econom abuse, lack of child care, political to ture, rape, wife battering, etc. Little a tention was given to analysis and pr scription, although some participan insisted that bearing witness was n enough. World press reaction and the nancial backing of the tribunal are al documented, making this volume a t tal record of the event.—Janice Du ham, N.Y.P.L.

Law & Criminology

Hartman, Mary S. Victorian Murde esses: a true history of thirteen respe able French and English women accus of unspeakable crimes.

Schocken. Feb. 1977. 320p. bibliog. index. 75-34877. ISBN 0-8052-3608.2. $15. CRI

This study of murder in Victorian En land and France attempts to desens tionalize the crimes and to show th the murderesses were "ordinary wor en who found extreme solutions to orc nary problems." Hartman emphasiz the social milieu which conditioned th women's behavior and furnished the motives, as well as the pattern of th imes and the public's response to em. The murderesses ranged from adeline Smith, accused of poisoning r lover, and already the subject of veral fictional works and one movie, such lesser known figures as Angele Lemoine, who was accused of inticide. Each case is well documented, and Hartman's style, while holarly, has enough verve to appeal popular taste. Highly recommended r libraries whose patrons are interted in literature dealing with the role this case notorious) of women in soety.—David A. Dillon, Univ. of New leans Lib.

ustgarten, Edgar. The Illustrated Sto- of Crime.

Follett. 1976. 223p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-14756. ISBN 0-695-80624-6. $10.95. CRIME his book seems destined for the reainder pile. British in tone and cont, it covers seven major areas of ime with a recurring emphasis on urder. The crimes and criminals sected for inclusion are generally obure in this country and those that are ell known have received better treatent elsewhere. The text is liberally illstrated with well-selected black and hite photos that add spice to an otherise humdrum book.—Saul J. Amrsky, Albion P.L., Mich.

leggi, Nicholas. Blye, Private Eye: the al world of the private detective.

Playboy, dist. by S. & S. 1977. 205p. ISBN 0-87223-475-4. $8.95. CRIME win Blye is a private detective living d working in the New York City area. The author follows him through four routine cases that are not nearly so glamorous or action-packed as those of Philip Marlowe and Mickey Spillane. Pileggi provides a revealing and often startling glimpse into detective procedures, such as tracing down leads, dealing with biased lawyers and intransigent police, and manipulating the red-tape judicial bureaucracy to one's own advantage. As an authentic account of the world of private investigation this book will be useful on the sociology and crime shelves, while having appeal for the detective fiction reader. Recommended for most libraries.—Marilyn J. Sharrow, Univ. of Washington Libs., Seattle

Seashore, Marjorie J. & Steven Haberfeld with John Irwin & Keith Baker. Prisoner Education: project NewGate and other college programs.

Praeger. (Special Studies in U.S. Economic, Social, & Political Issues). 1976. 329p. bibliog. LC 75-23991. ISBN 0-275-56040-6. $21.50. ED/CRIMINOLOGY

During the late 1960's, the Office of Economic Opportunity launched "Project NewGate," a program designed to fund collegiate education at selected state and federal prisons. This volume is based on two follow-up studies contracted by OEO and HEW; other programs are evaluated as well, for purposes of comparison. Focusing on program progress and impact on released prisoners, the study (of eight facilities) clearly suggests that education does have a salutary effect on the lives of ex-inmates, that it is cheaper to educate them than to ignore them, and that despite NewGate's higher price tag, the dropout rate was lower than for other programs. Exciting reading for educators and criminologists.—Mark R. Yerburgh, SUNY at Albany Lib.

Tobias, J. J. Prince of Fences: the life and crimes of Ikey Solomons.

Internat. Scholarly Bk. Servs. 1976. 178p. fwd. by Ewen Montagu. illus. index. $15. BIOG/CRIME

Tobias, a noted British criminologist, has written a detailed history of the career of Isaac Solomons, a well-known fence in early 19th-Century London. Though the author does not agree, Solomons has been identified as the model for Charles Dickens' Fagin. The account is based largely on original documents and newspapers of the time and will interest historians and sociologists. The price and style of the book will limit its usefulness in general collections, however.—Sandra Smith, Serra Cooperative Lib. System, San Diego, Calif.

Regional Studies & Anthropology

Laird, Carobeth. The Chemehuevis.

Malki Museum Pr., 11-795 Fields Rd., Banning, Calif. 92220. 1976. 349p. maps. index. LC 76-13780. $15; pap. $8.95. ANTHROPOLOGY

The author, widow of a Chemehuevi, here records the history, myths, customs, and language of these native Americans who once inhabited parts of Arizona, Nevada, and California. Although much more readable, the information in this book is very similar to that contained in the old BAE Bulletins. Particularly interesting is the chapter

M.E. Sharpe
PUBLISHER

FORMERLY iasp INTERNATIONAL ARTS & SCIENCES PRESS

Semiotics and Structuralism:
Readings from the Soviet Union
Edited with an introduction by Henryk Baran
"A major contribution."—THOMAS WINNER, BROWN UNIVERSITY
352 pages $15.00

Fundamentals of the Chinese Communist Party
Edited with an introduction by Pierre M. Perrolle
A translation of the definitive Chinese book on the evolution of the Party since the Cultural Revolution.
252 pages $15.00

Communication and Cultural Domination
By Herbert I. Schiller
"Exposes real dangers in current trends and argues constructively for an alternate approach to communication policy."—EDWIN B. PARKER, STANFORD UNIVERSITY
136 pages $7.95

The Third Way: Marxist-Leninist Theory and Modern Industrial Society
By Ota Šik
"The first rough outline of a new model of society which could help to reduce East-West tensions."—VORWÄRTS
431 pages $25.00

L. V. Kantorovich: Essays in Optimal Planning
Selected with an introduction by Leon Smolinski
15 distinguished essays by the famed Nobel economist.
288 pages $15.00

Why is There No Socialism in the United States?
By Werner Sombart
"The questions raised by Werner Sombart . . . are relevant to politics in this country in the 1970s."—FROM THE FOREWORD BY MICHAEL HARRINGTON
221 pages $17.50

M.E. Sharpe
PUBLISHER

901 N. BROADWAY, WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. 10603

Appalachian Photographic Archives

"A final family portrait" from Shackelford's "Our Appalachia" (Hill & Wang: Farrar)

on Chemehuevi mythology, in which Laird explicates the exploits of beings such as Coyote (who is called "Imitator" by the Chemehuevis). A valuable work on the Chemehuevis, for anthropology and native American collections.—Charles H. Kemp, Pacific Univ. Lib., Forest Grove, Ore.

Shackelford, Laurel & Bill Weinberg, eds. Our Appalachia: an oral history.

Hill & Wang: Farrar. Feb. 1977. 354p. photogs. by Donald R. Anderson. index. $12.95. CULTURAL STUDY

Drawing on the extensive file of taped interviews of the Appalachian Oral History Project at Alice Lloyd College, the editors have compiled what amounts to a social history of the central Appalachian region and thus at least partially fills a major gap in the literature on Appalachia. In a fascinating, informative, and exceptionally readable manner, Our Appalachia tells the rich and varied story of the central Appalachian region in the words of those who have lived the story. The editors have made their selections with care, avoiding the overly sentimental yet retaining the special charm of the spoken word. Each selection provides pertinent information, and the editors' continuing commentary lends all the selections a cohesiveness that is remarkable in a book of this type. The 60 photographs which accompany the text were unfortunately not available to this reviewer for examination but should add to the strength of the book. An altogether successful example of what oral history can be.—Mark Neyman, Washington County P.L., Marietta, Ohio

Tcholakian, Arthur. Armenia: state, people, life.

Paradon Pub. Co., 175 5 Ave., N.Y.C. 10010. 1976. 320p. photogs., some color by the author. LC 75-43432. $30. PHOTOG/REGIONAL STUDY

The first installment in a planned trilogy on the U.S.S.R., this is an ambitious production which would have benefited from a somewhat narrower scope: many interesting subjects are treated too briefly and some boring ones too extensively. The weakest section of the book is that offering too-numerous portraits of dour party officials and other important personages. Only the portraits of artists escape the prevailing yearbook style. Tcholakian, of Armenian background himself, relies heavily on stark black-and-white photography, giving the book a dark and brooding atmosphere reflecting Armenia's own tragic past. The short but intensely evocative color section provides a much-needed contrast. The text is flawed by typos and some infelicities of style. There is a stiff self-consciousness in the book which suggests the need for official approvals. Nevertheless, the photos show profound appreciation of Armenia and would be useful in travel and ethnic sections of large libraries.—Barbara Conaty, Madison P.L., Wis.

SPORTS & RECREATION

Arnold, Richard. Better Ice Skating.

Sportshelf, Box 634, New Rochelle, N.Y. 10802. 1976. 96p. illus. $10.50. SPORTS

A narrative text, diagrams, and photos provide instructions for the basic positions and figures of ice skating; and introductions to dance skating and free skating make up the major portion of this beginner's book. The novice will acquire a familiarity with the basic techniques, but the book is not as detailed as are Tina Noyes's I Can Teach You To Figure Skate (LJ 9/1/73) and Howard Bass's Let's Go Skating (LJ 3/1/76). The author's enthusiasm is obvious, and he does recommend skati just for the fun of it, even on ponds a other natural ice.—Barbara Schul Chillicothe, Ohio

Associated Press Sports Staff. A C tury of Champions.

Macmillan. 1976. 256p. photogs., some co LC 76-23446. $12.95. SPO

This is a history of the highlights of n jor sports, with each chapter devot to a particular sport and written by AP sportswriter. In the case of thc sports that are considered major both amateur and professional ranks separate chapter is devoted to each s tus. Although the book will not tell a f of one sport anything new about his vorite game, it does provide a goc brief review of other sports with whi that particular fan may be less famili This is especially true with such less known events as the America's Cu This coverage and the many excelle photos make this book a worthwh public library purchase.—Don Mario Univ. of Minnesota Libs., Minneapol

Gilsvik, Bob. All-Season Hunting: guide to early season, late season a winter hunting in America.

Winchester, dist. by Scribners. 1976. 209p. pl togs. index. LC 76-44533. ISBN 0-87691-181 $9.95. SPOR

The author acknowledges the contrib tions of many outdoorsmen in the pre aration for discussing his highly sele tive topic, cold-weather hunting small game. Although some space given to hunting on opening day and little more space is allotted to deer hun ing, the value of the book is found the sections devoted to tips and tec niques concerning late-season and wi ter hunting. Cold-weather prepare ness is stressed for both the stalk and the overnight camper. The boc reads easily and covers the topic ad quately.—Donald C. Rowland, Blac Hawk Coll. Lib., Moline, Ill.

Gould, Bernard. The Horseplayer Guide to Picking Winners.

McKay. Feb. 1977. 125p. ISBN 0-679-50639- pap. $4.95. SPOR

Gould, a horse owner and breeder a well as a horseplayer and successfu businessman, offers what appears to b a simple method of beating the horse He calls it "substantive hand capping," and it is based on the ear ings of individual horses. By applying simple formula to past winnings an betting two or more of the highest rate horses, while taking into consideratio other factors, the bettor can win a cor siderable amount. This method wi work for both flat and trotting race and it avoids the pitfalls of professiona handicapping checklists of criteria. Ir cluded are explanations of types c races, track terminology, informatio on types of wagers, and a good descrip tion of the pari-mutuel system. The ad vantage this system seems to have ove so many others is that it is simple an easy to read and understand. Neces sary for collections that have a need fo this type of book.—Joy Hastings, San tiago Lib. System, Orange County, Cal if.

rman, Colin & Bill Beavis. Modern ope Seamanship: synthetic and natural ores.
Internat. Marine Pub. 1976. 110p. illus. index. LC 76-20290. ISBN 0-87742-074-2. $9.95.
SPORTS
his attractive book appears to have en written with one purpose in ind—the reader really wants to know e basics of employing natural and synetic ropes aboard his or her boat. early described are common knots 5), special occasion and fancy knots 7), emergency knots (6), whippings, lices, seizings, proper rope seamanip, etc. Numerous clear photos and awings enhance the succinct text, nich includes essential information on licing braided (synthetic) and wire pes and the difficult rope-to-wire lices. A distinguishing feature is that reful editing has ensured that the ok is not padded; it tells what most ippers need to know or have forgotn. Highly recommended.—James Taaar, U.S. Army Engineer Topograic Labs, Fort Belvoir, Va.

uchs, Arne & Patricia Skalka. Ski th Yoga.
Greatlakes Living Pr. 1976. 180p. illus. index. LC 76-42011. ISBN 0-915498-30-8. pap. $5.95.
SPORTS
th skiing and yoga have a number of voted followers; for those whose inests include both, this is a useful ok. Line drawings are used to illusate the various yoga postures, and getarian recipes and a glossary of ms are included. Because of the ique combination of subject matter, s is a suggested purchase for public raries.—Janice Marie Zinkl, Down Grove P.L., Ill.

acLean, Norman & Norb Ecksl. The asketball Quizbook.
Drake. 1977. 111p. illus. LC 76-16371. pap. SBN 0-8473-1323-9. $4.95. SPORTS ave you ever wondered what Connie erking, Henry Akin, Bud Ogden, and on Smith have in common? (They all ve fouled out in the first period.) ow about the former NBA player ose sister was Miss America? (Mel utchins) Trivia buffs will go bananas er this volume filled with hundreds d hundreds of similar questions and swers concerning pro basketball m its beginnings. It is also a picture llery of the greats, with some 100 otos. It is fun to look at, but you will ve to decide if your library really eds it.—Howard R. Downey, Bellingm P.L., Wash.

ager, Arthur. Underhanded Backgamon: a devious guide to the art of backnded backgammon.
Hawthorn. Feb. 1977. 128p. illus. by Roy Schlemme. LC 76-15764. ISBN 0-8015-8125-7. 4.95. HUMOR/GAMES his is the third "Underhanded" game ok published by Hawthorn, following Jerry Sohl's Underhanded Chess (LJ 8/73) and Underhanded Bridge (LJ 1/75). Nine chapters entertain the ader with questionable tactics, artiles, and stratagems designed to rattle e opponent, catch him winking, and ckpocket his wallet. Direct cheating is covered, and also featured are "fair-game" methods backgammon players must know in order to survive the cut-throat competition. In all, this entertaining book qualifies as a worthy addition to any game or humor collection.—Robert H. True, Columbia Univ. Libs.

Spanier, David. Total Poker.
S. & S. Mar. 1977. 222p. index. illus. ISBN 0-671-22441-7. c. $7.95.

Taetzsch, L. Winning Methods of Bluffing & Betting in Poker.
Drake. 1977. 138p. bibliog. LC 75-36140. ISBN 0-8473-1055-8. $8.95. GAMES
Articulately written, both titles will interest poker fans. Both should not, however, be compared to standards such as Oswald Jacoby's Winning Poker (1949) or Norman Zadeh's Winning Poker Systems (LJ 11/15/74) since probability is not heavily emphasized in either title.

Spanier stresses (and is at his best commenting on) various fictional poker scenes remarkable for drama, but not for poker ingenuity. Amarillo Slim, Johnny Moss, and Pug Pearson play Las Vegas championship poker, while Spanier uses a potpourri of probability, money management, pot value, and player psychology to explain their moves. The book is shot through with chapters on poker in movies and fiction and with actual, well-analyzed poker hands.

Taetzsch discusses poker as an intimate, weekly affair played among similar, determined personalities. He stresses reading cards and players, betting patterns, building pots, and bluffing. The psychological analysis and the methods used in explaining "how to win" are unique since the author stresses TA, assertiveness training, and other popular methods of understanding adversaries in competitive situations. The chapter on control and manipulation is a first.—Jack I. Gardner, Clark County Lib. Dist., Las Vegas

THEATER

Hart, Dorothy, ed. Thou Swell, Thou Witty: the life and lyrics of Lorenz Hart.
Harper. 1976. 191p. photogs. LC 75-23885. ISBN 0-06-011776-1. $25. MEMOIR/THEATER
Dorothy Hart, Lorenz' sister-in-law, offers her memories of Hart and adds the memories of others (George Balanchine, Richard Rodgers, Gene Kelly, et al.). The picture selection is good; and most of the captions, the lyrics, and some of the anecdotes of associates and friends are well chosen. However, a lot of the memoir is pointless. The background on Hart's early years depends entirely on the memory of others, and even for the years she knew Hart she says little of significance. Only in the final passage does she reveal the kind of insights readers have longed for. Although Samuel Marx and Jan Clayton's Rodgers and Hart (LJ 10/1/76) is not very well written, it contains more absorbing anecdotes than does this book; and it's much less confusing. It also has an index, which Thou Swell, Thou Witty sorely needs. As for Hart's "life," it remains to be written.—Richard M. Buck, N.Y.P.L.

Kotsilibas-Davis, James. Great Times, Good Times: the odyssey of Maurice Barrymore.
Doubleday. Feb. 1977. photogs. bibliog. index. LC 72-76182. ISBN 0-385-04953-6. $12.95.
BIOG/THEATER
Much has been written about the Barrymores, but before now there has been no full-scale biography of Maurice. Born "Blythe" in 1847, he took the name "Barry" when he went on the stage and, eventually, "Barrymore." He married Georgie Drew and was the father of Ethel, Lionel, and John. Great Times, Good Times is a delightful account of his life and of the theater in which he worked. It was peopled with Augustin Daly, Dion Boucicault, Augustus Thomas, as well as a host of Drews. It was a rich period in American theater and one that has not been so well chronicled as the earlier 19th-Century theater or that of more recent years. An eminently readable book that will have appeal.—Paul Myers, N.Y.P.L.

Reynolds, Nancy. Repertory in Review: 40 years of the New York City Ballet.
Dial. Feb. 1977. 352p. photogs. index. ISBN 0-8037-7368-4. $19.95. DANCE
Although this is a documented history of the New York City Ballet and its predecessor companies, it is also a fine tribute to the work and life of George Balanchine. Reynolds covers the 40 years of the company through the use of photographs, programs, newspaper reviews, and her own commentary. The introductory chapters written by Lincoln Kirstein, Walter Sorell, and Nancy Goldner add perception and insight to the understanding of Balanchine and his art. This work is not only a history of a dance company, but also the history of dance in America, as well as an education in dance aesthetics. Repertory in Review, along with Lincoln Kirstein's The New York City Ballet (LJ 2/15/74), provide the reader with inspiration and information about one of the greatest artistic achievements in America today.—Norma Feld, Rochester Sch. Dist. Lib., N.Y.

Cinema

Close Up: the contract director.
Scarecrow. (Close-Up on the Cinema). 1976. 457p. ed. by Jon Tuska. photogs. index. LC 76-41345. ISBN 0-8108-0961-3. $17.50. CINEMA
This anthology provides career sketches and checklists of and interviews with the famous (Howard Hawks, Lewis Milestone) and the unfamiliar (Joseph Kane, William Witney). Of the ten essays my favorite is David L. Parker and Burton J. Shapiro's clear, concise, penetrating study of Milestone. Also good are the pieces on Walter Lang, William Dieterle, Edward Dmytryk, Kane, and Lesley Selander. The book's major fault is Tuska. Although he reserves three intriguing individualists for himself (Hawks, H.

Bruce Humberstone, Yakima Canutt), he approaches them with too little detachment. Hawks and Canutt have been treated with more acumen elsewhere. The difficulty with career studies is to avoid making lists, to know what is important, and to bring critical judgment to bear on the material. Tuska loses sight of this almost all the time. This work initiates the series, but it's only partially successful. All right for film libraries.—Maryann Chach, Dept. of Cinema Studies, NYU

Cohn, Lawrence. Movietone Presents the Twentieth Century.

St. Martin's. 1976. unpaged. intro. by Lowell Thomas. illus. LC 75-26177. $17.95. CINEMA

This book is a photo album of the many people, events, and wonders that Movietone newsreels captured during its 44-year existence (1919-1963). All the photographs are in black and white, and because they are enlargements from film frames they are not too clear. Thomas, the voice of the newsreels, points out that in many cases the newsreels were staged or made up of news footage taken at different times. He lets us know that the Movietone producers were more interested in entertainment than information. Cohn offers a factual history of the newsreel in seven pages; the rest of the book is made up of pictures. All in all, the book never captures the flavor of the newsreels or of the era they were so much a part of.—David A. Green, Rhode Island Lib. Film Cooperative, Warwick

Duchess
Josephine Edgar

"An indisputably appealing romance...head and décollete shoulders above others of its kind." —Kirkus Reviews (11/1/76). "...a bonbon that will satisfy a sweet tooth."—Publishers Weekly (11/8/76). 288 pp. ISBN 312-22085-5 $8.95

St. Martin's Press
175 Fifth Avenue
New York 10010

Cowie, Peter. Finnish Cinema.

A. S. Barnes. 1976. 128p. photogs. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-498-02012-6. $6.95. CINEMA

Cowie is a founder/editor of the International Film Guide and a specialist in Scandinavian cinema. In this survey of the cinema of Finland, he points out that the industry is small mainly because of television. Even prior to TV, he notes, motion pictures were not plentiful because they were expensive to make and not very marketable because of the nature of Finland—a rural country with a populace spread far and thin. As a result, Finland has produced no great cinema giants, but it has produced good motion pictures such as The Unknown Soldier and The Earth Is a Sinful Song. From 1907 to the present, Finnish cinema has reflected the political and social structure of the country, and Cowie states that this fact has not been given much attention by students of film. With extensive photographs, a filmography, and a bibliography, this introduction could influence further study of the subject. Recommended for academic and public libraries with film collections.—Steven J. Mayover, Free Lib. of Philadelphia

Garrett, Gerard. The Films of David Niven.

Citadel. 1976. 256p. fwd. by Carl Foreman. ISBN 0-8065-0557-5. $14. CINEMA

The most startling revelation of this book is the miracle of Niven's stardom. Niven appeared in more than 75 films, only a handful of which achieved acclaim. Garrett is obviously fond of his subject and valiantly includes good points about Niven's performances in even the worst clinkers. In fairness, he also includes negative criticism from reviews. The format is the usual for Citadel film books: many many stills, credits, and brief text. British titles are listed with American equivalents. One wishes Garrett had devoted more time to The Rogues, undeniably one of Niven's most delightful roles, however the TV series receives only brief mention. The book is hardly essential, but it will be enjoyed by fans of Niven's autobiographies.—Ann Cook, Prince George's County Memorial Lib. System, Greenbelt, Md.

Liehm, Mira & Antonin J. Liehm. The Most Important Art: Eastern European film after 1945.

Univ. of California Pr. Feb. 1977. 460p. illus. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-520-03157-1. $23.50. CINEMA

Only the tiny Albanian cinema is omitted from this survey, which does include the Soviet Union. The title derives from Lenin's remark that film is "the most important art." Lenin was referring to the political value of film, and the authors examine the cinema of Eastern Europe in its political context. They present a balanced view of the situation in Communist countries: state support often aiding film makers, political imperatives sometimes stifling their creativity. There is a wealth of factual information in this book, with short discussions of many individual films and film artists. More than 300 illustrations are included. A valuable book, both for its account of Eastern European fil since World War II and for its examin tion of the interaction of art and po tics.—Earl J. Smith, Univ. of Nor Carolina Lib., Chapel Hill

Parish, James Robert & Michael I Pitts. The Great Western Pictures.

Scarecrow. 1976. 457p. ed. by T. Allan Tayl intro. by Edward Connor. bibliog. LC 76-282 ISBN 0-8108-0980-X. $16.50. CINEM

An A-to-Z listing of a "broad spe trum" of western films, ranging fro spaghetti efforts to myriad Zane Gr remakes. Cross-referenced for origin and foreign titles, each entry includ cast and credits, a synopsis, productio tidbits, and critical excerpts. course, one may quibble with the sele tion of movies (three of my favorit didn't make it: Monte Walsh, The Stall ing Moon, and The Ballad of Cab Hogue), as well as with the personal i iosyncrasies of the writers (particular an uncritical stance toward Joh Wayne); but the prolific authors' co tinued reliance on several top-notch r searchers assures generally high acc racy. Edward Connor has contributed no-frills introduction/history of th genre, and there are end-title bibliogr phies of radio and TV series and Western fiction.—David Bartholomew N.Y.P.L.

Valentino, Lou. The Films of Lan Turner.

Citadel. 1976. 288p. fwd. by Mervyn LeRoy. 76-26934. ISBN 0-8065-0553-2. $14. CINEM

Has Lana Turner ever made a goo movie? Did Lana Turner ever give good performance? What is a Lan Turner performance? The Films Lana Turner does not answer any these questions, but it does provid enough information about the fame glamour symbol to take the breat away from the most ardent fan. The lif and career of the movie queen are ex amined in detail, from her humble sta as a Hollywood extra through her i carnation as Madame X. There are bi graphical facts, excerpts from movie re views, a listing of all the star's telev sion performances, including program which utilized clips from her movies. Lana Turner fan could not ask for any thing more; more sober movie buff might not have the appetite.—Willia J. Harding, Free Lib. of Philadelphia

fiction

Bodard, Lucien. The French Consul.

Knopf. Mar. 1977. 388p. tr. from French by Ba bara Bray. ISBN 0-394-49321-4. $10.

Billed as an autobiographical novel this is more autobiography than novel and more journalistic reportage than ei ther. It is the story of French consul Al bert Bonnard, his wife Anne Marie and their child, set in Chengtu, China in the early part of this century, and o the consul's dream of bringing the rail road from Indochina to Chengtu. Bu essentially it is the story of China, its splendors and incredible filth, of smiles in the face of death, of scheming, of se cret societies; in short, an attempt to ake sense of that exotic country. In at respect, the book succeeds admira-y; it succeeds less well as novel, ing overlong, with seemingly inter-nable dialogue, but that is a forgiv-le flaw in a fascinating book. Bodard s born in Chungking in 1914 of ench parents; he is now with France-ir, an expert on Asian affairs, and the thor of, among others, Green Hell / 12/15/71) the story of the massacre Brazilian Indians, and The Quick-id War (LJ 3/15/67), about Viet-m.—Dennis Pendleton, Roanoke L., Va.

enner, Marie. Tell Me Everything.
utton. 1976. 230p. LC 76-17571. ISBN 0-525-1470-4. $7.95. F

orida Burns, author of syndicated ssip column "Tell Me Everything," es in New York's exclusive Dakota artment house, digs desperately for "dish" of which her column is com-sed, and agonizes about her life. For orida, a Jewish-American Princess m Texas, knows there's mush inside tough exterior and that, career or what she wants most is a man. anwhile, Florida's best friend Pam "Peaches" Rosen, plant shop pro-etor, tends the nonsprouting avo-dos of New York's "Quality Actor" son Jaffe and eventually moves in th actor and avocados. And all the ile Mike Markham, paper million-e and aspiring Rimbaud of Fast od, tends his expanding chain of ssy taco stands and fantasizes about mother of his future children. Real-Beautiful People (John Lindsay, x Reed, Rona Barrett) make bit ap-arances in this portrait of a modern ung media woman, and Brenner's arp, scatter-shot style ties it all to-her, even giving some depth to char-ers who can be described with cap-ns. Frenetic and funny.—Michele Leber, Virginia Beach P.L.

lvino, Italo. The Castle of Crossed stinies.
elen & Kurt Wolff: HBJ. Mar. 1977. 144p. tr. om Italian by William Weaver. illus., some col-r. LC 76-27423. ISBN 0-15-115998-X. $10. F st in a wood and without the power speech, the narrator and a castle full strangers recount their lives by ar-nging tarot cards upon a table. Soon ir stories—and those of figures like ust and Hamlet—are interwoven in a id expanse of cards. Never has the radox of freedom within limits been arer, for the tellers extract a whole rld from a set of given images. The e story and the similar Tavern of ossed Destinies are among Calvino's st provocative metaphysical games. e possibilities for life and art appear be finite, yet the relationship of the n to the signified is growing richer. eaver's translation preserves in Eng-h the crisp, distant style that is so ntral to the author's emblematic in-t.—Elaine F. Palencia, formerly h Harvard Univ. Lib.

eever, John. Falconer.
nopf. Mar. 1977. 167p. LC 76-19382. ISBN 0-94-48347-2. $7.95. F

eever's characters are strangers in the middle of society, at once both part of a social community and separate from any feeling of social well-being. In Falconer, Cheever has seized a potent metaphor for this disconcerting alienation: a prison inmate. Heaping irony upon irony, this prisoner is a well-bred college professor, a drug addict convicted of murdering his brother. Falconer Prison breaks Zeke Farragut of his addiction but embroils him in all the coarse, desperate gambits of prison life. Cheever sees this familiar tableau, though, through a characteristically brilliant warp, fracturing reality in a way that makes it more, not less, immediate.—Daniel Levinson, "Newton Times," Mass.

Cooper, Louise Field. Breakaway.
Knopf. Mar. 1977. LC 76-21125. ISBN 0-394-41044-0. $7.95. F

To middle-aged, widowed Hattie, the sudden invasion of her cherished privacy by her feckless brother, Sammy, who has moved into her tiny apartment with no obvious intention of ever leaving, creates an intolerable situation. A desperate need to escape from his irritating ways sends her off on a series of impulsive journeys—Vermont, Montreal, England and eventually, Avignon in southern France, where unexpected romance precludes forever any necessity of returning to her former life. Written with a deft touch, this is a gentle, perceptive comedy of manners whose quiet charm is most appealing.—Agnes C. Ringer, formerly at Free Lib. of Philadelphia

Davis, Mildred & Katherine David. Lucifer Land.
Random. Mar. 1977. 226p. $8.95. F

Mystery writer Mildred Davis has changed hats and, with the help of daughter Katherine, has written a Bicentennial novel. The action is set in Westchester County, N.Y., especially in the village of Bedford, before and during the Revolutionary War. Cassie, elder daughter of the Bedham family, serves as the focal point as she observes the progress of the war. Although some of the characters (most notably Cassie's mysterious love interest Gideon) are undermotivated, the real protagonists are the people of war-ravaged Westchester. The Davises successfully convey the paranoia of the age: neighbor suspicious of neighbor, families crushed and broken by the depredations of the British and Continental armies alike. The plot is not particularly believable and somewhat long-winded. Since the locales and army activities described are accurate, this novel will be of interest to local history buffs, but rather dull to others.—Virginia L. Fetscher, Katonah Village Lib., N.Y.

Echewa, T. Obinkaram. The Land's Lord.
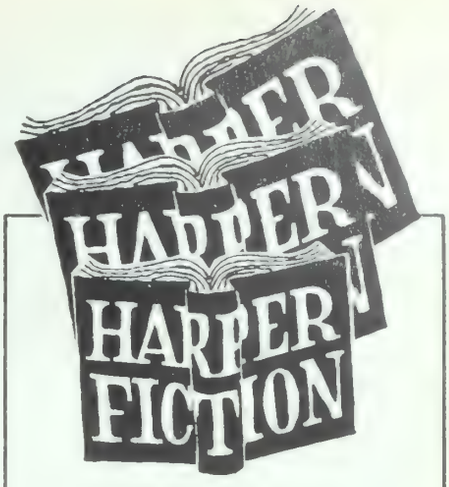
Lawrence Hill, dist. by Independent Publisher's Group c/o David White. 1976. 145p. LC 76-18327. ISBN 0-88208-069-5. $6.50; pap. ISBN 0-88208-070-9. $3.95. F

This is the brooding tale of an army deserter turned priest in an African village and his relationship with his servant Philip, also a deserter of sorts,



THE HERITAGE

Sheila Tagliavia. "Brilliant and tantalizing," says Publishers Weekly of this novel ripped from today's headlines—about the rash of kidnappings that have made wealthy Italians fear for their lives.
ISBN 0-06-014206-5
LC 76-9210 $10.00

THE WAY TO THE OLD SAILORS HOME

Thomas Baird. A taut and sophisticated new novel about a bizarre triangle—two women and one man—facing danger and desire as they canoe down a northern Minnesota river.
ISBN 0-06-010173-3
LC 76-26260 $8.95

AFTERNOON OF A GOOD WOMAN

Nina Bawden. Consummate craftsmanship and skillful characterization distinguish this new novel by the author of George Beneath A Paper Moon—about a dutiful wife who turns her back on the only way of life she's ever known.
ISBN 0-06-010237-3
LC 76-26261 $7.95

DRUMS FOR RANCAS

Manuel Scorza. An explosive story, critically acclaimed abroad, about the exploitation and brutalization of a Peruvian Indian community by an international corporation, police, landlords and government officials.
ISBN 0-06-013814-9
LC 72-9177 $8.95

THE MORLEY MYTHOLOGY

Austin Wright. The author of First Persons has written a novel filled with intrigue and surprises about a college professor whose successful career is shattered by an unknown tormentor.
ISBN 0-06-014751-2
LC 76-5553 $10.95

Harper & Row,
1817 10 E. 53rd St., New York 10022

who fled his tribal initiation and became a Christian. The only European within 30 miles, Father Higler pits himself against the native gods, but he is no match for the wit and wisdom of the old leader Ahamba, who knows that when you flee one truth, you must confront another, sometimes with tragic consequences. "Our fears are older than our beliefs," Ahamba says. The land rules and claims all; Philip comes to a bad end, and so does this rather murky fable of religion in two cultures. For collections specializing in African fiction.—Mary Soete, Phoenix P.L.

Edgar, Josephine. Duchess.
St. Martin's. 1977. 288p. LC 76-10551. $8.95. F
This rags-to-riches romance set in late Victorian London is delightful and cheerful reading. Adventurous shopgirl Viola is tops in beauty, also in self-confidence, good taste, manners, and dignity, an assertive "new woman" in another era. These attributes earn her the nickname "Duchess" and cause a variety of middle- and upper-class men to love her. Viola, after some setbacks, cracks through the stratified social structure. Eventually, she rises to stay at the level where she feels at ease and knows she belongs—the rich, pleasured, noble life. Contrast is provided by Viola's much-loved sidekick, Betsy, who finds happiness in simpler contentments. The characters are filled with life in this light and pleasing page-turner.—Normal Allenbach, Buffalo & Erie County P.L., N.Y.

Gainham, Sara. To the Opera Ball.
Doubldeday. Feb. 1977. LC 76-2773. ISBN 0-385-12133-4. $8.95. F
This complex modern love story is a study in contrasts—the hardy and the pampered, the young and the old, the rich and the poor—and illustrates how unimportant these surface human differences are. Rolf, an Austrian soldier, volunteers to escort teenage heiress Leona to the Vienna Opera Ball as a favor to his well-heeled colleague Kari. Leona's stuffy parents, who decided years ago that their daughter would marry Kari, are appalled when Rolf runs away with his wealthy blind date. Just as the reader begins to perceive the wayward couple as genuine characters, he is abruptly transported to the 1940's for the second part of the novel, to learn the hardships Rolf's mother endured as a German refugee at the end of World War II. Part 3 takes us back to the present, and climaxes in Rolf's arrest. Though this book may be rewarding to the patient, perceptive reader, it won't interest most light fiction fans, as it's heavy on description and a bit slow-moving.—Joyce W. Smothers, Monmouth County Lib., Freehold, N.J.

Grau, Shirley Ann. Evidence of Love.
Knopf. Feb. 1977. 227p. $7.95. F
Grau's new novel—her first in five years—is distinguished by fine, subtle characterizations of three generations of Henley men. Edward, a rich flamboyant sensualist whose "deepest emotion was amusement," sees love as novelty. His son Stephen, a minister and rationalist who planned his life and followed the plan, views human connections with detachment ("the instinctive neatness of an organized man") rather than any passion for the "community of blood" which drives his son Paul to an obsession with family history. Lucy Evans Henley, Stephen's wife, is the book's most affecting character. She knows that "love was not so common" and how twisted its uses and meaning can become. An intriguing, skillful novel, enhanced by Grau's splendid sense of detail in describing scene and event, and that more elusive territory, the human heart.—Janet Wiehe, P.L. of Cincinnati & Hamilton County

Keneally, Thomas. Season in Purgatory.
HBJ. 1977. 224p. LC 76-24458. ISBN 0-15-179922-9. $8.95. F
Author of ten novels, including Gossip from the Forest and Blood Red, Sister Rose, Australian Keneally has written a gem of a tale, perfectly framed and involving an irregular British Army medical unit allied to the Yugoslav Partisans in World War II. Pelham, a young surgeon, is parachuted into Yugoslavia to provide medical care to the 22nd Partisan Division and ends up commanding a ramshackle hospital on the Adriatic island of Mus. Here he treats the terrible wounds of Partisans who have been without medical aid for days or weeks, becomes acquainted with the oddballs and characters of the military units inhabiting the island, falls in love with the legendary Moja Javich, his Yugoslav nurse, learns first hand of the incredible bravery as well as the unparalleled cruelty of the Partisans, and eventually becomes himself an old hand, baptized by months of pain, fear, and fatigue. A simple story but compelling, with memorable characters, drama, color, realism, and sentiment, the book is a classic of its kind and a natural for filming.—L. W. Griffin, Univ. of Wisconsin Lib., Madison

Kennedy, Adam. Love Song.
Viking. 1976. 216p. $7.95. F
Home on leave from the Army, Kermit Docker finds that his love for Jossie Floyd, a childhood sweetheart, is strong enough to overcome his resentment and hurt over her marriage to somebody else. They get back together and, foolishly, Kermit decides to steal a few extra days of bliss by going AWOL. When a pair of MP's show up, trouble erupts. Soon, the two lovers are on the run, fugitives from a trumped-up murder charge, and the novel moves toward a predictable end. Set in West Virginia, this tragic tale of a doomed love affair will put off readers by its trite plot, superficial characterization, and poorly articulated theme.—Ron Carter, Dept. of English, Rappahannock Community Coll., Warsaw, Va.

King, Stephen. The Shining.
Doubleday. 1977. LC 76-24212. ISBN 0-385-12167-9. $8.95. F
The author of the popular Salem's Lot again promises to scare millions of rea[ders] with his new horror thriller. A sm[all] boy with the "shine," an affectiona[te] name for precognition, and a perso[ni]fied old hotel full of evil memories a[re] the chief antagonists in a tale th[at] blends innocence and insanity with e[x]plosive effect. Jack Torrance, an alc[o]holic loser, brings his son Danny a[nd] wife Wendy to the Overlook where [he] has taken a job as caretaker. Hoping [to] use the time to reconstruct their u[n]happy lives, Jack and Wendy settle [in] for a long winter of snowbound iso[la]tion but instead they are visited by h[or]rible presences. Their peace is deva[s]tated as Danny's visions of impendi[ng] terror and catastrophe become rea[li]ties. King builds the tension slow[ly] leaving incidental evidence casually [so] no doubt can remain that Danny is [in] desperate danger. In a fast-paced a[nd] gory denouement, the terror comes t[o a] violent end. King is a masterful tech[ni]cian of suspense whose readers as w[ell] as characters are the victims of his [re]lentless heightening of horror. Every [li]brary will have reserve lists a yard lo[ng] for this book.—Barbara Cona[n], formerly with Madison P.L., Wis.

McCutchan, Philip. The Guns of A[va]rest.
St. Martin's. Feb. 1977. 203p. ISBN 0-3[12]-35350-2. $7.95.
In this third volume of a series based [on] the adventures of Lieutenant Halfhy[de] and set in the 1890's, a high-ranking [of]ficial in the Admiralty absconds w[ith] copied blueprints of every British b[at]tleship and cruiser under constructi[on] planning to sell the plans to the Germ[an] government. Halfhyde is sent to [re]trieve the plans and the traitor. The a[c]tion includes rudder repair at sea, [at]tack by natives, capture, escape, p[ur]suit and an exciting climax in b[ot]British naval tradition.—Philip [E.] Marr, Riverside Jr. H.S. Lib., Texa[s]

MacManus, Yvonne. Bequeath The[m] No Tumbled House.
Doubleday. Feb. 1977. LC 76-16254. ISBN [0]-385-12034-6. $5.95.
Alyce Prather Laird, a sheltered sp[in]ster of 30, sets out from Boston to fi[nd] her lost family and claim a fortune. S[he] travels to California to the small mini[ng] town where her not too normal kin [re]side, and together they plan to bring [to] justice the murderer of her father and [at] the same time recoup their share o[f] gold mine. The story is absorbing, b[ut] loses believability because it is set [in] the 20th Century rather than in the O[ld] West. The writing is distractingly b[ad] in spots, and the two "heroes" w[ho] compete for Alyce are sketchily draw[n]. In the end when one wins out romar[ti]cally over the other it seems more as [an] afterthought by the author than a [de]conscious plan.—Barbara Parker, N[a]tional Gallery of Art Lib.

Murphy, Nonie Carol. Mutual Arran[ge]ments.
S. & S. 1976. 316p. LC 76-13585. ISBN 0-6[71]-22305-4. $8.95.
Angie, glamorous TV advertising mo[de]l, falls in love with handsome, worl[d] son after an orgasmic night in Paris. er New York career is threatened by e machinations of an upwardly mo- le Sammy Glick type who pimps for a redatory lesbian account executive. ngie lives with and is dominated by r wealthy mother, and responds to e pressures in her life by a com- ulsion to make herself throw up after ting, a main element in this insipid ork. Others are her affair with Jason, hether or not she will get the contract the Cassandra Girl, and a tantalizing nt of incest. Nothing holds together. he plot halts while each new character introduced. The settings are named Elaine's, Four Seasons, etc., etc.) but o attempt is made to describe the am- ence of these places or the things ey stand for. We get the words with- t the music. The characters exist in utline, cut right out of the com- ercials on your TV screen.—Joan cherer Brewer, Inst. for Sex Research ib., Indiana Univ., Bloomington

Norris. Leslie. Sliding.
Scribners. 1976. 192p. ISBN 0-684-14775-0. $6.95. F hese 14 stories by a Welsh writer are ot exactly tame but they are quiet. Of- n they focus on adolescence; a story ke "The Highland Boy" is reminis- ent of Joyce's Dubliners as well as oy's Life magazine. But Norris also rites a story of subdued violence that esembles Hemingway's Michigan sto- es. The boxing tale, "A Big Night," nd the suicidal hunting story, "Three hots for Charlie Betson," could easily t into the Nick Adams cycle. Fish, irds, hunting, exiles, the end of it all, ese are Norris' themes and he is more an competent with them. But one is ard pressed to escape the feeling that asically these stories are nostalgic ather than contemporary.—Dave mith, Dept. of English, Univ. of Utah, alt Lake City

Prose, Francine. Marie Laveau.
Berkley, dist. by Putnam. Feb. 1977. 348p. ISBN 0-399-11873-X. $8.95. F his novel blends elements of mysti- ism, sensuality, wizardry, and religion retelling the life of Marie Laveau, the New Orleans voodoo queen who died n 1881. A descendant of Makandal, oodoo high priest and leader of a slave ebellion in Santo Domingo, and Hen- iethe who shared his secrets, Marie is he daughter of Delphine and a wealthy reole whom her mother met and en- hanted at a quadroon ball. Marie's sor- ery includes dancing with a cobra and eeing through mirrors, and her visions nd conjury win treasures on the wheel f fortune. A healer, a magician, a dis- enser of love potions and fixes, she is n enchantress who symbolizes hope in world with an unknown future. And, ven some 90 years after her death, it eems that her secrets, her powers, her bility to make "everything be all ight" will be reborn again and again as ong as there are those who need her pecial intervention with the saints and vith fate. A powerful, mysterious ook.—Nina Kahn Fenenbock, Wash- ngton, D.C.

Selby, Hubert, Jr. The Demon.
Playboy, dist. by S. & S. 1976. ISBN 0-87223-465-7. $8.95. F
Harry White, the hero of Selby's latest novel, is a young businessman whose attempt to achieve middle-class stability is complicated by his overwhelming lust after sex and power. A good marriage, a sympathetic wife, children, and a considerable salary cannot ease Harry's awful itch. The more he realizes the irrationality of his impulses, the more demanding they become. Finally, in a desperate attempt to silence his demon, Harry commits murder and then kills himself. Harry's final existential act does carry some weight, but the long, disorderly journey toward it vitiates any real impact the novel might have. With its clumsy prose and a plot so simple it becomes excruciatingly dull, The Demon is a dismal affair.—William J. Harding, Free Lib. of Philadelphia

Voinovich, Vladimir. The Life and Extraordinary Adventures of Private Ivan Chonkin.
Farrar. 1977. 204p. tr. by Richard Lourie. $8.95. F
Voinovich belongs to those Soviet-Russian writers who have no hope for publishing their works in their own country. This satirical novel about the life in Russia at the beginning of World War II (written between 1963 and 1970) ridicules almost everything held sacred by the official Soviet propaganda—the army, the secret police, kolkhoz life, party teachings, and even the inviolable personality of Stalin. The author brings his antihero Chonkin into the most comic situations, which have however always tragic overtones. Ivan, a most ordinary soldier, is sent to a small village to guard a crushed plane and is forgotten there by his superiors. When he is denounced as a deserter, he manages to take as prisoners the whole regiment of secret police which is sent to arrest him. A marvelous novel in the tradition of Russian satiric masterpieces, such as the works of Gogol, Ilf Petrov, and Zoshchenko; highly recommended.—Jitka Hurych, Northern Illinois Univ. Lib., DeKalb

West, Paul. Gala.
Harper. 1976. 207p. illus. LC 76-9212. ISBN 0-06-014569-2. $8.95. F
A fictional sequel to Words for a Deaf Daughter (LJ 7/70), this novel is variously described by the author as a "scenario of a wish-fulfillment," an "autofiction," and "a pipe dream into prose." In it we meet Wight Deulius, a successful novelist, and his 14-year-old daugher, Mandy or Milk, who is deaf and mentally handicapped. Reunited for a two-week "gala" vacation (the child lives in Europe), the pair construct an illuminated model of the Milky Way in Deulius' basement. This mini-galaxy, which stimulates and provokes both parent and child, serves effectively as West's metaphor for the vast mystery of human communication and imagination. What remains memorable in this densely written wish-fantasy are the passages where West pre-

A major work by "one of the most accomplished, profound authors in European literature"*

On the Edge of Reason

by MIROSLAV KRLEŽA

"This novel is one of a long series which portray the greed and decadence of the Croatian middle class after the turn of the century.... It is present-day in content and interest....The translation by Zora Depolo seems first-rate. We can only look forward to more of Krleža's work being made available."
—Library Journal, $8.95
*Saturday Review

Also by Miroslav Krleža:
THE CRICKET BENEATH THE WATERFALL AND OTHER STORIES, $8.95
THE RETURN OF PHILIP LATINOVICZ, $8.95

THE VANGUARD PRESS, Inc.
424 Madison Ave., New York 10017

UNDER GEMINI

by Rosamunde Pilcher

author of Day of the Storm and Snow in April

"Pilcher's latest novel is delightful escapism, sure to appeal to female romanticists."—Publishers Weekly (10/4/76). "A perfect book to snuggle up with on a winter night."—Library Journal (12/15/76). 228 pp. ISBN 312-82915-9

St. Martin's Press
175 Fifth Avenue
New York 10010

A novel of humor, bitterness, grace

Warren, Robert Penn. A Place To Come To.

Random. Mar. 1977. 384p. $10. signed ltd. ed. $25 I

Jediah Tewksbury, a poor white from rural Alabama, grows into the complex, 60-year-old classic scholar who looks back and constructs his life, and this novel. The structure of both is determined by the deaths of people crucial to that growth: primarily his father; then his mentor Stahlmann; a Nazi officer, a classical scholar too, whom he murders; his wife, of cancer; the first husband of his mistress, which haunts his affair; and lastly his mother, which brings him home to the novel's title. Nashville, Chicago, and Europe are important places, too, and it all moves to the subtle variations of Time—in it, through it, outside of it, always measured by it. The book is wise and beautiful, full of humor, bitterness, distance and grace; subordinated, qualified, conditional, its truth, like the voices that compose it, is multiple, its parts are in careful poise with one another. An altogether masterful performance.—Dabney Stuart, Lexington, Va.

sents the father's perceptions and feelings in a straightforward manner. Much of the narrative, however, is overburdened with astronomical jargon and stylistic flights, and these nearly overwhelm a rather tender tale.—James Peters, Leonia P.L., N.J.

Whittemore, Edward. Sinai Tapestry.

Holt. May 1977. 222p. LC 76-28604. ISBN 0-03-018536-X. $8.95. F

This disappointing second novel ventures into Borges territory, but the story of a Jerusalem where the past lives, of the real Bible, and of the forged codex sinaiticus suffers from writing so careless that one must repair as one reads, and from the author's indifference to his materials. He repeatedly forgets one character's deafness, and speaks often of that character's successful disguises; he is 7′ 7″ tall. Another family's children are all begotten by strangers, yet Whittemore describes their "inherited" traits; the family produces a parody of biblical scholar L. F. K. von Tischendorf, for which this tedious ancestry is doubly irrelevant. When fictive events are uninterestingly and inconclusively absurd and when grim history (the Smyrna massacre) is used to give weight to fictive froth, we are not in Borges territory after all, but Pynchon's.—J. D. O'Hara, Dept. of English, Univ. of Connecticut, Storrs Yehoshua, A. B. Early in the Summer of 1970.

Doubleday. 1977. LC 76-16262. ISBN 0-385-02590-4. $5.95. F

The three stories in this collection present visions of worn-out, emotionally drained people deadened by war and conflict. In the title story, a teacher who watches his students go off to war learns of his own son's death in battle and creates an elaborate fantasy of mistaken identity rather than face the truth. "Missile Base 612" concerns a military lecturer who comes to realize that his rambling philosophizing has no relevance in the lives of the soldiers in the lonely outposts to which he is sent. In the final story, "The Last Commander," veterans recalled to active duty want only to sleep away their period of service. Roused to action by a visiting officer, they return to being "dead men" upon his departure. The protagonists are all nameless and faceless in these stark, unadorned tales. The writing is so perfectly matched to the theme and the setting that, in the end, the reader feels as if he, too, has been fighting an endless battle.—Marcia R. Hoffman, Woodbridge P.L., Colonia, N.J.

Science Fiction

Bryant, Dorothy. The Kin of Ata Are Waiting for You.

Moon Bks./Random. 1976. 220p. LC 76-8195. ISBN 0-349-40729-6. $6.95. F

After hurtling over a cliff in his car, a decadent young writer wakes up in pain in a strange land. He's cared for by racially mixed people who speak an unknown language. He finds that he's trapped on an island inhabited by the alien, pastoral culture of Ata, people whose dreams are reality. To have good dreams they must practice moderation while awake, so they eschew violence and overindulgence in anything. The society and its origins are described in anthropological detail. Using their collective mental powers the "kin" call people to them (like the young author) or send one of their own back to the work to try to reform it along their own nonviolent lines. While there's no violence on Ata, there's no passion either, or hilarity. Ata may be Utopia, but one wonders why its inhabitants don't go crazy with boredom.—Lucia Gauger, North County Area Lib., Glen Burnie, Md.

mystery ... detective ...suspense...

The Cold Room (Knopf. Feb. 1977. LC 76-22721. ISBN 0-394-40903-5. $7.95) is Jeffrey CAINE's first novel to be published in the United States, which would imply that there are more goodies from this excellent writer's pen. A young English schoolgirl, a smart aleck, a nuisance, and intelligent, is taken by her odious and sinister father to stay at a filthy East Berlin hotel, together with a loathsome East German guide (who may be more than that). Nothing is what it seems to be: the girl hears odd noises in a cupboard where a man may or may not be imprisoned; she may or may not have been drugged l her evil father, who also may not be h father; and the girl herself may be nutty as a fruitcake. The paranoid co fusion in identity and in time, whi may not be paranoid, is handled wi frightening effectiveness, and the sto hurtles along at breakneck speed into nightmare of horror. Absolutely tr mendous.

The China Expert (Scribners. 197 LC 76-23316. ISBN 0-684-14737- $6.95) by Michael DELVING is full deliciously and shrewdly observ crookedness. An American dealer Chinese antiquities is conned into wor ing for the British Secret Service track down a valuable pot, lent by t Chinese government for a special sho and mysteriously purloined from heavily guarded vitrine. It is possib that the recruiter is a double agent, a double crosses abound—the Ame cans, the Russians, the Chinese gover ment, the Chinese secret societies and it is possible that the Irish have hand in this as well. The espionage a pect is not particularly expert and t spies are wildly clumsy, which is n surprising when they keep trippi over each other. However the par about the antiques trade are right the mark, and the activity is lively nothing else.

The Winter Spy (S. & S. 1977. ISB 0-671-22375-5. $7.95) by Paul HE NISSART is, to be sure, a spy thrille but one considerably above the cor mon run. An influential man in t American government, a presidenti advisor, turns out to be a double agen working for the Americans and for t Hungarians, and Budapest sends the American expert to get rid of hi Things begin to go wrong: appoin ments are not met, things get lost, ar the agent cannot return, which may b a betrayal by his boss. With the help a pretty Austrian woman he hightails back to Vienna one step in front of t cops. However, the CIA manage grab him and turn him to steal from t Hungarian Secret Service a secret fi which has become a threat to déten between Russia and the United State There may be a little too much activit and the romance, of which there is lot, may be more suitable to a Fiftie Cold War fantasy; nevertheless, th minute-by-minute suspense is breath takingly exciting.

A Killing in Rome (Delacorte. 197 ISBN 0-440-04468-5. $7.95) by Robe ROSTAND is one of the East–Wes KGB–CIA thrillers, not especially ne but moving along fast enough. A sini ter KGB specialist in assassination ha been imported to the Russian Embass in Rome, which causes the torture an killing of an American agent and hi Italian informer and causes the counte importation of a CIA gun and his gi friend, a refugee from behind the Iro Curtain. In no time at all there is a su permassacre in the Piazza del Popol when it turns out that the reason for a this mayhem is the imminent defectio of an important Russian official accom panied by his diary. The CIA could us a good defector and a team is raised t the man across the border, which is course effected, but not without an azing amount of killing. There is a st at the end which is entirely too nif- for its own good, but it fortunately nes too late to spoil a spanking good n.

Three Potato, Four (Coward. Feb. 7. LC 76-22718. ISBN 0-698-10764- $8.95) by Wilfred GREATOREX is o one of the better defector thrillers. Russian, either a diamond expert or officer in the KGB, escapes during East–West meeting in Helsinki and s asylum from the English. The Brit- , more perfidious than usual, fear t détente may be imperiled and get e of their field operators, a rough, ody, and violent man with a Russian stress, to drain the Russian dry and n to return him to Moscow. How- r, the escaper has taken the pre- tion to bring over a fortune in rough monds as well as the Russian plans disrupt the international diamond rket. This sets the diamond cartel on tracks, and a disreputable bunch of fians they are too. It goes without ing that the Russian Secret Service on the trail as well, and a fine criss- ss of conflicting interests ensues. ceptionally exciting and full of veri- ilitude.

Patricia MOYES is one of my favor- s, a cozy and reassuring sort of ter, and The Coconut Killings (Holt. o. 1977. LC 76-22910. ISBN 0-03- 481-9. $6.95) is no disappointment. betts, still at Scotland Yard, is sent a charming Caribbean island (per- os Tortola) to investigate the mys- ious hacking to bits of a U.S. Sena- at a superposh resort. A black man, ular and undoubtedly innocent but tool of a group of mindless political ivists, is arrested. This is the trigger racial violence not helped by a re- rkably stupid governor and police ce. A second hacking to bits of an erican politician complicates mat- s most satisfactorily; the dénoue- nt is neat and the tropical paradise is tored to its idyllic state.

n The Rapist (Coward. Feb. 1977. 95) by Daniel FORBES a rapist with enchant for raping women while he wearing a rubber movie character sk terrorizes a small town in the uth of Ireland. First, as Mickey ouse, he attacks an American woman rist; then, as Stan Laurel, a chubby lescent; and, as Charles Laughton, ouple more. More and more come to nt, the attacks increase in ferocity, l finally culminate in murderous as- lts. The investigation is in the hands the provincial police, not unsympa- tic, not unimaginative, not in- mpetent, in short, human like every- dy else, and they uncover all kinds of sidiary wrongdoing. There seems to a very odd bunch of people living in land these days. This one is heads d shoulders above the competition: l of atmosphere and careful observa- n of an unfamiliar locale.

Francis SELWYN is by far the best iter going of historical thrillers, and latest Sergeant Verity goodie is led Sergeant Verity Presents His Compliments (Stein & Day. Mar. 1977. LC 76-41724. ISBN 0-8128-2148-5. $7.95). Of course, it takes place in mid-Victorian England. In this one, the indomitable Verity, still dogged and still unlucky, investigates a vicious blackmailer whose victims are no better than they should be. There is the full gamut of period wickedness, sadomasochism, grave robbery, and a spurious lunatic asylum, not to mention child prostitution and assorted villainies in the upper classes. There is an astonishing amount of incident, carefully researched, of which murder seems almost the least reprehensible. I wish, however, that the research had extended beyond the lower orders since Selwyn seems incapable of getting an English title right, a minimal objection in a sea of enjoyable skulduggery.

Things do not change and London still seems to be rivaling Port Said and the like for wickedness, sin, and corruption. High Places (Coward. Feb. 1977. ISBN 0-698-10799-3. $7.95) by Paul FERRIS is an up-to-the-minute London Metropolitan Police procedural. An inconvenient union official is wanted out of the way and a difficult but incorruptible policeman, neither very bright nor very lucky, is sent after him. It transpires that the union man fancies little girls and patronizes a brothel specializing in such persons. The awkward part is that the Home Secretary also goes to the same establishment and a coverup is necessary to prevent the government from being brought down. The policeman who believes in the equality of the law fights against a swarm of dishonest cops and politicians. The result is sour but true, a very English Watergate. Fascinating and convincing.

Elizabeth FOOTE-SMITH can do better, even though she doesn't write very well. Her second novel, Never Say Die (Putnam. Feb. 1977. ISBN 0-399-11840-3. $6.95), has to do with the sudden unexplained death of a psychologist, investigated by a private eye and his young and attractive female assistant with whom he seems to be on the verge of having an affair. At least they talk a good deal about bed. Anyway the trail leads to the second wife, who may be having an affair with an androgynous health instructor; to a jealous colleague; to the family of a recently dead patient; and to another, disturbed patient whose behavior is being modified by the psychologist. With all these fine suspects it is a pity that the solution involves not one but a series of wilted clichés and jarring coincidences. The charm is wearing rather thin.

Doctor, Lawyer . . . (Random. Feb. 1977. ISBN 0-394-40061-5. $6.95) by Collin WILCOX is a police procedural taking place in San Francisco and is not particularly good, not particularly new, and not a bit exciting. A rich swinging doctor is murdered, and left behind is a note threatening to kill a lawyer, a merchant, and a chief, in that order, unless a large sum of money is paid over to somebody who calls himself the Masked Man. Suspicion falls on a pseudorevolutionary group (what would we

CARNIVAL
by Julian Rathbone author of Trip Trap, Kill Cure and Bloody Marvelous
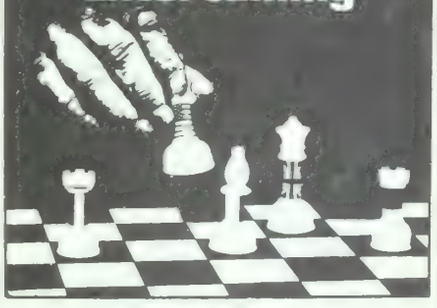
"Mix the feria of 'The Sun Also Rises' with a contemporary tale of rapacious men out for the kill and you will see what Rathbone's entertaining read has going for it." —Publishers Weekly (11/29/76). "The real hombre duro McCoy, always authoritative and literate."—Kirkus Reviews (12/1/76). 224 pp. ISBN 312-12250-0 $7.97

St. Martin's Press
175 Fifth Avenue
New York 10010

"Outrageously Entertaining" *



THE PREDATOR
by DENIS PITTS
A suspense story with a twist to almost every page, THE PREDATOR is the story of Jean-Paul Becker, the richest, most powerful industrialist in Europe. He calmly plots the takeover of an entire continent — by his private army.
"*...Difficult to resist" — Library Journal
"Steadily engrossing...Difficult to put it down" — Parade of Books
MASON / CHARTER
641 LEXINGTON AVE., NEW YORK, N.Y. 10022

do without the Symbionese Liberation Army?) but that fails when murder follows murder. It becomes clear that the Chief of the Police Department is going to be the ultimate victim, and the guilty party is snugly hiding in the Force. The plot is uselessly elaborate and punctuated by fashionable touches of gloom. The police seem to be unnecessarily inept, so much so that I wouldn't bother with this one.

The Man With Bogart's Face (Regnery. 1977. ISBN 0-8092-7937-1. $7.95) by Andrew J. FENADY is an untidy and clumsy pastiche of all the tough Hammett and Chandler novels and movies rolled into one. On the West Coast plastic surgery transforms a man into a copy of Bogart. He changes his name to Sam Marlowe, employs a sexy secretary, and opens a private-eye establishment. He gets a succession of clients, some sexy, some dead, and some rich and some poor. The plot, kitschie and phoney as it is, has to do with a pair of sapphire eyes and a surprising amount of deadeye shooting. This one is a wake rather than a tribute.

Her Death of Cold (Vanguard. Feb. 1977. ISBN 0-8149-0781-4. $7.95) by Ralph McINERNY features a new detective, a Roman Catholic priest, a tortured ex-curial lawyer driven by unhappiness and drink to a parish on the outskirts of Chicago. The rich person of the neighborhood, a spoiled, petulant, worried old woman, afraid of dying, afraid of and disappointed in her children, and tied by bonds of steel to the Church, withdraws all her money from the bank in cash. She goes missing, only to turn up dead in her kitchen, having been thawed out after three days in her freezer. The children, a greedy and unstable lot, are natural suspects, although a fake religious charity is also in the running. This one is interesting but readily understandable only by Roman Catholics, and they would have to be pretty devout to put up with the curiously censorious air of self-righteousness. For non-Catholics, revelation of unfamiliar practices and attitudes will not make up for a deadly lack of suspense in the plot.

I envy any library that has a large enough budget to afford such disn junk as Barlow Exposed (St. Martin Feb. 1977. LC 76-28040. $7.95) by wyn JONES, which is based on a ra er old English television serial (an i portant cop, ever so brave thou boundlessly stupid, investigates corr tion in the New York Police Depa ment, and I don't know what all). A cording to a rough word count, th are 32,000 words in this work, and price is outrageous for such a short n elette.

The newest collection of horror s ries edited by Hugh LAMB is called turn from the Grave (Taplinger. M 1977. $8.95). This one is also not che
Among the standbys are Maigret a
the Spinster (HBJ. Mar. 1977. LC
27416. ISBN 0-15-155550-8. $6.95)
Georges SIMENON (the copyright d of this one is 1942); E. X. FERRARS
33rd book is called Blood Flies Upwa
(Doubleday. Feb. 1977. ISBN 0-3 12121-0. $5.95); John WAINWRIGH newest is The Bastard (St. Martin
Mar. 1977. ISBN 0-312-06930-8. $7.9
—Henri C. Veit, Brooklyn P.L.

INDEX:

Adams, W. Y., 378
Allison, G., 390
American men and women of science, 368
Aptheker, H., 378
Arens, R., 390
Arnold, R., 400
Ash, J., 367
Ashcraft, N., 392
ASLA Interlibrary Cooperation Subcommittee, 343
Associated Press Sports Staff, 400

Barnett, G. L., 384
Barnett, M. R., 390
Bellas, R. A., 384
Berendzen, R., 395
Better Homes and Gardens creative crafts and stitchery, 373
Blocker, J. S., 378
Bodard, L., 402
Boulding, E., 379
Brenner, M., 403
Brody, J. E., 396
Brownell, B. A., 378
Bryant, D., 406
Bryson, T. A., 390
Bumgarner, M. A., 383

Caine, J., 406
Calvino, I., 403
Carmichael, J., 367
Carter, E., 384
Chafetz, M. E., 396
Chandler, R., 384
Cheever, J., 403
Clecak, P., 367
Clemens, S. L., 385
Close up, 401
Clutton, C., 371
Cochran, T. C., 377
Cohn, L., 402
Congressional Quarterly, 372
Conley, B. E., 397
Cooper, L. F., 403
Corman, C., 389
Costello, J., 379
Cowie, P., 402
Culture and its creators, 398

Dali, S., 372
Dalton, D., 388
Dank, M., 379
Davis, H. E., 379
Davis, M., 403
Dawisha, A. I., 391
Delving, M., 406
Detente and defense, 391
Dobyns, H. F., 379
Donaldson, S., 385
Doyle, J. M., 343
Draper, H., 391
Dyer, C., 383

Echewa, T. O., 403
Edgar, J., 404
Eisler, R. T., 367
Emmett, K., 369
Encyclopedia of swimming, 372

Fajardo, R., 396
Febvre, L., 380
Feininger, A., 374
Fenady, A. J., 408
Fenten, DX, 395
Ferlazzo, P. J., 385
Ferrar, E. X., 408
Ferris, P., 407
Fogelin, R. J., 389
Foote-Smith, E., 407
Forbes, D., 407

Gainham, S., 404
Gamberg, R., 378
Gambrill, E. D., 392
Garner, P., 373
Garrett, G., 402
Gilsvik, B., 400
Gould, B., 400
Gowin, E., 374
Grant, M., 393
Grau, S. A., 404
Graves, R. P., 374
Greatorex, W., 407

Haining, P., 395
Haller, J., 383
Hallett, G., 389
Harbison, R., 398
Hart, D., 401
Hartman, M. S., 398
Haseler, S., 391
Heacox, C. E., 375
Hennissart, P., 406
Heriteau, J., 395
Herman, V., 369
Highwater, J., 372
Hoehn, G. H., 397
Hollowell, J., 385
Holmer, P. L., 394
Holmes, G. M., 377
Honigmann, E. A., 385
Howard, P., 380
Howe, R. W., 367
Hudson, C., 380
Hush, J., 384
Hutcheson, J. D., 369
Hutchinson, W. K., 370

Information * politics, 343
International book of wood, 395
Islamic painting and the arts of the book, 372

Jackson, R., 380
Jarman, C., 401
Jaynes, J., 392
Johnson years, 370
Jones, E., 408

Keene, D., 386
Keith, R. G., 380
Kelsey, M. T., 394
Keneally, T., 404
Kennedy, A., 404
Kennedy, F., 375
Kennedy years, 370
Kettler, E. L., 370
King, S., 404
Kistiakowsky, G. B., 375
Klein, H., 386
Knight, D., 386
Kooper, A., 388
Kotsilibas-Davis, J., 401
Kramer, J., 396

Lacey, A. R., 370
Laird, C., 399
Lamb, H., 408
Lee, J. A., 393
Lee, K., 384
Leigh, M., 380
Lenton, H. T., 380
Leontief, W., 377
Lesberg, S., 381
Leuchs, A., 401
Ley, S., 373
Liehm, M., 402
Linsky, L., 389
Little, R., 386
Lives of the Stuart age, 370
Livingston, D. W., 389
Lorca, F. G., 389
Louis, V., 382
Lucas, M. B., 381
Lucretius, 390
Lustgarten, E., 399

Mac Adam, A. J., 386
McCall's embroidery book, 373
McClung, R. M., 398
McCutchan, P., 404
McElroy, J., 374
McInerny, R., 408
MacLean, N., 401
MacManus, Y., 404
McMurray, G. R., 386
Malcolm, N., 389
Marks, S., 381
Matthew, C., 383
Mihailovich, V. D., 386
Miller, J., 386
Miller, W. R., 381
Mohr, C. E., 398
Morgan, K. S., 375
Moyes, P., 407
Moys, E. M., 343
Muir, W. K., 367
Murphy, N. C., 404
Murray, A., 388

Nelson, K. S., 384
Nevelson, L., 375
Noel, R. S., 386
Norris, L., 405

O'Connell, D., 387
Oden, T. C., 394
Olmstead, A. H., 375
Orel, H., 387

Paanannen, V. N., 387
Parish, J. R., 402
Parry, A., 391
Pasternak, B., 390
Pereira, J., 394
Perkins, M., 387
Petit, P., 381
Pileggi, N., 399
Pinion, F. B., 387
Plowden, A., 376
Prager, A., 401
Priestley, J. B., 387
Prose, F., 405

Quinn, J. R., 398

Ram Dass, 394
Ramazanoğlu, G., 373
Reingold, C. B., 384
Reynolds, N., 401
Richardson, J., 376
Richardson, J. E., 387
Ritchie, J. M., 388
Rockland, M. S., 371
Ross, B., 383
Rostand, R., 406
Russell, D. E., 398

St. Clair, D., 393
Santini, R., 393
Schmalenbach, W., 372
Schor, J. A., 376
Schwarz, T., 378
Seashore, M. J., 399
Selby, H., 405
Selwyn, F., 407
Seward, D., 376
Shackelford, L., 400
Shealy, C. N., 397
Shepard, T., 376
Sherman, G. W., 388
Sherman, S., 383
Shore, R. S., 396
Shurtleff, W., 397
Simenon, G., 408
Skard, S., 381
Smith, B. F., 382
Solomon, R., 368
Soltow, M. J., 371
Solzhenitsyn, A., 39
Souza, R. D., 388
Spangler, D., 393
Spanier, D., 401
Steadman, J. M., 38
Strick, A., 368
Studt, W. B., 397

Taetzsch, L., 401
Tao-Chi, 373
Taylor, R. B., 398
Tcholakian, A., 400
Tenenbaum, F., 395
Terrace, V., 371
Thurow, G. E., 392
Tindall, G. B., 382
Tobias, J. J., 399
Towner, W. S., 394
Trevino, E. B., 376
Trevor-Roper, H., 3
Turner, P., 388
Tweeten, L., 378

Valentino, L., 402
Vivian, J., 383
Voinovich, V., 405
Vuilleumier, M. R.,

Wainwright, J., 408
Walters, R. G., 382
Warren, G., 374
Warren, R. P., 406
Washbourn, P., 394
Webster's secreta handbook, 371
Welch, C. E., 392
West, P., 405
Westernhagen, C., 3
Westoff, C. F., 368
Westrup, J. A., 372
Whetten, L. L., 392
Whittemore, E., 406
Wieczynski, J. L., 3
Wilcox, C., 407
Wilkinson, B., 377
Wilkinson, J., 374
Winter, R., 372
Woodman, J., 382
Worsley, F. A., 383
Wright, J., 390
Writer's manual, 371

Yehoshua, A. B., 40

Bowker takes you to the Marketplace uying. Selling. Renting. Trading. Bowker takes you there d brings you back safely. No-nonsense directories that give u the names, addresses, telephone numbers, specialties of ople and firms whether you want to sell a manuscript, hire model, frame a painting, cut a record, study macrame.

erary Market Place 77-78
h Names & Numbers.
3N 0-8352-0929-6.
SN 0075-9899. LC 41-51571. rch, 1977. 8½" x 11".
750 pages. Softcover. $19.95 tent.

ernational Literary Market Place
-77. Compiled by Peter Found.
3N 0-85935-049-5. 1976.
x 11¼". c. 400 pages. $23.50.

otography Market Place 75-76.
ited by Fred W. McDarrah.
3N 0-8352-0803-6. ISSN 0095-439X.
75-833. 1975. 436 pages.
ftcover. $14.95.

diovisual Market Place 1977.
3N 0-8352-0938-5. ISSN 0067-0553.
69-18201. January, 1977. 8½" x 11".
435 pages. Softcover. $19.95.

Fine Arts Market Place 75-76.
Edited by Paul Cummings.
ISBN 0-8352-0792-7. ISSN 0000-0361.
LC 73-2497. 1975. 497 pages.
Softcover. $16.50.

Contemporary Crafts Market Place 75-76. Compiled by the American Crafts Council.
ISBN 0-8352-0806-0. ISSN 0095-2710.
LC 75-518. 1975. 502 pages.
Softcover. $13.95.

Financial Market Place.
Edited by Dr. Steven Goodman.
ISBN 0-8352-0545-2. LC 72-1736. 1972.
363 pages. $19.95.

Microform Market Place, 2e, 76-77.
Edited by Alan M. Meckler.
ISBN 0-913672-00-9. LC 74-4811. 1976.
190 pages. Softcover. $14.95.
Published in association with Microform Review.
Distributed by R.R. Bowker in North and South America only Literary Market Place

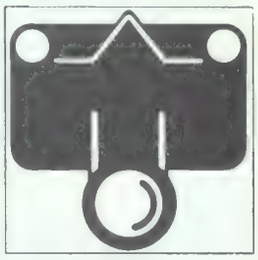
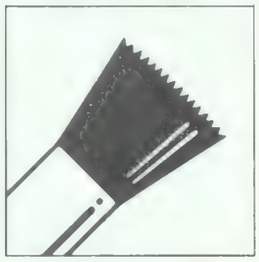
Audiovisual Market Place



Photography Market Place



Fine Arts Market Place

Contemporary Crafts Market Place

Financial Market Place

International Literary Market Place

der from: R.R. Bowker Order Dept., P.O. Box 1807, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106. utside Western Hemisphere: Bowker, Erasmus House, Epping, Essex, England.

l orders plus shipping and handling. Sales tax added where applicable.
rices subject to change without notice.)

BOWKER
W YORK & LONDON

FIRST NOVELISTS

Thirty-seven new writers—Spring 1977 discuss their first published novels

George Blagowidow
Last Train from Berlin
(Doubleday—May)
"Often, when I ask some casual acquaintances whether they have read this or that novel I hear the answers: "I never read fiction" or "No, I don't have time to read novels." The voice is full of pride accompanied by an indignant face as if I had asked an indecent question. I can hear the speaker's thoughts: "How could you ask me that? You should know that I have outgrown the age of reading fables. I don't have time to read fictional nonsense. Whatever time for reading I might have I would better devote to reading nonfiction, reports, facts, truth."

"I am sorry for such people. They would probably say also: "We want to find out how it really appeared, so we look at photographs only, never at paintings." Yet photographs are not always the best renditions of reality for they are taken from an angle, in a light and with a lens chosen by the photographer. Nor are works of nonfiction always the best sources to learn or to become better informed, for nonfiction works, reports, studies are subjective, representing an author's choices and preferences.

"I have found also that the more factual the book, the shorter the time I remember it. I taught for three years using a textbook that I had studied as a student. Now I no longer remember its title or the author. I remember vividly, however, some of the novels that I finished in a few days, many years ago.

"The Last Train from Berlin gives the writer more and the reader a better way to learn about the lives of other people, times and places (and thus to learn about his own life). I regret that so many people fail to understand this aspect of the novel.

"But in conceiving and writing my novel I did not actually plan to educate the reader. Rather, I wanted to share what I had lived through, feared, hoped for, and dreamed as a young man growing up during World War II in Eastern Europe. I had to tell in a story what had haunted me for many years after the end of that war.

"The hero of my novel The Last Train from Berlin, after surviving what should have been his own execution, is obsessed with the idea of killing Adolf Hitler. He tries to do it in Berchtesgaden and fails. A faction of the Gestapo learns about this attempt and decides to use him in their own scheme to assassinate Hitler. The final attempt occurs in Sterbfritz, a town between two tunnels, on Hitler's private train. . . ."

Edward Bonetti
The Wine Cellar
(Viking—May)
"If I were to give a reason for having written a novel I don't think it would be an accurate reason, for there are perhaps many, and they seem so complex that it is impossible to put my finger on any one in particular. In The Wine Cellar despite what illusive motives might have been behind its labor, I have tried to write a story that depicts in a simple narrative form the character of an Italian immigrant who faces the ruinous conflicts that arise in his family through ritual, pride, and love, during the early years of World War II.

"Like reasons, motives are sometimes illusive; but one which has generated my attempts in creating these stories centers around the desire to write something of value without pretense, and, if luck will have it, maybe touch on a few human truths, and this, always with humility before the Muse. So in The Wine Cellar I set out to create a story that could be read easily and with a feeling of human warmth. It might have succeeded on one level more than on another, and if there are any inklings of lofty themes that lace the narration, they are there by no conscious reason other than what labor the good Muse was able to instill in the purpose of writing it. In so far as the other stories in the collection are concerned, there was a deliberate attempt to create characters motivated by what I feel are compulsive instincts of the often violent and sometimes cruel American character. They are not happy stories, so they can not be read with delightful feelings; and as far ahead as I'm able to look, I suppose that my writing will continue to feed on these destructive instincts.

"At this point in my career as a writer, having taken up the craft rather late in life and even now barely making a scratch in the history of American fiction, I'd rather forego voicing any specific reasons why I think that the status of American fiction is probably at its lowest point. As the accolades and other worldlylike qualities given to ro and roll stars, gurus, folk singers, sup stars and fools, define their greatnes any cursory reading of many revie concerning the out-put of Corpora publishing will inform one with no la of superlatives that they are publishi the greatest or near great. . . ."

Don Bredes
Hard Feelings
(Atheneum—February)
"I wrote my novel because, havi written only short stories for seve years, I finally happened on the idea and, more important, on the voice—f a novel. In other words, I found a nov to write. Besides, I couldn't sell my st ries, and friends convinced me a nov would be bought more readily, sin the novel market is so various and t story market currently so constraine

"In some ways the characters a mood of Hard Feelings grow out of m own youth. Like the book's young, r fish hero and narrator, Bernie Herg ter, I lived on Long Island in the fifti and sixties, and I ran away to Ohio, h family troubles, played tennis, dra beer, discovered sex, but while Bern thinks in somewhat the way I used think, he is far more insightful and cle er and adventuresome than I ever wa He rises out of me and out of the bon of the plot to become, I think it's fair say, one of the unforgettable characte in American fiction. The book amoun to a kind of writing-out-of-me of m youth, though what I set out to do w more simply to make of my growing a moving, memorable, mostly fun story, and for me that's what it is: I st laugh when I read/hear Bernie voice. . . ."

Terry Brooks
The Sword of Shannara
(Random—April)
"The most fascinating aspect of writi fantasy is the virtually unlimited fre dom it allows one to create. Crucial this particular form of writing is t reader's ability to identify with the at tudes and emotions of the characters to feel what they feel, though they worlds apart. But beyond that and continuity of presentation in what and is not possible (ground rules, y might say), there is an infinite frontie Time, place, historical perspective ar n the laws of nature become expen- ble restraints. Good fantasy wraps reader in a new, exciting and highly sonal world and for the duration of narrative, whisks him off on that at adventure he secretly yearns to bark upon.

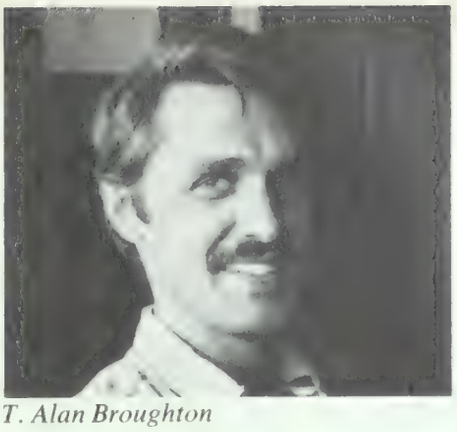
'The Sword of Shannara might be t described as epic fantasy since its pe in terms of both time and place is ansive. Yet in a world filled with ndrous, sometimes powerful, often gical beings, the book is still very ch concerned with ordinary people. was written, at least in part, to sug- t that our most complex, seemingly urmountable problems often have iple, basic solutions. That is not to that we can solve them all that eas- indeed, we must frequently muddle ough until we seem to stumble on answers we tell ourselves we uld have recognized all along. Such he case with Shea Ohmsford in this k.

is an unfortunate fact that there are sently too few writers creating fan- y in novel length, possibly because have at least subconsciously rele- ed this art form to the status of sec- d-rate literature. That is a mistake should do our best to correct. Fan- y is an integral part of our existence human beings. We grew up with it as ldren; it provides balance to the real- s of our everyday existence as lts. Often it stimulates our own cre- ve abilities. Always it offers enjoy- nt. Perhaps The Sword of Shannara l offer some encouragement to other iters, as well as readers, to renew an and valuable friendship. . . ."

Alan Broughton
Family Gathering
(tton—May)
When I was 16 I began to understand power of words to express my imag- ngs, to tell me what I didn't know I ew, to give me a place to put ergies that seemed to have nowhere e to go. I began by writing stories, d ten years later I was writing poems o. My first book was a collection of ems (In the Face of Descent, Car- gie-Mellon University Press, 1975). I o enjoy the teaching of writing, and I ve been doing that at The University Vermont for ten years.

'The writing of A Family Gathering etches over a 12 year period. It be- n with an image of a father and child ked into a Model Heart Display at a useum. I accumulated some notes out that child and his family, but oth- work demanded attention first. Five ars later I began writing it, and now, ven years after that, it will be pub- hed. In its first version the novel was ven hundred pages long. I came to e that this was merely a notebook for ossible novel. The six versions there- er were the refinings of what I saw re. I hope the next novel will waste s paper.

"I wrote A Family Gathering be- use I could not stop thinking of its ople and situations once I had begun imagine them. Even in the last ver- n they were doing and saying things



T. Alan Broughton

I had not foreseen. Perhaps placing them between covers will put them to rest.

"I imagine that the best fiction now must be what it always has been—a place where the reader, that lover of words and their power, lover of landscapes and people opening out silently in the luxurious privacy of the mind, will come in order to be absorbed in rhythms and patterns he usually senses only in himself but yearns to experience through "others" so that he will more intensely, more fully know his own life. It is not easy to make that kind of space, but ever since the words of other writers started doing that for me, I have been hooked on trying. . . ."

Joyce Rebeta Burditt
The Cracker Factory
(Macmillan—March)
"The Cracker Factory is about an alcoholic lady in a psychiatric ward. It's also a very funny book. One may wonder what is so funny about alcoholism and mental illness. Well, if you're drunk and crazy, not an awful lot. But my heroine, Dassie Barrett, gets sober, gets well, and cherishes her sense of humor as her saving grace. Cassie is 28, the mother of three young children, the wife of a reserved, well-meaning and completely decent book editor. When we meet her, she is the reluctant inmate of a Cleveland, Ohio psychiatric ward. She is furious, defensive, distraught, and laughing. She worships her shrink, the always correct and image-conscious, Dr. Alexandar, is confused as to the nature of her problem and has, in a drunken blackout, attempted to "end it all" with an overdose of St. Joseph's Aspirin for children. Though she laughs at the absurdity of it all, she sees her "suicide" as the epitome of failure.

"As the book progresses, Cassie comes to realize that she is indeed alcoholic, that her problems are largely of her own making (not the fault of the nefarious "them") and that she is, ultimately, the person who must take the responsibility for her recovery. At Alexander's suggestion, she joins Alcoholics Anonymous and readily identifies with the people. She knows immediately that she has found a workable solution to her drinking problem. During her three month stay in the cracker factory she works out many of her problems in her own inimitable way. She laughs, cries, learns to love and care, first for herself and then for those around her. She comes to see that nothing is or need be perfect, that life is "one damn thing after another", that The Prince she had fantasized about doesn't exist and that Charlie, her husband is, like herself, flawed and warmly human. She copes with a mother who is a "clean-freak," a much beloved and distant twin brother, an aloof and envied sister, and the other inmates of the cracker factory, whom she comes to love and care for as a very special "family". Besides a gift for laughter, Cassie possesses the ability to ask for help—and ask she does. She is aided particularly by a humane and understanding nurse whom she calls Tinkerbell, a lovely little person whose wisdom is far beyond her twenty-seven years. Of course, not all the staff is as good and much of the humor is in the hospital situation.

"When Cassie is discharged, she goes forth into the world with great hope and equal trepidation. It isn't easy to be an alcoholic, crazy lady, but it's much easier when the alcoholic, crazy lady is sober and behaving sanely. And Cassie is.

"I wrote the Cracker Factory for a very simple reason. I had a story to tell and a reason to tell it. Though there is much fiction in the book and it is a novel, the material is largely autobiographical. I am a recovering alcoholic and nine years ago spent a total of four and a half months in a Cleveland psychiatric ward. I have been sober (without any alcohol whatever) for nine years and am delighted with my sobriety. I am not a masochist. If drinking made life better, I would drink."

Pamela Chaio
Split Ends
(Lippincott—April)
"I have been an avid reader of novels all my life, yet when I began to write myself, it was for the theater and then for television. Five years ago, I sat down to write another play, but the beginnning of my first novel, Split Ends, came out instead. I would write several chapters and then become seduced away from it, quite eagerly I admit, for an assignment, any assignment, in television. But, when I would return to the novel, I would find myself pleasantly surprised that I still liked it, and I would continue until the next money-up-front assignment came along.

"What I had set out to do was write a novel, a love story, that was not predictable, where the reader would not be sure until the last page who would end up with whom. What I did not want to write was another novel with another smart-ass heroine, the consummate put-down artist whose breed abounds in contemporary fiction.

"I believe excellent novels are being published each year, but I also know that many excellent novels never see the light of day because they are not commercial. There was a time when small, exquisite novels were published for prestige alone. I hope that time will come again.

"I am currently writing a play and outlining a second novel. Most of my television writing has been in the field of half hour comedies, including 11 episodes of "Maude". I have also written for Dick Van Dyke, "Rhoda," "Phyllis" and many other shows. I wrote a play which was done in summer stock in the late sixties, and then ended up as a television "Movie of the Week" for ABC.

"My father was F. Hugh Herbert, who wrote "Kiss and Tell", "The Moon is Blue," and the motion picture "Sitting Pretty."

George C. Chesbro
Shadow of a Broken Man
(S. & S.—April)
"I began writing at the age of 20, no doubt as a way of kneading some nasty psychic cramp. From the beginning I have been in awe of the music that words, properly played, can produce in the mind. Thus my approach to writing has always been eclectic; I have attempted songs and screenplays; published poems, magazine and newspaper articles, numerous short stories, an educational filmstrip program for the handicapped, and radio scripts. Now, thanks to Simon & Schuster, I will be publishing my first novel.

"I don't think I am giving anything away by saying that Shadow of A Broken Man concerns a criminology professor who is also a private detective, has a black belt in karate, is an ex-circus headliner, and who happens to be a dwarf. Why a dwarf? Frankly, when I was preparing the first short story that would involve him, I thought I would be writing a rather sardonic, hopefully witty, send-up of the private eye genre. It did not work out that way. From the outset, the character demanded that, if he was to survive and function in a world filled with giants, I, at least, would have to take him seriously and accord him the dignity and respect which was his simple due as a man.

"I will not presume to comment on the status of fiction in our society. I do believe there will always be writers, because there will always be men and women who find writing the only way they can, as they must, perpetually sort out and define themselves. . . . "

Douglas Day
Journey of the Wolf
(Atheneum—February)
"I had been waiting for years to write this novel, waiting for the subject to present itself to me in just the right way. I had had a theme, an idea, in mind for years: man's dignity and courage in the face of absolute adversity. But I did not want to begin my novel until I found my protagonist and his country. He turned out to be a fifty-year-old peasant, and his country was Spain—the Spain of today, and of the time of the Civil War. There are very few things in the world I know much about. I grew up, spent four years flying jets in the Marine Corps, was married a couple of times, went to graduate school, and then began teaching English and comparative literature at the University of Virginia. I wrote books and articles of criticism and biography, and won the National Book Award in 1974 for a book on Malcolm Lowry. Nothing of all this touched me deeply enough to reach the idea of my novel.

"Then I began spending time in Spain, and the country—its terrain, its people, its history, its literature, painting, and philosophy—became a preoccupation, almost an obsession. Two years ago I realized that everything I needed for the novel lay in Spain. The land was what I wanted: remote, alien, unforgiving, full of extremes. The man I needed to write about was a composite of Spanish peasants I have known: as harsh, blunt, brave, stoical, arbitrary, arrogant, and defiant a man as I could imagine. If there is a philosophy lurking behind Journey of the Wolf, it is Unamuno's. The Civil War was the right war. The quality of fatalism that I needed to convey was precisely the kind that Spain inherited from the Moorish occupation.

"I wanted to write a novel that would pay homage to a man and a country. The book had to be straight, simple, spare—nothing arcane, no fashionable literary embellishments, no tired experimentalism. (I teach a great deal of modern fiction, and I find increasingly that I am bored with what I teach—too much play with form, too little content.) I don't have any grand ideas about The Future of the Novel, but I suspect that from time to time the genre must return to the principles involved in narrative, in the presentation of significant character, in the dramatization of an idea. That, at any rate, was what I tried to do in Journey of the Wolf."

Bruce Ducker
Rule by Proxy
(Crown—February)
"Rule By Proxy is a novel of allegiance and treachery, set upon a background of the modern corporation, its lawyers and its financiers.

"Its principal character, Tom Swalleck, is hired by a large midwestern law firm. The tone of the firm is set by his wife's uncle, Benjamin Howe, whos stamp of probity extends to his par ners and clients alike.

"Swalleck follows not Howe, but a other associate. Charles Schine's i tellect and tactics propel him to prom nence. On the way he loses use f Swalleck.

"Swalleck joins the city's largest co poration. He becomes the intermedia between incumbent management, cou selled by Howe, and an insurgent grou led by Schine. The company's su cesses first stun then bend Tom's loya ties. Schine's group seize control ar expand the business by acquisitions, pace with the bull market of the la 1960's. Tom's moral sense remai anaesthetised, and with it some warn er, more human part of himself.

"Schine overextends himself, and b cause of his knowledge Swalleck is su denly in a strategic position. The rest the story concerns how Swalleck w act, frozen between loyalty to an exis ing order and the curious obedience h pays Schine.

"Both as a practicing lawyer and a president of a large corporation, I' seen a good deal of the excitement the age of the conglomerateurs. I' tried in this book to give a specific vie of corporate finance and politics, and life in a town progeny of Sinclair Lew is's Zenith. The novel also deals wi themes of determinism and the pe suasion of power, and with its centr metaphor: that distance from the su stance of a business corrodes its virtu just as surely as does distance from th substance of the heart. . . ."

Garrett Epps
The Shad Treatment
(Putnam—March)
"The Shad Treatment takes its nam from a famous procedure in the Virgi ia Legislature by which a bill offensi to the powers-that-be is progressive stripped of all effect by a series amendments until only the shell r mains—much the way a James Riv shad would be cleaned and prepare for cooking. In this novel, I have a tempted to show the ways that th eviscerating process also works on po

Photo by Frank Worth
Pamela Chais

Bruce Ducker

ans themselves—particularly those o break their hearts fighting against ustice and lies too long without a vic-y.

"The book tells the story of one polit-l family against the backdrop of Vir-ia history from 1840 until the pres-
. The featured characters are Steen R. Evans, an antebellum factory ner who discovered that slavery uld be successfully applied to heavy ustry; his great-grandson, Col. Josh-Tutelo Evans, a labor lawyer, war o, and fighting reformer who was de-oyed by the corrosive suspicion of McCarthy era; Joshua's son Lester telo Evans, a cautious young man
o tried, at great personal cost, to vinate the family name through his own litical career; and Lester's little other Mac, the book's main charac-
, a former student radical who has en drawn inexorably back into the litical world of his father and brother.

"Most of the book has a contempoy setting, in which I have tried to e a sense of the workings of a politi-campaign and to show the ormous exhiliration and deep agony ich often go hand in hand in Ameri-n politics. In the historical sections, I ve tried to examine the question of w history itself is known; I tell the ry through the imaginations of my aracters. This is a concern shared by ich of current fiction, from Ragtime Death of the Fox. Like most writers, n really not sure what drew me to s theme. But I have a suspicion (pos-ly ex post facto) that it is a very im-tant question in all of American life lay—how can we rediscover, re-im, and comprehend our past?

"The book also takes as its subject tter the unique, insular society of chmond, Virginia, where I was born d raised and have spent twenty-two my twenty-six years. I attended Harrd, where I was President of the daily wspaper, the Crimson; after graduon I came home with a few friends to rt a short-lived liberal weekly, The chmond Mercury, where I was altertely managing editor, editorialist, n reviewer, literary critic, and com-strip writer."

Charles A. Goodrum
Dewey Decimated
(Crown—March)

"I built a major research library on the Mall (located on that one bare block between the National Gallery and the Smithsonian Natural History Museum). I put a facade on it like the Boston Public, and within a Great Hall like the Library of Congress, a Rare Book Room like the Folger, and a Manuscript Division half Huntington, half Morgan. Into this I loaded the world's richest collection of rare books and manuscripts and let things take their course.

"To generate stress I tried to think of the worst possible things which might happen to a treasure library—theft, fraud, interdivisional jealousies, extortion, and what-have-you—and then let these troubles trip tensions, confusion, and a series of murders. To my surprise this gave me a fairly complicated plot much more easily than I had expected!

"I myself like a light-hearted murder (an "entertainment") which is a puzzle—any one of six people could have done it if you line up the same clues in a different sequence, etc.—so I tried to spin out such a one with a light hand and fast tempo. In the end, the librarian emeritus solves everything by applying cataloging and reference techniques to murder clues—to the chagrin and embarrassment of the local police, of course.

"All of this is to say that two astonishing things (at least to me!) have resulted from the exercise.

"One: to my horror, since the time I first submitted the final revision of the manuscript to a publisher a year ago Labor Day, every disaster that I used to trip the plot has actually occurred in a major library! Fortunately, to date, nobody has been shot over any of them, but an example of all the gimmicks I'd used to cause the trouble has turned up in the news, one at a time, somewhere!

"The other thing that has surprised me is the way my fellow librarians have reacted to the characters I made up. Most of the "good guys" are based on people I'v met, but the villains are all out of the whole cloth. So far as I could do it, none is like anyone I've ever known. The problem has been that as my various fellow librarians have read the manuscript, about half of them return it to me with the wink and the elbow, "Boy, do I know who you used as a model for 'X'! Ha, ha, ha." In no case did I have any intention of making the character like any of the candidates they pick, and in half the instances they come up with names of people I've never met nor even heard of before! I'm sure there's some great truth here, but I haven't yet figured out what it is.

"In a word, I'm hoping the librarians feel they're well served with the book Dewey Decimated. It is intended to be read as an entertainment, with the shoes off, in two gulps. Pray God no one takes it seriously."

Robert Lee Hall
Exit Sherlock Holmes
(Scribners—May)

"My novel Exit Sherlock Holmes, which tells the great detective's final heretofore unpublished adventure, was the result of chance. The germ was one of those middle-of-the-night ideas which became a morning-after first page, dashed off in ignorance of the Sherlockian Canon (I had read only about five Holmes stories in my life) and ignorance of other research I must do to recreate London, 1903, on my pages. But after all I was only writing a short story—there could not be much work in that.

"By page 50 I realized it was a novel I had begun and knew I must devote time to the details necessary to fill out an historical novel about a famous man. I started with the sixty canonical Sherlock Holmes stories and read books on Holmes by Vincent Starrett and others, as well as books on Edwardian England.

"Out of these researches and my idea grew Exit Sherlock Holmes, narrated by Dr. John Watson in a manuscript only recently unearthed from the vaults of Cox and Company, Charing Cross.

"I mention my researches because I believe that, after plot, attention to details is the business of the writer: attention to place and to things—the way dust motes drift in the sun; the label on an Edwardian gentleman's morning coat—and to human psychology. An acquaintance sneered when I explained that I was rereading my manuscript to make sure I had not said "automobile" instead of "motorcar," "vest" instead of "waistcoat." "Those details are unimportant," he urged. Wrong. Life never makes mistakes in its details; in this the writer should take life as his model.

"A recent New Yorker cartoon depicted a vaguely surprised couple watching a television newsman announce that, "The novel died last night after a protracted illness." I wrote a novel because I discovered that no other form could convey what must be expressed. For this reason people will continue to write in this distinctly noncadaverous form; novels such as Ragtime and Kinflicks prove that reports of its death are greatly exaggerated. . . ."

harles A. Goodrum

Photo by Dan Diers

Robert Lee Hall

Mary H. Hallingsworth
How Long the Heart Remembers
(Houghton—February)
"In my 12th year I discovered the wonderful world of writing. From then on blank pages were a challenge for me to fill with essays, poems, short stories and books, all unpublished except How Long the Heart Remembers. In this I tried to convey the history of the time 1914-1923 through the Abbott family. This period is unknown to the modern generation and almost forgotten by the older. It is important since it is a time of change. Though How Long the Heart Remembers is my first published book, it is not my first or last.

"This book is a story of family life 1914-1923, set in Georgia. Through the family are seen the status of the poor mountain people, the status of sharecroppers and Negroes in the south at that time. I chose the novel form because a novel is more interesting and noticeable than a mere record of history. A spirited tale and an authentic slice of Americana, How Long the Heart Remembers is told from the viewpoint of Lowell, a younger daughter. Through her, members of the family become known from the irrepressible older sister Lillian to papa, a font of wisdom to his children, who finds a way out of his ebbing fortunes through resolution and humor.

"The current status of fiction in our society is a necessity to modern life. Fiction books alleviate the pressure created by contemporary living."

Robert Harris
She Who Is Alive
(Blue Wind—March)
"I had always depended on inspiration in writing poetry, but in the early 1970's my inspiration deserted me. I also realized I was getting more pleasure from reading prose fiction than I was from poetry. Some writers appealed to me more than others: Thomas Love Peacock, Georg Büchner, Prosper Mērimée, Edgar Allan Poe, Robert Louis Stevenson, Raymond Roussel, Ronald Firbank, P. G. Wodehouse, Dashiell Hammett, Jane Bowles, William Burroughs, Jorge Luis Borges.

"Another influence on my work comes from the American Cinema of the 1930's and '40's. What I admire most about movies is their ability to tell a story in pictures. In my novel, She Who Is Alive, I have attempted to tell a story by describing the physical actions of the characters. I believe it should take approximately as long to read a novel as it does to view a feature length film.

"She Who Is Alive is a spy melodrama. It belongs to a genre of the Hollywood movie that be described as the "warn America about the Nazis" genre. It is the story of three women trying to survive in a society of sadistic men. In it I have attempted to create an artificial reality that is strange, beautiful, and horrible. The purpose of my work is to give pleasure.

"In my opinion the main task of contemporary fiction is to overcome the pernicious influence of James Joyce and restore to the novel the primacy of the story. It is the story alone that can completely express the most permanent concerns of the human spirit. . . ."

Jon A. Jackson
The Diehard
(Random—March)
"My first published novel, The Diehard, is a mystery story set in Detroit. My hero, Mulheisen, is a police detective on special assignment to solve the murder of a wealthy, beautiful socialite whose husband, once a famous college football star and later a successful lawyer, is implicated in a spectacular computer fraud involving a "Cinderella" insurance company that suddenly goes bankrupt.

"The Diehard also features an unusual detective, Joe Service who is hired by the Mob to track down the missing embezzled funds.

"I turned to the mystery genre after two unsuccessful attempts at "serious" novels. I felt that I didn't really know how to write a novel. I had seen, however, an interview in Paris Review, with Georges Simenon, who said that he had learned his craft by writing shilling novels, and I thought I would try that. It seems to have worked.

"I was immediately attracted to the genre because it is simplicity itself: it intends to simply tell a story, and without realizing it before, I now saw that all I had ever wanted to do was accomplish that simple fact.

"The genre does not intend to illuminate the Meaning of Life, to delineate society, to probe the depths of men's minds, or to create new forms of artistic expression. Yet, in the hands of its finest practitioners, the mystery novel does occasionally accomplish all of these things, to one degree or another.

"I find the character of the detective a remarkably apt device for literary productivity. Like the author himself, and like the reader, the detective is confronted with a simple fact—a crime. That fact is pregnant with possibilities. In the course of the novel, the detective must "discover" the story—what actually happened, how, and why. In discovering the story, the basic aims of all literary art may be achieved. Because the genre does not take itself so seriously, the author is free to tell a story and the results are often more accessible and agreeable to the audience. . . ."

Paul D. King
Hermana Sam
(Putnam—February)
"My novel is entitled Hermana Sam. It is a love story about a Sister of Charity, a nursing nun, and Mangus Colorado, the legendary Apache warrior. It is fiction, but much attention was given to historical detail revolving about the 1850 New Mexico territory locale and its inhabitants. It is my first attempt at past tense narrative, and since it was done at odd hours, it took six years in the writing.

"By definition, the book is a wes ern. I deliberately selected this genr not merely because of the love stor but because I have very strong feelin about the western literary form. It part of our heritage, and when in th hands of such authors as Ambro Bierce, B. Traven, and Eugene Ma love Rhoades, it is pure literature. U fortunately, the western as such has d clined in recent years. I hope, in son small way, Hermana Sam might r store a tiny bit of its dignity. As I sai it is part of our heritage; it is part of o history; it certainly is part of all of u
One further comment: I have nev been to New Mexico, but I have alwa been fascinated by its role in our evol tion. The novel attempts to mirr some of the seeds of that evolution.

"As for the present state of fiction fear for it for two reasons: first, there far too much trash being written for th obvious commercial reasons; and se ond, perhaps far more important, is th fact that people seem to be reading le every year. Call it if you will the re curse of television. Because it is ther because it is convenient, because does not challenge, because it does n really stimulate, it simply erodes awa at more meaningful recreational pu suits. And certainly to me, reading recreation."

Curt Leviant
The Yemenite Girl
(Putnam—February)
"There was a split in my psyche whe was—how lovely that "was" rings—unpublished novelist. One part w confident that The Yemenite Girl wou be accepted. After all, even letters rejection praised the work; one edit even compared it to Thomas Mann
The Beloved Returns. But the oth part anguished at hearing of semina bemoaning the fate of the would-first novelist.

"Then, a letter from Saul Bellow. H liked The Yemenite Girl so much he re ommended me to his agent, Harri Wasserman (Russell & Volkening who kept encouraging me—and I ke writing—until the messianic nev came. Editor and publisher Gene Rac lis (Bobbs-Merrill) had accepted th novel. Meanwhile, Bellow had won th Nobel Prize, and his praise of n book—"I read straight through witho a stop. I don't often read so quickly a with so much interest. I enjoyed eve turn of the story . . . done with gre tact, feeling and skill"—would appe on the jacket.

"The Yemenite Girl is a love story sorts. Set in Israel, it tells of the frien ship between Ezra Shultish and Israe crotchety and charming old Nobel La reate, Yehiel Bar-Nun. Shultish is pc sessed by the master's love story "T Yemenite Girl" and dreams of tape-r cording it. But is it the story he want or the tantalizing beauty herself? Do he seek literature—or immortality? La er, Shultish meets a real-life reincarn tion of the pretty Yemenite, therel blurring the tenuous line between re ity and makebelieve. At the end, in surprise sans surprise, Shultish sees facets of his life blending in a blaze elf-discovery.

The fusion of real and makebelieve hants me, since our realworld is so ch shaped by the storybook worlds ing within us. I often thought that ers read with a special, all-knowing . That's why I'm amazed and de- ted that my story was able to make l Bellow keep turning pages. . . ."

id Linzee
th in Connecticut Kay—May)
here exists a sharp division between ous novels and suspense novels, latter being described as "escap- ." This distinction is not entirely r to me. Aren't all novels escapist, he sense that they offer us a chance escape the more or less narrow ndaries of our own lives, and share ebody else's experiences, some- y else's way of looking at things? I ld say that the distinction is one not ind but of degree. Escapist fare (the ase brings to mind some sugary con- tion that you wolf down even ugh you know it's bad for you) takes reader not just out of himself, but of the recognizable world—into a sh realm of millionaires and murder- cops, spies and private eyes. Sup- edly the exciting incidents and fast e that make for entertaining reading be achieved only in a milieu remote n life as most of us know it. The blem is that, unless the author is a hiell Hammett or a John LeCarre, h a milieu will be remote from him well. Lacking experience, he starts wing on other peoples' books. se recycled novels are what give suspense genre a dubious reputa- .
When I set out to write a book, I two things in mind: to produce a pense novel, a page-turner, and to te only about what I knew. The pro- onist was a young man of my own , 22, and the milieu was my own, af- nt suburbia. There were to be no s, spies, or private eyes, only doc- s, lawyers, college kids, and an am- ous entrepreneur pushing a slightly gal line of products. In writing as in you don't have to go looking for able; the everyday world (even st Hartford) is dangerous ugh. . . ."

Photo by Alex Gotfryd
verly Lowry

Beverly Lowry
Come Back, Lolly Ray
(Doubleday—February)
"Come Back, Lolly Ray is about—as best I can say—the dreams of one time and place: who the dreamers are, what they wish for, and how one dreamed-of tries to live her own life and yet still be the town's own star . . . in her case, star baton twirler.

"I have tried to fill up this book's space entirely and to meld how the words go with what they say, so that style and purpose and rhythm come together and spin, like that young girl's baton, and narrative is moved by description itself. Every story, after all, has its own inherent way of being told. The writer's job is to discover it: not so much the what of it, as the how; what form it will take. This particular novel, I have come to think of as being in structure something like a glass jar. A jar that is being filled. Layer after layer, of different colored sand. Each layer is separate from the next; each also is part of the whole, the end effect which, I hope, finally occurs when the jar is filled and the lid screwed tightly on. Then all the colors should shine, and form a pattern. The book, then, is shaped by its setting. The town is the jar. Its people are the bright-colored sand. Their lives tell the story of one year, in one place, and how time would change what sort of dreams they imagined they could have.

"For me, fiction is the best way first to find the truth and then to tell it. I believe also that good fiction, like any honest work, testifies to the life of its creator, and that a novel is a most honorable and grand way to fashion such a testimony. I would have my work say for me, this is what I have been and done and known and seen and understood. This is how I hope to have it sing. How I hope to honor it. . . ."

Ann Marlowe
The Winnowing Winds
(Dodd—March)
"The Winnowing Winds is set in Switzerland at an international school, as I wanted a mixed cast of characters—American, British, Swiss, African, Jew, Arab. This allowed me to slip in some unobtrusive propaganda for racial and religious tolerance. I like to think that pointing a gentle moral in a piece of escape fiction cannot hurt, and might even do some good.

"Why a Gothic? Partly because I love to read good Gothics, from Jane Eyre onward, and it makes sense to write what you'd like to read. Partly because the Gothic market is healthy, and I felt a first novel would stand a better chance of finding a publisher in that genre. But mostly because the Gothic depends so heavily on background, which by all odds ought to be my strong point. My husband and I pack up our typewriters and move to a new country about three times a year, so I have a load of maps and memories to draw on, and a dozen settings to choose among. My next novel, for instance, will be set in the Netherlands, one of my favorite places. The third, on the Riviera. . . ."

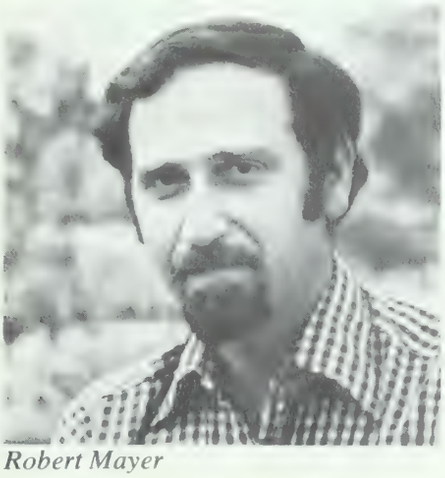

Photo by Tony O'Brien
Robert Mayer

Robert Mayer
Superfolks
(Dial—March)
"I began writing fiction after ten years as a newspaperman in New York. The hero of Superfolks is also a newsman in New York; but there the resemblance ends. I, for instance, cannot fly. Nor do I spend much of my spare time combating evil.

"Superfolks is a comic extension of an archetypal American myth—the fable of the superhero. It is about the loss of youthful energies, dreams, triumphs, illusions—our own, and, indirectly, the nation's. In short, it is a wry look at the coming of mortality.

"It is also a spoof of certain contemporary fiction. A wide range of heroes—both fictional and real—pops up in the book as in a funhouse mirror: distorted and struggling for balance in a tilted world.

"My primary goal in writing Superfolks was to evoke laughter. Truths, insights, revelations, are nourishing in good fiction, and I hope that Superfolks contains its share. But a novel that does not also entertain fails the first test.

"Amid the frantic decibels of life today, the quiet novel of personal sensibility—the kind we remember from Lit. 101—has all but been drowned out. When written it is rarely published; when published it is rarely read. This is the harsh reality of the livingroom, where the bookshelf must compete uneasily with the television set that stands in front of it. It's no secret that most novels that reach a sizable audience today are ones that cry rape, or scream bloody murder, or invoke the devil's children.

"The novelist thus seems faced with two dubious alternatives: to be good and unread; or to be rewarded for the cheap and the shoddy.

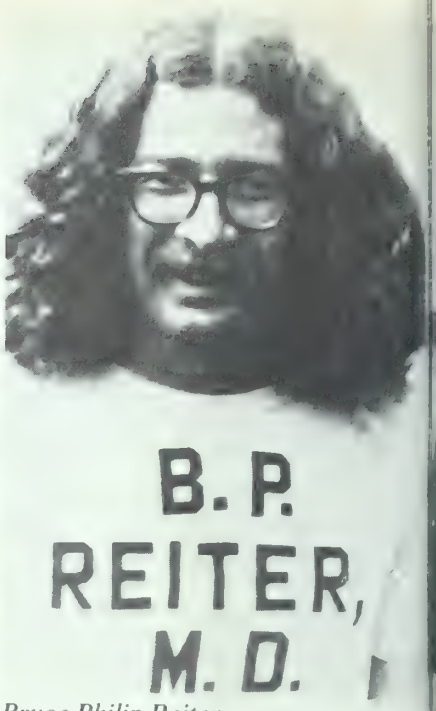
"I think the challenge we face is to overcome the need to choose; to write boldly and originally enough to compel broad readership, without pandering to the perversions of the moment.

"One path, for me, was through fantasy and humor. That is the approach of Superfolks. In future books perhaps I will find other paths. It is too soon to know. . . ."

Photo by Yoram Lehmann

Lawrence Meyer

Leona Morrison



Bruce Philip Reiter

Lawrence Meyer
A Capitol Crime
(Viking—March)
"One of the problems of a newspaper reporter in Washington is that he is a prisoner of deadlines, convention and space. I have covered the attempted assassination of a Presidential candidate—George Wallace—the bribery trial of a former United States Senator—Daniel B. Brewster—and the events leading up to the first Presidential resignation in our history.

"Despite unprecedented space in The Washington Post to describe what I saw and heard during these events, a great deal of the human dimension—every bit as compelling as what found its way into the newspaper—had to stand aside to make way for the news.

"In writing A Capitol Crime I wanted to give some idea of the flavor of the town when the television lights go off and reporters put their notebooks in their pockets. The novels written about Washington too often present either a wooden city populated by stereotypes or fail to grasp the dynamic of the town. I wanted people to know what glamor means in Washington: that it is the shimmer of people who are impermanent, insincere and insecure.

"I also wanted people to understand something of the anxieties that reporters experience as they do their work.

"But for all of that, I didn't write A Capitol Crime to convey a message. I wanted to tell a story and I wanted it to be a story of suspense. I wanted to tell the story through a character who was human—flawed—wanting to do right but not always able to command the resources to accomplish that end. . . ."

Leona Morrison
Island of Eden
(Morrow—March)
"There is a time I've always longed to live in, when life had charm and grace and stability—thanks, it must be said, to a monumental hypocrisy; when keeping one's word and a stiff upper lip were part of the code. Class lines were rigid but rank had its responsibilities as well as its privileges and no man struggled to find himself because his place in the scheme of things was clear from the day he was born.

"That time was in England before the sun set on the British Empire. Island of Eden is a last resort for a handful of people trying to keep the darkness out. But there is no way to keep the present from encroaching, not even on Santa Serena.

"Such places exist. I've lived abroad for the past eighteen years, often in such expatriate colonies as this one. Hopelessly archaic as they are, lovely as it is to live in their genteel unreality, they are still the modern world in microcosm and the people who come to Island of Eden carry the same baggage we all do: the drives for money, power, sex, love. But the old codes are shattered now. There is nothing to replace them in our time but the rules my characters make for themselves. The outcome of their lives, as our own, depends upon the stuff of which each one is made.

"I think Americans have as much to learn about European mentality and how it was formed as the other way round and I wanted to describe one aspect of the European past—and therefore its present—to American readers. Fiction is the ideal vehicle to inform while it entertains, to crystallize differences between cultures while it dramatizes similarities among people.

"Mainly I wanted to write about people and how they interact. Power corrupts, love alienates, wealth destroys. But every now and then, even today when most of us are alone and adrift without any kind of discipline to guide us, honor prevails, friendship endures, integrity matters. That's about all that's left of Eden. . . ."

Sheila Nickerson
In Rooms of Falling Rain
(Thorp Springs—March)
"As a writer of poetry and fiction, a as an employee in a bookstore, I s what all the figures indicate: that t current status of fiction in our society depressed. It's hard to get a novel pu lished and hard to get it sold—par the result of finances but even mo the result of priorities.

"I wrote a novel because, at the ti (seven years ago), my whole l seemed to hinge on whether I cou complete a writing project longer tha poem. At home with two small childr (I now have a third), I felt an ov powering urge to make order throu writing. I still do.

"My novel, set in the Rocky Mount area (where I lived for seven years b fore moving to Alaska) is a study of ps chological pressures set into action a storm. The title, In Rooms of Falli Rain, is from a poem by Elizabeth Bis op, a poet whose work I admire treme dously. The question of the effect land and weather on human lives and terrelationships interests me and co pels me in much of what I write. Th theme has become especially imp tant—and relevant—to me here Alaska, where we live against a bac drop of incredible beauty and violen I have since written a second novel, in Alaska, presently in search of a pu lisher. . . ."

C. E. Poverman
Susan
(Viking—April)
"Told from the third person point view of a hapa haole (half-white, ha Japanese) girl born and living in H waii. Name: Susan Hondo Wilson. years old. A stewardess. The prese action centers on an incident whi takes place during a routine inter-isla flight. The novel is about her past, h upbringing, and particularly her re la Nickerson

ship with her Japanese mother and dmother, her white father, and her nt lover, a mainlander; how her and these people have shaped her, ght her to take the present actions. also about her conflicted relation- to herself, to her being half-white, Japanese. The narrative shape of novel is such that by the time the in- t incident takes place, the reader is nning to understand the shape of past, and that in part, her reactions he flight are reactions to her past, mother, all that has shaped her. As novel continues on to resolution, n's past continues to expoliate so by the time the present action is re- ed, the reader has a complete un- tanding of Susan's complex past, a e of what her future might be.

My feelings about the novel—alive healthy, changing, evolving. Those say it's dead are sour grapes, don't 'em, don't understand 'em, can't e em themselves. . . ."

Randall

Fan

dom—April)

e Fan is my first venture into the ten rather than the spoken word. In 2, I wrote my first play, 6 Rms Riv The next year I wrote my first musi- The Magic Show. I enjoy firsts rmously. Repetition makes me feel When I start a project in a new l, I'm seventeen again and desper- to prove myself. I think if I ever feel ave proven myself I will become dull indeed. The novel form has ven especially exciting to me be- se I can now speak directly to my ience without the use of go-be- ens. It's incredibly intimate. The time I see a stranger reading The will be as thrilling as my first open- night. I'll probably go up to him or her and introduce myself. I'll autograph the book, whether or not they want it. I may even give them their purchase price back. That'll be my little opening night party. What have I set out to do in my novel? What I always set out to do. Entertain. I have nothing to say about the world. I'm as mystified by it as everyone else. And I'm no smarter than everyone else, so all I want to do is entertain. Laughter, I think, is the nicest thing you can give someone. Hopefully my book is funny. It's also scarey. I like to think people will laugh and shiver at the same time. That seems to me like a perfect meal; something sweet, something exotic, something unexpected. I'm now working on my next first, a television series. Then, hopefully, my first movie. After that, firsts will be harder to come by. Perhaps I'll take my first vacation."

Bruce Philip Reiter, M.D.

The Saturday Night Knife and Gun Club

(Lippincott—April)

"The journey the book takes you on is the journey of Gypsy—a kind of hippie young doctor. It is the adventure of mind, heart, soul, and endurance that Gypsy sets out on when he steps through the wide doors of the Emergency Room at Manhattan County Hospital. This is a novel about nurses, interns, bums, drug addicts, and a dog. It is also a book about growing up, negotiating a delayed adolescence, and about living, dying, and suffering. The Saturday Night Knife & Gun Club will almost certainly make you laugh out loud, and it will very likely make you weep as well.

"I wrote this novel because I love to write, because nothing good has been written in English since Hemingway, and because I want to be rich and famous and get a date with Candice Bergen. . . ."

Barbara Parker Robinson

A Bit of Eden

(Dutton—May)

"Set in the foxhunting country of Virginia, A Bit of Eden follows the progress of a neophyte family as it learns about the pitfalls and pleasures of country living. The story is played out against the ingredient most essential to sporting life—unspoiled land. How the characters react to their Eden-like setting is a major theme of the novel.

"A Bit of Eden will appeal to the growing numbers who ride or own horses, but I hope it also evokes an atmosphere, a sense of escape from the everyday to the many readers who enjoy glimpses into a world that is still elegant, close to the forces of nature, and unhampered by the consequences of overcrowding. I have been greatly influenced by my own environment. Over seven years of living surrounded by the beauty and quiet described in my book, combined with an awareness of the danger of its destruction, have made me want to record a way of life whose loss may have questionable social significance but will be, on a broader scale, an environmental disaster.

"I feel many readers like to identify with gracious and elusive ways of living, and I have tried to make this possible. I think most people read novels for pleasure, and I hope they will enjoy A Bit of Eden. If its readers find in it one line that conjures up my wonder at the beauty of its setting I will have made a good beginning. . . ."

Robert Ross

A French Finish

(Putnam—March)

"When I was about nine and wrote my first short story, I did not know that I had foredoomed myself in that singular act. One day soon after that when I was in school and supposed to be studying, I was caught writing a story and the teacher who discovered what was on my tablet tore it up and announced loudly that writing stories was sinful and a waste of valuable time. When she asked me to account for my action, I carelessly blurted out, "But I have to write." Everyone laughed as though I had said something ridiculous, so I turned to the business of going to school in order to learn to do things that were not sinful or time wasting.

"Daily I cluttered my mind with facts and dates and numbers. Nightly the people in my unwritten stories who lived in some dark place inside me vanquished the facts and dates and numbers and went on to doing the things they wanted to do until I could not live without writing it all down so I could keep them quiet and get some peace.

"For a number of years I filled notebooks with stories and hid them. I became cunning and clever at concealing what I was really doing. This deception continued through years of formal university studies, through various jobs not the least of which was the teaching of literature to suspicious adult children.

"Whenever that old nightmare voice broke into my private world and demanded an accounting. I tried to explain what I had meant that very first time when I was nine. I have to let all those people in the stories live because they show the possibilities in life: they take terrible chances, they are brave and foolish, and they love and suffer and weep without shame. And when the possibilities have vanished and they are doomed, they face that too and redeem from those defeats a final sense of self greater even than the dead dreams, better than the lost years, more worthy than all the hope for glory and fame and honor for which they had so unmercifully hungered.

"The people in the stories and the people who read the stories and the writer are all the same, except that the writer is driven—not because he suffers more or loves more or even hates death more—but because he is supremely egotistical and therefore half mad with loneliness. He knows that he cannot escape the loneliness, but even more, he knows that the anguished act of writing itself may release him from that fateful pride, may grant him the grace to endure the tragic sense of life which he cannot escape either, and at last—if he is deserving—allow him the privilege of touching the hearts of others. . . ."

Mike Slosberg
The August Strangers
(Dial—March)
"I was jogging with my son. When we finished, I became aware of a slight pain in my side. Hypochondriasis is never far. I immediately fantasized a kidney failure and began cursing my fate as an only child, and that my parents were certainly in no condition to present me with one of their kidneys.

"My son, on the other hand, had a strong, healthy sister, a jogging father and a physically fit mother; each with, as far as I knew, two healthy kidneys.

"But wait! My children were both adopted! Not related to each other. In fact, total biological strangers to each other and to us, their parents. And so the seed for The August Strangers was planted. It's a search story, not a medical story.

"Mike August, the main character, soon discovers that his son must have a kidney transplant. The best donors for kidneys are siblings or mothers or fathers. The odds on success are better.

"But Mike August doesn't have these options, so he decides to somehow track down the biological mother of his adopted son.

"Figuring out how he could do this—considering the staggering legal and physical road blocks—and then what happened when he did succeed, helped make the writing of The August Strangers so damn much fun. . . ."

Mike Slosberg

Toby Stein
All the Time There Is
(Random—April)
"I wrote a novel because I was ready to—but I didn't spend the last twenty years getting ready to. I spent them living, and making a living. Then I found that I had these two people in my head, and an initial situation, and I wanted to go with it, and find out what they would do, so I began to write their story. I didn't know the ending until I wrote it. I'm glad it worked out for them, but I never felt it had to . . . until it did.

"The story is about Anne Durham, a lively, good-looking widow in her early forties who lives next door to a homosexual couple. One of the men dies. When Anne notices that no one comes to visit the surviving partner, she is moved, on the fifth night, to bake a cake and ring her neighbor's bell. That condolence call on Charles Robinson is awkward and painful for them both. But it sparks a relationship which—slowly—grows. Almost inadvertently, Anne and Charles become closer until, finally, they must choose between the safety of the deep friendship they have developed and the risks of an open-ended love relationship.

"Only after I finished the novel did I remember that many years ago I worked with a woman whose married lover died during open heart surgery. They had been constant companions for 17 years. Although I didn't know her well, something made me go unannounced to her apartment, where I just sat with her in silence. I went with her to the funeral. We sat in the back of the church. His widow sat in the first pew attended by a consoling minister and family and friends. I guess I never got over the distortedness . . . the unfairness of that. I think we cannot pass beyond grief without being allowed to go through it supported by people who think we're entitled to feel it.

"The other thing I didn't set out to say . . . but see in the novel, is that strong feeling is rare and should be dared, however unlikely the context in which it arises. . . ."

Michael Stewart
Belle (Macmillan—April)
"I had spent sixteen years writing for the theatre. My credits include the librettos for five musical comedies; "Bye Bye Birdie", "Carnival", "Hello, Dolly!", "George M!", a "Mack and Mabel." As most reade are aware, musical comedy is a collab rative effort. Among the many coo who have ladles in the broth are the l icist, the composer, the director, t producer, the choreographer, and—r I haven't forgotten—the actors. Son times they enhance the basic wo sometimes they don't, but in any cas is not your work that the public fina sees but the result of a year or so bubble, bubble, toil and trouble—w an accent on this last—of the creati talents above-mentioned. And thoug worked with some of the sharpest t ents in the theatre, I still longed to judged one day on an effort that was my own. I told you my motivatio were less than noble.

"I am an avid reader, have long be intrigued by the novel form, and o bleak night after a particularly storr rehearsal session—one that saw sor lines I considered crucial to the seco act sliced out of it at the suggestion the gentleman who was running a f low spot—I staggered to my Olive and wrote the first page of Belle.

"I won't take you through the wr ing, the rewriting, the editing, t crises over comma versus semi-colo all I will say is that it was the most sat fying experience of my writing caree Not the best actor in town reading yo lines just as you dreamed of heari them said can equal the pleasure I ha gotten from seeing a paragraph th was all mine, lying safe on the pag ready to be presented to the reader the author—without all those San Claus' helpers—wishes it to be preser ed. To tell the truth I have quite fall in love with the form, with my publis ers, my editor, my literary agent (hc quiet they are in comparison with thea rical agents), and can hardly wait to b gin the next one, God and Macmill permitting.

"When Dolly Gallagher Levi com down that red velvet staircase in Act of "Hello, Dolly!", my heart does be a bit faster. But I felt that same hap acceleration the other day when R Roberts, my editor, handed me my fi set of bound galleys.

"No sets, no lights, no Carol Cha ning, no twenty-four singing waiters.

"Just me. . . ."

Rob Swigart
Little America
(Houghton—March)
"Fiction, everyone seems to be sayin is taking a beating these days. Publis ers don't want to publish it, reade don't want to read it, reviewers dor want to review it, etc. Everyone watching television, going to t movies, buying recreational vehicle No one is reading.

"All true, no doubt. Fiction is takir a beating. But it is also being reborn, i to new, strange, and strangely ente taining forms. It takes as its subje matter everything from sex to style words themselves, in ways that cann be pressed into television pablum.

Photo by Jane Swigart

ob Swigart

"Fiction can entertain. I wrote Little merica to entertain, to laugh (myself); get, and consequently give, the Joke. he Joke is the one Buddha is always ughing at, the one he won't explain hat's the Joke).

"I was a poet, but no one reads poet- (except other poets, all 3000 regis- red poets in America; and their fa- ilies, who often don't understand it— e Joke again). I am still a poet, chap- rs are stanzas and so on, but it is pos- ble, in fiction, to be comic, and have n audience too. I wrote a novel be- ause I felt like it, because it was there, ecause it was fun to do. I'm still sur- rised. I hope to stay surprised.

"Maybe, in spite of what everyone eems to be saying, fiction is not taking beating. There may be a lot of books n Zen Nosepicking and Organic Self- nprovement, but there are also a lot of tories; serious, important, deep, rave, significant stories; stories, in ther words, that we can have a good ugh over.

"I wrote a novel about a fellow who anted very much to kill his father and ave his own gas pump in Little Ameri- a, Wyoming, the world's largest serv- e station. My wife (and my publisher) ink it's funny. So do I. . . ."

od Townley linor Gods
t. Martin's—February)
I like the idea of writing in various lit- rary genres. Besides the novel, Minor ods, I've published a book of criti- ism, The Early Poetry of William Car- s Williams (Cornell Univ. Press, 975) and a book of poetry, Three Sis- rs (The Smith, 1977). Two other pro- cts, a whodunnit and a play about amuel Johnson, are presently in the orks.

"I've always been taken with the elo- uence, the testimonial quality, of ob- cts. In my fictional collage, Minor ods, I have introduced in evidence as any objects and documents as pos- ible with a minimum of comment. (In- eed, Evidence was a working title for he book.) Thus, a nine-year-old's iary, a psychiatrist's memos, tape re- cordings, newspaper clippings, personal letters knock shoulders with one another down the page propelling the story forward by their implications.

"To keep the ride smooth I have interspersed these documentary sections with narrative sections, often in a ruminative tone. This tone, I believe, is dominant, which means that despite descriptions of corporate machinations and of explosive personal violence, the book is more elegy than indictment. The "evidence" begins to point everywhere. Where can one assign blame for the loss of childhood, the death of a father, the insanity of a brother, the perfidy of a corporation in which one happens to be employed? As the narrative accelerates, the lines of guilt and responsibility converge in an ending which is at once unexpected and inevitable."

Wyatt Wyatt
Catching Fire
(Random—April)
"Fiction is as necessary and important to us as fire. We all love stories. We always have, we always will. A novel can astonish and entertain us in many ways, but it endures only when the humans in it breathe and cast shadows and sweat. When they are lost in their own follies, the way the rest of us are. I believe the most important thing I can do is tell a story that is never boring, and that is honest about the way men and women feel and behave.

"My book, Catching Fire, is about a normal young man who got into bad trouble from making love. A jealous husband set him afire with charcoal lighter fluid. Now he's afraid to do it again. He's afraid to live. But his belly has healed with a graft of pigskin that saved his life and obliterated his navel, and down deep, beneath his innocence, he suspects he is just an animal—worse—that he is the pigman—condemned in spite of his struggle to be good, to invent strategies and tell lies and fall in love, like all the other animals in the book.

"I wrote it because Norman Foreman and the beautiful Spider Webb and Captain Leroy Smokes and Offernel Farrington and the other people in it insisted I pay attention. . . ."

N. Zaroulis
The Poe Papers
(Putnam—May)
"I wrote The Poe Papers because it was in my head clamoring to get out. I came across the facts of Poe's romance with Annie Richmond about a year before I began to write the novel. I was fascinated by the similarity between the Poe-Richmond story and the Byron-Shelley-Clairmont story upon which Henry James based The Aspern Papers. The material stayed in the back of my mind, surfacing occasionally, so that by the time it demanded to be set down it had more or less worked itself out and needed only to be transcribed and polished, as it were. (I am not saying that novelists are stenographers, although in a sense they are; I am saying that a story cannot be forced, and that the subconscious mind works in mysterious ways to shape it).

"I write during the day—never at night—with a pencil in spiral-bound notebooks. Then I type what I've written—I can't compose on the typewriter, and I can't correct and revise handwriting. Therefore my work often progresses more slowly than I'd like. Currently I am working on a long historical novel which requires much research and background reading. Usually I do this work at night unless I need to read microfilm at a library.

"Not so incidentally, I'm sure I speak for many writers when I say that I couldn't function without libraries and their staffs. That all their help should be given so kindly, so willingly—and generally free—is a never-failing wonder.

"The current status of both fiction and nonfiction is, I think, fairly good. My opinion is uncolored by facts; it's just a feeling that I have. Our town has two thriving bookstores and a well-patronized library. Possibly New Englanders read more than people in other parts of the country—I don't know. But the audience for books of all kinds seems to be growing. People are always eager for a good story, well-told. If writers can remember this, then I think that the novel will continue to be alive and well. It is a unique form: nothing can replace it. On the other hand, it is infinitely adaptable; therefore it will survive. . . ."

Rod Townley

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

All advertisements for the Positions Open and the Positions Wanted classifications will be edited to exclude direct or indirect references to race, creed, color, age, and sex as conditions of employment. Positions open and positions wanted, $1.80 per line, minimum charge, $5.40, all other types of ads, $2.75 per line, minimum charge $8.25. If voucher forms are required for billing, please send them at the time advertisements are submitted for insertion. Copy for ads and requests for cancellations must be received at the LJ office 45 days preceding date of issue. Write: Classified Advertising Department, Library Journal, 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, New York 10036.

OUT-OF-PRINT

EXCLUSIVE WANT LISTS get prompt attention, wide search, reasonable prices, from International Bookfinders, Inc., Box 1-LJ, Pacific Palisades, Calif. 90272.

COLONIAL "out-of-print" Book Service, Inc. Want Lists invited. 23 E. 4th St., New York City 10003.

EXCLUSIVE WANT LISTS advertised & searched plus 150,000 vol. indexed stock. PAB 2917 Atlantic, Atlantic City, NJ 08401.

WE FIND BOOKS. Free International Search. Exclusive want lists invited. Realistic prices. Eva Davis Books. 108 Prince Charles, Williamsburg, VA 23185.

OUT OF PRINT books located. Send in title, author to: Free Search Service, Dept. LJ, 41 Union Square West, New York, NY 10003.

OP BOOKS in literature; social sciences, humanities. EGLI; Lamont; BCL, etc. Book Lande, 8926 National Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90034.

IRREGULAR SERIALS are one of our specialties. Foreign books and periodicals, current and out-of-print. Albert J. Phiebig Inc., Box 352, White Plains, N.Y. 10602.

MAGAZINES—BACK NUMBER

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC: (1888-1977). Free quotes and discounts. Price guide for appraisal. $5. Don Smith, 3930 Rankin St., Louisville, KY 40214.

BACK ISSUE MAGAZINES, general, scholarly, technical. Designed to serve high school and jr. college libraries. Please send want lists to Back Issues West; P.O. Box 6688, Tucson, Arizona 85716.

REPLACEMENT ISSUES of recent subscriptions. Subscribers to journals listed in Science Citation Index have a good chance of immediately locating lacking issues for years 1970-1975 with the Replacement Serials Section of M.S.I, the worldwide back-issue house. Please address your queries to Maxwell Scientific International (now a Pergamon Press, Inc. division), Fairview Park, Elmsford, New York 10523.

OVER 2,000,000 backdate magazines. Send want lists. Magazine Center, Room 406, 145 West 29th. New York, NY 10001.

INTERNATIONAL UNIVERSITY Booksellers, Inc., 101 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10003. We buy: Would like to hear of periodical backfiles of scholarly significance, individual titles or entire collections, surplus to your present needs. We sell: We carry one of the most comprehensive inventories of periodicals in all fields and langauges and are a major supplier to academic libraries in all parts of the world. Call or write Mr. Becker.

MICROFORMS

MICROFORMS. Good second-hand microfilm of periodicals of established micropublishers bought and sold. Write or call Microforms International Marketing Company, Fairview Park, Elmsford, New York 10523. (914) 592-9141.

FOR SALE

BOOKMOBILE: One 30' 1963 Gerstenslager. Rebuilt generator. Custom shelving, capacity approximately 3500 books, structurally sound, body condition fair, creme with red trim, highest bid. Portsmouth Public Library Board of Trustees, 1220 Gallia Street, Portsmouth, Ohio 45662.

USED FRIDEN Flexiwriter: Complete unit. Currently programmed for cataloging data input to computer. Good condition. For sale because library requires more sophisticated equipment. G 94.

FOR SALE. 233 volumes Library of Congress Catalog of Printed Cards: pre-1942 ed. 167 vols; 1942-47 ed. 42 vols; 1948-52 ed. 2 vols. $1,000 plus postage, payable if desired in 4 installments of $250. These volumes can be delivered immediately; pre-1942 ed. A-Prie vols. 1-121; 1942-47 ed. A-Port vols. 1-29; 1948-52 ed. A-Presh vols. 1-16. Remainder can be delivered as our Mansell edition arrives complete by 1979. Write: Librarian, St. John's College, Annapolis, MD 21404

SERVICES—PERSONNEL

THERESA M. BURKE Employment Agency, 8 West 40th St., N.Y., N.Y. 10018. Specializing in the recruitment of library and information personnel for special, academic and public libraries.

POSITIONS WANTED

DESIRE ENTRY level librarian position in a junior or community college or small four year college library anywhere in the U.S. or Canada. Have one year university library experience. Have M.S. in L.S. degree. James R. Moss, 1411 Hummingbird, Hillsboro, Texas 76645.

POSITIONS OPEN—NORTHEAST

EDUCATION REFERENCE Librarian for September 2-December 20, 1977 only, to replace librarian on sabbatical leave. Reference, orientation, and collection development responsibilities for both print and non-print areas. Must have ALA accredited M.L.S. and undergraduate major in education; elementary education, special education, or secondary education in that order of preference. (The secondary education degree must be in English, speech/theater, or communication arts.) A knowledge of audio-visual materials and equipment is necessary. Salary as Instructor: $5,457.90 for the appointment period. Higher salary possible with experience. Letter of intent and resumé should indicate how candidate meets qualifications. Send by March 1, 1977 to Larry L. Nesbit, Recruitment Committee Chairperson, Retan Center Education Library, Mansfield State College, Mansfield, PA 16933. MSC is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer complying with executive order 11246 and Title IX.

UPERVISOR of Reference Services: To minister reference department and inter-rary loan services for a county library sys-n and coordinate a two-county area refer-ce program from a newly-opened adquarters building, 10 miles from Phila-lphia in South Jersey's new urban com-ex. Requirements: M.L.S. degree from an LA accredited school. Minimum 4 years ofessional experience, to include 1 year pervisory or administrative experience. A ckground in business, economics or sci-ces preferred. Applicant should have abili-to develop and carry out new programs. lary range $15,000-$17,000. Send résumé Director, Camden County Library, 8 helon Mall, Voorhees, N.J. 08043. Equal portunity employer.

ACULTY VACANCY, September 1977. teach within the areas of materials selec-n, reference, bibliography, public ser-es or special libraries. Appointment at as-tant professor rank. Salary negotiable. octorate preferred. Equal opportunity/af-mative action employer. Contact: Dr. Jay Daily, Chairperson, Faculty Search Com-ttee, Graduate School of Library and In-rmation Sciences, University of Pitts-rgh, Pittsburgh, PA 15260. Deadline Feb-ary 18,1977.

ACULTY VACANCY, September 1977. direct advanced student research and ach courses in children's literature and blic library children's services. Can-dates should have achieved national recog-tion in field. Doctorate desirable. Appoint-ent anticipated at rank of professor. Salary gotiable. Equal opportunity/affirmative ac-n employer. Contact: Dr. Jay E. Daily, airperson, Faculty Search Committee, raduate School of Library and Information iences, University of Pittsburgh, Pitts-rgh, PA 15260. Deadline February 18, 77.

IRECTOR Division of Library Science. utztown State College, one of fourteen ate colleges of Pennsylvania, is seeking a rector for the division of library science. his is an administrative position on a elve month appointment effective Septem-r 1, 1977. Salary: $26,600-$29,200 depend-g upon background and experience. Doc-rate preferred, Master's degree from ALA credited institution required. Experience administration and library education re-ired. Applications will be accepted until arch 1, 1977. Forward applications to: Dr. odson E. Dreisbach, Vice President for cademic Affairs, Kutztown State College, utztown, PA 19530. Equal opportunity/af-mative action employer.

IRST RATE Cataloger. Minimum four ears' experience including original catalog-g and LC classification. Music background ssential; language competence desirable. his is a temporary position May 15, 1977-ugust 31, 1978. Over $13,000 annual rate to ght person. Apply to: L. E. Wikander, Wil-ams College Library, Williamstown, MA 1267. An affirmative action/equal opportu-ity employer.

IBRARY DIRECTOR III: Village of 5,000 in Nassau County, Long Island, 976/77 budget $450,000, FTE staff 22, book ollection 90,000, circulation 250,000, new 3,000 sq. ft. building. Civil service, state re-rement, Blue Cross, Blue Shield, Major edical, Dental, 22 working days vacation. alary range $22,000-$30,000. ALA accredit-d M.L.S. plus a minimum of six years expe-ence as director or assistant director. Posi-on open August 1, 1977. Send résumé by ebruary 15 to: Chairperson, Board of rustees, Garden City Public Library, 60 eventh Street, Garden City, NY 11530.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHEAST

ASSISTANT GOVERNMENT Documents Librarian. Minimum requirements: M.L.S. and at least one year of library experience plus an undergraduate degree in the social sciences. Salary $10,000 with usual fringe benefits on twelve months contract. Applications to: Dr. Claude E. Fike, Director, William D. McCain Library, University of Southern Mississippi, Southern Station, Box 5148, Hattiesburg, MS 39401. An affirmative action, equal opportunity employer.

HEAD LIBRARIAN, undergraduate college of liberal arts and sciences. High quality, well-selected collection of 160,000. The candidate being sought should have at least an M.L.S. from an accredited program, and should have had five years or more administrative experience in library work. He or she should have knowledge of current trends in methods and functions of libraries in college settings. Salary range expected to be $15,000-$17,000, depending on qualifications; faculty status; excellent fringe benefits, including TIAA/CREF. Southwestern At Memphis is a coeduational college of 1,000 students, set on a beautiful wooded campus in the midst of an urban center of 1,000,000, and having a live tradition of excellence in education. Its well-qualified faculty come from all parts of the country. The college is an equal opportunity employer, and encourages inquiries from all qualified applicants. Position available July 1, 1977, or earlier if convenient. Nominations or applications should be sent to: Dean Robert G. Patterson, Southwestern At Memphis, 2000 North Parkway, Memphis, TN 38112.

CATALOGER (chiefly serials). University of Southwestern Louisiana. Master's degree in L.S., experience in cataloging and serials required. Knowledge of French and German desirable. Familiarity and experience with national trends and developments in serials cataloging and automation desirable. Assistant professor rank. 12 months salary range $13,000–$15,000, depending upon experience. LC classification, member of SOLINET. Send résumé and three letters of recommendation to: Miss Norma Durand, Head Cataloger, Dupre Library, University of Southwestern Louisiana, Lafayette, Louisiana 70504. Deadline May 1, 1977. Position available Jan. 1, 1977. The University of Southwestern Louisiana is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

DIRECTOR OF LIBRARY: Austin Peay State University, Clarksville, Tennessee, 45 miles N.W. of Nashville. Responsibilities: Leadership and administrative management of 180,000 volume modern library facility with budget of $423,000 and staff of 20 (5 professional); serving 4600 students. Reports directly to chief academic officer. Qualifications: M.L.S. from ALA accredited library school and additional subject Master's degree, with Doctor's degree preferred. Eight to ten years library experience including three to five years of academic library administrative experience. Salary open. Starting date July 1, 1977 or nogotiable. Résumé must include degrees, experience, 3 references (one from current employer), scholarly contributions and professional activities and must be received by March 1, 1977. Apply to: Vice President for Academic Affairs, Austin Peay State University, Clarksville, Tennessee 37040. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

KENTUCKY. DIRECTOR of public library system serving urban-county area with population of 206,500. Main library, 2 full-time branches, 2 part-time branches, 4 bookmobiles, special services to the disadvantaged and the aging. Applicant must have M.L.S. from ALA accredited library school. Public library background with minimum of 5 years' experience, 3 of which must be in administration. Must have ability to innovate, initiate and direct staff of full and part-time, including professional librarians. Salary from $20,000 depending on qualifications. Fringe benefits. Write and send résumé to: Dr. Jess L. Gardner, Chairperson, Board of Trustees, Lexington Public Library, 251 West Second street, Lexington, Kentucky 40507. An equal opportunity employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHWEST

TEXAS. Children's librarian, Victoria Public Library, Victoria, Texas, one hundred miles equidistant from Houston, Austin, San Antonio. Responsibilities for dynamic librarian include supervision of department, selection of materials, collection development, budget encumbrance, aggressive program planning and creation, and community contact. M.L.S., ALA accredited. Experience desirable, not mandatory. Salary range $8,400-$9,600; excellent fringe benefits. Position filled by March 1. Send letter & résumé to: J. Rippel, Director, 302 N. Main, Victoria, TX 77901.

POSITIONS OPEN—MIDDLE EAST

TWO POSITIONS: (1) Head Librarian for independent Arab university on the occupied West Bank of the Jordan. Will handle administration, technical services in 26,000 volume collection. M.L.S. from ALA-accredited school, experience. Knowledge of non-book media is helpful (2) Reference Librarian to develop reference services. Teaching interest to handle freshman library skills course. M.L.S. from ALA accredited school, reference and teaching experience helpful. Salary from $6,400 p.a. up. Relocation allowance 15% of salary. Air transportation provided. Apply to: Dr. G.A. Baramki, Dean, Birzeit Universtiy, Birzeit via Israel.

POSITIONS OPEN—AUSTRALIA

LECTURER (Ref. 963), School of Librarianship, University of New South Wales, Sydney, Australia. Applicants should have academic qualifications and substantial managerial and/or practical experience in medium-to-large library systems with the operation of automated library systems. Substantial experience required in academic teaching of library management, automated library systems and/or information storage and retrieval systems. Background or experience in operations research, systems analysis and design desirable with applicants demonstrating a grasp of quantitative techniques. Applicants should have capability to perform research and/or development studies for libraries, archives, technical information centers, and computer-based information dissemination centers, or similar information processing institutions. Salary range $A13,552-$A17,993 per annum. Commencing salary according to qualifications and experience. Application form from Appointments Office, P.O. Box 1, Kensington, N.S.W., Australia, 2033. Applications close 28th February, 1977.

POSITIONS OPEN—AUSTRALIA

QUEENSLAND INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY BRISBANE—AUSTRALIA

SENIOR LECTURER/LECTURER IN LIBRARY STUDIES

Applications for the above positions within the Department of Librianship are invited from professionally qualified graduates eligible for Associate membership of the Library Association of Australia. Applicants should have good academic and professional qualifications and suitable experience in teaching, research, and practice. It is hoped that the successful applicants will be able to take up duty no later than June, 1977, in preparation for the Spring (Second) Semester commencing in July, 1977.

Expertise may be in any of the following areas, but persons offering other subject fields will not be excluded from consideration:

Development of print and non-print collections and basic reference tools; Basic media creativity (i.e., the teaching of basic production skills in the areas of graphics, photography film-making, video and sound recordings); Literature and Libraries for children and young people (including school Resource centers) Resources and bibliography in the fields of the Humanities of the Social Sciences; Automated systems (including information storage and retrieval as well as purely "housekeeping" systems); Systems analysis.

SALARY SCALES:
Depending on the qualifications and experience of the successful applicant, an appointment will be made within the appropriate range:

Senior Lecturer:	$A17767-$A20619 p.a.
Lecturer I.	$A13033-$A17427
Lecturer II.	$A11151-$A14345

(Salaries currently under review)

Further information may be obtained from the Personnel Officer, Queensland Institute of Technology, P.O. Box 246, North Quay 4000, Brisbane, Australia.

Applications, quoting reference number V126/76, qualifications, experience, present employment, together with the names and addresses of two referees should reach the Personnel Officer, (address above) by Monday, 28th February, 1977.

POSITIONS OPEN—WEST

ASSISTANT LIBRARIAN, Government publications and map department in new learning activities resource center incorporating library and nonprint media services. Under the general direction of the department head will have responsibility for the map collection including the classifying and cataloging of maps. Will assist in the operation of the department, answer reference questions involving both maps and government publications, give student orientations, and perform other professional work as required. Qualifications: Graduate degree from an ALA accredited school of library science. Librarians also holding a degree major in geography or geology or with experience in the cataloging and interpretation of maps and in reference service with government publications will be given preference. Salary: $11,556-$15,924 (assistant librarian). A tenure-track position. Send letter of application, résumé, and credentials by April 1, 1977 to: Robert G. Brennan, Director of Public Services, California State University, Chico, Chico, CA 95929. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

CURRICULUM MATERIALS Department in a new learning activities resource center incorporating library and nonprint media services. Supervises department and participates in the acquisition and processing of curriculum materials. Provides reference service and gives instruction in the use of materials. Ability to work with faculty, students and professional teachers is essential. Qualifications: Graduate degree from an ALA accredited school of library science. A second Master's degree in the field of education is highly desirable. A minimum of three years of professional library experience preferably in a curriculum materials department, part of which shall have been in a supervisory capacity. Teaching experience is valuable. Salary: $13,440-$18,564 (senior assistant librarian). A tenure-track position. Send letter of application, résumé, and credentials by April 1, 1977 to: Robert G. Brennan, Director of Public Services, California State University, Chico, Chico, CA 95929. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

SPECIAL COLLECTIONS/archives librarian. University of Denver. Position open September 1, 1977. As Assistant Curator, responsibilities include physical and bibliographical organization of collections, processing of manuscripts, records, documents and university generated materials; preparation of guides, indexes, inventories and exhibits. Requirements: Master's degree from an accredited library school, relevant 2nd Master's or equivalent, courses in archival organization and management, some experience, familiarity with rare and semi-rare book collections, Western history and archival collections. 12 month appointment; 22 days annual leave and other faculty fringe benefits. Salary, $11,000 minimum. Send résumé to: George A. Snyder, Curator, Special Collections, Penrose Library, University of Denver, Denver, CO 80208. Equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

ADMINISTRATIVE POSITION: 11 month contract. Director-Learning Resources Center. M.A. in library and media studies or ALA accredited M.A. significant community college experience in both library and media work. Salary $20,681-$23,054 plus paid insurances. Applications must be received by February 28, 1977. Call or write: Personnel Officer, Shasta College, Redding, CA 96001. (916) 241-3523.

POSITIONS OPEN—MIDWEST

ASSISTANT PROFESSOR, University Minnesota Library School, for Septemb 1977. Minimum salary: $14,000. Ph.D. candidacy in library or information scienc Appropriate teaching or professional expe ence. To teach in area of information s ence, advise students, conduct researc Send résumés by March 1, 1977 to: Low E. Olson, Chairperson, Search Committe Library School, 419 Walter Library, Univ sity of Minnesota, 117 Pleasant St. SE, Mi neapolis, MN 55455. An equal opportuni affirmative action employer.

DIRECTOR. Public Library in Westervil Ohio, an attractive residential, small colle community of 20,000, located 17 miles fr downtown Columbus, Ohio. The libra serves a school district of 50,000; has a st of 35 and an annual budget of abo $500,000. Annual circulation is ov 300,000. The director will exercise gene supervision of all departments, direct t preparation of the library's budget, plan t library's investments, recommend the sel tion of library personnel, and represent t library in the community. The applica should be a graduate of an accredited libra school, and have 7-10 years of library expe ence, 4 of which should be in administ tion. The beginning salary range is $20,0 $22,500 effective June 1, 1977. Send applic tion and résumé by March 15, 1977 to: Pre dent, Library Board of Trustees, 110 So State Street, Westerville, Ohio 43081.

CHAIRPERSON, Dept. of Library Scien ALA accredited. Faculty of seven, 65 F students. To fill vacancy due to retireme Master's degree from ALA accredit school, Doctorate preferably from ALA credited library school. Eligibility for sen level faculty appointment. Successful tea ing experience, experience in at least o type of library work, active participation professional organizations. Superi achievement in research and publicatio Demonstrated administrative ability and miliarity with policies and procedures higher education. Rank and salary neg tiable, depending upon qualifications. Eq opportunity, affirmative action employ Send résumé before April 1, 1977 Dean Barbara J. Seelye, College of Prof sional Studies, Northern Illinois Universit DeKalb, IL 60115.

LIBRARIAN, Senior cataloger. Origi cataloging of monographs. Acts as resou person for two other catalogers and o clerk. Desired qualifications in order of i portance: M.L.S. plus at least five years' e perience in cataloging. Background in s ence and technology. Knowledge of MA format. Familiarity with OCLC catalogi Foreign language facility. Faculty appoi ment. Salary $15,000 or more depending on qualifications. Position available July 1977. Deadline for applications February 1977. Send Résumé to: John Thomas, P sonnel Officer, Library Offices, Stewart Ce ter, Purdue University, West LaFayette, 47907. An equal access/equal opportun employer.

LIBRARY DIRECTOR: July 1, 1977, Ov all responsibility for private college libra (enrollment 1472 on-campus fte). ALA credited M.L.S. plus second Master's higher; 5 years professional academic brary experience, including manageme Salary negotiable but not less than $14,5 Send résumé and references to: Sister S fanie Weisgram, Library, College of Sa Benedict, Saint Joseph, MN 56374.

ARKE HISTORICAL Library: Librari- and manuscripts curator to catalog and ntain collections of books, pamphlets, nuscripts, and historical materials, and to ervise reading room. M.A. in history or rature and M.L.S. required. Interest in erials and earnest desire to engage in re- rch for publication expected. Salary ,300 adjustable in accordance with expe- ce. Full faculty privileges, rank accord- to academic credentials. Apply to: John nming, Director, Clarke Historical Li- ry, Central Michigan University, Mount asant, MI 48859. CMU is a non-discrimi- ory educational institution and employer.

TENDED SERVICES DIRECTOR for an county library serving 170,000. Ad- ister 9 branches, 2 mobile units. New tral library opened 1974. Requirements: L.S. plus 4 years of library experience in pervisory capacity. Apply: Brown Coun- Personnel Dept., Brown County Safety lding, 125 South Adams Street, Green , Wisconsin 54301. Include résumé, script of library school grades, and mini- m of three references. An equal opportu- employer. Salary $14,000. Position n January 1, 1977.

ILDREN'S LIBRARIAN: M.L.S. from redited ALA school. Responsibilities in- de supervision of department, selection materials, program planning, community tact. Salary $11,544 plus benefits. Posi- n open March, 1977. Experience working h children and knowledge of Spanish de- ble. Send résumé before February 1, 7 to Mrs. Jule Fosbender, Head Librari- City Hall, Adrian, MI 49221.The City of rain is an equal opportunity employer.

RTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY Li- ry. Serials Cataloger. Performs original copy cataloging of serials, using Dewey AACR, and MARC format in North- tern's On-Line Total Integrated System TIS). Assists in training and supervising port staff. Coordinates procedures with er departments in technical services and oughout the library. Qualifications: L.S. from ALA accredited library ool; several years of monograph catalog- experience and desire to work with seri- or several years experience in serial ac- sitions, cataloging or serial maintenance. rking knowledge of at least two Western ropean languages, preferable French or rman. Supervisory experience or poten- Knowledge of current developments changes in cataloging and library auto- tion. Salary: $10,000-$12,500, depending experience. Open: Immediately. Applica- ns accepted through March 1, 1977. Ap- : Robert Ireland, Personnel Officer, rthwestern University Library, Evans- , IL 60201. An equal opportunity employ-

EAD OF CATALOG Division: Available mediately. The Public Library of Colum- s and Franklin County has a challenging portunity for a career oriented librarian h an M.L.S. from an ALA accredited col- e or university. All applicants should ve demonstrated supervisory, organiza- nal, communicative skills and be familiar h DDC. Minimum qualifications: M.L.S. th three to five years of professional cata- ing experience. Salary range: $14,726.40- 1,049.60. We offer a creative working en- onment with continuous opportunities for complishments and professional growth. interested, please forward résumé in con- ence to: C. E. Johnson, Director of Per- nnel, Public Library of Columbus and anklin County, 96 S. Grant Avenue, Co- nbus, Ohio 43215. An equal opportunity ployer m/f.

LIBRARY INSTRUCTION Librarian, Eastern Illinois University. A new position, open June 1 1977. Responsible for providing library orientation and instruction to students and for interpreting the library to both faculty and students through classroom lectures, library tours, A/V presentations and library publications. Assigned also on a part-time basis to the various public service areas. Minimum qualifications: M.L.S. from an ALA accredited library school, second graduate degree in instructional technology; two years of progressively responsible experience in an academic library; familiarity with both print and non-print library resources; a working knowledge of computer assisted instruction and its application; the ability to work effectively with the library staff, undergraduates and faculty. Beginning salary up to $15,000 depending on qualifications. 12 month appointment with faculty status; Illinois state retirement system; 23 days annual leave. Send applications by April 1, 1977 to: Office of the Vice President of Administrative Affairs, Eastern Illinois University, Charleston, IL 61920. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

YOUNG ADULT-A/V LIBRARIAN: To serve recreational needs of high school aged patrons and audio-visual needs of all ages. Responsible for collections and program development under general supervision of supervisor of adult services. Broad first hand knowledge of popular reading materials and good knowledge of music required. Master's degree from ALA accredited L.S. program required. Pertinent public library experience desired. Salary range: $14,147-$17,196 in six steps. Benefits include four weeks vacation after first year. Paid health and life insurance, eleven paid holidays, sick leave to maximum of 135 days. Applications close: Feb. 19, 1977. To apply send résumé together with references to: City Librarian, Decatur Public Library, 247 E. North, Decatur, IL 62523.

UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN, Madison: Assistant professor of library science. Design and carry out continuing library education program for library staff throughout state. Joint appointment between UW-Extension and UW library school. Teach one campus-based course. Library experience with some administrative skill, continuing education experience, and teaching experience preferred. M.L.S. degree required; advanced study desirable. Minimum starting salary $17,000 for 12 months. Position open September 1977. Applications by March 1, 1977. Apply to: Prof. Walter J. Meives, Communication Programs, UW-Extension, 610 Langdon St., Madison, WI 53706. Telephone: (608) 262-3982. AA/EOE.

CATALOGER responsible for original cataloging and classification of monographs, with emphasis on the sciences. Prepares copy for OCLC input; uses LC classification and LC subject headings. May also train and revise work of LTAs. Minimum qualifications: M.L.S. from an ALA accredited library school, second Master's degree in a biological or physical science, and reading knowledge of at least one Western European language. Familiarity with LC classification, MARC formats, OCLC system desirable. Rank of assistant professor. Twelve month appointment. Minimum salary $12,220. Usual fringe benefits. Position available immediately. Send résumé to: Robert J. Adelsperger, Acting Personnel Officer, Dept. 3B University of Illinois at Chicago Circle, P.O. Box 8198, Chicago, IL 60680. Deadline for applications March 15, 1977. An affirmative action/equal opportunity employer.

Sales-Business Offices

NEW YORK:
R.R. Bowker Company
1180 Avenue of the Americas
New York, New York 10036
Dominick Ciarletti 764-5246
Carlton H. Thiele 764-5135
Business & Production Manager,
Maureen J. Rose 764-3363
Classified Advertising Manager,
Frieda Johnson 764-3362

MIDWEST:
Walter Freed and Associates, Inc.
1720 Algonquin Road
Mount Prospect, Illinois 60056
Walter Freed 312 593-5255

WEST:
James K. Levitt and Associates, Inc.
13208 Saticoy Street
North Hollywood, California 91605
John Bolduc 213 875-1517

SOUTH:
Metropolitan Publishers
Representatives, Inc.
2045 Peachtree Road, N.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30309
Marvin Arnsdorff 404 352-2173

If you work with children's books... use SCHOOL LIBRARY JOURNAL to work with you.

SLJ reviews over 85% of all books published for children and young adults. It's the one and only magazine that serves your special needs. Best news of all, the cost is only $13.00 for a year's subscription, and we'll gladly bill you later. To start service, simply send your name and address to:

SLJ SCHOOL LIBRARY JOURNAL
1180 AVENUE OF THE AMERICAS
NEW YORK, N.Y. 10036

2/1

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS

ABC-Clio Press 325
Abingdon Press 395
Acropolis Books 226
Acton House Publishers 393
Addison-Wesley Publishing Co. 392
American Society of Agricultural Engineers 396
Amphoto 227
Arlington House 228
Atheneum Publishers 229

Baker & Taylor Co. 342
Barron's Educational Series 373, 374, 377, 381, 383
Basic Books 374
Basic Science Press 394
Beinfeld Publishing 372
Boardman Co. 320
R. R. Bowker Co. 304, 305-312, 409
George Braziller 230
Brigham Young University Press 231
Butterick Publishing 232

Capra Press 387
Checkpoint Systems 302, 303
Columbia University Press 385
Community Law Reports 371
Congressional Quarterly 391
Cornell University Press 233
Thomas Y. Crowell Co. 234, 235, 368, 370, 371, 377
Crown Publishers 236

Delacorte Press 237
Demco Educational Corp. 314, 316, 320
Dial Press 238
Dodd, Mead & Co. 239, 376
Domus Books 240
Dow Jones-Irwin 378
E. P. Dutton & Co. 241

M. Evans & Co. 242

Facts on File 351
Farrar, Straus & Giroux 243
Frederick Fell Publishers 244
Fortress Press 357
Franklin Distributors Corp. 322
Franklin Watts 245

Gale Research Co. 366
Gaylord Bros. 318, 319
Greenwood Press 246
Grove Press 247

G. K. Hall & Co. 248, 249
Hamlyn/America 375
Harper & Row, Publishers 403
Harvard University Press 250
Hastings House, Publishers 251
Highsmith Co. 316
Houghton Mifflin Co. 252
Human Sciences Press 254
Hunter Publishing Co. 372

Imibooks Publications 393
Independent Publishers Group 254

Johns Hopkins University Press 397

KNOGO 346
KTO Microform 3rd Cover
KTO Press 256, 257
Keats Publishing 326
Alfred A. Knopf 255
Kodansha International 258

Larousse & Co. 369
Library Binding Service 315
Library Filmstrip Center 324
Library Microfilms & Materials Co. 322
J. B. Lippincott Co. 259, 376, 381, 396

McGraw-Hill Book Co. 261
Macmillan Co. 263-265
Mason/Charter 262, 407
Microfilming Corp. of America 4th Cover
M.I.T. Press 260
William Morrow & Co. 266, 384

New York Graphic Society 268
Northland Press 387
W. W. Norton & Co. 270

Ohio University Press 351
Orbis Books 271
Oxmoor House 272

Pantheon Books
Penguin Books 274, 2
Pergamon Press
Prentice-Hall
Princeton University Press 278, 279,

Random House 280,
Rodale Press
Rutgers University Press

St. Martin's Press 402, 405,
Charles Scribner's Sons
M. E. Sharpe
Sheed Andrews & McMeel
Simon & Schuster
Standard Change-Makers
Stein & Day Publishers
Sterling Publishing Co.
Swets North America
Syracuse University Press
System Development Corp. 2nd Co

Taplinger Publishing Co.
Transatlantic Arts
Two Continents Publishing Group

United Nations Publications
Universe Books
University of Illinois Press
University of Massachusetts Press
University of Nebraska Press
University of North Carolina Press
University of Notre Dame Press

Vacudyne Altair
Vanguard Press 291, 380,
Viking Press 292,

Walker & Co.
Wesleyan University Press
Westminster Press
William & Richards
Winchester Press
Wyden Books

Yale University Press

FEBRUARY 15, 1977/ISSN 0000-0027

LIBRARY JOURNAL

LJ A Report on the Oklahoma Paperback Experiment
Boys and Girls and Sex and Libraries . . .
In the News: COSLA boasts of state agency $$ efficiency; trends in library cooperation pegged; state agency heads eye future

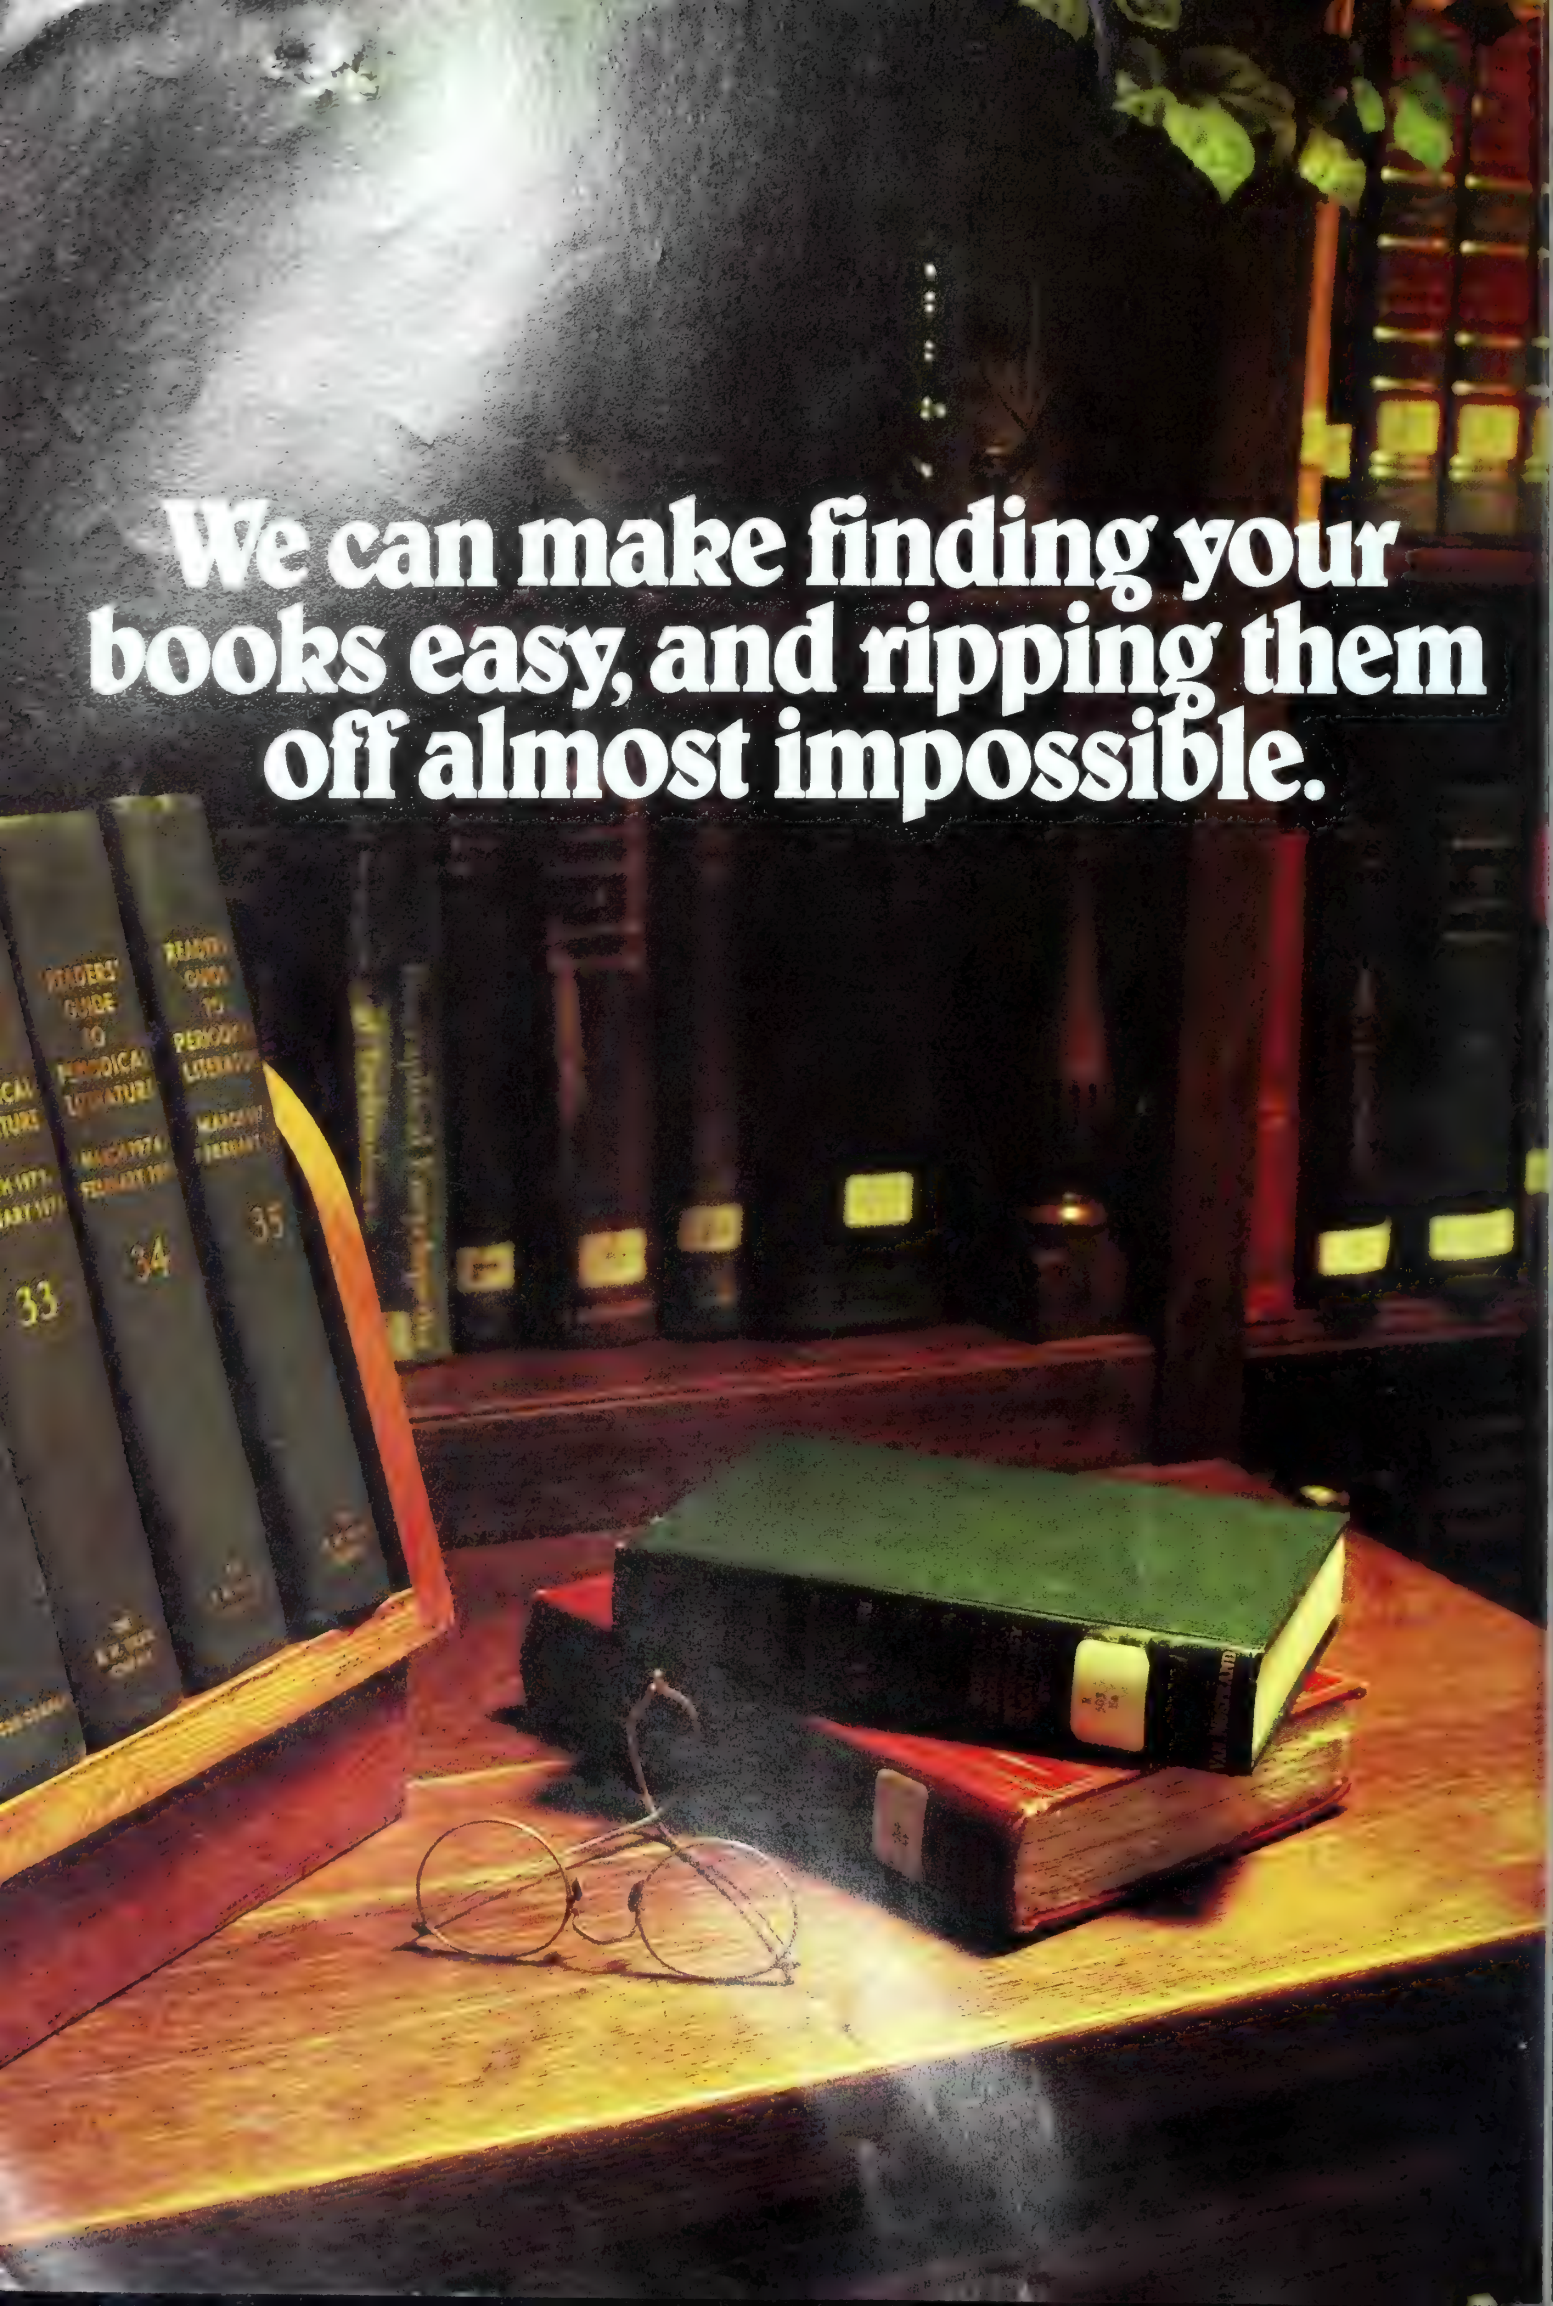
94010purlz4826 41jav6309
Burlingame Pub Lib
480 Primrose Rd.
Burlingame, CA 94010



We can make finding your books easy, and ripping them off almost impossible.
33
34
35

In the catalog, on the shelf, or out on loan – we make sure you'll find the books you want.

One of the most critical library tasks is processing material for easy retrieval when you need it.

At 3M, we've used this logic to develop new and more efficient ways to streamline cataloging, control circulation, and solve the problem of book theft.

Your new books will find their way to the shelves faster with our Micrographic Catalog Retrieval System (MCRS).

MCRS speeds up the cataloging process and simplifies verification for acquisitions and interlibrary loans.

Here's how it works: MCRS subscribers receive, on microfiche, the latest catalog records of the Library of Congress, the National Union Catalog, and shared entries of eight major Canadian universities on a weekly or monthly basis. In addition to the current year's entries, subscriptions include up to five complete years of retrospective microfiche data containing the cumulated entries of these sources.

MCRS regularly supplies an updated Title Index and Main Entry Index on microfiche and a hard copy L.C. Card Number Index, allowing you to find cataloging information through several access points.

You'll find catalog card production quicker with a 3M Model 500 Microfilm Dry Silver Reader-Printer.

Cataloging speed isn't the only way MCRS saves you money. By using a 3M Model 500 Reader-Printer, MCRS subscribers can make an intermediate catalog card master directly from the data fiche. Then add your own call numbers and produce in-house card sets ready for headings.

Pinpoint any book's location, who has it, and when it is to be returned with the 3M Brand Inventory Control System (ICS).

And these are only a few of the jobs that ICS can do for you.

The 3M Brand Inventory Control System uses a light pen and bar code label, identifying each unique library item and patron, to link every transaction on-line to a powerful minicomputer. This minicomputer can process and coordinate a multitude of data elements, fully automating all your library's circulation functions.

The ICS performs fast, accurate check-out and check-in; records holds; computes fines; automatically prints overdue mailers; generates patron directories; keeps track of items interloaned between library branches; determines inactive items to help 'weed' your collection; keeps track of reserve collection loans; and much, much more.

It is the only system that can be connected directly to the "Tattle-Tape" system and tie in book security to the ICS operation.

With its ultra fast response time, elimination of separate files, and extensive report-generating capabilities, the 3M Inventory Control System provides you with the circulation control you need today, to meet the exploding demands of tomorrow.

It's truly the one System that can do it all!

Keep your books available for patron use with our "Tattle-Tape®" Book Detection System.

Advanced cataloging methods and automated circulation control are wasted efforts if you're continually losing your collection by theft.

Proven in over 1,000 installations throughout the world, the "Tattle-Tape" Book Detection System stops book thieves cold. Attempts to take a treated book through the detection area without proper charge-out will automatically trigger an alarm alerting the library staff.

No matter what angle the book is carried or whether it is hidden under clothing, or inside a conventional briefcase, backpack or purse.

A book thief doesn't mind tearing a security marker out of a book. But "Tattle-Tape" markers are completely hidden... so thieves can't find them.

To find out more about our products, just send us this coupon or reply by letter!

All the coupons and letters we receive will be included in a drawing to give away a facsimile edition of The Birds of America, volumes 1 and 2, from original drawings by John James Audubon; 29½" x 39½". It will be presented to the winner's library, with an imprinted dedication in the name of the winner. The drawing will be held on June 20, 1977 in Detroit, Michigan during the American Library Association's Annual Conference.

Please send me more information about:

_____ Micrographic Catalog Retrieval System
_____ Inventory Control System
_____ Model 500 Microfilm Reader-Printer
_____ "Tattle-Tape" Book Detection System
_____ I'd like a 3M Library Systems representative to call.

Mail to:
3M Company
Library Systems
Bldg. 220-9E, 3M Center
St. Paul, Minnesota 55101

Your Name_____
Title_____
Name of Library_____
Institution_____
No. of Volumes_____
Address_____
City_____ State_____ Zip_____
Telephone No._____

Library Systems 3M COMPANY
MICROFILM PRODUCTS DIVISION
3M CENTER · SAINT PAUL, MINNESOTA 55101

Display pieces that are displays in themselves.

Presenting a trio of display pieces so attractive, they're known to draw attention on their own.

Meet Mar-Line's™ Magnetic Bulletin Board, Full Circle Exhibit Case and Newspaper Displayer: designed to solve today's display needs beautifully.

The first member of the threesome is completely child-safe. No more dangerous tacks. No messy tape. Magnets are all it takes to post notices and pictures. Children can also write or draw on this bulletin board with special dry markers. Then, to wipe it clean, just take an ordinary felt eraser or cloth.

The next striking showpiece, the Full Circle Exhibit Case, gives you 14 square feet of display area in only four square feet. And, as your needs change, you can easily move the case around.

Finally, the simple but sleek alternative to traditional newspaper displayers . . . displaying the front page of ten or more full-size or tabloid newspapers in just over four square feet of floor space.

For information on any or all three of these display pieces that are displays in themselves, write to Gaylord.

GAYLORD...ask any librarian.

GAYLORD BROS., INC., LIBRARY SYSTEMS, SUPPLIES, EQUIPMENT & PUBLICATIONS

Syracuse, NY 13201 TWX 710 545-0232 — Stockton, CA 95208

Furniture Manufacturing Division — Sanford, NC 27330

Distributed in Canada Exclusively by Lowe-Martin Inc. — Ottawa, K1G 3M4

FEBRUARY 15, 1977 / VOL. 102 NO. 4

LIBRARY JOURNAL

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF: John N. Berry III
SENIOR EDITORS: Shirley Havens, Karl Nyren
EDITOR, BOOK REVIEW: Janet Fletcher
ASSOCIATE EDITORS:
Book Review: Robert R. Harris
Bibliographic: Bette-Lee Fox
News: Noël Savage
PRODUCTION EDITOR: Ellen Mangin
REVIEW EDITORS: Marlene Charnizon, Ellen Kozlowski, Philip Mattera, Anneliese Schwarzer
ASSISTANT EDITORS: Maureen Crowley, Ann Sankar
PRODUCTION ASSISTANTS: Nancy Brown, Ann Yazejian
EDITORIAL ASSISTANTS: Andrea Kowler, Anne Richter
ADV. SALES MANAGER: Richard H. Brown
BUSINESS & ADV. PRODUCTION MANAGER: Maureen J. Rose
PUBLISHER: Paul J. Carnese

LIBRARY JOURNAL is published by R. R. Bowker Co., a Xerox company. Robert F. Asleson, President.

Direct editorial and advertising correspondence to 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York 10036. Telephone: (212) 764-5100. Subscription inquiries and changes of address should be directed to R. R. Bowker Company, Subscription Dept., P.O. Box 67, Whitinsville, Mass. 01588. Publications Offices at 117 Church Street, Whitinsville, Mass. 01488. Issued twice a month, September through June, monthly in July and August. Second class postage paid at Whitinsville, Mass. and additional mailing offices. Copyright © 1977 Xerox Corporation.

LIBRARY JOURNAL is indexed in Library Literature, Library & Information Science Abstracts, and Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature. SUBSCRIPTIONS: USA: 1 year $19.00; 2 years $36.00; 3 years $51.00. Canada and Postal Union of the Americas and Spain, add $2 per year; elsewhere, add $3 per year. Single copy $1.35. Spring, fall, and winter announcement numbers, $3.25 each. POSTMASTER: Please send Form 3579 to R. R. Bowker Company, P.O. Box 67, Whitinsville, Mass. 01588.

LIBRARY JOURNAL reserves the right to make its own independent judgment as to the acceptability of advertising copy and illustrations in advertisements. Advertiser and advertisng agency assume liability for all content (including text, representation and illustrations) of advertisements printed, and also assume responsibility for any claims arising therefrom against the publisher. Offers to sell products, which appear in LIBRARY JOURNAL, are subject to all laws and regulations and are void where so prohibited.

Letters 428
Calendar 429
Editorial 433

NEWS:

State agency $$ efficiency hailed by COSLA . . . Mass. library bureau still fighting for more clout . . . R.I. claims 1st in okaying library building $$ . . . book spending to inch up, but $$ will buy fewer books . . . library councils could spearhead cooperation . . . Denver's BCR to offer regional data base access . . . N.Y.'s Buffao & Erie Co. library faces more service cuts . . . Seattle's budget inches up . . . training in new technology on the upswing . . . CU offers nat'l. network course 435
Seven Springs Institute: State Agency Heads Face the Future 444 Conference Report: Preservation: a National Plan at Last? 447

FEATURES

From the filmstrip "How You Get V.D." courtesy of Sunburst Communications

Less Costly, More Popular
A follow-up study on Oklahoma County's experiment with paperbacks
BY PAUL LITTLE 451

Boys and Girls and Sex and Libraries
The chronicle of one library's fight for intellectual freedom
BY DUANE H. MEYERS 457

Professional Reading 464
Checklist 467
Magazines 468

THE BOOK REVIEW

Book Reviews 471
Index to Reviews and Professional Reading 517

Classified 518
Index to Advertisers 520

LETTERS

Fees for service

John M. Carter
Deputy State Librarian, Wyoming State Library, Cheyenne:

The "hot potato" thrown out by the unidentified woman at the Pittsburgh Conference on Resource Sharing in Libraries (LJ, November 15, 1976, p. 2338-39) is indeed a legitimate concern that should have been discussed by those who refused to handle that potato. (This problem is also discussed in John Berry's editorial in the same issue.) One would hope that federal funding programs like LSCA will in the future provide public monies to enable all citizens to have access to on-line bibliographic retrieval systems regardless of their ability to pay.

At the Wyoming State Library, the fastest borrower in the West, we have agonized over this problem for months, postponing participation in some of the programs available to us through the Bibliographic Center for Research (Denver) because we could not see how we could offer this as a free service to our client libraries and their patrons. Finally we were forced to reject what Karl Nyren calls the "self-evident truths" that all library and information service should be free. We decided to offer the service to those who could pay, primarily government agencies, business, and industry.

This is another side of this coin. If we decided—because we couldn't afford to offer the service free, and because not every citizen could pay for it—that we would not offer the service at all, we would be discriminating against those who could afford to pay.

Peter L. Oliver
Librarian, Andover-Harvard Theological Library, Harvard Divinity School, Cambridge, Massachusetts:

I read with interest your report on the Pittsburgh Conference on Resource Sharing and saw my name appear as the lone voice of dissent to fees for services. This is a very sticky problem, and while I know that a relatively few large resource centers cannot be expected to totally absorb the costs of their resource sharing, I cannot help but feel that a strict fee system is a too facile solution for a very involved problem. Especially in the evolving concept of resource sharing, with its emphases on access and determined "fee" systems, seem to import economic concepts which run counter to the ethos of resource sharing. I would hope, at the least, that we will build solutions on premises of cost sharing rather than cost recovery.

At least one of the steps in this direction may be the study of a computer based interlibrary loan communication sub-system which is currently being undertaken by NELINET under a U.S. Office of Education grant. This program is intended to study the effectiveness of an incentive system in balancing and equitably distributing resource sharing among libraries. Utilizing a "commodity market approach" to rationalize interlibrary resource sharing on a regional level, the system, if proved and implemented, could significantly alleviate imbalances and encourage resource sharing equity within the New England region. I am sure that LJ will serve as a forum for this as well as other innovative solutions as they develop.

I appreciate the indication in your article that opinion was not entirely unanimous, although I am sure I would not have spoken out were I not in the position of being an offender who is de facto on one side of the fence and philosophically committed to the other.

Medical library networks

Jacqueline Picciano
Librarian, and Editor, International Nursing Index, American Journal of Nursing Co., New York:

I would like to clarify the attitudes attribute to me in Karl Nyren's report of the Pittsburgh Conference on Resource Sharing in Libraries (LJ, November 15, 1976, p. 2337). I feel that this is particularly necessary as I have just completed a term as chairperson of the Advisory and Planning Committee of the New York and New Jersey Regional Medical Library (Region II).

An interface already exists between our RML and NYSILL (New York State Interlibrary Loan System), and we hope to establish such an interface with the New Jersey Library Network. I am not pessimistic about such cooperation. I was pointing it out as the way to go.

My remarks were made on the second day of the conference. Speaker after speaker mentioned bringing into networks "all" types of libraries, but none mentioned medical libraries specifically and none mentioned the functioning medical library networks. This in spite of the fact that many librarians in the audience represented small medical libraries involved in or considering consortia, which are presently being promoted by the National Library of Medicine.

I realize that the conference speakers were not medically oriented. I attended to find out how other parts of the library world think and feel; my purpose was well served. The conference was well-planned and well-presented. I merely hope that the extra insight needed is a two-way street.

"The Liberty Cap"

Enid Davis
The Liberty Cap, Palo Alto, California:

As the editor and publisher of The Liberty Cap, I was very pleased to read the kind review given to my book review publication by Bill Katz in the November 15, 1976 LJ (p. 2355).

Unfortunately, the review came a bit too late, for I have ceased publication with the November-December 1976 issue. Fortunately, on the other hand, the two years of back issues will be published in one volume sometime in 1977 by Academy Press Limited of Chicago, Ill. (360 N. Michigan Ave. 60601). Readers who would like to be informed of the actual publication of The Liberty Cap: a Bimonthly Journal of Recently Published, Non-Stereotyped Children's Books and Resources as a book can write to Academy Press Limited in care of Ms. Jill Sellers.

"Book not available"

Alan Brilliant
Director, Unicorn Press, Greensboro, North Carolina:

There is a growing bad situation developing that is hurting libraries, their readers, writers, and publishers. I have a feeling that librarians are completely ignorant of it. It has gone on as long as Unicorn Press has (10 years) but, lately, it has grown to terrible proportions. A library orders a book from a library wholesaler. The wholesaler orders it from the publisher. More and more the publisher refuses to ship the book. The wholesaler tells the initial orderer, the library, "It is not available." . . . But the book is available. "Then why," you ask, "doesn't the publisher give it to the wholesaler?" The answer is that 90 days is nothing with whole-salers . . . every one . . . not paying their bills. Ninety, 120, half a year! Invoice after invoice unheeded. Not just Unicorn invoices . . .! After a while you say to the wholesaler, "Look! I'm not sending any more books until you pay bills at least six months old!" So the wholesaler tells the library, "Books not available." Get it?

"Free" libraries?

Fay M. Blake
Reader Services Librarian, California State Polytechnic University, Pomona:

Good for you, John Berry! Your editorial, "Double Taxation" (LJ, November 15, 1976, p. 2321) is a timely warning to all the public library types who are eagerly jumping into the marketplace. In addition to your cogent arguments, we might also remind the would-be hucksters that charging a fee for information ultimately affects the kind of information collected. If all your customers are going to pay for the information you provide, you will soon stop providing or even looking for the very different kinds of information those people need who can't pay your fees. Mobil, who thoughtfully pay for full-page newspaper ads to tell us what great conservationists they are, are not going to be interested in information about the oil lobby's effect on legislation. I might be, but I couldn't hope to outbid them in the marketplace we're throwing our free public libraries into with such abandon.

C. Lee Jones
Health Sciences Librarian, Health Sciences Library, Columbia University, New York:

Your editorial does great disservice to your usual forthright, clear-headed thinking. Your argument implies that any fee for service is a double tax upon the supporting population. That would indeed be the case if existing free services suddenly became available only at additional cost to the user. But, that is not what is happening. New services, such as on-line search services, are being provided in addition to pre-existing free library services. These new services often carry very heavy "front end" costs that can't be borne within the confines of the present library budget structure.

Even Peter Niemi's Champaign, Illinois circumstance apparently requires the fee for service structure in order to provide the quality and quantity of service that he can now provide. Indeed, only those who want and pay for the service bear the costs. Thus, general taxation levels need not be raised for all population elements in order to support service programs that may benefit only one segment of that population.

I do join you, however, in condemning the idea of selling library registration cards as an income device. This does indeed construct an undesirable barrier to access to the traditional services of the library. This is far different from providing special additional services at a cost recovery fee. Without the fee there would be no service.

The idea of "free" library services has done more damage to the fiscal health of libraries and librarians than nearly any other concept in our field. Every library service costs money and someone pays the bill. Tax units must simply recognize and identify those library services they are willing to fund on a tax dollar basis. It is not unreasonable, given steadily rising costs and a steadily expanding list of potential services, for certain of those services to be available only on a fee for service basis. Librarians must be the ones to educate the tax paying public in such a way as to assure sound decisions in this area.

Sorry, John, but there aren't any free rides anymore. Fees for service are likely to be the only means of providing some library services for a good many years to come.

"Canadian Materials" lives

Norman Horrocks
Director, School of Library Service, Dalhousie University, Halifax, Nova Scotia:

At the Canadian Library Association Conference in Halifax (LJ, August 1976, p. 1594) we were told that Canadian Materials might have to fold at the end of the year. However, at that weekend meeting for the Nova Scotia School Library Association, we were told that "Canadian Materials is in trouble as a publication of the Canadian Library Association. Due to a number of problems at headquarters where it is promoted, published, and distributed, the journal has not lived up to the expected number of subscriptions. The Association is seeking outside funding from agencies such as the Canada Council, and the Editorial Board is considering alternative publishers. We do not intend to let Canadian Materials fold.

"Publicity for the journal is one of the key considerations. Somehow we have not reached enough people to make them aware of the existence of the journal. Any assistance you can give us in this matter would be greatly appreciated."

We were also asked to tell people that Canadian Materials is alive and encourage subscriptions.

ED. NOTE—Canadian Materials is published three times a year at $5. Write to the Canadian Library Assn., 151 Sparks St., Ottawa, Ontario, Canada K1P5E3.

CALENDAR

MAR. 24-26—ILLINOIS ASSN. OF SCHOOL LIBRARIANS, Pick-Congress Hotel, Chicago. Theme: "Carnival of Knowledge." Contact: Ms. Jane Block, Belvidere Community Unit, District #100, Belvidere, Ill. 61008.

MAR. 27-28—INSTITUTE ON QUANTITATIVE MEASUREMENT and Dynamic Library Service, Unit II, Critical Evaluation of Quantitative Methods for Library Management. School of Lib. Science, Simmons College, Boston. Contact: Coord. of Continuing Ed., School of Library Science, Simmons College, 300 The Fenway, Boston, Mass. 02115. (617) 739-2222.

APR. 6-8—ALABAMA LA, Montgomery, Governor's House Motel. Contact: Patricia Moore, Exhibits Chairperson, Alabama LA, P.O. Box 9266, Mountain Brook, Ala.

APR. 12-16—TEXAS LA/NEW MEXICO LA, Joint Conference, El Paso Civic Center. Theme: "In Search of Learning." Contact: Jerre Hetherington, Texas LA, P.O. Box 505, Houston, Tex. 77001.

APR. 17-23—NATIONAL LIBRARY WEEK.

APR. 18-21—INFO. INDUSTRY ASSN., Information Industry Conference & Exposition, Washington, D.C., Shoreham Americana Hotel. Theme: "The Information Manager . . ." Contact: Paul G. Zurkowski, IIA/Washington, 4720 Montgomery Lane, Bethesda, Md. 20014; (301) 654-4150.

APR. 20-23—NEW JERSEY LA, Atlantic City, Howard Johnson's Regency Motor Hotel. Contact: Anne King, Exhibits Chairperson, 3-25 Dorothy St., Fair Lawn, N.J. 07410.

APR. 24-25—CONF. ON ED. FOR INFO. SCIENCE, Strategies for Change in Library School Programs. School of Library Information Science, State U. of N.Y. at Albany. Sponsored by ISAD/LED of American LA, AALS, ASIS, SLA, MLA. Contact: Irving Klempner, School of Library and Info. Science, State U. of N.Y. at Albany, 1400 Washington Ave., Albany, N.Y. 12222; (518) 457-6157.

APR. 28-30—WASHINGTON LA, Vancouver, Washington. Contact: Janet Blumberg, Program Chairperson, Washington State Library, Olympia, Wash. 98504.

MAY 5-7—WYOMING LA, Jackson.

MAY 8-20—LIBRARY ADMINISTRATORS DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM, College of Library and Info. Services, U. of Maryland, College Park. John Rizzo, Prof. of Management, Western Michigan U., Director. Contact: Effie T. Knight, College of Library and Info. Services, University of Maryland, College Park, Md. 20742.

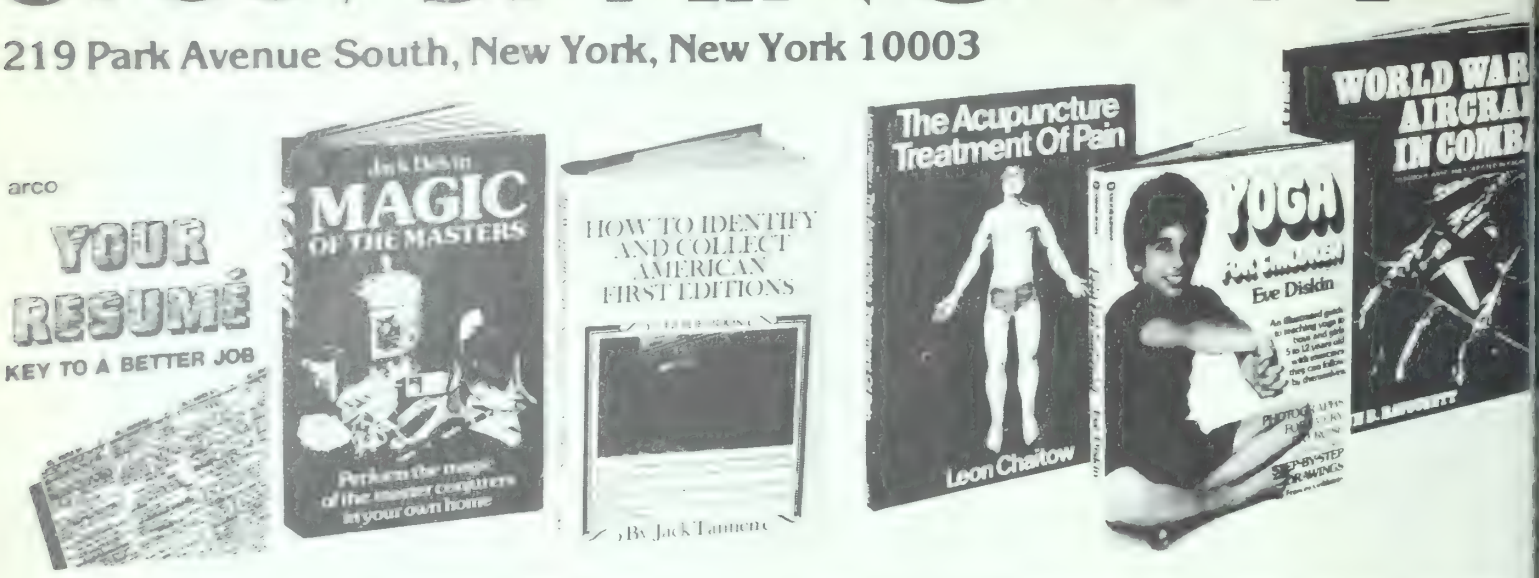
MAY 11-14—FLORIDA LA, St. Petersburg Hilton. Contact: V. Nistendirk, Exec. Secy., 2862 W. W. Kelly Rd., Tallahassee, Fla. 32301.

JUNE 17-23—AMERICAN LA, Detroit.

JUNE 20-24—AMERICAN THEOLOGICAL LA, Vancouver, British Columbia, Vancouver School of Theology. Contact: John Trotti, Librarian, Union Theological Seminary, 3401 Brook Road, Richmond, Va. 23227.

arco / SPRING 1977

219 Park Avenue South, New York, New York 10003



January

BURKE'S IRISH FAMILY RECORDS
Burke's Peerage Limited
cloth $79.00

THE DE HAVILLAND MOSQUITO
M. J. Hardy
illustrated, cloth $11.95

THE ILLUSTRATED GLOSSARY OF HORSE EQUIPMENT
illustrated, paper $3.95

JUMPING EXPLAINED
Carol Green
illustrated, cloth $6.95,
paper $3.95

LONGBOW: A SOCIAL AND MILITARY HISTORY
Robert Hardy
illustrated, cloth $19.95

MOTORCYCLE PIONEERS: THE MEN, THE MACHINES, THE EVENTS, 1860—1930
Michael Partridge
illustrated, cloth $8.95

THE SCOTTISH TERRIER
Dorothy Caspersz and Elizabeth Meyer
illustrated, cloth $8.95

SPANISH FOR NURSES AND ALLIED HEALTH SCIENCE STUDENTS
Julio E. Hernandez-
Miyares, Ph.D., and Elio Alba, Ph.D.
illustrated, paper $10.00

TEACH YOUR CHILD SELF-DEFENSE
David Manners
illustrated, paper $3.95

TRAINING EXPLAINED
Carol Green
illustrated, cloth $6.95,
paper $3.95

YOUR RESUME: KEY TO A BETTER JOB
Leonard Corwen
paper $4.00

February

BETTER VEGETABLE GARDENING THE ORGANIC WAY
Joseph A. Coccanouer
paper $1.50

BREEDING ANGELFISH
Steven Dow
illustrated, paper $4.95

BREEDING SNAKES IN CAPTIVITY
Robert J. Riches
illustrated, LR cloth $6.95,
paper $4.95

JANE'S FIGHTING SHIPS, 1944/45
edited by
Francis E. McMurtrie
illustrated, LR cloth $29.95

MAGIC OF THE MASTERS
Jack Delvin
illustrated, cloth $8.95,
paper $4.95

THE MATING AND WHELPING OF DOGS
Captain R. Portman Graham
illustrated, LR cloth $8.95,
paper $3.95

THE NEW GUIDE TO MOTORCYCLING
Robert Arthur Cutter
illustrated, LR cloth $7.95,
paper $3.95

PRACTICAL DOG BREEDING AND GENETICS
Eleanor Frankling and
Joan Woodyatt
LR cloth $8.95, paper $3.95

TREASURES OF ISLAM
Philip Bamborough
illustrated, cloth $8.95

TREATMENT OF EXOTIC MARINE FISH DISEASES
Edward Kingsford, M.D.
illustrated, LR cloth $7.95,
paper $4.95

VACATIONING WITH SADDLE AND PACKHORSE
Bill Merrill
illustrated, paper $3.95

WARNING: SEX MAY BE HAZARDOUS TO YOUR HEALTH, Second Edition
Dr. Edwin Flatto
cloth $7.95

WORLD WAR II AIRCRAFT IN COMBAT
Glenn B. Bavousett
illustrated, paper $6.95

March

THE ACUPUNCTURE TREATMENT OF PAIN
Leon Chaitow
illustrated, LR cloth $12.95,
paper $7.95

AMERICA'S HISTORIC INNS AND TAVERNS, Revised Edition
Ivan Haas
illustrated, LR cloth $8.95

CERAMICS HANDBOOK
Richard Hyman
illustrated, LR cloth $4.95,
paper $2.50

EASY THINGS TO MAKE W CONCRETE AND MASONR
Richard Day
illustrated, LR cloth $4.95,
paper $2.50

HORSE AND PONY CARE IN PICTURES
Edward Holmes and Eric Kir
illustrated, paper $3.95

HOW TO PLAN AND BUILD YOUR WORKSHOP
David X. Manners
illustrated, LR cloth $4.95
paper $2.50

HOW TO REMODEL YOUR ATTIC OR BASEMENT
Richard Day
illustrated, $4.95, paper $3.95

HOW AND WHERE TO FIND GOLD
Verne H. Ballantyne
illustrated, paper $3.95

THE INCREDIBLE A. J. FOY
Lyle Kenyon Engel
illustrated, LR cloth $6.95,
paper $3.95

MIXED MARRIAGE BETWE JEW AND CHRISTIAN
Rabbi Samuel M. Silver
LR cloth $5.95

THE MODERN HANDGUN
Robert Hertzberg
illustrated, LR cloth $4.95,
paper $2.50

MOTOCOURSE 1976/77
Chris Carter, editor
illustrated, cloth $21.95

THE PICTURE BOOK OF ANNUALS
Arno and Irene Nehrling
illustrated, paper $3.95

ICTURE BOOK OF NNIALS
nd Irene Nehrling
ted, paper $3.95

ROBLEM HORSE
ld S. Summerhays
ted, cloth $4.95

DELING ROOMS
d Day
ted, LR cloth $4.95,
$2.50

ING AND JUDGING DOGS
Harmar
ted, cloth $29.95

UP AND WRITE,
d Edition
n Manners
$2.95

FOR CHILDREN skin
ted, LR cloth $8.95

April

T CHESS UPSETS
el Reshevsky
$3.95

TO GET INTO MEDICAL DENTAL SCHOOL, ed Edition
on J. Shugar, Ph.D., d A. Shugar, M.D., and nce Bauman, D.D.S.
$4.00

IEMATICS: LEVEL I
EVEMENT TEST
Bramson, M.S.
$3.00

ET WARSHIPS OF THE
ND WORLD WAR
Meister
ted, cloth $19.95

RLD WAR II AIRCRAFT
FACT FILES

NESE ARMY AIRFORCE
TERS
n Green and n Swanborough
ted, paper $4.95

ET AIRFORCE FIGHTERS, I n Green and n Swanborough
ted, cloth $6.95,
$4.95

U.S. ARMY AIRFORCE FIGHTERS, PART I
William Green and
Gordon Swanborough
illustrated, cloth $6.95,
paper $4.95

U.S. NAVY AND MARINE CORPS FIGHTERS
William Green and
Gordon Swanborough
illustrated, cloth $6.95,
paper $4.95

May

ACNE CAN BE CURED
Gustave Hoehn, M.D.
LR cloth $6.95, paper $2.95

COIN COLLECTOR'S FACT BOOK
Walter J. Zimmerman
illustrated, paper $3.95

THE GERMAN SHEPHERD DOG
Malcolm Willis
illustrated, cloth $25.00

HOW TO GET RID OF THE POISONS IN YOUR BODY
Gary Null and Steve Null
paper $1.95

MATHEMATICAL GAMES, PUZZLES, AND FALLACIES Sydney Lamb
illustrated, paper $1.95

THE WORLD OF BIG BANDS
Arthur Jackson
cloth $12.95

WORLD WAR II FACT FILES

AIRCRAFT CARRIERS
David Brown
illustrated, paper $4.95

ALLIED PISTOLS, RIFLES, AND GRENADES
Peter Chamberlain and
Terry Gander
illustrated, paper $4.95

ALLIED SUBMARINES
Anthony J. Watts
illustrated, paper $4.95

AXIS PISTOLS, RIFLES, AND GRENADES
Peter Chamberlain and
Terry Gander
illustrated, paper $4.95

AXIS SUBMARINES
Anthony J. Watts
illustrated, paper $4.95

June

BEHAVIOR AND TRAINING OF DOGS AND PUPPIES
Louis L. Vine, D.V.M.
LR cloth $5.95, paper $1.95

BREEDING, WHELPING AND NATAL CARE OF DOGS
Louis L. Vine, D.V.M
LR cloth $6.95, paper $2.95

COLLECTING MOVIE MEMORABILIA
Sol Chaneles
illustrated, LR cloth $10.00

COLLEGE BOARD ACHIEVEMENT TEST: BIOLOGY
Lawrence Solomon
paper $3.95

COLLEGE BOARD ACHIEVEMENT TEST: CHEMISTRY
Lawrence Solomon
paper $3.95

COMPLETE HOME PLUMBING AND HEATING HANDBOOK
Jeannette T. Adams
illustrated, LR cloth $12.95

THE FRESHWATER AQUARIUM
R. F. O'Connell
illustrated, LR cloth $9.95

GOOD ENGLISH WITH EASE, Revised Edition
Samuel Beckoff, Ph.D
paper $4.00

HOW TO DETECT CROOKED GAMBLING: MARKED CARDS AND LOADED DICE
Frank Garcia
illustrated, LR cloth $8.95,
paper $3.95

HOW TO USE A POCKET CALCULATOR
Henry Mullish
LR cloth $7.95, paper $3.95

KARATE FOR KIDS
Frances Goldstein
illustrated, LR cloth $8.95

LETTER-PERFECT: THE ACCURATE SECRETARY Goodwin Gilson
paper $6.00

RIDER'S DIGEST: SHOWING AND COMBINED TRAINING
Sandra Kauffman, editor
illustrated, cloth $12.00

TEACHER OF ENGLISH AS A SECOND LANGUAGE
Laurie Wellman, M.A.
paper $8.00

TRIUMPH OVER DISEASE—BY FASTING AND NATURAL DIET
Dr. Jack Goldstein
LR cloth $5.95, paper $1.95

YOUR FUTURE IN AN ART CAREER
Carolyn Hawes, Margaret Johnson, and Judith Nylen
illustrated, paper $2.95

ARCO MEDICAL BOOKS

HOW TO TALK TO DOCTORS
(Arco Patient Aid Manual/March
John Verby, M.D., and Jane Verby, B.A.

HISTOLOGY AND EMBRYOLOGY REVIEW
(Arco Medical Review Series/April)
Peter S. Amenta, Ph.D.
paper $8.00

MODERN MEDICINE
(Medical Textbook/January)
Alan E. Read, M.D., with contributors
paper $14.75

NUTRITION/DIET THERAPY NURSING REVIEW
(Arco Nursing Review Series/June)
Lorraine Boykin, Ed.D., R.D.
paper $6.00

PSYCHIATRY: A CONCISE TEXTBOOK FOR STUDENTS AND PRACTITIONERS
(Medical Textbook/May) Alan Kraft, M.D., with contributors
paper $12.00

PSYCHIATRY: PATIENT MANAGEMENT REVIEW
(Arco Medical Review Series/
March)
William M. Easson, M.D.
paper $8.00

RADIOLOGIC TECHNOLOGY EXAMINATION REVIEW
(Arco Medical Review Series/June)
Howard J. Naidech, M.D. and Lorraine M. Damon, R.T.
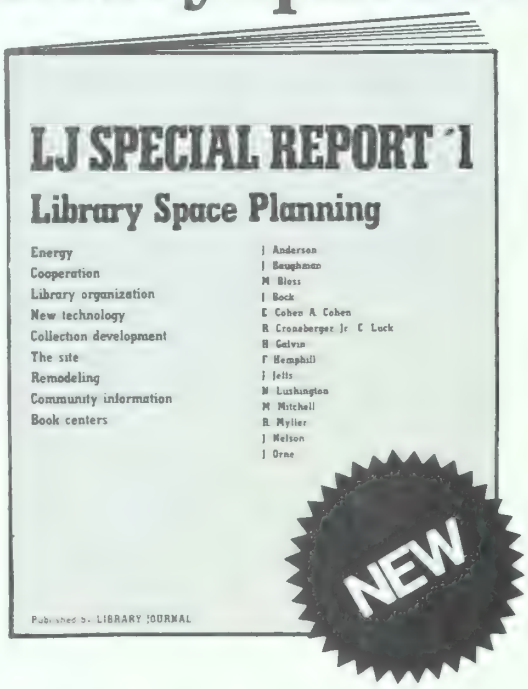
paper $8.00

SURGERY REVIEW
(Arco Medical Review Series/June)
Samuel L. Kountz, M.D.
paper $8.00

LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING
helps you make better use of your library space tomorrow.



Perhaps you are involved with plans for a new library. Or with remodeling the library you're in now. Or simply making more efficient use of existing space—on a non-existing or minimum budget.

Whatever the case, you will want a copy of the new LJ Special Report #1—LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING.

Here, in one practical, 80-page, paperbound handbook—8½ x 11 size—are the thinking and ideas of 32 leading librarians, library consultants, and architects.

Among the subjects covered: Energy . . . Cooperation . . . Library Organization . . . New Technology . . . Collection Development . . . The Site . . . Remodeling . . . Community Information . . . Book Centers. The information you'll find in LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING will be equally valuable to librarians in public, academic, and special libraries . . . in urban, suburban and rural communities.

LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING is the first of the LJ Special Reports—designed to keep librarians well informed on topics of immediate interest and importance.

In the library field, where so many changes occur so often, yesterday's plans and assumptions must also change.

The problems of library funding, the energy crisis, the evolution of the local library into a community information center, the response of the academic library to the new demands of higher education—all these and other factors require innovative thinking and planning now for libraries of the future.

LJ Special Report #1—LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING—is currently off press and copies are available to LIBRARY JOURNAL readers on a first come, first-served basis.

The cost is only $3.95 per copy on prepaid orders; $5.00 per copy on billed orders.

Use the convenient coupon to send in your order now.

Better use the coupon below to send for your copy today!

To: Edward W. Martin, Circulation Director—R. R. Bowker Co.
1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10036

Please send LJ Special Report #1—LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING—as indicated:

_____ (No.) at $3.95 each, for which payment is enclosed.

_____ (No.) at $5.00 each. Send bill as shown.

Name _____

Address _____

City _____

State _____ Zip _____

☐ Send information on quantity discount orders—10 or more copies.

LJ

EDITORIAL

It's people and politics, not policy

"A book selection policy, no matter how well thought out, cannot fight your battles for you. Policies are general and cannot cover specific titles. No matter how hard a library tries to keep a controversy in the fragile realm of principle and policy, its adversaries keep punching away on the Plain of Specificity." It was Duane Meyers who penned those words in his report of the convoluted strategies and manipulations that the Oklahoma County Library was required to endure in its recent squabble with local censors (see "Boys and Girls and Sex and Libraries," beginning on p. 457 of this issue).

The ringing message of the Oklahoma County controversy is that the library was only able to win when it became apparent that the public was evenly divided on the issues surrounding Wardell Pomeroy's repeatedly controversial books Boys and Sex and Girls and Sex. Prior to that the library commission was quite willing to rewrite the library's policies in response to apparent public pressure for restricting access to the books.

In the midst of the crisis, as Meyers points out, the commission adopted a policy that restricted the use, to children, of all adult fiction, all nonfiction dealing with sexual information, crimes of passion, and human reproduction. At the same meeting at which this restrictive policy was adopted, the American Civil Liberties Union threatened to bring legal action against the policy.

A few days later a reporter for the Oklahoma Journal provided what Meyers calls "the turning point in the controversy." He pointed out that Twain's Life on the Mississippi, Lloyd Douglas's The Robe, Silas Marner, The Caine Mutiny, and many other books would be banned to children under the new policy.

As Meyers tells it: "The resulting furor in this instance was at least equal to the storm that arose over the library refusal in December to remove two sex books—only this time the protest came from the other side." The Mayor called a special meeting of the library board to reconsider the restrictive policy, and they voted to delay the implementation of the policy.

Even commissioners who favored censoring the two books in question were heard mouthing sentiments like: "We're concerned about what the community has to say. The library doesn't run the community; the community runs the library. Let's run a survey to find what parents think."

Most alarming, the library decided to survey other public libraries of similar size to find out how they dealt with the problem: The results, according to Meyers: "The survey made one realize that possibly a third or more of our nation's libraries have bowed, in one way or another, to demands for restriction. Or, horrible thought, maybe they do their own restricting! Only five of those libraries admitting they had a restrictive policy said the policy was the result of community pressure. (Sixty-four of 172 libraries admitted that access to certain materials was limited in their libraries, and 27 reported that they issued more than one type of library card for children.)

When it became apparent that the public was, more or less, evenly divided on the question of library policy, the library asked for legal clarification. The lawyer consulted said the library board had a limited mission, according to Meyers: "It is not to protect the safety and morals of the community—only to provide library services." According to that lawyer, juveniles are entitled to equal access to the library's collections unless the rules limiting their access are "legally defensible." More important, as Meyers points out, "The attorney opined that he could not write, nor could anyone write, an understandable, airtight selection policy for the staff to follow."

Finally, after surveying other libraries, getting strong community protest on both sides, and getting legal clarification, the library board in Oklahoma County voted to return to their former nonrestrictive policy for the use of the library collections by children. They made only one real concession: the Pomeroy books were to be classified as "adult" books.

There may be many messages in the Oklahoma County struggle, but for us, and the main reason we published the story in LJ, the message is clear: A public response either for or against censorship is more effective than written policies. If you want support for free access to your collections for everyone, regardless of age (as our "Library Bill of Rights" asserts), the labor and thought devoted to developing a written policy would be much more effectively used to establish alliances with groups of all persuasions in the community, and to publicize and provide good, responsive library service. It is as true now as it was when Joe Sakey proved it more than a decade ago in his fight with the censors in Nashua, New Hampshire. Astute community politics and effective library service are the best defense against censors. John Berry

The LP brought you the concert hall.

Now TF brings you the museum.

A new series of Text-Fiche titles will be ready beginning this month. Drawing on such sources as the Hispanic Society of America, The Art Institute of Chicago, the American Museum in Britain, The National Museum in Stockholm, the Courtauld Institute of Art, London, Text-Fiche makes available a superb range of collections from museums and art galleries, here and abroad.

Text-Fiche offers lavishly illustrated publications at a remarkably low price. Illustrations are reproduced compactly and inexpensively on color microfiche, with 84 images on each 4″ x 6″ card. The text comes in an accompanying booklet. Text-Fiche publications are packaged similarly to LPs—shrink-wrapped, with the fiches inside the booklets.

"I never thought it would look this good!" That's a common reaction from those who see, for the first time, the vivid colors and fine detail of Text-Fiche illustrations. And Text-Fiche can offer, in full color, many illustrations that would have to be printed in black and white in a conventional book.

Of course, just as you need a record-player to listen to LPs, you need a reader to view TFs. The newly-designed Bell & Howell PMR Microfiche Reader Projector ($198.50) or the NCR Hand-Viewer ($34.95) can be ordered from your wholesaler or directly from:

Young Italian Steelworker from the Pittsburgh Survey, 1908, by Lewis Wickes Hine.

Text-Fiche Titles for Spring 1977

Three publications from THE ART INSTITUTE OF CHICAGO
FRENCH DRAWINGS OF THE SIXTEENTH AND SEVENTEENTH CENTURIES. 84 pictures on 1 color fiche, 48 pp., text. -68794-5. $11.50. April
FRENCH DRAWINGS AND SKETCHBOOKS OF THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY. 336 pictures on 4 color fiches, 100 pp., text. -68795-3. $27.50. May CALOTYPES. From the Photography Collection. 168 pictures on 2 color fiches, 36 pp., text. -68799-6. $12.95. June

THE AMERICAN MUSEUM IN BRITAIN/THE AMERICAN QUILT TRADITION. 84 pictures on 1 color fiche, 18 pp., text. -68789-9. $8.95. May

THE BALTIMORE MUSEUM OF ART/AMERICAN PRINTS, 1870-1950. 81 pictures on 1 color fiche, 44 pp., text. -68824-0. $9.95. January

BIRMINGHAM CITY MUSEUMS PRE-RAPHAELITE DRAWINGS BY DANTE GABRIEL ROSSETTI, by Andrea Rose. 251 pictures on 3 b&w fiches, 32 pp., text. -68840-2. $7.95. February

THE COMMONWEALTH INSTITUTE THE ARTS OF THE HAUSA, by David Heathcote. 168 pictures on 2 color fiches. 32 pp., text. -68899-2. $12.95. February

CORNING MUSEUM OF GLASS A SURVEY OF GLASSMAKING FROM ANCIENT EGYPT TO THE PRESENT. 168 pictures on 2 color fiches, 60 pp., text. -68902-6. $14.95. May

THE COURTAULD INSTITUTE OF ART: PAINTINGS. 420 pictures on 5 color fiches, 60 pp., text. -68904-2. $29.50. March

THE HISPANIC SOCIETY OF AMERICA RUGS OF SPAIN AND MOROCCO, by Florence Lewis May. 84 pictures on 1 color fiche, 50 pp., text. -69109-8. $11.50. March

INTERNATIONAL MUSEUM OF PHOTOGRAPHY AT GEORGE EASTMAN HOUSE LEWIS WICKES HINE'S INTERPRETIVE PHOTOGRAPHY: THE FIVE EARLY PROJECTS, by Jonathan Doherty. 574 pictures on 7 b&w fiches. 48 pp., text. -69172-1. $14.95. May

ISABELLA STEWART GARDNER MUSEUM: A SELECTION OF PAINTINGS, DRAWINGS, AND WATERCOLORS. 168 pictures on 2 color fiches, 36 pp., text. -69181-0. $12.95. February

THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS CHARLES FENDERICH: LITHOGRAPHER OF AMERICAN STATESMEN. 235 pictures on 3 b&w fiches, 36 pp., text. -69243-4. $10.50. April

MEMORIAL ART GALLERY/THE AMERICAN COLLECTION. 168 pictures on 2 color fiches, 34 pp., text. -69283-3. $12.95. April

NATIONAL COLLECTION OF FINE ARTS, SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION ACADEMY: THE ACADEMIC TRADITION IN AMERICAN ART, by Lois Marie Fink and Joshua C. Taylor. 168 pictures on 2 color fiches, 48 pp., text. -69412-7. $13.50. April

THE NATIONAL MUSEUM, STOCKHOLM/THE DRAWINGS OF JOHAN TOBIAS SERGEL. 323 pictures on 1 color and 3 b&w fiches, 48 pp., text. -69420-8. $13.95. May

THE ORIENTAL INSTITUTE THE 1919-20 BREASTED EXPEDITION TO THE NEAR EAST. 168 pictures on 2 b&w fiches, 16 pp., text. -69473-9. $6.95. April

WHITNEY MUSEUM OF AMERICAN ART: SELECTIONS FROM THE PERMANENT COLLECTION. 167 pictures on 2 color fiches, 15 pp., text. -69818-1. $12.50. January

Available now: The Phillips Collection/A Collection in the Making. $27.50; National Collection of Fine Arts/American Art in the Barbizon Mood. $12.50; Dumbarton Oaks Collection/Pre-Columbian Art $7.95; International Museum of Photography/British Masters of the Albumen Print. $17.50; Sue Allen Victorian Bookbindings. $16.50; John White/Pottery Techniques of Native North America. $25.00; The Oriental Institute/The 1905-1907 Breasted Expeditions to Egypt and the Sudan in 2 vols., $12.50 each, Persepolis and Ancient Iran. $25.00; Cheney Cowles Memorial Museum/Cornhusk Bags of the Plateau Indians. $25.00.

Text-Fiche Division • University of Chicago Press

ISBN prefix: 0-226

5801 Ellis Avenue, Chicago, IL 60637

NEWS

State agency $$ efficiency stressed in COSLA study

A survey conducted by the State Library of Ohio for COSLA (Chief Officers of State Library Agencies) provides statistics that seem to indicate that the state library agencies are reliable, responsible caretakers of federal funding earmarked for public libraries. According to its findings, the state library agencies spend only four percent of the $49 million in Library Services and Construction Act, Title I money handled annually for program "administration." The bulk of LSCA goes out directly in grants to libraries and library systems ($33 million), or pays for statewide services ($14 million) such as interlibrary loan and reference service, network development, union catalog operation, consultant service, and staff development.

And a number of states, says the survey, spent more than 66 percent of their Title I allocation for grants. Among them: Alabama, Arizona, California, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Idaho (the only one to disburse all Title I funds received as grants), Illinois, Kansas, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Rhode Island, South Carolina, and Texas.

Queried by LJ on what the study's use of the term "administration" meant in relation to state agency handling of LSCA, Ohio State Librarian Joseph Shubert said that the four percent of administration costs reported were funds actually quoted to the Office of Education as spent at the state agency for administering programs. But he admitted when asked that the survey does not show how much funding goes into administration further down the line, in the library systems themselves or at individual libraries; nor does it pinpoint specifically what the grants bought—how many books, for example. The survey does show that, overall, the states (38 of them reporting) increased their appropriations for libraries in fiscal year 1977 by about three percent (to $104 million) over fiscal year 1976 expenditures. Nine of the 38 states decreased library funding, but these losses were balanced by major increases in state aid funds in such states as Idaho, Iowa, Nebraska, New York, Texas, West Virginia, and Wisconsin. State funding to library agencies themselves, says the study, went up about three percent (to $61 million) between 1976 and 1977.

The COSLA study, which highlights the small amount of LSCA Title I funding used by state agencies for their own operations, comes on the heels of a COSLA endorsement of a change in LSCA to up the amount (now only ten percent) which can be used by state agencies in administering the grants. COSLA backed "a limitation of not more than 20 percent but not less than ten percent for state administration of LSCA" (LJ, January 15, p. 149).

Mass. reorganization try: Bureau seeks more clout

The Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners reports that it will try for a second time to get the legislature to okay the transfer of the Bureau of Library Extension from the Department of Education to the Secretary of Educational Affairs. An attempt to achieve this jurisdictional transfer last year failed, partly because of the opposition of the Massachusetts Library Association and major Massachusetts public libraries, which have successfully blocked efforts by Bureau Head Charles Joyce to make the Bureau a more powerful force on the state library scene.

Stating the board's position, Bennett C. Wilson contended that current legislation "divides the direction, supervision, and control of the Bureau between the Board of Library Commissioners and the Board of Education in such an ambiguous way that we members of the Board of Library Commissioners spend many valuable hours dealing with administrative conflicts when we should be dealing with library problems." The state library agency, he argued, "should not be buried deep within the hierarchy of the Department of Education. . . . [the library bureau] deserves a place in the educational structure of the Commonwealth where it can carry out its statutory responsibilities without interference from a Board of Education with priorities different from ours."

In efforts to better the chances of passage of reorganization legislation, the Board of Library Commissioners conceded to a demand by the Commissioner of Education that the library bureau give up its former jurisdiction of school libraries. Defending the compromise, the library board noted that "the only money available at the present time for the development of school libraries is . . . ESEA Title IV, which is directly under the control of the Commissioner of Education and not the Board of Library Commissioners." And it stressed that "we made our vote concerning this proposed transfer of responsibility conditional on . . . a specific statutory mandate to the Board of Education and the Commissioner of Education to establish and develop school libraries. We believe too deeply in the importance of school libraries and their development to leave that obligation to the administrative discretion of the Commissioner of the Board of Education."

The library board's new proposal for a reorganization has drawn opposition from the Boston Public Library and the Massachusetts Library Asso-

Announcing the era of the $5 search.

New rates and discounts make Dialog - at virtually every level - the lowest cost retrieval service.

Now Dialog costs less to use than ever before, as low as $5 for a 10 minute search among a number of major data bases such as Chemical Abstracts, ERIC, NTIS and Agricola.

Here are some of the price cuts made possible by Dialog's new dual computer operation:

1. Discounts of $5 to $15 per hour depending on usage. These discounts are automatic for all Dialog usage over five hours per month.
2. A contract discount plan that provides savings as much as $15 per hour for heavy users. Contracts can be as short as six months.
3. New group discount plan that allows groups to combine usage and quantity for discounts ranging from $5 to $15 per hour.
4. BIOSIS Previews reduced from $65 to $45 per hour; Chemical Abstracts CONDENSATES from $45 to $35 per hour.
5. Communication costs for Telenet access down from $8 to $5 per hour. TYMSHARE TYMNET down from $10 to $8 per hour.

But some things haven't been cut. Dialog still offers the most data bases of any retrieval service... the longest operational week... data bases for all years available continuously... and no minimum service charge.

Here are three easy ways to get more information about Dialog's new low prices: 1. Drop us a note at Lockheed Information Systems, Dept. 50-20-1, Bldg. 201, 3251 Hanover Street, Palo Alto, CA 94304. 2. Call us toll-free at (800) 227-1460 in the continental U.S. except California; (800) 982-5838 in California; (415) 493-4411, Ext. 45635 from elsewhere. 3. If you're a Dialog user, just type "? Discount" on your terminal.

Lockheed Dialog®

)IALOG USERS
ıre provided continuous access
o some 15 million abstracts:

CIENCE
AGRICOLA (formerly NAL/CAIN)
BIOSIS PREVIEWS
CHEMICAL ABSTRACTS (CA)
CONDENSATES
CA CHEMICAL NAME DICTIONARY
A SUBJECT INDEX ALERT (CASIA)
COMMONWEALTH AGRICULTURAL BUREAUX
DISSERTATIONS ABSTRACTS INDEX
PHYSICS ABSTRACTS (INSPEC)
SCISEARCH®

TECHNOLOGY/ENGINEERING
AIR POLLUTION TECHNICAL INFORMATION CENTER (APTIC)
AQUATIC SCIENCES & FISHERIES ABSTRACTS
CA PATENTS CONCORDANCE
CLAIMS™/CHEM (chemical patents)
CLAIMS™/GEM (other patents)
COMPENDEX (Engineering Index)
COMPUTERS & CONTROL ABSTRACTS (INSPEC)
ELECTRICAL & ELECTRONICS ABSTRACTS (INSPEC)
ENVIROLINE®
ISMEC (mechanical engineering)
METADEX (metals)
METEOROLOGICAL & GEOPHYSICAL ABSTRACTS
NTIS (government reports)
OCEANIC ABSTRACTS® POLLUTION ABSTRACTS
WORLD ALUMINUM ABSTRACTS

BUSINESS/ECONOMICS
ABI/INFORM (management)
CHEMICAL INDUSTRY NOTES
FOUNDATION DIRECTORY
FOUNDATION GRANTS INDEX
PHARMACEUTICAL NEWS INDEX (PNI)
PREDICASTS DOMESTIC STATISTICS
PREDICASTS EIS INDUSTRIAL PLANTS STATISTICS
PREDICASTS F & S INDEXES
PREDICASTS INTERNATIONAL STATISTICS
PREDICASTS MARKET ABSTRACTS
PREDICASTS WEEKLY

SOCIAL SCIENCES/HUMANITIES
AIM/ARM (vocational education)
AMERICA: HISTORY & LIFE
EXCEPTIONAL CHILD EDUCATION ABSTRACTS
HISTORICAL ABSTRACTS PSYCHOLOGICAL ABSTRACTS
SOCIAL SCISEARCH® SOCIOLOGICAL ABSTRACTS

COMING SOON
ART BIBLIOGRAPHIES MODERN
BIOSIS PREVIEWS (back files 1970-71)
CRIS (current agricultural research)
DEFENSE MARKET MEASURES SYSTEM (Frost & Sullivan)
ENVIRONMENTAL PERIODICALS BIBLIOGRAPHY
LANGUAGE & LANGUAGE BEHAVIOR ABSTRACTS
NICEM (educational A-V materials)
PREDICASTS FEDERAL INDEX
SPIN (American Institute of Physics)

ciation; they stress that more study of the question of reorganization is needed. Bennett Wilson went on record "deploring the hostility, and sometimes even rudeness, with which the Board of Library Commissioners has been faced over the past year," and he urged the Massachusetts library community to support "a reorganization which will simply free the Board and Bureau from administrative impediments in doing what has always been its unquestioned obligation and responsibility to do."

R.I. claims 1st in okaying state library building $$

Jewel Drickamer, director of the Rhode Island Department of State Library Services, has in a letter to LJ disputed the claim made by Atlanta Public Library Director Ella Yates (LJ, December 15, p. 2529) that, under Governor Jimmy Carter, Georgia was the first state to provide state money for library construction. Rhode Island, says Drickamer, okayed funding for library construction first—appropriating money for this purpose in 1964.

Said Drickamer, the state level effort has "changed the face of Rhode Island as far as public library facilities go. The first version [of the law] let us pay flat grants. This was changed to allow us to pay our half and the debt service over a 20-year period. The latest amendment let us consider local Revenue Sharing monies as 'local' so that state funds could match. Just now some libraries are requesting Public Works funds. In one case, the state will match local endowment funds to make it a three-way project if it is funded. We are flexible and fortunate and have used funds to the best advantage for new buildings, renovations, and additions."

Drickamer included a list of the 29 projects so supported since 1964, with state funding of $2.3 million, local funding of $3.6 million, and federal funding of $1.25 million for a total investment of $7,134,776.

Book spending to inch up; but $$ buy fewer books

A survey done by John Dessauer for the Book Industry Group predicts that total dollar spending for library materials by academic, public, special, and school libraries will go up an average of 40.1 percent between 1973-74 and 1980-81, says Knowledge Industry Reports. According to Dessauer's projections, academic, public, and special libraries will have more money to spend on acquisitions, but they'll be able to get less for their money because of inflation.

Public library spending, says Dessauer, will go up 50 percent, with periodical purchases rising 67.2 percent and book buying up 49.7 percent. Academic library spending is expected to increase 51.9 percent, with periodical purchases ahead 64.2 percent and book buying up 44 percent. And special libraries will increase spending 87.4 percent, with periodicals spending zooming 105.6 percent and book purchases going up 78.6 percent.

But school libraries, says Dessauer, will probably have seven percent less to spend on books, periodicals, AV materials, and microforms. Book spending is expected to drop six percent, and periodical buying to go down 5.1 percent.

Inflation will raise prices, Dessauer predicts, from 54.1 percent for school libraries to 85.6 percent for academic libraries. Periodical prices are expected to zoom from 66.5 percent for school libraries to 117.4 percent at academic libraries, and 133.1 percent at special libraries.

An earlier Dessauer survey (compiled in 1974) had been more optimistic, projecting a 51.1 percent overall increase in library spending between 1972-73 and 1978-79. The 1974 study differed with his new projections in predicting a 24.8 percent gain in buying power for school libraries (instead of a seven percent drop) and an impressive 70.5 percent gain for public libraries (instead of a new projection of 50 percent).

Dessauer's latest study, Library Acquisitions, a Look into the Future, is available for $75 from the Book Industry Study Group, 733 Third Ave., Rm. 2300, New York, N.Y. 10017.

Zero-based budgeting meets; Carter explains policy

The University of Alabama in Birmingham is the latest to offer library administrators training in justifying the existence of their programs—something that may be required everywhere if President Jimmy Carter implements zero-based budgeting. The Alabama meet will take place April 19-20 and will cover other budgeting techniques. To get in on this conference, contact David Haddock, Coordinator, Division of Special Studies, the University of Alabama in Birmingham.

In a Nation's Business article, Carter explained what happened when zero-based budgeting was implemented in Georgia. Managers at each level had to submit "decision packages" covering every existing or proposed activity of the department; the packages were then ranked in order of priority and were funded up to the "level of affordability." In the end, said Carter, departments got more money than they would have otherwise thanks to a 50 percent reduction in administration costs. Money was saved by creating a central computer system instead of one for each department, merging 43 print shops into one, and putting Georgia patrolmen out on highway patrol and getting vocationally rehabilitated handicapped people to handle such police work as administration and radio dispatch work.

When zero-based budgeting is implemented on the federal level, it will be up to Congress to decide what department package budgets are justifiable, said Carter. He said he expected "intense opposition" to zero-based budgeting from "bureaucrats who thrive on confusion . . . and legislative leaders who do not want to see their fiefdoms endangered"; such was the case in Georgia. But he defended the program and said, "Waste and inefficiency never fed a hungry child, provided a job for a willing worker, or educated a deserving student."

Aid sought in developing new statistical tools

The Statistics for Technical Services Committee of ALA's Library Administration Division says it needs assistance from technical services people for the development of new instruments for the collection of internal technical services statistics. Librarians and specialists are asked to comment on any of the three drafts now available: Public; School/Instructional Materials Centers; and College & University.

The drafts are available from John A. Edens, University of Georgia Libraries, Athens, Ga. 30602. Plans call for an open discussion of the drafts (and evaluations of them from the field) at the 1977 ALA Annual Conference in Detroit.

Faculty status setback; SUNY blames $$ crunch

New budget stringencies imposed by the state legislature have forced the State University of New York to come up with a cost-saving package which may wipe out the possibility that SUNY librarians will in the immediate future win their long, hard battle for full faculty status.

SUNY, according to Vice Chancellor Jerome Komisar, in a letter to David Kreb, president of SUNYLA (State University of New York Library Association) said, "The current Executive Budget, as passed by the legislature, requires SUNY to generate savings of $2 million through conversion of full calendar year positons to ones having a shorter period of obligation."

One possibility raised was that savings could be effected by the conversion of full-time library (and other) positions to part-time positions, and that no money would be available to cut the library work load to nine months at the original rate of pay. Ironically, after early resistance to the idea, the administration had finally admitted the propriety of faculty status for librarians.

Medford, Mass. union for pages sacked

The Medford Public Library Pages Association, a two-year-old union representing teenage library pages, is out of the running, thanks to the State Labor Relations Commission, which recently voted to decertify the organization. The LRC had ruled on a complaint by the city that the union is illegal because it discriminated on the basis of age when it was formed; nine "senior pages" over 18 years of age were excluded from the union.

The union never really got going: the city refused to enter into contract negotiations, and even though an LRC hearing officer had ordered the city to bargain, his ruling was overruled by the State LRC. And the Supreme Court had ruled last year that the federal minimum wage is unconstitutional; except in those states which have their own minimum wage regulations, pages have no guarantee of a minimum wage.

N.Y. college library has elected chairman

Syracuse, New York's Onondaga Community College reports that Librarian Daniel Rizzo is the elected chairman of the library, which is organized as an academic department. The library, it is noted, has an open access policy which permits any county resident to take out books; Coulter Library facilities are open for use by schools and other agencies, and often serves as a classroom for high school and middle school students as well as undergraduate and graduate students.

Commenting on the open access policy, Rizzo said, "The Coulter Library is not to be confused with a public library. . . . Although public libraries have developed new . . . services . . . and have been looked upon as learning centers, they cannot be expected to provide the media or services in depth required by a college facility. But because of the cross section of the community attracted to a community college, its library collection has to accommodate all users on an academic level."

River Bend, Ill. to produce video library-PR series

The River Bend Library System (Coal Valley, Illinois) has received a $30,750 Library Services and Construction Act grant to produce a series of half-hour television shows promoting library services primarily to the nonuser. Working with the cooperation of the Television Department of Blackhawk College, the River Bend System plans to produce ten half-hour shows this year and next. The TV shows are to be distributed to cable outlets in the system area, and possibly to outlets throughout the state.

The TV series will highlight such services as library system information, service to the blind and the physically handicapped, consumer education, senior citizen activities, and a puppet show and creative games.

Project Director is Thomas Hunt of the River Bend Library System, P.O. Box 125, Coal Valley, Ill. 61240.

Federal publishing institute to eye policies & problems

The American University of Washington, D.C. announces a May 12-13 Institute on Federal Publishing, Printing, and Information Policies, a meet "of special interest to representatives of trade and professional associations and to those whose work concerns federal publishing, printing, and information policies." Speakers and panelists at the AU institute will examine the policies that affect publishing, printing, and the information services of the federal government; existing problems and possible solutions; and the present relationships between industry and government in this area.

Sponsors of the institute include: ALA's Government Documents Round Table (GODORT), the National Association of Government Communicators, the Information Industry Association, the Association of American Publishers, the American Society for Information Science, Printing Industries of America, and the Graphic Communications Computer Association.

More information is available from the program's director, Lowell Hattery, School of Government and Public Administration, American University, Washington, D.C. 20016.

"I can help you make every budget dollar count."

Kitty O'Hara
Coordinator, New Books Showcase

At Baker & Taylor's New Books Showcases—a series of immensely practical, intellectually stimulating, three-day seminars that bring librarians and publishers together in a total acquisitions environment.

You'll be able to get complete information on new books of all kinds from the publishers themselves—face to face. You'll hear presentations on every important new title. You'll have the opportunity to examine the books personally. You'll be able to buy with full knowledge of the contents. You'll be able to pin down exact prices and publication dates.

Plus, there'll be a lot more happening than just the new book presentations and displays. There'll be speaking programs, with your kind of speakers—prominent librarians, authors, publishers and government leaders, all with something to say. There'll also be a publishers' reception, hosted by Baker & Taylor as well as lots of time for discussions with your colleagues.

You are cordially invited to attend the New Books Showcase nearest you:

Chicago, February 28—March 2
Los Angeles, April 25—27
Dallas, May 23—25
Atlanta, September 26—28
Metropolitan New York, October 17—19

Plan to attend. They'll be your most productive and enjoyable three days in 1977. Complete the coupon and mail it to me, Kitty O'Hara, or contact the distribution center nearest you. New Books Showcase will make every one of those shrinking budget dollars count!

Please send me information on the New Books Showcase in _____ (specify locale)

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Mail to: Kitty O'Hara, The Baker & Taylor Companies 1515 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10036, (212) 730-7650

LJ-2-15-77

Baker & Taylor

Working for your library. Today, more than ever.

Western Division
Reno, NV 84502
380 Edison Way
(702) 786-6700

Southwest Division
Clarksville, TX 75426
Industrial Park
(214) 427-3811

Midwest Division
Momence, IL 60954
Gladiola Avenue
(815) 472-2444

Southeast Division
Commerce, GA 30529
(404) 335-5000

Eastern Division
Somerville, NJ 08876
50 Kirby Avenue
(201) 722-8000

Nat'l. Book Critics Circle picks award winners

The National Book Critics Circle's Board of Directors has announced the winners of its 1976 book awards. Among them: Fiction, October Light by John Gardner (Knopf); Poetry, Geography III by Elizabeth Bishop (Farrar); General Nonfiction, The Woman Warrior: Memoirs of a Girlhood among Ghosts by Maxine Hong Kingston (Knopf); and Criticism, The Uses of Enchantment: the Meaning and Importance of Fairy Tales by Bruno Bettelheim (Knopf).

The winners were selected from a slate of 20 books nominated by some 250 members of NBCC (LJ, January 15, p. 149).

Thumbs down on "Pinocchio"

From Tokyo comes a report of efforts by a Japanese group to keep the story of Pinocchio out of the hands of children because "it encourages discrimination against the handicapped." Said Tomiko Yakata, president of the Aichi Prefectural Labor Federation and a co-leader of the group, "Pinocchio is a story about the poor, ill-clothed and mean people. . . . Don't people realize how dangerous it is to put the idea into children's minds that the lame and the blind can live only by begging or by deceiving people and that they are pitiful nuisances."

Flying librarians

Librarians who are pilots are asked to indicate their interest in joining an association of flying librarians—a group to be tentatively called PAL, Pilots Association of Librarians. Possible activities will include fly-ins and special dinners at conferences, reports David C. Genaway, Associate Dean, John Grant Crabbe Library, Eastern Kentucky University, Richmond, Ky. 40475.

LIBRARIAN'S SPECIALTIES

Preservatives, book & document stands, page weights, slip cases, boxes, restoratives, bookplate remover, etc.

Send for illustrated brochure listing items for book and document care and preservation.

THE CURRENT COMPANY
P.O. Box 46 / Bristol, R.I. 02809

LIBRARY COOPERATION

"Library councils" could spearhead co-op

Chances are that area library councils (such as the high-powered Illinois Regional Library Council) will grow in number and provide the strong leadership needed to coordinate mushrooming state and interstate cooperation. That's one opinion voiced by Dorothy A. Kittel of the Office of Education's Office of Libraries and Learning Resources in the OE publication, Trends in State Cooperation. As for the national network, she expressed the view that the real action will be at the state and interstate level; the proposed national library network cannot meet the diverse needs of states and localities. State and interstate coordinating agencies will be needed to spearhead state and interstate cooperation; a monolithic, hierarchical national network structure will not work.

Kittel's analysis of network development: "It seems clear that networks and other cooperative activities are being developed at the local, state, and regional levels to meet specific needs at those levels. It is doubtful that a 'national network' can be designed to meet the state and local requirements for all kinds of information transmission. The national network must be designed to overarch the state and regional networks. It must allow for diversity among political entities as well as among subject specializations such as law, medicine, art, and agriculture."

In sketching the history of library cooperation, Kittel noted early opposition to a single, unified pattern of library service. ALA's Committee on Federal Relations had said in 1936 that individual states and localities should have a say in library cooperation. Although federal support for interlibrary cooperation was not authorized until 1965, the Library Services Act of 1956 and the Library Services and Construction Act of 1964 encouraged interlibrary cooperation. There was early "recognition of the interdependence of libraries of all kinds and of the need for simultaneous development of all libraries." One indication of the new awareness of "the community of interests" among libraries of different sizes and types: Rhode Island in 1964 passed a comprehensive library law that created a Department of State Library Services and authorized aid to local, regional, and statewide resource center libraries.

When LSCA Title III money for interlibrary cooperation was made available, many states moved ahead first with studies and later with actual cooperation schemes. Arizona moved rapidly, combining sparse Title III and Title I funds for such things as demonstration projects; a union list of serials including holdings of some Nevada and New Mexico libraries; a joint outreach project involving the California State Library; and a statewide interlibrary loan and reference network. Florida gradually developed a statewide interlibrary network, published a statewide union list of serials, and developed a depository system for state documents. And some states used Title III money to support such interstate activities as the Pacific Northwest Bibliographic Center (which serves Alaska, Idaho, Montana, Oregon, and Washington) and Denver's Bibliographic Center for Research.

Indiana, noted Kittel, was one state that took a slightly different approach to improving library service; it established Area Library Service Authorities "to encourage libraries of all types to coordinate their activities and to enable local authorities having library responsibilities to join together in a municipal corporation to provide necessary services." Indiana's service authorities are one example of an emerging "new breed of library service animal . . . nurtured by state library and local planning and LSCA, Title III: the area library council." Such councils, said Kittel, "have the potential of serving as the coordinating agency at the local level. . . . The Councils may also serve as nodes in the general purpose statewide network . . . and they could provide access to the special networks, such as the automation programs of the Library of Congress, the National Library of Medicine, and the National Agriculture Library."

Said Kittel, those states which are developing area library councils (The Illinois Regional Library Council was cited as the most advanced in existence) "have moved to projects which require types of libraries within a geographic area to cooperatively assess needs, jointly develop plans and programs to meet needs, and jointly evaluate efforts. This requires a commitment from each type of library represented on the council to see itself in relation to the total community and to the world of library and information services."

Back in 1970, participants in ALA's Conference on Interlibrary Communications and Information Networks (CICIN) saw the need for a coordinating agency (such as an area library council) at each hierarchical level of a national network, observed Kittel. One quote pulled from the CICIN

Ask us about helping your library out of a bind.

The problems with bound periodicals never seem to end. As the demand for more information continues to grow, you need more and more space to store it. Then there are the added problems of mutilation and loss, too.

How do you get out of this bind? Ask us. University Microfilms International offers an answer to the problems libraries face...microform...a product that saves space in your library and money in your budget. In fact, microform requires up to 95% less storage space than bound periodicals, while greatly reducing the risks of mutilation and loss.

What does this mean for your library? Ask us. University Microfilms has now packaged all the advantages of microform into a program called the Serials Subscription Service. This remarkable service automatically ensures the latest volume of any given title as soon as it is available in microform, usually six months to a year following publication. The Serials Subscription Service offers over 7,000 titles, including many of the most popular titles, with guaranteed annual prices and only one invoice with your order for the entire year.

Ask us

If you would like to learn more about the Serials Subscription Service and how it can become part of your library management program, just ask us. We'll be happy to send you our catalog and information on the Serials Subscription Program. Just ask Serials Marketing Manager, University Microfilms International, 300 North Zeeb Road, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106

University Microfilms International

Name _____

Institution _____

Street _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

LJ-2

proceedings: "Social engineering is required to overcome many of the obstacles to network progress . . . the fundamental requirement is to motivate institutions to develop new patterns of organization that will permit consortia and networks to operate effectively . . . a monolithic network structure imposed from the top down will not work. Meaningful network development requires grassroots motivation and grassroots support."

Trends in State Cooperation (017-080-014670) is available for 40¢ from the Government Printing Office.

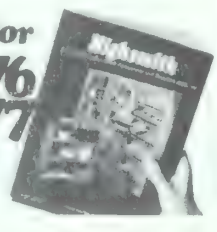
Regional data base access offered by Denver's BCR

Denver's Bibliographic Center for Research, which has built up a stronghold in the Midwest, now plans to provide low-cost library access to a regionwide machine-readable data base, reports BCR Director Donald Simpson. BCR has hooked up with the General Research Corporation (Santa Barbara), which like the better-known California firm Autographics, has the capability to handle machine-readable bibliographic records to produce union catalogs. The newly formed Library Interface systems, Inc., a Minnesota firm put together by people formerly with such vendors as Josten's and Bro-Dart, is GRC's marketing agent, and negotiated the BCR contract. Thomas Worthley is LISI president.

Simpson reports that its regional contract with General Research will enable it to offer lower costs to members for products and services utilizing GRC technology to manipulate and package in various forms the present and future holdings of bibliographic data by BCR member libraries. One target is to improve access to BCR's 6.5 million title regional union catalog.

Iowa joins ILLINET

The Illinois State Library reports that four Iowa academic libraries have affiliated with the Illinois Library and Information Network (ILLINET). The new members are: St. Ambrose College, Marycrest College, the Palmer Junior College in Davenport, and the Scott Community College in Bettendorf.



New for '76 '77
Write for free copy
Almost 13,000 items:
library/AV equip./office
The Highsmith Co., Inc.
P.O. 25-0800
Fort Atkinson, WI 53538

Hidalgo Co., Texas system budget goes up 100 percent

With a recently approved 100 percent boost in funding, one bringing its annual budget over the $600,000 mark, the Hidalgo County Library System (McAllen, Texas) can stake a claim as "the strongest federated system in Texas," reports System Coordinator Mary Kaye Donahue. The decision to up library funding indicates, she suggests, that politicians have changed their priorities and "agreed to make libraries the primary community agency. . . . Hidalgo County had previously been known for its extremes of poverty, educational problems in a population with is 85 percent Mexican-American, and geographic isolation."

Donahue reports that the eight members of the Hidalgo cooperative sponsor programs to reduce the prohibitive costs which face most smaller libraries; system headquarters keeps its own overhead down by subcontracting most operations. The system has produced the first COM (computer microfilm) library catalog in Texas, offers reference backup to libraries, provides a delivery service for interlibrary loans to member libraries, and offers consulting service.

OCLC serials check-in

The Ohio College Library Center announces that another component of its system, Automatic Check-In of Serials, is now available to OCLC members. OCLC's newsletter reports that technical services personnel (one group from Ohio, and another from outside the state) have taken the basic training in the new offering, which provides online maintenance of detailed holdings statements, prediction of "next expected issue," and automatic update of holdings statement.

THE LIBRARY DOLLAR

More service cuts face N.Y.'s Buffalo & Erie Co.

New York's hard-pressed Buffalo and Erie County Public Library reports the latest service cutbacks prompted by a severe money shortage: closing of the film department and rare book room, termination of service to schools, and elimination of evening service at Central's children's department. The library announced that its telephone information service will be shut down between noon and 2 P.M. and in the evening after 5 P.M.; preference will be given to people who come to the library for assistance. The General Information Department and a few merged departments (the Business and Labor Department and the Science and Technology Department) will try to handle incoming calls on the curtailed schedule, but the library's information service is expected to erode steadily "due to the removal of a large number of telephones and the elimination in the budget of a telephone operator."

Other cutbacks reported: three of the library's four bookmobiles have been taken off the road; Central library orientation tours for youngsters have been suspended; the library's reserves service has been eliminated and its inter/intraloan service is expected to slow down because of cuts in staff and elimination of all but one delivery truck driver. Buffalo branch service hours have been cut to an alternate two- and three-day weekly schedule—one which enables one staff to man two neighboring libraries.

The elimination of services and departments reflects a loss in manpower: last year alone Buffalo and Erie County lost 42.1 percent of its work force, including 64 professional librarians, 63 clerks, and 62 blue collar workers.

Oregon votes tax funding for co-op, book service

The Oregon State Library's latest report of votes on proposals to increase local library tax support is on the up side. Two communities that rejected tax boost proposals last time around (LJ, December 1, 1976, p. 2421) have had a change of heart; three counties okayed funding to support a multicounty regional library service; and one county opted for a tax to restore bookmobile service.

- Lebanon's vote: A proposal to up Lebanon library tax support above the six percent limitation finally made it; residents voted 2,154 to 1,216 to up the operating levy to $402,241 in the fifth election on the measure.
- Coos Bay's victory: Librarian Carol Ventgen reports that the city opted for a six percent tax maximum on the fifth try. Said Ventgen, "If the budget had not been approved on what was to be the last attempt at passage, library services would have been reduced 75 percent . . . all but two staffers would have been terminated, all book funds cut, and all programs eliminated except for the checking in of books."

• $$ for regional library service: Voters in Marion, Polk, and Yamhill counties approved a three-year $300,000 annual tax levy to support the Chemeketa Cooperative Regional Library Service; the vote was 46,186 to 41,500. The levy will finance the cooperative activities of 17 local libraries and tie them into a regional library service. Among the services to be provided: free multicounty library access; bookmobile service to communities lacking local libraries; and reference information service. The levy, notes the Oregon State Library, "provides direct cash refunds or additional services to cities with libraries under a formula which assures no double taxation of communities.

• Bookmobile back on the road: Thanks to a 56,826 to 42,734 vote in favor of a two-year levy for rural library services, Lane County will be able to put its bookwagon back on the road.

St. Clair Co., Michigan wins 28 percent $$ boost

The St. Clair County Library System (Port Huron, Michigan) has won a 28 percent increase in county funding—up from 1976's appropriation of $367,008 to $469,884 for 1977, reports Director Harold P. Wu. St. Clair's total operating budget for 1977 is $722,344.

St. Clair, reports Wu, also won a special appropriation of $53,000 for a new bookmobile.

Seattle budget inches up; staff cuts nixed

Seattle City Librarian Ronald Dubberly reports that a proposal to cut back staff drastically was nixed at the last minute, and the Seattle Public Library's operating budget for 1977 went up a modest two percent. The mayor had recommended the elimination of 23 librarian posts and eight support positions, but the city council decided to sacrifice book money to spare jobs. Only one bindery worker was actually laid off, six positions were eliminated, and the book budget was reduced by 9.7 percent.

Dubberly reports a total budget of $6,140,066, with 81.1 percent of it earmarked for salaries and fringe benefits, and 11.5 percent for book buying.

Chicago budget up ten percent

City funding to the Chicago Public Library has been increased ten percent, reports CPL Director David Reich. Credit for the boost in library support, says Reich, should go to Mayor Richard Daley, who has increased city support to CPL in each of the past few years.

NEW IN EDUCATION

Training in new technology: OCLC, data bases

As library cooperation grows and more individual libraries opt for the kind of technology that will save time and eliminate drudgery, library schools are coming up with more courses aimed at providing the professional with the expertise needed in dealing with the new technology. Among the latest course offerings indicating the emergence of a new trend in library education: a new series of short courses on OCLC (Kent State), workshops on individual data files (State University of New York-Albany), and an institute on evaluating data bases (Simmons).

• OCLC short courses: Growing demand for training in the Ohio College Library Center (OCLC) bibliographic system has prompted Kent State University to offer a series of OCLC workshops throughout the year, instead of just one annually, reports Anne Marie Allison of KSU. The workshops, she says, "will not turn reference librarians into catalogers, but will provide them with enough skill and expertise to work confidently with the network, its hardware, data base and individual bibliographic records." The dates of forthcoming workshops: April 17-22 and June 5-10.

• Individual data files: The School of Library and Information Science at the State University of New York at Albany earlier this year offered a series of one-day workshops on bibliographic searching via such systems as Lockheed's DIALOG and System Development Corporation's ORBIT. SUNY-Albany now plans a complementary workshop series dealing with the structure of such individual data files as Sci Search and Soc Sci Search (March 4), Enviroline/Energyline (March 11), the National Agriculture Library's CAIN (March 18), and CIS/American Statistics Index (March 25).

• Evaluating data bases: The School of Library Science at Simmons College (Boston) is offering a follow-up to last year's institute on Strategies for Utilizing Online Data Bases; slated for March 29-30 is the institute, Evaluation of Online Data Bases. Faculty members include F. Wilfrid Lancaster of the University of Illinois, Ching-Chih Chen of Simmons, and Pauline Atherton of Syracuse University, New York. The fee is $50. Contact: Timothy W. Sineath, Coordinator of Continuing Education, School of Library Science, Simmons College, 300 Fenway, Boston, Mass. 02115.

• Online circulation systems: The New England Library Information Network (NELINET) plans to run a two-day seminar aimed at "providing library administrators with information about how to evaluate, specify, and negotiate for both packaged and locally developed computerized circulation systems." The seminar is slated for April 12-13 at the Hartford Hilton; registration is limited to 200, with preference given to New England librarians who sign up before March 15. Contact: Ann von der Lippe, NELINET, 40 Grove St., Wellesley, Mass. 02181.

Library networking course offered by Catholic Univ.

Catholic University announces a new graduate course focusing on the planned national library network—something which can be viewed as an indication of the seriousness with which the library community is watching ongoing network planning. The course, scheduled for this spring, is to be taught by Henriette Avram, director of the MARC Development Program,

YOU WILL HAVE—
"CONFIDENCE"
In Our Complete Periodicals Service—
All American and Foreign Titles

Promptness is a Traditional part of McGregor Service . . . as well as:

- EXPERIENCE
- TRAINED PERSONNEL
- FINANCIAL STABILITY
- AMPLE FACILITIES
- RESPONSIBLE MANAGEMENT

An attractive brochure is available for the asking.

SUBSCRIBE TO McGREGOR PERIODICALS BULLETIN

OUR 44th YEAR

McGREGOR Magazine Agency

MOUNT MORRIS, ILLINOIS 61054

Library of Congress. The course, says CU, will provide an overview of "the present evolving national and international library network . . . [its] objectives, components, and technical and bibliographic problems and policy issues."

More information is available from Elizabeth Stone, Graduate Department of Library Science, Catholic University of America, Washington, D.C. 20064.

Institute on community analysis

Community Analysis for Responsive Library Services is the subject of a February 22-26 institute sponsored by the University of Denver Graduate School of Librarianship; it's to be held at the Cherry Creek Inn, Denver. The institute, intended primarily for the staff of small and medium sized public libraries or city library branches, will teach participants "how to construct a community profile, evaluate present library resources and services, and develop and implement a long-range plan of services responsive to known needs in their own communities."

ARL plans April institute on management skills

The Office of University Library Management Studies of the Association of Research Libraries announces a Library Management Skills Institute to be held April 19-22 at the Breckenridge Inn of Kansas City, Missouri. The institute, designed specifically for academic library supervisory and managerial staff, will address such topics as motivational forces, problem-solving techniques, group leadership requirements, and group dynamics. And ARL says that the institute will utilize a "laboratory approach"—requiring participants to interact among themselves as well as with trainers. On the institute staff are William Eddy of the University of Missouri-Kansas City, Duane E. Webster, director, ARL Management Studies Office, and Jeffrey J. Gardner, management research specialist for ARL.

The institute fee is $200. For more information, write D. E. Webster, ARL Office of Univ. Library Management Studies, 1527 New Hampshire Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

School media programs are focus of UM workshop

The University of Maryland will present on June 27-July 2 its fifth annual workshop on Systematic Strategies for Planning, Communicating, and Evaluating School Media Programs. Directed by James Liesener of UM, the workshop is based on the processes and techniques he developed and described in A Systematic Process for Planning Media Programs (ALA, 1976).

The workshop provides media specialists with both instructional and practicum sessions—a learning experience closely integrated with the actual working situation of each participant. "Building and district level participants get [in advance] instructional packages for their particular level of operation to be used to collect data regarding their own programs prior to the workshop." The deadline for application is April 15.

More information is available from James W. Liesener, College of Library and Information Services, Undergraduate Library Building, University of Maryland, College Park, Md. 20742.

THE SEVEN SPRINGS INSTITUTE

State agency heads face the future

At a three-day Management Institute for State Library Agency Directors, hosted by the University of Pittsburgh library school, forty-four top state people joined Office of Education and National Commission on Libraries and Information Science (NCLIS) representatives in assessing the problems involved in the state agency's role as a component of a national network. The Seven Springs Institute, an offspring of one held a while back at Ohio State University, had as a major purpose the upgrading of the management abilities of state agency leaders, many (over 20) of whom are relatively new to the job and few of whom have substantial management training.

This purpose was addressed, with rather little effect, by a brace of planning and evaluation experts who got high marks in filibustering, but in little else from the conferees. The main products of the three-day affair came from the interaction of the agency people themselves as they identified problems and possibilities, and from the contributions to this discussion by Al Trezza for the National Commission and people from the OE's Bureau of Libraries and Learning Resources: Dick Hayes, Paul Janaske, and the RPO's (regional program officers)—plus top notch discussion-steering by Pitt Dean Tom Galvin and Institute Directors Brooke Sheldon and Frank Sessa. The following is an attempt to sift out the main themes that emerged from sessions attended by LJ.

State agencies in the national plan

Trezza, executive director of the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science (NCLIS), gave the latest in his series of exegeses of the national plan. These are always worth attending to, since no two are exactly alike, either because Trezza dislikes repeating himself, or because the subsequent versions reveal the evolving nature of the national plan in the minds of the NCLIS staff and of the Commission itself. A new emphasis is a strong commitment to the goal of "access for all," with disparagement of tendencies toward "service to elites." The Commission, said Trezza, "is starting at the bottom" on achieving access for all. This is a long way from the earliest expressions from NCLIS, which relegated such concerns to local and state people.

State agency mission: The agencies must be the keystones of the plan, says NCLIS, and to do this (said Trezza), they've got to stop being just public library agencies; they've got to win leadership in all library areas, including school and academic, where "they must be convinced that you can coordinate." For this to come about, he warned, the state agency must have the united support of both local individual libraries (which must be involved, and must have a meaningful role if we are to get the necessary funding) and the state library associations. The real competition, he warned, is from the big ARL (Association of Research Libraries) libraries, which have the strongest collections and staff resources in the nation, as well as large communities of users. Will they accept leadership from the state agencies?

Danger from other agencies: There are too many cooperative organizations, charged Trezza, and some of them will have to go. State agencies should work against the development in their states of "organizations for the sake of organizations—like MIDLNET (Midwestern Library Network), which was created, he said, not out of a real need, but to follow the example of agencies like NELINET (New England Library Network) and SOLINET (Southeastern Library Network)." The libraries which showed the "blind faith" to back MIDLNET with $10,000 each over a period of three years should instead have had faith in their own state programs, he said.

You gotta believe: Throughout all this, Trezza gave his usual fervent plea for the state library people to believe in themselves, get in there and fight, etc. etc. and tomorrow the world.

Today the problems

Stimulated by Trezza's pitch, a clutch of seven discussion groups brought back lists of problems and questions generated, in most cases, by the rather large gaps between their present conditions and the apotheosis Trezza holds out to them. Can all state agencies, even those now weak and underfunded, achieve the leadership envisioned? And if they are to, what are the problems they must first overcome?

Legislative: federal legislation: Bessie Moore, NCLIS member from Arkansas, made a plea for a new LSCA (Library Services and Construction Act) title to provide for the strengthening of the state library agencies, citing the example of the successful strengthening of state education agencies under ESEA (Elementary & Secondary Education Act). No one bought it. When a question was raised on the diverting of LSCA Title I funds, now being used largely for general support of innovative library services, to pay for the development of the coming multitype library systems, there was general opposition [although many states are investing Title I funds heavily in this area already].

Consolidation of all federal library support: The consolidation of all library aid—under LSCA, HEA, and ESEA—under the control of the state library agency, was considered, somewhat wistfully, but there was opposition too (from Ed Dowlin of New Mexico for one) to anything that would increase rivalries for the same dollars among types of libraries.

State legislation: There were mixed reactions to the suggestion that better state laws will be needed if the state library agency is to gain leadership: many said that improvement would help, but many also said that existing laws are OK, or that laws are less important than the agency's own initiative for progress.

Structural problems: Most of the questions and comments which followed Trezza's talk revealed vast uncertainties about how everything is supposed to be organized in a world where red-cheeked, healthy state agencies are presiding over happy families of intertype library systems, and earning the plaudits of a grateful citizenry for shouldering the major burden of library support. Among the many quite specific questions showing a lack of consensus on structure: Should the intertype library systems handle their own funds? Should the participating libraries provide the funding? Should the governing boards of these new systems include persons other than local library trustees? Librarians?

Also: Can for-profit organizations participate in these new systems? Should priorities be given to service to those now being served by libraries or to those unserved? Should some of this be the responsibility of agencies other than the state library agency? What about fees? Who should pay for new services, such as extending learning opportunities for senior citizens? What can and must be done to provide the more sophisticated staff members who will be needed at the state level to handle new responsibilities— and be able, for example, to communicate with academic librarians?

Other questions: How are the large urban public libraries supposed to relate to a state agency leadership? How do we know the extent of need for multitype library systems in each state? How many of the operational programs serving libraries in multitype systems should be actually run at the state level? Where does all this structure relate to other statewide structures such as planning councils and other nonlibrary entities? How can states coordinate what they are doing in multitype systems? A beginning on answers was made by some of the leaders: New York, Washington, and Illinois:

Trezza: You gotta believe

Sheldon: Getting it all together

The Illinois story

Katherine Gesterfield, Illinois State Library, told how they are handling things in what is, after all, the House that Trezza Built. The development of multitype library systems, based on the public library systems, and embracing school, academic, and special libraries, is well under way in that state, encouraged—and controlled—by the state's financial support and backed by the legal requirement that the State Library have responsibility for coordination. Among ongoing programs serving these libraries are continuing education, interlibrary loan, reference, and cooperative collection development. Both academic and school librarians were described as "eager" to share their resources with public libraries. State support in collection development has also encouraged sharing of resources. Moderator Tom Galvin underlined this point: "Aid to individual libraries is not necessarily inconsistent with cooperation."

The Washington story

Roderick Swartz, one of the newcomers to state library leadership, described the rather different, but similarly thriving situation out on the Pacific rim (in the House that Maryann Reynolds Built). Washington, he pointed out, has created a state library network without the aid of legislation, and indeed plans specifically not to solve problems legislatively, but in the more flexible matrix of regulations worked out with the participation of user groups. Statewide organization in Washington, he pointed out, has had a dramatic impact back on the agency which created it: the Washington State Library is now highly active in both the regional and national councils which are planning the library future. We may be spending too much time and effort, he suggested, in developing systems—when we should be developing the network at the state level and letting the systems then develop in accordance with it. All of this, as Dean Galvin commented, could be taken as a good example of "form follows function."

Tony Miele of Alabama

Charles Hinds of Kentucky

John Humphry of N.Y.

The New York story

John Humphry, New York state librarian, described still another way of moving towards the goal. The State Library in New York, like all educational organizations from elementary schools to universities, is under the Regents of the State of New York, who have the authority to govern and develop every aspect of public education. The state now provides $30 million to library systems; the Regents fund the R & R systems which link reference and research resources in regional consortia, serving the public, academic, and special—but not the school—libraries of the state.

Planning is now going on to find ways to consolidate cooperative services in major areas, such as Long Island, where a task force is studying the creation of a Long Island Library System. This could link not only the two big public library systems of Suffolk and Nassau counties, and their academic and special libraries, but other (nonlibrary) agencies. A proposed course of action would provide state funding incentives, to one library system in each of the state's regions, to design a regional system.

Humphry mentioned the recent reorganization of the New York state library agency, but did not mention the severe slash in state funding which had necessitated it and which now threatens interloan services in the state because of the many positions lost at the state library.

Starting from scratch

Pitt Associate Dean Allen Kent provided still another alternative for those libraries which have yet to make a start on the road down which Illinois, Washington, New York (and California, although no report was made from that state) are marching to the beat of somewhat different drummers. He suggested that (instead of starting with existing institutions and finding a structure to fit them into) that one start with two lists: one for basic library functions, including acquisitions, bibliographic control, delivery, and storage—and one for a listing of various types of materials. It becomes apparent, he said, that for different forms of library materials—books, periodicals, microforms, AV materials, and so forth, quite different levels of coordination are required. A statewide or nationwide system is clearly needed for periodicals, but for others it may be that local, or state, or regional provisions should be made in order for the user to be best served.

This was the only example of a "rational" approach put forth at the meeting, which was, by design, dominated by the planning philosophies embodied in CIPP and MAUT-Bayesian statistics, and the gospel according to Daniel L. Stufflebeam. MAUT-Bayesian was given an extremely truncated and unsatisfactory introduction by Maria Gutenberg of Harvard, who spent something like 20 minutes of very scarce time rhapsodizing over her love for libraries, leaving only a few minutes for a fast blackboard job on MAUT-Bayesian. Her performance, however, was nowhere near as abysmal as that of the University of Pittsburgh's Robert Perloff, who Major Hoopled his way through what was to have been a "Review of Evaluation Models" and achieved something like zero content.

The future of LSCA

Dick Hayes (Office of Library and Learning Resources, OE) reminded the gathering that it is high time that there be some comment from the field on the future of LSCA, which went through House hearings on its extension with very little comment, and which is due at the Senate soon. People at the state level who have been managing programs should be heard from, he urged. A serious problem affecting state agencies and the future of multitype systems, he said, is the difficulty in getting legislators to appreciate Title III, which provides for interlibrary cooperation—as compared to the clearly observable benefit to constituents that is provided by—say—a bookmobile. To a proposal that Titles I and III be combined and used at the discretion of the states, Trezza remarked that a comprehensive library act had been proposed already, but had been rejected. It might be time for another try at it, he suggested.

The new LSCA Title V, for large urban public libraries, came up for varied comment. To fears that the funds would go directly to the city libraries, bypassing the states, Trezza said that the states would handle the money, as they do all LSCA money. But Nettie Taylor (Maryland) continued with the objection that even at that the state agency will be acting as a mere conduit, getting no opportunity for leadership and planning. The regulations, responded Trezza, are likely to specify a relationship between the use of Title V funds and the state plan.

Summary

The Pittsburgh meeting (actually held at the Seven Springs resort some 100 miles from the airport) is part of a continuing, though so far, sporadic effort to provide state agency leadership with opportunities to upgrade their capacities to handle the responsibilities which many agree should be theirs under a national plan. A study (reported by OE's Dick Hayes) has indicated that many state agencies are weak in planning and evaluating, which was the target of this meeting, and well may be the focus of a subsequent meeting to be put on for state agency middle management people. A recent report from the Connecticut State Library, describing a financial mixup that had everyone confused over just what money the agency had available, bears out the need for management muscle at the state level. But every bit as much, state agency leaders seem to need to establish good communications among themselves so that they can share the expertise that is being developed in a variety of creative and even adventurous approaches now being made. Seven Springs did a fine job on this.—Karl Nyren

CONFERENCE REPORT

Preservation: a National Plan at Last?

by Pamela W. Darling

"We are here to preserve civilization," began Librarian of Congress Daniel J. Boorstin, at the opening of the National Preservation Program Planning Conference, whose purposes he described as to assess the proportions of that problem, to find ways of informing the nation and the world about it, and to identify approaches to solving it now and in the future. Boorstin urged attention to two distinct but interdependent aspects: the social or epistemological questions of what should be preserved, who should do it, and how we organize to get it done; and the technical problems of how to preserve the tremendous varieties and quantities of deteriorating materials. Characterizing the opportunity presented by this problem as one of "cataclysmic grandeur," Boorstin asserted that it was the duty of the Library of Congress to assume the leadership, in collaboration with all affected and interested parties.

Those parties were well represented by the group of 40 invited participants—librarians, conservators, archivists, publishers, and representatives of public and private policy and funding agencies—who joined two dozen LC staff members for the two-day conference supported by the Council on Library Resources (CLR), December 16–17, 1976, in LC's Whittall Pavillion. The conference format provided for a series of formal presentations on the first day, followed by a full day of open discussion among all participants of the elements vital to a "national preservation program." Participants also toured LC's preservation research laboratory and restoration workshop, where staff members displayed or demonstrated a variety of developing techniques for protecting, repairing, and restoring library materials.

Frazer G. Poole, LC's Assistant Director for Preservation and chairman of the conference, followed Boorstin's introduction with a brief history of the development of preservation awareness. After years of worry and talk, "we must establish a plan of action," he said. "LC does not have all the answers; we seek opinions and guidance from the national library and archival community." Poole indicated that the next step following the conference might be to seek a grant for a full-scale study and preparation of detailed program plans, and then introduced members of his staff to give an overview of LC's present preservation operations.

LC's present program

Lawrence S. Robinson, Preservation Microfilming Officer, described LC's program for filming the intellectual contents of materials too brittle for further use. Though probably the largest such operation in the country (rivalled only by the New York Public Library), producing archival quality film under full bibliographic control for over 20,000 volumes a year, this program at its present level would require 300 years for filming the six million "brittle books" now within LC, Mr. Robinson reported; and most of those will have crumbled to nothing long before then.

Dr. John C. Williams then outlined the work of LC's Preservation Research Office. In a laboratory equipped five years ago through an initial grant from CLR, several chemists and technicians are engaged in research into such things as determining and grading the permanence of materials, practical methods for mass treatment, and the effects of buffering agents on paper and inks. In order to keep as many techniques as possible free for general use, the Research Office as a matter of policy patents its discoveries on behalf of the public and encourages their use in further research and development.

"Preservation is the art of delaying the inevitable," said Peter Waters, LC Restoration Officer, in discussing the wide variety of protective and remedial treatment services the Restoration Workshop provides for valuable materials in the library's collections. The scale of the problem was again brought home by his estimate that it will take some 11,500 man-years of work to restore LC's rare books alone. Thirty-seven positions are presently allocated to the task (that's 300+ years of work for each), and the trouble is compounded by the fact that many of the staff are in the early stages of on-the-job training, a process which Waters judges to take seven years to produce a professional conservator. Given the personnel problem, together with the many still-unresolved questions about safe treatment, much of the current effort is concentrated on "phased preservation," the creation of protective coverings (boxes, polyester envelopes, etc.) to "hold the pieces together" until complete restoration can be attempted.

Elements for a national program

Gordon R. Williams, Director of the Center for Research Libraries and author of the 1965 Association of Research Libraries study which was an early milestone on the preservation planning road, concluded the first morning session with a review of why the profession as a whole seems to have been so slow to do something about preservation. Among the factors cited were: 1) the lack of heavy patron pressure to improve the condition of materials; 2) concentration on building collections without attention to on-going maintenance; 3) the non-"rare" nature of most deteriorating materials, though they may be scarce or even unique; 4) the enormous volume which makes only mass treatment economically feasible together with the lack of effective mass treatment techniques. While there is general agreement that not everything needs to be preserved, Williams noted ruefully that there is virtually no agreement on which things don't need preserving; thus the selection process is time-consuming, costly and fraught with peril.

Williams suggested an approach to the problem through transfer of materials to a large-scale cold-storage facility (low temperatures dramatically reducing the rate of deterioration), with access provided through a photocopy-on-demand system. Materials thus protected would be much more likely to survive until more permanent preservation measures could be taken, either through filming their contents or restoring the books themselves. This idea was to provoke much comment as the conference continued.

Carl Spaulding, Program Officer at CLR, opened the afternoon session with a slide-illustrated report on technological possibilities in the microform area. Emphasizing the importance of a total systems view, that preservation microfilming should be a coordinated program for the recording, storage, and retrieval of information, he urged that any plans for a national program be scaled to take full account of the magnitude of the job. He also warned against Pamela W. Darling is Head, Preservation Department, Columbia University Libraries, and Chairman of the ALA/RTSD Preservation of Library Materials Committee. Mrs. Darling represented the American Library Association at the Preservation Planning Conference and provided this report to LJ.

Librarian of Congress Boorstin: "The preservation of printed matter is one of the great forgotten problems of our age" hoping for some miracle of technology to cut filming time significantly: you can't put brittle books into an automatic feed, so no matter how fast the camera can go, the pages must still be turned one at a time.

Bibliographic control of microforms, the sine qua non of a successful national preservation microfilming program, was discussed by LC's Joseph P. Howard, Director of the Processing Department. With a brief history of the development of cooperative cataloging, Howard reiterated LC's conviction that the pooling of standardized bibliographic data is our only hope for achieving adequate record control and access to microforms as well as other materials, and described how the on-line potential of machine-readable cataloging creates new ways to approach old problems. LC's National Register of Microform Masters and Newspapers in Microform, manually-produced book catalogs, are at present the major tools for locating microforms and avoiding costly duplicate filming; but neither comes close to comprehensive coverage, and the time lags built into a manual system further limit their value. If there is to be a coordinated national approach to preservation microfilming, it must be based on a fast, reliable system for sharing bibliographic data on what has been or is about to be filmed.

Robert L. Feller, Director of the Center on the Materials of the Artist and Conservator at Carnegie-Mellon University, spoke next on the role of scientific research and technical support in the resolution of preservation problems. A painting conservator, Feller described the importance of the technical study of materials of the past and the analysis of the processes of deterioration, which can lead to the development of new methods and materials for preserving the artifacts and records of history. The pathetic shortage of manpower devoted to research in this area, he said, reflects the lack of awareness "out there" that the job needs doing. The unpredictable time element in serious research makes it essential to have continuous financial support, but funding is inevitably tied to society's priorities: what percentage of the library bill are we willing to devote to preservation? The scientific tools are there, Feller said, if we have the will to put the manpower to work.

Education for preservation

Paul N. Banks, Conservator at the Newberry Library and perhaps the first to teach a graduate-level course in preservation within a library school, addressed the vexing problem of education for preservation. Contrasting library and archive needs with the reasonably well-developed programs for preparing museum conservators, Banks listed several factors inhibiting the rapid development of a corps of library preservation professionals: 1) physical preservation is a highly sophisticated technical craft requiring extensive preparation; 2) its ethical/philosophical framework is as yet poorly developed (by which he referred to such questions as, should a deteriorating rare volume be rebound in a contemporary style or a style matching the original, or should it simply be stabilized and preserved exactly as it now is?); 3) the tremendous variety of materials and conditions creates a highly diverse set of treatment problems, thus requiring personnel with not only a broad array of skills but also a refined sense of judgment and discrimination; 4) because of the massive proportions of the problem (remember LC's 300 years of rare book work), it will be many years before a professional training program can turn out enough people to meet the needs.

Banks next defined the three different types of personnel needed for a physical preservation program: the administrator, a librarian with enough technical background to establish priorities and policies to guide day-to-day selection and treatment procedures; the conservator, a skilled professional responsible for final treatment decisions often involving testing of materials, for training staff and insuring quality control, and for performing complex treatment procedures; and the conservation technician, carrying out "routine" treatments under the supervision of the conservator.

Technicians are best trained through apprenticeship, Banks stated, and professed ignorance about what could be done to produce informed administrators. But we must begin, he said, with the preparation of conservators, for they will lead the rest. He called for a two-year graduate-level program, affiliated with a university, combining both academic and laboratory work, followed by a one-year internship in an established restoration workshop. Acknowledging the difficulty of finding faculty and facilities for such a program, he suggested that much flexibility and inter-institutional cooperation would be needed in the early years. He warned that in the first two years of the educational process the students must be protected from the production pressures of the workshop. For this reason, among others, Banks expressed reservations about establishing the training program at LC, despite the obvious concentration of expertise to be found there. He also feared that if the first one to be established had such direct federal support the chances of obtaining support for others would dim.

Turning to a miscellany of smaller but no less vital concerns which a national preservation program should encompass, Stephen R. Salmon, Executive Director for Systemwide Library Planning at the University of California, suggested the need for an expanded information program, including short publications on particular problems and techniques, a preservation journal or regular section in an existing publication to channel information promptly to as many people as possible (especially those who don't know they need to know), and a continuing series of workshops and seminars around the country. Recounting a dismal tale of loss following a Gulf-coast hurricane, he called for publicity on the need for disaster-preparedness, and proposed the establishment of regional rescue teams to assist with local emergencies. We can't expect LC to do it all for us, Salmon said, urging the American Library Association, the Association of Research Libraries, and the library education establishment to give higher priority to preservation, providing needed information to stimulate program development at all levels.

The first day closed with a description from L. Clark Hamilton, Deputy Register of Copyrights, of some of the preservation problems we may face in handling publications of the future. Given the new forms of information and publication in this machine-media era, we will have to deal not only with deteriorating paper and books, but with such things as storage environments for radio and television archives and bit migration on computer tapes. While the full implications of the new copyright law are not fully understood, some of its depository provisions (for example, the author fee to insure maintenance of the material for the full copyright period) might prove useful in the establishment of a national preservation collection, in cold storage or otherwise. Other features, such as the acceptance of unpublished manuscripts, may further expand the universe of potential preservation problems. We must develop an effective mechanism, Hamilton concluded, for determining what is a publication, capturing it, and providing security and preservation.

Free-for-all

The second day produced a wide-ranging, often spirited discussion of practically everything.

First, the cold storage, photocopy-on-demand, with-or-without microfilming idea provoked many questions and comments: Would libraries give up materials to a national collection? Can we assume that materials which would benefit from such protection are in low enough demand to make reproduction-on-demand an acceptable service alternative? Do we really know how much protection cold storage would provide, for what kinds of materials, with what—if any—side effects? How would one transport brittle materials safely to a central facility? Do patrons really hate or love microforms as much as some say? How would titles be selected for transfer? Whose copies would be transferred? What priorities might dictate the filming of stored materials to make the information more readily available? What distinctions apply between retrospective holdings and future receipts? How could we absorb the enormous task of altering bibliographic records? Though the discussion led to no firm conclusions, it served to highlight effectively the advantages to be sought and the pitfalls to be avoided in subsequent planning for this aspect of a national program.

Attention then turned from the preservation of information to the preservation of books and other materials, beginning and returning continually to the personnel problem. How many people could be trained at once? Will it take three or seven years? What kinds of jobs will they find? Should training of technicians wait until there are enough conservators to do it, or are there some interim instructions, at least of the what-not-to-do variety, which could be provided for the menders and repairers already at work in most libraries? How much of a scientist must the working conservator be? Since personal skill and judgment are so crucial, is there any ways to evaluate or certify individuals? In the pressure of work to be done, how can the profession protect itself and its treasures from the unskilled and the unscrupulous? What kinds of personnel are needed to maintain in serviceable condition high-demand materials which are neither "rare" nor scarce? Again, there were no final answers; but the thoughtful disagreements and urgent sense of need which characterized the exchange clearly pointed toward the development of a multi-faceted approach to the training of people and the delivery of physical preservation services.

Seminar with salad

When everyone had settled down with a buffet luncheon plate, Boorstin unexpectedly invited debate on the subject of priorities: assuming that everything can't be preserved at once (and consequently that some things will be lost), what criteria might be used to determine where to start? Despite the clinking of 50 knives and forks, the exchange was sustained and lively, with cherished assumptions challenged right and left in the attempt to ponder the imponderable questions of value and importance. Popularity now is no guarantee of historical significance, Boorstin asserted, and yet the "used up" almanacs and primers of the past may be of more value as social documents than the carefully preserved tomes of sermons and essays. Who presumes to decide what shall survive and what shall not? Do all publications have a right to life; does survival of the fittest serve mankind's needs; what is our responsibility to ourselves and to the future? This time a consensus did seem to emerge: that to the extent we can control the selection process at all, priority for preservation treatment should be determined by applying three criteria. First, physical condition—how much time does this item have before it will be irretrievably lost; second, scarcity—how many other copies exist, and are they in better or worse condition; and third, "significance," that subjective and awesome question—even if this is the last copy on earth and it will disintegrate tomorrow, is it worth saving today? An intellectual exercise perhaps, but a useful counterpoint to the pragmatic concerns of treatment options, training strategies, and financial implications.

Tying up loose ends

The final session began with a rather breathless free-for-all on the role and potential of regional centers, research needs, preservation information services, the importance of improved communication and collaboration, strategies for involving publishers and the scholarly community, the value of a support service to test materials, the need to encourage once again the use of quality paper and binding techniques in current book production, the possibility of enlisting library suppliers in the search for nondestructive materials and methods for routine book repairs, the need for improved storage conditions for existing collections, and the professional and public awareness problem.

Warren J. Haas, Columbia University Librarian, Vice-President of the Council on Library Resources, and author of the 1972 ARL report on planning a national preservation system, concluded the conference by summarizing the discussion and pointing toward the future. Librarians and archivists have the responsibility to master the preservation problem, he said, whether that responsibility is accepted or not. The rate at which we proceed will be a function of money; IF we proceed is a function of people. Where does preservation fit into the substantial agenda facing libraries today? There is a need to balance and mesh programs; but above all, "we must develop the capacity to act." Don't worry about selection and priorities, he advised, since these will take care of themselves once we have developed a national capacity that provides a set of preservation options.

Recapitulating the two-day deliberations, Haas enumerated the things that we ought to have ten years from now: a preservation master microfilm collection and a bibliographic system that routinely accommodates microforms; a cadre of trained conservators and a preservation-wise library profession; a cold storage facility to buy time for those things which cannot be treated immediately; public awareness of the importance of preservation—"we have a matter of great public concern, but we don't have a concerned public"; full cooperation among all affected parties and a free flow of information—"this must not become a proprietary matter, for we are talking about the substance of civilization. The goal is not to preserve the resources of many individual libraries but rather to preserve, according to some yet-to-be-established plan, the substance of an indispensable part of the record of human achievement."

Enhancing the possibility that the years of talk might at last bring results, Haas announced that the Council on Library Resources would provide modest funds to support an action-oriented steering committee to coordinate the next phase of preservation program development.

There are many criteria by which a gathering of this sort might be judged: the quality of the presentations, the level of the discussions, the stature of the participants, the importance of the topic. On these counts the Planning Conference for a National Preservation Program may be judged a success. But the real verdict is yet to come, for the final test is whether and how soon the words and ideas and dreams will become concrete plans and funded realities. The silent erosion in the stacks goes on . . .

High Praise From LIBRARY JOURNAL

Jordan, Ruth. George Sand: a biographical portrait.

[illegible] LIT/BIOG

Curtis Cate's biography, George Sand (LJ 6/1/75), carved out the life in full; this is a more modest "portrait" of the "notorious woman." Jordan shows Sand as a child of her age, an egotist but not a feminist, prodigious writer of more than 100 novels and plays and thousands of letters, lover of a series of weak but gifted younger men whom she compulsively mothered. It took one that did not fit the pattern, Michel de Bourges, to show her her own passionate sensuality. In the introduction Jordan refers to "fresh data" (without naming them) and points up her main source, Sand's "vast correspondence," still being retrieved and published. Strong on primary French sources, this work is a balanced and engrossing biography.

Crosland, Margaret. Women of Iron and Velvet: French women writers after George Sand.

Taplinger. 1976. 255p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-8202. ISBN 0-8008-8436-1. $12.50. BIOG/LIT

This comprehensive study offers a synthetic panorama of French women writers and their preoccupations throughout the ages. Well-researched biographical summaries and judicious evaluations of many of the works introduced result in a thorough and authoritative work. Each writer is assessed for her own merit and viewed in the larger context of literary and social history. Crosland's richly personal and refreshing appraisals of the authors and of their critics are enlightened and provocative. This work can clearly serve as an excellent guide to readers wanting to undertake a study of French women writers, particularly those after Sand.

John, Laurie, ed. Cosmology Now.

Taplinger. 1976. 168p. illus. index. ISBN 0-8008-1925-X. $9.95. ASTRONOMY

This is a series of 12 lectures by ten respected British scientists, originally prepared for a BBC series and first published in England in 1973. Each essay covers a topic of current interest in cosmology (titles include "Black Holes," "Cosmological Models," "Steady State Defended," and "Questions Without Answers"). Writing style and level of presentation are remarkably uniform for a book of this type. The chapters are clearly written and are aimed for the informed layman. There are good line drawings, eight pages of photographs, and a two-page index. Recommended for larger collections.

Laury, Jean Ray. A Treasury of Needlecraft Gifts for the New Baby.

Taplinger. 1976. 191p. color illus. LC 76-12186. ISBN 0-8008-7858-2. $12.95. CRAFTS

This book contains hundreds of ideas for gifts which can be sewn or embroidered (as opposed to knitted or crocheted). Many items are relatively inexpensive and easy to make. Major sections include gifts for baby to wear, for baby's room, for play, and for going out. The dolls and quilts are especially nice. More inclusive than its title suggests, gift ideas are also offered for siblings, parents, and grandparents. Recommended.

Holroyd, Stuart. Psi and the Consciousness Explosion.

Taplinger. Nov. 1976. bibliog. index. LC 76-12188. ISBN 0-8008-6556-1. $9.95. PARAPSYCH

Holroyd's compelling thesis is that the interests and aims of contemporary parapsychology and the consciousness-expansion aspects of the counterculture are converging to form a "new gnosis," defined as "the knowledge that enables man to develop spiritually." The author examines and relates the latest findings in parapsychology and the hard research and theoretical work being done on the frontiers of physics, anthropology, and psychology. He asserts that a new scientific paradigm will emerge which must and will include the facts of paranormal phenomena. This is not "just another book on the occult." It is interesting, readable, well researched, even scholarly. Though it does not supplant any of the "classics" in this field, it is certainly a valuable supplement to them.

Ash, Brian. Who's Who in Science Fiction.

Taplinger. Dec. 1976. 219p. bibliog. ISBN 0-8008-8274-1. $8.95. LIT/REF

From Verne to Vonnegut, this guide lists nearly 400 bio-bibliographical articles on well known and lesser known contributors to science fiction, including writers, editors, illustrators, et al. Emphasis is placed on established American writers, with coverage of British authors as well. Less inclusive than Donald H. Tuck's yet to be completed Encyclopedia of Science Fiction and Fantasy (Vol. 1, Advent, 1974) and updating but not supplanting R. Reginald's Contemporary Science Fiction Authors (Arno, 1975. reprint), this work provides a ready reference for the sf reader. Arranged alphabetically, entries range from a few lines to three pages. Ash is critical and comments on major works. A useful, inexpensive source for public and academic libraries.

Greenberg, Martin Harry & Joseph D. Olander, eds. Tomorrow, Inc.: sf stories about big business.

Taplinger. 1976. 256p. LC 76-11057. ISBN 0-8008-7746-2. $9.95. F

These are excellent stories. The charming "Owe Me" by John T. Phillifent concerns an imaginative inventor who refuses to be caught up in the nitty gritty details of business and of marketing his products. In "Captive Market" by Philip K. Dick, a small country store near Mt. Diablo, California has a real monopoly: access to alternate futures, selling to survivors of the atomic holocaust. The best story is "Captive Audience" by Ann Warren Grifith, about the ultimate in advertising, packages that literally talk to the consumer; the grocery store becomes a cacophony of cereals crunching, crackling, and booming; the housewife looking into her cupboard can choose from a cake mix singing a jingle, or a gingerbread mix saying "mmmmmmmmmmmmm" or a can of pineapple saying "Yes, mother, all you do is chill and serve." Other classic stories reprinted here include "Patent Pending" by Arthur Clarke (a White Hart story), "Dreaming is a Private Thing" by Isaac Asimov, and "Something for Nothing" by Robert Sheckeley. A sound choice for even small libraries.

Chancellor, John. Charles Darwin.

Taplinger. 1976. 230p. photogs., some color. index. LC 76-5175. ISBN 0-8008-1434-7. $13.95. BIOG

Whether or not evolution and natural selection were ideas whose time had come in the mid-19th Century, Darwin's work brought them to the attention of the public, triggered the intense debates between his supporters and religious conservatives, and ultimately established them as fundamental biological processes. Historians of science have rightly emphasized his impact on biology and social thought, but many facets of his personality remain puzzling. Chancellor balances our knowledge of Darwin the naturalist with a focus on Darwin the person. He discusses scientific issues in sufficient depth to provide a context for Darwin's personal life, but the reader will learn more about Darwin's early years as a sociable medical and divinity student and about his later life as a retiring invalid than about Alfred Wallace's independent development of a parallel theory of evolution or about the raging controversies surrounding Darwin's work. The illustrations—mostly reproductions of contemporary portraits and drawings—are superb. Unfortunately the text is flawed by several inconsistencies in dates. Recommended.

TAPLINGER Publishing Company
200 Park Avenue South, New York, N.Y. 10003
Phone orders: (212) 533-6110

A follow-up study on Oklahoma County's experiment with paperbacks . . .

LE$$ COSTLY, MORE POPULAR

By PAUL LITTLE

THE OKLAHOMA COUNTY Libraries System's five trailer bookmobiles were converted to paperbound book collections in January 1975. The bookmobiles imposed no overdue fines, limited overdue book notices to only those borrowers who developed an "excessive" record of unreturned books, and arranged their books by topical categories to make browsing easier.

This conversion was the result of an experimental study at the library system completed in 1974 (see Paul Little, "Converting Bookmobiles to Paperbacks," LJ, April 1, 1976, p. 867-71). In the experiment, one bookmobile changed its book collection from Dewey arrangement to a "browsing" category arrangement, for six months. The bookmobile also increased the number of paperbound books in its collection by 12.5 percent while decreasing the hardbound volumes by 12.5 percent. All paper and hardbound books were marked with labels indicating the browsing category in which they had been placed. No shelving order was followed within the categories.

In a change of circulation policy, the experimental bookmobile charged no fines on overdue books, and it sent no overdue book notices during the experimental period (March-August 1974).

Hypotheses for the study were: 1) Paperbacks' share of the bookmobile circulation would increase in proportion to the increase of paperbacks in the collection. 2) Rate of books lost in circulation would be acceptable. To check on unreturned books, the known loss rate of 1.45 percent for hardbound books, and the resulting dollar costs were compared to those for the paperbound materials. 3) The majority of the topical categories would account for a circulation share that would be within plus or minus two percent of the category percentage share of the total (for the system) book collection. 4) Bookmobile circulation during the test would increase over the circulation for the same period during 1973.

The study results encouraged converting the experimental bookmobile as well as the other four bookmobiles to paperback book collections and continuing with the new procedures used in the study. These results were: 1) Circulation increased over the previous year by as much as five percent in one month. 2) The loss rate of books unreturned from circulation proved acceptable. Dollar losses of paperbounds were approximately half the dollar losses for hardbound circulation. This was true even though the bookmobile experienced a 3.54 percent rate of unreturned books from circulation versus of 1.45 percent for the rest of the library system. 3) The topical category arrangement of the collection was generally accepted by users. However, 11 of the categories failed the significance test in the experiment design and thus warranted further study.

It was suspected that the rise in percentage of unreturned materials was primarily due to the fact that overdue notices were not sent to bookmobile users during the experiment. Overdue notices were, therefore, considered for inclusion in the new procedures.

Paul Little is Chief of Public Services at the Oklahoma County Libraries, Oklahoma City

The 1975 Experiment

As a result of the successful experiment study, the Oklahoma County Libraries System in January 1975 converted its five bookmobiles to paperback collections and used the basic policies and procedures developed during the study.

To test the effects of the bookmobile changes during 1975 with as few variables as possible, each book budget remained the same as the previous year. In addition, the bookmobile schedules and publicity remained the same. Fortunately, four of the five bookmobiles were operated by the same staff members during the entire year. Each of the four clerks had had some bookmobile experience during 1974.

Paperbacks for bookmobile browsing

The bookmobile book collections were arranged in the browsing categories developed in 1974, except that the "biology" category was eliminated and a "biography" category was created. On January 2, 1975, the collections had been converted to approximately 60 percent paperbacks and 40 percent hardbounds. During the year, paperbacks were continually added to the collection not only to replace hardbounds but to add new titles as well. By the end of the year, the collections were approximately 90 percent paperback books.

The hand charging circulation policy and procedure developed in 1974 was slightly changed. The combination borrower registration card and borrowing record card was changed to a smaller, more manageable size and format. An overdue book notice policy and procedure was set up to enable bookmobile staff to send notices to borrowers who developed an "excessive" record of overdue materials. Excessive was not defined but left to individual situations and staff discretion.

The bookmobiles continued the policies of allowing borrowers to return books borrowed at bookmobiles to other library system facilities, and of having a standard three-week loan period on all bookmobile materials. Overdue fines were not charged on books borrowed from bookmobiles. Citizens borrowing materials from any other system library could still return such materials to bookmobiles. Library users were also able to request that materials from any system library be sent to the bookmobiles for easy pick-up.

If the following indicators were achieved, we would consider the experiment a success: 1) Each bookmobile, and the bookmobiles collectively, would show at least an eight percent increase in circulation over 1974. 2) The number of materials circulated and not returned would be cost-effective when the value of unreturned paperbacks was compared to loss rate and cost of hardbound materials for the rest of the library system.

Circulation of the bookmobiles with paperbacks would be checked for the number of books unreturned six months or more after their loan date—at an average cost of $.87 per book. The rate for the rest of the library system was to be computed on an average of 1.45 percent of hardbound books unreturned six months or more after the loan date—at an average cost of $4.56 per volume.

We decided not to evaluate the browsing category arrangement of the bookmobiles due to the earlier success of the change. Instead, we decided to record use of various categories on each bookmobile and to use the 1975 experience for collection adjustments on each bookmobile.

We planned to check the durability of circulated paperbacks on the bookmobiles. No comparisons with the rest of the library system or other standards were planned. This survey was to be done through analysis of paperbacks discarded between May 18 and August 31, 1976, because of excessive wear.

In late 1975, tiny Wright Branch Library switched to a paperback collection with browsing arrangement and bookmobiles' circulation policies and procedures. Wright Branch had been, for years, the branch library with the smallest circulation, and housed in the smallest library building. It was underfunded for acquisition of new materials to replace those worn out or lost in circulation. Also, it didn't seem economical to include Wright in a new circulation system being installed in all other libraries.

In converting to paperbacks at Wright, the shelving was rearranged, and some removed, to accommodate the browsing arrangement of the books. Approximately 2000 hardbound books were removed from the collection and replaced by 1700 paperbacks. By the time the paperback operation began on January 2, 1976, the collection was 40 percent paperbacks and 60 percent hardbounds.

From January through September, the normal acquisition program was continued, adding new and replacement titles in paperback as available and necessary. The same experienced staff member who operated Wright through 1975 continued through 1976. There was special publicity on the branch changes.

Evaluation of Wright's first six months of paperback operation was to be essentially the same as that for bookmobiles in 1975.

The results

Circulation increases for both the individual bookmobiles and the bookmobiles as a group are shown in Table 1. The bookmobiles significantly exceeded the anticipated results of an eight percent increase. Data included here are for circulation from January 2, 1975, through December 31, 1975, and for the same period during 1974.

The bookmobiles' 1975 losses are shown in Table II. These are based on analysis of the bookmobiles' 1975 circulation records of books loaned during the 12 months and not returned six months or more after the due date. The analysis was made in August 1976.

Cost-effectiveness of the 1975 book losses is shown in Table III. The average costs for hardbounds and paperbacks are actual acquisition costs determined from library system records. The 1.45 percent loss rate is for both the central and branch libraries. Both the bookmobile and library system rates are based on books still lost six months or more after the due date.

The relationship of the bookmobile browsing categories to 1975 circulation is shown in Table IV. The variances among the bookmobiles were anticipated and will be used to refine these collections to match specific borrower interests and demands.

We planned to measure the paperbacks' durability in circulation usage by analyzing books discarded because of poor conditon between May 18 and August 31, 1976. This proved to be invalid because the bookmobiles' discard pattern was inconsistent and erratic. Nevertheless, the discard pattern by three of the bookmobiles may indicate a trend in the durability of paperbacks.

From January 2 to June 30, 1976, the Wright Branch Library increased its circulation 18 percent over the same period in 1975. Six months after the due

Table I

Analysis of 1975 Circulation
Increases (+) or Decreases (−) Over 1974

	No. Adult Materials Circulated	Percent Increase or Decreases	No. Juvenile Materials Circulated	Percent Increase or Decrease	Total No. Materials Circulated	Percent Increase or Decrease	No. Days Open 1975	Per Day Gain in Circulation
Bkmb. #41	11,301	+25	16,174	+20	27,475	+22	208	32
Bkmb. #42	11,515	+20	10,245	+43	21,760	+30	208	14
Bkmb. #43	8,888	+54	4,386	+49	13,274	+52	104	80
Bkmb. #44	7,929	+88	4,034	−16	11,963	+33	104	28
Bkmb. #45	22,469	+21	9,111	+ 9	31,580	+17	260	25
Total all Bookmobiles	62,102	+31	43,950	+20	106,052	+26	884	25

Table II

Bookmobile Books Unreturned by August 1976;
Borrowed January 1975 to January 1976

	No. Adult Books Unreturned	Percent of Adult Circulation	No. Juvenile Books Unreturned	Percent of Juvenile Circulated	Total Books Unreturned	Percent of Total Circulation
Bkmb. #41	56	.005	48	.003	104	.004
Bkmb. #42	none	—	none	—	none	—
Bkmb. #43	none	—	none	—	none	—
Bkmb. #44	420	.05	148	.04	568	.047
Bkmb. #45	30	.001	20	.002	50	.002
Totals for Bookmobiles	506	.008	216	.005	722	.007
Totals for Rest of Library System (Adult & Juvenile combined)						.0145

dates of January, February, and March 1975, 17 books were unreturned out of 2,492 books circulated. This is a nonreturn rate of .007 percent of circulation. Wright's months' loss equals a dollar loss of 61¢ per 100 books circulated (assuming books lost as paperbacks cost an average 87¢ each). This can be related to the 1975 loss and cost-effectiveness experiences of the bookmobiles shown in Tables II and III.

Staff members observed that initially there was more resistance by the borrowers at Wright to the paperback operation. This seemed to fall in three general categories: 1) a general preference for hardbound books, 2) a general dislike of change, and 3) a preference for all paperbacks to be in one small collection shelved in one place for easy browsing. By the end of the first six months, most user resistance at Wright Branch has disappeared.

Conclusions

Four bookmobiles had extremely low rates of unreturned books. Each of the four dealt with highly diverse populations in terms of income, educational level, urban or rural residency, and ethnic backgrounds. The two constants were: 1) overdue book notices were used, and 2) experienced staff members were on the bookmobiles during the entire year. The primary conclusion is that a low rate of unreturned books is due to verbal or written notices about the overdues. For example, the two bookmobiles with no unreturned books had experienced staff who not only verbally reminded bookmobile users but also sent written notices concerning unreturned books.

The one bookmobile with a high rate of unreturned books was the only one which sent few overdue book notices during 1975 and was the only bookmobile operated during the year by several inexperienced staff members. Based on the favorable book return rate of the bookmobiles as compared to that of the rest of the library system, the conclusion can be drawn that experienced, interested personnel and overdue book notices are the primary means to maintaining a low book loss. Overdue fines are perhaps a less important control.

Circulation increases for all bookmobiles in 1975 verify bookmobile users, acceptance of the paperbacks, the browsing arrangement of books and the new procedures. The circulation pattern does not suggest any significant differences in paperback acceptance because of educational levels, urban or rural residency, or income levels.

The smaller increase in circulation by bookmobile number 42 is attributed to the fact that this was the experimental bookmobile in 1974 and that the newness of the service had tapered off among its patrons.

Table III

Dollar Cost-Effectiveness of Bookmobile Paperback Operation in 1975

	A Percent Books Lost in Circulation 1975	B Average $ Cost of Books Lost[1]	Average Cost Loss Per 100 Books Circulated
Bookmobiles	.007	$ .87	$ .61
Rest of System	1.45	4.56	6.61

[1]Average cost for bookmobile is that of paperbacks; that of library system for hardbound books.

Posters—a popular plus

The dramatic increase on bookmobile number 43 can likely be attributed to its community identification and to its position as the prime source of library service for that community. Bookmobile 43 has been permanently parked in a rural community for several years—in the center of the community at a high traffic location. It is nine miles to the next nearest library service point from this bookmobile.

The paperback loss rate showed a dramatic improvement over the 1974 study. The addition of over-

Table IV

Bookmobile Circulation Analysis
Based on Books Returned
May 18-August 31, 1976

Categories	Percentage of Books Returned
Adult	Bkmb 41	Bkmb 42	Bkmb 43	Bkmb 44	Bkmb 45	All Bookmobiles
Philosophy & Psychology	00.3	00.4	00.2	00.6	00.6	00.5
Religion	00.8	00.3	00.8	00.6	00.9	00.7
Social Science/ Folklore	00.1	00.6	00.4	00.7	01.5	00.8
Science	01.0	01.3	00.8	01.8	01.0	01.2
Medicine	00.5	00.4	00.1	00.9	00.4	00.5
Homes/Home Economics	01.1	00.5	00.5	01.2	01.7	01.1
Business	00.0*	00.2	00.0*	00.1	00.2	00.1
Arts/Crafts	00.0*	00.2	00.0*	02.0	00.5	00.5
Music/Drama	00.2	00.2	00.1	00.5	00.6	00.3
Games/Sports	00.7	00.7	00.4	00.7	00.7	00.6
Literature	00.2	00.6	00.3	00.3	00.5	00.4
History	00.4	01.1	00.2	01.4	01.1	00.7
Biography	01.1	00.7	01.2	00.0*	01.6	01.0
Fiction (Gen.)	37.2	32.0	34.0	28.6	43.2	36.6
Fiction (Mys.)	04.5	05.8	03.8	04.8	05.5	05.1
Fiction (Wes.)	01.7	03.4	04.5	02.1	02.3	02.8
Fiction (Sci-Fic.)	01.4	02.3	05.2	03.8	00.9	02.4
Juvenile
"Easy" Books	27.2	16.7	18.6	29.0	18.2	20.6
Readers	04.9	19.2	07.2	08.0	06.5	09.7
Fiction	17.7	13.4	21.5	12.9	12.0	14.7

*Represents 1 or less book.

Wright—the smallest branch due notices must be regarded as the prime factor in this change, coupled with the retention of experienced bookmobile personnel during the year. This particular facet of cost-effectiveness was of major concern both in 1974 and 1975 due to the experimental policy of no overdue fines or notices. The cost-effectiveness of lower priced paperbacks over hardbounds and of not cataloging paperbacks required no study.

The addition of overdue notices in 1975 and the dramatic improvement in the return of books over 1975 leaves serious doubt about the effectiveness of overdue fines in encouraging return of overdue borrowed materials.

The study also looked at paperback durability for the first time. While the attempted study in 1975 must be regarded as an invalid sample for measurement, it can shed some light on the trend of durability. Fifty percent or more of the paperbacks were circulated five or more times before they had to be discarded.

In the case of the Wright Branch the circulation

Circulation up, losses down at Wright increase indicates the effectiveness of the new arrangement as well as patrons' acceptance of paperbacks. The original complaints have almost disappeared as users have become familiar with the arrangement and have been able to locate desired reading materials.

Those users who complained about the absence of hardbound books appear to have been satisfied after using the paperbacks and being encouraged to obtain desired hardbound titles through other branch libraries. Another factor in user satisfaction has been staff attention to borrower service. This includes advising borrowers about various services.

Wright's low rate of books lost in circulation is especially encouraging. This means we have an economical circulation policy and procedure that simultaneously provides a more direct service approach between library and library users.

Acquisitions problems

In 1975 we relied primarily on our local news distributor to obtain adult paperback books and some of the juvenile titles for the bookmobiles. We also placed some direct orders for juvenile books. As circulation increased, it became obvious that these sources could not maintain an adequate or timely acquisitions program for the bookmobiles. We found that the large news company, though interested in serving our needs, was not able to adjust its usual ordering and handling procedures to provide the necessary services.

Early in 1976 we began studying the adequacy of our paperback program for bookmobiles as well as the rest of the library system. As a result of the analysis, a new acquisitions program went into effect October 1. Through the new program we will try to get the majority of paperbacks through paperback jobbers. We hope that Baker and Taylor's new service will provide most adult mass market titles and that Bookmen, Inc., will provide most of the mass market juvenile books. Regular monthly orders will be made.

In addition, we will be using Ray Surgine of Colorado for out-of-the-ordinary adult titles and will occasionally use direct orders (to such publishers as Scholastic) for juvenile materials. To meet the heavy demands of the bookmobiles and the Wright Branch Library we will continue to make infrequent trips to the local news company to acquire large numbers of new or replacement titles in popular adult categories such as mysteries and general fiction.

Since April 1975 paperback books have become an increasingly important part of the book collection for the entire library system. We are steadily adding paperback books and convenient, attractive shelving units for them. The branches and central library are primarily using free-standing paperback shelving units from the Gaylord Company, and we are adding more of these units each year.

Although the paperbacks are not a major part of any of our book collections except those for the bookmobiles and the Wright Branch, they play a major role in meeting library user demands for reading materials. For example, the Belle Isle Branch Library, the most heavily used of our facilities, had 74,037 print and nonprint items in its collection as of June 30, 1976. Of this, 7,781 (or ten percent) were paperback books. From July 1, 1975, through June 30, 1976, Belle Isle had experienced a circulation of 256,066. Paperbacks accounted for 37,918 (15 percent of the total circulation).

During the 1975–76 fiscal year, paperback books represented nine percent of the library system's print and nonprint materials (excluding bookmobile and Wright Branch). But they accounted for 18 percent of library system circulation during the same period.

For the Oklahoma County Library System, paperback books cost about 19 percent of the acquisition costs of hardbound books. Paperbacks represent approximately nine percent of the collections, but they account for 14 percent of the total circulation.

Not only are paperbacks less costly, they are popular with readers too—and that's a winning combination.

The Chronicle of One Library's Fight for Intellectual Freedom...

boys and girls and sex and libraries

by Duane H. Meyers

NEAR THE END of the Oklahoma County Libraries' four-month ordeal over unlimited access to the collections, a psychiatric clinic in Oklahoma City sent a letter to a county commissioner in support of the commissioner's opposition to two books from our collections, Boys and Sex[1] and Girls and Sex.[2] The letter's convoluted language, when finally untangled by someone tenacious enough to read it several times, indicated that children exposed to "inappropriate" materials provided by an "undiscriminating" society could get sick in the head. In addition to its contribution to our understanding of some of the psychology of censorship, that letter represented nearly all of the intellectual analysis of the issues involved in our struggle. This article is a chronicle of that struggle, but first some necessary background.

The library system

In the early sixties, citizens of Oklahoma County outside of Oklahoma City began to notice that they received very little library service. Oklahoma City had a system consisting of five libraries, but most of the smaller communities had inadequate or no service.

A law entitled The Metropolitan Library Act passed the State Legislature in 1960. The language of that act was written primarily by then-State Senator Bryce Baggett, of Oklahoma County. The Act made it possible for city-county library systems to be formed in Oklahoma and Tulsa Counties.

It then became necessary for citizens of Oklahoma County to vote a tax levy—up to two mills allowed by state law—for the operation of a city-county library system. In December of 1964, the citizens voted to assess themselves a 1.9 mill, annual, recurring, ad valorem property tax to operate the libraries. The Oklahoma County Libraries became a reality in July 1965.

The Metropolitan Library Act called for the system to be governed by an independent board: the Metropolitan Library Commission. This commission includes 11 members, six appointed by the mayor of the principal city—that's Oklahoma City—and three by the Board of County Commissioners. The other two members are the Oklahoma City mayor and the chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, both of whom may vote but neither of whom may delegate a proxy or hold office on the library commission. Terms of the nine appointees are three years.

The library administration is not required to clear staff appointments or budgets with either the city or the county. The Metropolitan Library Commission hires the executive director, approves policies and budgets, and delegates to the executive director the authority to hire and fire personnel.

Independence from the city and the county has a positive side. The Metropolitan Library Commission does not have to submit the library system's annual budget to the County Commissioners or to the Oklahoma City Council for approval; but, because neither the city nor the county has responsibility for the budget, the library system is often paddled like a ping pong ball when revenue sharing and other funding requests are made. The city says, "That's a county problem." the county says, "The city has the votes, let the city pay the freight."

Without flying a flag for either unit, one can report that there is a definite schism between city hall and county court house. This gap is not often a healthy one for public services in the area.

The "community"

Oklahoma County holds about 530,000 persons. All kinds of people. Religious people, at least church-going people—some of them. Not all of them. Rich. Poor. Football maniacs. Some of them. Not all of them. High crime rate, good zoo, innovative but fiscally handicapped library system. Although there are lots of cows and chickens even within city limits, Oklahoma County is rapidly becoming a metropolitan area. That means a little culture. Some art, music, theater. There are swingers, just as there are in Berkeley. Thousands of consenting adults. People going to bars, night clubs, nude clubs, massage parlors, discotheques, and beds. Drinking, laughing, smoking pot, getting into trouble, having fun (exhibiting their animal nature, some would say).

What kind of community is it? "What kinds of communities are they?" would be a better question. Who can say? The trouble comes when somebody says he knows what kind of a community it is.

For a long time, Oklahoma County had a district attorney with a reputation for being tough on "smut." He was able to stop the nude scene in the stage

Duane H. Meyers is Associate Director for Management Services at the Oklahoma County Libraries, Oklahoma City. He is donating his payment for this article to the libraries to continue their mission to provide equal access to all the citizens of Oklahoma City and County

The article is based upon a speech to the October 1976 Censorship Workshop at the meeting of the Border Regional Library Association in El Paso, Texas musical Hair from being performed in Oklahoma City. He stopped the movie Last Tango in Paris from playing in Oklahoma City. Those with a taste for that brand of butter had to journey to Norman, 30 miles south of Oklahoma City.

In the wake of the June 1973 Supreme Court decision, Executive Director Lee B. Brawner and I held a staff meeting to remind branch and department heads that a piece of work had to be found obscene by a court jury before we could be forced to remove it. That meant no one was to be allowed to take any book from the shelf and put it out of circulation without a valid court order. If anyone—and that meant anyone—came to a library and took a book from the shelf and, without checking it out through the regular circulation process, carried it from the library, the staff member in charge at the time was to call the police and report stolen property.

The "sex, politics, religion" project

In the summer of 1974 the late Allie Beth Martin heard about an Indiana Humanities Committee project on community values and censorship. Martin talked to the executive director of the Oklahoma Humanities Committee about the possibility of Oklahoma's repeating the Indiana project, with public library systems in Oklahoma acting as grant applicants and sponors.

Her idea met with immediate, enthusiastic response. In late July of 1974 a group of us met in the Oklahoma County main library and talked with Martin and representatives from the Oklahoma Humanities Committee to develop an outline for a proposal to the Humanities Committee. The outline was quickly submitted to directors of public library systems in Oklahoma. It proposed statewide programs to bring the questions of community standards and intellectual freedom to the forefront. The aim would be to determine, if possible, community standards and the private values of Oklahomans in reference to controversial materials, primarily books, and how these values and standards could be brought to bear in making public (and library) policy. The project would be funded by a grant from the Humanities Committee and the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Most of the six or seven public library system directors agreed to be part of a state steering committee and to act as sponsors of the project, which already had a title: "Limits to Freedom? Oklahoma's Private Values and Public Policies on the Right To Read." The Humanities Committee approved a grant that was ultimately to total around $50,000.

Brawner asked me to be the library system's local project director. I accepted, eagerly, and agreed to write a discussion guide for academic humanists, moderators, and discussants,[3] and to oversee the collecting of discussion materials. The guide and brief readings were supplemented by a paperback book entitled Censorship For and Against.[4]

A local committee consisting of an academic humanist (a history Ph.D. from the University of Oklahoma), a library commissioner, several staff members, a newspaper executive and a corrections official was formed and met three times from March to August 1975. Our local project's theme was "Sex, Politics, and Religion: Citizen Values and Censorship."

Meanwhile, Lee Brawner coordinated a Banned Books exhibit, which was to tour the state as a display in public libraries. We exhibited the Banned Books at most of our agencies through the fall and winter of 1975. The exhibit was designed to show that many books many people had read or would want to read and would find no reason to suppress were banned at one time or another in various parts of the world.

To launch our local project in September 1975, we sponsored a public Town Hall debate at the Oklahoma City Civic Center. An attorney from the American Civil Liberties Union and a former assistant district attorney argued the proposition, "Resolved: Every adult should have the freedom to read and view without restrictions by the community."[5] Note the emphasis on the word "adult." Little was said about children's rights. We deliberately avoided that question because we felt that we were biting into enough trouble with our concern that the general principle of intellectual freedom be given wide and deep public consideration.

(Incidentally, we did not often use the term "intellectual freedom" in our promotion and publicity for the project because we realized it means little to the general public. Its connotation is either bland or esoteric. The word "intellectual" often draws a huge, apathetic sigh or a look denoting, "That's not for me; I'm no braintrust." "The right to read" says more and means more.)

Public response to our local project was modest. We held the planned total of 16 meetings in the discussion series, which only means that we had enough people on hand for a discussion each time. But most of the people we had hoped to reach stayed away. We were especially hoping to attract people who were opposed to free and open access, but there were only a few who showed up. (Most people, by jingo, are against censorship! Nobody tells them what they can't read!) I gained the clear impression that the large majority of the people at these meetings were, in theory, opposed to restrictions on access to materials—for adults. My hunch, however, that theories about intellectual freedom can be blown away in a flash when specific material is introduced—"dirty books," to use offensive shorthand in the interest of saving space was confirmed. Another confirmation: adults will fight, maybe, if their own rights are trampled upon, but they're either ambivalent about, or downright hostile to, ideas favoring children's rights.

Our humanities project ended in October 1975. We thought perhaps a few people had been exposed to some of the delights of intellectual freedom and that this would make any future battles not quite so hopeless. We didn't have to wait long for a test.

The ordeal begins

On the morning of Thursday, December 18, 1975, there appeared in the Oklahoma Journal an open letter to Lee B. Brawner, executive director of the Oklahoma County Libraries System. The Journal has a circulation of about 70,000 and is one of two morning dailies published in Oklahoma City. The other is the Daily Oklahoman, which has about 280,000 circulation. The letter to Brawner had also been sent to the Oklahoman, to a county commissioner, a state representative, and a state senator. The Daily Oklahoman chose not to publish the letter, which came from one Ben Travis, who described himself as "a father, a Sunday School teacher, and a public school teacher." It was low key and, on the surface, reasonable in tone.

Travis wrote, "I believe quality sex education materials should be available in the children's library. . . . However, some books might not be appropriate." He went on to characterize the book Boys and Sex and its companion volume, Girls and Sex, as irresponsible. He said Boys and Sex advocated and encouraged premarital sex. He said the book's author "assures his reader that various types of premarital and oral sex are an expected and natural part of growing up," and that the author "discusses different methods of masturbation, etc."

Travis asserted that "Most young readers believe that materials found in the children's library are wholesome and approved of by their teachers and responsible adults," and he said that the two books "and other such works should be removed from our libraries, especially our children's library, for ages six through 12 years."

That afternoon the monthly meeting of the Metropolitan Library Commission was scheduled. We did not have a quorum at the meeting and, while Brawner and the commissioners were making small talk, he mentioned the letter. The ordeal began.

One doesn't have to be a guru to predict what will be the reaction of a public board to a cold turkey revelation of a scenario involving children and sex. One of our commissioners, Pat Hunt, is a former president of the state PTA council. Hunt iterated and reiterated she was against sex outside of marriage, and she wanted to know the library's policy on book selection. Another commissioner asked plaintively if the two "bad" books were in his local branch. He intoned the question in such a way as to make clear that he assumed we wouldn't have put them there. Or (God forbid) would we?

A Journal reporter covered the nonmeeting and reported on it for the next morning's paper. In the meantime, Brawner had assured the commission that we would respond to Travis's complaint as soon as we had reviewed the books. The Daily Oklahoman sent two reporters to the Main Library to get the books and to find what the library's response would be.

We declined comment Thursday evening, Friday morning, and Friday afternoon, in spite of pressure from newspaper, radio, and television reporters, one of whom threatened to blast us on the air if we didn't give an instant answer. I advised the "no comment." I have worked on newspapers and in broadcasting and I know that whatever we would have said would have come back to haunt us 30 minutes later.

So, while Brawner's secretary fought off the media, he and one of the materials coordinators, Donna Denniston, and I worked on a reply to Ben Travis.

The gist of the letter to Travis was that the library had selected the books several years ago, that we had reviewed the library's guidelines, had read the books, and that we were declining to remove them from the shelves.

It's a long letter, but we needed to make some important points. We quoted from the author's introduction to Boys and Sex, in which Dr. Wardell B. Pomeroy described his 20 years of sex research with the Kinsey Foundation, "During those two decades I saw a cross section of the anguish, unhappiness, and disappointment people had experienced over sexual mistakes. I saw that, in spite of all the comparative freedom existing in our society, a great many of these human beings were full of misinformation, misconceptions, myths, fears, and inhibitions about sex. This was largely a consequence of the puritanical backgrounds they had come from, in which sex was regarded as shameful or unhealthy."

Pomeroy's introduction went on to suggest that fathers should discuss the book with their sons in "the kind of human warmth which I believe is really the basis of the Christian ethic."

Our letter then pointed out that librarians cannot substitute for parents and that public libraries must make a wide variety of reading material available for readers of diverse wishes, needs, and backgrounds.

The Travis letter had an underlying, unspoken premise; namely, there is really only one type of parent—the type who wants his child taught sex education, if at all, in a fundamentally Christian context—and that there are certain forms of sexual behavior no parent wants his child to read about. We met that premise head-on:

"You will find . . . in this community, persons who want their children to read about matters of sex—to learn the physical, emotional, moral, legal, and sociological aspects of the subject, including such subtopics as masturbation, oral sex, and premarital sex. Should the library forbid these parents access to that material for their children? To do so would violate principles of intellectual freedom and would arbitrarily impose barriers to those who pay their taxes and support their library and have a right to use it."

Then came the headlines: "Censorship Ruled Out in City Book Furor."

". . . the job description of everyone who works in a library should include . . . the defense of intellectual freedom as one of the everyday duties to be done"

"Libraries Won't Ban Books on Sex." "Sex Books Stay." The only disappointment in the news coverage was that the library's response to the Travis complaint was not printed in toto, as the Travis letter had been. News stories couldn't make our rationale as clear as the letter in its entirety could have.

Brawner received a latter, dated December 24, from a citizen in Edmond, Oklahoma. The first paragraph read: "Let me wish a Merry Christmas, sir, to you and those about you who were responsible for the recent much-publicized decision to reject an effort to purge your shelves of a juvenile sex book. Your response to this attempted incursion was, in my opinion, both brilliant and heroic."

In order to give more credibility to our statement about the diverse communities within our community, I felt that a letter to the editor from a private citizen would be in order: a letter taking issue with the Travis letter. One does not have time to sit back and wait for a sterling citizen to do that, so I called a good friend who readily agreed to write such a letter. It appeared December 26 in the Oklahoma Journal under the heading "Autocratic." I'll quote parts of two salient paragraphs:

> I have not read the books in question because I am neither a boy nor a girl, but it strikes me from reading Mr. Travis' objections that he is more worried about plain talk on sex than he should be, his protestations to the contrary notwithstanding. Does he think sex is dirty? Why? There are plenty of people roaming the streets, young and old, who could have benefited from some plain talk and sensible advice about human sexuality.
>
> . . . don't automatically and autocratically assume you have the only truth there is around and that you can insist on suppression of other views. Read it or don't read it. But don't tell me and my children what we cannot read.

I think the letter had an effect. It shocked some people to realize there were neighbors (at least one) who don't blink at the thought that they might be called "permissive" or "liberal."

Policy is not enough

During the last week in December, Brawner assembled all of the library's policies on materials selection and organizational structure, summarized them in a cover memo and sent them to the Metropolitan Library Commission.[5] The summary called attention to the library commission's traditional, and heretofore unchallenged, recognition that "Ultimate responsibility for book selection, as for all library activities, rests with the Director, who operates within the framework of policies determined by the Library Commission."

The document explained that, when a citizen complains about library material, the complaint is reviewed and answered by the director and designated staff members. It cautioned: ". . . the question of how individual Commission members handle complaints voiced or written to them by another citizen or group of citizens should be given serious thought. The evaluation process . . . has worked well through the years. . . . The individual Commission member may find it useful to suggest the procedure be followed rather than to attempt to supply a response in what may be a highly charged atmosphere."

Included in the material was the complete text of the system's "Policies for Selection of Materials" drafted in 1966. Section I.D.3 on "Selection for Children" carries this significant sentence: "Books on human physical development and sex are carefully selected as to scientific accuracy and simplicity and dignity of presentation."

A book selection policy, no matter how well thought out, cannot fight your battles for you. Policies are general and cannot cover specific titles. No matter how hard a library tries to keep a controversy in the fragile realm of principle and policy, its adversaries keep punching away on the Plain of Specificity.

Our situation was further complicated by the fact that the library had decided two years before to integrate nonfiction collections in most of its agencies for patrons above the fourth grade level, to get more mileage from our nonfiction collections. A child on a reading level higher than his age group could find what he wanted in a general, nonfiction area; an adult with a lower reading level than his peers could find what he wanted in a general, nonfiction area without suffering the embarrassment of searching through a "children's section." So the reasoning had gone.

Lee Brawner . . .

Optimal for children

In the first week of the nation's bicentennial year, we began to see that we might have to devise some honorable, alternative policy to present to the library commission in case the board began to crack under heavy political shoving. Our search finally centered around one point in our response to the Travis letter. This point was that, in guiding the reading of children, "the ultimate responsibility rests with parents." We had written, "If parents wish to restrict their children's reading, that is their prerogative and the library will respect it. But the key word in the preceding sentence is 'their.' 'Their' children—not somebody else's children."

It occurred to me that the library should try to make that declared respect for parental prerogative a workable reality; if nothing else, our attempt would show good faith. Why not try to set up an optional card system giving those parents who want to control their children's reading a chance to make their wishes known in a routine way by requesting a special, limited access library card for their kids?

We began to survey certain key staff members to determine what they thought of the idea. At first, most of them jumped at it. Two or three had technical objections. For example, how could one card list all titles that could be withheld from the restricted card holder? It became obvious that more thought would have to be given to the proposal and that we would probably have to think in Dewey classifications. Overall, the response was favorable, but I felt a little less comfortable about that because ideas often have something wrong with them.

We presented the concept to Barbara Eskridge, chairman of the Metropolitan Library Commission. She agreed that the matter ought to be examined further and agreed to issue, at the next board meeting, a statement in which the library administration and staff would be instructed to explore the optional card concept further and to report back no later than the March meeting. March was a long time away as we prepared ourselves for the January meeting, which was held on the 15th at the Belle Isle Branch Library.

The Oklahoma Journal's January 16 report on the meeting, headlined, "Sex Book Costs Support? Adair Blasts Library," read:

> Oklahoma County Commissioner Ralph Adair clashed sharply Thursday with the Oklahoma County Library staff for its policy not to remove sex education books from youth reading areas.
>
> Adair bluntly told Executive Director Lee Brawner that Brawner's recent decision to keep one such book on the shelves has killed any chance for increased financial support for the library system.
>
> Adair said all three county commissioners would refuse to call an election to increase the library support tax by one-tenth mill, an action strongly supported by Brawner and the Metropolitan Library Commission.
>
> County voters would reject the tax increase because of the library system's "permissive" policies, Adair said.
>
> "The commissioners got more flak and questions over this than in the history of the libraries," Adair said.
>
> Adair said he favors putting the books on the same basis as "R" or "X" rated movies by requiring parents to check out the books for their children.
>
> Adair's criticisms were supported in part by library commissioner Mrs. Pat Hunt, but other commissioners and Brawner refused to apologize for the December decision to let the two books remain.
>
> Mrs. Hunt said she feels a committee independent of the library staff should investigate any complaints on books and decide whether they should remain.
>
> She said the library commission shouldn't expect Brawner and his employes to bear the responsibility for making the controversial decisions.
>
> Mrs. Hunt said she wasn't advocating censorship, only restricting the access of youths to certain books.
>
> Adair said he felt children are worse off because of permissive attitudes toward sex, and added, "I don't think it's helping one dadburn bit that the courts and legal system are being permissive about this."

At the January meeting our library commission chairman read the statement instructing the staff to explore an optional card concept. She read it just before County Commissioner Adair began his attack, and the optional card idea seemed to float away on the wind. But it was an official authorization for the library administration to proceed. We went to the staff.

The materials coordinators wondered aloud why we couldn't just stick with our unlimited access policy. The system's planner-programmer pointed out the extra costs of producing two kinds of student cards. He also said he had doubts that we could satisfy parents by simply making the restricted card work against the classification (612) in which most of the so-called sex education books appear. That led others to suggest that we consider other categories for restriction: books on marriage and the family, crimes of passion and, what proved later to be a breaking point, all adult fiction.

My discomfort escalated as hard questions flew by, but I agreed to try to help draft letters to parents outlining the choices available to them: whether to sign an unlimited access card or accompany their child to the library and request a restricted card. The operative age would be 15½. (Above that age, patrons get adult cards not requiring the signature of a parent or guardian.)

The director under fire

Commissioner Adair sent letters to ministers in the county, to the governor of Oklahoma, the mayor, and City Council of Oklahoma City, state legislators, and others, asking them to join him in what he called an all-out fight against the two books.

We found out about the letters in the February 5, 1976 Oklahoma Journal under the headline: "Library Director Target—Adair Hits Sex Books." Adair's mass mailing consisted of what the Journal characterized as "explicit passages from the two books" and "strong comments" by the commissioner, who was quoted as saying, "If Brawner doesn't either get rid of those books, or at least put them where they can only be checked out with parental consent, we'd better start looking for another library director."

The Journal cited a "courthouse observer," who allegedly said, "Ralph (Adair) needs all the help he can get if he is after Brawner. The city has six votes on the library board and the county only has three."

With the mailing to area churches, religious affiliations crashed into the picture. There were some negative remarks about Brawner's church and Brawner's minister quoted in the February 5 article.

Most ministers across the county who chose to speak up about the library's policy seemed to be on the side of Commissioner Adair, who claimed he had more than 200 ministers supporting his position. From the other side came a response that at least as many supported the library. (Vote counting in volatile situations is not very scientific.)

Brawner decided to try to defuse the situation by restricting the two books temporarily, on that cold and gloomy fifth of February, about two hours after we had read and digested the Journal article. We agreed to disagree about his decision and there was no animosity between us. I said I could not effectively defend the action publicly so would avoid discussing it with the media. He said he understood my reluctance. I offered to draft a public statement announcing his decision because he was too busy taking calls from citizens and media. Brawner accepted my offer.

The statement repeated the one made by the library commission chairman in which she had asked the library staff to explore the optional card idea further and to report to the commission's March meeting. Following that it read:

> We had hoped to have more time to devise workable procedures but, in the light of the deepening controversy over two books in particular (Boys and Sex and Girls and Sex), we are implementing the restricted access procedures today. Only those who have adult borrower's cards may check out the aforementioned books until the library has prepared the instructions on how parents and guardians may exercise their option regarding their children's access to certain materials. We intend to have those instructions printed and sent to parents and guardians whose children have applied for library cards by mid-March.
>
> Until then, those parents and guardians who wish to allow their children unlimited access to library materials are urged to accompany their children to the library. When our new circulation system's option plan is implemented in mid-March or before, those parents and guardians will not have to take that extra step.
>
> It should be emphasized that this procedure in no way implies that the library is bowing to demands for censorship. The books will be available in the library. They will not be removed. The First and Fourteenth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution will be observed.

In spite of the brave words about the First and Fourteenth Amendments, press reaction to our statement was about what we had forecast. The Daily Oklahoman, on February 6, for example, carried an article which referred to our statement as "Relenting to pressure from Oklahoma County Commissioner Ralph Adair . . ."

The restrictive policy

Brawner met with the Administrative and Personnel Committee of the library commission and presented drafts of the optional card access policy. The committee rejected the library's proposal for a narrow option with the onus on parents who wanted restrictions and agreed, instead, to recommend a more restrictive policy which would extend the prohibited books to such categories as all adult fiction and all nonfiction dealing with sexual information, crimes of passion, and human reproduction. The committee's recommended policy also required parents who wished their children to have unlimited access to take the positive step of going to the library and getting an unrestricted card for their children.

The committee presented its recommendation at the February 19 meeting of the Metropolitan Library Commission, which, after a long and hot discussion among members and with salvos from the audience, adopted the committee's recommended policy.

In the February 19 meeting, a woman speaking from the audience put it bluntly: "I am going to attack the library. If you can find money for garbage, why can't you find money for good books?"

At the same meeting, the executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union of Oklahoma said, "Precensorship of any form is most dangerous. That is why we (address it) in Policy Number One of our ACLU Policy Guide. If this board takes this policy, the ACLU will take legal action."

County Commission Chairman Frank Lynch, at the same meeting, said of the two books involved, "I'm in favor of censoring 'em, myself. I don't think (they're) fit for grown people to read." He said he wouldn't want his wife to read the books.

The restrictive policy recommended by the committee was adopted by the commission. Lee Brawner had no choice but to set it in motion by ordering all books involved to be restricted.

The next day, headlines told the story: "Sex Book Checkouts Curbed by Library." "Panel Approves Checkout Limits for Adult Books."

About that same time, the Oklahoma Journal conducted a poll. It asked readers to telephone a certain number if they agreed with the unrestricted access policy and another number if they disagreed. The question, in headline shorthand, was "Should Sex Books Stay?" We won that one. It was 911 for the books, 800 against.

Then, on Sunday, February 22, the Journal carried another story that was to be a turning point in the controversy. A Journal reporter took the newly adopted policy and went to the library. The resulting article began:

> What does Mark Twain's Life on the Mississippi have in common with a novel based on Biblical events, The Robe by Lloyd C. Douglas?
>
> Or, for that matter, what does Silas Marner by George Eliot have in common with The Caine Mutiny by Herman Wouk?
>
> All four—and about half the books on shelves—are among volumes which children may no longer check out of the Oklahoma County Libraries without their parents' permission.
>
> Even The Invisible Man, a novel by black Oklahoma City native Ralph Ellison, isn't free of the restrictions—and Ellison has the northeast Oklahoma City branch library named in his honor. . . . The nonfiction books are marked with a reddish-orange line to indicate that juveniles are not to check the books out—the library's "scarlet letter." As it so happens, The Scarlet Letter, by Nathaniel Hawthorne is also off limits to youths . . . Others on the list? The Good Earth . . . The Great Gatsby . . . How Green Was My Valley . . . Rebecca . . . Cimarron . . .

. . . and books in the headlines

The newspaper report concluded, "In most cases where a book is listed as suitable for both the juvenile and adult sections, the libraries have put the book in only the adult section. So in reality, books like David Copperfield and Oliver Twist . . . or Moby Dick . . . can't be found in the juvenile, nonrestricted sections of most library branches. The same is true about the bestseller Fahrenheit 451 . . . a book dealing with book burning" said the report.

Protest from "the other side"

The resulting furor in this instance was at least equal to the storm that arose over the library's refusal in December to remove the two sex books—only this time the protest came from the other side. This led the mayor of Oklahoma City to ask for an emergency meeting of the library commission. On Monday morning an announcement was made that a special meeting of the commission would take place that afternoon in the Main Library to reconsider the policy adopted February 19.

The Monday meeting brought out about two dozen angry citizens who resented the restrictive book policy. Many of the commissioners were angry, too. One complained, "That (Journal) article made us seem like a bunch of dumb bunnies." Another said, "Somebody's trying to make the board look silly."

An attorney from the ACLU told the library commission, "Limited access is a violation of your own policies. You adopted the Library Bill of Rights in 1969 and the Freedom To Read Statement in 1973. You don't even have to go as high as the U.S. Constitution. You don't seem to understand the broad impact of what you've done. You've made a terrible mistake. I hope you reconsider."

Commissioner Hunt said, "We're concerned about what the community has to say. The library doesn't run the community; the community runs the library. Let's run a survey to find what parents think." She later proposed that children should only be allowed to read fiction that appears on school reading lists. This proposal was not accepted. She then suggested that the library administration survey public libraries in the 50 states to find out how many had an optional card system, which Brawner agreed to do.

Another commissioner proposed that the board simply restrict the two books, Boys and Sex and Girls and Sex, and no others. County Commissioner Lynch agreed and said, "I only have an objection to (those) two books. Let's just confine it to those two books . . . I'm not objecting to what grown people can read."

A voice from the audience retorted: "At face value, that seems like a pretty good idea. But what about next year—what if I should object to a book? Suppose I'm an atheist and I want all books on religion removed. What will be your guidelines then to react to my concern?" After a long and confusing discussion, the Commission voted to instruct the director to delay implementation of the policy adopted February 19.

The survey of libraries

The survey, which was drafted by our public information officer, Ann Adams, and Lee Brawner, was sent to 228 public libraries serving populations of 100,000 or more. By April 5, the library had received 186 responses.

Question: "Does your library issue more than one type of children's (or student) card?" Replies: 27 Yes; 146 No.

Question: "Is access restricted to certain materials in your library?" Replies: 64 (37 percent) Yes; 108 (63 percent) No.

Those restricting access most often listed "adult books" under the kind of material withheld from persons under a certain age, and the age most often listed for restriction was under 14.

The survey solved nothing for either side of our controversy. It did, however, show a questionable stance on the part of some libraries across the country. In answer to a question about what kinds of materials are restricted, one big library in Pennsylvania listed "six titles, including Exorcist and Rebel without a Cause."

The survey made one realize that possibly a third or more of our nation's libraries have bowed, in one way or another, to demands for restriction. Or, horrible thought, maybe they do their own restricting! Only five of those libraries admitting they had a restrictive policy said the policy was the result of community pressure.

More than a few of those who restrict are capable of discrimination in their restriction. They allow exceptions to their rules. Many checked "librarian permits" in answer to a question of who allows the exceptions to their restrictive policy. (One wonders what the job title might be for the librarian who "permits." Would it be "Exceptional Librarian"? Would it be "Permissive Librarian"?)

The bombardment from those who had won the battle of February 19, only to suffer a setback four days later, continued, louder and fiercer. Letters, calls, headlines, editorials on radio and television and in the newspapers, pounded out a relentless drumbeat. Public opinion seemed to be evenly divided. Brawner decided legal clarification was required.

The legal questions

The library commission's policy at the time allowed the administration to contract for legal advice as needed. This was the time for it. The director asked Bryce Baggett, who is now in private practice, to research the problems we faced. Baggett requested specific questions that the library wanted him to research and try to answer. I drafted three, the second with two subquestions:

"Under the state or federal constitutions, does the Metropolitan Library Commission of Oklahoma County have the authority to deny the access of anyone to public library material of any kind, not otherwise prohibited by Oklahoma or federal law, strictly on the basis of age? If so, what age?"

Any institution caught in a censorship dilemma should lock tight onto the law. The burden of proof in debating a piece of material that some think objectionable is on those who think it objectionable. When the book banners call a work obscene, they must prove it is obscene in a court of law. That much, at least, we can thank the U.S. Supreme Court for.

The other questions asked if a minor had any recourse if denied access to otherwise accepted public library material, and what were the penalties, if any, which the library commission, administration and staff might have to pay if they forbid access and are subsequently found in violation of a person's legal rights.

While Bryce Baggett was researching the law, the library tried to "hunker down," as LBJ put it. The staff was growing increasingly frustrated and wanted to get into the fray in some manner. Our PIO, Ann Adams, told me she thought the staff would like to sign a petition expressing its feelings. I wrote one:

> We, the undersigned staff members of the Oklahoma County Libraries System, respectfully petition the Metropolitan Library Commission as follows:
>
> Please do not change your long-standing policy allowing free and open use of the public libraries. This policy, over the years, has been in the best interest of the public.
>
> We believe a person, old or young, will read only what will interest or be understood by that person at any given point in his or her life.
>
> We believe parents who feel their child may be harmed by anything found in the public library have a responsibility to accompany their child to the library or to persuade their child to relinquish material once it is brought home.
>
> We believe professional librarians have the necessary training and experience to select material suitable for all ages and an obligation to make that material available to the public freely and openly.
>
> We respectfully beseech the Metropolitan Library Commission to continue to let us do our work, which is to bring people and books together, without fear and with confidence in your support.

Ninety-five staff members signed the petition. Only two who were given the chance declined to sign: one on religious grounds and the other because, he said, the petition was "poorly written, ill-advised and premature."

We did not ask Brawner to sign it. He had troubles enough. We told him what we were up to. We wanted the public and the library commission to know that the principles involved were not just the director's alone. The petition made hardly a ripple, but I heard that a few library commissioners were irked by it. There was only one media reference to the petition, a newspaper story headlined, "Library Workers Hit Curbs."

The petition gave the staff (at least 95 out of 97) some feeling of camaraderie, a feeling that we were all in this together. And that made it worthwhile.

At the March 18 meeting of the library commission, Bryce Baggett formally presented his brief on the legal questions. Baggett said the commission can deny access of anyone under 18 to library materials which the commission deems unsuitable for children. However, the declared Legislative purpose in creating a Metropolitan Library Commission was "to foster and promote the establishment, maintenance, and operation of a city-county library systems in order to give all of the citizens of the Counties affected hereby equal access to comprehensive library collections." The board, Baggett said, has a limited mission. It is not to protect the safety and morals of the community—only to provide library services.

This meant, according to Baggett, that juveniles must also "be given equal access to all materials in comprehensive library collections unless and until the Commission adopts legally defensible rules which discriminate against some citizens (juveniles) by denying them access to certain materials while allowing other citizens (adults) access to those same materials."

Minors under 18 would have no recourse at law if denied access under legally defensible rules; the commission and the staff would not be liable.

Baggett reminded the commission that the two books under attack had not been declared obscene and that the board was not dealing with unlawful materials.

He also argued that the First and Fourteenth Amendments did not apply in this case because our issue involved access to materials available elsewhere rather than censorship or prior restraint.

Having said and written that, however, the attorney raised what he called "many important questions."

These included what criteria the commission would use in determining whether a particular book is suitable or unsuitable for children; whether the commission itself would select books or delegate that job to the director and the staff; how it could give any assurance to parents that their children would not be exposed to unsuitable materials when there was always the possibility that a child, "through mistake, inadvertence or negligence is allowed such access contrary to the parent's expectation."

He asked the commission to consider whether it was practical for the board "to physically segregate the premises of each library and isolate an area in which unsuitable materials will be kept and to which area children will not be admitted."

The attorney opined that he could not write, nor could anyone write, an understandable, airtight selection policy for the staff to follow.

The implications were clear: legally, yes, the board may restrict. It would be very difficult, but it's legally possible. Practically, though, how is the board going to do it without an astronomical amount of effort?

The turning point

With the February 22 Journal article about all the restricted titles still fresh in their minds, and now with the solid opinion of the principal author of the Metropolitan Library Act showing them the enormous complexity of their problem, some library commissioners must have begun to reexamine their earlier stand.

The library commission chairman appointed a committee, consisting of Commissioners John Gumm, Pat Hunt, and Manila James, to study all the information presented to that time and to report to the commission with a recommendation at the April meeting.

Commissioner Harold Stansberry suggested that the newly-appointed committee consider a proposal presented by a group of citizens. The idea was to form a committee of parents selected by local PTA's and other members appointed by the library commission to review the placement and control of books for those under age 17. The proposal called for unanimous agreement by the ad hoc committee members on each book selected for the under-17 reader.

During the following month, the news media continued to carry reports of County Commissioner Adair's public statements on the controversy. He repeated his earlier threat to try to have Brawner fired. On April 15 he announced in the newspapers that he would seek state legislation to cut Oklahoma City's representation on the Metropolitan Library Commission. He also threatened to call an election to abolish the library system if the board was not restructured.

Someone circulated a survey among local PTA's which gave excerpts from the two books and asked members to vote on whether or not they wanted the books in the library. Results showed many strong objections to the books by PTA members who answered the survey.

In early April Brawner spoke before the Oklahoma City PTA Council and explained the differences between selecting books for public libraries and school libraries. It was a cogent talk and Brawner said he thought it had been well-received.

The policy rescinded

The study committee, chaired by John Gumm, made its recommendation: the library commission should rescind its recently-adopted restrictive policy and return to the previous, open access policy. The committee's vote was 2-1, with Gumm and James on one side and Hunt on the other.

When the library commission finally balloted at the April 15 meeting, Gumm, James, Theodosia Crawford, Mildred Murray and Gene Hemry—all Oklahoma City appointees—and Dr. C. Harold Ripper, a county appointee—voted for the study committee's recommendation. County Commissioner Adair and county appointees Hunt and Stansberry voted against.

The library commission chairman, Mrs. Eskridge (a city appointee), is not required to cast a vote except to break a tie; she chose not to announce her vote. The 11th member of the library commission, Oklahoma City Mayor Patience Latting, failed to attend.

The vote to return to the unrestricted policy was 6-3; however, the "no" vote of County Commissioner Adair could not be legally counted. The Oklahoma attorney general had ruled that only the chairman of the County Commission (at the time, Frank Lynch) could cast a vote at library commission meetings and could not delegate that authority. Chairman Lynch did not attend, so the vote, officially, was 6-2.

There was only one hitch in the official status of the books in the April 15 decision. The commission's resolution included language requiring Boys and Sex and Girls and Sex to be classified as "adult" but they were free to be checked out by any patron, adult or child.

It had been a long journey from December 18, 1975, to April 15, 1976. Everyone was weary. There was no high hilarity on our part. I suppose we all realized that the struggle was just part of our job; in fact, I think the job description of everyone who works in a library should include simple language listing the defense of intellectual freedom as one of the everyday duties to be done. When you stop to think of it, that's a good part of what professionalism is all about.

References

1. Pomeroy, Wardell B., Boys and Sex, Delacorte, 1968.
2. _____. Girls and Sex, Delacorte, 1969.
3. Meyers, Duane, "Discussion Guide for Humanists, Moderators and Participants," Oklahoma City, Oklahoma Humanities Committee, 1975.
4. Alpert, Hollis, et al., Censorship For and Against, introd. by Harold Hart, Hart Publishing Co., 1971.
5. Brawner, Lee, ed., "Executive Director's Responsibility for Library Collection Development," Oklahoma City, Oklahoma County Libraries System, 1975. (In June 1976, information in this folder was edited by the system's Public Information Officer, Ann Adams, and printed in a booklet entitled "Policies Guiding Library Service and Selection of Library Materials," in sufficient quantity for distribution to interested citizens.)

PROFESSIONAL READING

Archivist/librarian cooperation

CLARK, Robert L. Jr., ed. Archive-Library Relations.

Bowker, 1976. 218p. index. bibliog. ISBN 0-8352-0770-6. LC 76-18806. $15.95.

After years of devisive activities in spite of the reasonings of Schellenberg and others, the measures of compatability that are possible between archival and library theory and between library techniques, computer technology, and archival science are demonstrated in this book; also, implications are distilled here for the thoughtful manuscripts librarian. The first section is a general description of the historical and philosophical differences between—and hierarchies of—archives and libraries, and between the practitioners in each field, by the editor who is director of the Oklahoma Department of Libraries; the second section, by Frank G. Burke of the National Historical Records and Publications Commission (and formerly Assistant to the Archivist of the U.S.), evaluates, with an even hand, the differences between materials and methodologies in archival and library practice. Unfortunately, his descriptions presume an already greater understanding of the archival aspects of these distinctions than most librarians I know ever seem to have. "Matters of Access and Confidentiality" are differently and not so well understood or the concern of most librarians, but the subject is covered in the third section, along with more familiar parallels of Legislation, Copyright and Literary Property Rights, and Social Responsibility, which are weighed carefully and described in broadly clarifying terms by Miriam J. Crawford, an experienced archivist and librarian at Temple University.

Section Four includes Burke on Public Relations and Fund Raising, as well as on Collection Bidding and Acquisition Policies; Clark on Standardization and Technology, and Library Management of Archives; and Frazer G. Poole (LC's Preservation Officer) on Preservation. It offers the largest group of similarities, describing more of the general principles affecting both archives and libraries than differences between them. There is so much common sense here that the lack of it among too many practitioners in both fields could be corrected with a single reading. Actually, there is not much here that is really new except for the growing emphasis on preservation technologies. Much of the future intellectual and practical growth in archival science and librarianship will depend upon understanding the implications of Section Five, Professional Communication, by Robert L. Brubaker of the Chicago Historical Society; it briefly covers "The Need for Communication," "Historians and the Information Professions," and the national, regional, and state associations within whose jurisdictions change is effected. An excellently annotated bibliography by Marietta Malzer, Research Archivist of the Oklahoma Department of Archives, establishes 38 articles as pertinent classics on which to build a reading list; and there is a good index.

Here is a practical, readable directive for archivist/librarian cooperation. There is no longer reason or place for further mutual denigration; there is, however, plenty of need and opportunity for joint assistance and development of ethics, networking, technological advances, legislative programs, and other advances by both groups of professionals.—LEE ASH, LIBRARY CONSULTANT, BETHANY, CONN.

SALALM Briefs

NINETEENTH SEMINAR on the Acquisition of Latin American Library Materials. Austin, Texas, April 23-26, 1974. Final Report and Working Papers. 3 vols. (Vol. 3 contains Papers of the Postconference: the First Symposium on Spanish Language Materials for Children and Young Adults.) ed. by Pauline P. Collins.

SALALM Secretariat. 1976. Vol. 1, 444p.; Vol. 2, 451p.; Vol. 3, 186p. pap. The set, $20.

BASIC List of Latin American Materials in Spanish, Portuguese, and French. ed. by Hensley C. Woodbridge & Dan Newberry.

SALALM Secretariat. (Bibliography No. 2). 1975. 205p. pap. free to institutional members; others, $5.

THE Paraguayan Bibliography, Vol. II. comp. by Carlos F. S. Fernández-Caballero.

SALALM Secretariat. (Bibliography No. 3). 1975. 221p. pap. free to institutional members; others, $5.

All publications available from the SALALM Secretariat, Benson Latin American Collection, University of Texas at Austin.

History revised

JOHNSON, Elmer D. & Michael H. Harris. History of Libraries in the Western World. Third Edition, completely revised.

Scarecrow. 1976. 354p. index. ISBN 0-8108-0949-4. LC 76-25422. $10.

This edition, the first under joint authorship with Michael Harris, has been completely revised according to the title-page. The adverb may be the publisher's; the preface claims extensive reorganization and revision of the latter half of the book only. Revisions of the chapters on ancient and medieval libraries are indeed minor ones: deletion of a paragraph here and there, division of overly-long paragraphs, and addition of transitional sentences. The lists of readings have been revised throughout; many books and articles that students are unlikely to read have been omitted and a good selection of recent works has been added. Twenty-four chapters have been reorganized into 13 and the division into ancient, medieval, and modern periods is made more clear by section headings.

The account of libraries since 1500, which takes up two-thirds of the text, has been revised a good deal more. Thirteen of these chapters are combined into seven; there are extensive deletions, new sections have been added, and others, rewritten. Information on European libraries since 1500 is now largely limited to England, East and West Germany, France, and Russia. An exception is the account of special and school libraries in Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands, and the Scandinavian countries, which have been rather awkwardly combined. Two chapters on American libraries have been rewritten to reflect Harris' point of view more than Johnson's. Latin American libraries are still sparsely treated.

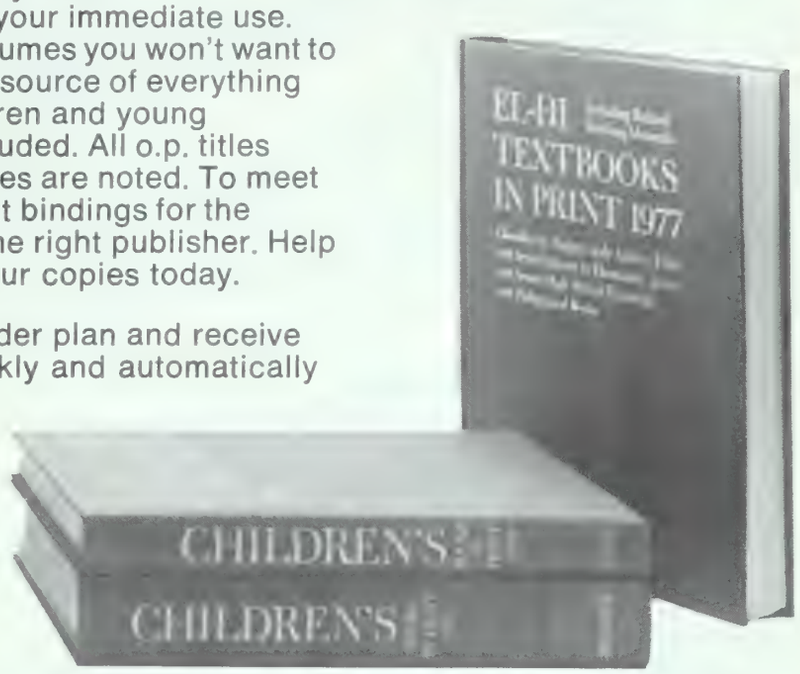
Six paragraphs on the social, economic, and political conditions that foster library growth have been inserted in the first chapter; this attempt to show the relation of libraries to the historical development of countries should be developed further.

Despite these objections, this edition is a highly useful one; the text has been more tightly set and the organization of information is easier to follow. There will be a fourth edition, no doubt, and Harris has his work cut out for him.—JOE W. KRAUS, ILLINOIS STATE UNIVERSITY LIBRARY, NORMAL

Teacher's Pets

You bet. And the brand-new, completely revised and expanded 1976 editions are ready for your immediate use. Authoritative reader assistance — 3 volumes you won't want to be without. Your most comprehensive source of everything available in all subject areas for children and young adults. Of course all new titles are included. All o.p. titles are deleted and price and other changes are noted. To meet your needs . . . the right books, the right bindings for the right age group, the right price from the right publisher. Help the child, help yourself by ordering your copies today.

Better yet, sign up for our standing order plan and receive all new and subsequent editions quickly and automatically without any more paperwork.



Children's Books in Print 1976

8th Edition

The source for author, title, publisher, year of publication, and price of virtually every available book from kindergarten through grade 12. The following information where supplied by the publisher is also included: grade level, binding, edition, number of volumes, LC number, ISBN, and illustrator.

39,500 hardcover and paperback titles arranged alphabetically by author, by title, and by illustrator. 5,000 new titles added this year, thousands of o.p. titles dropped and price changes noted. A directory of some 700 publishers represented is furnished.

And a separate section lists recommendations from Best Books of 1975 (compiled by the editors of SLJ Book Review), and from Notable Books: Children's Lists (compiled by the ALA). A list of titles which have gone out of print since the last edition is also included.

ISBN 0-8352-0915-6. ISSN 0069-3480. LC 70-101705. 1976. Published annually in December. 8½"x11". c. 790 pp. $25.

Subject Guide to Children's Books in Print 1976

7th Edition

The only bibliography that classifies juvenile fiction and nonfiction. 39,500 titles of Children's Books in Print arranged under 8,500 subject headings includes full bibliographic data in each entry. School Library Journal reviews and Library of Congress cataloging are among the authoritative sources used to classify these titles under Sears Subject Headings. A publisher's index, with addresses, is included.

A separate section lists recommendations from Best Books of 1975 (compiled by the editors of SLJ Book Review), and from Notable Books: Children's List (compiled by the ALA).

ISBN 0-8352-0916-4. ISSN 0000-0167. LC 70-101705. 1976. Published annually in December. 8½"x11". c. 490 pp. $25.

El-Hi Textbooks in Print 1977

8th Edition

For more than 100 years this unique, one-source bibliography of virtually all available texts and related teaching materials has been indispensable to making sound text selection decisions. This edition lists more than 29,000 texts, dictionaries, encyclopedias, maps, atlases, professional books, teaching aids, and auxiliary AV materials at the elementary, secondary, and adult education levels. All items are indexed by subject, by title, by author, and, if applicable, by series.

ISBN 0-8352-0955-5. ISSN 0070-9565. LC 70-105104. 1977. Published annually in Spring. 8½"x11". c. 600 pp. $27.50 tent.

Order from: R.R. Bowker Order Dept., P.O. Box 1807, Ann Arbor, Mich. 48106

Outside Western Hemisphere — Bowker, Erasmus House, Epping, Essex, England.

All orders plus shipping and handling. Sales tax added where applicable.
Price is subject to change and slightly higher outside the U.S. and its territories.

BOWKER
NEW YORK & LONDON

Where do booksellers look for the last word in Scientific, Technical, Business and Professional Books?

In Publishers Weekly.

Sci-Tech, Business and Professional books are among the fastest growing area of publishing, with a 300% sales volume increase in the last decade—an amount that is predicted to double in the next ten years.*

Because of this tremendous growth, PUBLISHERS WEEKLY is expanding its coverage of these important books. This year there will be two issues devoted to Scientific, Technical, Business and Professional books. One is in the Spring, and the other in the Fall.

They will be read and re-read by virtually everyone in the bookseller community and both issues are unique advertising opportunities you won't want to miss.

Here are the dates to remember.

March 21 Spring Sci/Tech issue
March 4 for reservations and pub-set copy
March 11 for negatives or camera-ready art

October 17 Fall Sci/Tech issue
September 30 for reservations and pub-set copy
October 7 for negatives or camera-ready art

*1965 sales $175.5 million
1975 sales (est.) $580.3 million
1985 sales (forecast) $1.137 billion

Publishers Weekly
The magazine of the book world, the world over.

R.R. Bowker Company
1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10036

Please send all insertion orders and correspondence to Publishers Weekly, P.O. Box 641, Times Square Station, New York, N.Y. 10036
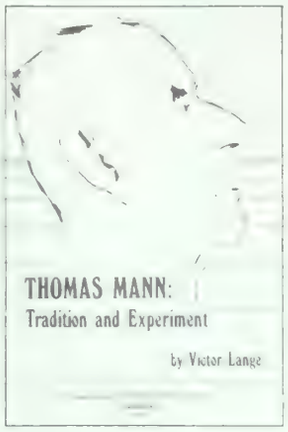
Please send mechanicals and artwork to: 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10036

CHECKLIST



Educational service study

Presenting the history of educational service centers in the United States is undertaken for the first time in a Connecticut State Department of Education publication. Simple cooperatives created for a single purpose such as provision of vocational-technical or special education are described, as are sophisticated organizations offering everything from in-service education for teachers to mass purchasing and data processing. The author, Harold S. Davis, has organized the study under legislative categories: permissive (those states with specific legislation encouraging the development of centers on a voluntary basis); mandatory (states with legislation mandating the formation of centers and which also make membership mandatory); mandatory/voluntary (states mandating the formation of centers, with membership voluntary); and no legislation. Copies of the 103-page booklet cost $3 each. Orders must be prepaid with a check made payable to ACES-ESC Study and directed to: Dr. Frank R. Yulo, Study Coordinator, Administration & Supervision Dept., Southern Connecticut State College, 501 Crescent St., New Haven, Conn. 06515.

Lone Star documents

"Peace with Honor" is the resounding euphemism of our decade. A precursory phrase—that of Lieutenant Colonel William Barret Travis— was more brutal: "Victory or Death." In order that we "remember the Alamo," the Texas State Library has issued facsimiles of Travis's letter, in which this phrase appeared, with four other documents significant to the state's history. They are the Texas Declaration of Independence, The Annexation Offer Accepted, A Proclamation Convening the First Texas Legislature, and the Ordinance of Secession. A booklet (34p., illus.) which accompanies the facsimiles describes the setting in which the documents were drafted. The cost of the packet is $1 plus 50¢ for postage from the Archives Div., Texas State Library, Box 12927—Capitol Sta., Austin, Tex. 78711.

Lecture on Mann

Thomas Mann: Tradition and Experiment, by Victor Lange, is an English translation of the principal lecture given in Lubeck, Germany on the occasion of the official celebration of the Mann Centennial. Lange analyzes the extent to which Mann affected and was affected by tradition and experiment in his literature. The 20-page chapbook is the latest in a continuing series published by the University of California, Davis, Library. Earlier issues include Brom Weber's Our Multi-Ethnic Origins and American Literary Studies, D. L. Olmsted's Heresy in Linguistics, and Everett Carter's Wine and Poetry. The series is available on an exchange basis to other libraries. Write to Gifts and Exchange Section, Univ. of California, Davis, Library, Davis, Calif. 95616.

Finding aids handbook

Current practices in North American archival and manuscript repositories in the preparation of finding aids are reported in Inventories and Registers: a Handbook of Techniques and Examples. The need for establishing professional standards in the area was recognized by the Society of American Archivists' Committee on Automation when that committee was negotiating with ten archival institutions in a project to develop the Spindex II computer program for archives description and control. A survey of over 400 archives and manuscript institutions throughout the country showed wide variations in manuscript registers and records inventories, but the survey indicated also that these variations occurred in two main areas: the intended use of the several parts or sections, and the terminology used in the finding aids. The Committee on Finding Aids drafted this report in the hope that it will ultimately serve as the foundation upon which a set of standards for inventories and handbooks can be built. The 37-page report costs $2 to SAA members, $4 for nonmembers, from Executive Director, SAA, Box 8198, Univ. of Illinois at Chicago Circle, Chicago, Ill. 60680.

On aging

The Institute of Gerontology of the University of Michigan-Wayne State University has a variety of recent publications on aging. Effective Social Services for Older Americans ($4.50) explores the problems faced by planners of social service systems, and in The Economics of Aging Toward 2001 ($4), authorities in economics, gerontology, and other fields consider what the economic needs of older Americans will be in the next quarter century. Humanistic Perspectives on Aging ($3.50) is an essay on the humanities and aging, and it provides an annotated listing of novels, short stories, dramas, films, etc. which have something to say about old age or society's attitudes toward the old. Preparation for Retirement ($3.25) is the revised third edition of a guide intended for discussion groups or for individual consideration of concerns related to the post-employment years. For these titles and a complete list of 1976 publications, write Gerontology Publications, Institute of Gerontology, 520 E. Liberty, Ann Arbor, Mich. 48109. When payment accompanies order, no charge is made for postage and handling. Quantity discounts are available.

Hispanic bibliography

The second cumulative edition of Latin America, Spain, and Portugal: an Annotated Bibliography of Paperback Books (323p., $3) contains 2,228 entries relating to the Hispanic world, including former Iberian colonial dependencies. History, literature, and politics are the disciplines best represented, although the fields of anthropology, economics, sociology, and the arts are also emphasized. Titles are arranged alphabetically by author under three headings: Latin America, Spain and Portugal; and Dictionaries, Grammars, Readers, and Textbooks. A publishers and a subject index increase the list's usefulness. Order Hispanic Foundation Bibliographical Series 14 (Stock No. 030-013-00007-7) from Superintendent of Documents, U.S. GPO, Washington, D.C. 20402.

MAGAZINES

Bill Katz, PROFESSOR, SCHOOL OF LIBRARY SCIENCE, STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK, ALBANY

Parachute

1975. Quarterly. $15; Canada, $9. Eds: France Morin & Chantal Pontbriand. P.O. Box 730, Station N, Montreal, Quebec, Canada. Illus. adv. Aud: Ac. (Subject: Art. Issue examined: Vol. 1, No. 2, February 1976)

Both in format and scope, Parachute closely resembles the early issues of Art Forum although it lacks colored illustrations. Still, the black-and-white photographs of advanced works in painting and sculpture are striking enough, and the lively articles demonstrate that the polemics of art criticism are doing well in Canada. There are some six to eight articles in each oversized 50-page number, and most of these center around an artist and his or her work. While the focus is on Canadian museums and galleries, particularly in Montreal, the coverage of artists is truly international. And, like the old Art Forum, about half of each issue is turned over to the other arts, from music to the film—including videotapes and notes on recordings. Almost all material is in English, although there are usually one or two articles as well as several notes about exhibits in French. An impressive new arts magazine which should be found in all larger academic and special collections.—BK

The Canadian Journal of Information Science. Revue Canadienne des Sciences de l'Information

1976. Annually. $10. Eds: Frank Dolan & Andre Gamache. Canadian Assn. of Information Science, Box 158, Terminal A, Ottawa, Ontario, K1N 8V2. Illus. Aud: Sa. (Subject: Library periodicals. Issue examined: Vol. 1, No. 1, 1976)

Mixing technology, philosophy, and social attitudes, this 90-page journal focuses on the Canadian computer, databank, and librarian at work. The ten to 12 articles are deliberately aimed at Canadian readers with over half of them of an intellectual "how-we-do-it" variety. This differs from other journals not only in focus, but in style. Material is within the understanding of the interested librarian, and there is a minimum of mathematical formulas and skywriting. Purists may think it too general. (All abstracts are in English and French, but the majority of articles favor English.) A must for all Canadian libraries. Limited value for most American collections.—BK

Index to Free Periodicals

1976. Semiannual. $15. Ed: C. Edward Wall, Pierian Pr., 5000 Washtenaw, Ann Arbor, Mich. 48104.

The publication of Index to Free Periodicals should be an event worthy of note by librarians. Work on the several editions of Magazines for Libraries provided me with convincing proof of the need for an index to this source of valuable material. In free magazines there exists a source of quality material not generally available elsewhere. Many of the offerings are of excellent quality in content, presentation, and format.

For inclusion in the first issue 55 titles have been selected as being "the most worthy of indexing because of the quality of the material printed therein." The editorial policy of IFP indicates that it has been "designed to supplement the Readers' Guide to Periodical Literature." It attempts to cover all subject areas with material of value to a wide readership. Unlike Readers' Guide, the page layout is single column, with much larger type and more generous margins. The further claim is made to parallel Readers' Guide in provision of author, title, and subject entries, and indication of illustrations, portraits, maps, charts, and other special features. Since Readers' Guide includes no title entries, the use of them in IFP is an addition rather than a parallel to RG. The usefulness of title entries is questioned. The method of showing page numbers does not give an indication of the length of the article.

Every attempt has been made to obtain permission from editors for inclusion in the index, along with their promises of cooperation in providing free subscriptions to libraries. Some of the magazines indexed cannot be obtained directly from the publisher but require a local chapter of an organization, auto dealership, etc. It is planned that further addresses and instructions for requesting subscriptions will be provided to subscribers as needed. Index to Free Periodicals is recommended for all libraries except elementary school libraries or children's libraries serving that age group.—Adeline M. Smith, Head Librarian in charge of District Library Services, Hoosic Valley Central School, Schaghticoke, N.Y.

Medical Self-Care: Access to Medical Tools

1976. Quarterly. $7. Ed: Tom Ferguson. P.O. Box 31549, San Francisco, Calif. 94131. Illus. Aud: Ga, Ac. (Subject: Medical Sciences. Issue examined: Summer 1976)

Librarians with questions about what medical books to purchase for lay-readers, will find at least a partial answere here. The 25-page magazine is edited and primarily written by a Yale medical school graduate and teacher. About 35 to 50 books are listed, usually with an illustration of the cover, a short note on contents, and several paragraphs of excerpts. There is a stress on paperbacks and titles for all ages and for both men and women. Coverage is broad—from medical manuals to popular exercise guides. The material seems accurate, and one hopes that in time the descriptors will increase in length, although it might be argued that listing here is the stamp of approval. The effort to provide easy-to-understand medical information is needed, and the magazine will be of as much interest to general readers as to librarians with selection problems. Recommended.—BK

Wilson Quarterly

1976. Quarterly. $12. Ed: Peter Braestrup. Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, Smithsonian Institution. Subs to: P.O. Box 2450, Greenwich, Conn. 06830. Aud: Ac, Ga. (Subject: General Magazines. Issue examined: Vol. 1, No.1, Autumn 1976)

A general political-literary review for the man or woman who enjoys the American Scholar, this tends to follow much the same slightly liberal editorial scope. History, economics, literature, current trends and events—all are included in the six to seven articles or "dialogues" which feature entries by three or four experts on a given topic. Contributors are professors, professional authors, or members of the intellectual business/government circle, e.g., Alvin Weinberg, Walt Rostow, Robert Nisbet, Russell Lynes, etc. Taking another pass at condensing periodical articles, this time from scholarly and professional journals, the opening 30-page section includes about one entry per page under numerous subject headings. Good book reviews and editorial notes. All and all, a solid reading experience.—BK

Common Ground

1975. Quarterly. Membership. $15. Ed: Manon L. Spitzer. American Universities Field Staff, 4 West Wheelock St., Hanover, N.H. 03755. Illus. Aud: Ac, Ga, Hs.

An international "general" magazine, this is published by a nonprofit "consortium of American universities that engages in various international activities both at home and in foreign areas." There are 15 foreign area specialists who manage the organization and help to put out the 100-page journal. Each issue is devoted to a single "concern of our time," e.g., women and men, the new wealth of nations, cities and citizens, food and the future, etc. The ten to 12 articles objectively view the problem as seen from both Western and third world countries. Articles are written in a clear, semipopular style by experts, usually in the field. In view of the style and wide range of topics, this deserves attention by both academic and public libraries, as well as some high schools. The overviews are excellent, well within the understanding of interested lay readers. Hence, while the publishing group might indicate a different audience, the magazine is essentially one for the general reader. The $15 membership includes a quarterly newsletter, and the organization offers a variety of other services which libraries may wish to inquire about.—BK

The Crafts Report

1975. Annual. $11. Ed: Michael Scott. 1529 E. 19th St., Brooklyn, N.Y. 11230. Illus. adv. Aud: Ga.

An eight-page tabloid newsletter which attempts to help adults who seek to make a living by selling their crafts. Advice is given on everything from crafts centers, new books, and markets to how to fill out an income tax form. A useful feature: "Shows and Fairs," a methodical listing by state and community with information on fees and qualifications to enter the shows or fairs. While primarily for the professional, this should be of some interest to the amateur as well.—BK

Hayes Historical Journal

1976. Semiannual. $5. Eds: Kenneth E. Davison, Thomas A. Smith, & Watt P. Marchman. Spiegel Grove, 1337 Hayes Ave., Fremont, Ohio 43420. Aud: Sa. (Subject: History)

A semipopular, not scholarly journal, this devotes its handsome 70 to 80 pages to "matters relating to the people and establishments of the times of Rutherford B. Hayes." Hayes ended military reconstruction in the South, surpressed strikes, and died a far from popular figure. Apparently the magazine attempts a revisionist view of the President, and is likely to cause some controversy among interested historians. It has merit as a historical journal.—BK

Frontiers: a Journal of Women Studies

1975. Three issues per volume. $15; individuals, $9. Women Studies Program, Hillside Court 104, Univ. of Colorado, Boulder, Colo. 80309. Aud: Ac. (Subject: Women. Issues examined: Vol. 1, Nos. 1 & 2, 1975-1976)

Seeking a balance "between the popular and scholarly poles which seem unnecessarily to divide women," Frontiers is an offset 140- to 160-page collection of ten to 12 essays, two or three reviews, and a dash of poetry. The writers are women associated with colleges and universities, primarily the University of Colorado. (An occasional outsider appears, such as Germaine Greer in the second issue.) "Women and Work" and "The Politics of Reproduction" are the sort of topics around which half or more of each number is edited. Three or four supporting articles on broader subjects follow. Despite the idea of joining women in the community with women on campus, the end result of the well documented, equally impassioned articles is that this is primarily for university educated feminists with a scholarly involvement in the women's movement. It is not a popular feminist magazine. Recommended for all collections of feminist materials, particularly those with allied titles such as Feminist Studies and Women's Studies.—BK

All About Indexes

At last: a single Comprehensive Index to English Language Little Magazines, 1890-1970, Series One, 8 vols. (Kraus, 1976, $590). Primarily an author index (arranged with "works by" and "works about" subheadings) to 100 major American and British titles, this has the advantage of a single, carefully thought out work. Selected by poet and little magazine expert Felix Pollak, with the assistance of Charles Allen, the titles are representative of the best literary magazines. The typography and binding are as excellent as the careful indexing. Drawbacks: the inclusion of several titles indexed in standard indexes (e.g., Hudson Review, Poetry, Partisan Review) and the lack of a subject approach—other than to articles "about" individuals which include, besides authors, illustrators, photographers, editors, etc.

How much duplication is there here between the Alan Swallow volumes (Index to Little Magazines) which cover 1948 to 1969 and Stephen Goode's fine Index to American Little Magazines which spans 1900 to 1948 in various sets? A cursory check reveals only about a 15 to 20 percent overlap, and only where the various indexes meet each other chronologically. This may increase when Pollak and Allen edit another series (date to be announced). Actually, between Goode and the Pollak-Allen effort there is every reason to think that one day complete indexing may be possible for not only the major, but many of the minor littles. Where a budgetary choice has to be made Goode has the edge (the volumes combined are about $150), but no library really can afford to cut out one for the other. Meanwhile, the Kraus set is highly recommended. (For another longer, favorable review see Richard Heinzkill's LJ comments, November 15, 1976, p. 2358).

Lacking any real interest in political titles, the different little magazine indexes are nicely complemented by the ongoing descriptive bibliography: From Radical Left to Extreme Right (Scarecrow Pr., 1976, 1,748p., $22.50). Volume 3 fully describes 650 controversial periodicals, primarily published since 1970. (The two earlier volumes in the 2nd edition include about 800 earlier titles.) First edited by Robert Muller, and now carried on by Theodore and Janet Spahn, the 23 sections move from "radical left" to "feminist" to "conservative." The 150- to 300-word objective annotations are usually followed by comments from the editor—a superb feature. As a buying guide, a profile of American life, and as an "early warning" system to meet those who do or do not want a little known title in a collection, the work is a must for all types and sizes of libraries.

There are two more indexes, also from Scarecrow, which many libraries will find useful. Popular Music Periodicals Index 1976 (376p., $15) carries on the annual started in 1973 by Dean Tudor and Andy Armitage. The separate subject and author index analyzes 67 periodicals for 1975, and there is a good bibliography of recent popular music books. It's particularly valuable for a close check on record reviews and for lesser known as well as major musicians. Harman Baron's Author Index to Esquire 1933-1973 (299p., $11) is welcomed by magazine fans who collect appearances of authors in magazines. The place of the index in literature collections is self-evident. Added bonus: includes some illustrators, e.g., George Bellows for one. However, here the coverage is spotty.

(Note: While I've only noticed Kraus and Scarecrow titles, I am glad to review books from other publishers—at least as space allows. Suggestions from readers appreciated.)—BK

Can you afford a cavalier stance toward paperbacks?

In good times or bad times—the paperback explosion continues. They're being published in greater and greater numbers. New formats are being introduced. New pricing and discount schedules are being established. New specialty publishers are emerging.

PAPERBOUND BOOKS IN PRINT is the only current, comprehensive, authoritative and continuous guide to this increasingly important segment of the book world. Use it...

- to have a complete picture of what's available
- to compare prices of all editions
- to order at the correct price from the correct source
- to build subject collections and fill customers' special needs
- to locate titles when you know only the author and vice versa
- to choose texts, compile reading lists, build curricula

Just look what you get for a one-year subscription...

- A Base Volume in December. It lists virtually every paperback in print—c. 140,000—by author, by title, and by some 450 subject headings. Each entry provides author, title, series, illustrator, ISBN, publisher, price, whether an original or reissue.
- A Supplement in May. It lists approx. 35,500 new titles, new editions, o.p.'s, price and other changes. Same author/title/subject arrangement. Same full finding, ordering, and bibliographic data.
- A Supplement in September. It replaces the May Supplement and cumulates all changes occurring since the base volume was published. More than 60,000 entries.

All this for just $54.50 a year. Subscribe now. Start your subscription with the brand-new Base Volume 1977, coming in December, 1976.
ISBN 0-8352-0934-2.

Important note! The brand-new PAPERBOUND BOOKS IN PRINT Base Volume 1977 can be purchased separately. Just $35.00 for this 3,200-page, 140,000-entry, author/title/subject source.
ISBN 0-8352-0851-6. December, 1976. 8½" x 11".
(Plus shipping and handling charges and sales tax where applicable.)

Send all subscriptions and orders to:
R. R. BOWKER
SUBSCRIPTION SERVICE DEPT.
P.O. Box 67
Whitinsville, Mass. 01588.

BOWKER
NEW YORK & LONDON

BOOK REVIEW

The Contemporary Scene

Chang, Y.C. Factional and Coalition Politics in China: the cultural revolution and its aftermath.

Praeger. (Special Studies in Internat. Politics & Govt.). 1976. 144p. index. LC 75-8404. ISBN 0-275-00920-3. $15. HIST/POL SCI

In this brief work, Chang describes the main events of the Cultural Revolution and subsequent developments down to Hua Kuo-feng's emergence as the new national leader in 1976. As a narrative account of recent events, the book is quite acceptable and useful. It fails, however, to provide any sense of exactly what factions are competing for power, what are the bases of factional alignment, and when or why factions form coalitions. The analysis of Chinese politics by means of factions has enjoyed a vogue in academic circles in recent years; but in order for the approach to be useful, concrete information on the composition and operation of factions is required: that is what Chang fails to provide.—David D. Buck, Dept. of History, Univ. of Wisconsin, Milwaukee

Gronbjerg, Kirsten A. Mass Society and the Extension of Welfare, 1960–1970.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. Mar. 1977. 256p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-226-30964-9. $16.

PUBLIC ADMIN/SOC SCI

Gronbjerg presents a state-by-state study of the fastest-growing, most controversial and costly public-welfare program, Aid to Families with Dependent Children. She examines and analyzes a prodigious amount of material, and finds great differences among states in approach and willingness to undertake welfare responsibilities. These partly reflect availability of resources but, more important, are related to the extent to which the state's populace is "modern" or "mass society" oriented. She sees the Sixties as a watershed with an accentuated trend away from the traditional approach to poverty, from the "stratification" model which keeps the poor fed and clothed but stigmatized, toward the "mass society" model which encourages the extension of welfare benefits to all citizens in need as a matter of right. She recognizes formidable obstacles, but projects the continued extension of such benefits, possibly eventually equalized under federal control. Supportive data, footnotes, and bibliography supplement a carefully constructed and lucid thesis. Especially relevant for professionals and students of social policy.—Suzanne W. Wood, SUNY at Alfred Lib.

Hart, Eavin, M.D. Sexual Maladjustment and Disease: an introduction to modern venereology.

Nelson-Hall. Apr. 1977. 256p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-29073. ISBN 0-88229-325-7. $15.

SOC SCI/MED

It's been remarked that were venereal diseases caused by airborne viruses, V.D. might have been wiped out of existence long ago, for there would be no embarrassment to the reporting of it. Instead, V.D. rages in proportions which can accurately be called epidemic. Hart considers existing V.D. control programs inadequate because they do not consider the "whole patient"—i.e., the social and psychological aspects of this medical pathology. A workable approach to venereology, writes Hart, must include sex education and sexual and contraceptive counseling for patients; assistance to parents and teachers in understanding their role; particular attention to youthful sexuality; understanding of nontraditional sexual practices (prostitution, promiscuity, homosexuality) and their real and imagined relationship to the prevalence of V.D. Hart's book is a strong, contemporary medical and social reference, offering to clinicians, social workers, public health workers, and physicians discussions which should prove useful in formulating effective modern approaches to an age-old social problem.—Ellen Peck, Consortium on Parenthood Aptitude, New York

Hughes, Jonathan. The Governmental Habit: economic controls from colonial times to the present.

Basic Bks. Feb. 1977. 248p. index. ISBN 0-465-02694-X. $11.95. HIST/ECON

Hughes's central point is that while success in American economic development has always resulted from a balance between individual freedom and societal limitations needed to maintain order and a sense of justice beyond the market decision, we have tilted too much on the side of controls in the last century. Although the bulk of his book reviews the history of economic controls from colonial times, Hughes's main concern is with the economic troubles of the 1970's—low productivity, economic stagnation, and inflation—which he argues are largely attributable to our structure of fragmented and piecemeal economic controls, fashioned over a long time to cope only with specific problems. He argues that neither a return to the free market nor central planning are readily conceivable, however, and that we are more likely to take the easiest way out, which is to do nothing. His clear preference is for fewer controls, lower taxes, and reduced public spending as the best ways to stimulate the economy and reduce inflation. Hughes's evaluation and prescriptions of our current economic ills do not follow as conclusively from his historical account as he seems to think; they are based more on argumentation than on a wholly convincing analysis. His work is, nevertheless, lively and stimulating.—Harry Frumerman, Dept. of Economics, Hunter Coll., CUNY

CONTENTS

The Contemporary Scene	471
Reference	472
Art	476
Biography	481
Business & Economics	483
Communications	485
Education	485
History	486
Home Economics	492
Language Arts	494
Literature	494
Music	497
Philosophy	498
Poetry	498
Political Science & International Affairs	499
Psychology & Psychiatry	500
Religion	502
Science & Technology	503
Social Science	506
Sports & Recreation	507
Theater	509
Fiction	511
Book Review & Professional Reading Author Index	517

Library Journal reviews are indexed in Book Review Index and Book Review Digest.

"Useful for libraries collecting in this area"

The Reform Spirit in America

Ed. by ROBERT H. WALKER

"Walker has arranged and annotated this collection of 105 documents to demonstrate two key thoughts. The first is that the traditional conception of American reform as sporadic is misleading....His second, and more important, theme is that American reform is a process of cultural self-definition....The subjects of the documents range from campaign buttons to Supreme Court decisions, from Cotton Mather to Buckminster Fuller....More substantial than the usual compilation."—Library Journal. 682 pp. Index. SBN: 399-11651-6. $15.00

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

"A valuable index"

index to handicrafts, fifth supplement

The Index to Handicrafts series covers miscellaneous and previously uncollected material on handicrafts and amateur workshop projects. The original Index and four successive Supplements cover from roughly 1900 to 1967. The new Fifth Supplement by Pearl Turner, covers 1968-1973 and includes not only American, but also British titles commonly found in public libraries. Over 1,000 book titles and 15 periodicals not indexed by the Readers' Guide to Periodical Literature are included, as well as a separate bibliography listing all books now still-in-print from the titles indexed in the previous Index and Supplements. For a complete description of the Handicrafts series, request a copy of Faxon's Publications Catalog.

In the Useful Reference Series of Library Books.

ISBN 0-87305-102-5 650 pp.
Library Binding $18.00

F.W. FAXON COMPANY, INC.
Publishing Division
15 Southwest Park, Westwood, MA 02090

Johnston, Douglas M., ed. Marine Policy and the Coastal Community: the impact of the law of the sea.

St. Martin's. 1976. 338p. index. LC 76-1337. $18.95. INT AFFAIRS/ECON

This book does an excellent job of exploring a topic which has been growing in importance during the 1970's. More coastal states are turning to the sea for answers to their food and natural resources problems, and this has created many international economic and legal problems. The chapters are written by experts in the field and cover such topics as ocean politics, economics of resources, economics of transportation, and fisheries. There are many footnotes, and this book can be easily used as a springboard for further study of marine policy. An excellent study on a complex and important subject, it is not for the layman, but would be of interest to any library serving a graduate department in economics, political science, or maritime studies.—Gary Golden, Southern Illinois Univ. Lib., Carbondale

Nevin, David & Robert E. Bills. The Schools That Fear Built.

Acropolis. 1976. c. 200p. LC 76-27582. ISBN 0-87491-177-X. $10; pap. ISBN 0-87491-179-6. $4.50. SOC SCI/ED

As desegregation of public schools in the South became a reality in the early and mid 1970's, the number of private schools, particularly those sponsored by fundamentalist churches, grew steadily. Information on these schools has been practically nonexistent. This is the report of a study conducted by the Lamar Society, a Southern intellectual organization, of recently established schools in 13 Southern states. The first part of the book gives background information, discusses trends in general, and summarizes the findings of the research in terms of financial support, physical plants and equipment, administration, and faculty. The second part analyzes the findings of an in-depth study of 11 schools. Students, teachers, and parents were questioned about their social and political attitudes and opinions in order to draw a profile of the schools' constituency. The reporting is objective. The authors conclude that by draining personnel and resources from the public schools, these private institutions will have a serious impact upon the entire educational system.—Shirley L. Hopkinson, California State Univ., San Jose

Smith, Colin. Carlos: portrait of a terrorist.

Holt. Apr. 1977. 304p. index. LC 76-29916. ISBN 0-03-09481-4. $7.95. INT AFFAIRS/BIOG

British journalist Smith sheds some light on the shadowy life of Venezuelan terrorist Ilich Ramirez Sanchez, better known to the world as "Carlos Martinez." Carlos is credited with the assassination attempt on British department store magnate Edward Sieff, the bombing of a Paris café, and the kidnapping of the OPEC ministers in Vienna. The story goes from the drawing rooms of London diplomatic society and Patrice Lumumba University in Moscow to the PLO guerrilla training camps in the Middle East. Throughout, Smith speculates that Carlos was recruited by the Soviets to serve their ends in the Arab terrorist movement. The book is carefully researched and well written. Fascination with today's anti-heroes should make this a popular title.—Andrea Caron Kempf, Univ. of Northern Colorado Lib., Greeley Weinreb, Lloyd L. Denial of Justice: criminal process in the United States.

Free Pr. Mar. 1977. index. LC 76-27222. $12.95. LAW

Weinreb has written a stimulating analysis meant for lawyers, those in criminal justice administration, and the general public. It does not address the Constitutional issues of search and seizure, Miranda warnings, and other such areas; rather, it presents a devastating critique of how criminal cases are handled in this country and presents a radical alternative: an investigative model based upon a synthesis of the systems in use in other countries. It would take the investigation of crime completely out of the hands of the police, requiring them to turn over suspects and their information to a magistracy having quasi-judicial and prosecutorial functions, but which, unlike the grand jury, would be open and allow the presence of counsel. The whole process would end up in a trial before a panel of seven lay persons, two lawyers, and one presiding judge, who would control the questioning. The ultimate unanswered question is whether this "European" system would be significantly more effective in a country with an extraordinary rate of individual and violent crime, not to mention a vast organized crime system. Weinreb suggests we try it and see. His book is an important call to a national debate.—Richard L. Bowler, Univ. of Chicago Law Lib.

REFERENCE

All the Paintings of the Rijksmuseum in Amsterdam: a completely illustrated catalogue.

Abner Schram. Mar. 1977. 911p. illus. bibliog. index. $70. ART/REF

The publication of a completely illustrated catalog of a collection of paintings of the size and significance of the Rijksmuseum's in Amsterdam is without precedent. No other great museum offers a single-volume reference work of equal scope. Containing more than 5000 small but highly legible black-and-white reproductions, this handsomely produced tome documents all of the museum's holdings. The works are arranged alphabetically under the artists' names and each citation includes title, dimensions, inscriptions, provenance, bibliography, and often additional data. Several very detailed appended lists, indexes, and concordances add to the book's serviceability. Scholars in particular will find invaluable the carefully elaborated subject index. In addition, there is an illuminating essay describing the genesis and growth of the Rijksmuseum. All art and museum libraries in any way concerned with the art of the Low Countries will find this a volume of enormous value.—Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, New York

American Indian Reference Book.

Earth, P.O. Box 2275, Alexandria, Va. 22301. 1976. 308p. pap. $9.95. SOC SCI/REF

This work contains lists of books, periodicals, films, filmstrips, and records about American Indians—all lists complete with publishers' addresses. Other features include facts about Indian history, population, location of tribes, annual events such as powwows, schools, and organizations. The stated purpose of the book is to furnish meaningful data to librarians or teachers who are trying to develop a collection or a course on the American Indian. Typographical errors abound, and poor binding of the review copy makes one question the high paperback price. Still, some libraries may find the handy compilation of data a compensating factor in their purchase decision.—Charles H. Kemp, Pacific Univ. Lib., Forest Grove, Ore.

Anderson, Martin, ed. Conscription: a select and annotated bibliography.

Hoover Institution. 1976. 453p. comp. by Martin Anderson & Valerie Bloom. bibliog. index. LC 75-41906. ISBN 0-8179-2571-6 $15. POL SCI/REF

Hoover Institution bibliographies are known for their authoritative construction; this one is no exception. The first of a projected three-volume work (remaining volumes will include a collection of readings and a major essay on conscription), the list contains 1385 descriptively annotated items. It covers all periods and includes books, articles, manuscripts, pamphlets, and government documents. Arrangement is by broad category, such as "Selective Service," "Universal Military Training," and "Conscientious Objection." By far the largest and most up-to-date bibliography on the subject, it is highly recommended for scholarly and special collections.—Kenneth F. Kister, Tampa, Fla.

Best Reference Books: titles of lasting value selected from "American Reference Books Annual," 1970-1976.

Libraries Unlimited. 1976. 448p. ed. by Bohdan S. Wynar. index. LC 76-45781. ISBN 0-87287-163-0. $18.50. REF

Best Reference Books lists 818 important reference titles from seven volumes of the American Reference Books Annual. Categories covered include dictionaries, encyclopedias, foreign reference books, and selected government documents. These selections are truly of "lasting value" and can be used in determining the core of a reference collection for libraries of all sizes. The reviews for the listed titles have been prepared by 175 reviewers from ARBA, and give citations to reviews in other media. Highly recommended.—Dortha H. Skelton, Coll. of William & Mary Lib., Williamsburg, Va.

Burton, Philip E. A Dictionary of Microcomputing.

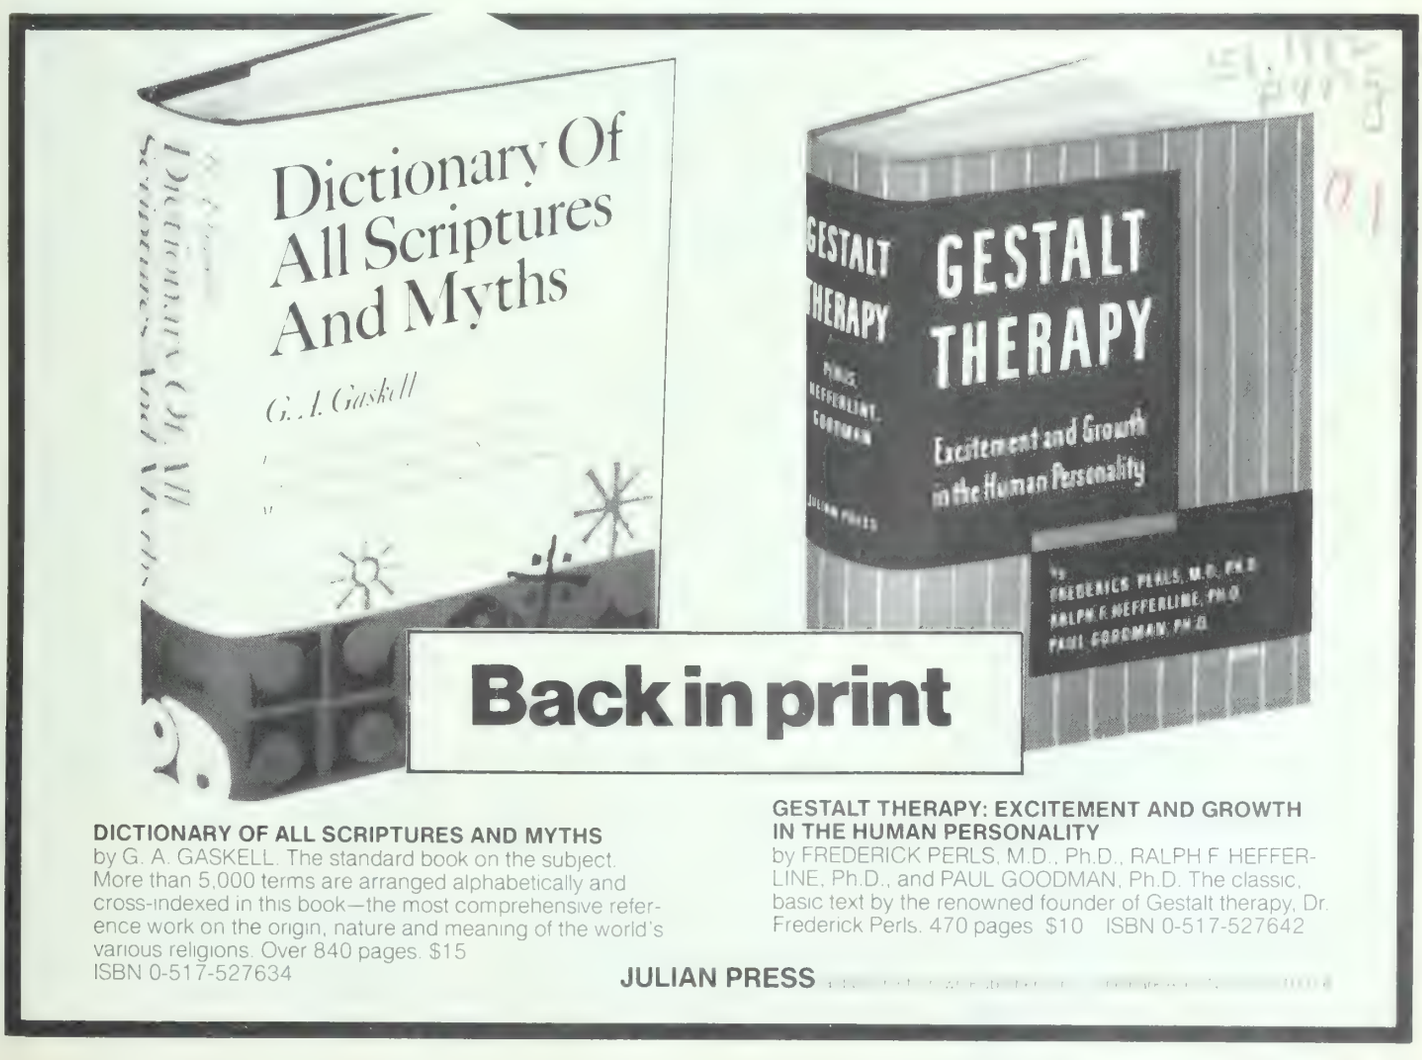
Garland. (Reference Lib. of Science & Technology, Vol. 5). 1976. 171p. LC 76-024762. ISBN 0-8240-9930-3. $12.50. COMPUTERS/REF

From an inauspicious, almost accidental beginning in the late 1960's, microcomputers have become important in all areas of electronic design and computer architecture. And as with every new technology, the vocabulary associated with microprocessors and microcomputing has grown apace. Burton here presents a concise, coherent, and, most important, accurate set of definitions for this new vocabulary. His book's only limitation, if it can be called that, is that it is too concise for the reader with no previous knowledge of computers and their architecture. Although there are other microcomputer dictionaries available (e.g., Charles Sippl and David Kidd's Microcomputer Dictionary and Guide, LJ 4/1/76), the definitions in the present work form a more continuous pattern in their reflection of current usage. This is an excellent reference or self-study book and belongs in all basic computing and electrical engineering collections.—Naomi Lee Bloom, American Insts. for Research, Palo Alto, Calif.

Children's Authors and Illustrators: an index to biographical dictionaries.

Gale. (Biographical Index, No. 2). 1976. 172p. ed. by Dennis La Beau. LC 76-23534. ISBN 0-8103-1078-3. $15. LIT/REF

This volume presents, for the first time,



Dictionary Of All Scriptures And Myths
G. A. Gaskell
GESTALT THERAPY
Excitement and Growth in the Human Personality
Back in print
DICTIONARY OF ALL SCRIPTURES AND MYTHS
by G. A. GASKELL. The standard book on the subject. More than 5,000 terms are arranged alphabetically and cross-indexed in this book—the most comprehensive reference work on the origin, nature and meaning of the world's various religions. Over 840 pages. $15
ISBN 0-517-527634
GESTALT THERAPY: EXCITEMENT AND GROWTH IN THE HUMAN PERSONALITY
by FREDERICK PERLS, M.D., Ph.D., RALPH F. HEFFERLINE, Ph.D., and PAUL GOODMAN, Ph.D. The classic, basic text by the renowned founder of Gestalt therapy, Dr. Frederick Perls. 470 pages $10 ISBN 0-517-527642
JULIAN PRESS

a convenient index to biographies of children's authors and illustrators. The biographical material is taken from 32 sources devoted to children's authors and illustrators except Gale's continuing Contemporary Authors. Authors are indexed by name, with a separate entry for each reference. If dates and cross references are given in the original source, they are repeated in the entry. This is another of the fine children's literature indexes that Gale has been publishing of late. All libraries with children's collections will need this handy reference tool.—Gilbert B. Cross, Dept. of English, Eastern Michigan Univ., Ypsilanti

Daniells, Lorna M. Business Information Sources.

Univ. of California Pr. 1976. 455p. fwd. by Edwin T. Coman Jr. bibliog. index. LC 74-30517. ISBN 0-520-02946-1. $14.95. BUS/REF

This is a significant and important book for all libraries serving the business community or colleges of business administration. The final edition of Coman's Sources of Business Information (Univ. of California Pr.) was published in 1964; Daniells' book proves to be a thorough, well-organized, and eminently useful replacement. It is equally valuable as a reference or acquisitions tool. The main text is divided into broad general chapters such as "investment sources," and "industry statistics," which are subdivided into more specific topics, followed by entries for the particular sources. Annotations for entries, chapter introductions, etc. are written in a clear, practical style. The types of material covered are broad in range. When appropriate, chapters close with a list of associations. The table of contents is usefully detailed and the 82-page index is thorough.—Thomas Heenan, Omaha P.L., Neb.

Krawczyk, Chess, comp. Mountaineering: a bibliography of books in English to 1974.

Scarecrow. Feb. 1977. 180p. bibliog. index. LC 76-45415. ISBN 0-8108-0979-6. $7.50. SPORTS/BIBLIOG

To be useful, a bibliography should be exclusive, yet complete—not an easy assignment. Unfortunately this one doesn't make it; there are too many omissions. I question the wisdom of excluding guidebooks, but if so, why omit Ormes' Guide to the Colorado Mountains but include Voge's Climber's Guide to the High Sierra? Similar examples could be cited. Also ignored are backpacking and mountain search and rescue, subjects almost inseparable from mountaineering. This bibliography will provide a starting place for anyone purchasing or researching mountaineering books, but it must be supplemented by many other titles. Arrangement is by author, with subject and title indexes. Annotations are helpful when given.—Helen J. Stiles, NOAA-ERL Lib., Dept. of Commerce, Boulder, Colo.

Lepper, Gary M. A Bibliographical Introduction to Seventy-Five Modern American Authors.

Serendipity Bks. 1976. 427p. $30. LIT/BIBLIOG

This unnecessary book is a compilation of checklists of the first editions (and issues thereof) of 75 "poets and novelists who have achieved literary prominence since 1945." Since the compiler provides no criteria for having chosen these particular 75, his selection seems only arbitrary. What makes it such an unnecessary work is that all but two of the authors can be found in Contemporary Novelists, Contemporary Poets, or Contemporary Authors, all of which are readily available and are updated periodically. Furthermore, a bibliography that attempts to furnish first edition information for authors who have just begun writing or are in the middle of their careers is one more instance of bibliographic overkill. With large gaps in literary bibliography remaining to be filled, such expensive duplication as this deserves rejection.—Timothy Schobert, Univ. of Ottawa Lib., Canada

McGraw-Hill Dictionary of the Life Sciences.

McGraw. 1976. 907p. ed. by Daniel N. Lapedes. LC 76-17817. ISBN 0-07-045262-8. $19.95. SCI/REF

Drawing primarily from the larger McGraw-Hill Dictionary of Scientific and Technical Terms (LJ 2/1/75), the editors of this work have added a few new definitions (averaging one in nine for the pages checked) and an occasional new illustration. Definitions vary in technicality, some being quite clear and simple, others using terms most readers will need to trace further through the work. The appended taxonomic tables and list of constants and measurement-conversion factors are useful, as are the marginal line drawings, but many pages are half blank where additional illustrations would have been useful. This dictionary defines more terms than Peter Gray's Dictionary of the Biological Sciences (LJ 12/15/67) or Isabella Henderson and W. D. Henderson's Dictionary of Biological Terms (Van Nostrand Reinhold, 1963. 8th. ed.), but both of these standard works include terms not in the present work. Large libraries which have heavy demand in this area will find this a good work. Those feeling the budget pinch who already have the larger work from which it is drawn and one or two other biological dictionaries can pass on this one.—Ilse B. Moon, Rutgers Graduate Sch. of Library Service, N.J.

Majumdar, Robin. Virginia Woolf: an annotated bibliography of criticism, 1915–1974.

Garland (Reference Lib. of the Humanities, Vol. 42). 1977. 118p. bibliog. index. LC 75-24893. ISBN 0-8240-9961-3. $17. LIT/BIBLIOG

Based on Majumdar's doctoral dissertation, this book is the product of extensive research. The introduction, which reads like the summation of a dissertation, contains lengthy footnotes and relates the critics' differing views of Woolf. The book includes more than 1100 citations, which are selectively annotated. Majumdar has painstakingly listed books, articles, essays, introductions, prefaces, correspondence, and general studies that contain references to Woolf or her works. Additionally, there is a section that lists each of Woolf's books and the British and American newspaper and periodical reviews that have appeared. Indexes to critics and works facilitate use. This comprehensive book should be purchased by all libraries with an interest in English literature.—Larry A. Miller, Moraine Valley Coll. Lib., Palos Hills, Ill.

Millgate, Linda. Almanac of Dates: events of the past for every day of the year.

HBJ. Mar. 1977. 480p. ISBN 0-15-145773-5. pap. $5.95. REF

In this book each day of the year is listed, and more than 30 entries are included for each. More than 15,000 "happenings" are listed, and there's information on almost every possible subject—holidays, births and deaths of kings and queens, explorations, "first" facts, etc. Entries briefly describe the reason why each day of the year is special to someone, somewhere. A subject index would have been helpful. Nevertheless, recommended for public and academic libraries.—Ina J. Weis, Univ. of Toledo Libs., Ohio

Polmar, Norman, ed. in assoc. with Floyd D. Kennedy Jr. & others. World Combat Aircraft Directory.

Doubleday. 1977. 373p. photogs. index. LC 76-5340. ISBN 0-385-12146-6. $14.95. TECH/REF

This directory describes the fighter, bomber, attack, reconnaissance, pa-

"Clearly written... practical"*

THE COMPLETE BOOK OF 35mm PHOTOGRAPHY

Jerry Yulsman

"Jerry Yulsman has produced a book useful to both the new and the fairly experienced photographer...[the book] is clearly written, accurate, and practical without being boring. Technical data and information...are precise and up-to-date. A well-prepared glossary, an equipment buying guide with dependable advice, and five pertinent appendixes complete a valuable broad introduction to the use of the 35mm camera." —Library Journal

SBN 698-10734-9 $8.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.

200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

trol, antisubmarine, and helicopter craft of 105 nations. For each aircraft, the text includes data on size, armament, speed, and other pertinent specifications. Another section lists the aircraft used by each country. The photographs are not reproduced well and the Glossary of terms is actually only a dictionary of acronyms. Although many more illustrations are needed in a book of this sort, this directory will tell us what a Foxbat is and what types of planes are used by the Afghan air force.—R. G. Schipf, Univ. of Montana Lib., Missoula

Rosenbloom, Joseph. Consumer Protection Guide, 1977.

Macmillan Information. 1976. 398p. LC 76-22872. ISBN 0-02-697500-9. $10.95; pap. ISBN 0-02-468040-0. $4.95. CONSUMER AFFAIRS/REF

Rosenbloom has been revising his personal contribution to the overloaded consumer information shelf annually since 1972. Along with the recent publication of the 1977 edition of his Consumer Complaint Guide (LJ 4/1/72), Rosenbloom has now initiated the Consumer Protection Guide series. This initial volume in the latter series is certainly accurate and much of the information is useful, but the necessity for this particular purchase is questionable. He concentrates on services (listed alphabetically from accountants to veterinarians) and includes descriptions of the specialty, licensing and educational requirements, and guidelines for selection, but he devotes most of his space to addresses of government and private agencies. Large libraries will have other sources for these addresses, while smaller ones will have access to local and state addresses, which are often all that are necessary. The suggestions for making complaints and the explanations of federal credit and other regulations are already available in a variety of sources. This is definitely a superfluous purchase.—Carolyn Simon, Austin P.L., Tex.

Tudor, Dean & others, eds. Canadian Book Review Annual, 1975.

Books Canadian, Inc., 33 East Tupper St., Buffalo, N.Y. 14203. 1976. 304p. index. $29.95. REF

This first annual contains short (200 to 400 words), original reviews of "trade books carrying a Canadian imprint and a 1975 copyright date," reprints of books published before 1966, some government publications, and selected textbooks. The reviews are arranged into five broad subject areas: reference materials, humanities and applied arts, literature, social sciences, and science and technology. Access is further aided by title, author, and subject indexes. The emphasis is on the social sciences and humanities: the science and technology section contains only 14 reviews. And altogether only about 700 books are reviewed—nowhere near the total book production of Canada. Also, something like a Canadian Book Review Digest appearing more frequently than annually would be more useful for selecting purposes. However, anyone who has tried to track down reviews of Canadian materials will be grateful for this easy-to-use item. And for those libraries not subscribing to Canadian Periodical Index and the periodicals indexed therein, this will be an especially useful tool. Recommended for all Canadian libraries and American academic libraries with Canadian collections.—Timothy Schobert, Univ. of Ottawa Lib., Canada

Von Pfeil, Helena P. Oceans, Coasts and Law: holdings of eighteen libraries with union list, plus selected additional books, papers, foreign and U.S. articles categorized by topic. 2 vols.

Oceana. 1976. 887p. LC 76-28310. ISBN 0-379-00586-7. set $55. LAW/REF

The legal literature concerning the use of the oceans and its resources continues to grow; this working research bibliography attempts to analyze that literature as to its content and availability. Volume 1 contains separate alphabetical listings of the holdings of each of the participating libraries. Volume 2 includes a union list of the holdings of the 18 libraries, plus other monographs and papers presented at conferences and symposiums. An attempt was made to include all materials through May 1976. There is no index, but monographs and foreign and U.S. articles, which are listed alphabetically, have been assigned broad subject sections and topic categories. Recommended for law libraries, research institutes, and government agencies concerned with the law of the sea.—Barbara Lande Turman, Univ. of Texas Lib., Austin

A guide to children's literature about the needs and problems of youth aged 2-15

Preschoolers facing surgery may feel encouraged after Sarah Bonnett Stein's A Hospital Story is read aloud and discussed with them. Children who have read Jean Little's Spring Begins in March may become more tolerant of the adjustments required when a grandparent moves in with the family. The Bookfinder not only identifies over 1,000 well-chosen children's books. It also describes and indexes them by subject, author, and title! Adoption, boy-girl relationships, divorce, fantasy, friendship, imagination, loneliness, personal appearance, prejudice, sibling rivalry ... more than 450 topics are cross-referenced to make it as easy as possible for the user to select appropriate books that can help children and young adolescents cope with specific developmental needs and problems. Most of the books described in the Bookfinder are fiction, although especially significant nonfiction books are also summarized

The user first refers to the Subject Index to locate the topic of interest and the titles of relevant books for a particular age level. Then, for each title selected, the user refers to the Annotation section for a synopsis of each book, and for bibliographic information and a commentary about the book's special features. If a title is available in any form other than hardbound—paperbound, Braille, audio-visual—this information is included. The Bookfinder's split-page format and special binding allow the Subject Index to remain open while the user turns pages of the Annotations.

The new Bookfinder...a "must" for your library... $25.00

Sharon Spredemann Dreyer, M.Ed.

A descriptive brochure is now available on request. AGS

Publication date: May 1977

American Guidance Service, Inc.
Circle Pines, Minn. 55014

In Canada, available from Psycan Limited

Walker, Robert H., ed. American Studies: topics and sources.

Greenwood. (Contribs. in American Studies, No. 24). 1976. 393p. bibliog. index. LC 75-35675. ISBN 0-8371-8559-9. $19.95. HIST REF

This is a collection of bibliographic essays dealing with 20 topics in three broad areas: American studies and traditional topics, new accents for American studies, and general resources for teaching and research. The index includes all works cited in the text with indications for paperback editions and books out of print. There is also a title index. Undergraduate students will benefit most from this collection, since it is not a book for specialists but for those who need a good introduction to the research possibilities in the field.—Bonnie Collier, Yale Univ. Lib.

Weaver, Robert G. & Patricia C. Weaver. Handbook of Business Writing.

Free Pr. Mar. 1977. index. LC 76-7178. $10. LANG/REF

This book tries to be a secretary's handbook, a style book, a usage guide, and more. The result is too much of too little. Each of these topics is covered more completely in other standard works. Only libraries with little room for those guides already published need purchase this one.—David M. Hoffman, "Newsday" Lib., Garden City, N.Y.

Recently Revised Reference Works

Concise Dictionary of American Biography. 2d ed.

Scribners. 1977. 1229p. LC 76-49520. ISBN 0-684-14654-1. $50. BIOG/REF

This work, which "will serve as a good ready reference source . . . and is recommended for the reference desk of every library" (LJ 3/1/64), now contains approximately 16,000 entries, incorporating all the biographies contained in Supplement Three and Four of the parent Dictionary of American Biography. There are 1100 new entries, and coverage includes all prominent Americans who died prior to January 1, 1950.

Contemporary Authors: cumulative index, volumes 1-64.

Gale. 1976. 138p. pap. free to librarians. LIT REF

This off-printed cumulative index also includes references to Contemporary Authors revised volumes and permanent series; Something About the Author, Vols. 1-8; and Contemporary Literary Criticism, Vols. 1-5.

Felkenes, George T. & Harold K. Becker. Law Enforcement: a selected bibliography. 2d ed.

Scarecrow. Feb. 1977. 329p. index. LC 76-50010. ISBN 0-8108-0995-8. $12. 50. LAW ENFORCEMENT/BIBLIOG

Now revised and expanded to incorporate new developments in the field, this bibliography is a "good reference work for patrons of large public and academic libraries, and is indispensable for students of police science" (LJ 2/15/69).

—This highly selective listing was compiled by Robert R. Harris

ART

Botero, Fernando. Botero.

Rizzoli. 1976. unpaged. text. by Klaus Gallwitz. tr. from German by John Gabriel. illus., some color. LC 76-11502. ISBN 0-8478-0045-8. $7.95. ART

This moderately priced, engaging book takes the reader into the strange world of Colombian painter Fernando Botero, whose "inflated images" simultaneously appear naïve and decadent. Whether the subject is portrait or still life, Botero's paintings suggest political and social satire. Botero also pays homage (in a somewhat grotesque way) to several old masters—Rubens, Dürer, Velasquez. The greater part of the book is devoted to the actual paintings, while the text offers some insights into the artist's background, ideas, and technique, concluding with a chronology of his career and a bibliography.—J. R. Bossman, Fort Lewis College Lib., Durango, Colo.

Botticelli, Sandro. The Drawings by Sandro Botticelli for Dante's "Divine Comedy": after the originals in the Berlin Museums and the Vatican.

Harper. 1976. 218p. text by Kenneth Clark. illus., some color. LC 76-5990. ISBN 0-06-010777-4. $55. ART

Botticelli's beautiful drawings are here brought together with selections from Ciardi's translation of Dante and Kenneth Clark's essay and commentary. The essay touches on the history of illustrations for the Divine Comedy as background for Botticelli's own stylistic approach to the poem. The quality of the reproductions is quite high: the intense purity and delicacy of the line is captured in a way that compares well with the oversized but splendid set reproduced by Lippmann in 1887. The extraordinary pleasure of these drawings is in the intimate response they evoke in the reader. They were done in silverpoint only partially inked in, and each one demands the same contemplation as an illuminated manuscript. There are more stunning illustrations to the Divine Comedy, but none so close to its mysticism and lyrical economy. A final comment on the book's single flaw—it is perfect bound, not sewn-in signatures, and this bodes ill for its permanence.—GraceAnne A. DeCandido, N.Y.P.L.

Delvaux, Paul. Paul Delvaux: graphic work.

Rizzoli. 1976. 160p. pref., notes & catalogue by Mira Jacob. illus., some color. LC 76-19193. ISBN 0-8478-0062-8. $65. ART

Delvaux, the Belgian Surrealist painter, took up printmaking during the 1960's when he was nearly 70 years old; this volume represents a catalog of his engravings and lithographs from 1966 to 1975. Jacob's rapturous introductory essay attempts to relate Delvaux's work to the religious content of Romanesque and Gothic art, to Pompeiian landscape, to the ambiguity of Pirandello. "We cannot enter Delvaux's universe," she assures us. That universe consists of the artist's familiar images of figures, largely female and nude, self-absorbed, motionless, in landscapes which often invoke the Renaissance. But where the paintings suggest a conscious irony toward their erotic content, the effect of the rather flat-looking prints—most reproduced first in a black-and-white and then in a colored state—is merely repetitious and finally numbing. The result is an overpriced book, overblown in style and content.—Margot Karp, Pratt Inst. Lib., Brooklyn

Emile-Mâle, Gilberte. The Restorer's Handbook of Easel Painting.

Van Nostrand Reinhold. 1977. 129p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 76-15802. ISBN 0-442-22301-3. $20. ART

The intricacies of the restorer's art cannot be learned from this book alone but the very knowledgeable curator of the French National Museums succeeds in introducing to the art lover, curator, and restoration student the fundamental rules of conservation and restoration of easel painting on canvas and wood. The text is concerned with the basics; the copious footnotes are geared to the specialist. In restoration work as in other scientific disciplines, the most recent research is often the most valuable and the bibliography of international sources, arranged by date of publication rather than by author, reflects this concern. Substantially supplementing the text are 83 black-and-white and color illustrations, several tables, and 26 diagrams. Unfortunately, these are not covered in the sketchy index but since the book lends itself to cover-to-cover reading, the student should profit from them nevertheless. An American complement to this title is Caroline K. Keck's Handbook on the Care of Paintings (Watson-Guptill, 1967), which is less technical and not so scholarly, with a more comprehensive coverage including works of art on paper.—Raissa Fomerand, Librarian, Sleepy Hollow Restorations, Tarrytown, N.Y.

Ernst, Bruno. The Magic Mirror of M. C. Escher.

Random. 1976. 112p. illus., some color. index. LC 75-664. ISBN 0-394-49217-X. $15. ART

This is an authoritative monograph with over 246 illustrations and 15 chapters covering Escher's life, craftsmanship, and fascination with perspective and trompe l'oeil. Escher's remarkable, unique designs have captured the public's fancy to an extent the artist never dreamed of during most of his life. The author, who is trained in mathematics, physics, astronomy, and photography, was a friend to Escher for several years and the artist himself read the manuscript and added a number of observations. The book is well produced, written with authority, and should find a large and eager public in general and art libraries.—William J. Dane, Newark P.L., N.J.

Joyes, Claire. Monet at Giverny.

Two Continents. 1977. 144p. photogs., some color & ed. by Jean-Marie Toulgouat & Rob Gordon. comm. on paintings at Giverny by Andrew Forge. bibliog. LC 76-16720. ISBN 0-8467-0200-0. $16.95. BIOG/ART

Monet first settled at Giverny in 1883.

The region around the town and the extraordinary garden the artist created became vital elements in his definitive and ultimately transcendent version of Impressionism. This handsomely produced volume gathers together contemporary photographs of Monet, his extended family, and the garden. Although the juxtaposition and comparison of photographs of the garden to some good color reproductions of paintings of the same scenes give compelling testimony to Monet's transfiguring capability, much of the family material is merely personal memorabilia. The principal introductory essay is a not particularly valuable description of Monet's life, routine, and rather complex domestic arrangements at Giverny. Forge's short but telling analysis of Monet's art is thoughtful but not sufficient to warrant purchase other than for comprehensive Impressionist collections.—Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, New York

McCabe, Cynthia Jaffee. The Golden Door: artist-immigrants of America, 1876-1976.

pub. for Hirshhorn Museum & Sculpture Garden by Smithsonian Pr. 1976. 432p. intro. by Daniel J. Boorstin. illus., some color. bibliog. LC 76-8827. $22.50. ART

This handsome catalog of the Hirshhorn Museum's Bicentennial exhibition focuses on 67 of the major painters, sculptors, architects, and photographers who settled in America from 1876 to 1976. A profile of each artist highlights his or her experience as an immigrant and its effects on the artist's professional and psychological development; this information was carefully prepared from writings, letters, and interviews with the artist, friends, and family members. Brief biographical data and fine reproductions, many in color, complete the sections on individual artists. Informative essays on the history of immigration in general by Daniel Boorstin and on artistic immigration in particular by McCabe provide general background material. An illustrated 50-page chronology of dates in world history, U.S. immigration, and the fine arts is a shameful waste of paper and should have been omitted. The catalog as a whole, however, is a fascinating portrayal of a little-studied but significant aspect of American art history.—Patricia R. Hausman, Univ. of North Carolina at Greensboro Lib.

Magnusson, Magnus. Hammer of the North.

Putnam. 1976. 128p. color photogs. by Werner Forman. bibliog. index. LC 75-42558. ISBN 0-399-11744-X. $12.95. MYTHOLOGY/ART

Magnusson's work is easily the most handsomely illustrated volume to have appeared thus far on the subject of Viking art and culture. It contains more than 120 expressive color photographs portraying stark northern landscapes, mysterious runic stones, the long ships, sculptured carvings, swords, helmets, and jewelry. Interspersed with the superb color illustrations is a lively text describing Scandinavia's early history, Viking legends and mythology, stories of the Norse gods, Odin, Thor, Frey, Loki, the Valkyries, and Sigurd the Volsung. Never before has the exuberance and vitality of the Viking warrior been so graphically portrayed in illustration. Magnusson, an Icelander by birth and translator of Icelandic sagas, is eminently qualified to introduce us to this often neglected but fascinating chapter in the history of art and culture, bringing to life again a highly sophisticated society with an exciting and vital artistic heritage.—Elizabeth Lindquist-Cock, Dept. of Art History, Massachusetts Coll. of Art, Boston

Petersen, Karen & J. J. Wilson. Women Artists: recognition and reappraisal from the early Middle Ages to the twentieth century.

New York Univ. Pr. 1976. 212p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-23505. ISBN 0-8147-6567-X. $12.50; pap. Harper. LC 75-39543. ISBN 0-06-090387-2. $5.95. ART

This much needed overview of women's art is a welcome indication of growing scholarly interest in the subject. Introductory remarks precede the body of each chapter, which consists of informative biographical sketches of the most important Western artists of the respective chronological period covered. A chapter on women artists of China is especially interesting. There is valuable documentation in the fine bibliography and the notes section; however, the feminist slant and familiar writing style as well as the omission of Heritage in portraiture . . .

Alabama Portraits

PRIOR TO 1870

Over 160 artists, some well known, have captured the likenesses of individuals - prominent and obscure - and here collected to delight librarians, teachers, historians, artists. Each portrait is dated and attributed, present owners named, and a brief personal history of the subject is given. Discover Alabama Portraits. Prior to 1870 as a warm, rich volume, worthy of owning, proudly displaying . . . 420 pages depicting 792 reproductions of portraits by over 160 artists with a complete artists' index.

Mrs. George Doherty Johnston
(Euphradia Poellnitz) 1833-1863

An exciting limited edition, for any library collection, for its appeal to artists, historians, and geneologists.
Available now at $26.00 postage paid.
Alabama's National Society of Colonial Dames of America
Box 76080, Birmingham, Alabama 35223

key data (size, medium, location of each illustrated work, the nationality of the artist) reduce this book to art appreciation rather than solid art history. For collections with an interest in art and women's studies.—Robin Kaplan, Los Angeles County Museum of Art Lib.

Reed, Walt. John Clymer: an artist's rendezvous with the frontier West.

Northland. 1976. 141p. fwd. by Harold McCracken. illus., mainly color. LC 75-11164. ISBN 0-87358-151-2. $40. ART

After a detailed introductory section on Clymer's early artistic evolvement and career as an illustrator, Reed focuses on the artist's second career phase, painting. The fine color reproductions of Clymer's series of narrative paintings vividly reflect his talent for animating the American West with a forceful sense of historical veracity. This is a significant work on an important Western American artist which should be a desirable acquisition to American and general art collections.—Richard Lietz, Graduate Sch of Librarianship, Univ. of Denver

Stock, Joseph Whiting. The Paintings and the Journal of Joseph Whiting Stock.

Wesleyan Univ. Pr. 1976. 180p. ed. by Juliette Tomlinson. checklist comp. by Kate Steinway. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 76-7189. ISBN 0-8195-4098-6. $30. ART

J. W. Stock (1815-1855) was an itinerant New England portrait artist who left a carefully kept journal which accounted for over 900 portraits. Despite partial paralysis, little formal training, and competition from the daguerrotype, Stock was able to support himself through his portrait painting. His 73-page journal and will are here published for the first time, together with a checklist of both his signed works and those attributed to him. There are 96 color and black-and-white full-page illustrations of his works. The editor, director of the Connecticut Valley Historical Museum which owns the journal manuscript, should be commended for this attractive, scholarly publication. It is unfortunate that the steep price may put this work out of the reach of many libraries.—Katharine M. Ratzenberger, Smithsonian Inst. Libs.

Sutherland, Graham. Graham Sutherland.

Abrams. 1976. 41p. + 230 illus., half color. text by Francesco Arcangeli. tr. from Italian by Helen Barolini & H. Joseph Marks. bibliog. LC 75-14028. ISBN 0-8109-0235-4. $37.50. ART

This volume surveys the work of an important contemporary English artist whose nature painting synthesizes elements derived from Blake, Palmer, Picasso, and the Surrealists. In an overly intricate and verbose text, Arcangeli shows that Sutherland's childhood in Wales, his wartime experiences and his constant self-examination are reflected in the caustic quality of his color and style. The exquisite plates demonstrate most effectively that Sutherland's semi-abstract nature paintings are a significant contribution to modern art. The unusual color combinations and the startling forms combine in what Sutherland rightly calls a "whole structure, simple and complex." Recommended for collections on modern art.—John Harvath, Jr., Houston P.L.

Thévoz, Michel. Art Brut.

Skira/Rizzoli. 1976. 179p. fwd. by Jean Dubuffet. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 76-12314. ISBN 0-8478-0046-6. $22.50. PSYCH/ART

Thévoz's "raw art" refers to a variety of artifacts (including sculpture, painting, cartoons, architecture, and other creative objects) produced by eccentrics or psychotic individuals who were indifferent to aesthetic and cultural standards or ignorant of them. This volume groups samples of this art mode into a fascinating array, and considers their import around penetrating social, philosophical, and psychological questions. Thévoz analyzes this art as a medium which reflects back onto society its conceits and imperfections. His book should be read by all serious students of art theory, primarily because these creative products are virtually devoid of the repressive forces that accompany both traditional and avant-garde art forms. Thévoz detects "raw creation" and perhaps the beginnings of genuine liberation in art brut. Since the author chooses to emphasize nonpathological elements in the stream of art brut, his book suffers from no mention of relevant Jungian thought which would have provided a theoretical basis for some of Thévoz' assumptions. The common element in insanity and genius may be the capacity to apprehend data from similar intrapsychic sources.—Robert S. McCully, Dept. of Psychiatry & Behavioral Science, Medical Univ. of South Carolina, Charleston

"A wealth of practical advice on such topics as how to conduct an architectural survey and how to cut through the maze of financial and legal intricacies surrounding preservation . . . a pragmatic, passionate, and persuasive appeal for people to 'recognize beauty in the anonymous buildings in their own communities.' "—American Library Association

LC: 76-9467
Cloth $20 ISBN: 0-394-49692-2
Paper $8.95 ISBN: 0-394-73228-6

AMERICA'S FORGOTTEN ARCHITECTURE
by the National Trust for Historic Preservation

Recommended

Architecture

Banham, Reyner. Megastructure: urban futures of the recent past.

Icon: Harper. 1977. 224p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-12061. ISBN 0-06-430371-3. $20. ARCHITECTURE

A megastructure can be loosely defined as any monumental framework containing a variety of activities and services—in short, a self-contained environment. Banham's volume chronicles the evolution and development of this fascinating, yet elusive, architectural concept, from early prototypes, such as the Ponte Vecchio in Florence, to Paul Rudolph's Lower Manhattan expressway project and Cumbernauld Town Center in England. The author approaches the subject with the right amount of irreverence and erudition, tracing the rise and fall of these "heroic urban visions" and drawing from dozens of examples scattered around the world. Particularly intriguing are the proposed schemes and completed projects which illustrate this study. Like Banham's numerous other books, Megastructure is impeccably presented and highly diverting.—H. Ward Jandl, National Register of Historic Places, Washington, D.C.

Portman, John & Jonathan Barnett. The Architect as Developer.

McGraw. 1976. 198p. illus., some color. index. LC 76-19062. ISBN 0-07-050536-5. $22.95. BUS/ARCHITECTURE

This monograph's first section (by coauthor Barnett) describes the importance of integrating the talents of developers and architects, and explains how creative thinking in both areas has led to Portman's success. The second section (by Portman) discusses his approach and philosophy. Purists will object to the exuberance of Portman's work, amply demonstrated here by the many lavish illustrations. However, I find some of his spaces as exciting as any of Frank Lloyd Wright's. In the third section, there is a how-to guide to real estate development by Barnett, also based on Portman's work, presenting the thesis that a comprehensive understanding of finance, people, design, and logistics are all equally mandatory in the creation of a successful environment.—Rolf Myller, formerly with Sch. of Architecture, Pratt Inst., Brooklyn

Decorative Arts & Crafts

Cameron, Elisabeth & Philippa Lewis. Potters on Pottery.

St. Martin's. 1976. 168p. illus., some color. LC 76-11329. $11.95. CRAFTS

In this series of essays by contemporary British potters, each potter speaks, after a brief introduction, without interruption from the authors. The potters represent a broad spectrum of techniques and philosophies, but each considers the same problems: the relationship between form and function, the economic pressures toward mass production, and the choice between exploring the potential of established forms and experimenting with new designs and concepts. The photos that accompany each statement are attractively presented, although one wishes they had been chosen specifically to illustrate the text rather than as random samples of the speaker's work. The total effect is both impressive and illuminating, and the book would be an excellent addition to extensive subject collections, particularly in academic libraries.—Diane Haas, Howe Lib., Hanover, N.H.

Clark, Garth. Michael Cardew: a portrait.

Kodansha, dist. by Harper. 1976. 228p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 76-9358. ISBN 0-87011-277-5. $25. CRAFTS

Although the layout is extremely tasteful and the subject has a good deal of merit, the overall impact of this book is weak. Clark's writing lacks direction and refinement, and photographs essential to an understanding of the text are unfortunately grouped together at the end of the book. Cardew never quite comes alive for the reader, despite the fact that Clark quotes him extensively in an effort to convey the man's dedication to his art ("... technique outrunning inspiration ... produces not vulgarity but something worse, the ghastly good taste which is a characteristic of our education"). There is, however, a wealth of information for the serious student of the history of pottery, including glaze formulas, descriptions of Cardew's workshops, and an essay by the potter himself. This book might therefore be considered an appropriate addition to extensive subject collections, particularly in academic libraries.—Diane Haas, Howe Lib., Hanover, N.H.

Gutcheon, Beth & Jeffrey Gutcheon. The Quilt Design Workbook.

Rawson Assocs. 1976. 176p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 76-13433. ISBN 0-89256-004-5. $12.95. CRAFTS

The Gutcheons focus on creating patchwork designs based on the traditional geometric shapes borrowed from early American quilts and coverlets. The quilts created and pictured are mostly the work of the authors, although a few other artists' work appears. Naturally, the result of presenting a cross section of other people's work is that a variety of interpretations is presented rather than a single statement. To me, most of the Gutcheons' designs seem busy and use a lot of white, which gives a staccato effect. The first part of the book gives routine instructions and the last part of the book shows some traditional designs and some appliqué projects. All sections are fully illustrated and diagrammed. The new ideas presented here are basically sound, but I don't think they go far enough.—Lois Horowitz, Univ. of California at San Diego Lib.

Horwitz, Elinor Lander. The Bird, the Banner, and Uncle Sam: images of America in folk and popular art.

Lippincott. 1976. 167p. illus., some color. index. LC 76-16492. ISBN 0-397-31690-9. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-397-31691-7. $5.95. HIST/DEC ARTS

Images of America in patriotic folk art represented by such symbols as the bald eagle and Uncle Sam, and heroes like George Washington and John F. Kennedy, are the subject of this book. Horwitz tells how folk artists felt about and represented America from 1652 to 1976 in works of art including paintings, carvings, and needlework. The result is a rather chatty book that will have some appeal as a generalized work on American patriotic art, but the subject is too broad to be definitively covered in a book this size. The illustrations are adequate, but sometimes the lack of clear details is disappointing. Also, "Suggestions for Further Reading" is a poor substitute for bibliographic citations for the sources used in preparation of the book.—Dale Luchsinger, Agnes Scott Coll., Decatur, Ga.

Klamkin, Marian. Made in Occupied Japan: a collector's guide.

Crown. 1976. 184p. photogs., some color by Charles Klamkin. index. LC 76-17007. ISBN 0-517-52660-3. $12.95; pap. ISBN 0-517-52661-1. $6.95. DEC ARTS

The American occupation of Japan (1945-1952) brought with it a large-scale production of generally inexpensive pottery; porcelain; and some glass, metal, and paper items intended for export to the United States. Klamkin's adroitly researched overview surveys the history, marks, and types of items now intensely sought by American collectors. This reasonable introduction supplies efficient background but, like many other introductory studies of collectibles, offers no guidelines for prices. The 38 color plates and more than 500 diverse black-and-white illustrations of marks and pieces generously sprinkled throughout the text will bolster its usefulness by facilitating identification of pieces. Since there is little printed material on these nascent collectibles, this will have to do until a more extensive study comes along.—Gail Jacobson Yaffo, formerly with Columbia-Greene Community Coll. Lib., Hudson, N.Y.

Rosnek, Carl & Joseph Stacey. Skystone and Silver: the collector's book of Southwest Indian Jewelry.

Prentice-Hall. 1976. 166p. photogs., some color. index. LC 76-29060. ISBN 0-13-812834-0. $39.95; until Mar. 1, $35. DEC ARTS

With national interest in American Indian crafts at a peak, this superb book merits more than regional interest. It is a timely and practical compendium relating the history of Indian jewelry and its role in fashion and investment. Yet it goes beyond previous books on the subject in its focus on the special informational needs of the collector—choosing a dealer, appraising turquoise, detecting fakes. Especially useful, although occasionally repetitious, are the "mini-chapters" contributed by 35 experts—traders, collectors, curators, artisans—who provide hard-to-find personal advice and insights. Technically the volume is a work of art in itself, marred by a few typographical errors. The many excellent color and black-and-white photographs complement the text and are well-chosen to

CAN VENICE SURVIVE?
THE DEATH OF VENICE
by Stephen Fay and Phillip Knightley
From public and private donations which have never reached the city they were meant to save to the industrial pollution eroding her foundations, Stephen Fay and Phillip Knightley, special correspondents for the London Sunday Times, "show how an entire metropolis that stands among the most cherished inheritances of the Western world is decaying beyond a last glimmer of hope..."
—Publishers Weekly
A "penetrating exposé, which is at once regretful, accusatory and ironic..."
—Jan Morris, New York Times Book Review
A Frank E. Taylor Book
190 pp. 8 pp. photos, 3 drawings, index LC 75-36861
ISBN 0-275-22920-3 $10.00
PRAEGER PUBLISHERS

convey the spirit and beauty of both traditional and contemporary styles. Most public libraries will want at least a reference copy.—Susan Jones, formerly with Blue Island P.L., Ill.

Rosner, Bernard & Jay Beckerman. Inside the World of Miniatures and Dollhouses.

McKay. 1976. 240p. illus. index. LC 76-16458. ISBN 0-679-50617-9. $17.95; pap. ISBN 0-679-50620-9. $7.95. CRAFTS

The primary purpose of this comprehensive reference book is to introduce the budding collector to suppliers of ready-made dollhouses, accessories, and tools. In addition, the authors also provide descriptions of museum pieces, information on selling one's own creations through shops and shows, and several detailed plans for projects made from scratch. The latter include a table, bench, stone fireplace, and a Williamsburg-style dollhouse. The photographs are for the most part excellent, although details are lost in the small ones. A good reference book containing much information not found elsewhere.—Constance Ashmore Fairchild, Univ. of Illinois Lib., Urbana

Swenson, Evelyn. Victoriana Americana.

Greatlakes Living Pr. 1976. 176p. bibliog. index. LC 76-16736. ISBN 0-915498-31-6. $14.95. DEC ARTS

Beginning very slowly, the volume wanders from its stated purpose to provide a glimpse of Victorian America; it is not until later that we realize these loosely united topics of famous women and fashion magazines and dolls have been synthesized to bring us the main focus—black jet and its uses. Through her presentation, it becomes obvious that Swenson has made a careful study of the material and its various forms. Illustrations are derived from original fashion magazines and store sales catalogs of the day. Reproduced are a wide gamut of jet objects including buttons, brooches, barettes, and more decorative or rare examples such as a jet lampshade trim. A section on cameos provides methods of identifying Victorian pieces from their upstart 20th-century counterparts (or should I say counterfeits?); also provided are numerous illustrations.—Lamia Doumato, Museum of Modern Art Lib., New York

Graphic Arts

Richardson, John Adkins. The Complete Book of Cartooning.

Prentice-Hall. 1976. 266p. illus. index. LC 76-28407. ISBN 0-13-157594-5. $13.95; Spectrum pap. ISBN 0-13-157586-4. $6.95. GRAPHIC ARTS

Serious coverage of the cartooning profession by one who has been there, at least on a moderate scale. Chapters cover drawing, caricature, equipment, publication, etc. The novice is encouraged to seek out fanzines and local publications (after, of course, striking out in the big time). A useful annotated bibliography directs the dedicated, budding cartoonist to texts upon which a would-be career might be built. The fanzine directory needs updating, but a published list is almost always out of date. An adequate introduction to a surprisingly difficult art.—Charles A. Wagner, Peru P.L., Ind.

White, Colin. Edmund Dulac.

Scribners. 1976. 205p. illus., some color. index. LC 76-9562. ISBN 0-684-14791-2. $25. DEC ARTS/GRAPHIC ARTS

Although the emphasis is on book illustration, Dulac's vast proficiency in other media—drawings, caricatures, banknotes, stamps, medallions, and playing cards, to name a few—is amply discussed and shown. Art Deco and related traits of the time appear often in these works based less on realism than on pattern combinations. White's style, visually oriented and interesting, tells what Dulac (1882-1953) and his creative output were all about. The book is well made and laid out: plates and text references are in close proximity; nearly every page has an illustration. The four appendixes are helpful: illustrated presentation of Dulac's signatures; classified list of books that contain Dulac material; public and academic collections of his drawings; his American Weekly covers, 1924-1951. A good introduction to this French-born Englishman and his era. I wish more than 32 plates were in color, since Dulac made such dramatic use of it.—Julia Morrison, New York

William Morris and the Art of the Book.

Pierpont Morgan Lib. and Oxford Univ. Pr. 1976. 254p. essays by Paul Needham & others. illus. LC 76-29207. ISBN 0-19-519910-3. $55. GRAPHIC ARTS

The work of Morris gives a particular and unique pleasure. Various aspects of that work are here viewed afresh. Three complementary essays by Paul Needham, Joseph Dunlap, and John Dreyfus discuss Morris as book collector, calligrapher, and typographer. Needham's catalog, with its numerous plates grouped under those categories, reproduces almost entirely the exhibition mounted by the Morgan Library in the fall of 1976. There are two great strengths to this book. The first is that it presents an intimate look at the father of the Arts & Crafts Movement through the prism of his library and the patterns of his calligraphy and type design. The second is that it lives up to the Morgan's consistently beautiful examples of book production. Produced by the Stinehour Press and the Meriden Gravure Company, the paper, presswork, and illustration are a delight to the eye and hand. This is not a definitive work on Morris, but a scholarly romp through some fine moments in the art of the book.—GraceAnne A. DeCandido, N.Y.P.L.

Photography

Coe, Brian. The Birth of Photography: the story of the formative years, 1800-1900.

Taplinger. Feb. 1977. 144p. photogs. bibliog. index. LC 76-25780. ISBN 0-8008-0796-0. $9.95. PHOTOG

In this modest book, the curator of the Kodak Museum in London tells the story of photography during its first century. The emphasis is put on the technical progress in this field from the original daguerreotype camera to the box cameras used by our grandparents. Each chapter covers one milestone in the development or application of photography, and the text is authoritative but brief. Much more space is occupied by illustrations of equipment and inexpensive reproductions of photographs that show little of the beauty of the photographic medium. Only the last few chapters deal with the social uses of photography that were made possible by these technical advances. The overall result, intended or not, is a somewhat old-fashioned book.—Frank Davidoff, Staff Consultant, CBS TV Network

Disfarmer, Mike (photogs.) & Julia Scully (text). Disfarmer: the Heber Springs Portraits, 1939-1946.

Addison Hse., dist. by Light Impressions. 1976. 135p. LC 76-15886. ISBN 0-89169-003-4. $22.50. PHOTOG

For 45 years Mike Disfarmer was the town photographer in Heber Springs, a small Arkansas community of hard-working farmers, white, Baptist, and inbred. After his death in 1959 his glass plate negatives were salvaged; and this selection of 62 portraits confined to the years of World War II is a beautiful revelation of a time and a people. These are portraits of rural Americans which rank with the work of the Farm Security Administration team coming to an end at that moment. The sense of family, of kinship, of stoical acceptance of harsh poverty is powerful on almost every page. Taken in a studio under north light with only stools and benches as props and bare wallboard for background, the photographs have a direct and moving simplicity that are the resultant of his subjects' character and his own instinct for letting them reveal who they are. One wonders how many other unknown, self-taught artists operated their Main Street studios in small-town America.—Milton Meltzer, New York

Kertész, André. Distortions.

Knopf. 1976. unpaged. ed. by Nicolas Ducrot. intro. by Hilton Kramer. photogs. LC 76-13699. ISBN 0-394-40890-X. $22.50. PHOTOG

It's easy enough to dismiss a magic trick with a glib "it's all done with mirrors," but the sensibility at work here is too complex for such a cavalier reaction. Each image is a photograph of a reflection of a nude female model in a fun house mirror. These photos are in a continuum with the modernist aesthetic which emphasizes distortion of anatomy as an expressive or a formal device. Kramer's essay explores the relationship between this work of the 1930's and painting and sculpture by Picasso, Dali, Moore, and Matisse. The number of images presented is large enough to suggest repetition; and yet, each has a special character of play or celebration or humor. It is perhaps luxurious (but welcome, still) that such a large sampling from this series representing so limited an aspect of Kertész' work has been published when it might otherwise have formed but a footnote to his public career.—Julia Van Haaften, N.Y.P.L.

Kertész, André. Of New York. . . .
Knopf. 1976. 192p. ed. by Nicolas Ducrot. photogs. LC 76-13673. ISBN 0-394-40511-0. $22.50. PHOTOG
For nearly forty years, Hungarian-born Kertész has observed and recorded his adopted city with a humanistic and frequently affectionate eye. His work cuts across the stratifications of urban variety. It is classless in its sympathy. This textless volume presents the photographs handsomely, with careful attention to their associations with one another. That only a date accompanies each reproduction may be a disappointment to some; but the extraordinary geometry of his unpeopled architectural views may compensate for this particular reticence. Most importantly, this is the definitive collection on the New York theme which has played such a large role in Kertész' career.—Julia Van Haaften, N.Y.P.L.

BIOGRAPHY

Abrahamsen, David, M.D. Nixon vs. Nixon: an emotional tragedy.
Farrar. Mar. 1977. index. 288p. LC 76-49827. $10.95. PSYCH/BIOG
Nixon submitted to the psychobiographical scalpel in absentia. Abrahamsen quotes copiously from every relevant source except from the subject himself which casts a dim light on the validity of many of the author's diagnoses. Abrahamsen portrays Nixon as a man warring against himself—a man exerting fanatical control over his latent hostilities and aggressive impulses which were nurtured, in part, by Nixon's being brought up in a family characterized by unceasing anger and misery. Some interesting insights into the contradictory nature of Nixon are provided, such as the author's explanation of Nixon, the ardent anti-Communist, opening up Communist China to the world. This analysis is more temperate than some of the other psychological autopsies of Nixon, but they all suffer from the absence of the key dramatis persona.—Moshe H. Spero, Sch. of Applied Social Sciences, Case Western Reserve Univ., Cleveland

Adams, Henry H. Harry Hopkins: a biography.
Putnam. Feb. 1977. 399p. illus. bibliog. ISBN 0-399-11833-0. $15. HIST/BIOG
This new biography of the powerful behind-the-scenes figure in the Franklin Roosevelt Administration is intended to replace Robert E. Sherwood's Roosevelt and Hopkins, first published in 1948. Although approximately half the length of its predecessor, the new book has more information (it makes use of documents declassified as recently as 1973) and is better balanced, particularly in discussing Hopkins' career prior to the outbreak of World War II. Indeed, the first 140 pages are entirely devoted to Hopkins' role in administrating federal relief programs during the 1930's, most notably the WPA. Assuming a basically positive stance toward Hopkins in dealing with the many controversies surrounding this fascinating and enigmatic character, Adams has done an excellent job of marshaling his sources as well as providing a highly readable narrative. Although there is nothing radically new in interpretation here, this is a solid work and can be generally recommended.—Scott Wright, Coll. of St. Thomas Lib., St. Paul, Minn.

Ayling, Stanley. The Elder Pitt: Earl of Chatham.
McKay. 1976. 478p. photogs. bibliog. index. LC 76-40507. ISBN 0-679-50717-5. $14.95. BIOG
If the aim of the historian is to fuse historical accuracy with literary style, Ayling has achieved that end. Pitt, the "Great Commoner" and architect of many of England's mid-18th-Century imperial policies, has been studied often and with intense political bias. This author, with a 20th-Century interest in personality, has skillfully portrayed the character of politician, leader, and family man. Drawing on research in printed primary and secondary sources, he has used what personal material is available to create the image of a human being with human failings as well as a politician who effectively represented those who felt the lash of arbitrary authority. He differs from the tradition of B. Williams, Lord Rosebery, and J. H. Plumb, in that he is more humane and less politically critical. A sound treatment, with many insights into colonial American problems. Highly recommended.—Dorothy D. Siles, Ithaca Coll. Lib., Ithaca, N.Y.

Busch, Eberhard. Karl Barth: his life from letters and autobiographical texts.
Fortress Pr. 1976. 760p. tr. from German by John Bowden. photogs. maps. index. LC 76-15881. ISBN 0-8006-0485-7. $19.95. REL/BIOG
While we await a critical biography of the Swiss theologian who has dominated 20th-Century Christian thought, we are well served by this effort of his last assistant. Busch has combed the written sources to interweave Barth's own words with author's commentary to approximate the autobiography that Barth started but did not finish. Illustrations and scholarly apparatus abound in a study that well conveys the spirit of the master and his manifold involvements but is perhaps so slavishly detailed as to put off other than serious students. Smaller and more general libraries might be better served by a shorter study by T. H. L. Parker, Karl Barth (LJ 9/15/70), but most will require this one, first published in German in 1975. The publisher has shown commendable alacrity in that this translation is from the second German edition of 1976.—Donald W. Dayton, North Park Theological Seminary Lib., Chicago

Cormier, Frank. LBJ: the way he was.
Doubleday. Mar. 1977. illus. LC 76-18338. ISBN 0-385-04825-4. $8.95. PER NAR/BIOG
Cormier was an Associated Press White House correspondent during the Johnson Administration, so his depiction of LBJ is based largely on personal observations. Various anecdotes about Johnson's actions and conversations

"Noted photographer Brassaï's fascination with the night people of Paris — the 1930's street world of crime, vice, and uninhibited pleasure — led him to record on film the denizens of that 'secret' Paris in their natural environment; accompanied by his recollections, these photographs make up a one-of-a-kind album."
—Booklist (starred review)
150 photographs LC 76-9976
ISBN 0-394-40841-1 $17.95
THE SECRET PARIS OF THE 30's by Brassaï
Recommended

"A Highly Original Work that consists of 29 essays on attitudes towards the U.S. as expressed by foreign visitors . . . a must." Choice
"Concise, vital, and informative . . . hundreds of well-chosen illustrations."
Library Journal
Abroad in America
Visitors to the New Nation 1776-1914
National Portrait Gallery, Smithsonian Institution
368 pp., 184 illus. LC 75-39542
$17.95 hardcover ISBN 0-201-00031-8
$ 7.95 paperback ISBN 0-201-00032-6
ADDISON-WESLEY
Reading, Massachusetts 01867

BIOGRAPHY

are interspersed with excerpts from Cormier's articles and Johnson's public speeches. The quotes are unexpurgated and laced with LBJ's exuberantly scatological and sexual humor. There is little effort by the author to analyze Johnson's complex personality; the reader is left free to provide his own analysis of LBJ's extravagant behavior. Major policy decisions in such areas as the Vietnam War and the War on Poverty are noted chiefly to provide chronological marking points for the author's stream of anecdotes. This is a very superficial study of Lyndon Johnson and "the way he was." It cannot be recommended as an important work in the field.—Jack W. Weigel, Univ. of Michigan Lib., Ann Arbor

Deuel, Leo, ed. Memoirs of Heinrich Schliemann.

Harper. Mar. 1977. 320p. illus. maps. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-06-011106-2. $20. ARCHAEOLOGY/BIOG

Much has already been written about Schliemann, renowned 19th-Century explorer/archaeologist of the site of ancient Troy, but here is a particularly definitive work which is incisive, revealing, and authoritative. Using Schliemann's own writings—letters, diaries, books, articles—Deuel examines the faults and virtues of the man closely and with equanimity. This is a highly readable book despite its profuse documentation.—G. Robert McLean, Univ. of Toledo Libs., Ohio

Hayward, Brooke. Haywire.

Knopf. Mar. 1977. 336p. photogs. LC 76-40989. ISBN 0-394-49325-7. $10. MEMOIR

"Haywire" refers both to the name of agent-producer Leland Hayward's country home and to the craziness his daughter, Brooke, believed possessed all of her family. The book is a memoir of growing up the child of famous show business parents (her mother was actress Margaret Sullivan). Hayward conveys well the social world of her childhood, with its Beverly Hills birthday parties and its transcontinental train journeys. In explaining the psychic unbalancing accompanying family disintegration she is less successful, although her portraits of her parents and her sister are vivid and sometimes penetrating. This book has strong potential popularity, and could be on many public library reserve lists.—Charles Michaud, Brockton P.L. System, Mass.

Lawrence, Louise de Kiriline. Another Winter, Another Spring: a love remembered.

McGraw. 1977. 300p. LC 76-19094. ISBN 0-07-036722-1. $8.95. MEMOIR

An interesting subject (the Russian Revolution) and interesting people (a White Army officer and his Red Cross nurse wife) should combine for an intriguing book, but unfortunately in this instance they do not. Whatever spark of life the book may have is buried under self-conscious and often clumsy writing and page after page of hackneyed writing and trite images. Lawrence says in her preface that her memoir is based on correspondence to her mother 30 years earlier. One is left with the nagging suspicion that if she simply had published her original letters the result would have been fresher and more appealing. Not recommended.—Gail R. Haar, Prosser P.L., Bloomfield, Conn.

Marek, George R. The Bed and the Throne: the life of Isabella d'Este.

Harper. 1976. 263p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-5142. ISBN 0-06-012810-0. $12.50. BIOG

A biography of a strong, admired political and artistic leader who lived during the Italian Renaissance. Though written with zeal (if not grace) and the desire to clarify through Isabella's life "that miraculous age," the book disappoints. En route to his main goal, Marek—not a historian—runs roughshod over subjects like Italy's regional languages, Renaissance religion, courtly society, and women. His sexism jars: e.g., Isabella "the brains" versus her sister "the beauty." Facts are spiced with fantasy, sometimes formulated as futile or foolish rhetorical questions. And the title is tawdry. This said, the book provides many accounts of interesting customs and events, and some portrait reproductions. Good browsing for a general reading room.—Marilyn Schneider, Dept. of French & Italian, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis

Mullen, John. In a Year of Our Lord: a memoir of American innocence.

Arbor House, dist. by Dutton. Mar. 1977. ISBN 0-87795-160-8. $8.95. PER NAR

Now here's a broth of a book. The year referred to in the title is 1912 and, as the author who was nine at the time recalls, it was a time of innocence, personally and historically. Life for a nine-year-old boy of an Irish working-class family in a small town in Pennsylvania centered around family on the one hand and pals on the other. Although much of the year must have been spent in school, selective memory skips over this. Rather it is family drama (Uncle Mike's determination to go to the Alaskan goldfields, Pretty Bess's pursuit of a singing career) counterpointed against the gang's escapades (the pickle factory raid, the sleigh ride in a blizzard, the battle with the Potter Street Pugs). Perhaps memory has enlarged and embroidered some of these events but the author tells them with an appealing mix of sentiment and humor. This pleasant little trip down memory lane suggests that it's not just blarney to call that era the "good old days."—Mary J. Mayer, New York City Dept. for the Aging

Powell, William S. John Pory, 1572-1636: the life and letters of a man of many parts.

Univ. of North Carolina Pr. Feb. 1977. 192p. illus. index. microfiche supplement. LC 75-45074. ISBN 0-8078-1270-6. $16.95. HIST/BIOG

This work is a splendid example of how a researcher's enterprise and ingenuity can simultaneously rescue a neglected figure from obscurity and shed light on the milieu in which he moved. John Pory's remarkable career combined noteworthy achievements in such diverse fields as exploration, diplomacy, history, and newsletter writing. As speaker of the first Legislative Assembly in Virginia and secretary to the colony's first governor he is important in American history; his history of Africa was long a standard; and his newsletters are a mine of information on early 17th-Century Europe. Pory was truly a man for all seasons, and in Powell he has found a skillful and sympathetic biographer. This work, readable, urbane, and consistently of a high scholarly standard, belongs in all academic libraries. The microfiche supplement, incorporating upwards of 100 of Pory's letters and other minor writings, is a development in biography which hopefully will be widely emulated.—James A. Casada, Dept. of History, Winthrop Coll., Rock Hill, S.C.

Quennell, Peter. The Marble Foot: an autobiography, 1905-1938.

Viking. Mar. 1977. 256p. index. ISBN 0-670-45473-7. $10.95. LIT/AUTOBIOG

Quennell's prose is much influenced by

PRICE CHANGES. The following are the correct prices of Barnes & Noble titles reviewed in the February 1 issue of LJ: E. A. J. Honigmann's Shakespeare: seven tragedies, $19.50; Holger Klein's The First World War in Fiction, $18.50; Desmond Seward's The Bourbon Kings of France, $16.50.

Objective study of a controversial scientist

Nisbett, Alec. Konrad Lorenz.

Helen & Kurt Wolff: HBJ. Feb. 1977. 288p. photogs. bibliog. index. LC 76-29116. ISBN 0-15-147286-6. $10. SCI/BIOG

This careful, honest biography of Lorenz by a British science writer illumines not only the origins, education, and development of this noted scientist, but lets us follow the development of the science of ethology itself. Trained in medicine, Lorenz left conventional Austrian academic pathways to pursue his independent studies of animal life. His approach was so radical that it was not until he was recognized internationally for his work that the scientific establishment of postwar Germany provided a place for him. Lorenz is perhaps best known to the public for his theories on human behavior (set forth in his book, On Aggression, LJ 6/15/66), which follow from his emphasis on instinct as the basis for animal behavior patterns. His theories have always sparked controversy, beginning with papers published during World War II, which were interpreted by some behavioral scientists as favoring Nazi racist philosophy. Nisbett's biography does not gloss over these controversies, but puts them in their proper historical perspective. The book is clearly written, easy to follow even for the nonscientist, and an excellent study of a fascinating subject.—Eleanor Maass, Swarthmore Coll. Lib., Pa.

the French symbolist poets; yet it is simple and rarely exquisite. Whether writing of himself or of such friends as Evelyn Waugh or Graham Green, Quennell is hardly ever profound as a thinker. He seeks to present sensations, attitudes, and atmospheres; and the result is a rather standard autobiography, gracefully written, neither boring nor especially illuminating, and certainly not adventuresome as regards technique. His best writing is in his descriptions of Japanese and Chinese people and of landscapes, which he catches with elegance and precision. For academic libraries.—John R. Marvin, Dept. of English, Univ. of Massachusetts, Boston

Raine, Kathleen. Farewell Happy Fields: memories of childhood.

Braziller. Mar. 1977. 173p. $7.95. LIT/MEMOIR

In an attempt to understand her genesis as a poet, Raine stirs up childhood memories and adolescent yearnings in a brief impressionistic narrative first published in England a decade ago. It has many drawbacks for the reader. Raine's reminiscences are heavily imbued with symbol and myth, metaphysics and philosophy; at times her sentences are complex, convoluted, and repetitious. Although her mystical and visionary qualities are highly regarded in her poetry, they make for labored prose. Probably the most successful portions of the book are those that reveal her intense love of the Scottish border country where she was raised. A book that only ardent admirers of Raine's poetry will appreciate.—Marsha H. Murphy, VA Hospital Lib., Northampton, Mass.

BUSINESS & ECONOMICS

Amin, Samir. Unequal Development: an essay on the social formations of peripheral capitalism.

Monthly Review. 1977. 416p. bibliog. index. LC 75-15364. ISBN 0-85345-380-2. $17.50.

Kamarck, Andrew M. The Tropics and Economic Development: a provocative inquiry into the poverty of nations.

Johns Hopkins. 1977. 128p. maps. bibliog. index. $7.50; pap. $3. INT AFFAIRS/ECON

Does the present economic system provide for the eventual development of the majority of the world's people, or are there internal constraints which preclude a more equitable distribution of economic production and wealth? This is the major question to which these two books are addressed. Amin, in a scholarly and provocative analysis, attacks the basic concept of cooperative efforts aimed at developing poor areas. He argues that the assistance provided by the advanced capitalist countries does not, in fact, foster independence and progress. Rather, it strengthens and perpetuates the present relationship of dominance and dependence between rich and poor nations. Amin offers a Marxian analysis of the underlying reasons for the inequalities of international development, concluding that only through fundamental structural change in the world economic order will the underdeveloped countries be able to end their domination by the industrialized world.

In contrast, Kamarck's work is both limited in vision and disappointing in its conclusions. He rejects as divisive those theories of development which focus on an analysis of exploitation and confrontation between rich and poor. Instead, he views increased cooperation as the essential ingredient for the eventual progress of the underdeveloped and the continued prosperity of the industrialized countries. Kamarck advances the hypothesis that it is the restrictive nature of tropical climates as compared to those of temperate areas that has caused such a large portion of the earth's surface to suffer from lagged development. An interesting theory—though it is somewhat doubtful in the light of past developmental "revolutions."—Steven Wecker, Lehman Coll. Lib., CUNY

Copp, E. Anthony. Regulating Competition in Oil: government intervention in the U.S. refining industry, 1948-1975.

Texas A&M Univ. Pr. 1976. 280p. bibliog. index. LC 76-19795. ISBN 0-89096-014-3. $14.50. ECON/BUS

Among the current spate of works on the energy crisis, this is perhaps the first to focus on the refining end of the oil industry. It does so with mixed success. It is at its best in examining government efforts to reconcile competition with national security interests and in assessing the influence of oil import, natural gas, and prorationing policies on the energy situation. Less successful is the chapter on OPEC's impact on the industry regulation, which adds nothing to common knowledge in the field. The balance, however, is favorable. In treating the central subject, the text is excellent, and there are numerous charts and a good bibliography. Recommended for libraries seeking depth as well as breadth in their holdings on energy matters.—Joseph R. Rudolph, Jr., Dept. of Political Science, Univ. of Tulsa, Okla.

Deutch, Howard E. High Profits Without Risk: how you can earn more than 50% on your investment with absolute safety.

Jefren Pub. Co., 1216 Holy Cross, Monroeville, Pa. 15146. 1977. 223p. index. LC 76-19925. ISBN 0-917244-01-X. $12.95.

Stigum, Marcia L. How To Turn Your Money into More Money Quickly and Safely.

Dow Jones-Irwin. 1976. 368p. index. LC 76-24281. ISBN 0-87094-119-4. $10.95 BUS

Both of these books are on investing but from two very different points of view. Deutch recommends the purchase of uncirculated coins, but he does not seem to appreciate the problems in storing rolls of coins for 20-30 years and the difficulties in moving such a clumsy and heavy investment. The second half of the work is devoted to charts on the wholesale and retail values of rolls and individual coins today, but Deutch does not consider the likely effect of a large increase in the number of coin collectors. In con-

"Both entertaining and informative"
—The Booklist

Gilbert & Sullivan
AND THEIR VICTORIAN WORLD

By CHRISTOPHER HIBBERT

"With affection and understanding, Hibbert portrays Gilbert and Sullivan and their teamwork against the background of the Victorian period....The illustrations ranging from black-and-white sketches through colored trade cards and splendid reproductions of contemporary scenes and memorabilia from several countries are alone worth the price of the book. The reader ...will also discover a surprising amount of new material and insights."—Library Journal. Bibliog. Index. 8½" x 11". 28 full-color plates; 300 monochromes. AN AMERICAN HERITAGE BOOK.
SBN: 399-11830-6. YA. $24.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

LIPPINCOTT

Tough and affecting."—New York Times Book Review
Noteworthy Titles

FIRST, YOU CRY
Betty Rollin

"A personal and compelling report on her bout with breast cancer. Honest emotion and a good deal of humor. What this operation meant to her life, her marriage and her point of view are all spelled out . . . sensitive and inspiring."—Publishers Weekly. "Heart wrenching . . ." Kirkus Reviews. "Engrossing and moving . . . appropriate for public and patient libraries." Library Journal.
LC 76-1604
ISBN 0-397-01167-9 $7.95

J B Lippincott Company
East Washington Square
Philadelphia, Pa 19105

trast to Deutch's speculative method. Stigum's is a very conservative approach to investing in money market instruments and bonds, both corporate and government. The result is a thorough discussion on a sound economic base on the means of reducing risk while trying to beat inflation and maintain adequate liquidity. Well worth the money if you have a demand for works on this subject. Both books offer discussions in greater detail than is found in most other investment volumes.—Susan A. Singer, Tucson P.L., Ariz.

Fosback, Norman G. Stock Market Logic: a sophisticated approach to profits on Wall Street.

Inst. for Econometric Research, 3471 No. Federal Hwy., Fort Lauderdale, Fla. 33306. 1976. 370p. bibliog. index. LC 76-028826. ISBN 0-917604-48-2. $30. BUS

Fosback's premise is that the development of "sophisticated and rational" investment approaches will lead to increased profits. The emphasis is on econometrics, but other techniques and strategies are also explored. The work has a very brief index but there is an in-depth table of contents, as well as well-organized and appropriate tables and charts. However, the selected references contain only one citation to a book or journal article published since 1973, and in the author's list of the ten best stock market books ever written, half of the works are more than 17 years old (two are from the 1800's) and no criteria for inclusion are provided. Given its excessive price and the financial sophistication required to implement the methods it advocates, this book is only for highly specialized collections.—MaryKay W. Schnare, Dutchess Community Coll. Lib., Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

Hannah, Leslie. The Rise of the Corporate Economy: the British experience.

Johns Hopkins. 1976. 243p. fwd. by Alfred D. Chandler Jr. bibliog. index. LC 76-17228. ISBN 0-8018-1894-X. $15. HIST/ECON

It is refreshing, for a change, to read a book on the British economy which does not expound on the declining exchange value of the pound, rampant inflation, rising unemployment, imminent insolvency, etc. etc. We have instead a serene treatise on the development of industrial concentration from 1880 through 1973 in which Hannah demonstrates that large manufacturing corporate enterprises arose primarily from mergers rather than internal growth. By using sophisticated statistical analysis, he pinpoints two major periods of intense merger activity—the 1920's and the 1960's—and he describes in some detail the significant factors which seemed to determine the dimensions and directions of these merger waves: economies of scale, the search for monopoly, managerial techniques, technical innovations, international competitive pressure, the stock market, and government policies toward industry. Hannah's style is readable enough; the bibliography and index are more than adequate. Recommended for all large libraries.—Ted Samore, Sch. of Library Science, Univ. of Wisconsin, Milwaukee

Johnston, R. J. The World Trade System: some enquiries into its spatial structure.

St. Martin's. 1976. 208p. index. LC 76-6744. $18.95. ECON

The function of space or location in determining the dynamics of social systems has been a significant branch of the "quantitative revolution" that has swept the social sciences in recent years. In this study, Johnston applies the empirical methodology of spatial analysis to international trade and finds that although alterations of locational variables in world trade could serve to ameliorate some existing international inequalities, it will require a radical displacement of international capitalism to achieve fundamental improvement. Though the conclusions reached by Johnston are not unexpected, the geographic perspective provided by his analysis should be of interest to advanced students of international economics. Recommended.—Steven Wecker, Lehman Coll. Lib., CUNY

Klein, Howard J. Other People's Business: a primer on management consultants.

Mason/Charter. Feb. 1977. 200p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-88405-377-6. $8.95. BUS

Klein's introduction to consulting, although brief, covers a good deal of ground. Beginning with the development of modern consulting by F. W. Taylor and Frank Gilbreth—and continuing through to McKinsey & Co.; Cresap, McCormick & Paget; Booz, Allen & Hamilton; the Diebold Group; and Peter Drucker—he discusses how consultants work, how to and how not to choose and use them, and who is really a consultant and who is not. Klein also points out problems such as the need for the profession to regulate itself, set goals, improve its image, and share its expertise with those who need it as well as with those who can pay for it. The information and observation in this primer should be of interest to most business collections.—Elin Christianson, Lib. Consultant, Hobart, Ind.

Little, Anthony J. Deceleration in the Eighteenth-Century British Economy.

Rowman & Littlefield. 1976. 111p. bibliog. index. $13.50. HIST/ECON

This small, crisp volume argues that British economic growth stagnated between 1725 and 1750. Thus this period constituted a pause between the strong expansion beginning in 1660 and continuing with the upsurge of the industrial revolution. During this pause, low food prices hindered rather than aided expansion, because the additional purchasing power generated for the poor was not expended on manufactures. A check in population growth caused a further weakening of demand. The author shows evidence of low profits and slow innovation in several industries in spite of available technology and historically low interest rates, conditions which he interprets as a sign of general economic uncertainty. His evidence comes from the writings of many economic historians who have already investigated this period, not from any new discoveries of data. The result is the sharpening of an argument of interest mostly to specialists; but it is also a useful review of the subject for the uninitiated.—Robert J. Gibbons, Dept. of History, St. Joseph's Coll., Philadelphia

MacBean, Alasdair I. & V. N. Balasubramanyam. Meeting the Third World Challenge.

St. Martin's. 1976. 272p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-16702. $17.95. INT AFFAIRS/ECON

Since the Third World countries first joined together in the United Nations several years ago to demand a new international economic order there has been a rush of publications on the topic, ranging from the scholarly to the emotional and threatening. This book lies firmly in the first category. The major goal for the Third World, according to the authors, should be to combine economic growth with an equitable distribution of the benefits. It is clear they support the objectives of the less developed countries but quarrel with some of the suggested means to achieve them. First, looking at the main economic factors (industrialization, technology, aid, trade, foreign private investment) the authors show how these factors have historically favored the developed countries. Then, they present a positive prescription for the use of these same elements to lessen international economic disparities. This well-reasoned approach to the challenge of the Third World is recommended for college and university libraries.—Carol Holbrook, Univ. of Michigan Lib., Ann Arbor

Skousen, Mark. Playing the Price Controls Game.

Arlington House. Mar. 1977. 260p. illus. index. LC 76-48292. $9.95. BUS/ECON

This is a combination history-theory-handbook of price controls, apparently written to sway the reader against controls. Unfortunately, however, the book will probably persuade very few (though those who already agree will find a familiar litany). Historians will find the evidence scanty and largely without source citations; economists will be troubled by the oversimplifications; those seeking the practical advice promised by the book will be the most frustrated, as they will find little more than exhortations to buy hard goods before they become scarce. Many people of various ideological persuasions in business and academe would agree with Skousen's contention that price controls are essentially ineffective and operate much like a hidden tax system. His book adds little or nothing to the discussion, however, and would only be useful to those wishing an example of the most conservative point of view.—Robert J. Caswell, Dept. of Economics, Ohio State Univ., Columbus

Thomas, Dana L. Lords of the Land: the triumphs and scandals of America's real estate barons—from early times to the present.

Putnam. 1977. 306p. ISBN 0-399-11641-9. $10. HIST/BUS

Some of the stories in this history of land speculation in the U.S. from the colonial period to the present have been told before (such as the Florida land boom of the 1920's), but Thomas' version is one of the most intersting. A common theme running through all of these stories is that while it is very possible to make a fortune speculating in land and construction, it is just as possible to overextend and lose your shirt. In fact, most of the tycoons described here did wind up relatively poor. Recommended for all public libraries.—Wayne D. Kryszak, District of Columbia P.L.

Uris, Auren & Jack Tarrant. The Victory Principle: how to edge your way into success.

Mason/Charter. 1977. 128p. ISBN 0-88405-388-1. $7.95. BUS

The achievement of success results from good luck, intelligence, and hard work. Endless numbers of books dealing with combinations and permutations of these factors have been written, many of them in the past year. Presented in an irritatingly simplistic style, The Victory Principle adds nothing to this genre. Not recommended.—Mary Chatfield, Harvard Business Sch. Lib.

West, Robert Craig. Banking Reform and the Federal Reserve, 1863-1923.

Cornell Univ. Pr. Mar. 1977. 272p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-8014-1035-5. $14.50. HIST/ECON

The banking reform movement after the Civil War focused on the organization of the banking system and on the kind of policy which would allow currency to expand. By the time of the Federal Reserve Act, there was a commitment to a decentralized system with the reserve banks having a passive role as lender of last resort. West feels that most writers evaluate the early years of the Federal Reserve System in light of present knowledge of central banking, with the assumption that the Federal Reserve was locked into the organizational and policy structure as conceived of and written into the Act. He sees a movement of the System from a passive to a more active role as an institution of economic control and concludes that a better understanding of this change may lead to a reinterpretation of Federal Reserve actions, especially during the crisis of 1933. This well-researched and extensively documented book will be an important addition to most academic and special libraries.—Jean Deuss, Federal Reserve Bank of New York Lib.

Yoshino, M. Y. Japan's Multinational Enterprises.

Harvard Univ. Pr. 1977. 191p. index. LC 76-26602. ISBN 0-674-47259-4. $12.50. HIST/BUS

Yoshino sets out to understand the process by which Japanese enterprises evolved their multinational strategies, to pinpoint the resulting structural changes, and to compare the behavior of multinational corporations based in Japan and elsewhere. What emerges is an often superficial review of the postwar international operations of Japanese petroleum, manufacturing, and trading companies: there is no sustained treatment of the behavior of Japanese firms in foreign countries, no systematic comparison of Japanese and foreign-based multinational enterprises, little reference to the extensive literature on trading companies and Japanese managerial practices, and no conclusion. Most amazing is Yoshino's total neglect of the prewar phase of Japanese multinational corporate expansion, which witnessed extensive mining and manufacturing efforts in China, Manchuria, and Korea—moves which certainly influenced subsequent developments.—Thomas G. Rawski, Dept. of Political Economy, Univ. of Toronto, Canada

communications

Bernard, George. Inside the National Enquirer . . .: confessions of an undercover reporter.

Ashley Bks. 1976. 354p. photogs. by Ron Galella. LC 76-44613. ISBN 0-87949-089-6. $7.95. COMM

The author of this book thinks himself to be a more fascinating subject than any of the celebrities he purports to have interviewed during his career as a reporter. In every chapter, Bernard—who claims to have worked for the famed National Enquirer for five years in the Sixties during its blood-and-gore days—lauds his own resourcefulness as a digger of dirt. He says he is proud of the schemes he employed and the lies he told in order to get the bold headline and the screaming story for the Enquirer. His "inside" story is strewn with pseudosensational statements that suggest that one would be wise to read the book as one would read the Enquirer—with extreme skepticism.—Cable Neuhaus, Sch. of Journalism, Pennsylvania State Univ., Wilkes-Barre

Griffin, Dick & Rob Warden, ed. & intro. Done in a Day: 100 years of great writing from the Chicago Daily News.

Swallow. 1977. 473p. index. LC 76-46675. ISBN 0-8040-0755-1. $15; pap. $7.95. COMM

This celebration of the 100th anniversary of the Chicago Daily News contains articles selected from its pages "to demonstrate fine newspaper writing." Indeed, many famous reporters and novelists are represented—Ben Hecht, George Ade, Carl Sandburg, and Eugene Field, to name a few. There are brief biographical notes on the contributors, and the subject arrangement of articles is appropriate. However, there is nothing to be gained from this anthology that would not also be found in virtually any retrospective search of a major newspaper. The book may demonstrate fine newspaper writing, but it is of no special value to libraries on tight budgets. For journalism collections.—Susan Spak, Hobart & Wm. Smith Colls. Lib., Geneva, N.Y.

Johnstone, John W. C. & others. The News People: a sociological portrait of American journalists and their work.

Univ. of Illinois Pr. 1976. 257p. bibliog. index. LC 76-14890. ISBN 0-252-00310-1. $9.95. SOC SCI/COMM

Three sociologists have studied the U.S. press as an occupational group, encompassing the entire population from star reporter to copy boy. Data were derived from a 1971 questionnaire survey of 1400 representative news people. Such social characteristics as job satisfaction and mobility, status, pay, educational background, and sex and racial composition are analyzed, both in the text and in the many appended tables. The results, while hardly profound, will be useful to the profession (teachers, industry executives, etc.) as well as interesting to lay observers. Be aware, however, that the style is self-consciously "sober and academic"; this is a scientific, not sensational, study.—Kenneth F. Kister, Tampa, Fla.

EDUCATION

Kaufmann, Walter. The Future of the Humanities.

Reader's Digest Pr., dist. by Crowell. Feb. 1977. 224p. index. ISBN 0-88349-120-6. $8.95. ED

This is a work for a thoughtful reader, a philosopher's analysis—sometimes querulous, occasionally didactic, but always challenging—of the alarming state of the humanities and what can be done about it. His solutions sound conventional enough in summary: emphasis on the disciplines of thinking and reading, teaching and learning, vigorous study of goals and alternatives, and interdisciplinary courses. What makes Kaufmann's remedy different from many is the assumption that students must know something about a subject before discussing it and his conviction that study of the humanities can best give students a sense of vision.—Joe W. Kraus, Illinois State Univ. Lib., Normal

Wagner, Geoffrey. The End of Education.

A. S. Barnes. 1976. 252p. LC 75-5172. ISBN 0-498-01750-8. $8.95. ED

Looking most specifically at CUNY, Wagner denounces shrilly almost every kind of innovation brought about in higher education by the 1960's disruptions. His critique of damages and injustices done higher education and students by subverting the curriculum

HOW TO TURN YOUR MONEY INTO MORE MONEY
Quickly and Safely
by Marcia Stigum
This book, the result of much original research, is intended for the general reader having no special knowledge of economics or finance, and for the small investor who would like to know more about debt-type securities. Covers bank savings and time deposits; government savings bonds, treasury notes, bonds and bills; money market funds; state and municipal securities; corporate bonds; credit unions; and much more.
$11.95
Dow Jones-Irwin
1818 Ridge Road, Homewood, Ill. 60430

"A presentation that lends dimension to the often-maligned Viking people." —The Booklist

Hammer of the North

MYTHS AND HEROES OF THE VIKING AGE

By MAGNUS MAGNUSSON & WERNER FORMAN. "The first part of the book is a brief history of Scandinavia from ancient times to the arrival of Christianity....The second part concerns Norse mythology ...and explains how the Viking character is reflected in their religious beliefs....A well-balanced addition to collections."—School Library Journal. "Forman's color plates (from stunning Scandinavian landscapes through Viking artifacts) rank in quality with Magnusson's detailed revisionist study."—Publishers Weekly. Bibliog. Index. 9" x 11¾". 130 full-color plates.
SBN: 399-11744-X. YA. $12.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

"highly recommended"*

THE CALIFORNIA GOLD RUSH

by GORDON V. AXON

The story of the social revolution brought on by man's quest for gold—and of the freedom, equality and opportunity that California epitomized.

0-88405-367-9/$6.95

* "... For both school and public libraries."
—Library Journal

MASON / CHARTER

to politics and student whims, open admissions, grade inflation, HEW, and affirmative action is sound. However, the satire used for emphasis detracts greatly and reveals only a very bitter college professor. His most interesting reflections concern the redefinition of humanities and social sciences curricula juxtaposed to the steadfastness of science and engineering curricula, and the death wish that seems to exist among academic liberals. Despite the strident tone, his book has value for general and special collections.—Susan M. Allen, Associate Editor, "College Student Personnel Abstracts," Claremont, Calif.

HISTORY

Adams, Russell B., Jr. The Boston Money Tree.

Crowell. Mar. 1977. 320p. bibliog. index. LC 76-27338. ISBN 0-690-01209-8. $11.95. BUS/HIST

This is a history of Boston's economy, showing how its people, especially the more successful ones, adapted to the geography and vicissitudes of the city. Beginning with the mills of Lawrence and Lowell, and continuing on to the China trade, the railroad years, and the computer industry on Route 128, Adams presents a saga of how money was invested and made, often on a margin. The names of the people included read like a register of the wealthy in the East. Here one discovers for whom that square, street, or alley in the Hub is named. Despite many grammatical errors, this is a highly readable book that should be in public and junior college libraries that have collections on New England and the history of American finance.—Scott R. Johnson, Coastal Carolina Coll. of the Univ. of South Carolina, Conway

Bak, Janos, ed. The German Peasant War of 1525.

Internat. Scholarly Bk. Servs. (Lib. of Peasant Studies, No. 3). 1976. 135p. bibliog. $15. HIST

The literature in English on the Peasant War, a major event in the history of the Reformation, is slim indeed. It was probably for this reason that the editors of The Journal of Peasant Studies decided to publish their special issue on the subject as an independent volume. As is usual with collections of scholarly articles, the contents are varied in type and quality, including translations of documents, reprints of propaganda woodcuts, a discussion of earlier uprisings, and a summary of some recent work on the ideology of the peasant movement. The most substantial pieces are two discussions of what might be called the micro-politics of the Peasant Wars, one by Peter Blickle, the other by David Savean. The work ends with a round-table discussion of Friedrich Engels' Peasant War in Germany; participants include one East German historian, one West German, and three students of 20th-Century peasant politics. Obviously for specialists, the collection has the advantage of bringing to the attention of an English-speaking audience the work recently done on this subject in Germany.—Fredric Cheyette, Dept. of History, Amherst Coll., Mass.

Bragg, Melvyn. Speak for England.

Knopf. Feb. 1977. 512p. photogs. ISBN 0-394-40855-1. $15. SOC SCI/HIST

Through the "human history" of his own town, based on interviews with inhabitants, novelist Bragg seeks to discover and convey something of England's recent past. The residents of Wigton, Cumberland, a medium-sized and economically diversified community, can pass as a representative sample of Britishers. Selected from all age groups, the people interviewed are neither Dickensian "characters" nor painfully pedestrian. Though wording remains intact, the interviews are placed in a chronological and topical framework. So organized, they colorfully document and illustrate the author's own enjoyable commentary, instead of "speaking for themselves." But there are weaknesses. A personal effort, the book sometimes slips into the nostalgic; as history, it is too subjective. And the interviews, unaided by gesture, voice, or setting, cannot help occasionally going flat and verbose. Useful biographical profiles, statistics, and maps are appended. For comprehensive collections and ardent Anglophiles.—Christine Roysdon, Lehigh Univ. Lib., Bethlehem, Pa.

Carroll, John Alexander & Odie B. Faulk. Home of the Brave: a patriot's guide to American history.

Arlington House. 1977. 416p. illus. index. LC 76-28482. ISBN 0-87000-257-0. $12.95. HIST

This "popular" history of the U.S. from colonization to Gerald Ford is intended to celebrate and encourage pride in our nation's heritage. For "patriot" read conservative: this account does not pretend to impartiality. Robert Taft and Douglas MacArthur are heroes; Franklin Roosevelt and John Kennedy are villains. The earlier sections read like a lighter version of a high school textbook of a generation or two ago; the latter half attacks with gusto to such predictable targets as the New Deal, the "academic jackals" who were Kennedy's appointees, the anti-war movement, and environmentalists. The book, unfortunately, is printed on lightweight paper that lets both print and illustrations show through, to the detriment of both. Overall, it's a readable treatment that might be enjoyed by those of like persuasion, but a balanced presentation it isn't.—Nancy C. Cridland, Indiana Univ. Libs., Bloomington Cartwright, Joseph H. The Triumph of Jim Crow: Tennessee race relations in the 1880's.

Univ. of Tennessee Pr. 1976. 286p. maps. bibliog. index. LC 76-2009. ISBN 0-87049-192-X. $13.95. SOC SCI/HIST

Cartwright has produced an excellent and detailed study of the social, economic, and political conditions which influenced black/white relationships in Tennessee. Although the decade began with interracial tolerance, by the end of the 10 years, fear and hostility had produced complete separation. Cartwright documents many reasons for this change, including the blacks' refusal to accept voting without any political influence, white fear of urban black voting, and a change in attitude by the white conservatives. The last was especially important (and pointing this out is perhaps Cartwright's major contribution) in producing the separate but equal doctrine. The book is based on solid scholarship, is well written, and is bound to take its place next to the volumes by Vernon L. Wharton, George B. Tindall, Rayford Logan, and the other definitive writers on blacks in Southern states during and after Reconstruction.—William Schenck, Univ. of North Carolina Lib., Chapel Hill

Cornell, James. The Great International Disaster Book.

Scribners. 1976. 382p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-20752. ISBN 0-684-14780-7. $12.50. REF/HIST Cornell's volume covers both natural and man-made disasters. Coverage is alphabetical by type of disaster and varies in length from several pages to a paragraph or two. Although early chapters examine disaster prediction and disasters' effect on society, the book's real value lies in the comprehensive catalog it provides on a wide variety of disasters. Fires, hurricanes, pestilence, earthquakes, and plane crashes are some of the categories included. In each case property and life loss are calculated and a top ten is listed for each category. Cornell is occasionally too cheerful about his subject, but his book makes nevertheless for compelling reading.—Saul J. Amdursky, Albion P.L., Mich.

Detzer, David. Thunder of the Captains: the short summer of 1950.

Crowell. Mar. 1977. 300p. photogs. bibliog. index. LC 76-25472. ISBN 0-690-01202-0. $9.95. HIST

This is a chronicle of the 12 days that determined what was to be the role of the U.S. in the Korean conflict. The work is personal, in that the characters and events generally are allowed to speak for themselves, with the author giving a minimum of interpretation; it is human, because the flow of national and international events is subordinate to the individual vantage points of those persons whom the author has chosen to tell his story; and it is nondeterministic, in that individual actions take precedence over general political, economic, or social theories of government and international relations. The weakness of a work of this relatively short length is that each of the many persons portrayed cannot be given full, fair treatment. Thus, the reader is left with his or her curiosity aroused and prey to misconceptions, since far too many questions are left unanswered.—Robin J. Masters, Placentia Lib. District, Calif.

Dupuy, R. Ernest & others. The American Revolution: a global war.

McKay. Mar. 1977. 274p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-679-50648-9. $11.95. HIST

The subtitle of this military history of the American Revolution is the key to

Spring 77 Temple University Press

THE HARLEM RIOT OF 1943
Dominic J. Capeci
The first book-length report on the racial explosion that shattered Harlem in early August of 1943 places in historical perspective a key event in American black/white relations. Revealing the shortcomings of federal and urban policies, it sheds new light on Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., and indicts President Roosevelt for his attitudes and actions. This major study presents disquieting insights into the still-unsolved racial crisis in America's cities.
236 pp. June About $10.00 ISBN 094-8

THE GUERILLA READER
A Historical Anthology
Edited by Walter Laqueur
In the eighteenth century, basic changes in the waging of war prompted the first theoretical discussions of the subject. This anthology by a leading scholar ranges from von Clausewitz's pioneering treatise, On War, to the contemporary writings of Lin Piao, Regis Debray, and others. Making available in English translation major contributions by Carlo Bianco and others, Dr. Laqueur identifies and discusses five historical periods of guerilla activity, and, most important, provides a framework for gauging future developments.
356 pp. February About $10.00 ISBN 095-6

CHANGING ROLES IN SOCIAL WORK PRACTICE
Edited by Francine Sobey
Virtually every social work specialty has undergone transformation in recent years, resulting in vastly more complex career opportunities. Essays by leaders in child welfare, mental health, abortion and alcoholism counseling deal with roles and problems encountered in real work settings. The editor's introduction and headnotes provide a theoretical framework for understanding the trends emerging in the field.
300 pp. June $12.50 cl. ISBN 092-1
$ 6.95 p.a. ISBN 096-4

Previously announced

BROADCASTING IN ASIA AND THE PACIFIC
Edited by John A. Lent
Thirty-five internationally known scholars and practitioners examine the structure, development, ownership, programming, audiences, facilities, and financing of radio, television, and wired services in 44 Asian countries. Comprehensive bibliography of 600 sources.
440 pp. May $25.00 ISBN 068-9

TO MOVE, TO LEARN
Kate Witkin and Richard Philp, with photographs by Ricker Winsor
Growing numbers of educators now recognize the importance of movement in the learning process. Through 100 charming and illuminating photographs, this book shows how any teacher or parent can make the child's educational experience a rewarding adventure. No special training is needed to work with this child-tested sequence of exercises that ranges from finger movements to whole-body configurations. It has proved effective with normal and learning-disabled youngers of many different ages.
212 pp. June About $10.00 ISBN 091-3

IMMIGRANTS AND RELIGION IN URBAN AMERICA
Edited by Randall M. Miller and Thomas D. Marzik
Immigrants to the America of the late 19th and early 20th centuries found their cherished beliefs and practices under fire. The newcomers were challenged by native Americans, other competing ethnic groups, and earlier immigrants of their own background. Recounting the experiences of eight distinct groups — Germans, Irish, Italians, Poles, Czechs, Slovaks, East European Jews, and Armenians — these original essays reveal the core of immigrant life and the richness of America's religious and cultural heritage.
236 pp. June $10.00 ISBN 093-X

Both previously announced

SOCIETY UNDER SIEGE
A Psychology of Northern Ireland
Rona M. Fields
A provocative case study of the long-term effects of stress on both the child and adult population of Northern Ireland. Dr. Fields argues that England has established certain social control mechanisms which result in a process she calls "psychological genocide."
304 pp. May About $12.50 ISBN 074-3

VOICES OF CONSCIENCE
Essays on Medieval and Modern French Literature in Memory of James D. Powell and Rosemary Hodgins
Edited by Raymond J. Cormier
Eighteen essays offer important new perspectives on topics ranging from Old French etymology to antipolitics in modern French literature.
320 pp. March $12.50 ISBN 090-5

Complete catalog available at your request
Publisher's ISBN prefix is 0-87722

Temple University Press
Philadelphia, Pa. 19122

understanding why another book on this subject was written at all. The authors claim that the average reader is unaware that there was more to the war for independence than Valley Forge and Yorktown, and they are probably right. So they have set out to correct our myopic view by covering the war from Illinois to India. The authors have not uncovered anything new or startling; yet, within the limits they set for themselves, they have done a competent job. The only major criticism of the book is that the military aspects of the war are depicted apart from the societies and cultures involved; in other words, it is implied that the war was fought in a vacuum. However, any library that feels it needs one more book on the Revolutionary War will find this one satisfactory.—John H. Ashby, Dept. of Social Sciences, Catonsville Community Coll., Baltimore, Md.

"Recommended for libraries"*

George Canning:
Politician and Statesman

by Peter Dixon

As ambitious as he was audacious, Canning rose from obscurity to become Prime Minister of England. This biography is a study in the wiles of domestic politics.
0-88405-352-0/$12.50

"*...Well-researched."
—Library Journal

"Lively... full of political detail."
—Publishers Weekly

MASON / CHARTER
[illegible] NEW YORK, N.Y. 10022

IN DEFENSE OF THE SOUTH
BY DAVID

A DISCUSSION OF THE NEGRO PROBLEM IN AMERICA

*INTRODUCTORY OFFER
$12.50

BON MOT PUBLICATIONS
BOX 606
MANCHESTER, N.H. 03105

Fischer, David Hackett. Growing Old in America.

Oxford Univ. Pr. Apr. 1977. 225p. index. $10.95. SOC SCI/HIST

The tendency to blame our present attitudes toward aging on modern evils is challenged in this fascinating book. The author offers a new and intriguing thesis regarding America's shifting attitudes toward the elderly from Colonial times to the present. Marshalling an impressive array of documentation, he proposes that a veneration-cum-hostility model existed in Colonial times, underwent radical change in a 40-year period around the Revolutionary War, and then settled into a 200-year era of gerontophobia. As evidence Fischer cites patterns in literature, dress, and word usage, as well as more customary statistical data culled from various public records. Pointing to recent interest in and concern for the elderly, the author suggests we may be entering a new period characterized by partnership between young and old. The theory is developed with scholarly care but despite a blizzard of footnotes, the author is never pedantic, writing in an easily assimilable style. A unique view of one aspect of our social history that has heretofore been ignored.—Mary J. Mayer, New York City Dept. for the Aging

FitzGerald, C. P. Mao Tsetung and China.

Holmes & Meier. 1976. 166p. photogs. index. LC 76-3700. ISBN 0-8419-0268-2. $9.50. BIOG/HIST

This is not so much a biography of Mao as a brief, intelligent history of the Chinese Communists from 1949 to 1975. Mao is at the center of such a story, but FitzGerald's interest is less in the man and more in the policies and accomplishments of his regime. The book contains no new facts or interpretations but presents an accurate, knowledgeable, and—particularly in the chapters on the post-1949 period—shrewd account of the major events of Chinese Communist history. This volume is recommended as a clear, readable introduction to the Maoist era.—Andrew J. Nathan, East Asian Inst., Columbia Univ.

Fornara, Charles W., ed. Archaic Times to the End of the Peloponnesian War: translated documents of Greece and Rome. Vol. 1.

Johns Hopkins. Mar. 1977. 240p. index. LC 76-15905. ISBN 0-8018-1810-9. $13.50; pap. ISBN 0-8018-1880-X. $3.95. HIST Inscriptions, documents, and "para-historical" materials (chronologies, scholia, lexica) illustrate the methodology of ancient history in reconstructing political, social, cultural, and economic conditions in Greece approximately between 800 and 400 B.C. All items are translated and furnished with bibliographic information and a few notes and cross references. Since some of the selections are difficult to locate elsewhere, course instructors will appreciate this extensive collection, the first volume of a series of translated documents. The book cannot stand alone, however, for it contains no interpretive material, and its notes and glossary will not rescue the student from various complicated problems inherent in the material (e.g., the place of Ephorus in ancient historiography).—Elizabeth A. Fisher, Dept. of Classics, Georgetown Univ., Washington, D.C.

Goldsmith, Emanuel S. Architects of Yiddishism at the Beginning of the Twentieth Century: a study in Jewish cultural history.

Fairleigh Dickinson Univ. Pr. 1976. 309p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 73-2894. ISBN 0-8386-1384-5. $15. REL/HIST

In this well-written and lucid study, Goldsmith explores the sociocultural context in which Yiddish flourished at the end of the 19th and beginning of the 20th centuries. Using the 1908 First Yiddish Language Conference as a springboard, he examines the struggle between the Yiddishists and the Hebraists, the relationships among Yiddish and Zionism and socialism, and the part Yiddish played in the cultural history of the Jews of eastern Europe. He analyzes the views of the principal proponents of Yiddish at the conference—Peretz, Birnbaum, Mieses, and Zhitlovsky—and shows the effect Judaism as a religion had on their thoughts in the aftermath of this event. The author is able to portray the excitement and anguish of this period by quoting extensively from the works of both the Yiddishists and the Hebraists. The translations render into English for the first time seminal works on Yiddish specifically and linguistics, in general. The high scholarship and readability of this work recommend it for libraries with an interest in Jewish studies, cultural history, and langugage development.—Maurice Tuchman, Hebrew Coll. Lib., Brookline, Mass.

Havighurst, Walter. Ohio: a bicentennial history.

Norton (States & the Nation). 1976. 211p. photogs. maps. index. LC 76-27764. ISBN 0-393-05613-9. $8.95. HIST

This readable narrative survey of Ohio and its people presents the history of the state in a broad sweep, illuminated by individual people, details, and events. A chapter on the river traffic introduces Mike Fink and Stephen Foster and tells us what a flatboat looked like; Ohio's role in the expansion and regulation of industry is illustrated by vignettes of the Rockefellers and John Sherman; another chapter describes the activities of the early 20th-Century reform mayors, Jones of Toledo and Johnson of Cleveland. Most Ohio libraries will want this book, as will larger libraries regardless of location.—Richard W. Ryan, Ohio Univ. Lib., Athens

Hooper, Frederick. The Military Horse.

A. S. Barnes. 1976. 105p. illus., some color. LC 76-8417. ISBN 0-498-01992-6. $11.95. HIST

This is a popular treatment of the horse

as a military weapon, from the period of Egypt's horse-drawn chariots through World War II. The best features are the illustrations and artwork, which should appeal to horse buff and student of military art alike. The text is superficial and exasperatingly vague where it should be specific. Since graphics are the strong point of the book, it would have been advisable to include some diagrams of classic cavalry engagements to help the reader understand the importance and eventual decline of horse warfare. Recommended for young adult collections or where comprehensiveness is a requirement.—Ronald Hubbs, Melrose P.L., Mass.

Hulliung, Mark. Montesquieu and the Old Regime.

Univ. of California Pr. Feb. 1977. index. LC 75-22658. ISBN 0-520-03108-3. $11.50. HIST

Focusing on Montesquieu's major works, the author contends that the French political philosopher was a detractor of the old regime in France and an advocate of a political system modeled after England's. He draws evidence from The Spirit of the Laws, The Persian Letters, and Considerations to support this interpretation of Montesquieu, a complete departure from the standard one of conservative monarchist. Although Montesquieu acknowledged that the English constitutional monarchy was the best system of government, he was not an outspoken critic of his own country's absolute monarchy. Rather, he showed how it differed from his personal Greek and Roman ideals. Well annotated and documented, the book is recommended for academic and large public libraries.—George H. Libbey, Paley Lib., Temple Univ., Phila.

Keller, Morton. Affairs of State: public life in late Nineteenth Century America.

Belknap: Harvard Univ. Pr. 1977. 606p. index. LC 76-21676. ISBN 0-674-00721-2. $17.50. HIST

This is an extended analysis and examination of the components and currents of intellectual thought, social behavior and movements, economic forces, legal evolution, and political concepts of governance that determined the nature and evolution of the American polity in the late 19th Century. The author develops his themes in the context of three broad periods: first, the Civil War, whose legacy of grief, anger, and guilt unleashed a surge of unprecendented political and governmental power; second, the Postwar Polity (1865-1880), characterized by a powerful reaction, in the form of laissez faire, racism, and local interests, against the power of the government and its effort to enforce broad civil libertarian views and policies. Also central to this era and of great significance to the subsequent political life of the country, was the triumph of "organizational politics," distinguished by the emergence of the professional politician. The third period was that of the Industrial Polity (1880-1900), marked by the revolutionizing and pervasive impact of industrialization, which came into collision with traditional values, localism, morality, concepts of state and federal governance, and with the many social and economic problems posed by increasing numbers of immigrants. The author's style is lucid and his presentation well organized and developed. The footnotes, which are impressive in scope and depth, serve as a valuable running bibliography. Highly recommended to academic libraries.—Marcel Pittet, Univ. of Maine at Fort Kent Lib.

Masson, Georgina. Courtesans of the Italian Renaissance.

St. Martin's. 1976. 180p. illus. bibliog. index. $10. HIST

A leisurely re-creation of the lives of several women of low origins who achieved high success as courtesans, mostly in Rome and Venice. Cultured and charming, some of these beautiful women were poets and intellectuals, insiders to an elite society. Masson evokes their stories through letters, wills, contracts, and other contemporary documents as well as literature and art. Prelates, politicians, painters, and poets were their lovers; famous names, e.g., Aretino, Borgia, Raphael, add luster to the text. Written for a general readership, the present work provides an interesting glimpse into lives of opulence and moral ambiguity. We now need a probing sociological and feminist study to take on issues left beneath the surface.—Marilyn Schneider, Dept. of French & Italian, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis

Metz, Leon Claire. The Shooters.

Mangan Bks., 6245 Snowheights Ct., El Paso, Tex. 1976. 300p. photogs. bibliog. LC 76-21578. $14.95. BIOG/HIST

The Western gunfighter as we know him today is largely a mythical figure—even the term "gunfighter," Metz points out, is an invention of Hollywood. The gunman became firmly established in our folklore, however, because he dared break the chains of monotony in an era of dawn-to-dusk drudgery. As portrayed in this collection of short sketches, he usually operated close to the border line between lawful employment and dishonest pursuits. He sometimes wore a badge; but whether he upheld the law or held up the banks, he usually supplemented his income through gambling, protection rackets, confidence schemes, or cattle rustling. These are real portraits of real men—not heroes or anti-heroes. The author relies upon census records and newspaper accounts, as well as the usual secondary sources. The narrative is succinct, detailed, and studded with poignant humor.—Roger Woelfel, Los Angeles County P.L. System

Nathan, Andrew J. Peking Politics, 1918-1923: factionalism and the failure of constitutionalism.

Univ. of California Pr. 1976. 299p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 74-7976. $15. HIST

In traditional Chinese political culture, where the role of the individual was deemphasized, the pattern of society was built up on cliental relationships which

"A mine of information, for both amusement and profit."
—Herman Kahn

THE STATISTICAL HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES
From Colonial Times to the Present
Introduction and User's Guide by
Ben J. Wattenberg

Now in a single volume—the complete panoramic study by the U.S. Census Bureau of this country's history as told through statistics, made lucid and accessible by Ben Wattenberg's user's guide.
"No study of America can be complete, or even close to complete, without careful perusal of this remarkable treasure-trove of data. Our past is here, and so, inevitably, is our future."—Richard M. Scammon

1,220 pp. with index, appendixes, tables; $24.00
LC 76-9679
ISBN 0-465-08203-3

BASIC BOOKS INC.
10 E. 53RD ST., NEW YORK 10022

determined the network of social connections. Nathan argues that the failure of democratic constitutionalism after 1911 was largely due to the inability of this tradition to adapt effectively to the changing political needs of the country. China from 1916 to 1927 was politically so chaotic that scholars have generally shifted their attention away from warlord politics to other developments during this period. Nathan's bold step to rectify this situation is welcome because the supposedly meaningless "factional politics" of this era exhibited trends which did not disappear after 1927, or even after 1949. Nathan's thought-provoking and carefully researched monograph provides a deeper understanding of the factions and their immediate and national implications. Recommended for graduate libraries.—Ranbir Vohra, Dept. of Political Science, Trinity Coll., Hartford, Conn.

Peterson, Merrill D. Adams and Jefferson: a revolutionary dialogue.

Univ. of Georgia Pr. 1976. 146p. index. LC 76-1145. ISBN 0-8203-0401-8. $7. BIOG/HIST

This concise and well-written volume by one of the foremost Jeffersonian scholars is a pleasure to read. Peterson masterfully examines both the personal relationship between Adams and Jefferson and what he calls the "dialogue of ideas" between the two statesmen concerning the meaning and purpose of the Revolution. The work is best when dealing with the political concepts of Adams and Jefferson, but it also offers numerous insights into the personalities of the two men. Moving through the periods of the American Revolution, the French Revolution, the "Revolution of 1800," and the years of renewed correspondence after 1812, Peterson manages to treat both Adams and Jefferson sympathetically. An informative volume full of the wisdom of a mature scholar dealing with his favorite subject; very highly recommended.—James T. Schleifer, Dept. of History, Coll. of New Rochelle, N.Y.

Schran, Peter. Guerrilla Economy: the development of the Shensi-Kansu-Ninghsia border region, 1937-1945.

State Univ. of New York Pr. 1976. 323p. bibliog. index. LC 75-45052. ISBN 0-87395-344-4. $25. ECON/HIST

A careful, narrowly focused monograph on the economy of the Chinese Communists' main base during the war against Japan. Schran marshals all the available evidence to ascertain how this small and backward region (with a population of only 1.5 million) could support the Communist military and political apparatus during difficult wartime conditions. He sees mass mobilization and organizational techniques as the keys which enabled the party to raise productivity and ensure its own survival; but the guerrilla economy was not immune to the economic ills which beset the Nationalist Chinese in Chungking. This study will be of interest to specialists in Chinese Communist history. Its appeal might have been broader had the author widened his scope to include both a discussion of the other Communist bases and an explicit comparative examination of the Communist and Nationalist modes of coping with wartime economic problems.—Steven I. Levine, East Asian Inst., Columbia Univ.

Shaw, Stanford. History of the Ottoman Empire. 2 vols. Vol. 1: The Empire of the Gazis: the rise and decline of the Ottoman Empire, 1280–1808.

Cambridge Univ. Pr. 1976. 350p. LC 76-9179. ISBN 0-521-21280-4. $25; pap. ISBN 0-521-29163-1. $12.95. HIST

This is the first book to present a comprehensive history of the Near Eastern power that occupied much of Europe's energies between the 15th and the early 20th centuries from the Ottoman perspective. Shaw, the foremost American Ottomanist, has written a nontechnical work which is based on extensive study of the Ottoman archives and other Turkish sources. He treats Ottoman internal politics, foreign relations, administration, society, economy, and culture. He presents a manageable amount of detail and judicious interpretation in a clear style, rendering a highly complex subject intelligible to most readers. Essential for all but smaller libraries.—David W. Littlefield, Lib. of Congress

Smith, Merritt Roe. Harpers Ferry Armory and the New Technology: the challenge of change.

Cornell Univ. Pr. Mar. 1977. 376p. illus. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-8014-0984-5. $15. TECH/HIST

It is widely believed that the New World has always been more open, innovative, ingenious—in short, more progressive—than the old. Nowhere is this view more deeply imbedded than in the notion that our ancestors eagerly welcomed technological change. Unlike their European counterparts, American workers are said to have enthusiastically embraced mechanization, applauded every new invention, readily agreed to their use, and regarded the whole process as further confirmation of the superiority of their civilization. Though the history of the government arsenal at Harpers Ferry may be completely atypical, this study shows that both civilian managers and workers resented mechanization and resisted change whenever and however they could. Smith poses a formidable challenge to the traditional outlook in this provocative and important book, and the result is a model of scholarly and literary craftsmanship.—Peter J. Coleman, Dept. of History, Univ. of Illinois at Chicago Circle

Stanford, W. B. Ireland and the Classical Tradition.

Rowman & Littlefield. 1976. 261p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-87471-924-0. $16.50. HIST

This is a meticulous compilation of the effects of Greco-Roman culture in a country which, because of isolation and history, missed the Renaissance. Stanford organizes his material by disciplines (e.g. history, philosophy) and chronologically within each discipline. Particularly informative are his discussions of Merugud, 12th-Century Irish version of the Odyssey; Georgian art and architecture; and Joyce's predecessors in classical embellishments and adaptations. With an aim of being encyclopedic, however, he is considerably less readable than he was in his masterly review in The Ulysses Theme (Blackwell, 1954). Further, it is disappointing that no illustrations were provided for his incisive résumé of classical art and architecture. Still, as a reference this book is definitive and belongs in both special and general collections.—Marilyn Gaddis Rose, Dept. of Comparative Literature, SUNY at Binghamton

Stern, Fritz. Gold and Iron: Bismarck, Bleichröder, and the building of the German empire.

Knopf. Feb. 1977. 646p. photogs. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-394-49545-4. $17.95. BIOG/HIST

Gerson Bleichröder, a Jew, was Bismarck's banker from 1858 until he died in 1893. Their relationship, increasingly close as the years went by, was based on mutual trust and respect. It soon encompassed far more than Bismarck's household finance. Stern's fascinating account, based on newly accessible Bismarck and Bleichröder papers, throws new light on almost every aspect of Bismarckian foreign and domestic policy. It shows, for example, that Bismarck could hardly have defied the Prussian Landtag (diet) between 1862 and 1866 and still fought two successful wars of unification without Bleichröder's help in finding money. Their relationship also tells much about the social dynamics of Imperial Germany. Bleichröder's alternately heartening and painful progress toward assimilation—he was, after all, the richest man in Germany—reveals the enormous stresses economic and political modernization placed on a society in which the traditional aristocracy still ruled. A long book, but a good one.—John G. Williamson, Yale Univ. Lib.

Tannenbaum, Edward R. 1900: the generation before the great war.

Anchor: Doubleday. 1977. 463p. illus. index. LC 76-18369. ISBN 0-385-00431-1. $10. SOC SCI/HIST

Tannenbaum's work surveys European social conditions and intellectual currents between 1890 and 1914. A powerful synthesis of existing literature, it describes the impact of modernization on the lives and attitudes of Europeans. The broad strokes are beautifully rendered, but the details may lead to some disagreement among specialists. The scope of 1900 is similar to Barbara Tuchman's The Proud Tower (LJ 12/1/65); the present work, while less colorful, is more informative and better documented. When Tannenbaum addresses such subjects as average income per capita and crude birth rates, his text becomes somewhat awkward. Still, both scholars and educated laymen will read this nicely illustrated book with profit and enjoyment.—David E. Sumler, Maryland Board for Higher Education, Annapolis

Wise, William. Massacre at Mountain Meadows: an American legend and a monumental crime.

Crowell. 1976. 320p. index. LC 76-16014. ISBN 0-690-01174-1. $11.95. HIST

The mass murder of the Fancher wagon party by Mormons in 1857 is the subject of this well-documented history. Showing that this was not an isolated incident, the author maintains that the early Mormon leadership often ignored national laws in favor of their own edicts. Notes and an appendix add to the usefulness of this work. A well-written account presenting an alternate view of an aspect of American history.—Suzanne Plessinger, Los Angeles County P.L. System, Lakewood

HISTORY

Archaeology

Dickens, Roy S., Jr. Cherokee Prehistory: the Pisgah Phase in the Appalachian summit region.

Univ. of Tennessee Pr. 1976. 243p. illus. index. LC 76-1972. ISBN 0-87049-193-8. $11.95.
ARCHAEOLOGY

Extensive excavation of the Warren Wilson and Garden Creek archaeological sites in western North Carolina has illuminated the previously obscure prehistoric roots of Cherokee Indian culture. These sites and several hundred other, less completely investigated sites in North Carolina, Georgia, and South Carolina are grouped in the Pisgah Phase. This archaeological culture dates from A.D. 1000 to A.D. 1450. Like the Cherokee, who resided in exactly the same area, Pisgah Phase people lived in small hamlets, constructed earth-covered ceremonial structures, buried their dead in chambered pits beneath house floors, and carved a rattlesnake-related theme on shell ornaments. This and other evidence is the author's basis for concluding that the Cherokee are indigenous to the area rather than late immigrants. His book is devoted largely to an account of the excavations at the Warren Wilson and Garden Creek sites and to a description of the recovered structures, burials, ceramics, and food remains. The book is well written and excellently illustrated. Recommended for academic libraries and for public libraries with Native American collections.—William S. Dancey, Dept. of Anthropology, Ohio State Univ., Columbus

MacQuitty, William. Tutankhamun: the last journey.

Crown. 1976. unpaged. color photogs. by the author. LC 76-28658. ISBN 0-7043-3127-6. pap. $4.95.

Wonderful Things: the discovery of Tutankhamun's tomb.

Metropolitan Museum of Art, dist. by New York Graphic Society: Little. 1976. unpaged. photogs. by Harry Burton. LC 76-40452. ISBN 0-87099-152-3. pap. $3.95. PHOTOG/ARCHAEOLOGY

These are both photographic glimpses into the lore surrounding the burial and excavation of the Pharaoh Tutankhamun of Egypt, and are both glossy-paged, short, museum-type productions. Wonderful Things has black-and-white reproductions of old photos and memorabilia extracted for the most part from Volume 2 of the three-volume original description of the dig (The Tomb of Tut Ankh Amen, 1923–1933, by Howard Carter and A. C. Mace). Tutankhamun contains a collection of superb color shots of subjects selected from the tomb furnishings (notably the mummiform and death masks) with some textual filler and a list of kings. While generally attractive, both books are for the popular taste and, except for the MacQuitty photos, add little to the content supplied by the 15-odd works on Tutankhamun already in print. Not generally recommended for libraries.—JoAnn D. Suleiman, Wright Patterson Air Force Base Medical Lib., Dayton, Ohio

Wilson, David M., ed. The Archaeology of Anglo-Saxon England.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. Feb. 1977. 532p. illus. index. $50. ARCHAEOLOGY

Anglo-Saxon archaeology has made giant strides in the last two decades, as this collaborative survey clearly shows. Written by nine of England's finest younger archaeologists, it includes chapters on agriculture, building, towns, monasteries, crafts, pottery, coins, animals, and the Scandinavians. The essays are very up-to-date, not only in incorporating late discoveries and theories, but also in focusing on human life rather on masterpieces. Unfortunately there are only 21 plates and too few maps, but the figures are clear and the apparatus very full. The writing is clear and forceful. An important book for large, general collections, and for any archaeology group.—Donald K. Fry, Dept. of Comparative Literature, SUNY at Stony Brook

Travel, Exploration & Adventure

Dygart, Aaron (photogs.) & Edward Joesting (text). Eternal Hawaii.

Charles Belding Graphic Arts Center Pub. Co., 2000 N.W. Wilson, Portland, Ore. 97209. 1976. 127p. color photogs. LC 76-5666. ISBN 0-912856-26-2. $25. PHOTOG/TRAV

Photographer Dygart and local historian Joesting have combined their talents to present the latest photographic essay on Hawaii. Dygart's photos, with descriptive captions by Joesting, focus on the enduring natural heritage of the Islands. The technical aspects of exposure, developing, and printing of the photographs have been quite professionally (and expensively) done. Unfortunately, Dygart is not yet one of those photographers who can communicate an internal, personal interpretation of what is experienced; his work here is only occasionally superior to photographic material that is available elsewhere. Joesting's essay on the natural history of the Islands presents a fascinating side of the Hawaii story that will be new to many. Eternal Hawaii is, in short, another gift book on the Islands; it should be purchased with that limitation and the needs of patrons in mind.—Warren Collins, Honolulu

Kirby-Smith, H. T. U.S. Observatories: a directory and travel guide.

Van Nostrand Reinhold. 1976. 173p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-4448. ISBN 0-442-24451-7. $11.95; pap. ISBN 0-442-24450-9. $6.95.
ASTRONOMY/TRAV

This is the only available reference guide to optical and radio observatories in the U.S. Historical, biographical, semitechnical, and geographical infor-

"Enthusiastically Recommended"

"This book does just what its subtitle says it does, but with a novel approach. Through the use of color photographs of model soldiers and diagrams of battles, Johnson attempts to show significant turning points of the war. The graphics, both pictures and diagrams, are of a uniformly high standard. Also commendable is the graphic presentation of the organization and equipment of the various armies. There are many easy-to-follow maps and tables of organization placed throughout the book. Enthusiastically recommended for medium-sized and larger public libraries."

—Quoted in full from LIBRARY JOURNAL/Nov. 1, 1976

BATTLES OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION

A Concise Military History of the War Reconstructing Eight Major Encounters

By Curt Johnson

Full-color maps and illustrations. 128 pages, 8½ x 12"
ISBN 0-528-81022-7 $12.95

"An unusual book that gives the reader an opportunity to view the eight major battles of the Revolution (Lexington and Concord, Bunker Hill, Germantown, Trenton and Princeton, Saratoga, Monmouth, Cowpens and Yorktown) from a new perspective. Each of the battles is portrayed by a three-dimensional scene with authentically dressed and positioned model soldiers, guns and artillery." —Quoted in full from ARMY TIMES / December 6, 1976

"An impressive history of America's war for independence, describing in a concise but detailed text the eight major battles of the war from Lexington to Yorktown. Richly illustrated with maps, paintings and engravings, and descriptions of uniforms, the highlight of the book is its number of color photographs of dioramas of the battles, faithfully recreated with wargames miniatures. The little figures are beautifully painted ... a real eye-opener!"

—Quoted from CAMPAIGNS MAGAZINE November 1976

Rand McNally
P.O. Box 7600 • Chicago, Illinois 60680

mation about nearly 300 observatories, museums, and planetariums is given. Part 1 discusses in depth 15 major observatories; part 2 catalogs alphabetically by state and by city within state, smaller observatories, important museums, and planetariums. The guide is not comprehensive: this reviewer notes the omission of the Ohio State University Radio Telescope. The directory does provide practical information about travel accommodations including campgrounds. It also contains a brief glossary of astronomical terms and suggestions for further reading. Well written and amply illustrated, this guide is recommended for libraries having patrons interested in astronomy.—Virginia E. Yagello, Ohio State Univ. Lib., Columbus

McKinlay, William Laird. Karluk: the great untold story of Arctic exploration.

St. Martin's. Feb. 1977. 170p. fwd. by Magnus Magnusson. illus. index. ISBN 0-312-45080-X. $10. PER NAR/EXPLORATION

A first-person account, published here for the first time, of the last known survivor of the Karluk, the main ship in the Stefansson Arctic expedition of 1913–1918. The Karluk was iced in, and had to be abandoned. Stefansson got separated from his expedition (intentionally, McKinlay implies), and made his way back to civilization. Eleven of the remaining 25 persons died before they were rescued after many months on the ice. McKinlay, a Scottish teacher who endured the entire ordeal, is still bitter after more than 60 years. He paints a picture of spitefulness and noncooperation among sailors and scholars untrained in survival and left to their fate by a leader who blithely assumed that anyone could survive in the Arctic. The only hero was Captain Bob Bartlett, who journeyed many miles under atrocious conditions to bring aid. This vivid and readable account, with many original photographs, may revive interest in the Karluk incident. [For a similar adventure in the Antarctic, see F. A. Worsley's Shackleton's Boat Journey, LJ 2/1/77. Ed.]—Jonathan F. Husband, Boston State Coll. Lib.

Home Economics

Anderson, Bruce with Michael Riordan. The Solar Home Book: heating, cooling and designing with the sun.

Cheshire Bks., dist. by RPM Dists., Box 1785, Rockville, Md. 20850. 1977. 297p. illus. by Edward A. Wong. photogs. index. LC 76-29494. ISBN 0-917352-01-7. pap. $7.50. TECH/HOME ECON

This is among the best of the new books on solar energy as a viable alternative energy source for homeowners. It contains descriptions of several existing solar homes, some background theory which is essential to develop a design, a discussion of the types of solar heating available, and typical build-it-yourself projects, as well as appendixes on design and climatic data, a glossary of terms, and an index. The figures, sketches, and photos are clear and integrate well with the text; the references, provided at the end of each chapter, are useful for further research. Unfortunately, the listing of "competent" engineers seems to lack objectivity—almost half of the 40 names listed were acknowledged for their help in producing the book. Although The Solar Home Book is not sufficient to guide the beginner unaided through all the technicalities of solar home construction, it should prove extremely useful to those contemplating the design or renovation of a home heated, or cooled, by the sun. Recommended.—Richard J. Peppin, Montgomery County Dept. of Environmental Protection, Rockville, Md.

Consumer Guide Eds. Whole House Catalog.

Fireside: S. & S. 1976. 320p. illus. LC 76-14453. ISBN 0-671-22636-3. $14.95; pap. ISBN 0-671-22416-6. $7.95. TECH/HOME ECON

The 11-by-14-inch Whole House Catalog uses a double-page make-up with the lower center portion devoted to various house repairs or projects and the outside edges and often the top devoted to brief descriptions of tools, products, or shortcuts related to the repair job or project. The whole range of house problems (thawing frozen pipes, screen replacement, mildew, weatherstripping, leaking roofs, etc.) is covered, but some topics, in skimpy detail because of space limitations due to the one repair/project item per double page. Related tools and products are briefly described and pictured, but with no comparison of quality, features, or prices. Similar tools and products are spread throughout the Catalog, with hammers, for example, mentioned on ten different pages. Products are indexed, but one has to refer to the nonalphabetical table of contents for repairs and projects. Although this title has several shortcomings, its format will appeal to many readers.—W. T. Johnston, Coastal Plain Regional Lib., Tifton, Ga.

Wolf, Ray, ed. Managing Your Personal Food Supply.

Rodale Pr. Feb. 1977. 480p. illus. index. $11.95. HOME ECON

Readers are urged to ignore the advertising of food conglomerates and to make informed decisions about their health and food needs. Instead of processed foods, containing some of 1800 chemicals routinely added to "enhance flavor" and "prolong shelf-life," the authors recommend greater reliance on whole grains, legumes, fruits, and vegetables—a diet which is economical, healthful, varied, and satisfying. Since chemical-free food must be raised and prepared at home or secured from special sources, the main focus of the book is to provide useful information on the many facets of this endeavor. Varying degrees of commitment to such a way of life are considered, with detailed dis-

The #1 cookbook for a whole new generation of mothers

165,000 books in print spiral bound. $3.50. ISBN 0-915658-01-1

Is it in your library?

Vicki Lansky's best selling guide for mothers of infants and small children contains over 200 recipes and practical ideas for making: natural baby food at home, appetizing finger foods, irresistible nutritious snacks, alternatives to pre-sweetened breakfast cereals, seasonal holiday treats and sensible parties for pre-schoolers.

"Definitely a should-read book for new mothers" — Pediatric Nursing
"A gem of a cookbook"
— Des Moines Register

Order from your distributor, or direct from:

Meadowbrook Press
16648 Meadowbrook Lane
Wayzata, MN 55391

cussions (often pro and con) covering such topics as large- and small-scale gardening, raising livestock, buying food, joining a co-op, choosing equipment, processing and storing in quantity, and planning menus. Principles advocated in the text are applied in the large collection of unusual recipes. Recommended as a competent synthesis of recent back-to-the-good-earth literature.—Eleanor H. Broadus, formerly with Northern Illinois Univ. Lib., DeKalb

Cookery

Abel, Bob. The Book of Beer.

Regnery. 1976. 224p. illus. LC 76-6254. ISBN 0-8092-9126-6. $6.95. BEVERAGES

To understand the nature, mystique, and misconceptions surrounding this ubiquitous brew, here is the perfect book for the beer drinker. It combines a lively history of beer from the days of the Pharaohs to the present, interspersed throughout with up-to-date "super pub crawls" in New York, San Francisco, Boston, Chicago, and London. Restaurants that feature beer are listed, together with their selection and prices. Other sections include instructions on home brewing; a well-chosen selection of recipes from the Flemish classic "Carbonnades a la Flamande" to beer griddlecakes and cookies; a discussion of the Coor's mystique and the snob appeal of foreign beers. Photographs, drawings, and cartoons complete this pleasurable book/guide.—Richard J. Russo, Museum of Modern Art Lib., New York

Butel, Jane. Jane Butel's Freezer Cookbook: how to use your freezer for all it's worth.

Coward. Feb. 1977. LC 76-13656. ISBN 0-698-10727-6. $8.95. COOKERY

Drawing from her experience as home economist in business, her collection of favorite recipes, and data published by private companies and state and federal agencies, Butel treats all aspects of home freezing. She discusses choosing and using a freezer (to save time, not money) for meats, game, fish, dairy products, fruits, vegetables, grains, breads, desserts, microwave cooking, and single and low-calorie meals. Many of the recipes (which call for foods under discussion in each chapter) are already popular: "Beef Bourguignon," "Dilly Casserole Bread," and "Poppy Seed Fruit Salad Dressing." Unfortunately, the author lacks felicity of expression and in some sections the text is cumbersome and sometimes dull. Libraries owning Ann Seranne's The Complete Book of Freezer Cookery (Doubleday) and Hazel Meyer's The Complete Book of Home Freezing (Lippincott, 1970, rev. ed.) can skip this one. However, those needing a synthesis of many short publications with useful recipes will find it an acceptable choice.—Eleanor H. Broadus, formerly with Northern Illinois Univ. Libs., DeKalb

Dixon, Jeane. Jeane Dixon's Astrological Cookbook.

Morrow. 1976. 250p. index. LC 76-21798. ISBN 0-688-03091-2. $6.95. ASTROLOGY/COOKERY

Not content simply with gazing into her crystal ball, Dixon has rummaged through her recipe file and written a perfectly awful cookbook. She writes with sincere, if gushy, enthusiasm and exhorts her readers to "tell [their] loved ones why the meal . . . is astrologically sound for them," serving up such specialties as "Planetary Vegetable Egg Bundles," "Cancerian Dandy in Aspic," and "Burgers Delish." It's impossible for me to take the astrological basis of this cookbook seriously, and so what's left is a collection of recipes for dishes like those sold at Church fairs. And those are usually better. And definitely cheaper.—Carol K. Carey, formerly with Dept. of Film, Museum of Modern Art, New York

Guérard, Michel. Michel Guérard's Cuisine Minceur.

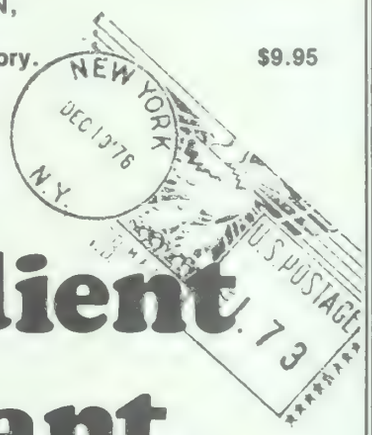
Morrow. 1976. 320p. tr. by Narcisse Chamberlain with Fanny Brennan. illus. index. LC 76-49719. ISBN 0-688-03142-0. $12.95. COOKERY

Guérard's book is the ultimate statement on the new French cuisine of slimness. He urges the reader not to make the recipes singly but to have a minceur week—once, twice, or ten times a year. This is the ideal if one has time and money. The recipes are fascinating but require a certain expertise and (sometimes) expensive ingredients like truffles and squab. The directions are

A selection of the most witty, amusing and memorable letters to THE TIMES OF LONDON, 1900-1975
Edited by Kenneth Gregory. $9.95



Your Obedient Servant

"....I heartily recommend it to the kind of reader who enjoys a casual look into the little parts of history in order better to perceive the whole."
L.A. Free Press

"An intelligent, witty and altogether charming collection."
Calgary ALBERTAN

TWO CONTINENTS/METHUEN

AT LAST BETTER NUTRITION IS MADE EASY AS 1-2-3!
NutriScore
The Rate-Yourself Plan for Better Nutrition
By Ruth Fremes and Zak Sabry

Of all the nutrition books currently available, NUTRISCORE is the only one based around a rating system that allows the individual to rate and regulate his or her own eating habits.

NUTRISCORE - clear, concise and easy-to-read and with the handy pocket Scorebook, makes better nutrition for you as easy as 1-2-3!

"....Surely the first easy-to-read-and-understand book on nutrition published to date."
Don Mills Mirror

"....Simply the best book I have ever seen on nutrition."
Homemakers' Magazine

TWO CONTINENTS/METHUEN

explicit, with numerous helpful notes. Guérard uses artificial sweetener, and that may not please some nutritionists. (I substituted sugar for the sweetener in a delicious coffee custard.) Many of the vegetable recipes are for purées in contrast to al dente vegetables served with some of the main dishes. The full-color photographs reiterate the imaginative, creative genius of this French chef. Compared to others on the subject Cuisine Minceur is the most original book, followed by Armand Aulicino's The New French Cooking (LJ 11/15/76) and Roy Andries de Groot's Revolutionizing French Cooking (LJ 10/1/76).—Christine Bulson, SUNY at Oneonta Lib.

Voltz, Jeanne A. The Flavor of the South: delicacies and staples of Southern cuisine.

Doubleday. Feb. 1977. illus. by Mel Klapholz. index. LC 76-18371. ISBN 0-385-08985-6. $9.95. COOKERY

Now that Jimmy's in the White House, sure as the world everybody and his brother will be hankering to savor some down-home cooking. There will be no problem locating recipes because of the bounty of Southern cookbooks on the market. Voltz, food editor of Woman's Day, updates recipes from her Southern childhood and offers an adequate array of Dixie specials from "Tallahassee Coffee Frappé" to "Shortening Bread." Regrettably, however, there isn't much critical or introductory comment, and what there is, is often misleading: "Southerners persist in calling a cocktail party a 'reception.' " Very quaint, but untrue. On the whole the book is a satisfactory collection, but in this reviewer's opinion a better buy for the same price is Winifred Cheney's The Southern Hospitality Cookbook (LJ 7/76).—Callie B. McGinnis, Columbus Coll. Lib., Ga.

LANGUAGE ARTS

Holenstein, Elmar. Roman Jakobson's Approach to Language: phenomenological structuralism.

Indiana Univ. Pr. 1976. 256p. bibliog. index. LC 76-12368. ISBN 0-253-35018-2. $12.50. LINGUISTICS

Jakobson is the most important scholar of language of our time. The breadth of his achievement seems impossible to epitomize, though this work covers considerable ground. The subtitle refers to the author's thesis that Husserl was a major influence on Jakobson; his evidence is more inferential than documentary. Holenstein assumes familiarity with the work of Husserl, Saussure, Chomsky, and, to a lesser extent, Levi-Strauss. He discusses primarily Jakobson's phonology as a model science, touching on the principal controversies of the last half century; he deals also with higher levels of language, including poetics, but Jakobson's work on folklore and epic is virtually ignored. What is covered is covered thoroughly, so this work is important for (probably) phenomenologists and (definitely) structuralists and linguists. The translation-English is fluent.—Peter T. Daniels, Dept. of Linguistics, Univ. of Chicago

Hudson, Richard A. Arguments for a Non-Transformational Grammar.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. 1976. 214p. bibliog. index. LC 76-604. ISBN 0-226-35799-6. $9. LINGUISTICS

An important question of syntactic theory is the subject of this book, and so it presupposes some acquaintance with transformational grammar. The question raised is whether a set of formal descriptive principles not including transformational rules is capable of describing the structures and relations of the well-formed sentences of a language with as much accuracy and explanatory power as a transformational grammar. The author proposes a set of rules which either generate structures directly or encode in underlying structures the equivalent of the derivational history of the sentence, together with discourse functions, such as topic. Underlying structures may have multiple connections among nodes, and nodes have feature as well as category labels. Hudson shows extensive knowledge of work in transformational theory, which he discusses critically and accurately. He does not discuss case grammar or more recent theories such as relational grammar and Montague grammar, which are similar to his own in not deriving sentences with an ordered sequence of transformations. The book, is, however, stimulating and interesting. Its style is direct and free of jargon, and the exposition is clearly organized.—Alice Davison, Program in Linguistics, SUNY at Stony Brook

Literature

Barfield, Owen. The Rediscovery of Meaning and Other Essays.

Wesleyan Univ. Pr. Mar. 1977. 260p. $12.50. PHIL/LIT

The reflections in this book are grouped under two headings: those dealing with "Meaning, Language, and Imagination" and those dealing with "Man, Society, and God." Yet whatever their ostensible subjects, all Barfield's essays tend to follow the same approach and often to repeat the same material: old-fashioned philology gives way to discussion of philosophical dichotomies (mind/body, matter/spirit, man/nature, etc.); the Darwinian theory of evolution or Freudian psychology is poohpoohed; the Romantic theory of art and imagination (especially that of Coleridge) is expounded in an effort to transcend the dichotomies; and inevitably we are brought to rest in some aspect of the teachings of Rudolf Steiner (explicating Steiner seems to be the author's main interest). Barfield's book, in short, will fascinate followers of Steiner and the anthroposophical movement; as literary theory, however, it is largely, if not totally, irrelevant.—Richard Kuczkowski, Dept. of English, Bronx Community Coll., CUNY

Barth, J. Robert, S. J. The Symbolic Imagination: Coleridge and the romantic tradition.

Princeton Univ. Pr. (Essays in Literature). 1977. c.170p. bibliog. index. $10. LIT

According to Barth, Coleridge's concept of symbol can be understood as sacramental encounter. For Coleridge the symbol is consubstantial with the truth it reveals; and since mystery is at the heart of Coleridge's deepest perception of reality, the creation of symbol involves both the poet and the reader in an encounter with the truth of mystery. Thus, while much of 18th-Century poetry is that of reference, objectively pointing to the poem's experience with metaphors shaped by fancy, Romantic poetry is that of encounter, intersubjectively involving the reader in the poem's experience through symbols created by imagination. Barth's reading of Wordsworth's poetry from this vantage is always engaging, often arresting; his reading of Coleridge's poetry, intelligent and sensitive. His more general argument that the substance of this view of symbolism is common to the other Romantics is persuasive, but, as he admits, not fully developed. Yet this study is an excellent consideration of the religious dimension of symbol in Coleridge's thought and its relation to English Romanticism.—Frank P. Riga, Dept. of English, Canisius Coll., Buffalo, N.Y.

Bergonzi, Bernard. Gerard Manley Hopkins.

Macmillan. (Masters of World Literature.). Mar. 1977. 224p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-02-509950-7. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-02-048590-5. $4.95. BIOG/LIT

In this critical biography, Bergonzi traces Hopkins' conversion to Catholicism, his career as a priest and teacher, and his struggle against his desire for recognition. He draws on the letters and journals, distills much of the criticism, and sketches the intellectual and cultural contexts in which Hopkins moved. He shows us a mind wrestling both with itself and with words, syntax, and meanings. An authoritative and sympathetic introduction to an important premodern poet.—Douglas W. Cooper, Randolph-Macon Coll. Lib., Ashland, Va.

Bjornson, Richard. The Picaresque Hero in European Fiction.

Univ. of Wisconsin Pr. Mar. 1977. 300p. index. illus. LC 76-11312. ISBN 0-299-07100-6. $15. LIT

In examining the standard body of picaresque fiction—beginning with Lazarillo de Tormes, Guzmán de Alfarache, and El Buscón, through Grimmelshausen's Simplicissimus, and ending with Moll Flanders, Gil Blas, and Roderick Random—Bjornson traces the socialization of the picaro from the satiric distortion of the lower-class outsider bungling his way through a hypocritical society to the conventional affirmation of the triumphant nobleman "momentarily separated from the elevated social station he deserves." A standard work, magnificently illustrated with prints from the 16th- through 18th-Century manuscripts, for the academic collection.—Marcia G. Fuchs, Free Lib. of Philadelphia

Chametzky, Jules. From the Ghetto: the fiction of Abraham Cahan.

Univ. of Massachusetts Pr. 1976. 176p. bibliog. index. LC 76-25047. ISBN 0-87023-225-8. $10. BIOG/LIT

This is the first critical biography of the noted author of The Rise of David Levinsky (1917). Cahan is important because he was one of the first Jewish-American writers to successfully capture the Jewish immigrant experience in America at the turn of the century. This study captures the excitement and diversity of Cahan's literary and political passions. In the context of narrating the development of Cahan's life, Chametzky discusses all of Cahan's fiction and journalistic enterprises. Although the author covers all of Cahan's major fiction, the focus is on the man and the influences upon him. Chametzky emphasizes Cahan's interest in socialism and its effect on the immigrant worker. An important addition to studies in Jewish-American writing.—Herbert E. Shapiro, Dept. of English, Univ. of Rochester, N.Y.

Coffey, Michael. Roman Satire.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1977. 289p. LC 76-28824. $21.50. LIT

This makes an excellent supplement to Ulrich Knoche's Roman Satire (LJ 7/75), which it surpasses in organization. Coffey includes much of the same information, but divides verse satire and mixed-prose-and-verse satire into separate sections: first Ennius, Lucilius, Horace, Persius, Juvenal; then Varro, Seneca, Petronius. Coffey's more fulsome treatments benefit from recent scholarship. His notes are also valuable in this respect. Like Knoche, Coffey will benefit students of later satire as well as classicists, but he has not said much about particular points of influence. Coffey's strong points are clarity, scholarly documentation, and literary assessment within the context of each author's own times.—Robert P. Sonkowsky, Dept. of Classics, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis

Derrida, Jacques. Of Grammatology.

Johns Hopkins. 1977. 448p. tr. by Gayatri Chakravorty Spivak. $19.95; pap. $5.95. PHIL/LIT

This first English translation of a major work by a brilliant and influential French philosopher/critic is indispensable reading for those seriously interested in contemporary criticism and thought. Derrida's intricate, idiosyncratic explorations of the concept of "writing"; his notions of "trace," "difference," etc.; or his relation to modern philosophy and "structuralism" cannot be summarized comprehensibly in this short space—suffice it to say that the intellectual adventure of following a first-rate mind engaging a complex theme in provocative theoretical formulations and equally provocative readings of specific texts (Saussure, Lévi-Strauss, Rousseau) is one great value of this book. (The text tends toward the philosophic and, especially in its theoretical portions, makes considerable demands of the reader; but the translator's preface is helpful for relating Derrida's thought to its intellectual/philosophical background and explicating some of his key concepts.) Essential for college libraries.—Richard Kuczkowski, Dept. of English, Bronx Community Coll., CUNY

Dostoevsky, Fyodor. The Unpublished Dostoevsky: diaries and notebooks (1860-81). Vol. 3.

Ardis. 1976. 204p. ed. by Carl R. Proffer. tr. by Arline Boyer & David Lapeza. index. ISBN 0-88233-020-9. $14.95. PER NAR/LIT

With the publication of Volume 3 the English translation of Dostoevsky's previously unavailable diaries and notebooks is complete (see LJ 8/73 and 6/15/75 for reviews of the first two volumes). It is impossible to overrate the importance of this contribution to Dostoevsky scholarship. English readers now have available a major document in which Dostoevsky's concerns about contemporary issues, both social and moral, are revealed with all the force and crudeness of private jottings. The present volume concentrates on the following issues: the Serbian war and Russia's destiny as a leader of Orthodox Slavdom; the great gulf between the "better classes" and the commonfolk; the violence done to justice by "liberal" notions of a defense based on temporary insanity; the need for faith despite the rational proofs of the nonexistence of God. (It need hardly be pointed out that this is the period of work on The Brothers Karamazov.)—Madeline G. Levine, Dept. of Slavic Langauges, Univ. of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

Downs, Robert B. Books That Changed the South.

Univ. of North Carolina Pr. Mar. 1977. 296p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-13181. ISBN 0-8078-1286-2. $10.95. HIST/LIT

This is the sixth volume in Down's "Famous Books" series. His coverage of 25 seminal works is a readable survey of historical, sociological, and literary landmarks; but the critical reader will regret the scarcity of original analytical insight into recurrent social themes. The works he discusses aren't analyzed carefully enough to show "change" effected on Southern thought, and one wonders why the introduction lacks a definitive explanation of selection criteria beyond the arbitrary standard of historical effect. Moreover, why aren't recent works cited in an appendix to indicate some relevance and continuity? More contemporaneity would have made the book more useful in understanding what criteria reflect significant intellectual and social change. One respects the author's own determination of rigorous standards in selecting the 25 titles; but his criterion is puzzling when he rejects Stowe's Uncle Tom's Cabin in favor of Kemble's Journal, especially since he admits Stowe's book had greater impact and popularity. Nevertheless, there is here a broad range of historical, sociological, and literary information that one may not find available elsewhere in one volume.—Laura M. Zaidman, Dept. of English, South Georgia Coll., Douglas Dryden, Edgar A. Nathaniel Hawthorne: the poetics of enchantment.

Cornell Univ. Pr. Mar. 1977. 184p. bibliog. index. LC 76-28010. ISBN 0-8014-1028-2. $10. LIT

Dryden examines Hawthorne's work as a totality—novels, stories, sketches, nonfiction (including letters)—in an attempt to discover the recurring obsessions and attitudes that provide its underlying structures and organizing principles. He makes no attempt to give full interpretations of individual stories and novels. In exploring such themes as solitude, love, the relation between writer and reader, and homelessness, Dryden finds that the basic common structure is a movement from enchantment with these concepts, followed by disenchantment upon the discovery that their lures are deceptive, and, finally, back again. He also suggests ways in which these themes figure in the personality of the author. A sensible, intriguing, highly readable book that illuminates a side of Hawthorne and his work not revealed by the more familiar psychoanalytic and symbolic approaches.—Richard J. Kelly, Univ. of Minnesota Lib., Minneapolis

Eagleton, Terry. Criticism and Ideology: a study in Marxist literary theory.

Humanities. 1976. 191p. index. LC 76-40251. $10. LIT

Depending on the reader's perspective, Eagleton's (Marxist) analysis tries to raise, or to reduce, literary criticism to a scientific level. And although many

Library Journal recommends

The Kid-Slimming Book

By Audrey Ellis

"The problems of the overweight child are covered honestly, without neglecting the psychological factors involved. Activity needs, nutrition facts, food groups, menu planning, and a caloric chart are some of the features. Especially helpful are two difficult areas—the inclusion of daily treats in the diet and food for children's parties. Recipes comprise about two-thirds of the book.... The need for this kind of handling of a prevalent problem makes the book worth considering."—Library Journal

$12.95 cloth; $4.95 paper

HENRY Regnery COMPANY

LITERATURE

Writers in a time of upheaval

Hynes, Samuel. The Auden Generation: literature and politics in England in the 1930s.

Viking. Apr. 1977. 432p. index. ISBN 0-670-14044-9. $10.95. LIT

At last we have a comprehensive, scholarly, and well-written account of what Hynes aptly calls the "Auden generation." That generation was very much caught between two wars. Most of its members were too young to have participated in World War I (and they felt this keenly), yet they were old enough to be painfully aware of the Depression, the rise of totalitarian governments all over Europe, the Spanish Civil War, and the approaching catastrophe of World War II. Hynes spends most of his time with Auden, but also discusses C. Day Lewis, Christopher Isherwood, Louis MacNeice, Stephen Spender, Evelyn Waugh, and Anthony Powell. These writers all reacted against the powerful presence of T.S. Eliot and tried to write poetry that dealt with the economic and political upheavals of the 1930's. Though Hynes is comprehensive, Auden and Spender dominate this fascinating account, which is recommended for both specialized and general collections.—John L. DiGaetani, Dept. of English, Long Island Univ., Brooklyn will disagree with his critical orientation, his categories of materialist criticism and his discussions of aesthetic values are important polemical excursions that stimulate, but often also exasperate. The combination of literary theory and literary criticism—Eagleton, for example, delves into the social and aesthetic "organicism" of Arnold, Dickens, Conrad, Joyce, and Lawrence—makes this book particularly interesting. Sections on the historical development of Marxist theory and criticism present a lucid tableau quickly orienting the reader. Despite occasionally dense and obscure passages, this book is well written. There are good footnotes, but unfortunately no final bibliography is given. Recommended for academic libraries.—Gari R. Muller, Div. of Humanities, New Coll., Sarasota, Fla.

Emerson, Everett, ed. American Literature 1764-1789: the revolutionary years.

Univ. of Wisconsin Pr. Apr. 1977. 320p. index. ISBN 0-299-07270-3. $15. HIST/LIT

The 15 chapters by 15 professors deal with the literature of the Revolution—poems, prose, and plays. Subjects include the cultural context, the pamphleteers, theater and drama (a fine treatment), African-American writers (one of the best chapters), travelers (Carver, Bartram, Woolman), the Connecticut Wits, The Federalist, etc. Though the writings of the time have more historical than literary value, the literature did shape history. The sections on Paine, Franklin, and Freneau are summaries of known authors; those on Phillis Wheatley, Royall Tyler, and lesser figures shed some new light. Recommended for specialist and research collections.—William White, Journalism Program, Oakland Univ., Rochester, Mich.

Heywood, Christopher, ed. & intro. Aspects of South African Literature.

Africana: Holmes & Meier. 1976. 192p. index. LC 76-25033. ISBN 0-8419-0292-5. $15.50. LIT

South African literature remains the sum of many national, ethnic, and racial parts. These essays offer both historical perspective on the development of South African literature since the 19th Century and insight into the contemporary sociopolitical situation in a country which, to black liberationists, is known today as Azania. Aside from a number of essays on individual writers, black, brown, and white (Thomas Mofolo, Bessie Head, Roy Campbell, Dennis Brutus, Arthur Nortje), there are several excellent studies of the difficult environment in which this new literature attempts to grow: e.g., Nadine Gordimer's "English-Language Literature and Politics in South Africa" and Oswald Mtshali's "Black Poetry in Southern Africa: What It Means."—Thomas A. Hale, Dept. of French & Comparative Literature Program, Pennsylvania State Univ., University Park

Jennings, Elizabeth. Seven Men of Vision: an appreciation.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1977. 249p. bibliog. LC 74-9499. ISBN 0-06-493316-4. $16.50. LIT

The subtitle accurately defines the thrust of these separate studies of Yeats, Lawrence, Durrell, St-John Perse, David Jones, St. Exupéry, and Pasternak. For Jennings, these whimsically selected authors "seem to cast a great illumination over this troubled century; they have joy, a joy they have only attained through their own suffering and their own kind of surrenders." The tenuous nature of this connection indicates the major difficulty. Her exceedingly personal responses, lack of organizational control, and oversimplified generalizations leave the work without a critically refining sensibility needed to lead the reader towards any new or vital understanding. The lack of objective standards and the inconsistent employment of critical conventions and techniques preclude the volume's use for literary study.—Francine Shapiro Puk, Dept. of English, NYU

Kenney, W. Howland, ed. & intro. Laughter in the Wilderness: early American humor to 1783.

Kent State Univ. Pr. 1976. 236p. LC 75-44710. ISBN 0-87338-185-8. $12.50. HUMOR/LIT

Kenney attempts, in this anthology of early American wit and humor, to dispel "the assumption of colonial gloom" with selections culled from travel diaries, pamphlets, newspapers, verse, and plays. Successive sections are devoted to moralistic Puritans, elegant Southern gentlemen, cautious newspaper wits, and samples of the bitter invective of the Revolution. The humor, sometimes funny and sometimes not, ranges from holy laughter to scatological verse. The authors, except for Ben Franklin, are little known and mostly, justifiably so. Although designated for the general reader and including helpful background supplied by the editor, this book will be read only by those especially interested in American studies. For the academic library.—Mary E. Thatcher, Univ. of Connecticut Lib., Storrs

Mandelstam, Osip. Selected Essays.

Univ. of Texas Pr. (Dan Danciger Pub. Series). Mar. 1977. tr., intro. & notes by Sidney Monas. LC 76-22456. ISBN 0-292-76006-X. $15.95. LIT

The critical prose of Mandelstam is every bit as studded with details, allusions, and unselfconscious cerebration as his poetry. Monas has included a wide variety of Mandelstam's essays; although several have appeared in English elsewhere (some by Monas himself, and some by others), they were tucked away in periodicals and anthologies. Now gathered together and united with other essays previously unavailable in English, they yield a full portrait of the poet's abiding interests and concerns: poetry and "poetic literacy," the novel, biography, history, the role of critics, philology and the nature of language, the visual arts, music, and censorship. Monas provides a general introduction and extensive notes, both biographical and bibliographical. This book belongs in any library whose patrons take the business of poetry seriously.—Linda Hart Scatton, Dept. of Language, Literature & Communications, Rensselaer Polytechnic Inst., Troy, N.Y.

Marki, Ivan. The Trial of the Poet: an interpretation of the first edition of "Leaves of Grass."

Columbia Univ. Pr. 1976. 301p. bibliog. index. LC 76-18792. ISBN 0-231-03984-0. $17.50. LIT

In support of his thesis that "the Preface must be understood before one can make proper sense of the first poem, and the rest of the poems, in their turn, depend squarely on the first for elucidation," Marki undertakes a detailed examination of Whitman's Preface, the first poem (later Song of Myself), and the poems that follow. He argues that the themes of the Preface—America and the poet—establish a context of opposites that "merge" in a "bipolar unity" of "introversion" and "extroversion." The first poem (Song of Myself) demonstrates the pattern found in the Preface. The "I" of the poem "merges" alternately with the world outside and with the "soul" within. The following poems reflect aspects of the process discovered in the first poem and in the Preface. Making full use of the work of other scholars in the development of his argument, Marki expresses a view of Whitman that both clarifies and enlarges the work of the poet. Highly recommended for scholarly libraries.—Walter Waring, Dept. of English, Kalamazoo Coll., Mich.

Moreau, Genevieve. The Restless Journey of James Agee.

Morrow. Feb. 1977. 260p. tr. from French by Miriam Klieger with the assist. of Morty Schiff. bibliog. index. $10.95. CINEMA/LIT

Significant in the growing bibliography on film critic and novelist Agee is this excellent translation of an assessment by the distinguished French critic Moreau. As the title suggests, Agee's great gifts and limited though brilliant accomplishments are set forth in the context of his wildly undisciplined life. He could be a perfectionist, writing and rewriting and polishing night and day on a film script that would be discarded; but his masterpiece (A Death in the Family) was left unfinished, to be painstakingly assembled by editors after his death. A careful, thorough, rational, and readable study.—Nina K. Wilson, Los Angeles County P.L. System

Peck, H. Daniel. A World by Itself: the Pastoral moment in Cooper's fiction.

Yale Univ. Pr. 1977. 225p. bibliog. index. $12.50. LIT

Without denying at all their worth, Peck finds as ultimately reductive the previous emphases on social criticism, myth, frontier, landscape, and pictorialism as keys to Cooper's novels: "All . . . tend to hold his fiction at a distance, to place it rather than engage its imaginative qualities directly." Concentrating then on Cooper's purely "literary power," Peck reveals it in a searching examination of imagery, scenes, modes, borrowings, attitudes, and convictions that move ultimately toward "the pastoral moment," "when the eye takes possession of its rightful holdings"—when the pictorialism of reverie restores a sense of American permanence and allows Cooper's social anxieties to recede. Persuasive and illuminating, not only in its scholarly precision and interpretive lode but also in its clear purpose and admirable expression, this study will interest any student of 19th-Century American literature.—John R. Willingham, Dept. of English, Univ. of Kansas, Lawrence

Seelye, John. Prophetic Waters: the river in American life and Literature, 1582-1730.

Oxford Univ. Pr. Mar. 1977. 400p. maps. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-19-502047-2. $15.95. LIT

Seelye, author of the well-received The True Adventures of Huckleberry Finn (LJ 5/15/70), proposes a reinterpretation of early American literature by elevating the literature of Virginia to a status equal to that of the Puritans' literature, thereby providing "a newer and an older point of origin" for American literature. He chooses the river as the defining agent of this point, a symbol of the greatness which was sought beyond its shores, the reality thus mirrored throughout the writings of the times. Drawing extensively from histories, poetry, and other narratives often overshadowed in favor of the theological writings of the period, Seelye has found the early Americans' response to their new surroundings to be one of epic design. Consequently, his response to this vast collection of literature is equally mammoth in design and will be continued in two subsequent volumes. For large academic collections.—Betsey J. Brenneman, Fitchburg State Coll. Lib., Mass.

Seidel, Michael & Edward Mendelson, eds. Homer to Brecht: the European epic and dramatic traditions.

Yale Univ. Pr. 1977. 370p. index. ISBN 0-300-02028-7. $17.50; pap. $4.95. LIT

Based on lectures delivered at Yale over a number of years, these 16 essays trace examples of epic and dramatic literature from ancient to modern times. The first section clarifies the development of the epic's structure as poetry and novel, enumerating both standard and variable characteristics. The second portion inspects drama's concern with the disintegration of basic structures of human existence: family, city, state, gods. A conscientious, knowledgeable, never abstruse work. Bibliographical notes, appended to each essay, recommend English translations, list pertinent critical studies, and include concise biographical data for each author studied.—Jim Elledge, Mundelein Coll. Lib., Chicago

Shivers, Alfred S. Maxwell Anderson.

Twayne. (U.S. Authors). 1976. 176p. bibliog. index. LC 76-24867. ISBN 0-8057-7179-4. $7.50. LIT

That Anderson belongs in the ranks of foremost American playwrights is almost universally agreed, but the number of studies of his work is so limited that Shivers' volume can claim to be the most extensive thus far published. It also justifies its claim to be "careful, accurate, and analytical," and, in the bargain, is well written and readable. Anderson's entire career is ably surveyed and his work related to developments in drama, literature, and theatrical history. The descriptive analyses of each of Anderson's plays are if not always definitive, at least perceptive and judicious and interesting. Highly recommended for public and academic libraries.—Arthur E. Jones Jr., Drew Univ. Lib., Madison, N.J.

Wasserman, George R. Samuel "Hudibras" Butler.

Twayne. (English Authors). 1976. 152p. bibliog. index. LC 76-24859. ISBN 0-8057-6667-7. $7.50. BIOG/LIT

It is difficult to believe that this book-length criticism on Butler would be helpful to undergraduates. Butler's Hudibras, Characters, and selected writings have appeared recently in modern critical editions. Each one contains clear, relatively concise comments on Butler by the respective editors that should provide undergraduates with intelligent guides to Butler's thought and works. Also, because those commentaries are presented in conjunction with Butler's own writing, it is possible that undergraduates may read more Butler and less secondary criticism. Wasserman's work may be valuable to advanced students. Certainly they will wish to consider his remarks on Butler's thought, Characters, and the use of Hudibras in English and American poetic tradition. Therefore libraries serving such students may wish to acquire it.—Henry M. Yaple, Michigan State Univ. Libs., East Lansing

Whitman, Robert F. Shaw and the Play of Ideas.

Cornell Univ. Pr. Mar. 1977. 304p. index. LC 76-29866. ISBN 0-8014-1021-5. $14.50. LIT

Although overwritten and overly explicit, this discussion of Shaw's political morality and the plays which serve as the most transparent vehicles of it is nevertheless thought-provoking and entertaining. Whitman offers the general reader full explanations of the "meaning" of Heartbreak House, Candida, Major Barbara, Man and Superman, and Back to Methuselah, with extensive references to other Shaw plays. (He is not interested in how Shaw made his ideas function dramatically, although his chapter, "Dialectic of Dogmatism and Doubt," indicates the procedure.) He also offers specialists descriptions of Fabianism, British Marxism, etc. Recommended for university research collections; public libraries can make do with Eric Bentley's Bernard Shaw (1947).—Marilyn Gaddis Rose, Dept. of Comparative Literature, SUNY at Binghamton

MUSIC

Brask, Ole (photogs.) & Dan Morgenstern (text). Jazz People.

Abrams. 1976. 300p. intro. by James Jones. fwd. by Dizzy Gillespie. discography. bibliog. index. LC 76-14462. ISBN 0-8109-1152-3. $25. PHOTOG/MUSIC

Morgenstern is a respected jazz critic who is known for his lively and probing notes for album covers of many of today's best jazz musicians. In Jazz People he uses this same style to focus on the contributions and careers of the most significant musicians throughout the history of jazz. In separate chapters he portrays three jazz generations: the early greats, "giants of the golden age," and modern masters. He adds sections on jazz singers and "keepers of the flame." Louis Armstrong and Duke Ellington and their superstar-studded bands also stand separately. Each of the musicians is revealed through brief biographies and anecdotal interpretations of style. Brask has contributed equally with Morgenstern in exposing the personalities and capturing the spirits of these jazz people. His artful and well-reproduced photographs integrate well with the text. This is a lavish and well-produced volume, successful both as an art book and a jazz survey.—Stephen M. Fry, UCLA Music Lib.

Downes, Edward. The New York Philharmonic Guide to the Symphony.

Walker. 1976. illus. ISBN 0-8027-0540-5. $25. MUSIC

Downes, program annotator of the

New York Philarmonic Symphony for 14 years, is a distinguished musicologist who has the rare gift of being able to write about his subject for the nonspecialist, serious listener. Each of the more than 450 works described has information about the circumstances in which it was written, historical background, quotations from composers' letters, or other pertinent biographical material. Additionally, each work is described analytically, with appropriate thematic quotations. The notes also include texts of vocal works. If Downes has any prejudices, they do not appear in these notes, which comment fluently and lucidly on every composer and every work. Additionally, the text, where appropriate, is spiced with interesting anecdotes on the compositions. Essential for music collections in school, public, or university libraries.—William Shank, Graduate Sch. Lib., CUNY

Hutchings, Arthur. Mozart: the man, the musician.

Schirmer Bks.: Macmillan. 1976. 244p. illus., mainly color. fwd. by Kingsley Amis. index. LC 75-13790. $35. BIOG/MUSIC

Hutchings, a distinguished British writer on a number of musical subjects, has made an exceptionally attractive and useful contribution to the crowded field of books on Mozart. The book is attractive mainly for its well-chosen and generous selection of illustrations (170 in color and 320 in all), and it is useful for Hutchings's insights and flowing narrative. Following a common practice in musical biography, the study is divided into two sections—biography and musical discussion. This necessarily leads to some repetition of material, but it also makes it easy for the book to satisfy the interests of a variety of readers.—Allen B. Skei, Dept. of Music, California State Univ., Fresno

Philosophy

Badham, Paul. Christian Beliefs About Life After Death.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. (Lib. of Philosophy & Religion). 1977. 174p. index. LC 75-43224. ISBN 0-06-490280-3. $21.50 REL/PHIL

Only the first three chapters deal with distinctively Christian theology, while the bulk of this book attempts to resolve philosophical problems such as the intelligibility of a post-mortem existence and the mind-body problem. More accurately, it is the author's attempt to resolve problems which confound his own Christian beliefs about life after death, the relation between mind and body, and idealism. He defends the logical possibility of a psycho-physical "replica", somatically identical to the deceased person, that is resurrected in another galaxy. He rejects attempts to identify the mind with the body in favor of Cartesian dualism. And he rejects materialism. Badham's work is carefully documented; there are 703 footnotes in the 146 pages of text. But philosophical argument is mostly from authority and ideas about resurrection seem to be, with minor changes, taken over from John Hick. Not much philosophy in this book is novel.—Donald L. Smith, Dept. of Philosophy, Lakeland Community Coll., Mentor, Ohio

McInerny, Ralph. St. Thomas Aquinas.

Twayne. (World Authors). Feb. 1977. 190p. bibliog. index. LC 76-25959. ISBN 0-8057-6248-5. $8.50. REL/PHIL

This introductory study begins with a brief but excellent survey of Thomas' life and writings. Then McInerny shows how Thomas adapted to Christian uses the works of Aristotle, Boethius, and the Platonists. This gives him a chance to develop in considerable depth a good many philosophical questions: the eternity of the world, the structure of man, immortality, the teleology of human acts, the division of the sciences, the problem of universals, participation, and analogy. He concludes with a discussion of Thomas' views on the nature of theology and the preambles of faith. Considerable philosophical acumen is needed to appreciate this well-constructed survey.—W. Charles Heiser, S.J., St. Louis Univ. Lib.

Redwood, John. Reason, Ridicule and Religion: the Age of Enlightenment in England, 1660-1750.

Harvard Univ. Pr. 1976. 287p. bibliog. index. LC 75-46350. ISBN 0-674-74953-7. $12. REL/PHIL

This study concerns the various philosophical problems that led to rational theology in the British Enlightenment. Political states no longer needed God to legitimize them; mind, matter, and the disposition of the universe did not seem to need God to explain them. Scientific chronology upset biblical chronology, and theology itself was vexed about the Trinity, transsubstantiation, and revelation. Wits and cynics ridiculed the Church. The author discusses the major (as well as many minor) thinkers of the period, stopping short of Hume, who ridiculed rational theology. Redwood is a mine of information for scholars, but too opaque for anyone else.—Angelo Juffras, Dept. of Philosophy, William Paterson Coll., Wayne, N.J.

Rorty, Amélie Oksenberg, ed. The Identity of Persons.

Univ. of California Pr. 1976. 333p. bibliog. LC 75-13156. ISBN 0-520-03030-3. $14.50; pap. $4.85. PHIL

All 13 essays in this anthology are substantial. They deal with the distinguishing features of personhood, in contradistinction to some other kind of thinghood; the essential features of being a particular person; reidentifying the same person in different circumstances, at different times, or under different descriptions; evaluating and shaping oneself; distinguishing happenings from activities in a person's history; classifying the connections between mental states and behavior; and so forth. The authors have previously written extensively on the subject, and the essays reflect their mastery. The book includes an extensive bibliography and belongs in every contemporary philosophy collection.—Robert Hoffman, Dept. of Philosophy, York Coll., CUNY

POETRY

Bell, Marvin. Stars Which See, Stars Which Do Not See.

Atheneum. Feb. 1977. 54p. $3.95. POETRY

In "Dew at the Edge of a Leaf" Bell celebrates the ability of plants, deprived of sunlight at night, to reflect the moon in the dew they have gathered, and thereby "shine! shine!" It's a rare exclamatory moment in his poetry, but a fit image for Bell's own achievement. There are no grand questings threading through his work, no central visions, no risks taken in flights of language, form, or spirit; like the dew-covered leaves, he gives what light he finds by indirection. It is our native condition: "Listen! I speak to you in one tongue,/ but every moment that ever mattered to me/ occurred in another language./ Starting with my first word" he writes "To No One In Particular," in the poem of that title. But Bell uses that tongue carefully and well here, as in previous volumes. A promising development in this work is the poet's evocative reinterpretations of childhood memories of southeastern Long Island.—James McKenzie, Dept. of English, Univ. of North Dakota, Grand Forks

Berry, Wendell. Clearing.

HBJ. Mar. 1977. LC 76-27422. ISBN 0-15-118150-0. $6.95. POETRY

In Clearing, Berry repeats the message of his earlier poetry and essays. He urges us to have the ". . . wisdom to survive . . ." in order that we may leave something worthwhile for the ". . . lives or lives prepare . . . ."His poetry sustains and celebrates life. He writes of farming, the seasons, the earth's fullness, the hurt we do to the land, and the irretrievability of that waste. He has been warning us for a long time to change our ways. We should begin to listen to him more closely.—Louis Sasso, Boston P.L.

Cendrars, Blaise. Complete Postcards from the Americas: poems of road and sea.

Univ. of California Pr. 1976. 251p. tr. & intro. by Monique Chefdor. bibliog. LC 73-94445. ISBN 0-520-02716-7. $10. POETRY

This "first complete French-and-English edition of the later poems of Cendrars" contains his Documentaries, the Feuilles de Route, and Sud-Americaines. Here the distance between what the poet sees and what he says has been reduced to the minimum, so that the reader is struck with an irreducible image of the immediacy of life, as in a snapshot. But such facility in capturing surface reality and cataloguing the visual make the poems deceptively simple; thus the translation, while generally skillful, is occasionally awkward in transmitting the precision of Cendrars' response to his surroundings. Chefdor's fine critical introduction, however, is a perceptive summary of Cendrars' life and work.—Elaine F. Palencia, formerly with Harvard Univ. Lib.

Dubie, Norman. The Illustrations.
Braziller. Feb. 1977. LC 76-16637. ISBN 0-8076-0857-2. $6.95; pap. ISBN 0-8076-0858-0. $3.95. POETRY
As he did in his two earlier volumes, Dubie assumes a small gallery of personae in The Illustrations, appropriating the voices and times of Ovid, Klee, Czar Nicholas, Proust, D. H. Lawrence, Mandelstam, Madame Blavatsky, and Jacob Boehme. Seeing himself as artist, mystic, or monarch, Dubie slips easily into a borrowed historical space in order to dramatize his own, immediate present. The central poems in this tripartite collection are "The Elegies for the Ochre Deer on the Walls at Lascaux," an 18-page sequence where Dubie invents a metaphor for the passage of life, suggesting that all human beings become passengers on a train that is about to enter a dark tunnel. They make their "dark passage" to a place where prehistoric deer are still standing, "where everyone stops talking."—Daniel L. Guillory, Dept. of English, Millikin Univ., Decatur, Ill.

Hernton, Calvin. Medicine Man.
Reed, Cannon & Johnson, 285 E. Third St., New York, N.Y. 10009. 1976. 115p. LC 7611434. pap. $4.95. POETRY
Here is a major collection of a poet who, though neglected, helped to shape the direction of contemporary American poetry. Hernton says: "I write because I feel I am being outraged by life. I am alone. I am everybody. I am God. I write because I take God into my wounds and afflict him and am afflicted by all of the absurd suffering and senseless bedroom agony of the world." The poems have been collected from a wide variety of magazines and anthologies. They are lyrical and powerful, longwinded and full of the magic of a passionate man who seems to carry all the pain of being so close to his skin that it threatens to burn him alive. Highly recommended.—Clarence Major, Dept. of English, Univ. of Washington, Seattle

Lawder, Douglas. Trolling.
Little. Mar. 1977. ISBN 0-316-51661-9. $7.95; pap. ISBN 0-316-51660-0. $3.95. POETRY
This book does not live up to the expectations set by the first 16 poems. Lawder works with a low-key lyricism that gradually accumulates power, creating an ineffable intensity. After the initial impact, however, the poems seem to move too patently through prearranged categories: the political poem, the love poem, etc. At his best, Lawder is capable of creating a delicate mysteriousness. In "Hurricane Season" for instance: ". . . we woke into a black morning/ to violence that sheared/ off upstairs shutters when/ some thing came down the chimney/ and ashes floated through the dark downstairs." Too often, however, the reader gets the feeling that Lawder has written a poem because he feels he should write about a certain subject.—Lynn Emanuel, Dept. of English, Univ. of Pittsburgh

MacDonald, Susan. Dangerous as Daughters.
Five Trees Pr., 660 York St., San Francisco, Calif. 94110. 1976. unpaged. pap. $4.25; signed numbered ed. $15. POETRY
MacDonald writes from her white room "where the seed of its silence can be taken up," and there is, as the title promises, anger. Primarily she writes to cleanse and claim herself. "Who will know me?" We know her through her children, house, the intimacies of bedroom and mirror. ". . . think of me as a meadow./ unfortunately/ I am a house./ People inhabit me." Children make their claims. She is transfigured by them, gives them voice, loves them, wants them gone. An affair is a "casual interlocking"; life is precarious, shadowed by threats of stasis, sterility, thirsts. Yet she finds she has outlived her titles: "daughter, wife, mother, nurturer, sweet sal, old gal, old flame," and is comforted by the physical continuum of generation, metamorphosis. A beautifully printed book; unastonishing honest poems.—Margaret Gibson, New London, Conn.

Political Science & International Affairs

Bhabani, Sen Gupta. Soviet-Asian Relations in the 1970s and Beyond: an interperceptional study.
Praeger. (Special Studies in Internat. Politics & Govt.). 1976. 368p. index. LC 76-24368. ISBN 0-275-23740-0. $25. INT AFFAIRS
Focusing on a relatively uncharted area of international relations, this study examines how the Soviet Union and Asian states interact with one another and how "their policies and actions are influenced by their self images, their perceptions of the world and its major powers, and their mutual images of one another." The author argues that Asian nationalism and Western imperialism enabled the Soviet Union to build a strong presence in Asia. But now, "without the protective crutch of imperialism, Soviet interactions with Asian countries enter a highly complex phase of [a] mutual acceptance rejection syndrome." A useful, informative, and readable addition to the rapidly growing literature on the role of perception and psychological factors in international relations, this work should find a place on the shelves of specialized and general libraries.—Jacques Fomerand, Center for European Studies, CUNY

Farer, Tom J. War Clouds on the Horn of Africa: a crisis for détente.
Carnegie Endowment, dist. by Taplinger. 1976. 157p. bibliog. LC 76-29872. ISBN 0-87003-006-X. pap. $3.75. INT AFFAIRS
"War Clouds in the Horn of Africa," a 39-page document released by the Ethiopian government in January 1976, alerted African states to the growing

A HAWTHORN BOOK
Recommended for Libraries

THIS IS RAGTIME
by Terry Waldo

"By a musician-scholar who has a genuine feel for his subject, this is an engaging and often colorful exploration of an ever-changing, newly resurgent pop music idiom, ragtime—its roots, history, milestones, celebrated figures and its present popularity. . . . Waldo's probes are given color, heart and insight by his generously quoted talks with ragtime oldies and greats like Eubie Blake, Lu Watters, Max Morath et al."—Publishers Weekly. Photos, drawings; discography, index. ISBN 0-8015-7618-0. $10.95

HAWTHORN BOOKS
260 Madison Avenue
New York, N.Y. 10016

RECOMMENDED

"Some 300 of Warren's poems reveal his vitality, range and humanity."
—Publishers Weekly

"A splendid measure of... [Warren's] achievement, major in any century."
—Library Journal

Cloth $15 ISBN: 0-394-40531-5
Paper $6.95 ISBN: 0-394-73264-2
LC: 74-40551

ROBERT PENN WARREN
SELECTED POEMS 1923-1975

RANDOM HOUSE
201 E. 50th St. New York 10022

RECOMMENDED

tension between Ethiopia and Somalia. Farer's book, on the other hand, is a succinct anticipatory study of international policy in the Horn of Africa. Tracing the evolution of local conflicts from the colonial period to the present time, the author suggests that such conflicts pose a serious threat not only to U.S.–U.S.S.R. détente, but, given the Horn's proximity to the Suez Canal, the Persian Gulf, and the Middle East, to international peace and security as well. This well-researched and well-written book is highly recommended for Africana collections.—Maria Erlinda G. Paguio, Univ. of Illinois at Chicago Circle Lib.

Miller, Warren E. & Teresa E. Levitin. Leadership and Change: the new politics and the American electorate.

Winthrop. 1976. 267p. index. LC 76-22605. ISBN 0-87626-502-6. $10; pap. ISBN 0-87626-501-8. $6.95. POL SCI

While most political journalists report that the ideological center of American politics has moved to the Right, Miller and Levitin find evidence from recent national surveys that the shift has been decidedly to the Left. The expanded young electorate, especially, has adopted the values of the "New Left"—pro-protest, pro-counter-culture life style, and anti-authority. In 1970, 14 percent of the voters shared these feelings while 17 percent held exactly the opposite attitudes; by 1974 the new liberals represented 25 percent of the electorate while the conservatives were down to only 7 percent. Miller and Levitin's analysis will make this one of the more widely read and cited books that attempt to analyze the changing American electorate.—Edward C. Dreyer, Dept. of Political Science, Univ. of Tulsa, Okla.

Poulantzas, Nicos. The Crisis of the Dictatorships: Portugal, Greece, Spain.

Humanities. 1976. 166p. tr. by David Fernbach. index. LC 76-27303. $10.50. INT AFFAIRS/POL SCI

In drawing the deeper lessons of the overthrow of the military dictatorships in Portugal, Greece, and Spain, Poulantzas arrives at some interesting, if not always convincing conclusions. He examines the relationships between the former regimes and the rest of Western Europe and the U.S. and analyzes the dominant and popular classes and the state apparatus in the three societies. Since the main part of the volume was completed in February 1975, before some of the most relevant events took place, Poulantzas has added a long essay on recent trends in the three countries, especially Portugal. A valuable, thought-provoking book, particularly for graduate students.—Felix E. Hirsch, Professor Emeritus, Trenton State Coll., N.J.

Stockholm Internat. Peace Research Inst. (SIPRI). The Law of War and Dubious Weapons.

Humanities. 1976. 78p. bibliog. $11.25. LAW/INT AFFAIRS

This well-researched and well-written work is a superior review of the application of principles of international law to nuclear, chemical, and other forms of modern weapons. The legality of war itself is not questioned, only the means of conducting legally justifiable warfare. The authors conclude that the traditional laws of war still apply and that "mankind should put a stop to the development of increasingly sophisticated means of destruction." This volume deserves to be read and considered by all, but scholars will probably be the only readers. Because of its price, it is recommended only for legal and research libraries.—Edward Gibson, Washington Coll. Lib., Chestertown, Md.

Trilling, Richard J. Party Image and Electoral Behavior.

Wiley Interscience: Wiley. 1976. 234p. illus. index. LC 76-24794. ISBN 0-471-88935-0. $14.95. POL SCI

The dramatic and monumental changes that have occurred since the mid-1960's in electoral politics and behavior have stimulated a variety of inquiries about what has been happening to the party-electoral system. A refreshingly new perspective is provided by Trilling in this in-depth study of the "images"—the likes and dislikes—the American electorate expresses toward the two major parties. Utilizing survey data collected since 1952 by the University of Michigan's Center for Political Studies, Trilling finds that party images can explain a good deal about electoral change and stability. Indeed, he maintains that the parties have lost their psychological hold on voters in large part because of the declining significance of the parties' traditional images and their failure to develop stabilizing new meanings. This is a vital book for political analysts and citizens interested in electoral politics.—Edward C. Dreyer, Dept. of Political Science, Univ. of Tulsa, Okla.

Tucker, Robert W. The Inequality of Nations.

Basic Bks. Mar. 1977. 193p. index. ISBN 0-465-03245-1. $10.95. INT AFFAIRS

What are the consequences of the new egalitarianism pervading current international politics? Is the utility of traditional forms of power declining among nations? Is the traditional state-centered system giving way to a more stable and orderly arrangement based on interdependence? These are some of the questions this rich and penetrating book seeks to answer. Focusing on the impact of the Third World on global politics, Tucker argues that the forces that seem to be drawing the state out of its former autonomy are quite ambiguous. The international political system may indeed become more egalitarian; it will not, however, necessarily become stable and legitimate, since its basic unit remains the sovereign state. In fact, Tucker seems to think that interdependence will increase the likelihood of conflicts. Clear and written in plain language, this timely theory-oriented study has great heuristic value. Primarily intended for a scholarly audience, it is also accessible to the general public.—Jacques Fomerand, Center for European Studies, CUNY

Psychology&Psychiatry

Arieti, Silvano & James Arieti. Love Can Be Found: a guide to the most desired and most elusive emotion.

HBJ. 1977. 240p. index. LC 76-27406. ISBN 0-15-154722-X. $8.95. PSYCH

Silvano Arieti, an M.D. and psychoanalyst, and James Arieti, Ph.D., his son, believe love has not been thoroughly scrutinized from a psychological vantage point. This book, a selection of two psychologically oriented book clubs, attempts to provide a useful framework for thinking about the subject. The first quarter examines five types of love—love of family, "the other," work, God, and oneself—through the major philosophers, Freud, and the more recent conceptions of Fromm and May. This is the weakest part of the book, often bloodless and pedantic. The central part, dealing with man/woman relationships, makes valuable recommendations for finding and sustaining love in relationships, even those that have been neurotic. The final pages, "a theory of love," are exciting. This makes the tepid stretches all the more unfortunate. Disappointing.—Mary Pradt Ziegler, Brooklyn P.L.

Clynes, Manfred. Sentics: the touch of emotions.

Anchor: Doubleday. 1977. fwd. by John Osmundsen. illus. bibliog. LC 74-17608. ISBN 0-385-08605-9. $7.95. BIOLOGY/PSYCH

This book describes the development of an entirely new approach in neuroscience to understanding subjective experience and the nature of emotion. The author, who is a neurophysiologist, computer engineer (he developed the CAT computer, used in most neurophysiology labs), and accomplished musician, has brought together his considerable interests and talents to try to develop methods to make emotional states objectively measurable, reproducible, and even capable of being precisely communicated. Clynes's conclusions are based on study of "sentic states," emotional states that are measured as they are being expressed through finger pressure. Each sentic state (so far Clynes has closely studied anger, love, grief, sex, hate, a neutral emotional state, and reverence) has a unique movement signature that turns out to be almost identical for all the hundreds of people whose "sentograms" have been measured. The philosophical implications (here is a new "window" on the mind-body problem) as well as the scientific implications are great. There are medical offshoots, too, since experiencing "sentic cycles" seems to help emotional disturbances. But much work remains before these promising but controversial beginnings will be realized.—George Adelman, Neurosciences Research Program, M.I.T., Boston

Havens, Leston L., M.D. Participant Observation.

Jason Aronson. 1976. 179p. bibliog. index. LC 75-42532. ISBN 0-87668-216-6. $10. PSYCH

This short volume aims at describing techniques of the Harry Stack Sullivan school of psychoanalysis as well as comparing, contrasting, and integrating many of the notions of the other major schools of psychotherapy. It is clear that author Havens is an experienced and astute clinician, and much can be learned from the clinical material he presents to illustrate his methods. However, the book itself is poorly written. Complex ideas are presented in an unclear and vague fashion. New perspectives on psychoanalytic notions are also touched on, but Havens doesn't allow himself the space to develop them adequately, frequently leaving the reader quite bewildered.—Fred Wright, Dept. of Psychology, John Jay Coll. of Criminal Justice, New York

Masterton, Graham. Women's Erotic Dreams (And What They Mean).

Regnery. 1976. 211p. LC 76-11214. ISBN 0-8092-8032-9. $10. PSYCH

This is essentially an exclusively female version of Masterton's earlier book, 1,001 Erotic Dreams Interpreted (LJ 5/1/76). He discusses common erotic motifs in women's dreams, guidelines for analyzing one's own dreams, and a historical overview of dream analysis. Masterton's best point is his emphasis on interpretation in the context of the individual, and his approach is neither overly clinical nor frivolous. The dreams which he describes also make interesting reading. A bibliography, however, would be welcome. For feminist/self-help collections.—Martha Cornog, Auerbach Assocs., Professional Information Center, Philadelphia

Szasz, Thomas. Schizophrenia: the sacred symbol of psychiatry.

Basic Bks. 1976. 237p. index. LC 76-27251. ISBN 0-465-07222-4. $10. PSYCH

Szasz's latest book unfortunately continues to adopt the same careless approach to content as its predecessor, Psychiatric Slavery (LJ 1/15/77), only here the target is schizophrenia, and secondarily those who "practice" psychiatry and antipsychiatry. According to the author, schizophrenia would disappear if psychiatry were abolished, since it is a literalized metaphor which both psychiatrists (through hospitals, drugs and doctors) and antipsychiatrists (through hostels such as R. D. Laing's) continue to "treat." Since there is no "disease," there is nothing to "treat," and society should withdraw its support from any such attempts at intervention. Involuntary treatment and commitment are also, once again, condemned. These points are embedded in a rambling text filled with slurring remarks (as in the references to Mary Barnes who was a resident at R. D. Laing's Kingsley Hall), glaring omissions (the work done on the etiology of schizophrenia over the last 30 years is largely ignored, while Szasz, beating the proverbial dead horse, inveighs against the disease model of mental illness), and outright sloppiness (the quotes from Corinthians I are the words of St. Paul, not Jesus). It is difficult to imagine the audience for whom this book is intended. It certainly should not be recommended to anyone as a first book on the subject.—Joan W. Gartland, Univ. of Detroit Lib.

Watzlawick, Paul & John H. Weakland, ed. & comm. The Interactional View: studies at the Mental Research Institute, Palo Alto, 1965-1974.

Norton. Feb. 1977. 424p. index. $12.50. PSYCH

Over 20 years after its inception, family therapy has become a respected psychotherapeutic alternative. Assumptions that seemed radical in the 1950's are accepted wisdom now, and with respectability has come a proliferation of theories and therapeutic techniques centered around the family system rather than the individual. A measure of progress in the study of family dynamics, this book suggests the expanding breadth of the field in its clear definition of the significant corner occupied by the communication theorists. An anthology of previously published papers by workers at the Mental Research Institute, it is, in a sense, a memorial to Don Jackson, the central figure at MRI until his death. Several of his classic early studies are included, and all the papers in this volume owe a debt to him. Of particular value are the papers reprising the early work on schizophrenia and the "double-bind" hypothesis, as well as several articles describing new approaches to therapy. A final section enlarges the scope of the collection to include aspects of medical care and the family. Though generally well written, the occasional trade-off of psychoanalytically obscure jargon for cybernetically obscure jargon does not improve understanding. But this is a minor (and probably generic) complaint; The Interactional View belongs in any collection of family therapy literature.—James Charney, Dept. of Psychiatry, Yale Univ. Sch. of Medicine

Weekes, Claire, M.D. Agoraphobia: simple, effective treatment.

Hawthorn. 1977. 192p. ISBN 0-8015-0111-3. $7.95. MED/PSYCH

In addition to its narrow meaning (fear of open spaces), agoraphobia as described here includes such attendant anxiety symptoms as panic, giddiness, and palpitations. The simple treatment which Weekes has developed and used successfully may sound at first like a standard formula, but her method is both psychologically and physiologically sound. Her four steps for coping: face fear and dread—don't flee from them; accept the unpleasant feelings; float mentally above or around the terrifying symptoms; let time pass without losing courage. She wrote this book primarily for therapists and paramedicals, although anyone involved in counseling can gain insight from it. Readers seeking immediate relief, however, will benefit more from her earlier book, Hope and Help for Your Nerves (LJ 4/15/69). Weekes' compassionate, common sense approach sets her apart from many psychotherapists who either cling to traditional theories or take up every passing fad. I hope some of them will consider the concepts set forth in this wise book.—Sammy Staggs, Columbia Univ. Libs., New York

PSYCHOLOGY

Parapsychology & Occultism

Brown, Michael H. PK: a report on PsychoKinesis.

Multimedia. 1976. 320p. illus. bibliog. LC 76-21121. ISBN 0-8334-0716-3. $9.95; pap. ISBN 0-8334-1776-2. $5.95. PARAPSYCH

With enthusiasm, perseverance and journalistic skill Brown has researched the background of PK and has observed and interviewed sensitives who operate in "a strange area where objects move through no physical means, furniture inexplicably levitates, and spoons bend through what could be a power of the human psyche." Brown is convinced that these are genuine psychokinetic phenomena and has nothing but admiration for current practitioners. But he does not seem to go along with the belief that these paranormal powers come from "the other side" or from outer space. He feels that "an energy not yet understood by the scientific establishment is at work," connected with the human aura made visible through Kirlian photography. Credit is given to all the pioneers who have contributed to the literature of psychokinesis but no judgment is made concerning their degree of reliability, which probably gives some of them more status than they deserve. Nonetheless, this is a comprehensive, well-written account which pulls together fascinating facts and fancies about a timely subject.—Eleanor Touhey Smith, New York

"That most modern sensibility, R. D. Laing, returns with poems that show a continuing attentiveness to the everyday exchanges (some would say epiphanies) of existence. As in Knots there are dialogues that conjure up the repeated themes of therapy sessions — but there are also shorter, more conventional forms, even some with quizzical rhyme."

—Kirkus Reviews

LC: 76-9983 $4.95 0-394-40017-8

DO YOU LOVE ME?
by R. D. Laing

Recommended

Library Journal recommends

Nature at War

By Hal Butler

"Butler presents an exciting chronicle of weather phenomena that have destroyed man and ravaged earth. He discusses earthquakes, hurricanes, volcanoes, floods, blizzards, and tornadoes, and cites major examples of each: e.g., the 1811 earthquake in New Madrid, Missouri, the aftermath of which lasted 'for two years.' Recommended for weather buffs and disaster fans."
—Library Journal

Illustrated • $9.95

HENRY Regnery COMPANY

Books on Energy Technology

Nuclear Power Plant Systems and Equipment

By Kenneth C. Lish. 183 pp., 128 ill., $17.50

Describes, on a generic basis, all the systems and equipment required in a nuclear steam supply system.

Fuel Oil Manual, 3rd Edition

By Paul F. Schmidt. 263 pp., 16 ill., 42 tables, $15.00

"...provides a complete look at fuel oil technology."—Plant Engineering

Design of High Pressure Steam and High Temperature Water Plants

By William L. Sculthorpe. 8½" x 11", 103 pp., $17.50

Practical "how to design" information for the engineer—information which is completely integrated for both kinds of plants.

Industrial Press Inc.
200 Madison Avenue
New York, NY 10016
Publishers of Machinery's Handbook

religion

Coleman, William L. Those Pharisees.
Hawthorn. Feb. 1977. 160p. bibliog. LC 75-20903. ISBN 0-8015-7646-6. pap. $3.95. REL

To some extent, this short work is successful in surveying Jewish history, the ancient persecutions that made a conserving group like the Pharisees necessary, and some of the dialogues between Jesus and the Pharisees. But, except for the brief summary of Jewish history and a rearrangement of Bible quotations, it offers little for the biblical scholar. There is no additional information through nonbiblical sources. The author also has an irritating manner of trying to be contemporary ("Mickey Mousing around with oaths") or to sermonize ("the modern employer who underpays employees on Friday and sings hymns on Sunday"). A church or a public library might find this useful; academic libraries should avoid it.—David Hornbeck, Univ. of Utah Lib., Salt Lake City

The Concise Jewish Bible.
Sanhedrin Pr: Hebrew Pub. 1976. 234p. ed. & tr. by Philip Birnbaum. LC 76-49108. ISBN 0-88482-450-0. $7.95; pap. ISBN 0-88482-451-9. $3.95. REL

Birnbaum, author of A Book of Jewish Concepts (Hebrew Pub., 1975) and editor and translator of the classics and liturgy of Judaism, has here compiled an abridged version of the Hebrew Bible. He has newly translated excerpts of the biblical text in a short, succinct manner making the prose sections, e.g., the historical Books, more readable and the narrative easier to follow. He has, however, rendered the poetic portions into a terse prose style lacking the poetic beauty, the cadence, and the nuances inherent in the Hebrew and conveyed by the previous translations. Birnbaum has added an informative and well-written introduction describing the various sections of the Bible and giving a brief history of its development. He has also added a short note about each individual Book. This supplements but does not replace other abridgments of the Bible such as Mortimer Cohen's Pathways through the Bible (1946). For inclusive collections.—Maurice Tuchman, Hebrew Coll. Lib., Brookline, Mass.

Fox, Matthew. Whee! We, Wee, All the Way Home: a guide to the new sensual spirituality.
Consortium: McGrath, Box 9001, Wilmington, N.C. 28401. 1976. 226p. LC 76-19775. ISBN 0-8434-0606-2. $10. REL

The author is very much an avant-garde priest of the Catholic Church. Despite the breezy title of this book (his last one on American spirituality was titled On Becoming a Musical, Mystical Bear!), Whee! is provocative, exciting, and radical both in its scope and ideas. Defining spirituality as "a way of living in depth," Fox contends that only a spirituality which values the sensual and the ecstatic can be relevant in today's culture. Considering the ordinary experiences of sheer delight in living in the world as the way we experience God, he deals with the ways delight (ecstasy) can be heightened ("how we get high all the time on nature, friendship, sex, the arts, sports, thinking, travel, and involuntary deprivations"); the strategies for bringing about ecstatic experiences; and the obstacles to ecstasy. He then develops a theology of "sensual spirituality" which is both socially relevant and psychologically sound. Although he describes it as a "simple book for simple people," his book nevertheless demands considered thought and an openness to wholly new ways of considering hallowed ideas and practices.—Brewster Y. Beach, Member, New York Assn. for Analytical Psychology

L'Engle, Madeleine. The Irrational Season.
Crossroad: Seabury. Feb. 1977. 215p. $8.95. REL

In these essay-meditations on major events of the Christian year—Advent, Easter, Pentecost, etc.—L'Engle writes intelligently about perplexing theological questions. She discusses the mystery of God's love; the doubt inherent in faith; the folly of approaching divine matters with the intellect alone, while excluding the intuition. But just as the juices begin to flow, and we anticipate a savory sermon, wham! She interrupts with religious verse (either ponderously abstract or greeting-card mellow) or with long autobiographical passages. Some of her anecdotes are interesting, but she has simply put in too many. As a professional writer, she is qualified to enlighten us where academic theologians seldom venture. As an Anglican, she has a religious sense poised between reason and mysticism. I hope she will use these qualifications more judiciously in future books.—Sammy Staggs, Columbia Univ. Lib., New York

Sontag, Frederick. Love Beyond Pain: mysticism within Christianity.
Paulist Pr. 1977. 144p. ISBN 0-8091-1998-6. pap. $4.50. REL

Encountering Eastern mystical thought during a study trip in Japan brought the author to explore his own Western mystical tradition. In this book he raises the question of how love may be purified, altered, or changed so that it can become a divine vehicle and the avenue for a more powerful disclosure of God than reason. Sontag asserts that there seems to be no way to press love beyond pain except "by exploring one's interior depths and thus risking confrontation with God." Having expressed a genuine and unpretentious desire for such love beyond pain, he then goes on to outline 14 practical steps to be followed in one's life so that the revolutionary power of love may be released. Although seemingly difficult to practice, these steps promise an effective means for achieving an altered life style without withdrawing from society.—Maria Erlinda G. Paguio, Univ. of Illinois at Chicago Circle Lib.

Stacey, David. Interpreting the Bible.
Hawthorn. Feb. 1977. 128p. index. ISBN 0-8015-4077-1. pap. $3.50. REL
This small volume provides the layman or beginning scholar with basic information about biblical scholarship without championing any one particular point of view. It covers such topics as mythology, miracles, unity of the Bible, and canon. Stacey has a skill for explaining complicated issues, and he evaluates different views of the Bible—such as liberal, fundamentalist, existentialist—objectively, covering all sides of any argument.—David S. Hornbeck Jr., Univ. of Utah Lib., Salt Lake City

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

Beaty, David. The Water Jump: the story of transatlantic flight.
Harper. Mar. 1977. 320p. illus. LC 76-5116. ISBN 0-06-010296-9. $10. HIST/AERONAUTICS
This English import is another history of the conquest of the Atlantic Ocean by the airplane. The first quarter parallels Edward Jablonski's Atlantic Fever (LJ 8/72) but with less detail; the rest of the work recounts material generally ignored elsewhere on the flood of air traffic caused by World War II and on the origins of commercial passenger and freight travel to Europe. Beaty's often lyrical account is leavened by personal anecdotes and an insider's perspective (he flew with the Royal Air Force and was a pilot for B.O.A.C.). Photo coverage of early events is, like the text, presented in greater depth by Jablonski, but Beaty adds about 60 photos illustrating aircraft and events from the war to the present. An interesting entry for aviation collections.—Mel D. Lane, Sacramento, Calif.

Lipkin, Mack, M.D. Straight Talk About Your Health Care.
Harper. Feb. 1977. 192p. LC 75-25046. ISBN 0-06-012638-8. $7.95. HEALTH
Dr. Lipkin has prepared an innocuous little book that skims the surface of health-care concepts. The text covers diagnosis and treatment of illness, hospitals, choosing a physician, classes of drugs, mental illness—quite a lot of material for such a small book. And while there are no errors there is not much depth. The writing, especially at the beginning of the book, tends to be dull. The book may find use among YA's writing term papers on health care.—Charla Leibenguth, Butler Univ. Lib., Indianapolis

Agriculture & Animal Husbandry

Amory, Cleveland. Animail.
Dutton. 1976. 210p. drawings by Robert Kraus. intro. by Mary Tyler Moore. LC 76-21692. ISBN 0-525-61558-X. $7.95. COMM/PETS
This compilation of questions and answers from Amory's newspaper column, "Animails," is fun to read or just browse through. Both amusing and sad anecdotes about wild and domestic creatures of all sorts, an astrology chart to match pets and owners, occasional poems, stories, and even a recipe for vegetarian dog biscuits are included in the six major sections. Amory wittily describes a seeing-eye cat, a dog who fought in the Civil War, the low "divorce" rate among penguins, and more. Kraus' black-and-white drawings add an extra touch to the fun.—Marion Amdursky, Albion, Mich.

Davis, Lloyd H. Keeping a Horse in the Suburbs.
Stephen Greene. 1976. 164p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-13808. ISBN 0-8289-0285-2. $8.95. ANIMAL HUSBANDRY
Here is a survival manual for suburban horse-lovers and would-be horse owners. Beginning with a brief view of the rewards and penalties of horse ownership, Davis progresses to consider types of horses, tack, amount of land needed, what to feed, what types of fences to use, and how to get along with the neighbors. He also discusses probable costs, and warns of avoidable hazards ranging from nails in the fences to children in the field. Appended are a glossary, bibliography, list of state horse councils, list of horse magazines, and list of breed registries. Unique and useful, this book should be considered by most suburban libraries.—Suzan H. Stephenson, Prince George's County Memorial Lib., Md.

Fryer, Lee & Dick Simmons. Food Power from the Sea: the seaweed story.
Mason/Charter. Feb. 1977. 241p. illus. by Christine Becker. index. ISBN 0-88405-383-0. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-88405-404-7. $4.95. AGRICULTURE
The title of this book is misleading: it is not about seaweed as food, but as fertilizer. The authors advocate the use of seaweed, fish products, blood, manure from feed lots, and other natural products as fertilizer, rather than the commonly used synthetic products. Although statistics and other information collected from government and university laboratory technical reports supply some useful facts on the composition and methods of using these products, these facts are dispersed throughout many pages of anecdotal prose, such as a section about "Oscar Wood's Giant Beanstalk." The result is a poorly organized mix of technical information and journalese which I find very irritating. Appendixes give analyses of seaweed and a directory of suppliers and agencies. Recommended only for complete collections.—Eleanor A. Maass, Swarthmore Coll. Lib., Pa.

Gregory, Diana. Dairy Goats.
Arco. Feb. 1977. 127p. photogs. index. LC 76-235. ISBN 0-668-03938-8. $7.95; pap. ISBN 0-668-03941-8. $3.95. ANIMAL HUSBANDRY
Written from considerable experience and with great affection, this is a good guide to dairy goat farming for the layman. Chapters cover buying, varieties, housing, feeding, milking, cooking with goat's milk, breeding, raising kids, and coping with illness. An appendix lists breed registry associations, publications, and organizations. The author, while demonstrating that raising goats can be fun, never loses sight of the attention that must be paid to the health and welfare of the family dairy goat.

95% OF AMERICAN MEN HAVE -OR WILL HAVE-"MALE TROUBLE".

MALE TROUBLE
A New Focus on the Prostate
by Gilbert Cant

Male Trouble
by Gilbert Cant

Gilbert Cant, former Medicine Editor of Time magazine, "does a commendable job of exposing the prostate to 20th-century knowledge while dispelling the 19th-century myths surrounding its functions. The information is deliverd in a psychologically reassuring manner without camouflaging the problems an abnormal prostate can cause. Disorders ranging from infections to cancer are discussed in an easy-to-read manner, as are their current treatments. Recommended for public and patient libraries." — Library Journal

A Frank E. Taylor Book
146 pp. 3 diagrams, index
LC 75-14646 ISBN 0-275-56370-7 $6.95

PRAEGER PUBLISHERS

For the novice goat owner her book is probably more useful than David Mackenzie's Goat Husbandry (Transatlantic, 1957), which is highly comprehensive and includes a good deal of theory, and it also may be an improvement over Helen Walsh's many times reprinted Starting Right With Milk Goats (Garden Way Pub., 1972. pap.). Rural and small city public libraries should consider adding this title.—Louise B. Hodges, Amherst County P.L., Va.

Library Journal recommends

Five of a Kind

By William J. Plummer

"The story of 'five little quail and how they grew' is told in the author's latest book about wild animals with whom he and his family have shared their Las Vegas home.... Here the adoption of the chicks at the age of a few days, their upbringing (with its joys and hazards), and their eventual release (with one quail opting for life with the Plummers) are thoroughly and lovingly described. Their escapades... will be of interest to nature lovers."

—Library Journal

Illustrated • $7.95

HENRY Regnery COMPANY

REPRINT TITLES

TORRANCE: Guiding Creative Talents 289 pp. $11.50
WEITZ: Behavior Change Through Guidance 225 pp. $11.50
ESCOBAL: Methods of Astrodynamics 640 pp. $19.00
GOLDMAN: Maintainability: A Major Element of System Effectiveness (University of California Eng. & Phys. Sciences Ext. Series) 282 pp. $16.50
GREENE: Physiology of Spinal Anesthesia 2nd ed. 257 pp. In Prep.
LANG: Absorption Spectra in the Ultraviolet and Visible Region Vol. 21 In Prep.
LONGREE: Sanitary Techniques in Food Service 237 pp. $9.95
SCHWARTZ: Introduction to Special Relativity In Prep.

ROBERT E. KRIEGER PUBLISHING CO., INC.
645 NEW YORK AVENUE or P. O. Box 542
HUNTINGTON, N. Y. 11743

Logsdon, Gene. Small-Scale Grain Raising.

Rodale Pr. Feb. 1977. 208p. index. ISBN 0-87857-134-5. $7.95; pap. ISBN 0-87857-147-7. $3.95. AGRICULTURE

Practical methods for raising small amounts of grain as a key to food security are explained in this book. Logsdon discusses raising, harvesting, and storing grains for family consumption and for livestock feed. The grains he considers include corn, wheat, sorghum, oats, soybeans (technically legumes), rye, barley, buckwheat, millet, rice, and some uncommon grains. He provides recipes for using all of these and for winnowing, grinding, or otherwise preparing them for use by employing standard garden or kitchen equipment. The book is not intended for commercial growers but for homesteaders, organic gardeners, and others who seek independence from commercial products and who may not have considered the feasibility of raising grain on a limited land area. There is an excellent illustrated glossary of grain equipment and terms for planting, weed control, and harvesting. Recommended for rural and small city libraries.—Louise B. Hodges, Amherst County P.L., Va.

Botany & Horticulture

Moment, Barbara Chipman. The Salad Green Gardener.

Houghton. Feb. 1977. 160p. illus. by Julie Maas. ISBN 0-395-25019-6. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-395-25057-9. $5.95. COOKERY/HORT

A delightful treatise on greens in the garden, this little book is filled with useful information. Included are helpful hints on growing and using lettuce and related salad greens; recipes; ideas on pest control; and a good deal more. The book will be particularly useful for city gardeners where space is limited, for it deals with indoor as well as outdoor gardens. Illustrations add whimsy rather than complementary information. The author is a believer in organic gardening methods: for example, she recommends picking off worms and discouraging rodents rather than poisoning them along with the environment. An excellent book, even though its scope is necessarily a limited one.—Gordon S. Wade, Carroll P.L., Iowa

Weaver, Robert J. Grape Growing.

Wiley-Interscience: Wiley. 1976. 371p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-22753. ISBN 0-471-92324-9. $15. BEVERAGES/HORT

With the expanding interst in wines, it is only natural that this book on the home cultivation of grapes should appear. The coverage is quite complete, with chapters on the structure, breeding, selection, propagation, growth conditions, nutrition, harvest, and pests of grapes. Brief consideration is given to wines and wine making, but more complete instructions should be sought in works specifically on this subject. The information varies in quality: in spots (especially in the section on training/pruning) it is quite thorough, while in others (e.g., portions of the morphology section) it is superficial. Furthermore, one occasionally encounters confusing editorial inconsistencies. In spite of these difficulties, this is a good single-volume source for the home gardener, and deserves a place on the shelves of public libraries.—Bruce H. Tiffney, Paleobotanical Labs., Dept. of Biology, Harvard Univ.

Natural History & Zoology

Eiserer, Len. The American Robin: a backyard institution.

Nelson-Hall. 1976. 175p. illus. by Martha R. Hall. index. LC 76-25438. ISBN 0-88229-228-5. $12.50. ZOOLOGY

This informal, nontechnical book is actually a synthesis drawn from hundreds of references; most of the facts have come from others but Eiserer is the first to pull them together into this "comprehensive description of the robin's entire life cycle." The book should help anyone wanting to know more about those cheerful inhabitants of lawn and shade tree—it tells of breeding, nesting, migration, life span, and all the rest. The American Robin can also be used as an introduction to avian behavior in general, since the robin's behavior is similar to that of many other songbirds. Brimming with information, attractively illustrated, and easy to read, this book is recommended for school and public libraries.—Helen J. Stiles, NOAA-ERL Lib., Dept. of Commerce, Boulder, Colo.

Ogburn, Charlton. The Adventure of Birds.

Morrow. 1976. 381p. drawings by Matthew Kalmenoff. bibliog. index. LC 76-13502. ISBN 0-688-03080-7. $10.95. NAT HIST

Ogburn, author of several other quality nature books, is obviously enthralled with bird watching, and he imparts this enthusiasm in this volume. Drawing extensively from much of the best writing about birds, he takes a rather intellectual look at a wealth of interesting phenomena concerning wild birds: migration, breeding, behavior, etc. He also does a fine job explaining the increasingly popular subculture of the birder. A veteran world traveler, Ogburn is very keen both on the aesthetics of birds and on their local significance. Much of the text of the present work concerns the Middle Atlantic states. This delightful book is recommended, especially for public libraries.—Henry T. Armistead, Thomas Jefferson Univ. Lib., Philadelphia color photogs. by the author. LC 76-8368. ISBN 0-528-81851-1.

Parks, Peter. Underwater Life.

Rowland-Entwistle, Theodore. Insect Life.

LC 76-8367. ISBN 0-528-81850-3.

ea. vol: Rand McNally. (World You Never See). 1976. 128p. color photogs. index. $9.95. PHOTOG/NAT HIST

This is an unusual series: unlike most illustrated natural history books, these concentrate on animals and features that most people will never see. The books have been written and photographed by a group of zoologists who are the producers of Oxford Scientific Films in Britain. Naturally, photographs play a major part in the books, and many new and difficult photographic techniques are exhibited. Each volume contains about 300 photographs in color; they are clear, enlightening, and fascinating. And in both cases reviewed here, the substantial accompanying text is written with clarity, vigor, and even humor. Underwater Life covers life in all forms of water, and ranges from microscopic plants and animals to the strange life of the deepest oceans. Insect Life covers food, reproduction, camouflage, etc., and shows many unusual insects. A good feature of both books is that they often show a series of pictures—probably from motion-picture sequences—of the same animal in different phases or actions. These are excellent buys for school and public libraries, and one hopes more books in the series will soon appear.—John S. Robotham, N.Y.P.L.

Technology

Derven, Ronald & Carol Nichols. How To Cut Your Energy Bills: a successful book.

Structures Pub. Co. 1976. illus. index. LC 76-28727. ISBN 0-912336-28-5. $12; pap. ISBN 0-912336-29-3. $4.95. ENVIRONMENT/TECH

This book shows how a typical home can be made more energy efficient. The operation and evaluation of heating and cooling systems and lighting and appliances are explored and, for specific topics such as window leakage or attic insulation, remedies or improvements are suggested. The book is detailed yet not unduly technical. Chapters on solar energy and energy-efficient room additions are included, and there is a checklist for seasonal changes. Heavily laden with "how-to" photos and excellent illustrations, this timely and well-written book should have wide reader appeal.—Gerard Cullen, Datapoint Business Computers, San Antonio, Tex.

Hull, Peter & Nigel Arnold-Forster. Seventeen Sports Cars 1919-1930: landmarks in automobile design.

Bentley. 1976. 240p. photogs. index. LC 76-17410. ISBN 0-8376-0085-5. $12.50. SPORTS/TECH

Hull and Arnold-Forster, two veteran vintage car freaks, have put together a collection of brief descriptions of 17 sports cars of the period 1919-1930. Since there is an endless debate as to what is "vintage" and what is a "sports car," some will find a favorite missing or an improper inclusion—depending on one's definition. All the marques are interesting: Alfa Romeo, Vauxhall, Frazer Nash, G. N., Lagonda, Salmson, Trojan, etc. Every car nut will find several to prick his curiosity. The descriptions are concise and technical, but not dry. Forty photos and some line drawings and diagrams complement the text. John Bolster's The Upper Crust (LJ 12/1/76), L. J. K. Setright's The Designers (LJ 12/1/76), and Richard Burns Carson's The Olympian Cars (LJ 11/1/76) are similar, yet cover different makes with a somewhat different slant. The 17 in this one could have been owned by the average person. Recommended for automotive collections.—Susan Ebershoff-Coles, Indianapolis-Marion County P.L., Ind.

Middleton, Drew. Submarine: the ultimate naval weapon—its past, present & future.

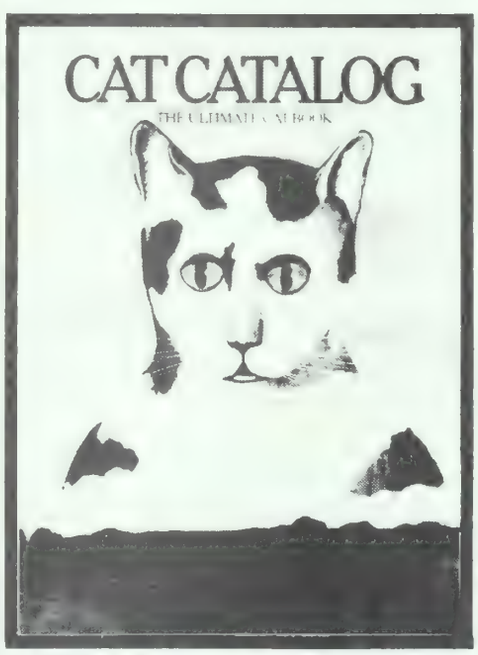
Playboy, dist. by S. & S. 1976. 256p. photogs. index. LC 76-7850. ISBN 0-87223-472-X. $12.95. HIST/TECH

After briefly tracing the history of the submarine from earliest times to the present, Middleton discusses the technological advances that have made the nuclear-powered and nuclear-armed submarine the awesome weapon it is today. He feels that these advances have made the relation of the submarine to the carrier what the carrier was to the battleship. Armed with nuclear war-heads and sophisticated weapon systems and able to travel at high speed and remain under water for months at a time, a fleet of today's submarines, Middleton points out, could easily command the seas in the event of any conventional or nuclear war. Notwithstanding the subject matter and lucid narrative, this book will be of interest mainly to submarine buffs.—George F. Scheck, SUNY at Oswego Lib.

A HIGHLY RECOMMENDED BEST SELLER!

"An incredible, visually pleasing compendium of cat lore, care, and philosophy . . . The extensive illustrations and the highly readable text recommend this book for placement in public libraries . . ."
—LIBRARY JOURNAL

"Encompasses everything an ailurophile could want to know about cats—their history and lore, their place in literature and art, their breeds, their sex habits and health problems, their care and entertainment—all of it embellished with poems, stories, photographs, plus such side dishes as needlepoint designs."
—THE NEW YORK TIMES BOOK REVIEW



350 pp. 9"x12".
Photographs and line illustrations; charts and diagrams.
LC 76-25473; CIP
Cloth $12.50 Paper $6.95

"Behavior, nutrition, anatomy, IQ, toilet training and so much more are touched on here that there's no disputing this is the ultimate cat book to date."
—PUBLISHERS WEEKLY

"The book's variety and charm make it a something-for-everyone volume."
—ALA BOOKLIST

New York Times Best Seller
Publishers Weekly Best Seller

Workman Publishing Company
231 East 51 Street
New York, New York 10022

Social Science

Bidwell, Sidney. Red, White & Black: race relations in Britain.

Atheneum. 1977. 213p. fwd. by Michael Foot. illus. index. $14.95. SOC SCI

For an activist M.P. with particular experience in the area of racial assimilability, Bidwell has produced a surprisingly uninformative volume, one that is neither definitive nor helpful even for introductory purposes. He haphazardly catalogs the difficulties encountered in the gradual absorption of West Indians and Asians into contemporary British society. Bidwell's socialist loyalties become apparent only when he suggests that increased government intervention is the primary hope for a viable interracial system. Though some of the material on Parliament's dilatory record is of interest, this book adds little to the existent literature.—Mark R. Yerburgh, SUNY at Albany Lib.

Images of the World in the Year 2000: a comparative ten nation study ed. by H. Ornauer & others.

Humanities. (Publications of the European Coordination Centre for Research & Documentation in Social Sciences, 7). 1976. 729p. illus. index. ISBN 0-391-00647-9. $45. SOC SCI

Bring together 23 social scientists from 11 nations to conduct simultaneous public opinion surveys on the expectations, hopes, and anxieties of 11,000 individuals (ages 15 to 40) concerning the future—particularly the year 2000—in their respective nations. Compile the results of their efforts in a single volume, and you have Images. Numerous conferences during the ten-year period of the project, excellent editorial oversight, and methodological sophistication have combined to produce a work that is a group effort yet clearly focused, suffused with data yet readable, and complex yet not obtuse. Major findings of the project are intriguing: e.g., "future-consciousness is least developed in the countries ranking high on technical-economic development." This trailblazing work in futurology is essential for subject collections.—Stephen M. Lowry, Dept. of Political Science, St. Joseph's College, Philadelphia

Meer, Fatima. Race and Suicide in South Africa.

Routledge & Kegan Paul. (Internat. Lib. of Sociology). 1976. 319p. index. $15.50. PSYCH SOC SCI

Through careful scrutiny of official documents and case studies, Meer offers an analysis of suicide in the Durban area from 1940 to 1970. As the title of the book implies, "race" is considered to be a major variable, mostly as a result of its direct correlation with other factors such as occupation, marital status, family setting, residential area, and economic standing. In addition, sex, mode of suicide, and reasons given for suicide are discussed. Meer suggests that, contrary to the views of Durkheim and others, suicidal behavior "does not conform to certain universal principles but responds to particular social conditions"; she presents case studies that illustrate both the personal and the social lack of integration which are acute in South Africa. Noticeable in the organization of the material is the section entitled "Humanizing Statistics"—the longest of four sections in the book—providing us with the "vitally important personal dimension."—Winifred Lambrecht, Dept. of Anthropology, Brown Univ., Providence, R.I.

Snetsinger, Robert. Diary of a Mad Planner.

Winchester, dist. by Scribners. 1976. 177p. index. LC 76-44415. ISBN 0-87691-188-2. $6.95. ECON SOC SCI

A very personal and subjective picture of contemporary America. Nostalgic remembrances of growing up on a farm are contrasted with bitter feelings about the tacky commercial development of that same land. Many aspects of contemporary life—from the problem of too many pets to the American fixation with sterile, nonproductive land (lawns)—are touched on but no solutions are offered. Planning, in this small volume, is not discussed as a technique nor seen as an answer to any of these problems. This is an interesting book with a different point of view, but, unfortunately, it does not go far enough.—John C. McGee, Planning Consultant, Mystic Conn.

Law & Criminology

Blackwell, Robert. The Fighter's Guide to Divorce.

Regnery. Mar. 1977. 154p. bibliog. ISBN 0-8092-8004-3. $8.95. SOC SCI/LAW

This book would be more aptly entitled the "men's guide," since the author spends much time advising men to hold onto their possessions with all their might. In discussing what one faces in divorce, the author stereotypes the actions of men and women, but there still is useful information given concerning the emotional traumas involved with lawyers, courts, and legal tactics. Although sometimes devious, the author is very explicit on what to expect from spouses, lawyers, judges. He tries to help the emotional situation become an objective event. There is little mention, though, of post-divorce problems. A clearly written and in-depth discussion, this is a good addition to a general collection; but it should be balanced with books on divorce by and for women.—Dianne Witkowski, Librarian, Schiff, Hardin & Waite, Chicago

Horwitz, Morton J. The Transformation of American Law, 1780-1860.

Harvard Univ. Pr. 1977. 356p. index. LC 76-26500. ISBN 0-674-90370-6. $16.50. HIST/LAW

This book brilliantly develops what, by now, has become the chief postulate of American legal realism—the notion that law is not the disinterested embodiment of fundamental social or moral values; rather, it is the culmination of the collective will of powerful groups. Although the contrast between 18th-Century law—an allegedly non-instrumental reflection of a general communal consensus—and the 19th-Century revolution in legal doctrine, which served the ends of rapid, low-cost, low-risk economic development, may be somewhat overdrawn, the depiction of the harnessing of law to raw power is convincing. The central role of the judiciary—often in opposition to legislative attempts to ameliorate the injustices involved—in protecting, nurturing, and even stimulating the forces of capitalist economic growth is deservedly emphasized. A thoughtful contribution to the continuing issue of whether and how much we are governed by our judges.—Isidore Silver, Dept. of History, John Jay Coll. of Criminal Justice, CUNY

Regional Studies & Anthropology

Bonn, Gisela (text) & Dieter Blum (photogs.). Africa.

Abrams. 1976. 208p. tr. from German by Lu Fenton. fwd. by Leopold Sedar Senghor. color photogs. LC 76-15942. ISBN 0-8109-0650-3. slipcased $100. PHOTOG/REGIONAL STUDY

Of the many recent picture books on Africa, this one is by far the most ostentatious, bound in its own case fastened with ivory-like teeth, and remarkably costly. Breathtaking and technically superlative color photographs—some the full 17-by-24-inch double-

The career of a remarkable Justice

Dunne, Gerald T. Hugo Black and the Judicial Revolution.

S. & S. Mar. 1977. 357p. illus. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-671-22341-0. $11.95. BIOG/LAW

More than one volume will ultimately be required to describe fully the remarkable political and judicial career and influence of this generation's greatest Constitutional expositor. Pending that, Dunne's masterful achievement will properly be regarded as the public biography of the complex, mercurial, often devious, always brilliant and stimulating, almost single-handed creator of the New South. By force of intellect and will (as well as an uncanny ability to persuade), Black profoundly affected not only the Court, on which he sat for almost 35 years, but also much of that elusive entity: the "American character." Dunne's study is well-rounded and sensitive to the paradoxes (Black's magnificent Pentagon Papers opinion—his last—concluded with a quote from Charles Evans Hughes, whose appointment to the Court Senator Black had opposed). A few arcane grammatical constructions and the pointless repetition of some anecdotes only set off the power and luster of a treatment equal to its imposing subject.—Isidore Silver, Dept. of History, John Jay Coll. of Criminal Justice, CUNY page size—capture Africa's beauty and vitality. Depicting scenes of the continent from north to south, Blum's collection is described in the foreword by Senegalese President/poet Senghor as "the search for truth revealed in an instant of beauty." Less spectacular is Bonn's paternalistic attempt to capture the diversity of Africa into a single personality, exemplified by paragraphs captioned with clichés like "Angry Youth" and "The African Mystery." Indeed, her political perception of Africa leans heavily toward its French-speaking parts, and she cites Senghor and Aimé Cesaire so often that one could conclude that few other African thinkers of stature exist. This is an extravagant travelogue, but not recommended for enlightening reading.—Gayla Cook, Booker T. Washington Foundation, Washington, D.C.

SOCIAL SCIENCE

Gidley, Mick, ed. The Vanishing Race: selections from Edward S. Curtis' The North American Indian.

Taplinger. Mar. 1977. 200p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-23476. ISBN 0-8008-7945-7. $9.95.
HIST/ANTHROPOLOGY

No fewer than four other books have been published about Curtis since 1972, but all of these concentrate on Curtis the photographer. Here Gidley, a lecturer in American Literature at the University of Exeter, has compiled a highly selected group of Curtis' writings from the original 20-volume work. Arranged by subject—from tribal organizations to war and the chase—each chapter has about six different short descriptions of various tribes and individuals, meant to give a concise anthropological view of the Indian nature. For the most part, however, the view is far too concise to be of any worth. The book, poorly illustrated with Curtis' own prints muddled beyond belief, has no reader: it is a congeries for the beginner and an abstract for the more serious student. Libraries concerned with American Indian studies which are not lucky enough to have one of the 225 original sets of Curtis' work should consider the reprint (Johnson Reprint, 1970).—Timothy Daum, Ohio Univ. Lib., Athens

Kristeva, Julia. About Chinese Women.

Urizen Bks., dist. by Dutton. Mar. 1977. 210p. ISBN 0-916354-84-9. $10.
PSYCH/ANTHROPOLOGY

Kristeva, author of several books (in French, untranslated to date) on linguistics and literature, turns her attention to Chinese women in a book inspired by a 1974 trip to the People's Republic. The book has two parts: the first, a wide-ranging discussion of the status and role of women in the West; and the second, an investigation of the historical background and current status of women in China. In considering China from the ancient matrilineal society to policies and programs emancipating women in the Republican and post-1949 periods, the author concentrates on drawing comparisons between the Indo-European and Chinese traditions, with reliance on psychoanalytic modes of inquiry. Errors of fact and of misplaced emphasis reflect Kristeva's imperfect command of the secondary literature on China; however, the book's value lies not in its scholarship but in its often subjective and bold perspectives. General readers interested in women's studies will find it provocative.—Evelyn S. Rawski, Dept. of History, Univ. of Pittsburgh

SPORTS & RECREATION

Baker, Stanley L. & Virginia Brainard Kunz. The Collector's Book of Railroadiana.

Hawthorn. 1976. 240p. photogs., some color by Joan Larson Kelly. bibliog. index. LC 75-41800. ISBN 0-8015-6218-X. $16.95.
HOBBIES

This is the second book on the subject to appear recently and represents a definitely superior effort to Charles Klamkin's Railroadiana (LJ 7/76). It covers the same general range of topics as does Railroadiana, but with more detail, a more thorough general viewpoint, and a strong degree of affection. Toy trains are not too well covered, but the balance of coverage is generally fine. A good volume for public libraries.—Frederick A. Schlipf, Urbana Free Lib. Ill.

Blackburn, Graham. The Postage Stamp Gazetteer.

Bobbs. 1976. 215p. color photogs. by Tom Gervasi. b&w photogs. by Alan Purver. bibliog. index. LC 76-11622. ISBN 0-672-52146-6. $20.
HOBBIES

A delightful examination of philately from its geographic standpoint. The numerous historical anecdotes are especially interesting, and unusual sidelights on many aspects of philately are discussed. The large illustrations are excellent and generally of interesting design or subject matter. The book is worthwhile for the novice or advanced collector.—Henry T. Hettger, FAA, Washington, D.C.

Clark, Hyla M. The Tall Ships: a sailing celebration.

pub. in assoc. with Operation Sail 1976 by Two Continents. 1976. 127p. photogs., mainly color. LC 76-43112. ISBN 0-8467-0236-3. $12.95; ISBN 0-8467-0237-1. $7.95.

Operation Sail, 1976.

Operation-Sail Bks., Box 1669, N.Y.C. 10001. 1976. 63p. photogs., mainly color. $7.50; lib. ed. $9.95; pap. $4.
SPORTS

These two works document one of the most breathtaking events the sailing world has ever seen or is likely to see again—Operation Sail. The Tall Ships contains many spectacular color and black-and-white photographs of the participants in Op Sail and the July 4th procession, as well as of the festivities which followed. A brief history of sailing ships and Operation Sail is included. Operation Sail, 1976, the official program for the New York celebration, contains information about the development of Operation Sail and about the use of large sailing vessels as training ships. Each of the participating tall ships gets a brief historical sketch, and vital statistics are included. The smaller participating vessels are identified

"Should stimulate women...to rethink their position in contemporary society"*

The Female Factor
A REPORT ON WOMEN IN WESTERN EUROPE

By SHARI STEINER

"Not just another study of women in today's world, this investigation by an American journalist focuses on the diversity among women in...England, Italy, France, Germany, and Scandinavia....Complements DeBeauvoir, Greer, and other published feminists." —Publishers Weekly. "Steiner sees individual and social problems...as an indication that [Western women] have not yet achieved...knowledge of the options open to them in a rapidly changing world....Provocative."—Library Journal.*
SBN: 399-11582-X. $8.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

Library Journal recommends

The Book of Darts

By Paddy Whannel and Dana Hodgdon

"Darts, darts, darts—here is a book telling you everything you could possibly want to know about this game: rules, scoring, strategy, variations of the basic game, techniques, tools and accessories, darts mathematics, history, details of national and international competition, and something of the game's cultural and social context. The authors have omitted no single detail in this well-written and tightly organized book. It is an excellent guide...and most certainly one of the few readily available books on the subject."—Library Journal

Illustrated • $5.95 paperback

HENRY Regnery COMPANY

and described, and many are illustrated. Both of these books are magnificent.—Jay Schwartz, Suffolk County Community Coll. Lib., Selden, N.Y.

Devaney, John & Barbara Devaney. The Indianapolis 500: a complete pictorial history.

Rand McNally. 1976. 286p. photogs. index. LC 76-23129. ISBN 0-528-81844-9. $16.95 SPORTS

The Devaneys go a long way toward capturing the tradition, the excitment, the drama, the mystique of the Indianapolis 500. The photographs are the book's strongest point. Many are in color, and the older black-and-white shots are carefully selected and reproduced. Many have not been published recently. Each race since 1911 is covered by a two- or three-page description, along with photos for that race. The top ten finishers are listed, and each race report also has a few short quotes from participants. The book is similar in format to Jack Fox's The Illustrated History of the Indianapolis 500 (Carl Hungness, 1975. rev. ed.). Fox is slightly more expensive, but contains considerably more statistical data. If your patrons are race fans, get both. If budget forbids, the statistical information in Fox gives the most for the money.—Susan Ebershoff-Coles, Indianapolis-Marion County P.L., Ind.

Ford, Whitey & Mickey Mantle with Joseph Durso. Whitey and Mickey: a joint autobiography of the Yankee years.

Viking. Mar. 1977. 224p. photogs. $8.95. AUTOBIOG/SPORTS

Imagine listening to a conversation between Mantle and Ford as they reminisce about their years as New York Yankees. You would hear again the familiar anecdotes of antics both on and off the field, as well as learn some new bits of information. Much like a conversation is this book with its loose organization and text which alternates between the two players. Mantle and Ford obviously enjoyed putting this book together, and it makes effortless reading. All of the big names are here, from Casey Stengel to Joe DiMaggio. The excerpt from Stengel's testimony before the Senate subcommittee on the baseball anti-trust law is worth the price of the book.—Josephine A. DeLapo, Queens Borough P.L., New York

Fox, G. C. H. Master Play: the best of international bridge.

St. Martin's. Feb. 1977. 186p. LC 76-28073. $7.95. GAMES

Noted bridge author Fox has compiled a representative sampling of bridge hands from some of the world's greatest tournaments. Each of eight sections deals with one of the major European and world bridge championships. Besides providing the reader with some of the most interestingly played hands in those tournaments, the book also offers historical data about them. Although some of the hands included here are discussed in other works, Fox's commentary is always both instructional and entertaining. My only criticism is the lack of coverage of American championships; but this is an intelligent instructional book, with a good format, that should find a readership even among casual bridge players.—Bernard F. Pasqualini, Free Lib. of Philadelphia

Greenspan, Bud. We Wuz Robbed!

Grossett & Dunlap. 1976. 192p. illus. index. LC 74-27946. ISBN 0-448-11855-6. $12.95; pap. ISBN 0-448-12456-4. $6.95. SPORTS

Much of our enjoyment of sports comes from retrospection, the replaying of controversial moments. Greenspan is a writer, producer, and director of the PBS-TV series The Olympiad. His book revolves around 16 of the most memorable events in sport, ranging from the 1972 Olympic basketball finals to the 1966 World Cup soccer title game. In each case the event's result, as much as the event itself, became a topic of controversy. Greenspan examines each in fine detail. One can quibble at events included or omitted; major league baseball, for instance, is wholly excluded. The book is intriguing and well written, nonetheless; the writing is crisp, the photography vivid and extensive. Libraries for all age groups will find this book a worthwhile investment.—Curt Smith, Hamilton Coll., Clinton, N.Y.

McComas, Tom & James Tuohy. Lionel: a collector's guide and history. Vol. 2: Postwar.

TM Productions, Box 189, Wilmette, Ill. 60091. 1976. 138p. photogs., some color by Jack Lane & Tom McComas. LC 76-13314. $16.95. HOBBIES

This companion volume to the authors' Prewar O Gauge (LJ 10/1/75) covers production from 1945 through 1969, when tooling and dies were sold to General Mills. Each type of locomotive and car is covered. Production is traced on a year-by-year basis, and the information given is sufficient to permit positive identification and dating. The authors comment on the scarcity and desirability of individual items, but prices are not given. This is a revision of the authors' earlier work (1974) on the same subject; it corrects most of the first book's problems (spiral binding, muddy color) and includes much more information. Post World War II Lionel trains are the most widely available and collected of all old toy trains, and this volume is the authoritative work on the subject. It is colorful, engaging, and fun. Public libraries should own it.—Frederick A. Schlipf, Urbana Free Lib., Ill.

McKenzie, Ian. Collecting Old Toy Soldiers.

Hippocrene. 1976. 155p. photogs., some color by Michael Hallett. bibliog. index. $14.95 HOBBIES

Most books on military miniatures are concerned primarily with superbly detailed scale models. Another aspect of the field, however, is collecting the old toys by Heyde, Mignot, Britains, Hausser and the other firms whose charming (and often primitive) products laid the groundwork for future scale models. McKenzie's book is organized by type of composition (paper, metal, sawdust-and-glue, and plastic), and briefly traces the history of production in each area and illustrates the work of major manufacturers. Pricing and the identification of unmarked pieces are not really covered. Illustrations vary in quality, but are all useful, as are the author's comments on building and maintaining collections. There is a fine appendix on the products of Britains, Ltd., and a rather weak bibliography. This is the only recent book in this area, and it should be a good addition to public library collections.—Frederick A. Schlipf, Urbana Free Lib., Ill

Marshall, Mel. The Care and Repair of Fishing Tackle.

Winchester, dist. by Scribners. 1976. 237p. photogs. by the author & Aldine Marshall. index. LC 76-22569. ISBN 0-87691-183-1. $10. SPORTS

Writing from four decades of experience, Marshall has packed in this book a wealth of know-how, and gratefully did not title it the "complete book of," although it would likely come closer than others of its genre. Chapters cover rods, reels, lines and leaders, lures, and a wide array of accessories. The book is profusely illustrated with photos of outstanding quality. An appendix lists 27 major manufacturers all of which do repairs and 12 mail-order suppliers of specialty tools and equipment. I cannot find fault with this effort. If your library has a place for a book on what the author calls "tackle-tinkering," I recommend this one.—Joseph Drazan, Whitman Coll. Lib., Walla Walla, Wash.

Meves, Eric. Guide to Backpacking in the United States.

Macmillan. Mar. 1977. 252p. illus. maps. bibliog. ISBN 0-02-584500-0. $8.95. TRAV/RECREATION

This interesting introduction for the novice gives general geographic information for each state and briefly describes national forests, major national parks, etc. in terms of hiking conditions and opportunities. Few specific trails are mentioned, and no how-to-get-there directions are given. The guide has addresses for state tourism offices and superintendents of the national forests and parks. Addresses also appear for several mail-order suppliers of backpacking equipment. Appended is a brief but good bibliography of "how-to" books. Although this book is generally accurate and written in a highly readable style, libraries should not consider buying it until they have some how-to titles and also some regional and state trail guides which give more details and publicize the little-known, seldom-used trails needed to accommodate the growing number of hikers.—Paul M. Duckworth, Springfield-Greene County Lib., Mo.

Mohan, John & Walt Hiltner (text) & Bruce Barthel (photogs.). Freestyle Skiing: the fundamentals.

Winchester, dist. by Scribners. 1976. 214p. bibliog. index. LC 76-25825. ISBN 0-87691-185-8. $10. SPORTS

Anyone desiring a thorough, detailed discussion of freestyle skiing would do well to buy this book. Numerous stunts are described, and illustrations accompany the text. Suggestions for preparing for the stunts and information on error correction are included. The book also includes guidelines for freestyle competition and a section on preparing an area for jumping. Those not wanting or needing such a wealth of information on the subject could use the information on freestyle included in Mort Lund's Ski Magazine's Complete Book of Ski Technique (LJ 11/1/75).—Janice Marie Zinkl, Downers Grove P.L., Ill.

Rudner, Ruth. Off and Walking: a hiker's guide to American places.

Holt. Apr. 1977. $8.95; pap. $4.95. TRAV/RECREATION

A brief trail guide to seven wilderness areas, all within the continental states, along with brief comments on pathfinding, equipment, transportation, hazards, and health. The author hiked parts of each wilderness area, and her comments and descriptions should be helpful in determining one's interest in an area. The text is too skimpy on detail to serve as a trail guide, however the author lists pertinent books and maps for each area. (The book also contains a list of books on various aspects of backpacking.) Supplementary rather than basic to a subject collection.—Ronald J. Nimmer, Ohio State Univ. Lib., Columbus

Schlereth, Hewitt. Commonsense Sailboat Buying.

Regnery. Mar. 1977. 192p. index. ISBN 0-8092-8205-4. $9.95. CONSUMER AFFAIRS/SPORTS

According to the author, about 16,000 Americans will purchase sailboats in the 26′ to 40′ range each year. This work is intended as a guide to purchasing the best and most practical boat possible in this range. He discusses, in fascinating detail, the basics of fiberglass boat design and construction. He points out how to recognize good craftsmanship and how to select the "right" boat. In addition to the usual boat-selection advice, he gets into the important but often neglected areas of financing, operating costs, insurance, etc. Since most boats of this size cost in the five-figure range, this book can help avoid a rather expensive mistake.—Jay Schwartz, Suffolk County Community Coll. Lib., Selden, N.Y.

Shoemaker, Willie & Dan Smith. The Shoe: Willie Shoemaker's illustrated book of racing.

Rand McNally. 1976. 208p. illus., some color. index. LC 76-46368. ISBN 0-528-81845-7. $14.95. PER NAR/SPORTS

A well-known sports figure writes intimately and truthfully about a great sport. Although not a true autobiography, this is still the story of a legend in the making and of the great people and great horses that have helped to make the "Shoe" the world's winningest jockey. Each chapter is an insider's view of the fast world of thoroughbred racing. The "Shoe" offers assessments of the horses he's ridden and the trainers and jockeys he's worked with, and he recounts memorable moments from his career. There is a list of all stakes races won by Shoemaker, and the more than 100 photographs capture exciting moments from his career. Racing buffs will want this, and so will most library collections.—Joy Hastings, Santiago Lib. System, Orange County, Calif.

Public librarians interested in reviewing sports books should contact Robert R. Harris, the Book Review.

Walker, Mort. Sport Diving: the instructional guide to skin & scuba.

Regnery. Mar. 1977. 288p. bibliog. index. LC 8092-8176-7. $12.95. SPORTS

Sport diving enthusiasts will enjoy reading Walker's book, which may be the most definitive treatment yet of this subject. Besides being a complete instructional guide to skin and scuba diving, it deals with the skills, physiology, equipment, and safety techniques associated with diving. There is also a glossary and six appendixes. The illustrations were not seen by this reviewer. Recommended to libraries with a clientele interested in diving.—Howard R. Downey, Bellingham P.L., Wash.

Walsh, Loren. Inside Softball.

Regnery. Apr. 1977. 96p. LC 76-42446. ISBN 0-8092-8017-5. $7.95; pap. Mar. 1977. ISBN 0-8012-7887-1. $4.95. SPORTS

This volume, like others in the "Inside" series, presents excellent insights into the sport it covers. Everything you want to know about fast-pitch and/or slow-pitch softball is covered—fundamentals, skills, and strategy. An appendix contains a potentially useful key for developing league and tournament double-elimination schedules. The illustrations were not seen by this reviewer. Highly recommended.—Howard R. Downey, Bellingham P.L., Wash.

The World Atlas of Golf by Pat Ward-Thomas & others.

Random. 1976. 280p. intro. by Alistair Cooke. illus., mainly color. index. LC 76-10297. ISBN 0-394-40814-4. $25. SPORTS

A pictorial and textual guide to what the authors consider to be the best and most famous 170 golf courses in the world. These courses are scattered throughout 42 different countries, ranging from the beautiful island of Bali to the idyllic Augusta National in Georgia. The majority of courses described are located in the United States. Seventy-five of the courses are described more extensively than the others, with their history, design, and most difficult and interesting features being discussed in detail. Pictures of various holes and a detailed diagram of the course layout are provided for each of the 75. An introductory section describes the development of various aspects of gold. This book should be popular among golf enthusiasts.—David B. Walch, SUNY at Buffalo

Yachtsman's Choice: the best of "Rudder."

McKay. Mar. 1977. 204p. sel. by Rudder Eds. illus. ISBN 0-679-50661-6. $9.95. SPORTS

A generally absorbing anthology of articles that have appeared in Rudder, this book will be a popular item. During its 85 years Rudder has had some notable contributors, and those excerpted here are among the best. Topics include examples of dauntless courage, the sealoner's psychology, the yachting scene, a deep-water sailfish event, designs and designers, etc. References to power and fiberglass boats are minimal. Recommended.—James Tazelaar, U.S. Army Engineer Topographic Labs, Fort Belvoir, Va.

THEATER

Beckett, Samuel. Ends and Odds: eight new dramatic pieces.

Grove, dist. by Random. Feb. 1977. 128p. LC 76-14510. $6.95; pap. $1.95. THEATER

In Beckett's one-act plays—five written for the stage, two for radio, and one for television—action is restrained. He often allows his characters only repeated, essential movements, many resembling the simplest dance steps. Coupled with most of the sets' diffuse lighting, these movements aid to fascinate and mystify. Conventional and disjointed monologues abound, but each character's lines demand scrutiny, their words choice and dynamic. Beckett's recurrent theme, slavery, is enhanced by the static action, the darkness, and the scrambled speech patterns; but it is lodged deeply in his characters' psyches in myriad forms. In the television script, "Ghost Trio," even the audience is enslaved, forced by the cam-

INSTRUCTIONS TO YOUNG MARKSMEN
IMPROVED AMERICAN RIFLE
John Ratcliffe Chapman

In 1848 the percussion ignition system was comparatively new. This book was a primer for shooters to learn the care and use of percussion long guns as opposed to the older flint lock ignition system. An exact and authentic reproduction of the original manuscript. The most important black powder shooting book ever published.
ISBN 0-917714-02-4
$5.95

Beinfeld Publishing, inc.
DEPT. LJ
13222 Saticoy Street
North Hollywood, Ca. 91605

More hilarious misadventures from "the master of comic catastrophe!"
—Cleveland Press

Jack Douglas

GOING NUTS IN BRAZIL WITH JACK DOUGLAS

Part-time author of Benedict Arnold Slept Here

"Fans of Jack Douglas will find him up to his old tricks of ribaldry and situation comedy in his newest novelty: a running report of a wacky escapade in Brazil. It all has to do with rubber: a rubber plantation in the Amazon jungle, the arrival of the Douglas quartet, the local population (pygmies, witch doctor, renegade priest, et al.), and Dr. Victoria Ramsay, a buxom advocate of birth control."—Publishers Weekly.

SBN: 399-11838-1. $7.95

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

"Recommended"
—Library Journal

THE CABARET
Lisa Appignanesi

By provoking large questions, The Cabaret performs a sociological as well as an esthetic service. Appignanesi's research has been prodigious . . . and includes a gold mine of anecdotes . . . the text is refreshingly free of cant, and at times . . . it moves along like a good novel: flowing, all of a piece, hard to put down. Nor is the writing the only attraction . . . The Cabaret is a cornucopia of the visual arts of the last 90-odd years . . . The Cabaret treats its subject with skill and love." —The New Republic
"This handsome volume . . . will prove serviceable and interesting to general readers and undergraduates, and is recommended for theater and social history collections." —Library Journal

192 pages 132 illustrations,12 in color
LC75-39866 ISBN 0-87663-235-5
$20.00

UNIVERSE BOOKS
381 Park Avenue So., N.Y. 10016

era into a whimsical inspection of the set. Original production data introduce each work. A masterful collection.—Jim Elledge, Mundelein Coll. Lib., Chicago

Cinema

Bahrenburg, Bruce. The Creation of Dino De Laurentiis' King Kong.
Pocket Bks: S. & S., dist. by Pocket Bks-Ace. 1976. 273p. photogs. ISBN 0-671-80796-X. pap. $1.75. CINEMA
Another behind-the-scenes chronicle, this one written by the film's unit publicist and dealing with the usual temper tantrums, mob scenes, and impossible deadlines. A few interesting points emerge—a translation of publicity jargon, a discussion of the mechanical Kong, a description of the actor in the ape suit—but most of the book is as trivial as the film it discusses. If this new King Kong is a success, youngsters may ask for the book; few will ask for it a second time, however.—W. H. Lyles, formerly with Dept. of English, Univ. of Maryland, College Park

Barnes, John. The Beginnings of the Cinema in England.
Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1976. 240p. illus. index. LC 75-41576. ISBN 0-06-490317-6. $12.50. CINEMA
The publisher announces this as "the first authoritative history of the subject [British cinematography, 1894-1896] to appear in print"—and rightly so. Barnes presents a thorough, scholarly text, well documented and copiously illustrated. The illustrations are keyed to the text. A valuable appendix lists all known British films of the period. Since the book concentrates on such a specific but important period in film history, libraries interested in film will certainly want it. Readers are warned, however, that the text has its faults: in quoting extensively, Barnes repeats material unnecessarily, giving us, for example, numerous accounts of the film The Boxing Kangaroo when one or two would do quite as well.—W. H. Lyles, formerly with Dept. of English, Univ. of Maryland, College Park

Di Lauro, Al & Gerald Rabkin. Dirty Movies: an illustrated history of the stag film, 1915-1970.
Chelsea House. 1976. 160p. intro. by Kenneth Tynan. photogs. filmography. bibliog. LC 76-43040. ISBN 0-87754-046-2. $15. CINEMA
Dirty Movies begins with a reprint of a reasoned and articulate defense of pornography by Kenneth Tynan, and this proves to be the most interesting portion of the book. It is difficult to determine Di Lauro and Rabkin's purpose. If it is scholarly, then there are not the detailed insights and documentation one would expect. The authors point out that for over half a century the stags "remained a remarkably consistent genre," which means there is little to be said about their historical development. And little is said. If, on the other hand, the authors' purpose is titillation, then one would expect a racier text and pictures with greater resolution. The only impressive work in the book is that of its art director. Otherwise, it is an extended, random essay on stag films, the only valuable information being quoted from other sources.—John Lippincott, Humanities Div., Genesee Community Coll., Batavia, N.Y.

Russett, Robert & Cecile Starr. Experimental Animation: an illustrated anthology.
Van Nostrand Reinhold. 1976. 224p. illus. index. LC 75-21261. ISBN 0-442-27194-8. $14.95 pap. ISBN 0-442-27195-6. $8.95. ART/CINEMA
The strong interest in animation which has developed over the last few years is well served by this introduction to more than three dozen artists who have contributed to the medium since the early part of the century. The well-illustrated text balances such significant pioneers as Hans Richter and Oskar Fischinger with important though little-known artists such as Dwinell Grant and Douglass Crockwell to provide a survey that is useful both as a history of the medium and as a guide to current trends and practices. Most of the artists come from a painterly tradition and work in nonnarrative, nonfigurative modes. Thus the authors have produced a text important to fine arts collections as well as to cinema collections. Russett and Starr provide succinct introductions that establish the context for these animators' works; wisely they allow reprinted and original interviews, along with additional previously unpublished material, to convey the artists' concerns. In this way, the artists themselves provide a rich commentary on their involvement with personal cinema. Recommended.—Marshall Deutelbaum, Film Dept., George Eastman House, Rochester, N.Y.

Slide, Anthony. The Big V: a history of the Vitagraph Company.
Scarecrow. 1976. 224p. index. LC 76-21247. ISBN 0-8108-0967-2. $9. CINEMA
Books about the early days of film making are guaranteed to offer delightful reading. Slide's history of the Vitagraph Company is no exception. It is a charming little book with a wealth of information about one of the first film companies whose existence lasted through the Twenties. Slide describes the formation of the company, the careers of its major stars, and the production of its important films. The second half of the book is a gold mine, containing a bibliography, a "Vitagraph Who's Who" (biographical sketches of 50 members of the company), and a chronological listing of Vitagraph films from 1910 to 1915. This is not a coffee-table book; it is an entertaining yet solid reference book, an invaluable addition to film literature.—Ann Cook, Prince George's County Memorial Lib. System, Greenbelt, Md.

Wager, Walter. My Side by King Kong.
Macmillan. 1976. 119p. LC 76-49829. ISBN 0-02-622420-4. $7.95; Collier pap. $4.95. CINEMA
Stanley Harold Kong tells his side of the story, with a little help from Wager. How King Kong was conned into stardom in the movie (recently remade) that bears his name is really only a minor part of this pseudo-autobiography.

Long's life story unfolds clumsily in a monologue distressingly similar to the pattern of a relentlessly unamusing stand-up comedian. The story serves as a vehicle for the author's playful imagination, and is loaded with an overbundance of one-liners, puns, word plays, and facetious footnotes, all of which can most charitably be described as ridiculous. Lacking sufficient substance to be rated as fluff, this book will disappoint readers expecting anything comparable in craftmanship to the author's recent spy thriller Telefon (LJ 1/75).—Jerry Holtz, Kansas State Univ. Lib., Manhattan

fiction

Baird, Thomas. The Way to the Old Sailors Home.
Harper. Mar. 1977. 272p. ISBN 0-06-010173-3. $8.95. F

Set in 1939, this novel about "little people" follows Frank Cooper, at 36 a sailor turned teacher of woodwork; Mary Louise, almost 18, the girl he picks up; and Emma Magruder, 50, a piano teacher who has befriended him. Frank wants to move on permanently from the brother-and-big-sister relationship with Emma and tries to steal off with Mary Louise on an epic canoe trip. Emma finds out, threatens the Mann Act, and goes along—incredibly. We are back on the novelistic voyage of self-discovery. But all three people are so disagreeable and uninteresting that the inevitable canoe overturning cannot happen soon enough. A flat, unconvincing book.—Mitsu Yamamoto, formerly with Wm. Douglas McAdams, Inc., New York

Banville, John. Doctor Copernicus.
Norton. Feb. 1977. 256p. $8.95. F

Had he not overturned the accepted Ptolemaic concept of the universe with his theory of heliocentricity, Copernicus' would have been an unremarkable Renaissance life. Canon of the Church, medical doctor, theoretical astronomer, Copernicus avoided conflict and notice, steeped himself in duty and study. In this historical novel, Banville meets every serious expectation of the genre: he gives us the terrified and lonely young boy who, both parents dead, is sent to a religious school where he learns to take refuge among the cold stars; and he gives us the adult Copernicus, especially the chill void under the layers of convention. While this novel lacks the dramatic sweep and color of the best of the genre, it succeeds admirably in portraying an imagined inner life.—George J. Soete, Arizona State Univ. Lib., Tempe

Beckett, Samuel. Fizzles.
Grove, dist. by Random. Feb. 1977. 61p. LC 76-17479. $6.95; pap. $1.95. F

Beckett offers eight concise and painful accounts of existence steeped in despair. Most of these monologues are composed with short, declarative sentences or brief phrases joined by commas, evoking the image of a jogger reciting parables. Words and images are precise, simple, and often repeated throughout the volume, creating an organic rhythm. Beckett's afflictions here, which are also his major themes—the world's bitter gloom and brutalizing alienation—are never alleviated but intensified. Perhaps autobiographical, perhaps fictional, but surely a classic.—Jim Elledge, Mundelein Coll. Lib., Chicago

Brink, André. An Instant in the Wind.
Morrow. Feb. 1977. 251p. LC 76-41109. ISBN 0-688-03134-X. $8.95. F

As in his admirable Looking on Darkness, Brink tells a story in which the races in South Africa are forced to deal with each other as human beings. The lone survivor of a 19th-Century expedition into the unmapped interior, Elizabeth is rescued by a fugitive slave. In a situation which will no longer support established social roles, their arduous trek back to the Cape becomes a tale of emotional awakening as well as physical survival. The complexity of the human situation is honestly observed. Its outcome is inevitable, as it always is in tragedy. The subject is important and the novelistic achievement impressive.—Richard Cima, Glenbard East H.S., Lombard, Ill.

Burroway, Janet. Raw Silk.
Little. Mar. 1977. 316p. ISBN 0-316-11767-6. $8.95. F

The subject of Raw Silk is Virginia Marbalestier and her disintegrating mar-

POCKET BOOKS
is Leaping ahead with the BIG ones!

THE CREATION OF
Dino De Laurentiis'
KING KONG
Bruce Bahrenburg

Copyright © 1976
Dino De Laurentiis Corporation

All America is in the clutches of the great ape! Make sure you have your clutches on enough copies of the only official behind-the-scenes account.
0-671-80796-X 286 pages
$1.75

Do you have enough copies of CURTAIN?

Curtain
Agatha Christie

The world's bestselling mystery writer (with 25 great Pocket Books in print) has done it again with a #1 Bestseller!
0-671-80720-X 288 pages
$1.95

POCKET BOOKS
School and College Division
630 Fifth Avenue, New York, New York 10020

"Moving"

LAVENDER BURNING

Sasha Moorsom

"The poignant story of 30ish Hannah Straight, a repressed London housewife who, while vacationing with her two children in the South of France, meets Marc, an amoral young sculptor. Their short-lived affair that summer results in Hannah's new awareness of self and others. It's difficult to write what is most impressive about this novel. Moorsom's characters . . . are extraordinary. The moving plot is laced with tragedy and surprise, vivid and varied settings. . . . Readers will long remember Hannah's summer." —Library Journal.*

SBN 698-10761-6 $7.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.

200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

"Good news for thriller buffs who want style as well as substance." —Publishers Weekly

"Once you are hooked with Raven, the cool sophisticated ex-Scotland Yard Cop, you are with him to the end . . . from a deceptively simple beginning to his breathless climax." —BEN HEALEY, author of The Vespucci Papers

$7.95 ISBN 0-395-24902-3

A Selection of the Detective Book Club

Raven and the Ratcatcher

by

DONALD MACKENZIE

Houghton Mifflin Company

riage. Raised in straitened circumstances in southern California, Virginia is a textile designer in her mid-30's, living in general English affluence with her husband, a boor named Oliver. The specialness of this novel lies in the first-person narration of Virginia, who is bright, funny, and capable of seeing both sides (although Oliver deserves equal time to rebut her portrayal of him). While her situation has become a cliché for feminist fiction, and she herself feels that her "sin" is submissiveness, Virginia's decisions are based on self-knowledge, and have an irony that renders the debate between Women's Lib and the traditionalists irrelevant. Skillfully written in a conversational style, Raw Silk is the witty and complex evocation of one woman's character.—Frances M. Esmonde de Usabel, State Reference & Loan Lib., Madison, Wis.

Cooper, I. S. It's Hard To Leave While the Music's Playing.

Norton. Feb. 1977. 288p. ISBN 0-393-08756-5. $7.95. F

A beautifully told story of a close friendship between a victim of amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (Lou Gehrig's disease) and the man who treats his debilitating illness. Cooper, who has written erudite treatises for scholarly journals as well as nonfiction for the layman, has now turned to the novel, perhaps to gain a wider audience for his obviously deep concern for the caring for terminal patients with love, understanding, and dignity, and to gain the freedom to deal with his theme and characters subjectively. The result is an extremely good story that dramatically and humanely illustrates the distinction between euthanasia and the cessation of artificial life-support methods and modernizes the definition of the Hippocratic Oath. Though Cooper has embellished a very basic subject with unnecessary incidents and surprises, he has written a fine and important medical novel.—Marion Hanscom, SUNY at Binghamton Lib.

Didion, Joan. A Book of Common Prayer.

S. & S. Mar. 1977. 173p. ISBN 0-671-22491-3. $8.95. F

The focus of Didion's third novel is Charlotte Douglas, a middle-aged American who appears one day in a small Central American country and makes a practice of haunting the local airport (much as the heroine of Play It as It Lays haunted L.A.'s freeways). The facts of Charlotte's life are summed up on the first page: "she left one man, she left a second man, she traveled again with the first; she let him die alone. She lost one child to 'history' and another to 'complications.' " But the life itself is elusive, as is the novel, and we watch as the narrator struggles to both pin it down and bear witness to it. What emerges is an almost Faulknerian reconstruction in which the drama of the action is matched by a second drama of narration. Didion overindulges her passion for sentence fragments, which she often uses as refrains. But the novel comes off anyway. Despite occasional excesses, A Book of Common Prayer ranks as Didion's best novel yet.—Bruce M. Firestone, Dept. of English, Clemson Univ., S.C.

Douglas, Jack. Going Nuts in Brazil with Jack Douglas.

Putnam. Feb. 1977. 216p. ISBN 0-399-11831-1. $7.95.

Douglas' books in the past have always trod the fine line between fact and insanity and this latest work assures him a dominant position in this particular genre. Blessed(?) with a productive rubber plantation, Douglas finds that the market for Brazilian rubber is about equal to the demand for acne. The U.S. Government, in a classic coals-to-Newcastle gesture, decides that the area is ripe for a birth control program and begins shipping in certain rather specialized rubber products. These shipments provide no end of amusement to the population and to the lucky reader of this zany novel.—Harold E. Hutchinson, Virginia Commonwealth Univ. Lib., Richmond

Drury, Allen. Return to Thebes.

Doubleday. Feb. 1977. illus. LC 76-23757. ISBN 0-385-04199-3. $8.95.

In this well-knit sequel to Drury's A God Against the Gods (LJ 7/76), the heretic Akhenaten is murdered and Tutankhaten (now Tutankhamon) becomes Pharaoh. He returns to Thebes and restores to power the god Amon-Ra and his greedy priesthood. Before he can place Amon-Ra and Aten on equal footing, he too is murdered and a struggle for power ensues between General Horemheb and his father Aye. Horemheb finally becomes the last Pharaoh of the 18th Dynasty. Drury succeeds admirably in presenting a compelling, warmly human, but logical version of his own interpretation of a fascinating historical period.—Francis D. Lazenby, Dept. of Modern & Classical Languages, Univ. of Notre Dame, Ind.

Edwards, Alexander. A Star Is Born.

Warner. 1976. 236p. from the screenplay by John Gregory Dunne & others. based on a story by William Wellman & Robert Carson. ISBN 0-446-84214-1. pap. $1.75. CINEMA/F

Based on the original story by Wellman and Carson, this novelization of the new movie version has been updated for the 1970's. The main characters are now rock stars, one on the rise, the other on the decline. The writing is not particularly good, and the language will offend many. The book has no place in a film collection, although there might be some interest in it as current fiction during the run of the movie. Most fans, however, will probably buy their own copies. Not recommended.—Barbara Kemp, Univ. of Michigan Lib., Ann Arbor

Heaven, Constance. The Queen and the Gypsy.

Coward. Feb. 1977. 278p. LC 76-44004. ISBN 0-698-10794-2. $8.95. F

"The queen" is Elizabeth I of England, "the gypsy" Robert Dudley, her longtime suitor. But the real protagonist is long-suffering Amy Robsart, Dudley's

RECOMMENDED

Mignon G. Eberhart "is at her best in her new novel, a solid story of intricate relationships and loyalties split by the Civil War . . . Here is a spellbinder with historical insight."
—Publishers Weekly

"A swift-paced novel sure to delight Eberhart fans."—Library Journal

ISBN: 0-394-40723-7
LC: 76-12436 $7.95

FAMILY FORTUNE
by MIGNON G. EBERHART

RANDOM HOUSE
201 E. 50th St. New York 10022

RECOMMENDED

young bride, who's neglected by her husband while he, afire with ambition, pursues the affections of his country's ruler. Author Heaven (who writes like Jean Plaidy) postulates the cause of Amy's death: suicide by means of a drug overdose, thus contradicting the belief frequently held among historians that the unfaithful Dudley murdered her. It's difficult to sympathize with Amy, who's a passive sap; Dudley, who's such a beast he doesn't go home to his wife even when he knows she is dying of breast cancer; or Elizabeth, who's just a glittering paper doll. This is average romantic fiction, lacking the rich period atmosphere of Heaven's earlier books, and flawed by stylistic mannerisms.—Joyce W. Smothers, Monmouth County Lib., Freehold, N.J.

King, Paul. Hermana Sam.
Coward. Feb. 1977. LC 76-25601. ISBN 0-698-10795-0. $8.95. F

Sister Samantha leaves her convent in the east to establish a hospital in the New Mexico Territory of the 1850's. On the way west her nurse's training saves the wounded Apache chief, Mangas Coloradas. She also meets and wins over the stock characters—the whore with a heart of gold, the profane stage driver with a heart of gold, the rowdy trappers with hearts of gold. There's plenty of historical detail, but it's laid on top of the story rather than worked into it, so the atmosphere seems forced and the characters syrupy. Then the plot becomes grim when the Pueblos erupt into violence. Mangas Coloradas saves the nun from a fate worse than death, then carries her off. She becomes Cold Water, the Apache healer and loving wife of the fierce, handsome warrior. In surrendering some historical accuracy the author finishes off his first novel with a good love story that, despite its faults, is compelling.—Lucia Robson Gauger, North County Lib., Glen Burnie, Md.

Morgan, Wesley. The Enforcer.
Warner. 1976. 189p. from a screenplay by Sterling Silliphant & others. ISBN 0-446-88366-2. pap. $1.50. CINEMA/F

Ever since his appearance on movie screens several season ago, detective "Dirty" Harry Callahan has become synonymous with the cult of superviolence. Here transmogrified as the central character of this movie tie-in title, he does battle against a group of terror-oriented villains who even go so far as to kidnap the mayor. As transparent as the one-dimensional characters are, Morgan never once lets the suspense or action sag. The book is tautly written, with an emphasis on dialogue. Fans of this genre should find a feast in this cliff-hanger. Recommended for public library browsing collections only.—Andrew Aros, Rosemead P.L., Calif.

Nicolaysen, Bruce. Perilous Passage.
Playboy, dist. by S. & S. 1977. 245p. LC 76-45356. ISBN 0-87223-469-X. $8.95. F

Chameleon-like, this novel appears in several guises. It will be for some a classic example of the chase: A demonic

"High romance, drama, tragedy"*

BEAUTY'S DAUGHTER

Mollie Hardwick, author of the Upstairs, Downstairs novels

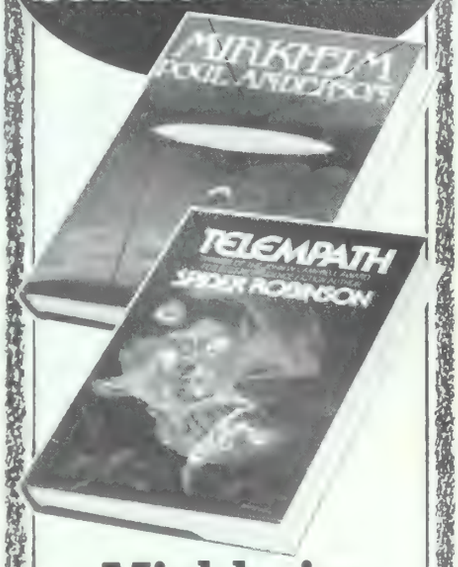
"An engaging new historical novel that centers on Emily, a daughter (father unknown) born to Emma, Lady Hamilton, in 1782. Recently discovered correspondence reveals that Emily and her mother were separated in 1806, and that in 1811 Emily wrote her mother asking to be recognized....The lovely Emily's see-sawing rags-to-riches fortunes make enchanting and dramatic reading." — Publishers Weekly*. "Public library patrons ...will be charmed by Emma's daughter."—Library Journal.
SBN 698-10805-1 $8.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.
200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

New Putnam Science Fiction



Mirkheim
By Poul Anderson

"A rousing novel of cosmic sweep and complexity. The story centers on the struggle between aliens and humans to control the newly discovered planet called Mirkheim and its treasure of valuable supermetals. But the real fascination comes in watching the Machiavellian intrigues of interstellar traders and merchants unfold....Anderson provides sufficient background about his four-dimensional universe to assist the first-time reader of future history, and the plot will keep the reader turning pages and returning for more."—The Booklist. A BERKLEY/PUTNAM BOOK. SBN: 399-11868-3.
YA. $7.95

Telempath
By Spider Robinson

"Imagine what would befall the human race if its sense of smell were suddenly increased by a factor of 100 thousand....The survivors would...group into opposing camps of those wishing to rebuild a rational technological society and those wanting to eliminate all vestiges of the agents responsible for mankind's near-extermination. Robinson has molded quite an imaginative, well-plotted story around this framework....A worthwhile purchase."—Library Journal. "Fresh, different, written with energy and ingenuity."—Publishers Weekly.
A BERKLEY/PUTNAM BOOK
SBN: 399-11796-2. YA. $7.95

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

BOWKER FEBRUARY CHECKLIST

☐ February 7/Buying Antiques In Europe, What to Buy and Where.
By Carol Kennedy.

A comprehensive guide to buying antiques of all kinds in Austria, Belgium and Luxembourg, England, Scotland and Wales, West Germany, Greece, Holland, Ireland, Italy, Portugal, Scandinavia, Spain, Switzerland, Turkey, Eastern Europe and the U.S.S.R. It provides an historical overview of each country's fine arts and crafts traditions, a city-by-city directory of dealers, and a listing of museums with relevant collections. Fully indexed.

ISBN 0-85935-018-5. LC 76-49706. c. 350 pages. $20.50 tent.

☐ February 9/Italian Books In Print 1976 (Catalogo dei Libri in Commercio 1976). Published by Editrice Bibliografica S.R.L. (Milan) and distributed in the Western Hemisphere by Bowker.

Provides full finding, ordering and bibliographic data on 92,000 books of all kinds now available from 360 Italian publishers. For the first time the books are listed by subject (Volume 3) as well as by author and title (Volumes 1 & 2). Includes a directory of publishers with ordering information and full addresses.

8½″ x 11¾″. Author/Title 2-vol. set, ISBN 0-8352-0972-5, ISSN 0069-1054, c. 1,350 pages, $50.00. Subject Guide, ISBN 0-8352-0976-8, ISSN 0069-1054, c. 650 pages, $27.00.

☐ February 14/*Educational Media Yearbook 1977. Edited by James W. Brown, Professor of Instructional Technology, San Jose State University, San Jose, California.

Part I, The Year in Review, includes reports on organizations, developments in information processing, media services in public libraries, industry sales trends, and lists award-winning films. Part II is a mediagraphy of print and non-print resources, including annotated listings of new reference tools, periodicals and newsletters, and media about media. Part III is a guide to media-oriented organizations, training programs, and funding sources. Fully indexed, with a directory of all producers, distributors and publishers represented.

ISBN 0-8352-0948-2. ISSN 0000-037X. LC 73-4891. c. 500 pages. $19.95.

☐ February 18/Feature Films On 8mm And 16mm, A Directory of Feature Films Available for Rental, Sale, and Lease in the United States and Canada. 5th Edition. Compiled and edited by James L. Limbacher, Audio-Visual Librarian, Henry Ford Centennial Library, Dearborn, Michigan.

Provides current distributor, cast information, running time and other filmographic data on 16,888 commercial, animated, and experimental films; serials; video discs and tapes. Includes more than 1,000 films which became available for rental, sale, or lease in the three years since the last edition was published. In addition to the main listings, these separate features are provided: an index of directors, a directory of film companies and distributors, a geographical listing of film companies and distributors, and a list of film reference works.

ISBN 0-8352-0919-9. ISSN 0071-4100. LC 79-163905. 8½″ x 11″. c. 500 pages. $19.95.

Order from: R. R. Bowker Order Dept. P. O. Box 1807, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106
Outside Western Hemisphere: Bowker, Erasmus House, Epping, Essex, England

Name _____

Address _____

City/State/Zip _____

Purchase Order # _____

All orders plus shipping and handling. Sales tax added where applicable. Prices are subject to change and slightly higher outside the U.S. and its possessions.

BOWKER
NEW YORK & LONDON

German SS agent pursues a Jewish family as they are being smuggled out of Nazi-occupied France into Spain by way of the Pyrenees, with the help of a Basque shepherd. This, complete with many Hollywoodian hairbreadth escapes. Others may see in it a larger picture of the fall and rise of France, while it may appear to still others as an allegory of human survivability and growth under the harshest circumstances. It is difficult to say which of these themes was uppermost in the author's mind. The economy and deceptive simplicity of his style suggest the first. Nevertheless, it would be regrettable if these other qualities were to be lost in the process of translation into a movie, in which form this is soon to appear.—Aaron L. Fessler, Merrick Editorial & Research Serv., N.Y.

Platt, Charles. Twilight of the City: a novel of the near future.

Macmillan. Mar. 1977. 204p. ISBN 0-02-597620-6. $8.95. F

Platt's novel vividly predicts the disintegration of American industrial capitalism at the end of the 20th Century. It warns us that the future is being mortgaged now, for Platt's society of 1997 is an intensified version of the "malfunctioning democracy" of the 1970's. Materialism has finally destroyed the quality of life, and urban decay and scarcity economics are in their terminal stages. Politicians are figureheads behind which the business corporations and the military struggle for power. Following the collapse, Platt's characters try different life structures: urban pragmatic individualism, nonviolent socialism, rural collectivism. None works, and the "open future" of the last chapter envisages a preindustrial agrarian society of small communities sustained with minimal technology. It is a nostalgic conception, and simplistically anti-urban, but it is also realized through the catastrophic ruthlessness of one man who is motivated by personal rather than social reasons. The moral questions of power and responsibility in political change are evaded by the author, who is too interested in the ego position of the central character. But, though superficial and misdirected at times, Platt's diagnosis is fascinating and his dramatization of it makes compelling reading.—Michael Page, Dept. of Language Arts, Grand Rapids Junior Coll., Mich.

Pohnka, Bett & Barbara C. Griffin. The Nuclear Catastrophe.

Ashley. 1977. 295p. LC 76-12249. ISBN 0-87949-056-X. $7.95. F

A timely and frightening novel about the explosion of a nuclear power plant. The experts said it could never happen, but it does, and no emergency preparations have been made. The city of Los Angeles and its inhabitants are at a loss: some panic, some discount the terror as a hoax, and others use uncertainty as an excuse to loot and kill. Six characters are followed closely in their efforts to survive, and the reader becomes deeply involved with their struggle.—Elaine Czesniuk, formerly with Somerville P.L., Mass.

St. Clair, Leonard. The Seadon Fortune.

S. & S. Feb. 1977. 280p. ISBN 0-671-22369-0. $9.95. F

This interesting historical novel takes place in California, and covers the period from 1865 to 1940. The Seadon fortune was made in oil—founded by Val Seadon and enlarged by his sons Owen and Ross. It is when the third generation comes upon the scene that friction starts, and the family is almost destroyed in the process. We read avidly of oil prospecting, strikes, dry holes, society in San Francisco and Los Angeles, the near-ruin brought by the Depression, and finally a threatened takeover of the family business by a longtime enemy in conjunction with the son and daughter of Ross Seadon. How the scheme is foiled is most interesting, and employs a plot device that was certainly new to me. The male characters are very well drawn, the females (with the exception of Sister Leah) somewhat less so. This is a novel that will hold your attention and engage your imagination.—Jane Belon Shaw, Lisle P.L., Ill.

Scorza, Manuel. Drums for Rancas.

Harper. Mar. 1977. 224p. tr. from Spanish by Edith Grossman. ISBN 0-06-013814-9. $8.95. F

"Fortunato was right: retreat meant bumping into the clouds with your ass." So we are told in this bitter, gritty, brilliant novel. Scorza is Peruvian and an activist, and lives outside his country. He writes of the struggles of central Andean peasant villages for survival against the overwhelming powers of foreign corporations who want their lands. History of this sort turned into fiction could easily be filled with sentimentality and sloganeering, reducing real human situations to symbols, but Scorza resists these. His narrative is tough, sophisticated, crazily animated, and devastating. Luckily for us, four more of his novels are to be translated into English in the near future.—Judith McPheron, formerly with Oklahoma County Lib., Edmund

Shreve, Susan Richards. A Woman Like That.

Atheneum. Mar. 1977. 241p. LC 76-50602. ISBN 0-689-10776-5. $8.95. F

The profound influence of mothers on daughters is the theme of this first-rate psychological novel. Jane Fielding, strong-willed and primevally beautiful, leaves an indelible mark on her sensitive and rebellious daughter Emily—in life and through the manner of her death. Emily must unconsciously reenact the inscrutable life and motivations of her feared and adored mother. Bittersweet, exquisitely written, inevitable as Greek tragedy, this is absorbing from start to finish.—Patricia Goodfellow, Leaside Lib., Toronto, Canada

Swain, Lawrence. Waiting for the Earthquake.

Atlantic: Little. Feb. 1977. 273p. ISBN 0-316-82470-4. $8.95. F

Just another mediocre story with dull characters and a commonplace plot. Eddie Dunaway is a San Francisco

JEAN PLAIDY'S
first novel in a superb new series!

THE CAPTIVE OF KENSINGTON PALACE

By the author of Madame Serpent and Queen Jezebel

Hailed for her matchless ability to "breathe life into historical figures" (Library Journal), Jean Plaidy now begins a fascinating new series of five novels based on the life of Victoria of England."[Readers] who enjoy historical fiction ...will be entertained by this panoramic portrait of Princess Victoria's childhood and ascent to the throne."—The Booklist.
SBN: 399-11851-9. YA. $8.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

"The author of The Girls of Huntington House has written another moving and engaging narrative based on her experiences working in a school-age expectant mothers program."
—Booklist

"One of those truly appealing books with just the right touch — a love tap." —Kirkus Reviews

$6.95 ISBN 0-395-24901-5

A House for Jonnie O.

a novel by
BLOSSOM ELFMAN

Houghton Mifflin Company
2 Park St., Boston, Mass. 02107

"Compulsively readable"*

SOHO SQUARE

By CLAIRE RAYNER

Author of Gower Street, The Haymarket and Paddington Green

"Although this is the fourth in a series of novels called The Performers, SOHO SQUARE can definitely be read on its own. It mainly concerns the just-grown-up grandchildren of Abel Lackland, noted surgeon, and the grown children of a once-famous actress, now scarred and bitter....They're real people, in an authentic 1850's London, in a compulsively readable tale."—Library Journal. SBN: 399-11879-9.

$8.95

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

"Neatly plotted and planned"*

The Old Man's Darling

ALLAN TURPIN

"At 71, wealthy Frank Chappie decides to marry again and purchases the affection of 35-year-old Dorothy, who becomes his third wife. A British comedy of manners ensues, heightened by Frank's growing ardor and stinginess, and Dorothy's increasing misery . . . a successful satire on British suburban society."—Booklist. "The author's dry but irrepressible wit adds spice to this engaging little social drama." — Publishers Weekly*.

SBN 698-10804-3 $7.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.
200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

postal workers' union member waiting for the New York local to strike, when he will try to get his own local to strike, too. Unknown to him, management has planted a postal inspector, a black man, in the union in order to get incriminating information about Eddie. Jacob, the black man, has also infiltrated Eddie's family, for he is sleeping with Eddie's sister. Eddie himself is sleeping with a woman doctor who is using him only to get material for a book she is writing. Just to round things out, there is an old black woman, thought to be a witch, who has the others buffaloed, especially the black postal inspector. When the strike finally occurs, it fizzles out, as does the story.—Frances Seamster, Kern County Lib., Bakersfield, Calif.

Trevor, William. The Children of Dynmouth.
Viking. Mar. 1977. 228p. ISBN 0-670-21665-8. $8.95. F

Timothy Gedge, a disturbed adolescent, determined to put together a comic act for Dynmouth's Easter fete, blackmails several citizens for the props he needs by threatening to make public the perverse details of their private lives. Part of the story's appeal lies in its melodrama. On a deeper level, however, it is an intriguing psychological study. By exposing the underside of people's personalities, Timothy forces characters to confront the realities they hide from themselves. A wife's discovery of her husband's homosexuality makes her acknowledge the sterility in her long marriage; a boy, whose father, Timothy says, murdered his mother, must recall the bad feelings he sensed between his parents. Reality is often ugly, Trevor suggests. Everyone facing a truth he can no longer suppress is a "child" of Dynmouth, innocence lost. This is a complex and provocative theme served up in highly readable form.—Rita Weinberg Tesler, English Dept., Jersey City State Coll., N.J.

Trillin, Calvin. Runestruck.
Little. Feb. 1977. 182p. ISBN 0-316-85275-9. $7.95. F

Trillin travels all over the country gathering material for his "U.S. Journal" series in the New Yorker, and in this book he makes expert use of his expert knowledge of people and places to produce a snappy little tale of intrigue. We are in a made-up place on the coast of Maine called Berryville. Two young locals are digging for clams when one of them chances upon a curiously engraved oblong stone about six inches in length. Pandemonium ensues when it is thought that the stone might have been left by Vikings and that Berryville is the fabled Vinland mentioned by Leif Ericson. The discovery flushes out a covey of colorful characters, who soon get to wrangling over how the town should handle its newfound fame. The plot thickens when the stone disappears and when the folks begin to realize that they are part of some darkling prank. Most readable.—A. J. Anderson, Sch. of Library Science, Simmons Coll., Boston

Wise, Leonard. The Big Biazarro.
Doubleday. Feb. 1977. LC 76-18374. ISBN 0-385-12063-X. $7.95. F

Lefty Wilson, a good-hearted naïve young black gambler from upstate New York, teams up with Ace White, an older experienced, worldly wise white gambler. Lefty knows that Ace can help him win the world championship poker match known as the "Big Biazarro." In a series of qualifying matches, Lefty and Ace "meet 'em, greet 'em, jam 'em, and beat 'em." On the side, the two are admired by women and caught up in some "cloak and dagger jazz." Lefty learns the sentimental lesson that his friends are more important than world conquests. This first novel is lightweight fare, but its mix of humor, pathos, and adventure is diverting. Wise's tone is pleasantly cheerful and his plotting is, if predictable, at least efficient. A good addition for popular fiction collections.—Peter Dollard, Alma Coll. Lib., Mich.

Wyatt, Wyatt. Catching Fire.
Random. Apr. 1977. $8.95. F

As the story opens, Norman Foreman, a professor at a college in Minnesota, has just partaken of some extracurricular sex with the wife of a tire salesman when the cuckolded husband happens upon the scene, douses the two with charcoal lighter fluid, and strikes a match. Our professorial friend survives this unusual barbeque only to have his stomach replaced with the skin of a pig, thus earning him the sobriquet pigman and making him the brunt of numerous tiresome jokes. Dismissed from his teaching post for moral turpitude, he presently sets out for Florida. There he falls in with a parcel of weird characters—a deaf girl who has designs on him, a lad with no nose, a withered con artist and his scrofulous associates, and two or three others there's no need to bother about here. In maneuvering the principals around the Florida landscape, the author never seems to have any particular goal in mind. This first novel is as shapeless as a punctured balloon, the dialogue the characters spout is only once removed from gibberish, and the one central joke becomes a bore.—A. J. Anderson, Sch. of Library Science, Simmons Coll., Boston

Science Fiction

Dick, Philip K. The Best of Philip K. Dick.
Ballantine: Random. Mar. 1977. 464p. ed. by John Brunner. pap. $1.95. F

This anthology contains 19 short stories that span Dick's career. Included are "Autofac," perhaps one of the earliest science fiction stories with an ecological warning; the irreverent "Faith of Our Fathers"; "The Father Thing," about childhood terrors which are all too real; and "Second Variety," a realistic look at war in the future. It is difficult to select the "best" of an author's writings, but Brunner has succeeded quite well, and his short introductory essay, "The Reality of Philip K. Dick," sets the stage for what proves to be an exciting anthology.

Dick's afterthoughts on each story make the volume complete. Sure to be sought after by the legions of Dick fans—recommended.—Barry B. Baker, Univ. of South Carolina Lib., Columbia

Leiber, Fritz. Our Lady of Darkness.
Berkley, dist. by Putnam. Feb. 1977. 172p. ISBN 0-399-11872-1. $7.95. F

There is a subclass of science fiction, best exemplified by the work of H. P. Lovecraft and the old Arkham House writers, in which increasingly fantastic events slowly reveal a brooding and unnatural horror. Now the well-known Leiber has written one of these tales, but it is not simply imitation. The Lovecraftian setting of rural, witch-haunted New England has been replaced by modern California, where cities sometimes surround areas of ancient wilderness. Modern psychology and the working of an old curse are neatly blended. Though Leiber's monster is less believable than some of Lovecraft's (Can a paramental creature, made of ideas, be brought to life by the very idea of such a creature?), Leiber's characters are much more carefully developed. Lovecraft fans will recognize the debt, but they'll enjoy the differences too. Recommended.—Raymond L. Hough, Dept. of Chemistry, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor

Pournelle, Jerry. The Mercenary.
Pocket Bks: S. & S., dist. by Pocket Bks-Ace. Feb. 1977. pap. $1.75. F

John Christian Falkenberg, "the mercenary" of the title, begins his military career in the early pages of this novel as an appointee to the CoDominium Navy. His first lesson is that loyalty is to the Fleet and not to the precarious coalition government of Earth. His second is that the Navy's mission is to exist, preserving the peace in far-flung corners of the galaxy in the hope that at least some portions of the human race may be saved when Earth, as seems inevitable, destroys itself. The concepts of loyalty and mission remain with him after he is cashiered on trumped-up charges, and they provide the theme and motivation for the rest of his adventures. The story, set in the future, is a parable for our own times: the dirt of politics, the evil of war, the loneliness of command, and the rewards of comradeship. There is even, ultimately, a love interest, and the proof that old soldiers never die, they just fade away. Even with my pacifist bias, I liked it.—Judith T. Yamamoto, Illinois Regional Lib. Council, Chicago

Spruill, Steven G. Keepers of the Gate.
Doubleday. Feb. 1977. ISBN 0-385-12420-1. $5.95. F

Captain Jared Hiller, a retired Space Intelligence agent fitted with bionic parts, fights to save Earth from imminent destruction by aliens in this undistinguished futuristic spy story. Hiller seeks to discover why an overpopulated planet of domed cities and depleted resources should be of such interest to the Proteps, a humanoid civilization far advanced of Homo Sapiens. It turns out that the Proteps are descendants of an earlier Earth civilization that escaped to a distant planet—the few survivors are immortal, but have also become sterile. They want to destroy Earth to prevent humans from escaping to and taking over their planet, but they change their minds when they learn that Hiller has fathered the first Protep offspring in two centuries. Uninspired writing and a routine plot—if this is skipped it won't be missed.—Marcia R. Hoffman, Woodbridge P.L., Colonia, N.J.

INDEX:

Abel, B., 493
Abramhamsen, D., 481
Adams, H. H., 481
Adams, R. B., 486
All the paintings of the Rijksmuseum in Amsterdam, 472
American Indian reference book, 473
Amin, S., 483
Amory, C., 503
Anderson, B., 492
Anderson, M., 473
Arieti, S., 500
Ayling, S., 481

Badham, P., 498
Bahrenburg, B., 510
Baird, T., 511
Bak, J., 486
Baker, S. L., 507
Banham, R., 478
Banville, J., 511
Barfield, O., 494
Barnes, J., 510
Barth, J. R., 494
Basic list of Latin American materials in Spanish, Portuguese, and French, 464
Beaty, D., 503
Beckett, S., 509, 511
Bell, M., 498
Bergonzi, B., 494
Bernard, G., 485
Berry, W., 498
Best reference books, 473
Bhabani, S. G., 499
Bidwell, S., 506
Bjornson, R., 494
Blackburn, G., 507
Blackwell, R., 506
Bonn, G., 506
Botero, F., 476
Botticelli, S., 476
Bragg, M., 486
Brask, O., 497
Brink, A., 511
Brown, M. H., 501
Burroway, J., 511
Burton, P. E., 473
Busch, E., 481
Butel, J., 493

Cameron, E., 478
Carroll, J. A., 486
Cartwright, J. H., 486
Cendrars, B., 498
Chametzky, J., 495
Chang, Y. C., 471
Children's authors and illustrators, 473
Clark, G., 479
Clark, H. M., 507
Clark, R. L., 464
Clynes, M., 500
Coe, B., 480
Coffey, M., 495
Coleman, W. L., 502
Concise dictionary of American biography, 476
Concise Jewish Bible, 502
Consumer Guide Eds., 492
Contemporary authors, 476
Cooper, I. S., 512
Copp, E. A., 483
Cormier, F., 481
Cornell, J., 487

Daniells, L. M., 474
Davis, L. H., 503
Delvaux, P., 476
Derrida, J., 495
Derven, R., 505
Detzer, D., 487
Deul, L., 481
Deutch, H. E., 483
Devaney, J., 508
Dick, P. K., 516
Dickens, R. S., 491
Didion, J., 512
Di Lauro, A., 510
Disfarmer, M., 480
Dixon, J., 493
Dostoevsky, F., 495
Douglas, J., 512
Downes, E., 497
Downs, R. B., 495
Drury, A., 512
Dryden, E. A., 495
Dubie, N., 499
Dunne, G. T., 506
DuPuy, R. E., 487
Dygart, A., 491

Eagleton, T., 495
Edwards, A., 512
Eiserer, L., 504
Emerson, E., 496
Emile-Mâle, G., 476
Ernst, B., 476

Farer, T. J., 499
Felkenes, G. T., 476
Fischer, D. H., 488
FitzGerald, C. P., 488
Ford, W., 508
Fornara, C. W., 488
Fosback, N. G., 484
Fox, G. C., 508
Fox, M., 502
Fryer, L., 503

Gidley, M., 507
Goldsmith, E. S., 488
Greenspan, B., 508
Gregory, D., 503
Griffin, D., 485
Gronbjerg, K. A., 471
Guérard, M., 493
Gutcheon, B., 479

Hannah, L., 484
Hart, E., 471
Havens, L. L., 500
Havighurst, W., 488
Hayward, B., 482
Heaven, C., 512
Hernton, C., 499
Heywood, C., 496
Holenstein, E., 494
Hooper, F., 488
Horwitz, E. L., 479
Horwitz, M. J., 506
Hudson, R. A., 494
Hughes, J., 471
Hull, P., 505
Hulliung, M., 489
Hutchings, A., 498
Hynes, S., 496

Images of the world the year 2000, 506

Jennings, E., 496
Johnson, E. D., 464
Johnston, D. M., 472
Johnston, R. J., 484
Johnstone, J. W., 485
Joyes, C., 476

Kamarck, A. M., 483
Kaufmann, W., 485
Keller, M., 489
Kenney, W. H., 496
Kertész, A., 480, 481
King, P., 513
Kirby-Smith, H. T., 491
Klamkin, M., 479
Klein, H. J., 484
Krawczyk, C., 474
Kristeva, J., 507

Lawder, D., 499
Lawrence, L., 482
Leiber, F., 517
L'Engle, M., 502
Lepper, G. M., 474
Lipkin, M., 503
Little, A. J., 484
Logsdon, G., 504

MacBean, A. I., 484
McCabe, C. J., 477
McComas, T., 508
MacDonald, S., 499
McGraw-Hill dictionary of the life sciences, 474
McInery, R., 498
McKenzie, I., 508
McKinley, W. L., 492
MacQuitty, W., 491
Magnusson, M., 477
Majumdar, R., 474
Mandelstam, O., 496
Marek, G. R., 482
Marki, I., 496
Marshall, M., 508
Masson, G., 489
Masterton, G., 501
Meer, F., 506
Metz, L. C., 489
Meves, E., 508
Middleton, D., 505
Miller, W. E., 500
Millgate, L., 474
Mohan, J., 508
Moment, B. C., 504
Moreau, G., 497
Morgan, W., 513
Mullen, J., 482

Nathan, A. J., 489
Nevin, D., 472
Nicolaysen, B., 513
Nineteenth seminar on the acquisition of Latin American library materials, 464
Nisbett, A., 482

Ogburn, C., 504
Operation sail, 1976, 507

Paraguayan bibliography, 464
Parks, P., 504
Peck, H. D., 497
Petersen, K., 477
Peterson, M. D., 490
Platt, C., 515
Pohnka, B., 515
Polmar, N., 474
Portman, J., 478
Poulantzas, N., 500
Pournelle, J., 517
Powell, W. S., 482

Quennell, P., 482

Raine, K., 483
Redwood, J., 498
Reed, W., 478
Richardson, J. A., 480
Rorty, A., 498
Rosenbloom, J., 475
Rosnek, C., 479
Rosner, B., 480
Rowland-Entwistle, T., 504
Rudner, R., 509
Russett, R., 510

St. Clair, L., 515
Schlereth, H., 509
Schran, P., 490
Scorza, M., 515
Seelye, J., 497
Seidel, M., 497
Shaw, S., 490
Shivers, A. S., 497
Shoemaker, W., 509
Shreve, S. R., 515
Skousen, M., 484
Slide, A., 510
Smith, C., 472
Smith, M. R., 490
Snetsinger, R., 506
Sontag, F., 502
Spruill, S. G., 517
Stacey, D., 503
Stanford, W. B., 490
Stern, F., 490
Stigum, M. L., 483
Stock, J. W., 478
Stockholm Internat. Peace Research Inst., 500
Sutherland, G., 478
Swain, L., 515
Swenson, E., 480
Szasz, T., 501

Tannenbaum, E. R., 490
Thévoz, M., 478
Thomas, D. L., 484
Trevor, W., 516
Trillin, C., 516
Trilling, R. J., 500
Tucker, R. W., 500
Tudor, D., 475

Uris, A., 485

Voltz, J. A., 494
Von Pfeil, H. P., 475

Wager, W., 510
Wagner, G., 485
Walker, M., 509
Walker, R. H., 476
Walsh, L., 509
Wasserman, G. R., 497
Watzlawick, P., 501
Weaver, R. G., 476
Weaver, R. J., 504
Weekes, C., 501
Weinreb, L. L., 472
West, R. C., 485
White, C., 480
Whitman, R. F., 497
William Morris and the art of the book, 480
Wilson, D. M., 491
Wise, L., 516
Wise, W., 490
Wolf, R., 492
Wonderful things, 491
World atlas of golf, 509
Wyatt, W., 516

Yachtsman's choice, 509
Yoshino, M. Y., 485

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

All advertisements for the Positions Open and the Positions Wanted classifications will be edited to exclude direct or indirect references to race, creed, color, age, and sex as conditions of employment. Positions open and positions wanted, $1.80 per line, minimum charge, $5.40, all other types of ads, $2.75 per line, minimum charge $8.25. If voucher forms are required for billing, please send them at the time advertisements are submitted for insertion. Copy for ads and requests for cancellations must be received at the LJ office 45 days preceding date of issue. Write: Classified Advertising Department, Library Journal, 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, New York 10036.

OUT-OF-PRINT

EXCLUSIVE WANT LISTS get prompt attention, wide search, reasonable prices, from International Bookfinders, Inc., Box 1-LJ, Pacific Palisades, Calif. 90272.

COLONIAL "out-of-print" Book Service, Inc. Want Lists invited, 23 E. 4th St., New York City 10003.

EXCLUSIVE WANT LISTS advertised & searched plus 150,000 vol. indexed stock. PAB 2917 Atlantic, Atlantic City, NJ 08401.

WE FIND BOOKS. Free International Search. Exclusive want lists invited. Realistic prices. Eva Davis Books. 108 Prince Charles, Williamsburg, VA 23185.

OUT OF PRINT books located. Send in title, author to: Free Search Service, Dept. LJ, 41 Union Square West, New York, NY 10003.

OP BOOKS in literature; social sciences, humanities. EGLI; Lamont; BCL, etc. Book Lande, 8926 National Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90034.

INTERNATIONAL CONGRESSES are one of our specialties. Foreign books and periodicals, current and out-of-print. Albert J. Phiebig Inc., Box 352, White Plains, N.Y. 10602.

MAGAZINES—BACK NUMBER

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC: (1888-1977). Free quotes and discounts. Price guide for appraisal. $5. Don Smith, 3930 Rankin St., Louisville, KY 40214.

BACK ISSUE MAGAZINES, general, scholarly, technical. Designed to serve high school and jr. college libraries. Please send want lists to Back Issues West; P.O. Box 6688, Tucson, Arizona 85716.

REPLACEMENT ISSUES of recent subscriptions. Subscribers to journals listed in Science Citation Index have a good chance of immediately locating lacking issues for years 1970-1975 with the Replacement Serials Section of M.S.I, the worldwide back-issue house. Please address your queries to Maxwell Scientific International (now a Pergamon Press, Inc. division), Fairview Park, Elmsford, New York 10523.

OVER 2,000,000 backdate magazines. Send want lists. Magazine Center, Room 406, 145 West 29th, New York, NY 10001.

INTERNATIONAL UNIVERSITY Booksellers, Inc., 101 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10003. We buy: Would like to hear of periodical backfiles of scholarly significance, individual titles or entire collections, surplus to your present needs. We sell: We carry one of the most comprehensive inventories of periodicals in all fields and langauges and are a major supplier to academic libraries in all parts of the world. Call or write Mr. Becker.

MICROFORMS

MICROFORMS. Good second-hand microfilm of periodicals of established micropublishers bought and sold. Write or call Microforms International Marketing Company, Fairview Park, Elmsford, New York 10523. (914) 592-9141.

FOR SALE

BOOKMOBILE: One 30' 1963 Gerstenslager. Rebuilt generator. Custom shelving, capacity approximately 3500 books, structurally sound, body condition fair, creme with red trim, highest bid. Portsmouth Public Library Board of Trustees, 1220 Gallia Street, Portsmouth, Ohio 45662.

TWO TRANSIT BUS type bookmobiles. 1967. Good condition Int'l Harvester chassis; Gerstenslager body. Both completely overhauled in last two years. Power supply generator. Book capacity 3,500. Contact: Doris J. Athy, Director, Thomas Jefferson Library System, 214 Adams Street, Jefferson City, Missouri 65101. Phone (314) 634-2464.

SERVICES—PERSONNEL

THERESA M. BURKE Employment Agency, 8 West 40th St., N.Y., N.Y. 10018. Specializing in the recruitment of library and information personnel for special, academic and public libraries.

POSITIONS WANTED

ENGLISH LIBRARIAN wishes exchange to American academic library from Fall 197 for 6-12 months. Anyone interested please contact: Jean Marie Willers, Priestman Library, Sunderland Polytechnic, Chester Rd., Sunderland SRi 3SD, U.K.

POSITIONS OPEN—NORTHEAST

LIBRARIAN: Supervisor for institutional services. To supervise a federally funded project of library services to nursing homes correctional institutions and low-income housing projects. Must be able to drive a step-van. Master's degree in library science from an ALA accredited school, previous experience in working with institutions preferred. Salary $10,280-$14,240 in seven steps, four weeks vacation, good benefits. Submit résumé to: Ms. Catherine O'Connell, Washington County Free Library, 100 S. Potomac Street, Hagerstown MD 21740. An equal opportunity employer.

LIBRARIAN, Teaching Materials Center, State University College, Oneonta, NY. Graduate degree in librarianship required. Undergrad or additional grad work in education preferred. Aptitude or experience in non-print materials desirable. Appointment available July 1, 1977, dependent upon approval of division of the budget. Assistant librarian rank ($10,000 minimum; 12 months). Reference service (including evening & weekend assignments), acquisition & cataloging responsibilities, assistance in media center. Applications accepted until April 1, 1977. Address inquiries and vita to: Martha Chambers, Chairperson, Personnel Committee, Milne Library, State University College, Oneonta, NY 13820. State University of New York is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

DIRECTOR of a progressive public library in small northern New England city of 14,000. M.L.S. from ALA-accredited institution required. Experience preferred, especially in budget administration and program planning. Staff: 7 FTE, Budget: $84,000, Volumes: 45,000. Salary dependent on experience; good fringe benefits. Position open April 1, 1977. Send résumé to: Theodore A. Monetta, Fiske Free Library, Claremont, N.H. 03743.

HEAD CATALOG LIBRARIAN: Hofstra University is seeking librarian with strong administrative experience supervising all aspects of cataloging service in university library. Extensive experience with OCLC, LC classification, and modern management techniques required. Staff of 16 including 3 professionals. M.L.S. from ALA accredited library school; second Master's desirable. Position vacant. Salary competitive. Benefits: faculty rank, TIAA/CREF, medical and life insurance, one-month vacation. Send résumé with 3 references by April 1, 1977 to: Helen Bajan, Catalog Dept., Hofstra University Library, Hempstead, New York 11550. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHEAST

DIRECTOR-PUBLIC LIBRARIES: Challenging and growth-oriented opportunity in a city of over 135,000. Prefer applicant with M.L.S. degree. Public library background desired with a minimum of five years' experience in an administrative and supervisory capacity. Must be innovative, fiscally responsible, a self-starter, and able to work effectively with subordinates and members of city management. Will direct a staff of 40 full-time and 22 part-time employees, to include eight certified librarians. Four libraries, to include one of 15,000 square feet under construction, a law library, and a bookmobile. Eligibility for a librarian's certificate issued by the Virginia State Board for the Certification of Librarians will be required. The starting salary will be commensurate with the qualifications of the individual selected. The current salary range is $15,732-$23,122. Comprehensive city benefits included. Send current résumé before March 1, 1977 to: K. M. Blanks, Jr., Assistant Director-Personnel, City of Newport News, 2400 Washington Avenue, Newport News, VA 23607. An equal opportunity employer, m/f.

DIRECTOR OF LIBRARY: Austin Peay State University, Clarksville, Tennessee, 45 miles N.W. of Nashville. Responsibilities: Leadership and administrative management of 180,000 volume modern library facility with budget of $423,000 and staff of 20 (5 professional); serving 4600 students. Reports directly to chief academic officer. Qualifications: M.L.S. from ALA accredited library school and additional subject Master's degree, with Doctor's degree preferred. Eight to ten years library experience including three to five years of academic library administrative experience. Salary open. Starting date July 1, 1977 or nogotiable. Résumé must include degrees, experience, 3 references (one from current employer), scholarly contributions and professional activities and must be received by March 1, 1977. Apply to: Vice President for Academic Affairs, Austin Peay State University, Clarksville, Tennessee 37040. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

CATALOGER (chiefly serials). University of Southwestern Louisiana. Master's degree in L.S., experience in cataloging and serials required. Knowledge of French and German desirable. Familiarity and experience with national trends and developments in serials cataloging and automation desirable. Assistant professor rank. 12 months salary range $13,000–$15,000, depending upon experience. LC classification, member of SOLINET. Send résumé and three letters of recommendation to: Miss Norma Durand, Head Cataloger, Dupre Library, University of Southwestern Louisiana, Lafayette, Louisiana 70504. Deadline May 1, 1977. Position available Jan. 1, 1977. The University of Southwestern Louisiana is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

REFERENCE LIBRARIAN and professional factotum for public service and related duties as assigned in college library without computer terminals or electronic procedures. New position concurrent with move into new building. Available June 1. Present total staff of 6 plus student assistants. 1,600 enrollment, 100,000 volumes, in city of 37,000 in eastern North Carolina. Require M.S. from ALA accredited school, with reference experience preferred. Salary range of $9,500-$10,500, dependent on credentials. Twelve month contract. Send résumé by March 15 to: Otis Coefield, Library Director, Atlantic Christian College, Wilson, NC 27893. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

LIBRARIAN-HEAD. Francis Carrick Thomas Library. Transylvania University. Liberal Arts college in Lexington, Kentucky is seeking M.L.S. from ALA accredited school capable of developing and implementing comprehensive program to expand acquisitions, stimulate use, build external support, organize technical services and develop physical facilities. In addition to the regular collection, the library contains several rare and important collections. Position carries faculty status, full fringe benefits including TIAA-CREF, and competitive salary. Inquiries, nominations, and résumés should be addressed to: Dean Walter G. Emge, Librarian Search Committee, Transylvania University, Lexington, KY 40508.

POSITIONS OPEN—MIDWEST

EXTENDED SERVICES DIRECTOR for urban county library serving 170,000. Administer 9 branches, 2 mobile units. New central library opened 1974. Requirements: M.L.S. plus 4 years of library experience in a supervisory capacity. Apply: Brown County Personnel Dept., Brown County Safety Building, 125 South Adams Street, Green Bay, Wisconsin 54301. Include résumé, transcript of library school grades, and minimum of three references. An equal opportunity employer. Salary $14,000. Position open January 1, 1977.

LIBRARY DIRECTOR. Management oriented librarian to administer diversified program of library services in a city of 75,000, staff of 35, two branch libraries and one bookmobile. Emphasis on children's services. M.L.S. from ALA accredited library school; minimum 10 years library experience including 7 years in significant administrative positions. Demonstrated ability in public relations. Position open May 1. Salary negotiable. Send résumé and references to: Mrs. Hugh Miner, President of the Board, 1802 Crescent Drive, St. Joseph, MO 64506.

CHAIRPERSON, Dept. of Library Science, ALA accredited. Faculty of seven, 65 FTE students. To fill vacancy due to retirement. Master's degree from ALA accredited school, Doctorate preferably from ALA accredited library school. Eligibility for senior level faculty appointment. Successful teaching experience, experience in at least one type of library work, active participation in professional organizations. Superior achievement in research and publication. Demonstrated administrative ability and familiarity with policies and procedures of higher education. Rank and salary negotiable, depending upon qualifications. Equal opportunity, affirmative action employer. Send résumé before April 1, 1977 to: Dean Barbara J. Seelye, College of Professional Studies, Northern Illinois University, DeKalb, IL 60115.

YOUNG ADULT-A/V LIBRARIAN: To serve recreational needs of high school aged patrons and audio-visual needs of all ages. Responsible for collections and program development under general supervision of supervisor of adult services. Broad first hand knowledge of popular reading materials and good knowledge of music required. Master's degree from ALA accredited L.S. program required. Pertinent public library experience desired. Salary range: $14,147-$17,196 in six steps. Benefits include four weeks vacation after first year. Paid health and life insurance, eleven paid holidays, sick leave to maximum of 135 days. Applications close: Feb. 19, 1977. To apply send résumé together with references to: City Librarian, Decatur Public Library, 247 E. North, Decatur, IL 62523.

HEAD OF CATALOG Division: Available Immediately. The Public Library of Columbus and Franklin County has a challenging opportunity for a career oriented librarian with an M.L.S. from an ALA accredited college or university. All applicants should have demonstrated supervisory, organizational, communicative skills and be familiar with DDC. Minimum qualifications: M.L.S. with three to five years of professional cataloging experience. Salary range: $14,726.40-$21,049.60. We offer a creative working environment with continuous opportunities for accomplishments and professional growth. If interested, please forward résumé in confidence to: C. E. Johnson, Director of Personnel, Public Library of Columbus and Franklin County, 96 S. Grant Avenue, Columbus, Ohio 43215. An equal opportunity employer m/f.

CATALOGER responsible for original cataloging and classification of monographs, with emphasis on the sciences. Prepares copy for OCLC input; uses LC classification and LC subject headings. May also train and revise work of LTAs. Minimum qualifications: M.L.S. from an ALA accredited library school, second Master's degree in a biological or physical science, and reading knowledge of at least one Western European language. Familiarity with LC classification, MARC formats, OCLC system desirable. Rank of assistant professor. Twelve month appointment. Minimum salary $12,220. Usual fringe benefits. Position available immediately. Send résumé to: Robert J. Adelsperger, Acting Personnel Officer, Dept. 3B University of Illinois at Chicago Circle, P.O. Box 8198, Chicago, IL 60680. Deadline for applications March 15, 1977. An affirmative action/equal opportunity employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—MIDWEST

SPECIAL LIBRARIAN: Synagogue; M.L.S. required. Established major collection. One person library requiring independence and initiative. Congregational religious school and research responsibilities. Position effective Spring 1977. Salary range $11,000-$13,000 plus benefits. Send résume and references to: Chairperson, Librarian Search Committee, c/o The Temple, University Circle and Silver Park, Cleveland, Ohio 44106.

POSITIONS OPEN—WEST

ASSISTANT LIBRARIAN, Government publications and map department in new learning activities resource center incorporating library and nonprint media services. Under the general direction of the department head will have responsibility for the map collection including the classifying and cataloging of maps. Will assist in the operation of the department, answer reference questions involving both maps and government publications, give student orientations, and perform other professional work as required. Qualifications: Graduate degree from an ALA accredited school of library science. Librarians also holding a degree major in geography or geology or with experience in the cataloging and interpretation of maps and in reference service with government publications will be given preference. Salary: $11,556-$15,924 (assistant librarian). A tenure-track position. Send letter of application, résumé, and credentials by April 1, 1977 to: Robert G. Brennan, Director of Public Services, California State University, Chico, Chico, CA 95929. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

CURRICULUM MATERIALS Department in a new learning activities resource center incorporating library and nonprint media services. Supervises department and participates in the acquisition and processing of curriculum materials. Provides reference service and gives instruction in the use of materials. Ability to work with faculty, students and professional teachers is essential. Qualifications: Graduate degree from an ALA accredited school of library science. A second Master's degree in the field of education is highly desirable. A minimum of three years of professional library experience preferably in a curriculum materials department, part of which shall have been in a supervisory capacity. Teaching experience is valuable. Salary: $13,440-$18,564 (senior assistant librarian). A tenure-track position. Send letter of application, résumé, and credentials by April 1, 1977 to: Robert G. Brennan, Director of Public Services, California State University, Chico, Chico, CA 95929. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

HEAD, CIRCULATION Department, Position No. HC-1. Assistant/Associate Librarian, $12,312-$21,708. Administrative and coordinative responsibility including lending and reserved book services, stack maintenance and building operations. Supervises 60 full-time equivalent. Personal involvement in detail design and implementation of automated lending and tattle-tape systems expected. Required: M.L.S. or equivalent; experience and demonstrated ability. Résumé prior to March 15, 1977 to: Eugene Graziano, Assistant University Librarian, University of California, Santa Barbara, California 93106. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHWEST

COLLEGE LIBRARIAN. Position available March 1, 1977. To organize and direct operations of a small library through a crucial period of growth. Energy, initiative and flexibility required. Present supporting staff of 1 FTE professional and 4 assistants, with increase projected. Qualifications: M.L.S. from ALA accredited library school, minimum of five years of increasingly responsible administrative experience. Science or technology background highly desirable. Salary $15,804 for 12-month year with liberal vacation and fringe benefits. Faculty rank. Send résumés and professional references to: Jean E. Kuhl, Librarian, Texas A&M University-Moody College of Marine Sciences and Maritime Resources, P.O. Box 1675, Galveston, Texas 77553. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—CANADA

ASSISTANT PROFESSOR, Information science. Ph.D. required, preferably in library or information science. Ph.D.'s in other fields but with a Master's degree in library or information science will be considered. Duties: teaching Ph.D. and M.L.S. courses in the areas of applications of computers to library data processing and information retrieval. Preference will be given to persons with a research interest in bibliographical control. Practical experience is an advantage. Salary: $16,000. Send inquiries to: Elaine Svenonius, Acting Dean, School of Library and Information Science, University of Western Ontario, London, Ontario, N6A 5B9. Closing date for receipt of applications: March 15, 1977.

POSITIONS OPEN—OVERSEAS

MEDICAL LIBRARIAN, Senior Assistant Librarian Grade 1. The University of Papua New Guinea (Port Moresby). Applications are invited for the position of medical librarian. The successful applicant will be responsible to the university librarian for the organization and management of the medical library branch. Applicants should possess a university degree, a professional qualification in librarianship and appropriate experience, and will be required to take up the position as soon as possible in 1977. Salary: K9,854-K13,528 per annum, in addition, an allowance of K1,300 per annum if single is payable. An extra K1,000 marriage allowance and K156 per child child allowance may also be payable. Applications should include detailed curriculum vitae, a recent small photograph and the names and addresses of three referees. Previous applicants need not re-apply as their applications are already on file. Conditions include provision of housing, annual leave fares and FSSU superannuation, and may include provision of study leave. Further details and the conditions of appointment are available from the Secretary, Box 4820, University P.O., Port Moresby, Papua New Guinea, with whom applications close on March 25, 1977.

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS

Addison-Wesley Publishing Co. 481
Alabama's National Society of Colonial Dames of America 477
American Guidance Service 475
Arco Publishing Co. 430, 431

Baker & Taylor Co. 439
Basic Books 489
Beinfeld Publishing 509
Bon Mot Publications 488
R. R. Bowker Co. 432, 465, 466, 470, 514
Brodart 3rd Cover
Brooke House 4th Cover

Coward, McCann & Geoghegan 474, 512, 513, 516
Crown Publishers 473
Current Co. 440

Dow Jones-Irwin 485

F. W. Faxon Co. 472

Gaylord Bros. 426

Hawthorn Books 499
Highsmith Co. 442
Houghton Mifflin Co. 512, 515

Industrial Press 502

Robert E. Krieger Publishing Co. 504

J. B. Lippincott Co. 483
Lockheed Information Systems 436, 437

3M Co. 2nd Cover, 425
McGregor Magazine Agency 443
Mason/Charter Publishers 486, 488
Meadowbrook Press 492

Pantheon Books 478, 481, 501
Pocket Books 511
Praeger Publishers 479, 503
G. P. Putnam's Sons 472, 483, 486, 507, 510, 513, 515, 516

Rand McNally & Co. 491
Random House 499, 513
Henry Regnery Co. 495, 502, 504, 507

Taplinger Publishing Co. 450
Temple University Press 487
Two Continents Publishing Group 493

Universe Books 510
University Microfilms International 441
University of Chicago Press 434

Workman Publishing Co. 505

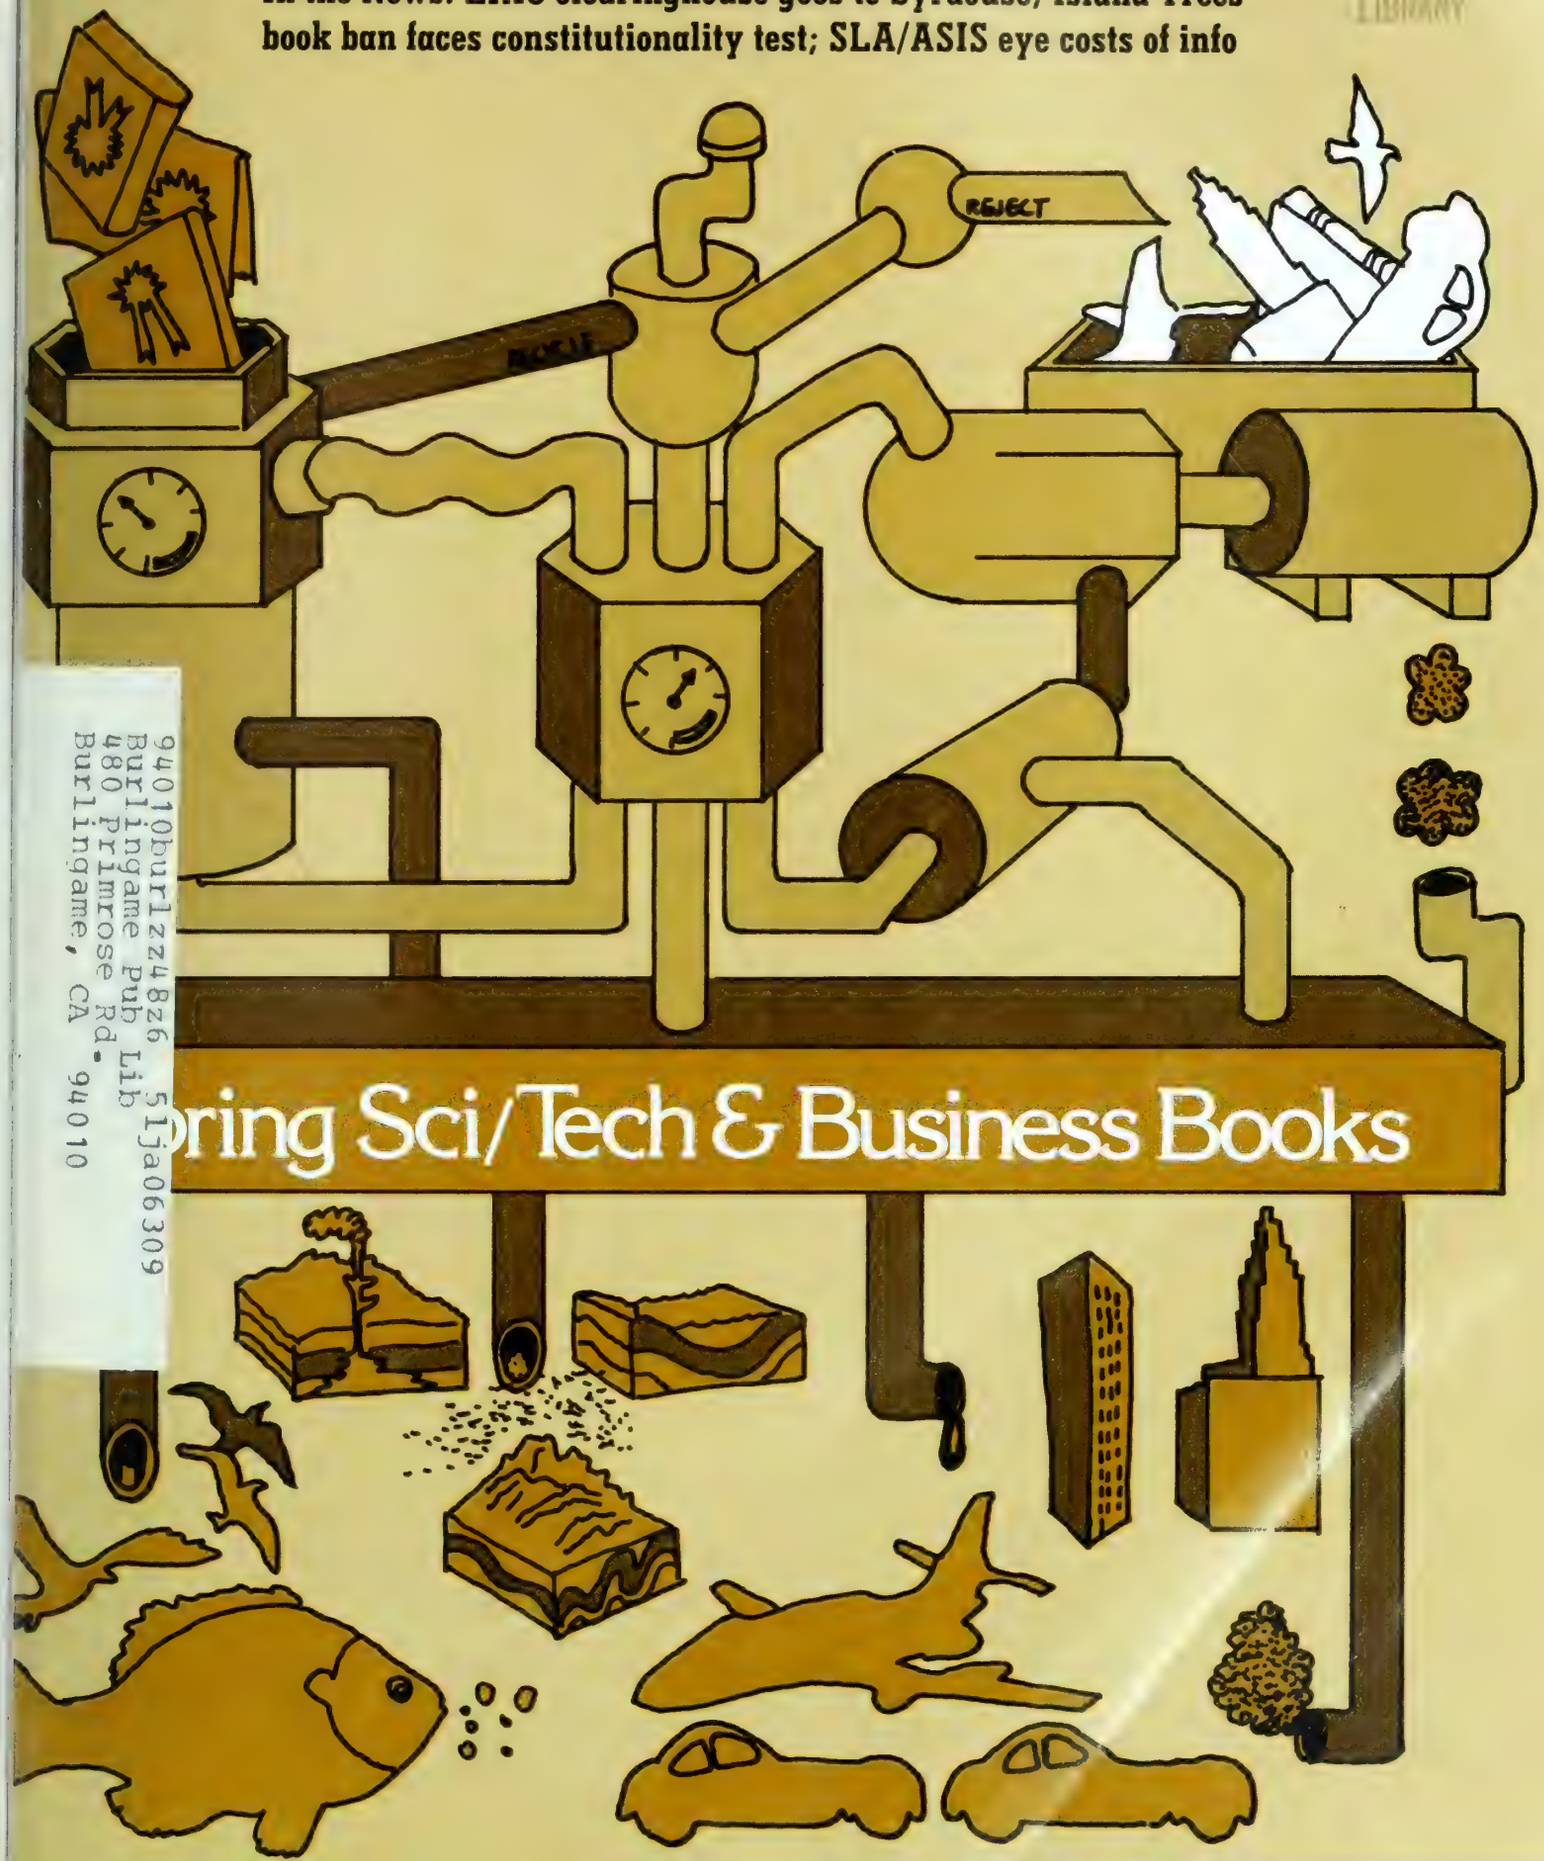
MARCH 1, 1977/ISSN 0000-0027

LIBRARY JOURNAL

LJ Scientific and Technical Books of 1976: a Recommended List

Outstanding Business Books of the Year

In the News: ERIC clearinghouse goes to Syracuse; Island Trees book ban faces constitutionality test; SLA/ASIS eye costs of info



94010burlzz48z6 51ja06309
Burlingame Pub Lib
480 Primrose Rd
Burlingame, CA 94010

MARCH 1, 1977 / VOL. 102 NO. 5

LIBRARY JOURNAL

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF:
SENIOR EDITORS:
EDITOR, BOOK REVIEWS: Janet Fletcher
ASSOCIATE EDITORS:
Robert R. Harris
Bibliographic: Bette-Lee Fox
News: Noel Savage
PRODUCTION EDITOR: Ellen Mangin
ART EDITOR: Gilbert Fletcher
REVIEW EDITORS: Marlene Charnizon
Ellen Kozlowski
Philip Mattera
Anneliese Schwarzer
ASSISTANT EDITORS: Maureen Crowley
Ann Sankar
PRODUCTION ASSISTANTS: Nancy Brown
Ann Yazejian
EDITORIAL ASSISTANTS: Andrea Kowler
Anne Richter

ADV. SALES MANAGER: Richard H. Brown
BUSINESS & ADV. PRODUCTION MANAGER: Maureen J. Rose
PUBLISHER: Paul J. Carnese

LIBRARY JOURNAL is published by R. R. Bowker Co., a Xerox company. Robert F. Asleson, President.

Direct editorial and advertising correspondence to 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York 10036. Telephone: (212) 764-5100. Subscription inquiries and changes of address should be directed to R. R. Bowker Company, Subscription Dept., P.O. Box 67, Whitinsville, Mass. 01588. Publications Offices at 117 Church Street, Whitinsville, Mass. 01488. Issued twice a month, September through June, monthly in July and August. Second class postage paid at Whitinsville, Mass. and additional mailing offices. Copyright © 1977 Xerox Corporation.

LIBRARY JOURNAL is indexed in Library Literature, Library & Information Science Abstracts, and Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature. SUBSCRIPTIONS: USA: 1 year $19.00; 2 years $36.00; 3 years $51.00. Canada and Postal Union of the Americas and Spain, add $2 per year; elsewhere, add $3 per year. Single copy $1.35. Spring, fall, and winter announcement numbers, $3.25 each. POSTMASTER: Please send Form 3579 to R. R. Bowker Company, P.O. Box 67, Whitinsville, Mass. 01588.

LIBRARY JOURNAL reserves the right to make its own independent judgment as to the acceptability of advertising copy and illustrations in advertisements. Advertiser and advertisng agency assume liability for all content (including text, representation and illustrations) of advertisements printed, and also assume responsibility for any claims arising therefrom against the publisher. Offers to sell products, which appear in LIBRARY JOURNAL, are subject to all laws and regulations and are void where so prohibited.

Letters 523

Calendar 524

Editorial 527

News:

ERIC clearinghouse goes to Syracuse University . . . White House Conference Advisory Committee named . . . federal library role eyed in new study . . . NYCLU challenges constitutionality of Island Trees book ban . . . Public Works $$ go to libraries . . . More library community input sought for Ill. 5-year plan . . . Nat'l. Federation of the Blind assails Nebraska State Library again . . . Brooklyn Public losses more staff, cuts hours . . . salaries up, but there are fewer librarians, says ARL 529

SLA/ASIS Janus Meet: Costs of Information Scrutinized 540

People 541

FEATURES

Sci-Tech Books of 1976
One hundred outstanding titles for general library collections
BY EDITH S. CROCKETT & ELLIS MOUNT 543

Business Books of 1976
A selection of recommended books published during the past year
BY SUSAN DIMATTIA 553

Spring Scientific, Technical, Medical, and Business Books . . 567

Professional Reading 561

Checklist 562

Magazines 563

Buyers' Guide 565

THE BOOK REVIEW

Book Reviews 589

Index to Reviews and Professional Reading 637

Classified 638

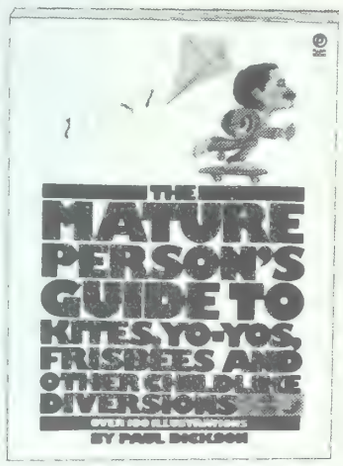
Index to Advertisers 640

Spring '77

The season for tin cans and yo-yos, gardens and guerrillas, and an exciting list of

Plume/Meridian/ Art Book

TRADE PAPERBACKS FROM NAL



THE MATURE PERSON'S GUIDE TO KITES, YO-YOS, FRISBEES AND OTHER CHILDLIKE DIVERSIONS
OVER 100 ILLUSTRATIONS
BY PAUL DICKSON

The first guide to the hottest new "collectible" around...

HE TIN CAN BOOK

la Clark. For beginning and veteran llectors—what to look for, restoring d selling old tins, the tin can as adver- ing medium and art form. 8¼ x 10," 175 ustrations, 50 in full color.
AL Original Art Book G9965 $6.95

The New Adulthood— a revolutionary idea whose time has come. And here is its manifesto...

THE MATURE PERSON'S GUIDE TO KITES, YO-YOS, FRISBEES AND OTHER CHILDLIKE DIVERSIONS

Paul Dickson. A practical, delightful guide to gentle, non-polluting games for recreation-minded adults, plus lists of suppliers, superstar profiles, bibliography, and over 100 stunning illustrations.
℗ A Plume Original Z5143 $5.95

At last—a book for 12-year-olds of all ages that really explains

HOW SIMPLE THINGS ARE MADE

Danelle McCafferty. How 40 familiar items (from potato chips and sneakers to pencils and toothbrushes) are made, in a book to amuse and enlighten curious readers. Illustrated with photos and drawings.
℗ A Plume Original Z5144 $5.95

The ultimate guide to health care—for every American family

THE WORLD ALMANAC WHOLE HEALTH GUIDE

David Hendin. A widely known medical columnist's up-to-date guide to dentists, nursing homes, hospitals, diet, surgery, first aid, sex, mental health, alcoholism, drugs, etc. Illustrated.
℗ A Plume Original Z5145 $4.95

HE TAPPAN CREATIVE OOKBOOK FOR MICROWAVE VENS AND RANGES

ylvia Schur. Each of the 400 cipes has directions for cook- g with a microwave oven and a onventional stove.
Plume Z5146 $3.95

HE COMPLETE BOOK OF RTS & CRAFTS

rnold Arnold. Techniques, tools, leas, step-by-step instructions r over 400 activities. Over 400 lack and white illustrations.
Plume Z5147 $4.95

HE CHILDREN'S COMPLETE OW DOES YOUR GARDEN ROW GUIDE TO PLANTS & LANTING

X Fenten. The joys of gardening or young people, including nonth-by-month calendar of in- oor planting ideas.
Plume Original Z5148 $3.95

BLOODSHED AND THREE NOVELLAS

Cynthia Ozick. New fiction by one of America's most gifted writers.
℗ Plume Z5149 $3.95

BURRAGE ON VEGETABLES

Albert C. Burrage. A new edition of a classic gourmet guide to vegetable growing, updated by S.A. and T.K. Hollander.
℗ Plume Z5150 $3.95

THE GUERRILLA READER
A Historical Anthology

Edited with an introduction by Walter Laqueur. Selections from Von Clausewitz, Marx, Lenin, Mao, Che Guevara and many others.
Ⓜ Meridian Original F460 $5.95

BEHAVIOR CONTROL

Perry London. Newly revised and enlarged edition of "the most comprehensive book on the subject."—Los Angeles Times
Ⓜ Meridian F461 $4.95

THE OTHER VICTORIANS
A Study of Sexuality and Pornography in Mid-Nineteenth Century England

Steven Marcus. With a new introduction by the author. "By far the best book on the subject."
—Commentary
Ⓜ Meridian F462 $4.95

THE NEW CONSERVATIVES
A Critique from the Left

Lewis A. Coser and Irving Howe, editors. In this new revision, the intellectual left speaks out on current American conservatism.
Ⓜ Meridian F463 $5.95

THE NATIONALIZATION OF THE MASSES
Political Symbolism and Mass Movements in Germany from the Napoleonic Wars Through the Third Reich

George L. Mosse. "Well-written, well-organized, well-researched."
—Library Journal
Ⓜ Meridian F464 $4.95

IMPERIAL SPAIN 1469-1716

J.H. Elliott. A fascinating study of Spain's moment of glory as the greatest world power.
Ⓜ Meridian (no Canadian rights) F465 $5.95

The best in trade paperbacks

NAL TIMES MIRROR

NEW AMERICAN LIBRARY EDUCATION
120 Woodbine Street, Bergenfield, New Jersey 07

The Two Most Beautiful Books About America When America Was Most Beautiful

Available for immediate shipment: a limited edition of the two volume PICTURESQUE AMERICA edited by William Cullen Bryant—as originally published in 1874.

Here in some 1,200 pages (size 9″ × 12″) of glorious text with some 1,000 drawings, are the mountains, canyons, rivers, lakes, forests, shores, valleys, cities and other picturesque scenes of our country at the threshold of its 100th anniversary.

This remarkable set merits your immediate attention. It was originally scheduled to sell for $75 for the two volumes. However the initial enthusiasm of those librarians who examined the original volumes encouraged us to increase our edition from a few hundred to 3,000 sets. More than 1,800 were sold within ten days of publication and today we have fewer than 200 sets left.

This two-volume set should be placed in a prominent place in your library. You will enjoy observing the rich satisfaction these books give your readers.

Increased paper, printing and binding costs preclude a price of less than $110 for any further printings. However if you place your order promptly with us or your local library jobber, you may still purchase both volumes for only $59.95. These last 200 two volume sets will be shipped on a first-come, first-served basis. Order today.

Lyle Stuart, Inc., 120 Enterprise Avenue, Secaucus, New Jersey 07094

LETTERS

Fines editorial

Thomas Alford

Director, Macomb County Library, Mount Clemens, Michigan, and Chairperson, LAD/CSS Fines and Penalties Committee, ALA:

On behalf of the ALA LAD/CSS Fines and Penalties Committee, I would personally like to thank you for the editorial in the October 15, 1976 issue of LJ ("Nickel Victories—II," p. 2105) on the efforts of the Committee. You truly presented the best total picture of the "fine and no fine" situation in the library press thus far and we deeply appreciate that.

On Harris's history

Fay M. Blake

Reader Services Librarian, California State Polytechnic University, Pomona:

Michael Harris's "Public Libraries and the Decline of the Democratic Dogma" (LJ, November 1, 1976, p. 2225-30) promises a lot more than it delivers. It promises to explain why the working classes accepted the authoritarian and elitist public library and then proceeds to try to do a great many other things. If Harris wants to explain what the working class was doing and thinking, he ought to find out and tell us what working class sources reveal. He tells me a lot more than I want to know about what Gordon Wood and Richard Buel and Andrew Hacker Fischer and Lee Benson and Michael Harris think the working class thought but nothing at all about what the "lower orders" themselves have to say. Presumably because Harris, like Ticknor and Everett, doesn't really care to examine the working class and its perceptions. The records of this country's trade unions are full of evidence that working people focussed on both the ten-hour day and the public school system and public libraries. And inhospitable and hostile as the public library was, thousands of working men and women used the public library as a substitute for the high schools and universities they couldn't get into. Harris's failure to use working class sources has led him into a misinterpretation of the current scene. His "explanation for our current dilemma" which he introduces with a gratuitous swipe at "the left in our profession" isn't an explanation at all. It's a befogged and elitist hypothesis arising out of Harris's failure to look away from 50 years of LJ and his properly academic sources (most of those he quotes are published by university presses) to what working people are saying and doing.

Workers are not really worrying very seriously whether Ph.D.'s are finding employment, and they're not reading Christopher Jencks for solutions to their problems. What they're doing is seeking the kind of education they need and their children need to live a little better and to enjoy some of the benefits of democracy. Yes, despite your sneer, Mr. Harris, working people have discovered how little public libraries offer them. How else explain that the Farm Workers Union with its tiny resources, nevertheless established a library for its members, a library providing the kind of information they needed. How does it happen that public libraries point with pride to whole special branches devoted entirely to the information needs of the business community but have yet to do the same for trade union members? Maybe Eric Hoffer is touting intuitive yahooism but UAW and ILWU and AFT and ILGWU members by the thousand attend classes to learn how to be effective negotiators or stewards or political activists. What's eroding is trust in the sleazy political leaders who undermine democracy, in public library and public school leaders who develop educational programs which shut out the working class and in academics who speak "for" the working class without troubling to speak to them.

Kenneth J. LaBudde

Director of Libraries and Professor of History, University of Missouri, Kansas City:

Michael H. Harris makes a good point: librarians can assume too much as far as the importance placed upon the public library "in the eyes of the average citizen" today. The serious implications of an eroding belief in the importance of education in a democracy does not permit us navieté. Harris also brings more data to this article than was found in his earlier article in LJ three years ago ("The Purpose of the American Public Library: a Revisionist Interpretation of History").

However, this article bothers me in the way the earlier one did. While each generation may write its own history, the better intellectual history (which I believe is the discipline Harris allies himself with) will strive to distinguish between the assumptions of an earlier period and those of our own. This, I think, Harris fails to do.

He has not convinced me that he has an understanding of nineteenth-century American cultural assumptions. His repeated use of the words authoritarianism and elitism for that earlier period suggests he is not exercising sufficient care to not write history to suit his own predilections.

Incidentally, in the more recent article Footnote 8 refers to a book by David Hackett Fischer rather than Andrew Hacker Fischer. Footnote 9, in turn, cites a title by Marvin Meyers, not Marvin Myers.

Feminists and volunteers

Helen Rippier Wheeler

Member, ALA Committee on the Status of Women:

Well done, LJ, for devoting a portion of your special report ("Volunteers in Libraries," LJ. December 1, 1976, p. 2431) to the several aspects supportive of Marshall's position. And right on, Joan Marshall—librarian, feminist, union member, and ordinary citizen! But if LJ understood "feminist," even in a dictionary sense, perhaps it would not continue to make the crucial, symptomatic error of referring to NOW as the National Organization of Women! As a national organization for women, NOW of course includes numerous male feminists among its membership. (Feminism: "A doctrine that advocates that women be given the same rights and status as men."—American Heritage School Dictionary, © 1972, p. 341.)

Barriers for the handicapped

Ruth A. Velleman

Director of Libraries, Human Resources School, Albertson, New York:

I was so pleased with the cover of the December 1, 1976, Architectural issue of LJ. The lady being pushed in the wheelchair seemed to be having no trouble negotiating the library building via a gently sloping ramp! As you may remember, in the October 1974 issue of School Library Journal my article "Library Adaptations for the Handicapped" outlined the basic standards necessary for making libraries architecturally accessible for the disabled (p. 85-88).

It was with some sense of disappointment, therefore, that I read the article reviewing and picturing some of the Public and Academic Library buildings of 1976. Nowhere was any mention made of efforts to make these buildings accessible. I am sure you are aware of the Architectural Barriers Act of 1968 (PL 90-480). This Federal law states that all public buildings which receive federal funds for their construction must be made accessible to the physically disabled. Library Journal is such a great communicative tool. May we hope that in the future it will seize opportunities like this to help us spread the word!

Devaluation prices

E. R. Wells
Spring Hill, Florida:

I think publicity should be given to at least one British magazine that continues to demand an annual subscription corresponding to a rate of exchange that was in force two years ago without regard to the drastic devaluation of the pound sterling. I refer specifically to Books & Bookmen, which is certainly a great magazine with an unmatched list of contributors. The size of the magazine was reduced by about one-third in June 1975, and the price increased from $14 to $26 to U.S. subscribers, with a net effect of a threefold increase in price.

The current subscription for British subscribers is now £10-80, which should be $18 to American subscribers at current rate of about $1.66 to the pound, perhaps a little more for overseas postage. Yet the publishers, Hansom Books, continue to demand $26.30 from us per year. Needless to say, these are not air-mail rates. I receive my copy six to eight weeks after London publication by surface mail. I feel that your journal should publicize this scandalous gouging. But perhaps sales here are not sufficient for them to care. Certainly an unjustified 60 percent extra profit is nice if you can get it. The publisher has, I believe, no U.S. office to maintain which might justify a higher charge.

Ultimately, it is mostly British authors, who will suffer from such tactics.

Call for papers

Daniel Gore
Director, Weyerhaeuser Library, Macalester College, Saint Paul, Minn. 55105:

In Chicago next fall, under sponsorship of the Associated Colleges of the Midwest, I will chair a conference on management issues in automated cataloging. Program chairmen are Joseph Kimbrough, director of the Minneapolis Public Library, and Peter Spyers-Duran, director of Libraries, California State University, Long Beach. Papers may be submitted to either program chairman or to myself, should be between 4000-7000 words long, and clearly focused on significant managerial problems or opportunities connected with automated catalogs. Detailed abstracts or proposed papers are also welcome. All submissions will be promptly considered and responded to.

The Young Adult resurgence

Bruce E. Daniels
Branch Librarian Responsible for Young Adult Services, Lawncrest Branch, Free Library of Philadelphia, and member, Board of Directors, Young Adult Services Division, ALA:

I was pleased to see your "Skirmish Line" on young adult services (LJ, December 15, 1976, p. 2250-51). It was, however, rather ironic to have this in the same issue as the report of the program on young adult services at the Ohio Library Association Conference (p. 2528).

Reaching administrators such as Gaines and Bana has been and continues to be a major concern of the Young Adult Services Division of the American Library Association. Young adults are in need of services and materials just as much as children and adults. It seems that some administrators do not see or do not want to see this need. Young adult services need to exist if the library is to be successful in providing a community with total library service.

Granted there are many agencies and community groups that are involved in young adult programming. However, the library should not use this as an excuse for not having a young adult services program, but should have a staff member working with these groups to integrate the materials/services that the library might have with the community programs. The library cannot exist in isolation. A good guide for doing this is YASD's Look, Listen, Explain: Developing Community Library Services for Young Adults (available from ALA for $2).

Gaines' description of young adults as "solitary individuals" and adolescence as "a stage to be endured in isolation" seems to indicate that he has neither been around young adults nor does he understand them a great deal. Most teenagers, once they feel that they can trust an adult, are very open and want to talk to someone who is willing to listen, to understand, and to care. Young adults who encounter librarians who feel teenagers are only a nuisance soon lose their desire to use the library.

Librarians having problems convincing administrators of the necessity of young adult services should obtain the YASD Survival Kit. Available from YASD/ALA, it contains information to use in justifying and promoting young adult services as part of any total public library program. The cost is $2.25 prepaid.

As in Wisconsin and Ohio, there is a resurgence of interest in young adult services in Pennsylvania. Across the state more and more libraries are providing services to young adults. The Pennsylvania Library Association is also taking a more active role. Its Children's, Young People's, and School Librarians Division is currently developing a plan to implement ten recommendations to strengthen services to young adults and children. In addition a divisional committee has just completed a booklet containing outlines and lists of resource people for workshops on 14 topics of interest to young adult, children's, and school librarians. The division's Task Force on Young Adult Services issues a quarterly newsletter.

CALENDAR

MAR. 24-26—ILLINOIS ASSN. OF SCHOOL LIBRARIANS, Pick-Congress Hotel, Chicago. Theme: "Carnival of Knowledge." Contact: Ms. Jane Block, Belvidere Community Unit, District #100, Belvidere, Ill. 61008.

MAR. 27-28—INSTITUTE ON QUANTITATIVE MEASUREMENT and Dynamic Library Service, Unit II, Critical Evaluation of Quantitative Methods for Library Management. School of Lib. Science, Simmons College, Boston. Contact: Coord. of Continuing Ed., School of Library Science, Simmons College, 300 The Fenway, Boston, Mass. 02115. (617) 739-2222.

APR. 6-8—ALABAMA LA, Montgomery, Governor's House Motel. Contact: Patricia Moore, Exhibits Chairperson, Alabama LA, P.O. Box 9266, Mountain Brook, Ala.

APR. 12-16—TEXAS LA/NEW MEXICO LA, Joint Conference, El Paso Civic Center. Theme: "In Search of Learning." Contact: Jerre Hetherington, Texas LA, P.O. Box 505, Houston, Tex. 77001.

APR. 17-23—NATIONAL LIBRARY WEEK.

APR. 18-21—INFO. INDUSTRY ASSN., Information Industry Conference & Exposition, Washington, D.C., Shoreham Americana Hotel. Theme: "The Information Manager . . ." Contact: Paul G. Zurkowski, IIA/Washington, 4720 Montgomery Lane, Bethesda, Md. 20014; (301) 654-4150.

APR. 20-23—NEW JERSEY LA, Atlantic City, Howard Johnson's Regency Motor Hotel. Contact: Anne King, Exhibits Chairperson, 3-25 Dorothy St., Fair Lawn, N.J. 07410.

APR. 24-25—CONF. ON ED. FOR INFO. SCIENCE, Strategies for Change in Library School Programs. School of Library Information Science, State U. of N.Y. at Albany. Sponsored by ISAD/LED of American LA, AALS, ASIS, SLA, MLA. Contact: Irving Klempner, School of Library and Info. Science, State U. of N.Y. at Albany, 1400 Washington Ave., Albany, N.Y. 12222; (518) 457-6157.

JUNE 17-23—AMERICAN LA, Detroit.

Everyone's looking up with Funk & Wagnalls!

Now available for the first time to your school and library—quality materials at budget-pleasing prices.

k & Wagnalls sells more encyclopedia and reference volumes than almost any r publisher. And people have been depending on us for over 100 years. That's we can now offer you America's best value in top-notch reference materials our school or library. Here's your first opportunity ever to acquire our most ular series at very special introductory prices and with exciting free bonuses.

IK & WAGNALLS NEW ENCYCLOPEDIA olumes including index and bibliography t-in-Books recommends Funk & Wagnalls as the very best in quality, content and even in cost is the most current source of scientific political, and social data available —BEST-IN-BOOKS
—Leisure Living Magazine

se, well-written articles selected to meet the need of school curricula as well as those of the eral reader."
—Library Journal

leading reviews agree—Funk & Wagnalls New Encyclopedia is the last word in useful, o-date reference material at the lowest possible cost!
ary Edition $84 95
tennial $64 95

UNG STUDENTS ENCYCLOPEDIA
A to Z volumes, 2500 pages
ly recommended by Booklist and Bowker's Encyclopedia Buying Guide These 20 iculum-oriented books were written especially for grades 3–8 4400 photographs, large type, dreds of maps, charts and diagrams and clear, easy-reading articles introduce basic concepts oung students. Special involvement features include imaginative games and learning-by-doing vities ularly $55 30 Now only $29 95

TTER HOMES AND GARDENS ENCYCLOPEDIA OF COOKING
ull-color A to Z volumes erica's number one food editors have combined 50 years of cooking experience to bring your dents 4200 step-by-step recipes PLUS everything they need to know about food shopping s of meat . . . storing and preserving . . . meal planning . . . cooking and serving . . . and rnational specialties. The only cooking reference your students will ever need 95

ESIDENTS OF THE UNITED STATES
olumes, slip case and portraits booklet epic sweep of American history as seen through the lives, times and personalities of our 38 sidents . . . In art book size, this stunning collection of fascinating profiles includes hundreds of er-before published rare photos, paintings, cartoons and illustrations 95

NK & WAGNALLS MAP SKILLS PROGRAM
udes 24 Hammond world atlases and 24 map skills booklets nique combination of resource materials and skill-building activities from famed map publisher, mmond, Inc. and well-known geography teacher, Dr. Clyde Kohn. Open-ended but nprehensive skills program is coordinated to 200 pages of colorful school-oriented maps, charts, les and indices—the finest map resource ever created gular Library Bound Price $142 80 Now only $130 00

USTRATED LIBRARY OF NATURE
ull-color volumes olished in cooperation with the AMERICAN MUSEUM OF NATURAL HISTORY, this striking es uses action photos and over 3000 illustrations to help students explore the nature of life on l under the earth . . . in the air above us . . . and in the waters around us
ary binding. $59.95

NK & WAGNALLS FAMILY LIBRARY OF GREAT MUSIC
RCA Custom Stereo LP records booklets
e are 60 of the world's most enduring orchestral compositions in their complete original version ected by an international advisory board of musical authorities, these masterpieces are formed by distinguished symphonies and conductors. Students will especially enjoy the gram Notes on each piece and the extensive biographies of each composer.
95

fW

Funk & Wagnalls, Inc
Education Division
666 Fifth Ave
New York, N.Y. 10019

☐ YES! I'd like the students in my library to have the Funk & Wagnalls opportunity

☐ Please send me the following series.
_____Check enclosed _____Please bill me

FUNK & WAGNALLS NEW ENCYCLOPEDIA
27 volumes plus FREE BONUS The Funk & Wagnalls Standard Dictionary
☐ Library Edition $84 95 (shipping and handling) $ 6 00
☐ Centennial Kivar Edition $64 95 (shipping and handling) $ 6 00

☐ YOUNG STUDENTS ENCYCLOPEDIA
20 volumes Regularly $55 30 Now only $29 95 (shipping and handling) $ 4 50

☐ BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS ENCYCLOPEDIA OF COOKING
20 volumes $39 95 (shipping and handling) $ 4 00

☐ PRESIDENTS OF THE UNITED STATES
2 volumes slipcased plus FREE BONUS "...ortraits of the Presidents" $17 95
(shipping and handling) $ 1 50

☐ FUNK & WAGNALLS MAP SKILLS PROGRAM
Regularly $142 00 Now only $130 00 (shipping and handling) $ 8 00

☐ ILLUSTRATED LIBRARY OF NATURE
16 volumes $59 95 (shipping and handling) $ 4 50

☐ FUNK & WAGNALLS FAMILY LIBRARY OF GREAT MUSIC
22 records 22 booklets $51 95 (shipping and handling) $ 6 00

☐ I'd like to know more about all of Funk & Wagnalls fine reference materials
Please send me a free catalog

Name _____

Position _____

School _____

School Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Funk & Wagnalls, Inc materials can only be obtained by direct purchase from its Educational Division or Special Representatives

LJ–3/77

Karl Marx/Friedrich Engels
Complete edition (MEGA)
Published by the Institute of Marxism-Leninism under the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and the Institute of Marxism-Leninism under the Central Committee of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany.

All MEGA volumes can be bought separately. Continued procurement of the volumes of one, several or all sections is possible. Order numbers for continued procurement:

First	Section	219
Second	Section	220
Third	Section	221
Fourth	Section	222

New edition:

Second Section
"Capital" and preliminary studies

Volume II/3.1
Karl Marx: Contribution to the Critique of Political Economy Manuscript 1861 to 1863
Text/commentary
26, 499 pages • With 9 facsimiles • Leatherette in cardboard slip 135,- M
Order No.: 744 850 7 Order code: MEGA,2.Abt.Bd.3/1
Volume 3 of the Second Section will consist of six books of texts and a separately bound complete commentary. Two books of texts and a part of the commentary (in paper cover) will initially appear. Book 1 contains the text, published for the first time in the original version, of sections I-V of the Critique, on questions concerning the transformation of money into capital and the production of absolute and relative surplus value.

Available:

First Section
Works • Articles • Drafts

Volume I/1
Karl Marx: Works • Articles • Literary Essays up to March 1843
Text/commentary
88,1337 pages • With 20 facsimiles • Leatherette in cardboard slip 135,- M
Order No.: 744 800 5 Order code: MEGA,1.Abt.Bd.1

Second Section

Volume II/1.1
Karl Marx: Economic Manuscripts 1857-1858
29,464 pages • With 13 facsimiles • Leatherette in cardboard slip 135,- M
Order No.: 744 849 4 Order code: MEGA,2.Abt.Bd.1/1

Third Section
Correspondence

Volume III/1
Karl Marx/Friedrich Engels: Correspondence up to April 1846
Text/commentary
34,964 pages •With 2 illustrations, 19 facsimiles and drawings by Friedrich Engels •Leatherette in cardboard slip 135,- M
Order No.: 744 899 6 Order code: MEGA,3.Abt.Bd.1

In preparation:

First Section

Volume I/10
Karl Marx/Friedrich Engels: Works • Articles • July 1849 to June 1851
Text/commentary
About 940 pages • With 18 facsimiles and drawings by Friedrich Engels • Leatherette in cardboard slip 135,- M
Order No.: 744 801 3 Order code: MEGA,1.Abt.Bd.10

Second Section

Volume II/3.2
Karl Marx: Contribution to the Critique of Political Economy (manuscript 1861-1863)
Text/commentary
About 740 pages • With 13 facsimiles • Leatherette in cardboard slip 135,- M
Order No.: 744 851 5 Order code: MEGA,2.Abt.Bd.3/2

Third Section

Volume III/2
Karl Marx/Friedrich Engels: Correspondence May 1846 to December 1848
Text/commentary
About 760 pages • With 18 facsimiles • Leatherette in cardboard slip 135,- M
Order No.: 744 900 8 Order code: MEGA,3.Abt.Bd.2

Fourth Section
Excerpts • Notes • Marginal Notes

Volume IV/1
Karl Marx/Friedrich Engels: Excerpts and Notes up to 1842
Text/commentary
About 1650 pages • With 43 facsimiles and drawings and maps by Friedrich Engels • Leatherette in cardboard slip 135,- M
Order No.: 744 948 9 Order code: MEGA,4.Abt.Bd.1

DIETZ VERLAG BERLIN

GDR—102 Berlin
Wallstraße 76-79

EDITORIAL

The certification debate—a preview

Has it emerged because of hard times and the job and money shortage? Or is it really based upon an honest desire to improve professional performance and standards of library service? Has it ever solved either of those problems in any of the many states that have it? Does it violate equal employment opportunity laws or principles? Will it help in our quest for professional status or will it simply encourage an already noticeable tendency by governing authorities to hire eminent nonlibrarians for high-level professional positions? Is there any realistic possibility in these times that more state legislatures will be willing to enact it into law? It is, of course, the professional certification of librarians, and it is the current infatuation of librarianship's rather large constituency of status-seekers.

There's CLOUT (Concerned Librarians Opposed to Unprofessional Tendencies) in southern California, and NLA (The National Librarians Association) down south. There is growing interest in it everywhere in the U.S. It was the hottest topic at the recent California Library Association Conference, and it was widely discussed at the recent Midwinter meeting of the ALA.

Those who favor certification make many claims about what it can do. "It will eliminate incompetence from our ranks!" "It will protect our jobs and our professionalism!" "It will convince society, and our governing authorities that librarians are truly professional!" "It will provide us with precise definitions of what is professional work and what isn't, and it will give us the mechanism to enforce that distinction in practice!" "It will strengthen our professional education by making our accredited degrees valid as a criterion for entry to our profession!"

From those opposing certification you hear other claims: "It is required for teachers, but there is little evidence that it has improved educational practice and the same is true of most school librarians." "In states where it exists, it has done more to downgrade professional status than to improve it." "It is unenforceable!" "You can't force employing institutions to observe it in hiring!" "It will mean even fewer professional jobs, since a precise definition of 'professional work' will tend to eliminate some of the tasks professionals now perform!" "It is directly counter to the current trend to eliminate barriers to employment through equal opportunity legislation!"

Whatever your position on the question of statutory certification of librarians, the chances are pretty good that you'll be involved in discussions of it in the coming year.

Because there are vocal constituencies on both sides of the issue, LJ will present a mini-symposium on the certification of librarians later in the Spring. We welcome your opinions, your facts, your evidence on either side of the argument. We will attempt to include opinions on all sides of the issue at that time. We'd like to hear from you soon.

In that debate in California, where an elaborate certification proposal, tied to an equally elaborate code of conduct for professionals, is slowly making its way through the CLA's committee and parliamentary structure, we heard impassioned defenses of the idea of certification crash into the opinions of personnel and equal opportunity officers that it would never stand up to a test in the courts. In December the California librarians seemed to be evenly divided on the issue. The most vociferous opposition came forth when a system for "de-certifying" a librarian because of "unprofessional conduct" was unveiled. Many felt such a proposal could open the door to frivolous challenges to unpopular librarians, or even allow purges of trouble makers. Nonprofessionals seemed to see the proposal as simply another barrier to their career development. Nearly everyone we talked to felt that the current emphasis on eliminating barriers to employment would militate against any new certification laws. State legislatures just won't aid in the creation of new professional elites.

Many felt too much emphasis has been placed on analogies with medicine and law, and the tough criteria for entry into those professions. As one librarian pointed out, "Their codes and standards haven't really improved service in health and law for the average person."

The fundamental question is "What is the best way to protect professional jobs, improve standards of professional performance, and control entry into our ranks. Certification laws are one, relatively old-fashioned way. There must be many other options, and we hope you will help us determine what they are.

John Berry

Yours exclusively through Gaylord Professional Publications: Writer's Digest books to learn and publish by.

Now available exclusively through Gaylord: the complete collection of the Writer's Digest books for writers. Vital to all libraries, these indispensable tools of the trade serve as guides to all aspects of writing for publication.

An overview of the market.

- WRITER'S MARKET '77 edited by Jane Koester and Paula Arnett Sandhage.
- ARTIST'S AND PHOTOGRAPHER'S MARKET '77 (Formerly ARTISTS' MARKET) edited by Lynne Lapin, Kirk Polking and Paula Arnett Sandhage.

Brand new . . .

- THE CRAFT OF INTERVIEWING by John Brady.
- THE MYSTERY WRITER'S HANDBOOK edited by Lawrence Treat.
- THE CONFESSION WRITER'S HANDBOOK by Florence K. Palmer.
- A COMPLETE GUIDE TO MARKETING MAGAZINE ARTICLES by Duane Newcomb.
- A GUIDE TO WRITING HISTORY by Doris Ricker Marston.
- WRITING AND SELLING SCIENCE FICTION edited by C. L. Grant.

And more . . .

- A TREASURY OF TIPS FOR WRITERS edited by Marvin Weisbord.
- WRITER'S YEARBOOK '77 edited by John Brady.
- THE POET AND THE POEM (revised edition) by Judson Jerome.
- WRITING AND SELLING NON-FICTION by Hayes B. Jacobs.
- THE CARTOONIST'S AND GAG WRITER'S HANDBOOK (updated edition) by Jack Markow.
- WRITING FOR CHILDREN AND TEENAGERS (revised edition) by Lee Wyndham.
- THE GREETING CARD WRITER'S HANDBOOK (revised edition) by H. Joseph Chadwick.
- WRITING POPULAR FICTION by Dean R. Koontz.
- HANDBOOK OF SHORT STORY WRITING edited by Frank A. Dickson and Sandra Smythe.
- THE BEGINNING WRITER'S ANSWER BOOK edited by Kirk Polking and Jean Chimsky.
- THE CREATIVE WRITER (revised edition) edited by Aron Mathieu.
- ONE WAY TO WRITE YOUR NOVEL by Dick Perry.

The voices of experience: The Writer's Voice Cassettes

In their own words, America's leading literary experts (like James A. Michener, Arthur Hailey and A. E. Hotchner) provide rare insights into the world of the writer. Ideal for any library collection or classroom use.

For more detailed information on the Writer's Digest collection of books and the Writer's Voice cassettes, write to Gaylord.

GAYLORD...ask any librarian.

GAYLORD BROS., INC., LIBRARY SYSTEMS, SUPPLIES, EQUIPMENT & PUBLICATIONS
Syracuse, NY 13201 TWX 710 545-0232 — Stockton, CA 95208
Furniture Manufacturing Division — Sanford, NC 27330
Distributed in Canada Exclusively by Lowe-Martin Inc. — Ottawa, K1G 3M4

NEWS

ERIC clearinghouse goes to Syracuse, N.Y.

Syracuse University is the new home of the Educational Resources Information Center Clearinghouse on Information Resources (ERIC/IR). The clearinghouse will be directed by Donald P. Ely, a SU professor of education; the associate directors will be Pauline Atherton, professor at the Syracuse School of Information Studies, and Richard E. Clark, another professor of education.

Syracuse is getting $217,700 from the National Institute of Education to oversee ERIC/IR operations for the first year. And Ely predicts that Syracuse will run ERIC/IR for "at least five years." Among the activities planned: publication of more monographs and the running of workshops and training programs.

The library component of the ERIC operation started out in 1967 at the University of Minnesota with a grant of $129,082. The American Society for Information Science took charge of the clearinghouse in 1970 (at $180,000 a year); the switch to ASIS was rather abrupt and reportedly reflected NIE's disappointment with the kind of job UM had been doing. The choice of ASIS (and the consideration of ALA, which had been in the running for the contract and lost out because it was felt to be of too narrow interest) reflected experience indicating that ERIC clearinghouses run by professional associations tend to outperform those run by universities. Then in 1974 the operation was won by Stanford with a bid of $210,000; Stanford originally planned to subcontract all or most of the library information work right back to ASIS, but it eventually decided against this idea and merged the library clearinghouse with the university's Clearinghouse on Media and Technology.

The mission of the library component of ERIC has varied from an early focus on ephemerae to a current scope including materials published as monographs or periodical articles. Its frequent acceptance into its listings of materials of questionable value has been criticized, and its indexes, created with the proliferation and frequent duplication appropriate to a computerized finding tool, have been difficult and unrewarding to use manually.

Responding to an LJ query on how Syracuse plans to handle the information explosion as it affects ERIC/IR, Donald Ely of Syracuse said that the faculty would make a major effort to screen materials before they're put into the system; the faculty, he stressed, will try to do a review job that won't slip into any form of censorship. And the actual indexing and abstracting work will be done in-house by advanced graduate students.

Ely was asked if libraries could get slighted in the work of the clearinghouse since ERIC/IR's new director (Ely) and one of the two assistant director are education people. Ely said that Syracuse hoped and expected to be able to do more for library and information science than its predecessors. He pointed out that he has been an active member of ALA, ASIS (American Society for Information Science), and AECT (Association of Educational & Communications Technology). He also noted that he is the director of the Center for the Study of Information and Education with a dual appointment in the School of Information Studies. The large combined faculty, he stressed, gets out to a great many association meetings, where it has access to materials suitable for ERIC/IR.

Looking to the future, Ely said, the ERIC/IR operation ought to be the model for all the other ERIC clearinghouses because of the very nature of its subject matter—library and information science.

White House Conference: advisory committee named

Librarians, information scientists and automation specialists, educators, legislators, and business people are among the people picked to serve on the White House Conference Advisory Committee. The White House appointed 15 members to the committee; the Senate, five; the House, another five; and the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science (NCLIS) chose four, including the advisory committee's chairman.

Advisory committee members picked by President Ford included: John Chen, dean, Library and Learning Resources, Alabama State University; Walter Curley, president, Gaylord, Inc.; Ann Heidbreder Eastman, administrative director, Chatham College (Pittsburgh); Oscar Eberhardt, librarian, Miami Beach Public Library; Marian Gallagher, law professor, University of Washington, Seattle; Dave Gergen, White House communications consultant; Donald Gibbs, librarian, Newport Public Library, Rhode Island; and Library Consultant Alice Ihrig (who is an ALA Executive Board member and also a library trustee).

Other White House appointees included: Kenneth Jernigan, president, National Federation for the Blind (Iowa); Samuel Martz, board chairman, Memorial Bible Institute and World Records (Tennessee); Agnes Myers, librarian, Loretto Heights College Library (Denver); Edwin Parker, Institute for Communication Research, Stanford University; Betty Ruffner, chairman, Prescott City-County Library Board, Arizona; Joseph Shubert, Ohio State Librarian; and Martha Williams, Board of Education, Detroit.

Advisory members appointed by Irritation is natural

WHEN THE BOOK YOU WANT IS MISSING FROM THE LIBRARY

Please return library materials on time, others are waiting (impatiently)

FIGHT THEFT of Library Materials

This is one of 12 posters which can wage a low key but effective psychological campaign against theft (or non-return) of library materials. Another campaign, not illustrated here, discourages noise pollution in your library. These large 19 x 25-inch, 2-color posters make handsome displays while gently reminding patrons of their responsibilities. For an illustrated brochure, write Robert Jacobson: Design, Dept. A, 1504 W. University Heights Dr. N., Flagstaff, AZ 86001.

KEEP BOOKS SAFE FROM RAIN AND DIRT

Josten's attractive drawstring bags provide protection for books at low cost. Durable 2 mil polyethylene bags are a roomy 16" by 18" size — gusset bottom opens 3" wide. Printed in bright cheery colors on a white opaque background. Write or call in your order now, and get 100 bags for only $18.95 postpaid. Be sure to mention catalog #30 495A when you order.

SEE PAGE 66 in your Josten's '77-'78 catalog for 4 more colorful designs of book bags. If you can't find your catalog, please write or call Customer Service for another copy.

Josten's

LIBRARY SERVICES DIVISION
Dept 216, 1303 Cliff Rd. Burnsville MN 55337
800-328-2980 TOLL FREE

the president pro tempore of the Senate include Senator Jacob Javits of New York; J. C. Redd, Jackson, Mississippi, businessman; John T. Short, president, American Library Trustee Association; Senator Margaret Warden of Montana; and Virginia Young, chairman, Missouri Coordinating Board for Higher Education (and also a library trustee leader).

Appointees of the Speaker of the House included: Representative William D. Ford of Michigan; Ester Mae Henke, associate director, Oklahoma Department of Libraries; Michael Arthur McCarroll, director, Lexington Books (Lexington, Massachusetts); Gene Shalit, NBC-TV panelist; and Jeanne Hurley Simon, former Illinois assemblywoman.

NCLIS members named by the National Commission to serve on the advisory group are: Louis A. Lerner, publisher, Lerner Home Newspapers, Chicago; Bessie Moore, Economic and Environmental Education coordinator, Arkansas Department of Education; and John Velde, Hollywood, California, businessman. NCLIS Chairman Frederick Burkhardt is chairman of the White House Conference committee.

Federal library role eyed in new study

Applied Management Sciences, Inc. of Silver Spring, Maryland will undertake a study aimed at gauging the effectiveness of federal aid for interlibrary cooperation and library research; the project is expected to provide data useful in projecting how great a role the federal government should play in these areas in the future. The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare is paying for the study; it awarded a $200,000 contract to AMS for an appraisal of the impact of Library Services and Construction Act, Title III (interlibrary cooperation) and Higher Education Act, Title II-B (library research and demonstration projects).

Ruth Patrick and Visita Mathur of AMS are project directors; their final report is expected to be ready by the end of this year.

Star signed for censorship film

ALA's Intellectual Freedom Committee reports that actress Mildred Dunnock has been signed for the lead role in its forthcoming film on intellectual freedom; the film is tentatively titled Days in the Death of Freedom. Dunnock, who established her reputation with her portrayals of Big Mama in Cat on a Hot Tin Roof and Linda Loman in Death of a Salesman, will play the role of a schoolteacher in the ALA-sponsored film.

Constitutionality of book ban challenged by NYCLU

Acting on behalf of a group of students, parents, and publishers, the New York Civil Liberties Union has filed a class action suit aimed at forcing the school board of the Island Trees Union Free School District (Levittown, New York) to rescind a book ban it put into effect last year (LJ, May 1, 1976, p. 1078). The suit, filed in the State Supreme Court in Nassau County, asks that the book ban be declared unconstitutional, that the defendants be ordered to restore the books in question to the school library, and that they pay all court costs. Alan H. Levine of NYCLU is chief counsel in the Island Trees case; he had in 1971 fought a Queens, New York school district's ban of Piri Thomas' Down These Mean Streets—a ban that was finally rescinded last year when a new board came into office.

In its latest suit, NYCLU charges that the Island Trees book banning incident was inspired by People of New York United (PONY-U), a group considered by some observers to be a John Birch Society manifestation. Notes NYCLU, three board members had attended a PONY-U meeting at which a number of books—including all the books eventually banned by the board—were denounced as "anti-American, anti-Christian, anti-Semitic, and just plain filthy." Using a booklist supplied by PONY-U as its guide, the Island Trees school board invaded the school premises after hours, confiscated about 60 books, and eventually banned 11 books in all.

The school board's action stirred the ire of the Island Trees teacher's union, which filed a formal grievance charging that academic freedom rights written into the union contract had been violated. The New York Library Association's Intellectual Freedom Committee backed the union in its stance (LJ, May 15, 1976, p. 1169). And parents and students stormed board meetings to complain about the board's action and demand that the books once again be made available to youngsters.

In the face of mounting protests, the school board reevaluated its action and finally agreed to restore one book (Oliver La Farge's Laughing Boy) to library shelves and to permit access on a "restricted basis" to another title (Richard Wright's Black Boy). But the board refused to lift its ban on nine other books, including: The Fixer by Bernard Malamud, Slaughterhouse Five by Kurt Vonnegut, The Naked Ape by Desmond Morris, Down These Mean Streets by Piri Thomas, and Best Short Stories by Negro Writers, edited by Langston Hughes. Also: Go Ask Alice

Today, more than ever, Baker & Taylor is working for your library.

Great discounts, the largest inventories, the ighest fill rates, and the most complete range f services have made Baker & Taylor the ›remost book distributor to school, public, nd academic libraries.

Today, librarians face greater challenges ıan ever before: coping with budget problems, ook selection, staffing decisions, and, most nportantly, servicing an increasingly sophisti- ated clientele.

At Baker & Taylor, we realize all of this. 'oday, more than ever, we are committed to vorking for your library.

For example, each of our five regional dis- ribution centers has a Customer Relations)epartment, managed by trained library pecialists.

These managers and their staff are ready to work with you the moment you need them. By mail or phone, they can help you select the most appropriate services for your library, prepare an order, open an account, or set up billing procedures that fit your accounting needs.

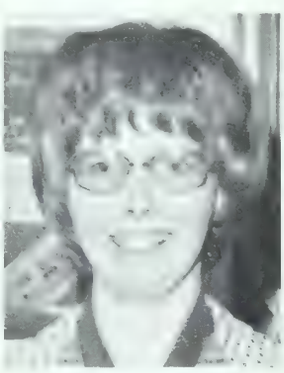
More Services, Programs, Flexibility, and Economy.

Baker & Taylor provides the most complete range of services: direct order plans, Approval Programs, Current Awareness Services, standing order plans, cataloging and processing, automated acquisitions systems, paperback packages, and more. Each program can be tailored to your needs . . . to fit your budget.

No matter where you are, our regional distribution centers offer you the most complete service . . . the most personal service.

Jill Bartholomew
Commerce, Georgia

Bill McEwen
Clarksville, Texas



Lolita Studer
Momence, Illinois

Michael Utasi
Somerville, New Jersey

Helen Kennedy
Reno, Nevada

Baker & Taylor

Working for your library. Today, more than ever.

Western Division
Reno, NV 84502
380 Edison Way
(702) 786-6700

Southwest Division
Clarksville, TX 75426
Industrial Park
(214) 427-3811

Midwest Division
Momence, IL 60954
Gladiola Avenue
(815) 472-2444

Southeast Division
Commerce, GA 30529
(404) 335-5000

Eastern Division
Somerville, NJ 08876
50 Kirby Avenue
(201) 722-8000

Simplify your book ordering, and keep complete records

And save an extra 5% on these Demco Multiple Copy Book Order Forms Clean, carbonless, complete, and easy to fill out. Use special catalog coupon for extra 5% savings on these forms and any item with a red check mark in the new Demco Library Supplies Catalog

Send for you copy today Demco, Dept. R13, Box 7488, Madison, Wis. 53707

DEMCO

Your Library Value Center

Demco Educational Corp
Madison, Wis., Fresno, Cal
Book Div., Paramus, N.J.

YOU WILL HAVE—
"CONFIDENCE"
In Our Complete Periodicals Service—
All American and Foreign Titles

Promptness is a Traditional part of McGregor Service . . . as well as:

- EXPERIENCE
- TRAINED PERSONNEL
- FINANCIAL STABILITY
- AMPLE FACILITIES
- RESPONSIBLE MANAGEMENT

An attractive brochure is available for the asking.

SUBSCRIBE TO McGREGOR PERIODICALS BULLETIN

OUR 44th YEAR

McGREGOR Magazine Agency

MOUNT MORRIS, ILLINOIS 61054

(anonymous), A Hero Ain't Nothin' but a Sandwich by Alice Childress, A Reader for Writers, edited by Jerome Archer, and Soul on Ice by Eldridge Cleaver.

The Island Trees case is the latest test of the right of a school board to set itself up as a censor. As 1976 was ending, Cincinnati's Court of Appeals ruled that school officials (Strongville, Ohio) cannot arbitrarily remove from a school library books they find offensive (LJ, October 15, 1976, p. 2120). A similar response to sporadic outbreaks of censorship came from the New York Board of Regents, which last year came out with a set of guidelines that asserted that students need to grapple with controversial reading materials if they are to learn to think critically. The Regents urged school boards to resist attempts by parent groups to censor the reading of any children except their own (LJ, December 1, 1976, p. 2417). Champions of intellectual freedom are monitoring the Island Trees case; a victory there could signal a slowdown of what NYCLU's Ira Glasser calls "an epidemic of book censorship by self-appointed vigilantes and school boards without the courage to resist or the insight to understand their educational mission."

At a NYCLU press conference highlighting the court suit, Barbara Bernstein of the Nassau County Chapter of NYCLU noted that the books the Island Trees board decided to ban are "Pulitzer Prize-winning books . . . books about blacks, about ghetto life, about the physiology of sex, about the effects of racial and religious hatred and hypocrisy—all aspects of life which young people need to know." Simon Michael Bessie of the Freedom To Read Committee of the American Association of Publishers noted that "every book of value will contain something that is objectionable to somebody. Even the Bible is not exempt." And Slaughterhouse-Five author Kurt Vonnegut, Jr. noted that book sales go up when such controversies arise; he deplored the board's action and said he suspected that a booklist of "objectionable" titles is being distributed in many communities, since his own book has been assailed so often.

Speaking up for the five student plaintiffs, Jacqueline Gold said that controversial books are important because "we don't see racial prejudice or blacks in our community" and what we get in school is a "closed door atmosphere"—one in which "fear is prevalent and teachers are afraid to teach."

And as this issue went to press, LJ learned that both the New York Library Association and the Nassau-Suffolk School Library Association have decided to file amicus curiae briefs supporting the NYCLU's complaint against the Island Trees school board. The Nassau-Suffolk School Library Association has also established a special fund (NSSLA Legal Fund) to be used to support the involvement of its own Intellectual Freedom Committee in the Island Trees case.

Public Works $$ winners; new legislation coming

The first report of success in the Public Works sweepstakes to reach LJ comes from the Suburban Library System (Burr Ridge, Illinois), which reports that Illinois libraries have nailed down three out of the 52 Public Works grants awarded in the state. Two North Suburban member libraries received grants; it was $745,000 for the Fox Lake Public Library and $300,000 for the Gail Borden Public Library (Elgin). And the Starved Rock Library System (Ottawa) got $453,000 to expand its headquarters building.

Libraries that lost out in their tries for public works grants may get another chance: House Democrats, reports the newsletter Education Daily, have agreed to introduce new legislation to fund more public works projects. House Majority Leader James Wright claims that the new legislation will "at least double the impact" of the present $2 billion program. And many excellent construction projects already proposed might make it on a second try, said Wright. He noted that only 1,990 out of 25,000 applications for public works money could be approved, when "30 to 40 percent of the applications rejected for lack of funds met all the requirements of law and in many cases were 'indistinguishable' from the projects finally chosen."

UC-Berkeley seeks info for physics archival survey

A worldwide survey of archival holdings related to physics in this century is being conducted by the University of California-Berkeley for a projected published inventory. The goal is to locate and identify the correspondence and unpublished papers of some 1000 physicists (including little-known scientists) active between 1900 and 1950.

Libraries not specializing in physics or even in the sciences may have materials vital to this search. Says UC-Berkeley, "Of particular interest is documentation of contact between physicists and intellectuals outside the domain of academic physics." Materials could include unpublished correspondence; letters to or from a physi-says Barbara Wilson of the Hackley Public Library, Muskegon, Michigan...

"OUR LIBRARY USES JOSTEN'S FULLY PROCESSED BOOKS BECAUSE WE SAVE MONEY AND GET FRIENDLY, PERSONALIZED SERVICE, TOO!"

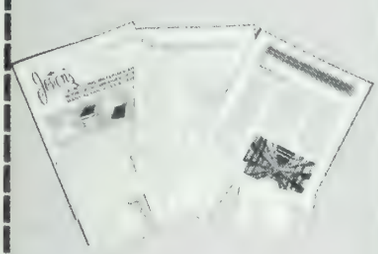
"We like having a single source for books, catalog cards and processing. One reason is that it's costing us less for Josten's fully processed books than if we bought and processed them separately. We're also saving on postage and multiple billing costs."

The Hackley Public Library is one of hundreds of public and school libraries across the nation and Canada that are ordering Josten's catalog cards, books with catalog cards, and fully processed books with either Dewey/Sears or LC/MARC cataloging. Josten's offers many standard options for cataloging and processing that effect customized service to each library. The Hackley Public Library just initiated Josten's new NUC Look-up option on a recent order to get LC cataloging for titles not on Library of Congress MARC tapes. They look forward to even higher fulfillment, which will increase their savings and allow books to be circulated faster. Also, by ordering catalog cards and labels for previously purchased books, they are managing to eliminate a backlog without spending time internally.

"The quality of materials and workmanship on Josten's fully processed books is good, too. Our orders have been carefully packaged and arrived in good condition."

"Josten's doesn't hesitate to call if there is a question or problem concerning our order — they have sometimes called just to make sure that they are preparing an order exactly the way we want it. We have found that personalized service from Josten's goes beyond their printed options for book processing and cataloging — merely let them know what you want. Their Customer Services people are most helpful and their toll-free number has come in handy many times."

If you want to save money and time on your books, send the coupon below or call Josten's at 800-328-2980 toll free.



SEND FOR FREE SAMPLE KIT TODAY

Josten's LIBRARY SERVICES DIVISION
Dept. 196, 1303 Cliff Road, Burnsville MN 55337

Yes! Please send me full information and free samples of your LC/MARC catalog cards, including information on ordering cards with books.

NAME _____

TITLE _____ PHONE _____

LIBRARY _____

ADDRESS _____

CITY _____ STATE _____ ZIP _____

☐ Check here if you are interested in catalog cards with Dewey call numbers and Sears subject headings.

Operating Budget Cuts?

Less staff for equal work? Save time and trouble, get the most for your money with service designed to meet your needs. Reduce staff time in claim work and direct ordering — let us do the work. Any book in print (U.S. and Canada) can be supplied with custom invoicing and prompt, accurate reporting of back ordered titles. Give us a trial order and see what our "Concerned Service" can do for you!

— Call 517-849-9361 Collect —

The House of Superior Library Service

The BOOK HOUSE
208 West Chicago
Jonesville, Mich. 49250

DAVEY

Since 1842 —
the standard binder's board for library bindings.

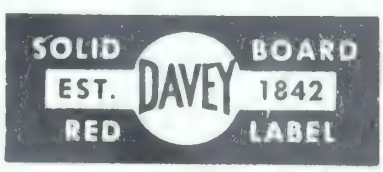
RED LABEL BOARD



Distributors in all principal cities

THE DAVEY COMPANY
164 LAIDLAW AVENUE
JERSEY CITY, N.J. 07308

cist, published in journals or books which might be overlooked by a historian of science; and archival holdings of the papers of little known physicists.

Any information relevant to UC's Survey of Archives should go to the Office for History of Science and Technology, 470 Stephens Hall, University of California, Berkeley, Calif. 94720.

$$ to Alabama agency for handicapped facility

The Alabama Public Library Service (Montgomery) has received a $1,213,400 Public Works grant to build a 50,000-square-foot addition to house a regional library for the blind and the physically handicapped. Governor Wallace had earlier authorized the transfer of the service from the Special Technical Facility at Talladega (where both space and staff were inadequate) to the state agency, "where it will become a major part of total public library service to citizens of Alabama."

The transfer of responsibility is slated to take place October 1, 1977. Wallace notes that the building will be designed especially for the blind and physically handicapped—with such features as sliding doors, rounded corners, signs in Braille, ramps, and a street-level entrance. Service will also be provided to the deaf and the mute.

Library PR Council awards; April deadline for entries

Libraries that produced top notch library publicity during the 1976 calendar year have until April 15 to submit entries to the Library Public Relations Council for the 1977 LPRC awards competition. Among the categories: best radio spot; best brochure promoting a service or program; best library newsletter and/or calendar of events; best individual poster; and best annual report. Both small and large libraries are eligible; there are two award divisions, one for libraries serving a population over 60,000, another for libraries with populations under 60,000.

Submit seven copies of all print entries; for the radio spot (60 seconds or less) send seven copies of the typewritten script plus one standard cassette or ¼ inch tape recorded at 3-¾ or 7-½. And include an information sheet specifying the method of duplication, the supplier (in-house or outside), the number of items produced, the method of distribution, and the cost.

Entries should go to Louise Liebold, LPRC 1977 Awards Chairperson, East Meadow Public Library, Front St. & Newbridge Rd., East Meadow, N.Y. 11554.

Copyright in Australia

Publisher John Wiley has won damages in a court suit charging Melbourne University with violation of copyright, reports the Australian Library Journal. MU's library was stocking its reserve book collection with photocopies of two chapters of a Wiley book, Psychology: Man in Perspective by Arnold Buss. The library was letting the copies go out on loan to students. The judge levied a $600 fine and said all photocopies had to be surrendered.

Virgin Islands network trial

A Higher Education Act, Title II-B grant of $29,500 will fuel a Virgin Islands Demonstration Library Network Study which aims to determine if networking "is the answer to optimal organization of library materials in the Virgin Islands and other remote areas." The study will try to determine whether linkage with national, online shared cataloging networks or the creation of a local network is the best alternative. A small-scale network of Virgin Islands public libraries will be created to try out interlibrary cooperation and develop such products as a union catalog of films and union list of serials.

Indonesian law docs to Cornell

Cornell University Libraries Assistant Director Hendrik Edelman reports that a delegation of Indonesian officials, which came to the U.S. under the sponsorship of the Centre for Strategic and International Studies (Jakarta), presented Cornell with 20 volumes of important legal documents. The documents consist primarily of "official stenographic records of trials before the Extraordinary Military Tribunals of persons accused of involvement in the October 1, 1965 abortive coup d'état in Indonesia."

Historic library building

The Williams Mansion of New Orleans, which has housed the Milton H. Latter branch of the New Orleans Public Library, has been added to the National Register of Historic Places. The building, which was built shortly after the turn of the century by Mark Isaacs, has been called "a social document reflecting the zenith of Jewish social and economic life in New Orleans during the early 20th Century."

Correction

LJ's "News Report 1976" erred in reporting Harold A. Bloomquist of the Countway Medical Library as deceased; he actually should have been listed in the preceding paragraph listing notables who retired in 1975 (LJ, January 15, p. 174).

Last November, Houston Public Library sent each branch its card catalog.

There's really nothing a branch would rather have than a copy of the main library's card catalog. Like Houston, you can increase your branches' service with University Microfilms' new Cardcam service.

Cardcam is an affordable way to distribute your card file on compact, convenient microfiche. 1,980 cards (that's two drawers!) on a single fiche.

Using our newly patented camera, Cardcam can film right in your library and take just minutes per drawer. Or, protect your file with a master film tucked securely in our vault.

And, not only can you duplicate your catalog on standard fiche, but you can have copies made on microfilm, NUC-style catalog pages or even on card stock!

Best of all, initial filming costs a mere two to four cents per card. Duplicate fiche cost as little as twenty cents per fiche.

Do write or call Griff McDonald, our General Manager of Cardcam Services. Then he can describe all our services.

And show you how to give your branches a large time savings in a little package.

CC
AA
RM
D

A way to keep your card file. And share it.

University Microfilms International
Dept. A, 300 N. Zeeb Rd., Ann Arbor, Mich. 48106
Phone: (313) 761-4700

ACTION AT THE STATE LEVEL

More local library input sought for Ill. 5-year plan

The Illinois State Library (Kathryn Gesterfield, director) says it will actively seek more input from the state's library community in putting together the latest version of the ISL annually updated Five-Year Plan. ISL has come up with new planning guidelines which say that the state library "will continue to coordinate input, but the substance [of the plan] (the identification of needs, statements of objectives, and design of programs) will be generated with participation from librarians, trustees, and users. Although final responsibility for the form, content, and design of the plan lies with the state library, the plan will be developed with the 'advice and consent' of the state's library community."

Besides bringing in the general library community from users to library administrators and board members, the guidelines call for participation by other state level agencies (the Secretary of State's office, the Illinois Office of Education, and the Board of Higher Education), experts in various fields as consultants, and statewide library associations.

The appeal for more participatory planning indicates an ongoing shift in administrative style at ISL—departing increasingly from the authoritarian mode of former ISL head Al Trezza. The new approach obviously calls for a greater investment by the State Library in the staff work necessary to mobilize support all over the state for the Five-Year Plan—getting everyone into the action at various stages of planning. The new emphasis in Illinois is one that is in tune with a national trend toward involving large numbers of persons and institutions in planning, national as well as regional. ISL Assistant Director for Public Services Bert Halcli is in charge of the new effort as "staff planner on a half-time basis."

Gesterfield agrees the ISL is moving into a stronger partnership with the library community by providing a more concrete planning structure. She told LJ that the new effort "marks the first time guidelines for participation have been written out in such detail; the first time the plan has been looked at by so many groups; and the first time everyone will know in advance exactly how they will be involved in the planning process." ISL has until September 30, 1977 to come up with a finished document. Gesterfield did stress that ISL, while Trezza was at the helm, did seek out, in various ways, input from the library community. Among the communications routes tried: consultations with system directors and an advisory committee; a series of public hearings to get the opinions of library users; and discussions at library association meets.

Montana not NFB target; new battle in Nebraska

Darlene Tiensbold of the Montana State Library's Division for the Blind and the Physically Handicapped denies that Montana is a target in the National Federation for the Blind's drive to get library service programs for the blind moved out of the jurisdiction of state library agencies (LJ, January 15, p. 148-49). John Kopischke of the Nebraska Library Commission had reported that the NFB was trying to get state libraries in a number of states out of the business of providing service to the blind.

In Nebraska, the NFB had tried to get the legislature to disqualify the state library from running the state's service to the blind—an effort which failed only after the legislature did its own study to find out what kind of job the state library agency was doing.

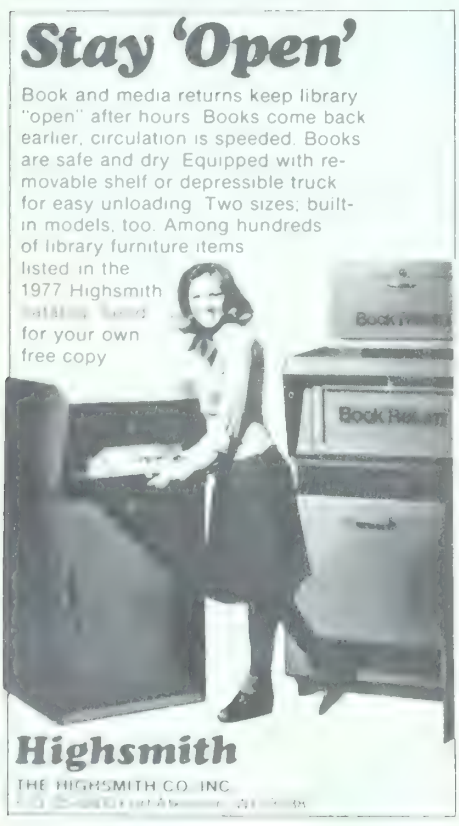
Kopischke had mentioned Montana as another NFB battleground. But Tiensbold denies this, and notes that the state library has support for its operation of the blind program from the Montana Association for the Blind. The group is backing the state library in its latest effort to win more state funding for the program.

But in Nebraska it looks as if the state agency's running of the program for the blind will once again be challenged. Kopischke reports that the National Federation for the Blind (Kenneth Jernigan, president) is complaining anew to legislators that the state library agency is ill-fitted to run the program.

Kopischke noted that the National Federation (headquartered in Des Moines, Iowa) last year went on record at its annual meeting in Los Angeles as opposing the establishment of subregional libraries by the Library of Congress' Division for the Blind and Physically Handicapped. NFB passed a resolution in which it argued for the transfer of service programs to government agencies providing "total service-for-the blind," and not just library service. It opposed "any library standard which would require or encourage libraries for the blind to operate as a part of general library programs."

One reaction to NFB's position: COSLA (Chief Officers of State Library Agencies) has drafted a resolution in which it warns that proposals in some states to transfer responsibility for blind service to other government agencies "could result in a deterioration of library services." The COSLA resolution urges that state library agencies "retain responsibility for development, improvement, and delivery of library services in a cooperative service program among LC, the state library agencies, and the public libraries of the nation."

And there is growing commitment in the library community to service to the blind and handicapped. One sign of this: the relatively recent formation in ALA of a full-fledged division concerned with the handicapped: the Health and Rehabilitative Library Service Division (HRLSD). ALA's new dues structure may force a merger of HRLSD and the Association of State Library Agencies (ASLA)—two divisions with converging interests in this area of service to the handicapped.



Stay 'Open'
Book and media returns keep library "open" after hours. Books come back earlier, circulation is speeded. Books are safe and dry. Equipped with removable shelf or depressible truck for easy unloading. Two sizes; built-in models, too. Among hundreds of library furniture items listed in the 1977 Highsmith for your own free copy
Highsmith
THE HIGHSMITH CO., INC.

THE LIBRARY DOLLAR

Brooklyn, N.Y. loses more staff, cuts hrs.

New York's Brooklyn Public Library has lost another 39 employees—these had been paid with funding available under the Federal Economic Develment Act, Title X, reports Director Kenneth Duchac. The latest loss of personnel has forced the library to cut branch hours anew; another 16 branches are to be "paired," with one staff working two and three alternate days at neighboring branches. Last July, 24 other Brooklyn libraries were "paired."

Pointing up the severity of Brooklyn's budget crisis, Duchac noted that the new staff cuts represent "the first reduction in our non-City funded positions," and come at a time when the library has been relying more heavily on federal and state funding to pay its staffers. In the past 18 months, federal or state revenue has increasingly substituted for city funding—paying for 247 staff positions at last count. Meanwhile, the city has been cutting appropriations for BPL staff positions; it paid for 1,048 positions 18 months ago, but now pays for only 676. Tax levy support for BPL operating expenses is also declining: in 1974-75 it was $11.2 million; this year, only $9.6 million.

Pinpointing staff and service cutbacks between June of 1975 and January 31, 1977, Duchac notes that Brooklyn's full-time staff has dropped from 1,201 to 923 (a 23.1 percent cut); library hours are down from 2,651 to 1,273½ (a 52 percent drop); and two bookmobiles had to be taken off the road.

Big vote in North Dakota ups library tax support

With the passage of a tax levy increase, the Veterans Memorial Public Library of Bismarck, North Dakota will get about $75,000 in extra tax revenue in 1978, reports Director Thomas T. Jones. In the largest voter turnout in the city's history, 67 percent of Bismarck voters okayed a measure upping tax support from four to six mills and providing about $225,000 in total annual tax revenue. The new operating income, said Jones, will be used to "restore book and AV budgets, improve existing reference and information and referral services, and allow for eventual upgrading of the library's circulation control system."

A community-based citizens group ran a high-powered campaign which brought in the vote, said Jones. Having raised $15,000 in donations, it made heavy use of the media (radio, TV, and local newspapers), posted signs in yards and atop cars, and recruited volunteers to carry the library message via walking sandwich board signs in area shopping centers.

Veterans Memorial, said Jones, will also get $23,000 in tax revenue from neighboring Burleigh County, which voted in favor of a two mills tax levy to reimburse Veterans for bookmobile service and to establish reciprocal borrowing privileges to county residents.

For 1977 Veterans Memorial has a budget of $332,000, including $150,480 in current tax support (at the rate of only four mills), $26,000 in property tax revenue, and various federal grants.

unesco

Distributor in the United States: UNIPUB, Box 433, Murray Hill Station, New York, N.Y. 10016

Periodicals with an international viewpoint

International Social Science Journal
An authoritative international review of current research and trends in the social sciences. Quarterly. Annual subscription: $14

Cultures
Explores traditional and twentieth-century forms of expression — art, music, literature, cinema — from a contemporary point of view. Quarterly. Annual subscription: $20

Museum
A richly illustrated quarterly devoted to the entire range of museums, from art to science to the habitat. Of interest to specialist and layman alike. Annual subscription: $18

Unesco Bulletin for Libraries
Up-to-date information on reference books, bibliographies, works on librarianship, library development throughout the world. Six issues a year. Annual subscription: $10

Copyright Bulletin
Reports on developments in international copyright, including information on documentation, meetings and bibliographies. Quarterly. Annual subscription: $8

Bibliography, Documentation, Terminology
Lists bibliographical services throughout the world and gives news on documentation in education, science, the social sciences and mass communication. Six issues a year. Annual subscription: $8

Impact of Science on Society
Analyses what science and technology are doing to the quality of life and emphasizes the interdependence between science and human development. Quarterly. Annual subscription: $10

Nature and Resources
Newsletter about scientific research on environment, resources and conservation. Quarterly. Annual subscription: $6

Prospects. Quarterly review of education
An international journal which explores timely and provocative questions facing education today, with emphasis on innovation and reform. Annual subscription: $10

Educational Documentation and Information
Contains bibliographies on specific aspects of contemporary education and describes important documentation and research institutions. Quarterly. Annual subscription: $10

The Unesco Courier
A comprehensive, illustrated monthly magazine offering in-depth articles on themes of broad international interest. Recent issues have covered: the scientific exploration of our acoustic environment; the search for a new world economic order; the 200th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence; earthquakes and earthquake engineering; the Celts; a cartoon history of thirty years of Unesco. Lively reading for secondary-school teachers and students and all those interested in exploring the world around them. Annual subscription: $9

LIBRARY JOURNAL COVERS THE ENVIRONMENT

The protection and preservation of our environment has become a national concern, with more and more people looking to their libraries for information on the subject.

In order to keep their environment collections up to date, librarians are constantly acquiring new books, periodicals, films, slides and pamphlets. Their prime source of reliable information on which to base buying decisions is LIBRARY JOURNAL—for 102 years the leading magazine in the library field.

The upcoming May 1st Environment Issue will review the past year's new books and literature on the environment. It's an annual special that librarians will refer to continually throughout the year when planning additions to their basic environment collections.

If you publish books, periodicals, or databases, or offer information services on environment questions, it's an advertising opportunity you won't want to miss. The May 1st Environment Issue of LIBRARY JOURNAL.

Remember these closing dates:

March 24:
Reservations and pub-set copy due

March 31:
Negatives or camera-ready art due

LIBRARY JOURNAL

Please send all insertion orders and correspondence to Library Journal, P.O. Box 641, Times Square Station, New York, N.Y. 10036.
Please send mechanicals and artwork to Library Journal, 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10036.

R.R. Bowker Company
1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10036

Salaries up, but there are fewer librarians, says ARL

The Association of Research Libraries' latest Annual Salary Survey, providing 1975-76 statistics for 94 research libraries in the United States and Canada, notes that for the first time in four years ARL librarians made a slight (3.8 percent) gain in purchasing power. The median salary in university libraries inched up from 1975's $14,000 to 1976's $15,500; for ARL nonuniversity (public, federal, and research) libraries the comparable figures were $16,500 and $16,560.

But ARL notes that its survey also shows that there are fewer librarians as a result of staff cutting; in the past year alone 86 university libraries eliminated 110 positions. More than 50 percent of ARL librarians now make over $15,000; three years ago only 30 percent made as much.

The ARL study, compiled by Suzanne Frankie, is available for $5 (prepaid) from ARL, 1527 New Hampshire Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20026.

Queens, N.Y. volunteers run library/community ctr.

A new building that was to have housed a library in the Bayside section of Queens has been converted into a community center, thanks to a group of area residents who volunteered to run it. The $400,000 facility had been slated for either boarding up or rental for offices because of the money crunch. But the community stepped in and demanded that that the facility be used.

The city rejected a community takeover at first, but finally agreed to a volunteer arrangement when the local Young Men's/Young Women's Hebrew Association said that it would assume responsibility for the building. The library building has since been converted into a community center that houses a small library of 2000 volumes (donated by the Queens library system) and provides facilities for gymnastics, ballet, and painting. About 60 full-time volunteers run the center, which now has a paid director.

Money for the operation comes from the sale of memberships to families ($50), individuals ($25), and senior citizens ($15). There are some 400 such memberships now representing 1200 persons.

Anoka Co. budget up

Anoka County Library Director Jerry F. Young reports that the Anoka County Library System (Minneapolis) has won an 11 percent budget hike from the county. Its 1977 budget is reported at $994,500.

N.Y. library aids county

The board of New York's Buffalo and Erie County Library has opted to try to alleviate the county's current cash flow problem by investing most of the library's private funds in county obligations. Some $400,000 in investments will be sold and reinvested in tax anticipation notes. Buffalo's effort to help bail out the county may count heavily when the county decides whether or not to go ahead with a proposed $1.9 million cutback in county library aid. And the library board has told county legislators who are for the cutback that if appropriations are slashed to $6.6 million, the results would be systemwide service cutbacks, elimination of 114 additional staff positions, and drastically reduced inner-city and other services.

Ohio state aid cut anew

The Ohio State Library reports that the governor, who slashed 1977 state library aid two percent in July, has lopped off another one percent. State aid for 1977 is now down to $638,260—97 percent of the amount appropriated by the General Assembly in 1975. All state aid programs, says OSL, will be affected by the cutback: reimbursement for interlibrary loan will drop to $2.91, and for talking books service it will shrink from $18 to $17.46.

Canadian book flood

From Ottawa comes a report that the Canada Council has bought 106,000 books by Canadian authors for free distribution to organizations "that lack funds to buy books but have facilities to make books available to the public." School libraries, community resource centers, and prisons are among the organization eligible for books, coming in packages of 200 volumes.

State aid for small libraries

Oklahoma Department of Libraries Director Robert L. Clark, Jr. reports that new standards adopted for the 1978 state aid program make local libraries eligible for state aid grants for the first time. ODL has requested $600,000 in state aid; in the past few years, however, "funds were limited to $125,000—and only to multicounty systems."

Salary shrinkage in N.Y.

Reporting on budget negotiations still in progress, New York's Monroe County Library System says that it looks as if "we have lost two of our 17 positions . . . plans are underway to reduce all county salaries over $20,000 by ten percent and those between $12,000 and $19,999 by five percent . . . [and] there will be no salary increments allowed for 1977."

five advantages... worth looking into

1 COMPREHENSIVE
Stechert Macmillan offers one of the world's most comprehensive acquisition services for all types of periodicals, continuations, and books – domestic and foreign; academic, scientific, and popular.

2 ECONOMICAL
Choose from a variety of acquisition plans that allows you to buy more for less money.

3 EFFICIENT
Each customer has a personal supervisor for direct answers to any question. Professionally-staffed offices, and contacts throughout the world, speed search and acquisition.

4 CONTINUOUS
You are guaranteed uninterrupted receipt of materials with our Standing Order Service for all periodicals and continuations.

5 BIBLIOGRAPHIC SERVICE
You receive a wide variety of timely bibliographic news services designed for acquisition librarians.

Contact your regional representative or our Sales/Marketing Office in New York for our International Acquisition Brochure. Bibliographic publications are free on request.

A WORLD OF SERVICE

Stechert Macmillan, Inc.

Serving Libraries Since 1872
866 Third Avenue • New York, N.Y. 10022, U.S.A. • (212) 935-4250

U.S.A. • AUSTRALIA • ENGLAND • FRANCE • GERMANY

SLA/ASIS JANUS MEET

Costs of information scrutinized

The federal government must develop a national information policy now; the emerging communications network is a political football; and the U.S. is not putting enough money into research and development, at the risk of losing out in what has become an international competition. These were among the viewpoints expressed at the January 12 "Janus" seminar of the New York chapters of the Special Libraries Association and the American Society for Information Science. Over 100 librarians and information scientists came to this year's seminar, which had as its theme The Cost of Information. What follows is a sampling of the ideas expressed at Janus 1977.

Government chaos

Ruth Tighe of the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science echoed the new (late 1976) NCLIS emphasis on the desirability of providing equal information access to all and not just to the "intellectual elites." What we have now, she said, is a "market place economy"; those who can pay get the information they need. One indication of the growing importance of information and the new tendency to view it as a commodity: a whole new information oriented technology is here, as evidenced by the proliferation of information brokers.

What we need, said Tighe, is a national information policy which would assure that people from all walks of life get the information they need without being "penalized" by such things as restrictive policies and fees. But she suggested that people with "unique" information needs should pay; they should get the information they need from private industry—the information brokers. Her logic: "hierarchies are inevitable . . . unique information needs will have to go the hierarchical ladder with charges being added to each step."

When you figure the cost of information, said Tighe, you've got to take into account how much is spent for the generation of information, processing and packaging, distribution by vendors, acquisition, housing—the physical plant, and access. These costs are not new, but "there's a new awareness of them . . . a new emphasis on cost accounting." One by-product of the cost-accounting mentality: "there's an alarming tendency to put price tags on retrieval now that we have quantifiable measures such as connect time, terminal costs, etc."

Observing that there are four different kinds of information (survival, professional, educational, and research), Tighe argued that you can't put a price tag on each type of information because you're setting up artificial priorities and costs are going to prevent some people from getting the information they need. The absence of information, she noted, also has a cost.

Tighe indicated that she shared the viewpoint of Edwin Parker of Stanford, who had argued earlier (at the 1975 meeting in Boston of the American Society for Information Science) that information is a social good and government (federal, state, and local) has a responsibility to get information to the people.

Current federal government information policy, observed Tighe, is "fragmented and uncoordinated." The U.S. government, she asserted, must do more than just pump money into communications; "it must become an advocate of national information planning; it must effectively coordinate."

This, noted Tighe, is the opinion of the President's Domestic Council on the Right to Privacy, which during the Ford administration prepared a report (National Information Policy) which found that "current information policy is incoherent and must be centralized." She called attention to the Council's major recommendation: the creation of a new office of information policy at the federal level. But she warned that the Carter administration might drag its heels in creating a central information office simply because Ford had ordered the report. She urged librarians to get the report from NCLIS HQ, read it, and put the heat on their congressmen for the creation of a national information office. Another new report highlighted: the Urban Libraries Council's A Strategy for Improving State Fiscal Library Support, which "sets a legal precedent for prodding government to broaden its interpretation of information, to recognize libraries as educational institutions, and to provide them with funding equivalent to that now given schools."

R&D—the new competitiveness

Although his presentation was dull and unwieldy (participants had to leaf through a sheaf of charts to follow him), Walter Grattidge of General Electric (Schenectady, New York) pegged some important national and international trends. Research and development (R&D) has become internationally competitive. In the sixties, the U.S. and France pulled back government support (in the U.S., business itself does 70 percent of all R&D), but Russia, Britain, West Germany, and Japan started and still are putting more money into R&D.

Many more medical, scientific, and technological books are being published, with increases for 1970-74 ranging from 29 to 55 percent. Meanwhile the prices of hardcover books (most of which are brought by U.S. scientists themselves, and not their corporations) are skyrocketing. And the prices of journals are rising faster than the national economy. The consequences: libraries, said Grattidge, have no other choice but to be more selective in their purchases; many science books have a very short shelf life. Libraries must face up to space problems; GE was one firm that had to—it put its entire journal collection on microfilm.

Highlighting new acquisition trends, Grattidge noted that American corporations are buying conference proceedings, NTIS (National Technical Information Service) reports, and patents—all of which are proliferating rapidly and have become increasingly important information sources. Technical reports are especially hot; NTIS production jumped some 50 percent between 1970 and 1974; GE gets 1800 NTIS reports each year (if you pay more, you get faster service, he noted).

Grattidge gave one example of how a U.S. corporation budgets for information: GE uses about 66 percent of its library budget to buy information and services and only 34 pecent to make it accessible (30 percent of this goes for personnel). Shirley Eschelman of Chemical Bank remarked that the reverse ratio holds for her firm.

Another conference-goer noted that just a few years ago no one would have been interested in how much it costs to produce information, but costs are now important to everyone. John Creps of Engineering Index took up a lot of time to demonstrate, with a chart of indexing terms, that information is expensive. He noted that even something as simple as a journal title citation involves the built-in costs of acquiring the item, processing it, classifying it, and reviewing it; there are added costs when you create a subject classification, write an abstract, or cross-reference a title. Creps said that EI costs have been going up steadily since it started as a "shoebox operation" in 1966; he estimated that costs have gone up 85 percent and noted that EI lost government subsidies in the early '70s.

Politics of communication

The development of a national communications network will mean a lot to libraries and library networks, which will depend on it to cut their costs and provide new channels for cooperation. At the Janus meet, Congressional Consultant Ralph Smith of the U.S. Office of Technology Assessment called attention to the "intensely political" forces shaping the emerging communication network. One political battle already going on: the fight by Bell telephone to bar competition in the development of new telecommunication technology. The shift of the population from the city to the country, a trend which started in 1968, underscores the importance of data transmission. As decentralization continues (and it's not just a case of suburban drift; city people are moving out to nonadjacent counties), data transmission will become increasingly vital. The postal service may eventually have to use it. Multi-use communication systems will be the ones to make it; one cable outfit got a Rural Development Act loan for a cable operation in Wisconsin because it got seven schools to pay for a station, and also planned regular popular programming.

Smith noted that telephone, radio, and TV developed without real intervention from government, but said such will not be the case with telecommunications. What is coming is an "unprecedented era of policy making"; both Congress and the President will want to have a say in how the emerging communications system is organized and run.

But policy-makers, he noted, are running into trouble getting information from organizations which are not in the field of communications, but which are affected by new developments. The Committee on New Technological Uses (CONTU) has had difficulty getting input from individuals and firms indirectly affected by changes in such things as copyright law and new technological developments. Said Smith, library associations and business firms are hesitant to take a stand lest they make a mistake. Librarians must take a chance and help shape policy in the area of communications.

Zero budgeting

The budget plight of those libraries that have lost local funding was echoed by Mary Grant of the bankrupt Nassau County Research Library. She expressed her hostility to the proposed policy of zero-based budgeting, which would require all federal departments (and if the zero-based fever catches on, many nonfederal libraries as well) to justify all their expenditures and not just any annual increases asked.

Zero-based budgeting, she sardonically observed, is the case history of NCRL, which lost all county aid in 1975, has just seen the end of state incentive aid, and is struggling on with grant aid from a corporation. Staff is down from 23 to ten (four of them paid under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act); regular staffers have agreed to pay cuts in last-ditch efforts to help NCRL keep going. NCRL provides centralized reference (ranging from quick reference to complicated research) for a clientele that includes business, individuals, and public libraries. Nassau may have to resort to fees to keep going, but enabling legislation must first be passed. Many firms that NCRL serves have already said that they would pay for service; so far 72 companies have pledged an annual fee of $200.

Summing up the session, Barbara Preschel of Queens College noted that it is difficult to reconcile the egalitarian ideals of a democratic society with the fact that people are effectively denied access to information on the basis of costs. Students are barred from universities; scholars can't utilize the New York Public Library's Research Libraries on certain days because facilities shut down during the week to save money; more full-day closings (which save $43,000 per day) could be in the offing if the budget plight of NYPL worsens.

But Preschel noted that the public is too often unaware of the real cost of information. Her own students say that they would pay $5 or $10 for a literature search, but they balk at the idea of shelling out $25. They're against paying a stiff fee for an information search someone else does for them, and argue that such information is free at the public library if one is willing to spend the time and energy to get it. Said Preschel, information takes time or costs money, and this is something the public has got to learn.—Noël Savage

PEOPLE

A. CURLEY

C. O. FROST

G. GUDE

I. B. MOON

ARTHUR CURLEY, formerly Director of the Cuyahoga County Public Library, Cleveland, Ohio, is now Associate Director for Public Services at the Detroit Public Library.

CAROLYN O. FROST, currently a Ph.D. candidate in library science at the University of Chicago, is now Assistant Professor, School of Library Science, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.

GILBERT GUDE, a recently retired, five-term Congressman from the Eighth District of Maryland who did not seek reelection to the 95th Congress, has been appointed Director of the Congressional Research Service at the Library Congress.

JOHN HUMPHRY, formerly Assistant Commissioner for Libraries, New York State Department of Education, Albany is now Executive Director, of the Forest Press, Lake Placid, New York.

AMY KELLMAN, currently a part-time Lecturer at the Graduate School of Library and Information Sciences, University of Pittsburgh, is now Head of the Children's Department, Carnegie Library of Pittsburgh.

ALICIA MCHUGH, formerly Assistant Director, Oakland Park City Library, Florida, is now Director.

ILSE B. MOON, formerly head of the Department of Information Services, Montclair Public Library, New Jersey, is now Director of Professional Development Studies, Graduate School of Library Service, Rutgers University, New Jersey.

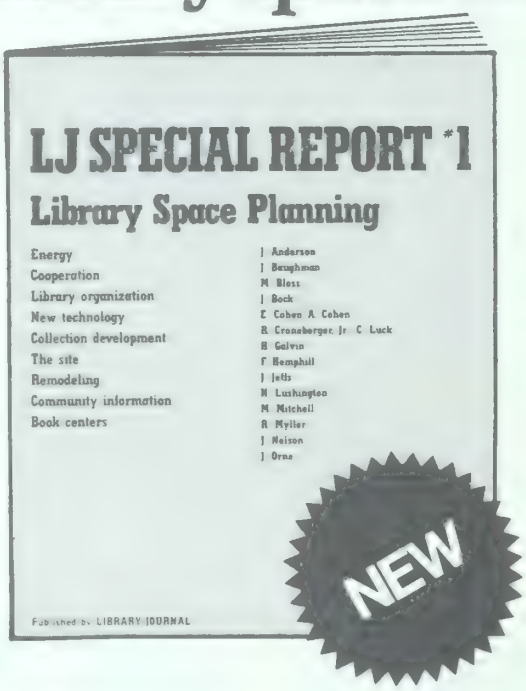
JAMES H. PICKERING, formerly Director of the Warder Public Libraries, Springfield, Ohio, is now Director of the Cuyahoga County Public Library, Cleveland, Ohio.

ELSIE SCHWYN, Head of the West Toledo Branch of the Toledo-Lucas County Public Library, Ohio, for 12 years, and on the staff of the library for 46 years, has retired.

ROBERT A. SEAL, formerly Circulation and Automation Librarian, Science/Technology Information Center, University of Virginia Library, Charlottesville, has been appointed Director for Administrative Services.

ZELLA SHANNON, formerly Head of the History and Travel Department, Minneapolis Public Library, is now Associate Director.

LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING
helps you make better use of your library space tomorrow.



Perhaps you are involved with plans for a new library. Or with remodeling the library you're in now. Or simply making more efficient use of existing space—on a non-existing or minimum budget.

Whatever the case, you will want a copy of the new LJ Special Report #1—LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING.

Here, in one practical, 80-page, paperbound handbook—8½ x 11 size—are the thinking and ideas of 32 leading librarians, library consultants, and architects.

Among the subjects covered: Energy . . . Cooperation . . . Library Organization . . . New Technology . . . Collection Development . . . The Site . . . Remodeling . . . Community Information . . . Book Centers. The information you'll find in LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING will be equally valuable to librarians in public, academic, and special libraries . . . in urban, suburban and rural communities.

LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING is the first of the LJ Special Reports—designed to keep librarians well informed on topics of immediate interest and importance.

In the library field, where so many changes occur so often, yesterday's plans and assumptions must also change.

The problems of library funding, the energy crisis, the evolution of the local library into a community information center, the response of the academic library to the new demands of higher education—all these and other factors require innovative thinking and planning now for libraries of the future.

LJ Special Report #1—LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING—is currently off press and copies are available to LIBRARY JOURNAL readers on a first come, first-served basis.

The cost is only $3.95 per copy on prepaid orders; $5.00 per copy on billed orders.

Use the convenient coupon to send in your order now.

Better use the coupon below to send for your copy today!

To: Edward W. Martin, Circulation Director—R. R. Bowker Co.
1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10036

Please send LJ Special Report #1—LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING—as indicated:

_____ (No.) at $3.95 each, for which payment is enclosed.

_____ (No.) at $5.00 each. Send bill as shown.

Name _____

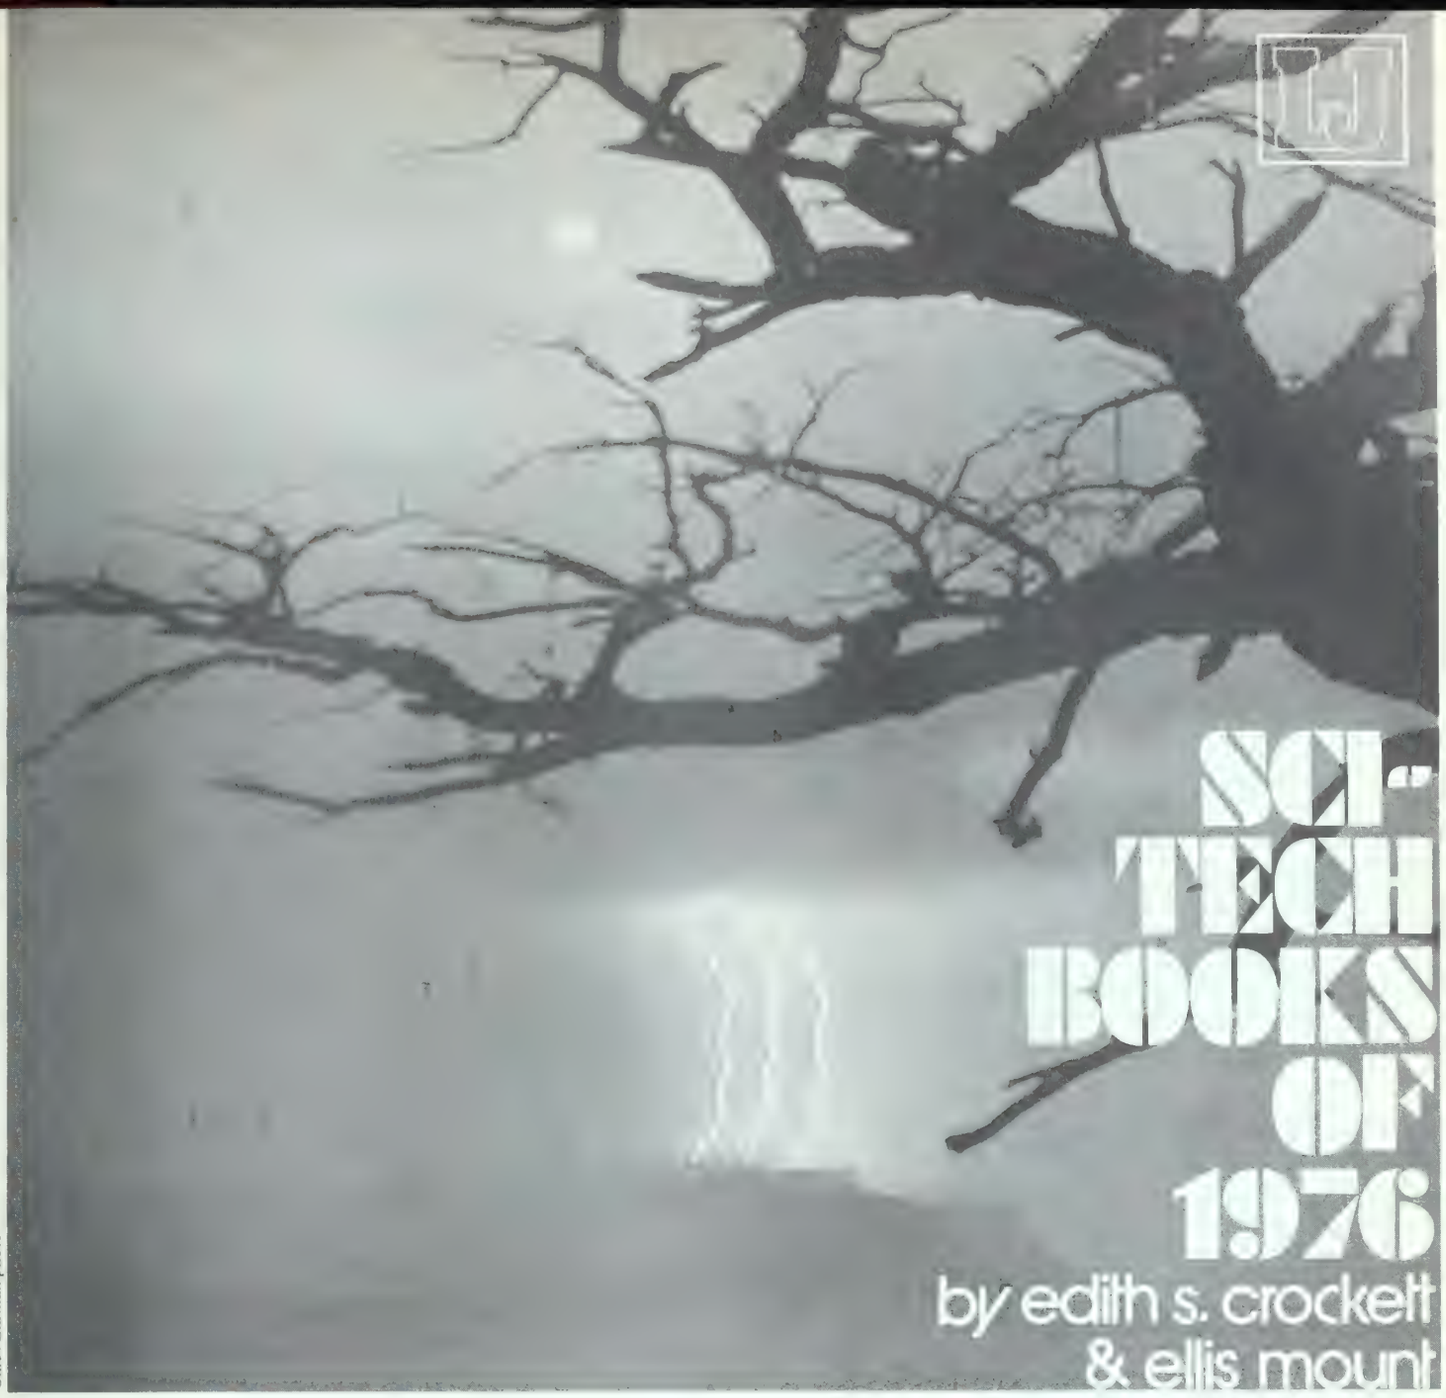
Address _____

City _____

State _____ Zip _____

☐ Send information on quantity discount orders—10 or more copies.

LJ



Gilles Ehrman photo

SCI-TECH BOOKS OF 1976

by edith s. crockett & ellis mount

IN EXAMINING this year's release of science and engineering books suitable for public libraries, several major trends were evident. Not surprisingly, one was the continuing abundance of titles about the energy crisis—whether they dealt with alternate fuel sources, the pros and cons of nuclear energy, or techniques of energy conservation. Another development involved the upward surge of health science and psychology books. Many of the latter were of the self-help variety, a disproportionate number of them related personal experiences with the new therapies that are enjoying a remarkable population explosion. Separating Jung from junk, even Freud from seeming fraud is not always easy for the layman; we have, therefore, included a larger number of titles than in previous years.

Narrowing selections to only 100 outstanding titles this year, as in the past, necessitated the elimination of many titles more than acceptable for public library shelves. A number of promising books, Hortus III (Macmillan, $99.50) and John Palmer's An Introduction to Biological Rhythms (Academic Press, $19.50) to name just two, came to our attention too late to review for inclusion here.

Happily, this year's group did include a score or more with outstanding artwork and photographs. One title listed below was said by one reviewer to have a superfluous text, but only because its color photographs were so consistently excellent! Librarians wanting to add to their reference collections will find a sizable number of encyclopedias, ranging from one covering all of science and engineering to those with a more specialized scope. Prices in most cases for books this year were pleasantly lower than might have been expected in inflationary times like these.

All books were published in 1976 except for two or three 1975 titles that arrived too late for last year's listing, but whose merit warranted at least a belated recognition.

Ellis Mount is science bibliographer at Columbia University Libraries; Edith Crockett, until recently a science librarian, is taking time out for freelance writing

Dr. Hans Jesse, Cologne photo

NASA photo

Previous page from "Planet Earth; Earth's Atmosphere and Crust" (Doubleday). This page, clockwise from top: "Living Trophies" (Crowell); "A House in Space" (Holt); "They Love and Kill: a Natural History of Social Behavior" (Dutton)

Animal Life

BATTEN, Peter. Living Trophies. 272p. Crowell. $9.95. ISBN 0-690-01096-6.
A sobering look at present practices and problems of many of the nation's public zoos. Batten describes the poor environmental conditions, the ignorance of zoo officials, vandalism, and mutilation of animals by visitors that contribute to disease, injury, and death for captive species on exhibit. A chapter on how to evaluate your own local zoo is included. Highly recommended.

DRÖSCHER, Vitus B. They Love and Kill: a Natural History of Social Behavior. 384p. Sunrise: Dutton. $14.50. ISBN 0-87690-215-8.
Dröscher examines the sexual and social bonds between male and female, including courtship behavior, childrearing roles, pairing, etc., across a wide range of animal species. The instinctual as well as the conditioned responses of animal sexuality, and the species—specific advantages of the remarkable variations in mating behavior are documented carefully. The evolutionary significance of monogamous relationships, and their place in the hierarchy of the animal world is re-examined, with some thought-provoking conclusions drawn. Originally written in German, the translation is smooth and highly readable; the illustrations, a number of them in color, are used to excellent advantage.

MACKAL, Roy P. The Monsters of Loch Ness. 401p. Swallow. $12.50. ISBN 0-8040-0703-9.
The author, a scientist at the University of Chicago, leaves no doubt that he is a firm believer in the existence of large animals in the famous Loch Ness. He presents a formidable body of evidence, primarily visual in nature, to support his theory. The history of numerous expeditions to locate and identify the creature(s) that inhabit Loch Ness is reviewed; Mackal concludes that there is no particular pattern to the more than 10,000 reported sightings (of which he feels 251 are true sightings), although the "monsters" have been recorded most frequently near the mouth of the river. The geology and biology of Loch Ness are also examined in considerable detail, with particular attention to its aquatic flora. Mackal believes that the mysterious creature(s) will eventually be identified as giant amphibians not yet known to science. Graphs, charts, and photographs abound. All in all, an exciting book of broad appeal.

McCLUNG, Robert M. Lost Wild Worlds. 288p. Morrow. $8.95. ISBN 0-688-22090-8. Lib. binding: ISBN 0-688-32090-2.
A companion to his earlier Lost Wild America, this volume examines the impact of man's own evolution on the wildlife of the eastern hemisphere. Our rise to dominance in the animal world, and the later growth of civilizations in Europe, Africa, and Asia were responsible for the gradual extinction of numerous animal species. The status of such unusual creatures as the auroch (its extinction occurred in the same year that the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock), the aye-aye, quagga, takahé, anoa, thylacine, and others is examined. McClung records last known sightings; patterns of extinction; and various attempts to preserve a number of threatened species; the last, not always successful. Pen and ink drawings supplement a well written, carefully researched text.

MIGDALSKI, Edward C. The Fresh and Salt Water Fishes of the World. 316p. Knopf. $25. ISBN 0-394-49239-0.
A colorful panorama of more than one thousand of the world's fish species. All 43 orders of fishes are included, with information on their classification, evolution, habitat range, and unique anatomical and behavioral characteristics. Chapters on the biology of fishes and their development since the Ordovician period about 400 million years ago provide an excellent background for the more specific information on individual species. Close to 600 high quality color illustrations supplement a text well suited to general audiences. Recommended.

STREET, Philip. Animal Migration and Navigation. 160p. Scribners. $8.95. ISBN 0-684-14516-2.
The orientation and migration habits of animals have long been of interest and an area of study for scientist and layman alike. This book offers an excellent overview of current knowledge and theory on the subject. Phenomena such as electricity as a navigational device, migration by sound, the influence of sea currents on animal travels, and orientation by light, heat, and scent are discussed; a wide sampling of species illustrates the many forms that migrational behavior takes among birds, insects, marine life, and land vertebrates. The author notes that while the reasons for migration are generally thought to be fairly well understood, the widely varying mechanisms that unerringly direct animals in their travels still remain a mystery in many species.

Anthropology

ARDREY, Robert. The Hunting Hypothesis. 242p. Atheneum. $10. ISBN 0-689-10672-6.
This is Ardrey's fourth book on man's origins and nature. Here he explores the crises that man has encountered and overcome against all odds since his early origins on the African continent: ice ages, prolonged drought, depradation, etc. These crises, asserts Ardrey, have made man man: "Not in our powers but in our paradoxes shall we search for the essence of man." Much that was embodied in his earlier writings is re-examined and summarized as he discusses our evolution as social predators. Recommended.

Astronautics, see also Astronomy

BAINBRIDGE, William Sims. The Spaceflight Revolution; a Sociological Study. 294p. Wiley. $16.95. ISBN 0-471-04306-0.
A thorough treatment of many aspects of astronautics, ranging from pioneers to recent feats to science fiction, as well as the future outlook. Includes spaceflight history and developments in Germany and Russia as well as the U.S. This detailed study is written from the sociological viewpoint of technical projects. Although the layman can comprehend it without difficulty, the book is for larger collections.

CHRISTIAN, James L., ed. Extraterrestrial Intelligence: the First Encounter. 303p. Prometheus. $13.95. ISBN 0-87975-063-4; pap. $4.95, ISBN 0-87975-064-2.
A collection of 15 essays presenting a variety of viewpoints on the nature of intelligence on other planets. Authors are largely professors of philosophy or astronomy. Effects of nonearth intelligence on our society, problems of communication and a host of other topics are explored. For medium-sized and larger libraries.

COOPER, Henry S. F., Jr. A House in Space. 184p. Holt. $8.95. ISBN 0-03-016686-1.
Should give the layman a good concept of what living in space is like, based on the experience of astronauts assigned to the Skylab space station. Enhanced by over 30 pages of photos, this book covers a wide range of topics concerned with their experiences, including many down-to-earth activities, like eating a meal under conditions of weightlessness. Recommended for libraries of all sizes.

ILLUSTRATED Encyclopedia of Astronomy and Space. ed. by Ian Ridpath. 240p. Crowell. $24.95. ISBN 0-333-21365-3.
Contains more than 1000 short but adequate articles, interspersed with over 100 tables, charts, and photos, many in color. Includes biographical items as well as articles on a wide range of subjects. There is a detailed index. The price makes it a good buy for libraries of all sizes.

LEWIS, Richard S. From Vinland to Mars: a Thousand Years of Exploration. 425p. Quadrangle, dist. by Harper. $15. ISBN 0-8129-0647-0.
Despite its title, the book emphasizes two widely separated portions of history in describing explorations. The first section deals with early American investigations, along with those of Magellan, Cook, and some polar studies. The remainder of the book, by far the largest part, is restricted to space exploration, including early experiments by Goddard as well as more recent work. The latter includes the U.S.-Russian link-up. Makes a criticism of the restriction of funds for astronautics in recent years.

MOORE, Patrick. The Next Fifty Years in Space. 144p. Taplinger. $12.95. ISBN 0-8008-5528-0.
An interesting account of what this well-known writer predicts will transpire in the next half century in space. A lunar base within 20 years, manned explorations beyond Mars near the end of the time period, and other educated estimates of what will be feasible make this book suitable for collections of all sizes. Many illustrations, some in color.

PAGE, Thornton & Lou Williams Page, eds. Space Science and Astronomy: Escape from Earth. 467p. Macmillan. (Macmillan Sky and Telescope Library, Vol. 9.) $13.95. ISBN 0-02-594310-3.
An interesting selection of over 125 articles reprinted from the well-known astronomical journal, Sky and Telescope. Coverage extends from the launching of the Soviet Sputnik to the present, on to projects still in their planning stages. Has over 150 photos and drawings. The appendix includes a chronology of the Space Age, a glossary, and a list of suggested readings. Should interests all sizes of libraries.

Astronomy, see also Astronautics

GOLDEN, Frederic. Quasars, Pulsars and Black Holes. 205p. Scribners. $7.95. ISBN 0-684-14501-4.
An account of new aspects of astronomy written for the layman, including high school students. In addition to recent topics, also reviews older points, such as radio astronomy and cosmology. Many black and white photos plus a glossary and bibliography.

GRIBBIN, John. Our Changing Universe: the New Astronomy. 160p. Dutton. $11.95. ISBN 0-87690-216-6.
An attractive book which emphasizes newer developments in astronomy, such as quasars, pulsars, black holes, etc., as well as updating older topics (radio and x-ray astronomy, cosmology and the related area of space exploration). Has many fascinating photos and drawings, several in color. For the well-educated layman.

KYSELKA, Will & Ray Lanterman. North Star to Southern Cross. 152p. Univ. Press of Hawaii. $8.95. ISBN 0-8248-0411-2; pap. $3.95, ISBN 0-8248-0419-8.
A nontechnical, beautifully illustrated account of astronomy, including dozens of drawings, charts, and star charts. It is easily read, yet will give the reader a clear idea of the highlights of the subject, along with important historical points. Star charts for each month should aid the novice, as should the pictorial descriptions of important constellations. For libraries of all sizes.

MOORE, Patrick. Comets. rev. ed. 149p. Scribners. $7.95. ISBN 0-684-14749-1.
An enlarged version of the 1973 edition, including some new illustrations. Arranged by categories, such as historical comets, lost comets, comet hunters. Has many photos (black and white). Appendixes give data on periodic comets and a list of notable events. For collections lacking an up-to-date work on this subject.

PAUL, Henry E. Outer Space Photography: for the Amateur. 4th ed. 156p. Amphoto. $9.95. ISBN 0-8174-2407-5.
Amateur photographers interested in astronomy will find this book a "must" for their reading. It describes the techniques of using ordinary cameras to photograph a wide range of heavenly bodies—the moon, sun, stars, meteors, even satellites. Illustrated with dozens of superb photos, this edition has a new section on color photography. Highly recommended.

Biology

BAHR, Robert. The Virility Factor. 236p. Putnam. $7.95. ISBN 0-399-11808-X.
Details how the sex hormone testosterone and other hormones influence physiological characteristics of the human male, and helps to dispel a number of commonly held misconceptions about male virility. The role of hormones in psychological inadequacy is not overlooked; also covered is their influence on the development of secondary sex characteristics. Other factors that may influence virility, such as nutrition, drugs, stress, etc., are reviewed. A good bibliography supplements the text.

DAWKINS, Richard. The Selfish Gene. 224p. Oxford Univ. Pr. $8.95. ISBN 0-19-857519-X.
An ethnologist by profession, Dawkins examines the underlying factors responsible for animal behavior, and applies to them modern concepts of social game theory. He concludes that man, along with other species, is a "gene machine," blindly programmed to preserve his "selfish" genes, and that the concept of unselfish or altruistic behavior on the part of individual members of a species has no meaning; that such behavior is, in actuality, fundamentally selfish, since it promotes the preservation of the species. An excellent bibliography, much of it citing recent findings reported in journal literature, supports his ideas on the role of aggression between rivals for mates, on kin selection, and on the impact of cultural factors that may influence deviations by man from an instinctual response to the "selfish gene." Highly recommended.

FITE, Kathleen V., ed. The Amphibian Visual System. 374p. Academic Pr. $29.50. ISBN 0-12-257450-8.
A scholarly collection of papers in a field of multidisciplinary interest. Recent findings in the evolution, taxonomy, anatomy, and physiology of amphibian vision are reviewed by authorities in the specific fields. Amphibian vision as a model for developmental neurobiology is examined by one author. Good quality illustrations are an integral part of the contributed papers. For larger public science and university research collections.

McGRAW-HILL Dictionary of Life Sciences. 907p. + appendix. McGraw. $19.95. ISBN 0-07-045262-8.
An impressive compilation that most libraries will want to acquire for their reference collections, this dictionary is almost encyclopedic in nature. A wealth of information is included; although the entries in general are brief, they are, nonetheless, substantive. The 20,000 plus definitions were largely drawn from the multidisciplinary McGraw-Hill Dictionary of Scientific Technical Terms (1974). Highly recommended.

NATIONAL SYMPOSIUM on Genetics and the Law, Boston, 1975. Genetics and the Law. 532p. Plenum. $22.50. ISBN 0-306-30906-9.
An extensive collection of contributed papers, edited by Aubrey Milimsky and George J. Annas, covering such areas as the legal implications of applied genetics, rights of the fetus, the XYY controversy, the practice of sterilization of the mentally handicapped, and other ethical, moral, and legal considerations that face current genetic researchers and the medical professions. Extensive bibliographies direct the reader to further sources of information on an increasingly complex and sensitive topic.

NYHAN, William L. & Edward Edelson. The Heredity Factor: Genes, Chromosomes, and You. 416p. Grosset. $12.95. ISBN 0-448-12239-1.
The genetics of race-related disorders and other hereditary defects are explained with skill and concern in this volume. Nyhan, a member of the Department of Pediatrics, University of California, and Edelson, a veteran science writer, together outline present knowledge of, and technology to counteract or minimize the tragedies, of sickle-cell anemia, Tay-Sachs syndrome, cystic fibrosis, and other genetically determined diseases. The roles of birth control measures, prenatal diagnosis, and therapeutic abortions are covered; there is also a brief section on the history of medical genetics. Highly recommended for its competent handling of a subject of wide interest and concern.

RAND McNALLY Atlas of the Body and Mind. 208p. Rand McNally. $30. ISBN 0-528-83040-6.
A worthwhile, easy-to-understand examination of what makes us function biologically. Eleven sections, profusely and excellently illustrated in color, cover the various physiological, anatomical, and mental processes that govern our development, both as individuals and as the species Homo sapiens. The evolution of our species, our body defenses against disease and injury, intellectual processes, the role of genetic engineering, organ transplants, along with the prospect of significantly extending life, are all included, and all are well handled for the layman.

ROSENFELD, Albert. Prolongevity. 288p. Knopf. $8.95. ISBN 0-394-48929-2.
An excellent exploration of existing theories and latest research on the biological phenomenon of aging on the potential for significantly extending the span of life beyond its present limits. An accomplished science writer, Rosenfeld offers detailed and comprehensive insights into techniques of slowing the aging process, of tinkering with the biological clock that determines both individual and species aging rates, and of minimizing or even overcoming the physical degeneration that presently characterizes the aging process. The science of gerontology is still in its infancy, but its significance cannot be overlooked; recent government statistics show that by the year 2000, more than half the population of the U.S. will be 65 or older, a sobering fact to be faced by a society that is still highly youth-oriented. Recommended.

SIMPSON, George G. Penguins: Past and Present, Here and There. 176p. Yale Univ. Pr. $10. ISBN 0-300-01969-6.
A good introduction to the study of penguins, covering their early evolution, fossil remains discovered, behavior, habitat, etc. A number of illustrations, some in color, help the reader to distinguish between the 18 different species extant today. Despite its brevity, this volume offers much substantive information for the nature enthusiast.

WINTER, Ruth. The Smell Book: Scents, Sex, and Society. 176p. Lippincott. $7.95. ISBN 0-397-01163-6.
Our conflicting values—indeed, our not inconsiderable and anxious concern—about body odor, natural or cosmetically applied, are the subject of this book. The significance of scents in the animal kingdom is reviewed and their role in mating behavior explored among a wide range of species. Mankind exhibits attitudes toward natural body odors that vary significantly from culture to culture; and the scents themselves differ among the various human races. An interesting treatment of a subject not frequently covered in a format suitable for the general reader.

WORDEN, Frederic G. & others, eds. The Neurosciences: Paths of Discovery. 622p. M.I.T. Pr. $30. ISBN 0-262-23072-0; pap. $14.95. ISBN 0-262-734043-X.
A 70th birthday Festschrift in honor of F. O. Schmitt, internationally renowned biophysicist, this volume includes the writings of major figures in the field of neuroscience research. Among the 20-plus authors, we find such names as Luria, Granit, Eccles, and Broda, to list but a few; the papers narrate individual research efforts in the fields of membrane excitability, sensory and motor systems, brain currents, etc. Extensive references follow each paper and—rare but welcome—so do photographs of each of the authors. Name and subject indexes are included. A remarkable review of neuroscience research that layman should be able to follow without great difficulty.

Building

PAWLEY, Martin. Garbage Housing. 120p. Wiley/Halsted. 1975. $16.50. ISBN 0-470-67278-1.
Describes and illustrates how materials normally thought of as rubbish (bottles, concrete-filled metal containers, etc.) can be successfully used for the construction of housing. Graphically illustrated with photos of completed structures, most of which are located in the Pacific area and in South America. Also touches on the recycling of metal products for building purposes. For larger collections.

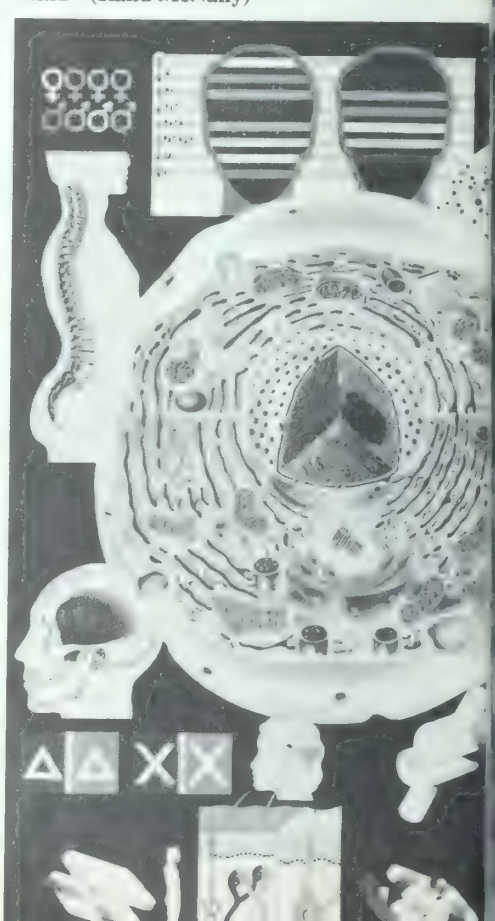
SKY, Alison & Michelle Stone, eds. Unbuilt America: Forgotten Architecture in the United States from Thomas Jefferson to the Space Age. 308p. McGraw. $14.95. ISBN 0-07-57760-9.
Consists of about 400 drawings of buildings which were never built in the U.S. for various reasons. Many weird, humorous and, at the same time, innovative buildings are shown. Some were ahead of their time and others outright monstrosities. Should interest a broad range of readers and is recommended for libraries of all sizes.

Computers & Data Processing, see also Mathematics

ENCYCLOPEDIA of Computer Science. ed. by Anthony Ralston & C. L. Meek. 1523p. Petrocelli/Charter. $60. ISBN 0-88405-321-0.
A comprehensive, authoritative reference

Lois Cohen illus.

Top: a black hole (right) drawing off material from a super giant star, from "Quasars, Pulsars and Black Holes" (Scribners); below: jacket illus. from "Atlas of the Body and Mind" (Rand McNally)



Top to bottom: the 'Hourglass' Nebula from: "Our Changing Universe: the New Astronomy" (Dutton); colorless crystals with yellow crystals of sulphur, from "Encyclopedia of Minerals and Gemstones" (Putnam); the Eagle Nest, a fantasy for California, from "Unbuilt America: Forgotten Architecture in the United States from Thomas Jefferson to the Space Age," Copyright © 1976 by Site, Inc. (McGraw) work, having signed articles. Has a good balance of theoretical and practical topics, numbering over 450 articles and with 1000 illustrations, tables, and charts. Ranges from programming to computer parts to computer applications in business, engineering, and medicine. Has a good index. Recommended for larger collections.

Joseph Wythe illus.

SIPPL, Charles J. & Robert Bullen. Computers at Large. 222p. Bobbs. $10. ISBN 0-672-51907-0.
Written by a well-known author in the computer field (Sippl) and a biomedical equipment specialist (Bullen), this is a nontechnical account of the effects of computers on society. Privacy of data, the development of robots, and computer "crimes" are some of the popular issues discussed, along with some of the more technical topics, such as medical and scientific applications of computers, computer-aided instruction, etc. The book is easily comprehensible to the layman and is widely recommended.

Earth Sciences

BOLT, Bruce A. Nuclear Explosions and Earthquakes: the Parted Veil. 309p. Freeman. $9.95. ISBN 0-7167-0276-2.
A broad presentation of a multifaceted problem—the practice of world-wide surveillance for earthquakes and for nuclear weapons testing. After describing the basics of the two phenomena and how seismographs work, the author covers test efforts of the various countries involved. Also reports on efforts to use nuclear devices for geophysical and mining projects. Includes a list of test results. For larger collections.

BULLARD, Fred Mason. Volcanoes of the Earth. rev. ed. 579p. Univ. of Texas Pr. $26.95. ISBN 0-292-78701-4.
Uses nontechnical language to describe the history, theory, and environmental effects of volcanoes. The author, a well-known volcanologist, has supplied a checklist of recent volcanic eruptions. A glossary and a 17-page bibliography are included. Has over 100 illustrations, including 24 color photos. For medium-sized and larger collections.

ENCYCLOPEDIA of Minerals and Gemstones. ed. by Michael O'Donoghue. 304p. Putnam. $22.50. ISBN 0-399-11753-9.
The text is about evenly divided into two parts—one being a discussion of basic topics, such as crystal chemistry, gem-cutting, and economic geology, and the other part, the descriptions of over 1000 minerals. Accompanying this useful text is a great abundance of outstandingly beautiful color photographs. Includes a bibliography of more advanced works. Highly recommended.

LANCASTER BROWN, Peter. Planet Earth in Color. 264p. Macmillan. $6.95. ISBN 0-02-567710-1.
Presents various ways of considering the earth—as an astronomical body, as the locale for forces working on it (earthquakes, tides, etc.), and as a habitat for man. The layman will have no difficulty following the text and will enjoy the more than 75 beautiful color photos. Should have a wide appeal, particularly in view of its attractive price.

MANTELL, Charles Letnam & A. M. Mantell. Our Fragile Water Planet: an Introduction to the Earth Sciences. 221p. Plenum. $19.50. ISBN 0-306-30877-0.
The layman will find this a very readable introduction to geology, meteorology and hydrology, presented in terms of topics such as earthquakes, geysers, cyclones and tides. Has strong emphasis on the environmental aspects of human life on this planet, including efforts at preserving our resources. Recommended in spite of its price.

PONTE, Lowell. The Cooling. 306p. Prentice-Hall. $8.95. ISBN 0-13-172312-X.
An enlightening and stimulating examination of the forces that act to change the climate of the earth. Ponte details how man has been able to deliberately manipulate climate, both in the U.S. and abroad; he advocates the international control of world climate modification, in view of the influence of climate on genetic mutation, and because of the potential for the rapid collapse of agricultural ecosystems that presently provide world food supplies. A section on options in a changing climate (he notes that a natural cooling of the earth began about 1945 and is continuing) is especially provocative. Recommended.

THE PLANET We Live On: an Illustrated Encyclopedia of the Earth Sciences. ed. by C. S. Hurlbut Jr. 527p. Abrams. $37.50. ISBN 0-8109-0415-2.
Has over 1800 entries covering all aspects of the earth sciences—geology, meteorology, oceanography, as well as lunar science. Includes 600 illustrations (drawings, photos and diagrams), of which 50 are in color. Useful lists are furnished, such as the highest mountain peaks, the longest rivers, the greatest waterfalls. A good reference source suitable for libraries of all sizes.

RITTMANN, A. & L. Rittmann. Volcanoes. 128p. Putnam. $12.95. ISBN 0-399-11725-3.
An attractive work produced by a father-daughter team of experienced volcanologists. They describe the origin, constituents, and environmental effects of volcanoes, impressively supported by spectacular color photos. Includes a list of details about international eruptions. Recommended for libraries of all sizes.

SCHNEIDER, Stephen H. The Genesis Strategy: Climate and Global Survival. 419p. Plenum. $14.95. ISBN 0-306-30904-1.
A detailed, carefully documented analysis of the impact of climate fluctuation on world food supplies, in language readily comprehensible to the layman. The author, a scientist with the National Center for Atmospheric Research, discusses the problems of agricultural development that can arise as the earth's changing climate gradually alters specific growing areas that we have come to rely upon as major sources of food for the world. Practical suggestions are offered to help minimize and overcome the potentially disastrous consequences of climate fluctuation. A valuable contribution to the literature.

SPARKS, John & Arthur Bourne. Planet Earth: Earth's Atmosphere and Crust. 288p. Doubleday. $14.95. ISBN 0-385-11344-7.
The U.S. edition of two works originally published in 1975 in Madrid and London. The first part, by Sparks, deals with the earth's atmosphere, with a chapter devoted to life in the open air. Meteorology is also discussed in general, as is flight by birds and insects. The second part, by Bourne, on the earth's crust, covers fossils, minerals, volcanoes, the formation of continents, etc. Enriched by superb color photos plus drawings.

Energy

BEHRMAN, Daniel. Solar Energy—the Awakening Science. 408p. Little. $12.50. ISBN 0-316-08771-8.
Provides a very detailed account of solar energy in a style the layman will find easy to follow. Comprehensive in scope and international in coverage of projects. Has many illustrations and a detailed index. Highly recommended for all libraries.

BERGER, John. Nuclear Power: the Unviable Option; a Critical Look at our Energy Alternatives. 384p. Ramparts, dist. by Monthly Review. $14. ISBN 0-87867-062-9; pap. $4.50. ISBN 0-87867-063-7.
Points out the negative side of nuclear power plants: the problems of safe disposal of wastes, possibilities of accidents, and the risks of theft of nuclear materials. The style is quite readable; nuclear power proponents will need convincing arguments to refute the author's statements and outlook. Calls for a cautious approach to nuclear development. For libraries of all sizes.

CARR, Donald Eaton. Energy and the Earth Machine. 275p. Norton. $10. ISBN 0-393-06407-7.
A clearly-written work which explains why the energy crisis exists and how it relates to many facets of modern life. Discusses the relationship of energy to food, transportation, conservation, etc. All types of fuels are covered: nuclear, petroleum, alcohols, wind, and solar. Our national laxness in regard to energy is discussed. Although understandable to the educated layman, it might appeal more to the noncasual reader, primarily because of the considerable detail the author has presented on each topic in his quest for thoroughness.

COMMONER, Barry. The Poverty of Power: Energy and the Economic Crisis. 314p. Knopf. $10. ISBN 0-394-40371-1.
A well-known author's account of the U.S. energy problem, covering the various types of energy sources available to us (fossil fuels, nuclear and solar energy, etc.), as well as our proverbial misuse of energy. Written in a style which will hold the interest of the layman, even in a chapter explaining the rudiments of thermodynamics. Recommended for libraries of all sizes.

DICERTO, Joseph J. The Electric Wishing Well: the Solution to the Energy Crisis. 384p. Macmillan. $12.95. ISBN 0-02-531320-7.
Emphasizes the importance of electricity as the main source of power for industrial and residential uses. Outlines ways in which electricity can be generated, with chapters on solar power, wind power, geothermal sources and nuclear power, with the controversies that have arisen over it. The all-encompassing bibliography is arranged not only by subject, but also by level of difficulty of the references. Well-illustrated.

DUMAS, Lloyd J. The Conservation Response: Strategies for the Design and Operation of Energy-using Systems. 289p. Heath/Lexington. $18. ISBN 0-669-08326-7.
Energy conservation in buildings, transportation and various industrial situations is the theme. Includes building design, heating and cooling systems, lighting, transit uses, industrial uses of wastes, the food industry, etc. Can be generally understood by the layman yet is not popular in style. Should be a useful addition to all but the smallest libraries.

KENWARD, Michael. Potential Energy: an Analysis of World Energy Technology. 227p. Cambridge Univ. Pr. $14.95. ISBN 0-521-21086-0; pap. $5.95, ISBN 0-521-29056-2.
A well-rounded account of the many types of energy sources available as alternatives to gas and oil. Chapters on wind power, coal, nuclear power, nuclear fusion, solar energy, geothermal energy (including tidal power), and the future outlook and future energy demands. For the medium and larger size libraries.

McGRAW-HILL Encyclopedia of Energy. ed. by Daniel N. Lapedes. 785p. McGraw. $24.50. ISBN 0-07-045261-X.
Presents 300 articles arranged in two main sections, Energy Perspectives and Energy Technology. Much of the material is taken from the multivolume science encyclopedia for which McGraw-Hill has justifiably received acclaim; the remainder of the articles have been specially written. Many illustrations, including drawings, and charts. At this price a good investment for libraries of all sizes in spite of the overlap with the larger encyclopedia.

NOVICK, Sheldon. The Electric War: the Fight Over Nuclear Power. 376p. Scribners. $12.50. ISBN 0-87156-148-4.
Relies chiefly on the interview technique to present detailed data on the pros and cons of nuclear power. Interviewees include many well-known figures, such as Ralph Nader and Barry Commoner, along with government officials, industrialists, workers in nuclear installations, etc. Chapters cover military aspects, nuclear power plants, future outlook, etc. Recommended for medium and large size libraries.

TORREY, Volta. Wind Catchers: American Windmills of Yesterday and Tomorrow. 226p. Stephen Greene. $12.95. ISBN 0-8289-0292-5.
A timely book, giving descriptions of dozens of windmills throughout the U.S. plus a review of the development of the device. Includes government-sponsored project descriptions. Has an ample number of photos. Recommended for libraries of all sizes.

Engineering (General), see also Technology

FLORMAN, Samuel C. The Existential Pleasures of Engineering. 160p. St. Martin's. $7.95. LC 75-9480.
A thoughtful work in which the author, himself an engineer, defends the profession of engineering. Draws on a wide range of writing from history and literature to build his case. A well-written history and philosophy of engineering recommended for larger collections.

Environmental Studies

BUGLIARELLO, George & others. The Impact of Noise Pollution. 461p. Pergamon. $20.50. ISBN 0-08-018166-X.
A thorough review of the problems posed by noise pollution—economic, biological, and technological. The writers examine the wide range of noise sources—occupational, aircraft, motor vehicle, leisure activity gadgets—and show how they can induce stress, fatigue, loss of hearing, and other physiological and psychological reactions in man; these, in turn, result in reduced capacity to function, increased absenteeism on the job, etc. They assert that technology is presently available to achieve a reduction in noise pollution, especially in the field of transportation. A closing section on the socio-technological problems of noise is excellent. Given the growing national and local attention being focused on this issue, most libraries will want to add this well written contribution to their collections. Highly recommended.

KAHN, Herman & others. The Next 200 Years: a Scenario for America and the World. 241p. Morrow. pap. $3.95. ISBN 0-688-08029-4.
A wide-ranging, thought-provoking book by a distinguished author, director of the Hudson Institute. Involves both economics and engineering in predicting what the next two centuries hold for us in the way of energy sources, environmental problems, availability of minerals, the biosphere, etc. For the serious reader, although no special background is required to comprehend its points.

MONTAGUE, Katherine & Peter Montague. No World Without End: The New Threats to our Biosphere. 316p. Putnam. $10. ISBN 0-399-11500-5.
An extensive bibliography attests to the careful research undertaken by the writers as they document the growing "chemicalization" of the world. They claim that improvements in the technology of extracting metals from the earth has led to the release of significant amounts of toxic metals into the biosphere, especially cadmium, mercury, and lead. The results of this environmental poisoning are graphically presented through photographs of victims of the Minimata lead poisoning tragedy. Tables and charts support the authors' contention that the release of toxic substances into the biosphere is increasing; they offer recommendations for changes in technological and agricultural practices to minimize the potential for further disaster.

PERELMAN, Lewis J. The Global Mind: Beyond the Limits to Growth. 299p. Mason/Charter. $15. ISBN 0-88405-124-2.
Concentrates on the ecological crisis and its relation to the growth of our society. Sees problems as resulting from faulty thinking and proposes a new type of education, emphasizing ecology. The outline of the proposed schooling is given. For larger collections.

SHEAHAN, Richard T. Fueling the Future: an Environmental and Energy Primer. 127p. St. Martin's. $7.95. LC 75-26197.
Concerned with both energy utilization and environmental problems. Part 1 covers a brief account of the energy sources available: nuclear, fossil fuels, solar, wind, hydrogen, etc. Part 2 covers the significance of air pollution, water pollution, and solid wastes. Part 3 is devoted to the future outlook, plus a small bibliography of suggested readings. Has many useful drawings of power plants, windmills, waste treatment plants, etc. A useful book for libraries of all sizes.

Health Sciences

DUFFY, John. The Healers: the Rise of the Medical Establishment. 372p. McGraw. $12.50. ISBN 0-07-018020-2.
An in-depth, scholarly treatise on the history of the medical profession in America. The author, professor of history at the University of Maryland, examines Indian remedies, 17th- and 18th-Century colonial medicine, the later rise of folk medicines, including homeopathy. The emergence of organized public health and the comparatively recent entrance of women and other minorities into the medical profession are also included. Footnotes and references are ample, but we puzzled over the remarkable absence of illustrations that could have contributed substantially to the text. Nevertheless, highly recommended.

GRINSPOON, Lester & James Bakalar. Cocaine. 308p. Basic Bks. $15. ISBN 0-465-01189-6.
At close to $2000 for one well diluted ounce, cocaine is one of the most expensive and best known of the illicit drugs in use today, and has acquired a social status all its own, claim the writers. It has also become the subject of considerable controversy in efforts to define guidelines for a national drug policy. The authors examine the pharmacology and the history of the use of cocaine since the time of the Incan civilization, through its fashionable and accepted use in the 19th Century both here and in Europe, up to present time. More provocative and useful,

Orion Press photo

Top to bottom: gas and flames from Mt. Asamas, Japan, from "Volcanoes" (Putnam); a protective costume from pestilence, illustrated in "Epidemics" (Scribners); Glossy Ibises, from "A Guide to Bird-Watching in Europe" (Scribners) however, is their discussion of the role of cocaine in what they have identified as the disease-crime syndrome. Specifically, they are concerned with the confusion and contradictions that characterize existing drug laws, which have led to the labelling of a drug user as both criminal and diseased. A well researched book that deserves a wide audience.

HENDIN, David. The Life Givers. 260p. Morrow. $8.95. ISBN 0-688-03035-1.
Presents in an easy-to-read style significant discoveries of six 20th Century medical researchers, and chronicles their lengthy, often frustrating efforts to achieve their objectives. Records Nathan Kline's work in the area of psychopharmacology, John Rock's contribution to the development of The Pill, Irving Cooper's breakthrough in brain-freezing techniques, Howard Rusk's work in the rehabilitation of the handicapped, the development of surgical techniques for open heart surgery by Walter Lillehei, and Jonas Salk's polio vaccine. The author is a medical reporter who knows how to translate the language of science for the layman's ready enjoyment.

ILLICH, Ivan. Medical Nemesis: the Expropriation of Health. 288p. Pantheon. $8.95. ISBN 0-394-40225-1.
Attacks the myths concerning modern medical practices which, Illich claims, the profession has drawn around itself to preserve the awe with which it is treated by the lay public. The writer feels that medical science has not justified the faith placed in it by society, and documents the growing number of cases of iatrogenesis: illnesses caused by doctors themselves in the treatment of patients. He decries the extent to which health care has become a political issue, feeling that it has had a detrimental effect on individual well being. Back to basics, including patient self-help and far less utilization of drugs by clinicians are advocated. Controversial and sure to be of interest.

MARKS, Geoffrey & William K. Beatty. Epidemics. 323p. Scribners. $9.95. ISBN 0-684-14568-5.
A highly readable account of epidemics, from ancient times to "Influenza—modern style" (Chapter 17). The authors reveal outbreaks of cholera, the Plague of Justinian (known later and more familiarly as bubonic plague), polio, dancing mania, and other somatic and psychic phenomena that recurred over the centuries, and frequently found their way into the literature of the period. Well selected contemporary illustrations contribute much to the book's appeal, and the extensive bibliography and reference sections attest to the writers' careful research. Swine flu or no, this book should enjoy a wide audience.

VEATCH, Robert M. Death, Dying, and the Biological Revolution. 323p. Yale Univ. Pr. $12.95. ISBN 0-300-01949-1.
The subtitle, "our last quest for responsibility," is well chosen as a distinguished expert guides the reader through the complex moral, ethical, and legal problems confronting us as medical technology continues to push back the curtain of death. Among his other credits, Veatch at one time held the position of director of the Program on Medical Ethics at the Columbia College of Physicians and Surgeons; his concern in this volume is very much with helping the layman consider the scope of such sensitive issues as defining death, killing vs. allowing to die, the right to refuse treatment for children and for competent and incompetent adults (who exercises that right?), telling terminally ill patients the facts about their condition. He even raises the question, "Is death moral?" An excellent, timely selection most libraries will want to consider.

WILSON, David. In Search of Penicillin. 296p. Knopf. $10. ISBN 0-394-40108-5.
Describes the conditions and circumstances under which Alexander Fleming discovered the first antibiotic in 1928. Subsequent research efforts to develop and synthesize penicillin, and to identify the unusual structural features of the penicillin molecule are related in a suspenseful, exciting style. Recommended.

Mathematics, see also Computer & Data Processing

BROOKS, Stewart M. Going Metric. 123p. Barnes. $6.95. ISBN 0-498-01702-8.
This slim book includes a brief history of the development of our system of measurements; the remainder is devoted to the history and meaning of important features of the metric system. Several conversion tables plus an 11-page glossary and a selected bibliography. Recommended for libraries of all sizes.

MULLISH, Henry. The Complete Pocket Calculator Handbook. 309p. Collier. $9.75; pap. $3.95. ISBN 0-02-080830-5.
Written for the calculator owner who wants to develop more skill such as finding a cube root or handling more common problems. Has chapters on general usage, one on calculator games, and three chapters on the special features of particular commercial models. The latter section may become outdated as new models appear, but the more general material is useful. Should be a popular item in most libraries, although the paperback version may be adequate.

SCHWOB, Pierre R. How To Use Pocket Calculators. 156p. Petrocelli/Charter. $9.95.
Written for the layman without any special knowledge of mathematics or algebra. However, is designed for calculators having four functions, floating decimal point, automatic constant, and algebraic logic. Reviews basic concepts, then progresses to more complicated applications like probability, linear regression, etc. Includes simple business uses, like computing percentages. Features a step-by-step method for each computation illustrated. Recommended for all libraries.

Natural History

BORGESE, Elisabeth Mann. The Drama of the Oceans. 258p. Abrams. $25. ISBN 0-8109-0337-7.
A seasoned writer, Borgese explores the positive and negative influences that determine the viability and vitality of ocean life. Man's intrusion on the sea, as he explores for minerals, drills for oil, harvests its fishes and mammals, dumps into it thousands of tons of waste material, develops its shorelines, and sails its surface, are thoughtfully reviewed. Excellent color illustrations abound.

FERGUSON-LEES, James & others, eds. A Guide to Bird-Watching in Europe. 335p. Scribners. $9.95. ISBN 0-684-14475-1.
Not a field guide to identifying birds, but a geographical guide to the 432 known species of birds that frequent Europe. An excellent companion to Roger Tory Peterson's A Field Guide to the Birds of Britain and Europe, 1974, it lists national reserves for birds, describes the rarity or frequency and location of bird species, including seasonal ranges. Ornithology enthusiasts will enjoy this book.

RATKEVICH, Ronald P. Dinosaurs of the Southwest. 115p. Univ. of New Mexico Pr. $8.95. ISBN 0-8263-0405-2; pap. $3.95, ISBN 0-8263-0406-0.
Paleontologists have turned in recent years

Left to right: the proposed ship Obelix, from "Encyclopedia of Transportation" (Rand McNally); crystals of aragonite coat stalactites in Moulis cave, France, from "The World of Caves" (Putnam); two contrasting cycles, (top) the Areil Square Four, 1949 and the Megola, 1922, from "The Classic Motorcycles" (Dutton) with increasing interest to the southwestern United States to collect and study the fossil remains of dinosaur species. Here some new theories are offered concerning the giant reptiles' anatomy and appearance that should interest many amateur dinosaur enthusiasts. The style is pleasantly light and is supplemented by numerous illustrations.

STOKES, Donald W. A Guide to Nature in Winter. 374p. Little. $8.95. ISBN 0-316-81720-1.
Actually eight separate field guides in one, this handy volume takes the nature enthusiast on a trip through the winter wilderness of the northeastern and north central U.S. with skill and scholarship, enabling one to identify dormant and evergreen trees and shrubs, remnants of last summer's weeds and other herbaceous plant species, mushrooms, evidence of insect activity (galls, egg nests, etc.), animal tracks; even the wonder of snow crystal patterns is not overlooked. Each section has its own general introductory information, keys to help identify different members of the group covered, and specific descriptions. Pen and ink drawings by the author are very helpful, and lend charm to the volume. An excellent addition to a subject area that has been largely neglected.

WALTHAM, A. C. The World of Caves. 128p. Putnam. $12.95. ISBN 0-399-11733-4.
Lavishly illustrated in color, and informal in style, this volume should have considerable appeal. The author takes the reader on an international exploration of caves, explains their formation and formations, their utilization by man and animal over thousands of years as sources of shelter, storage, and fertilizer (bat guano). The plant and animal life that have adapted themselves to the unique cave habitat are discussed. A good choice for general collections.

Physics

BLUMBERG, Stanley A. & Gwinn Owens. Energy and Conflict: the Life and Times of Edward Teller. 492p. Putnam. $9.95. ISBN 0-399-1151-X.
A detailed biography of a controversial yet renowned nuclear physicist. The authors had access to the papers of Teller, who has been called "the father of the hydrogen bomb." He has been involved in many important projects and decisions regarding U.S. military uses of nuclear weapons, as well as the controversy over the loyalty of Robert Oppenheimer. The result is a work of major importance in understanding the times and people concerned with a subject of international significance. For medium-sized and larger collections.

Plant Sciences

EVANS, Charles M. New Plants from Old: Pruning and Propagating for the Indoor Gardener. 128p. Random. $8.95. ISBN 0-394-49689-2; pap. $4.95, ISBN 0-394-73116-6.
This book should be of considerable use to those interested in houseplant culture. Most plant care books advise "pinch back the growing tips to promote bushiness," and that's about all the space given to pruning practices. Not so in this practical, simple guide to propagating new plants from parts pruned from the mature plants. Directions for root pruning, training for topiary, pruning for most effective appearance and good growth are accompanied by easy to follow diagrams.

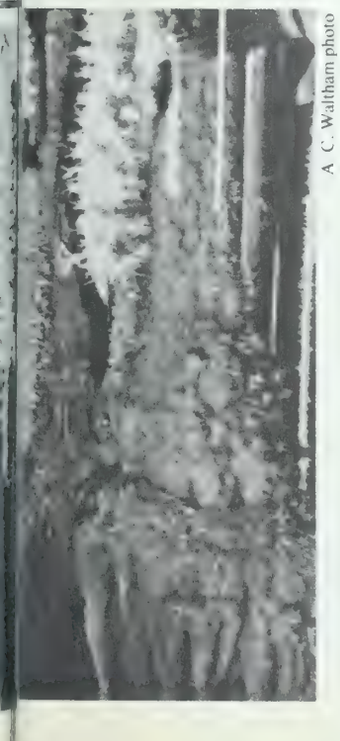
HEISER, Charles B., Jr. The Sunflower. 198p. Univ. of Oklahoma Pr. $10.95. ISBN 0-8061-1229-8.
A delightful treatise that offers a rare combination of botanical scholarship and humanistic appreciation for a familiar plant species. Examines the sunflower's importance economically—as a food and oil crop, as a fuel—and as an object of admiration by such literary giants as Thomas Moore, William Blake, and Percy B. Shelley, among others. The author chronicles the sunflower's archeological significance, its use among American Indians, its subsequent spread to Europe, and describes the various forms in which members of the genus Helianthus are known today. H. tuberosus, the Jerusalem artichoke, an often overlooked gastronomic delicacy, comes in for its own fair share of attention. The illustrations are generally of a high quality, and relate well to the text. This is a substantive work that does not sacrifice sound botany for ease of reading.

LEIGHTON, Ann. American Gardens in the Eighteenth Century: "For Use or For Delight." 448p. Houghton. $17.50. ISBN 0-395-24764-0.
An appropriate contribution to our Bicentennial celebration, this volume examines the plant species that contributed substantially to the growth and prosperity of 18th Century America. The author writes about plants used for food, for medicine, and for fancy, and has carefully selected a wide range of excellent contemporary illustrations representative of colonial horticultural practices. Much of the source material has been taken from diaries, account books, letters, etc., of the period, a testimony to the scholarship lavished on this work. An extensive list of the plants most frequently cultivated at that time constitutes a good portion of the volume. This is an excellent choice for all collections.

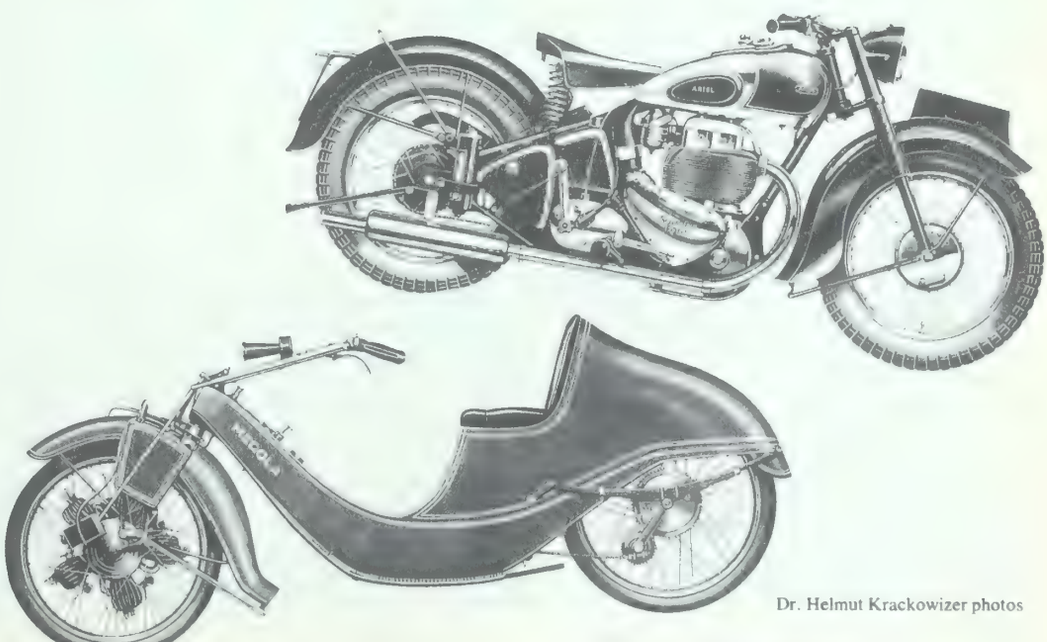
VOIGT, William, Jr. Public Grazing Lands: Use and Misuse by Industry and Government. 359p. Rutgers Univ. Pr. $19.95. ISBN 0-8135-0819-3.
Chronicles the attempts, all too frequently successful, at exploitation of 200 million acres of federal range by such interest groups as western stockmen and the lumber industry. Examines the "Great Land Grab" of the 1940's, the heyday of the Old West, the history of the Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management in monitoring use, and shows how much of the public grazing lands were cheap resources that guaranteed profitable results for a few at the expense of many. Much of the author's source material consists of Congressional hearing records and state and local government documents, thereby offering fresh insights into a significant environmental issue.

Psychology

ARIETI, Silvano. Creativity: the Magic Synthesis. 448p. Basic Bks. $15.95. ISBN 0-465-01443-7.
This established authority in the field of psychiatry examines the concept of creativity as expressed through its psychological components; as it is related to intelligence; and how it contributes to our culture through art, literature, science, and religion. He defines creativity as a process of enlarging the human experience in a positive way, to distinguish it from the concepts of originality or spontaneity. The chapters on imagery, cognition, the neurology of creativity, the creative personality, and the relationship between creativity and the socio-cultural environment are especially valuable. Well indexed, with an impressive bibliography, this book belongs in all collections.



A. C. Waltham photo



Dr. Helmut Krackowizer photos

BETTELHEIM, Bruno. The Uses of Enchantment: the Meaning and Importance of Fairy Tales. 328p. Knopf. $12.50. ISBN 0-394-49771-6.

The author, a professor of psychology and psychiatry of international repute on the faculty of the University of Chicago, examines the impact and value of fairy tales on the emotional development of children. He hypothesizes that the traditional, i.e. "folk," stories carried down over the centuries enable children to identify inner conflicts common to human beings, and help them to cope with the realities of death, evil, anxiety, etc., by offering appropriate solutions to predicaments and problems as faced by the personalities that people these stories. Viewed in this way, they play a far more useful role than do the "safe" stories of modern children's literature. This is one of the most thorough and enlightening treatises on fairy tales, and certain to become a classic. Highly recommended for all public library collections and appropriate academic subject specialties.

FENWICK, Sheridan. Getting It: the Psychology of EST. 191p. Lippincott. $7.95. ISBN 0-397-01170-9.

A plethora of newspaper and magazine reports, along with books written by graduates of EST (Erhard Seminar Training), have attemped to explain the phenomenon of this self-help program, but none has done it as well or as objectively as this writer. A clinical psychologist by training, and a member of the Psychology Department of Columbia University, the author participated in a four-day EST program to examine personally the appeal and support it has earned to date among several thousand graduates. The training itself (authoritarian in nature), the subsequent psychological effects, both positive and potentially negative, are objectively presented. Fenwick concludes that "there's something in EST for everyone," offering us a professional look at what that something is. Highly recommended.

FINCHER, Jack. Human Intelligence. 512p. Putnam. $12.95. ISBN 0-399-11487-4.

A comprehensive examination of what is included under the umbrella of intelligence, written in a style well suited to general audiences. Discusses the evolution of intelligence, language development, early I.Q. testing theories, the nature-nurture controversy, as well as male vs. female biases and differences in mental processes. The unique roles played by the right and left hemispheres of the brain in these processes are examined in depth, with a thoughtful analysis of the potential for individual differences in achievement and ability. The dilemma of attempting to categorize and isolate key features as measures of intelligence while delegating to others a lesser value is discussed here, and helps to shed some light on a topic of considerable concern and confusion in recent years. The extensive bibliography draws upon much data from the recent journal literature.

FORER, Lucille K. The Birth-order Factor. 298p. McKay. $9.95. ISBN 0-679-50510-5.

Examines the impact of birth-order on personality patterns, career choice, marriage and parenthood, as well as personal achievement. While expressing the belief that no particular place in the family birth-order is best ("they are simply different"), the author explores differences among the various groups (oldest, youngest, middle children) and how their chronological niche in the family structure has shaped their lives, with interesting examples of the birth-order factor influencing subsequent political, economic, and business objectives, among others. The trend toward significantly smaller families, resulting more and more frequently in the "only child" situation, is examined in considerable detail, with a view toward a potentially significant influence on society in general, given the role that birth order seems to play in the development of the individual.

LEWIS, Michael, ed. Origins of Intelligence: Infancy and Early Childhood. 414p. Plenum. $17.50.

A collection of 13 papers that examine the early behavior of infants and young children. Discusses problems of establishing definitions of intelligence; validity of traditional intelligence scales for the very young as measures of later I.Q.; tests recently developed to assess Piagetian sensorimotor intelligence; the relationship between cognitive and emotional development. A scholarly, in-depth work of broad interest.

WALLACH, Hans. On Perception. 490p. Quadrangle/New York Times Bk Co. $15. ISBN 0-8129-0480-X.

A collection of Wallach's most noteworthy papers in the field of perception, selected on the basis of "current theoretical interest." In addition to articles on visual constancy, perceived identity, perceptual learning, visual motion perception, and related questions of memory functions, a revision of Wallach's early work on neutral color is included. A must for large public and university research collections.

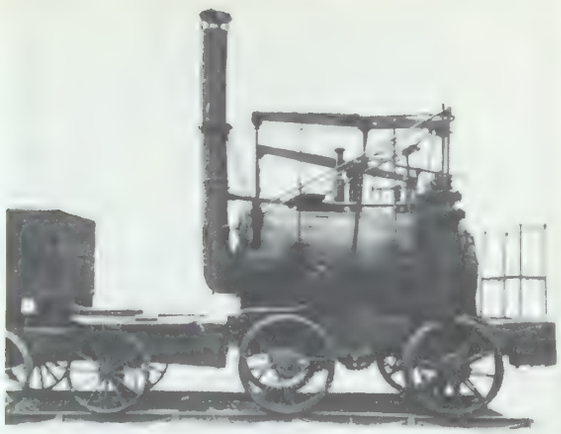
Science (General)

FORD, Brian J. Microbe Power: Tomorrow's Revolution. 181p. Stein & Day. $10. ISBN 0-8128-1936-5.

The author's scholarly familiarity with his subject is evident throughout this exploration of the world and value of single-celled organisms in a wide range of natural and man-made environments. He reviews for the layman the various types of microbes, including algae, protozoa, fungi, bacteria, and viruses, and describes in detail the chemistry of the alteration of materials by microbial action. In food production, pollution control, and the cosmetic industry, microbes already contribute substantially to our utilization of natural resources. Ford argues that we can and should harness "microbe power" to a much larger degree, to effect a greater economy of energy use, increased food production, and a better world environment. The line drawings accompanying the text are very good. We puzzled over the lack of an index, an unfortunate omission in a work of this caliber. Nonetheless, a book of wide interest.

HIXSON, Joseph. The Patchwork Mouse. 240p. Anchor: Doubleday. $7.95. ISBN 0-385-02852-0.

An engrossing exposé of a scientist's alleged falsification of experimental data to substantiate his work in tissue transplant research. More than that, however, the author documents the frantic scramble among institutions across the country to find a cure for cancer, a scramble that transcends scientific, political, and economic boundaries of common sense in search of funds to support our national "war on cancer." The questionable expenditure of $1.7 billion in this war, which has produced to date "patchwork" results, is a subject of concern to the writer, a professional medical reporter, especially in light of a growing consensus with the scientific community itself that The Cure may not exist at all, or, at best, will elude us for some time, irrespective of the amount of funds and manpower committed to its discovery.



Far left, top: the first typist, from "Everyday Inventions" (Taplinger); bottom & left center: a 1903 Fiat and a section of the 1902 Clarkston steam car engine, both from "Bosch Book of the Motor Car—Its Evolution and Engineering Development" (St. Martin's); center: two deluxe car accessories, Eagle on a Globe and Lalique's Spirit of the Wind encase the Olga, a prototype for the R-type Continental, from "Automobile Quarterly's Great Cars & Grand Marques" (Dutton); right: the 1813 steam locomotive Puffing Billy, from "The Great Inventions" (Ridge Pr./Playboy Pr.)

KOHLSTEDT, Sally. The Formation of the American Scientific Community. 264p. Univ. of Illinois Pr. $10.95. ISBN 0-252-00419-1.
A thoroughly researched study of the beginnings of organized science in America, dealing specifically with the formative years of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in the middle of the last century. Its early dependence on the British Association for the Advancement of Science as a model, especially in the drafting of its constitution; the soon recognized difficulties in adapting the new policies to American conditions; the internal power conflicts as various areas of scientific research sought to gain dominance and as noneastern centers of scientific activity sought a more equitable share of the leadership roles, are all carefully recorded. With the establishment of the National Academy of Sciences in 1863, the viability of the AAAS seemed in doubt for some time, until the need for a broadly-based constituency of scientists became finally and firmly evident. Kohlstedt has helped to open the door to an examination of post-Civil War science in America in a style that offers much for the general reader. Illustrations have been selected with obvious care. Recommended.

MAHONEY, Michael. Scientist as Subject: the Psychological Imperative. 249p. Ballinger: Lippincott. $13.50. ISBN 0-88410-505-9.
The author, a professor of psychology at the University of Pennsylvania and a frequent contributor to psychological literature, attempts to dispel the "storybook" image of the scientist. Problems encountered in seeking and providing quality graduate training, in publishing research results, in colleague relationships and competition, and in institutional biases are presented in an interesting fashion. One of the better books to explain the sociology of the scientist to the interested layman. References to the journal literature are numerous. Kudos to the publisher for printing this book on recycled paper!

THE MEDIEVAL Health Handbook: Tacuinum Sanitatis. ed. by Luisa Cogliati Arano. 153p. Braziller. $25. ISBN 0-8076-080-4.
A visually stunning book that will be of interest to art historians as much as to scholars of medieval medicine. First published in Italy and excellently translated, this collection of medieval manuscript illustrations depicts the state of medicine of the time. The numerous color reproductions are magnificent; the text accompanying these as well as others in black and white describe contemporary beliefs concerning the value to health, the dangers, effects, and nature of use of the herbs, flowers, fruits, foodstuffs, even the seasons and climate. A scholarly introduction describes the provenance and significance of the numerous manuscripts included in this volume. A beautiful book!

VAN NOSTRAND'S Scientific Encyclopedia. 5th ed. ed. by D. M. Considine. 2370p. Van Nostrand Reinhold. $67.50. ISBN 0-442-21629-7.
A welcome updating of a well-known encyclopedia covering all of science and technology. An extensive revision, with more than 80 percent of text and illustrations (of which there are 2500) changed and updated. More cross references have been added. For libraries of all sizes, even if they have other science encyclopedias.

Technology, see also Engineering

GIES, Joseph & Frances Gies. The Ingenious Yankees. 352p. Crowell. $12.95. ISBN 0-690-01150-4.
A timely publication for the Bicentennial year, featuring as it does a history of American inventions from 1776 to 1876. Covers a variety of topics, ranging from the typewriter to the cotton gin to Roebling's bridges. Well-researched yet written in a style that will interest the average reader. Recommended for libraries of all sizes.

HOOPER, Meredith. Everyday Inventions. 128p. Taplinger. $7.95. ISBN 0-8008-2544-6.
Should go a long way to answer reference questions about the origin of many ordinary items of daily life, such as zippers, umbrellas, false teeth, penicillin, etc. Over 30 common items are described and illustrated with photographs and drawings, even cartoons. Should be popular in libraries serving high school and intermediate grade students.

STEIN, Ralph. The Great Inventions. 252p. Ridge Pr. Bk., pub. by Playboy; dist. by S. & S. $24.95. ISBN 0-87223-444-4.
Devotes up to 40 pages in separate chapters to discuss the discovery and development of inventions such as electricity, steam power, locomotives, photography, etc. Has many illustrations, some in color. Should provide good reference material for high school students and curious adults.

Transportation

AUTOMOBILE Quarterly's Great Cars and Grand Marques. ed. by Beverly R. Kimes. 239p. Automotive Quarterly Pubs., dist. by Dutton. $29.50. ISBN 0-525-11612-5.
An impressive oversized, beautifully-illustrated description of famous cars, including experimental models, racers, and standard passenger cars. While the text is more than adequate, giving technical details and manufacturing history, the illustrations are outstanding: over 300 plates and drawings, all in color. Emphasizes some of the top names, such as the Dusenberg, as well as lesser-known models (the Rickenbacker). Would have profited from an index.

BOSCH Book of the Motor Car—Its Evolution and Engineering Development. ed. by John Day. 256p. St. Martin's. $15. LC 75-39516.
Originally published in Britain in 1975, this book gives detailed technical descriptions of the use and nature of the many parts of cars, ranging from the simple inflation valves for "tyres" to the complications of the transmission, steering systems, and chassis construction. This oversize book is well-illustrated with photos and drawings, many in color. Uses European cars to illustrate parts, giving the historical development of each item described.

LOUIS, Harry & Bob Currie, eds. The Classic Motorcycles. 125p. Dutton. $29.95. ISBN 0-525-08203-4.
Motorcycle buffs interested in the development of models from 1869 to date should be attracted to this book. Technical specifications are given for most models. Has numerous photos, many in color. Over 30 models are described. For larger collections.

RAND McNALLY Encyclopedia of Transportation. 256p. Rand McNally. $16.95. ISBN 0-528-81050-2.
High school students should find this oversized, well-illustrated reference work very appealing and useful. It covers all types of transportation, ranging from the DC-3 to space shuttle to James Watt. The short articles are adequate, with many cross references. Attractively priced.

BUSINESS BOOKS of 1976

by Susan DiMattia

THE LIST of recommended business books of 1976 is the work of a composite brain. In compiling the list, the collections of a medium size and a large public library, two special libraries, and a major university business school library were consulted. Thanks for service and suggestions go to the directors and reference staffs of all five libraries. Every book on the selected list which follows was in at least two of the five collections and has been examined by me. Questionnaires were sent to 18 public, college, and university business libraries soliciting acquisitions lists and recommendations. Several libraries sent lists of their most heavily reserved books or of the books which their reference people have found most useful. Eight of the libraries prepare regular acquisitions lists or business newsletters which they will send to anyone who is interested in keeping abreast of the titles and subjects being widely acquired and heavily used. A list including address, title, frequency, and cost (if any) for these eight publications follows this introduction.

The selection of 50-60 titles from an eligible field of over 1000 titles of necessity involves subjectivity. Gearing the list to medium and large public libraries and nonspecialist college collections meant that the very popular subjects (selling your crafts, how much allowance should Johnny get, garage sale finance simplified, etc.) were automatically eliminated. I believe librarians are looking for assistance in the more specialized areas where they may have limited expertise. Textbook approaches to business subjects (basic retailing, modern marketing, contemporary accounting) are usually adequately represented in library collections, or can be updated by checking for new editions from popular writers or respected publishers. Therefore, the whole textbook category has been ignored. Reprints and new editions were excluded because of the Herculean effort which would be needed to examine and compare them to existing materials. John Kenneth Galbraith has just published the third edition of The Affluent Society (Houghton, $10) which, as a classic, should be updated in all collections. If you don't already have Wasserman's Encyclopedia of Business Information Sources, the third edition is now available from Gale for $65. Arno Press has a series of 55 reprints called "Getting and Spending: the Consumer's Dilemma" ($1195). Anyone building a retrospective economics collection should consider all or part of the series; 100,000,000 Guinea Pigs, The Economic Effects of Advertising, and The Public Accepts are just three of the classic titles in the series.

Susan DiMattia, who reviews business and economics books for LJ, is a former bank librarian, business reference specialist, and currently works as a special library consultant

The inclusion of new subjects or unique approaches to old subjects has been of prime concern in selecting this list. Public distrust of, and cynicism toward, government and business is exemplified by the large number of exposés or recommendations for changes in our economic or legal systems. Futurism and economic implications of the energy crises are continuing concerns. Individual worth and well-being are stressed in books dealing with job satisfaction and enrichment. With the current unemployment market, there are never enough good books on job hunting and career planning. Investments and personal money management are always heavily used subjects. Women's economic concerns are still being treated in detail. Escapism continues to come in the form of studies of wealth and success.

A major problem in compiling a list of this sort is availability of titles. Books are either not available (checked out or not in the collection) or are still on order if they were published late in the year. Some titles which look promising but which were unavailable to me are:

CLAY, William C., Jr. The Dow Jones-Irwin Guide to Estate Planning. Dow Jones. $9.95.

DIRECTORY of Internships, Work Experience Programs and On-the-Job Training Opportunities. Ready Reference Pr., Thousand Oaks, Calif. $45.

GATES, Theodore R. & Fabian Linden. Production Costs Here and Abroad: a Comparative Study of the Experience of American Manufacturers. Arno. $12.

KIRK, John. Incorporating Your Business. TPR Publishing, Scarsdale, N.Y. $12.95.

MITCHELL, Ewan. The Employers Guide to the Law on Employment Protection, Sex and Race Discrimination. Cahners. $36.

SHERWOOD, Hugh C. How Corporate and Municipal Debt is Rated: Inside Look at Standard and Poor's Rating System. Wiley. $18.95.

WILSON, Wesley M. Know Your Job Rights. Dow Jones-Irwin. $8.95.

If your favorite title does not appear on the selected list, if you find a title listed which you think is the worst thing published in its field in the last five years, or if you have suggestions which will make the annual list more meaningful and useful, tell LJ!

Brown Brothers photo

Opposite page, l.-r.: Alejandro Zaffaroni and Ned Heizer, two of "The Innovation Millionaires" (Scribners). This page, top to bottom: the old and the new, as seen in "200 Years of Graphic Art" (Braziller); the grand staircase in Mrs. Astor's mansion, from "The Very Rich" (Crown)

Business Library Newsletters

BITS (Business, Industry, Technology Service). 10/year. free. Dayton & Montgomery County Public Library, 215 E. Third St., Dayton, Ohio 45402.

Books for Business. q. single subject each issue. free. Minneapolis Public Library, Business and Science Department, 300 Nicollet Mall, Minneapolis, Minn. 55401.

Business Information for Dallas. bi-m. single subject each issue. free. Dallas Public Library, Business and Technology Division, 1954 Commerce St., Dallas, Tex. 75201.

Business Literature. 10 numbers/year. single subject each issue. $3. Selected List of Acquisitions. m. free. Business Library of the Public Library, 34 Commerce Street, Newark, N.J. 07102.

For Your Information. 9/year. single subject each issue. free. St. Paul Public Library, Science and Industry Room, 90 W. Fourth Street, Saint Paul, Minn. 55102.

Information Bulletin. mo. single subject each issue. free. Omaha Public Library, Business-Industrial Department, 19th and Harney Streets, Omaha, Neb. 68102.

New Books in Business and Economics. 10/year. $5.40. Baker Library, Harvard Business School, Soldiers Field, Boston, Mass. 02163.

Selected List of New Titles. mo. free. Metropolitan Toronto Library Board, Business Library, 229 College St., Toronto, Ont. M5T 1R4.

Reference

CROWLEY, Ellen T. Trade Names Dictionary: a Guide to Trade Names, Brand Names, Product Names, Coined Names, Model Names, and Design Names, with Addresses of their Manufacturers, Importers, Marketers, or Distributors. 2 vols. Gale. 666p. LC 75-33346. ISBN 0-8103-0692-1. $65.

Approximately 106,000 entries taken from over 35 sources, this dictionary emphasizes items of consumer interest and therefore will be an invaluable reference tool.

DANIELLS, Lorna. Business Information Sources. Univ. of California Pr. 439p. index. LC 74-3051. ISBN 0-520-02946-1. $14.95.

A must for any library which has occasion to answer reference questions about companies or business in general. Detailed index, basic book shelf, and a chapter of timesaving sources are excellent. This, Grant's Directory of Business and Financial Services, Devers' Guide to Special Issues and Indexes of Periodicals, and Wasserman's Encyclopedia of Business Information Sources are four required texts for anyone doing source selection and/or business reference.

DEVERS, Charlotte M. Guide to Special Issues and Indexes of Periodicals. Special Libraries Assn. 289p. indexes. LC 75-25621. ISBN 0-87111-224-3. $14.50.

This compendium of 1,256 consumer, trade, and technical periodicals may not be, strictly speaking, a business book. However, it is a necessary tool for reference work in business, finance, sociology, and the professions. For example, in the subject index under the heading "Employment," there are references to special data and feature articles dealing with minorities, job opportunities, temporary help, and women.

GRANT, Mary McNierney & Norma Cote. Directory of Business and Financial Services. 7th ed. Special Libraries Assn. 232p. index. LC 75-34228. ISBN 0-87111-212-4. $18.80.

Although new editions are excluded in this selection, the sixth edition of this Directory was published in 1963, so the seventh edition deserves attention for the benefit of those who have never been exposed to this title. The Directory belongs in any medium or large public library which has an investment oriented clientele. It is a necessary selection guide for libraries building collections in finance, and a refresher course for reference librarians.

WHO'S Who in Labor. 1st ed. Arno. 807p. CIP. LC 75-7962. ISBN 0-405-06651-1. $65.

A panel of union executives and professional arbitrators made the selections of currently active persons to be included here. Following the biographical entries are sections on national unions and employee associations, government offices serving labor, labor studies centers, glossary of labor terms, a bibliography of labor periodicals, and an index of biographies by organization.

Advertising & Marketing

EWEN, Stuart. Captains of Consciousness: Advertising and the Social Roots of the Consumer Culture. McGraw. 261p. index. bibliog. LC 75-34432. ISBN 0-07-019845-4. $10.

"Social crises of industrialization," the first chapter heading, sets the tone for the book. The author deals with how business benefits from youth as consumers, changes in family structure, and personal ethics and drives, as well as how industrialization and advertising have helped create the social structure we have today. The extensive bibliography should be helpful to students and the book belongs in public and college libraries.

FOWLES, Jib. Mass Advertising as Social Forecast: a Method for Futures Research. Greenwood. 156p. index. bibliog. CIP. LC 75-35344. ISBN 0-8371-8595-5. $10.95.

A scholarly companion to Ewen's Captains of Consciousness, Fowles' book proposes a social forecasting method based on the power of mass needs, with mass advertising as a source of data. The writing style won't appeal to the casual reader, but the detailed bibliography alone is worth the price. Colleges and public libraries with strong sociology emphasis will need this book.

San Jose Mercury News photo

The undercover computer way to win at gambling, from "Crime by Computer" (Scribners)

HORNUNG, Clarence P. & Fridolf Johnson. 200 Years of American Graphic Art: a Retrospective Survey of the Printing Arts and Advertising since the Colonial Period. Braziller. 211p. illus. index. bibliog. LC 75-10966. ISBN 0-8076-0791-6. $25.

The illustrations provide an excellent social history although the text is brief. Period costumes, social attitudes, and changes in life style are among the subjects for which this book could be a useful source of information.

ROMAN, Kenneth & Jane Maas. How To Advertise. St. Martin's. 159p. illus. LC 74-24835. $8.95.

Intended for the advertiser who makes decisions on how to spend the advertising budget, and as a student's guide to the creative process. Checklist format, with examples selected from current, familiar ad campaigns. The chapter on advertising and the law should interest most consumers.

ROMAN, Murray. Telephone Marketing: How To Build your Business by Telephone. McGraw. 218p. illus. index. bibliog. CIP. LC 76-9814. ISBN 0-07-053595-7. $16.50.

This is a fast-talking Madison Avenue approach to a growing marketing technique. A large quantity of big names (Harvard Business School professors, ad agency executives, etc.) are dropped, and a special "endpaper" appendix allows brief glimpses into their opinions of, and successes with, the telephone marketing concept. Included are a large range of "how-to" topics such as how to apply the technique, identify your markets, prepare "the script," and choose the caller. Special sections include the economics and legal aspects of telephone marketing. The book is of greatest interest to large firms and groups, but one chapter tells independent salespersons, in real estate, for example, how to apply the technique. It should also interest consumers who will now know the background behind those endless solicitation calls.

Business Crime

MOFFITT, Donald. Swindled! Classic Business Frauds of the Seventies. Dow Jones. 176p. LC 75-32021. ISBN 0-87128-577-7. $8.95.

Robert Vesco and Stanley Goldblum of Equity Funding fame are the two best known of the six cases detailed here by the editors of the Wall Street Journal. Popular appeal.

PARKER, Donn B. Crime by Computer. Scribners. 308p. illus. index. CIP. LC 76-1836. ISBN 0-684-14574-X. $10.95.

Prepared at Stanford Research Institute under a grant from the Atomic Energy Commission as a practical approach to computer security and in order to inform potential victims of the nature of the problem. Includes case studies and some suggestions of what can be done. Parker estimates it will take at least five years before more secure computers become available, mainly because users haven't demanded them and security systems add to the cost of the equipment. In the meantime, world-wide losses due to computer crime could be in the $300 million range annually.

Business & Society

CAVANAUGH, Gerald F. American Business Values in Transition. Prentice-Hall. 216p. index. CIP. LC 75-38745. ISBN 0-13-024141-5. $9.95.
First in a series on economic institutions and social systems, this book gives an historical overview of the individual within the organization and the effect of the success ethic on life styles. The author's stated purpose is "to aid the individual in clarifying and formulating personal values, as they touch on career and personal life, and to aid business managers in determining corporate policy and to help all citizens in clarifying their attitudes toward corporate and public policy." The text covers a broader range of subjects than the title would suggest.

HEILBRONER, Robert. Business Civilization in Decline. Norton. 128p. index. ISBN 0-393-05571-X. $6.95; ISBN 0-393-09184-8. pap. $2.95.
Heilbroner predicts the extinction of the business system as we know it based on two factors: the increasing tendency toward government intervention in the economic system and the constant tension between business and society. Public and college libraries will find heavy demand for any book by Heilbroner; this one will be particularly useful for discussions of the government-business-society relationship.

Capitalists & Financiers

BYLINSKY, Gene. The Innovation Millionaires: How They Succeed. Scribners. 256p. illus. index. LC 75-43790. ISBN 0-684-14564-2. $9.95.
"Our greatest natural resource lies six feet above ground—in the minds of our brightest scientists, engineers and other technically oriented people." Most of the individuals profiled here are connected with the growth industries of the past 30 years (computers, electronics, lasers) located along Boston's Route 128 and in Santa Clara County, California.

COLLIER, Peter & David Horowitz. The Rockefellers: an American Dynasty. Holt. 746p. illus. index. CIP. LC 75-5465. ISBN 0-03-008371-0. $15.
Although the family's identification with business has become less distinct over the past two generations, the origins of their wealth are based in the first corporate monopoly, Standard Oil. Lengthy but well written.

DUKE, Marc. The DuPonts: Portrait of a Dynasty. Saturday Review Pr. 291p. index. bibliog. LC 75-40068. ISBN 0-8415-0429-6. $12.95.
In addition to portraying the roots of a major financial family, this excellent work could be read as a popular family chronicle, with its intrigue, intermarriage of cousins, struggles against overwhelming odds and the ultimate triumph and wealth. The extensive bibliography will be a boon to those studying the family or industrial development in the U.S.

GETTY, J. Paul. As I See It: the Autobiography of J. Paul Getty. Prentice-Hall. 360p. LC 76-22639. ISBN 0-13-049593-X. $10.95.
In addition to his personal history, Getty exposes us to his philosophy on marital harmony, women's liberation, economic theory, taxation and welfare, among others. The reader may not agree with his opinions, but there is wisdom and enthusiasm in the way they are presented. Public libraries will want this for general readers and college students will find it a refreshing addition to the textbook evaluations of Getty's influence and contributions.

THORNDIKE, Joseph J., Jr. The Very Rich. American Heritage. 352p. illus. index. CIP. LC 76-22578. ISBN 0-517-52810-X. $29.95.
Arranged by basic sources of wealth; land, natural resources, trade, finance, talent, and early and recent industry. Features such diverse personalities as the Aga Khan, Henry Ford, the Astors, Niarchos and Onassis, Hirshhorn, the DuPonts, the Vanderbilts, Eastman, Watson, Helena Rubinstein, Jacqueline Susann, and Neil Simon. The over 300 illustrations make this good escapist reading.

TOBIAS, Andrew P. Fire and Ice: the Story of Charles Revson, the Man who Built the Revlon Empire. Morrow. 282p. illus. index. LC 76-6124. ISBN 0-688-03023-8. $10.
The subject has broad appeal to general readers and the sensationalized writing style adds to the appeal. A biography of a major corporate success and legend in his own time belongs in large collections and where demand is strong.

Corporations

BARMASH, Isadore. For the Good of the Company: Work and Interplay in a Major American Corporation. Grosset. 388p. ISBN 0-448-12245-6. $10.
The merger between McCrory and J. J. Newberry is the main theme for this fictionalized nonfiction. The personalities of the executives shape the destiny of their corporations.

LYONS, Nick. The Sony Vision. Crown. 256p. illus. LC 76-20703. ISBN 0-517-52739-1. $7.95.
Akito Morita, a founder of Sony, faces the introduction of each new product with three ingredients: enthusiasm, total commitment to the product, and complete knowledge of its possible uses. That approach has made his company an international household word in 30 years. A logical companion to Bylinsky's Innovation Millionaires, this book will appeal to the same popular audience.

Workers at Sony plant in San Diego, from "The Sony Vision" (Crown)

NADER, Ralph. Taming the Giant Corporation. Norton. 304p. index. ISBN 0-393-08753-0. $10.50.
Some people assume that big business made America great, but at what cost in terms of pollution, discrimination, and erosion of the rule of law and ethical precepts, asks Nader. Federal chartering of business is his primary proposal. A detailed study of corporate size, power, and inefficiency.

SHULMAN, Richard. The Billion Dollar Bookies. Harper's Magazine Pr. 240p. $7.95.
Shulman considers that mutual life insurance companies, a list of which are included in an appendix, are essentially involved in bookmaking (taking bets—premiums, and paying out part of the income to the winners—beneficiaries). The true odds of a healthy, 35-year-old insurable American man dying in the next year are about 900 to 1 against. The mutuals offer 200 to 1 odds on a $10,000 policy. Shulman urges that the surplus funds be returned to policy holders as dividends and prods consumer groups to take action toward this end.

Economic Conditions

CLARK, Lindley H., Jr. The Secret Tax: What You Need To Know about Inflation (if we are ever going to beat it). Dow Jones. 190p. index. LC 75-34853. ISBN 0-87094-109-7. $7.95.
"This book seeks to explain how we got into the current mess and how we may get out. Along the way it will offer some thoughts on living with the present inflation and avoiding another one." Clark, associate editor of the Wall Street Journal, admits to a Chicago School of Economics bias in his theories, and has written a highly readable approach to our current economic conditions.

COMMONER, Barry. The Poverty of Power: Energy and the Economic Crisis. Knopf. 382p. index. bibliog. LC 75-36789. ISBN 0-394-40371-1. $8.95.
Commoner calls for a national debate of the relative merits of capitalism and socialism with the central issue being the conflict of social benefits versus private profit.

DAM, Kenneth. Oil Resources: Who Gets What, How? Univ. of Chicago Pr. 193p. index. CIP. LC 75-43239. ISBN 0-226-13497-0. $11.95.
A discussion of the economic considerations of auction versus discretionary allocation of licenses for the exploitation of government-owned petroleum resources. The policies of the United States, Britain, and Norway are featured. The style is professorial and therefore will not appeal to the casual reader.

DRUCKER, Peter F. The Unseen Revolution: How Pension Fund Socialism Came to America. Harper. 214p. index. CIP. LC 75-34795. ISBN 0-06-011097-X. $8.95.
Drucker contends that, by 1985, through pension funds, America's workers will control at least 50 percent of the equity capital of American business, giving them "command positions" (whoever controls the command positions, controls the whole). Claiming that America is now in a state of "decentralized market socialism" brought on by General Motors' institution of an investment trust type of pension plan in 1950, he traces the recent history and impact of this plan and discusses social and political changes, and potential economic problems, brought about by this "socialism." The book has received controversial reviews, but because of the lack of good material which analyzes pension fund impact on the U.S. economy, and the prominence of the author, it belongs at least in academic collections.

LEKACHMAN, Robert. Economics at Bay: Why the Experts Will Never Solve Your Problems. McGraw. 311p. index. LC 75-30759. ISBN 0-07-037153-9. $8.95.
"When respectable economists are wrong en masse, other people usually suffer the consequences." This and other sarcastic quotes indicate the author's dissatisfaction with the performance of economists and economics as a science. Inflation and unemployment, multinational corporations, trade unions and international monetary affairs are some areas where he believes economists have not analyzed successfully. "Only in calm periods and places do establishment economists act as reliable analysts of the present and acute forecasters of future change." Good general interest reading.

MILLER, Arthur S. Modern Corporate State: Private Governments and the American Constitution. Greenwood. 269p. index. CIP. LC 75-35350. ISBN 0-8371-8589-0. $15.
Miller calls this a "preliminary excursion" essay which raises questions rather than proffers answers. The book develops the proposition that the American people are moving without Constitutional amendment into the corporate state in which big government, big business, big labor, and big universities achieve a symbiotic relationship allowing a small elite to run the whole system. A consideration of Miller's questions and Nader's answers in Taming the Giant Corporation would make interesting discussion material.

MYERS, C. V. The Coming Deflation: Its Dangers and Opportunities. Arlington. 218p. index. CIP. LC 75-46514. ISBN 0-87000-356-0. $8.95.
The "tidal movements" of history (Stone Age, Middle Ages, Industrial Revolution, to name a few) have given way to the contemporary tides of the Era of Inflation, the inevitable sequal of which is the Era of Collapse. According to Myers, in order to understand how to survive deflation, you must understand the interrelationships of money and economic theory, the stock market, energy crisis, etc., which he attempts to explain. Myers then details his theory of how deflation will affect business, savings, investments, and society.

TYLER, Gus. Scarcity: a Critique of the American Economy. Quadrangle. 245p. index. CIP. LC 75-36249. ISBN 0-8129-0611-X. $8.95.
Tyler recounts a history of our abundance then warns that we can no longer assume abundance. The threat of scarcity isn't new, because the theory of laissez faire has always had fallacies. Scarcity is not the result of depletion of natural resources, but of corporate monopolies and government neglect. Planned growth is needed. The author of this unique approach to economics is assistant president of the ILGWU. His style will have broad appeal.

Employment

BOSTWICK, Burdette E. Résumé Writing: a Comprehensive How-to-do-it Guide. Wiley. 213p. CIP. ISBN 0-471-09060-3. $9.95.
There are always plenty of résumé how-to books in print, but I don't know a single library which ever has a good selection on the shelves, so a good new title is always in order. In addition to the usual admonitions and sample résumés, this book has two special features: composite job responsibilities in major job classifications and sources of mailing lists.

BUSKIRK, Richard H. Your Career: How To Plan It, Manage It, Change It. Cahners. 232p. bibliog. CIP. LC 75-40273. ISBN 0-8436-0740-8. $12.95.
Some of the platitudes and trite case references may annoy the reader, but there are some good suggestions and formats for organizing your thinking. Buskirk's "seven factor analysis" scheme may help direct the reader's career choice. He also includes a chapter on individual productivity on the theory that productivity is the key to success, once a career choice has been made.

JACKSON, Tom & Davidyne Mayleas. The Hidden Job Market: a System to Beat the System. Quadrangle. 278p. CIP. LC 74-24284. ISBN 0-8129-0602-0. $12.
The system described here was originally developed under U.S. government sponsorship to aid in the relocation of aerospace specialists who were no longer needed in the space race. Standard subjects such as how to determine career objectives and write a résumé are covered, but methods of getting to see the right people and controlling the interview once it is granted are fresh advice. Checklists and worksheets encourage active participation while reading. Special sources of information, training for new jobs, employment agencies, and government services are additional sections.

TARRANT, John J. How To Negotiate a Raise. Van Nostrand. 195p. CIP. LC 75-26732. ISBN 0-442-28407-1. $9.95.
"How you ask for the raise is important. But how you prepare for the request is usually even more important." The overall goal of the book is to show you how to become more effective, to like your job better, and to be paid more for it.

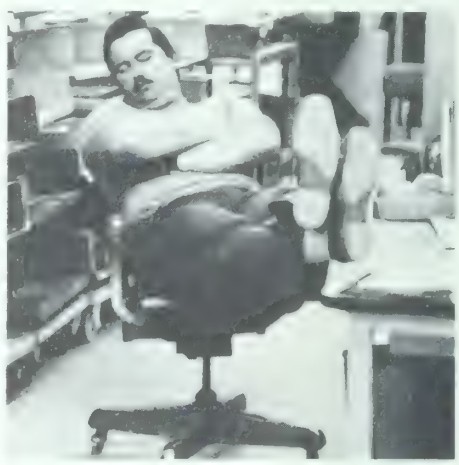
Executives

DE MARE, George. Corporate Lives. Van Nostrand. 202p. ISBN 0-442-22079-0. $9.95.
With the current low regard for American business and with popular interest such as in the TV series "Executive Suite," Corporate Lives will probably be widely read. It relates the life stories and corporate climbs of eight real but disguised executives and two composites. Their aspirations, needs, psychological background, struggles, and ethics all get heavy play.

DUBRIN, Andrew J. Managerial Deviance: How To Deal With Problem People in Key Jobs. Mason Charter. 228p. index. CIP. LC 76-971. ISBN 0-88405-134-X. $8.95; pap. $2.25.
Those whose behavior has a negative impact on the organization but are not criminals or psychotics, are dealt with here: liars, manipulators, alcoholics, drug abusers, sexual exploiters, and abusers of power. Covers the costs and consequences in terms of poor decisions made by the deviants and of low morale of fellow workers and suggests approaches to behavior modification, setting specific goals with the deviant. Detection techniques and confrontation methods are discussed and sources of information and assistance are included.

Human Capital

BALZER, Richard. Clockwork: Life In and Outside an American Factory. Doubleday. 333p. illus. LC 75-21209. ISBN 0-385-11036-7. $10.
This book is the result of a grant to study the impact of social and economic change on lower middle-class Americans. The author, a former VISTA volunteer, spent five months working in the Merrimack Valley Works of Western Electric with the knowledge and cooperation of management, union, and his fellow workers. Worthwhile addition to public and college libraries because of its dual use as general reading and as a sociological study.



From "Clockwork" (Doubleday)

BENNETT, Dudley. TA and the Manager. AMACOM. 256p. illus. index. bibliog. CIP. LC 76-20559. ISBN 0-8144-5422-4. $10.95.
Job satisfaction was one of the major topics of concern in business books in 1976. This is yet another method of approach from the managerial point of view.

FOLLMANN, Joseph F., Jr. Alcoholics and Business: Problems, Costs, Solutions. AMACOM. 246p. index. CIP. LC 75-40270. ISBN 0-8144-5410-0. $12.95.
Surveys of costs, primarily in terms of mistakes and lost days. Case studies of successful in-house treatment programs, as well as a list of sources of local help. A source of term paper data or assistance to the businessman combating the effects of alcoholic workers on his business.

GINZBERG, Eli. Human Economy. McGraw. 274p. index. bibliog. CIP. LC 75-45490. ISBN 0-07-023283-0. $11.
Well organized and written, this book focuses on the present American economy and how it affects the utilization of job training and career planning. Also treats organizational manpower strategy as it relates to the development and utilization of employees' skills.

KILLIAN, Ray A. Human Resource Management: an ROI (return on investment) Approach. AMACOM. 232p. CIP. LC 76-7058. ISBN 0-8144-5415-1. $11.95.
Developing employees' full potential from a training and personnel management standpoint is the main thrust of the program. Inventorying and matching human resources is aided by the forms and worksheets provided. Although no formal bibliography is included, references to and quotes from recent books, periodical articles, and studies are frequent.

O'LEARY, Lawrence R. Interviewing for the Decisionmaker. Nelson-Hall. 127p. index. bibliog. CIP. LC 75-44322. ISBN 0-88229-215-3. $8.95.
O'Leary, an industrial psychologist, states "a perfect selection process is possible, but not probable. A more realistic objective is to have a selection process that minimizes wrong decisions and maximizes right decisions." The text is peppered with references to other books, articles and studies to consult for additional background. Well organized and written, chapters deal with how and where to conduct the interview, how to interpret interview data, governmental guidelines for interviewing under the Equal Opportunity Act, and how to conduct counseling and evaluative interviews with current employees. Appendixes give sample interview formats, a job analysis form to aid in preparing job descriptions and an interviewer's work sheet.

Management

GOLDE, Roger A. Muddling Through: the Art of Properly Unbusinesslike Management. AMACOM. 177p. LC 76-888. ISBN 0-8144-5411-9. $10.95.
Along the same style as Up The Organization, the flip jargon will make this good for light, semi-educational reading for the general reader or tired executive.

KASTENS, Merritt L. Long Range Planning for Your Business: an Operating Manual. AMACOM. 176p. index. bibliog. LC 75-41378. ISBN 0-8144-5413-5. $11.95.
Geared to the chief executive officer, looking at a one-year period, the theories set forth here could have applications in nonbusiness situations. The well-organized format makes it easy for the nonspecialist to grasp the tenets of the book, and suggested reading lists at the end of each chapter aid in the learning process. Very specialized, but worthwhile in large collections.

TARRANT, John J. Drucker: the Man who Invented the Corporate Society. Cahners. 320p. LC 75-44263. ISBN 0-8436-0744-0. $13.50.
Partially drawn from interviews with Drucker, this book provides biographical data, philosophical foundations of his management theory, a discussion of some of his writing, and an evaluation of the roles Drucker has played in modern management science. Any library with a collection of Drucker or an emphasis on management science will want to add this.

WORTMAN, Leon A. Successful Small Business Management. AMACOM. 272p. index. CIP. LC 76-18160. ISBN 0-8144-5394-5. $12.95.
The author encourages small business managers to understand all aspects of finance, accounting and management, even though they retain outside specialists such as accountants and lawyers. Covers basic definitions and concepts, profit and cost analysis, financial statements, ratios for measurement of success and suggestions for developing a plan and recording its progress. Special chapters on marketing and sales, how to create a positive image, and how to be your own management consultant. Public libraries can never have enough manuals of small business management.

Personal Finance & Investments

BRILOFF, Abraham J. More Debits Than Credits: the Burnt Investor's Guide to Financial Statements. Harper. 453p. LC 74-15812. ISBN 0-06-01476-7. $14.95.
If your investing clientele is fairly sophisticated and has surpassed Merrill Lynch's excellent, free, brochure, "How to read financial statements," this might be a consideration for your collection. Don't give it to a neophyte investor.

BROWNE, Harry. Complete Guide to Swiss Banks. McGraw. 520p. illus. index. bibliog. LC 76-4781. ISBN 0-07-008483-1. $9.95.

OR

KELDER, James. How to Open a Swiss Bank Account. Crowell. 1976. 324p. illus. index. LC 75-34285. ISBN 0-690-01033-8. $9.95.
Browne's book has gotten more attention in the libraries I have surveyed, but Kelder is quite acceptable. One or the other should be in public libraries. They both explain the various types of Swiss accounts, exchange possibilities, and tax advantages and assure the American depositor of the legality of the procedure.

HARDY, C. Colburn. Funk and Wagnalls' Guide to Personal Money Management. F & W. 550p. bibliog. LC 75-17830. ISBN 0-308-10213-4. $12.95.
Hardy's major emphasis is on estate and retirement planning and he gives the related topics a great deal more space than Sylvia Porter does. Public libraries with the Money Book, the new second edition of the New York Times Book of Money and Funk and Wagnalls' Guide to Personal Money Management should be able to answer any question that comes up in the area of personal finance.

MAISEL, Sherman J. & S. E. Roulac. Real Estate Investment and Finance. McGraw. 516p. index. glossary. LC 75-35950. ISBN 0-07-039730-9. $14.95.
An introductory text including bibliography and problems at the end of each chapter, included here because of its emphasis on finance rather than the whole range of problems involved in real estate investment.

RUGG, Donald D. & N. B. Hale. The Dow Jones-Irwin Guide to Mutual Funds: How To Diversify your Investments for Maximum Return and Safety in any Kind of Market. Dow Jones-Irwin. 243p. bibliog. LC 75-35108. ISBN 0-87094-116-X. $11.95.
A do-it-yourself guide for small investors, no-loan funds are emphasized; however, the sections on developing a sound investment program and timing the investment would apply in general investment situations as well.

WOY, James B. Commodity Futures Trading: a Bibliographic Guide. Bowker. 206p. index. LC 76-23430. ISBN 0-8352-0899-0. $15.75.
Encyclopedic in arrangement, the guide defines trading methods and related topics by listing and quoting from major current textbooks and popular sources. The entry under "Hedging" quotes 26 sources; the "history of futures trading" has 12 entries. More specific subjects have fewer entries. Watch for other titles of the Bowker bibliographic guides in the business field.

New Periodicals

American Journal of Small Business. Vol. 1, No. 1, July 1976. Univ. of Baltimore. q. $10.
A refereed journal, with most authors being connected with colleges and universities. Recent sample titles include "MBO and the small organization," "Cross section analysis of small business failures," "Retail strategies for the small health food retailer." Book reviews and a doctoral dissertation abstract are included in each issue.

Status: a Monthly Chartbook of Social and Economic Trends. Vol. 1, No. 1, July 1976. Washington, U.S. Bureau of the Census. $3.60/copy.
Statistics subjects vary with each issue, but every subject is covered in depth. Population estimates and projections, vital statistics and employment are some standard areas covered, but specialized things such as food stamp usage, school enrollment projections and medium annual earnings of women by profession are not as easy to locate elsewhere.

Women—Employment

BIRD, Caroline. Enterprising Women. Norton. 256p. index. CIP. LC 75-33662. ISBN 0-393-08724-7. $8.95.
This bicentennial project of the Business and Professional Women's Foundation begins with the premise that "there have always been some women who have stepped outside the assigned limits to work in business or the professions, or to shape economic affairs in a nontraditional way." Approximately 50 biographical sketches treat such diverse personalities as Abigail Adams, Clara Barton, Mary Baker Eddy, Katharine Gibbs, Fannie Farmer, Sylvia Porter, and Eleanor Holmes Norton. Although the sketches are brief, they are reasonably informative and give a more personalized view of the women than can be found in standard biographical references.

BROWNLEE, W. Elliot & Mary M. Brownlee. Women in the American Economy: a Documentary History, 1675 to 1929. Yale Univ. Pr. 350p. index. LC 75-18168. ISBN 0-300-01897-5. $17.50; ISBN 0-300-01994-7. pap. $4.95.
Brownlee and Bird (above) give two approaches to the same subject and both belong in any sociology collection. Even though the Brownlee book is more scholarly, it would be of interest in public libraries. Quoting from the introduction: "to explore the relationship between the marketplace life of women and their total social history are the tasks of this book." Source materials such as letters and journal entries are welcome additions to the text.

There's One Source For Information On Security

SECURITY WORLD BOOKS

NEW To Be Published This Month

MANAGING EMPLOYEE HONESTY

by Charles R. Carson

LC 76-51836
ISBN 0-913708-27-5 Price $12.95

BOMB SECURITY GUIDE: A Step-by-Step Emergency Response Program Against Bomb Threats and Letter Bombs by Graham Knowles

"To assist organizations and their security officers in contingency planning for bomb threats and incidents...an international security consultant based in England, came up with a comprehensive bomb threat emergency response guide."

...Counterforce

LC 76-41301
ISBN 0-913708-25-9 Price $8.95

OFFICE & OFFICE BUILDING SECURITY by Ed San Luis

"We highly recommend it."

...The Marien Report

LC 73-85627
ISBN 0-913708-12-7 Price $14.00

HOTEL/MOTEL SECURITY MANAGEMENT by Walter J. Buzby II and David Paine

"This book is both interesting and informative and should be read by those assigned security responsibilities within the lodging industry."

...Assets Protection

LC 76-12555
ISBN 0-913708-24-0 Price $13.95

HOSPITAL SECURITY by Russ Colling

"An experienced hospital security officer has written a detailed practical book on hospital security."

...Systems, Technology & Science for Law Enforcement

LC 75 46098
ISBN 0-913708-22-4 Price $14.50

Also pamphlets on Private Security, Coping with Shoplifters, Computer Security and Restaurant & Bar Security.

Two Anthologies

SUCCESSFUL RETAIL SECURITY

Retail security problems are identified and proven successful solutions are outlined.

LC 73-91244
ISBN 0-913708-15-1 Price $13.95

INTERNAL THEFT: INVESTIGATION & CONTROL

Two dozen professionals share their knowledge and expertise on investigation and theft prevention.

LC 75-17137
ISBN 0-913708-21-6 Price $12.95

CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION SOURCES: PUBLIC AND PRIVATE by John M. Carroll

"An information scientist details the variety of fact-gathering agencies that record John Q. Public from the cradle to the grave, imparting the rudiments of computer storage, organization and retrieval functions."

...The Booklist

LC 74-20177
ISBN 0-913708-19-4 Price $14.95

ALARM SYSTEMS & THEFT PREVENTION by Thad Weber

"First thing you do is think like a thief. Next thing you do is read Thad L. Weber on alarm systems. In a lively and comprehensive style he talks about today's crime risks and remedies."

...Jobber and Warehouse Executive

LC 73-78572
ISBN 0-913708-11-9 Price $14.50

INTRODUCTION TO SECURITY by Gion Green and Raymond C. Farber

"The authors have drawn not only upon their own wide-ranging experiences but also upon exhaustive research, to provide a definitive introduction to security."

...Resource Protection

LC 74-31685
ISBN 0-913708-20-8 Price $12.95

(we offer a 15% discount)
Order direct or through your distributor.

"Covering The Best in Security"

SECURITY WORLD BOOKS
2639 S. La Cienega Blvd.
Los Angeles Calif. 90034
(213) 836-5000

PROFESSIONAL READING

Perceptive library portrait

BRYAN, Harrison. University Libraries in Britain: a New Look.

Clive Bingley & Linnet. 1976. 192p. index. ISBN (Linnet) 0-208-01532-9. LC 76-15273. $8.50.

This is a second look at British university libraries by the Australian author. The first was in 1957 and the second, the latter half of 1975. It is strictly a comparison of British with Australian resources and practice with only an occasional reference to "giant" American libraries. The conclusion is considerable improvement in both countries, but with greater improvement in Australia, which lagged behind Britain in 1957.

In slightly over 100 pages, Bryan presents statistics and interesting criticism covering virtually all aspects of the libraries serving the 54 British universities. Principal headings are finance, holdings, rate of accession, space, book selection, cataloging, and use of automation. In this brief compass is given a full picture of British university library operation in 1975. The second part of the "new look" is description of individual libraries.

One might assume that only a Munthe could produce a superior critique of a country's libraries in such a short time, but here we have an extremely perceptive and complete portrait, sympathetic in tone, tastefully presented. The comparison with Australian libraries is largely limited to the tables of statistics, so this aspect does not blur the picture for the reader who lacks "down under" background.

In comparison with the U.S., the libraries of British universities are generally better provided with functional buildings adequate for their holdings and student bodies. They benefit from the financial assistance of the University Grants Committee which is well aware, as are few university presidents, of the need for special appropriations to support new academic programs. British libraries suffer from a tendency to go it alone in classification and cataloging, which seriously handicaps adoption of automation.

The American reader with some slight background in the British university scene will find this book informative reading. One wonders how so much was accomplished in a short half year, even though assisted with a portmanteau of statistical reports.—ARTHUR HAMLIN, TEMPLE UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES, PHILADELPHIA

COBOL intro

BROPHY, Peter. COBOL Programming: an Introduction for Librarians.

Clive Bingley & Linnet. 1976. 153p. index. appendixes. ISBN 0-208-01527-2. LC 76-2022. $9.

Since computers are part of the library milieu, programming must become part of the library school curricula. It is recognized that most programming tasks will be done by professional programmers. It should also be recognized that unless the librarian knows enough about computer hardware and software to decide what library functions should be automated, the logic by which the machine could accomplish these tasks, how long it should take, and how much it should cost, the librarian will have abdicated the management function to the data processor.

As the author correctly points out, while the librarian need not become an expert programmer, the knowledge required "is a knowledge which is best gained by experience, by learning the detailed structure and elements of the computer experts' language, and by applying that learning in a practical situation." This is the purpose of the book—to help the librarian and information scientist become familiar with COBOL, a business oriented language that is widely used for library applications. Fortunately, it is an easy language to learn.

This is a textbook and not a programming manual. Part I introduces the reader to basic programming concepts by following a library related task, step by step, from conception to printout. Part II presents and explains the formal elements of the COBOL language. This is followed by appendixes listing the COBOL character set and the reserved words, and finally by a glossary. The book does not include exercises, and one cannot learn to program by this book alone. A programming manual will be needed as well as hands-on experience and study, but this text will serve as an introduction.—HAROLD BORKO, GRADUATE SCHOOL OF LIBRARY & INFORMATION SCIENCE, UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, LOS ANGELES

Libraries popularized

MATHEWS, Virginia H. Libraries for Today and Tomorrow: How Do We Pay for Them? Who Uses Them? Who Staffs Them? What Are Their Services? intro. by Allie Beth Martin.

Doubleday. 1976. 228p. index. appendixes. ISBN 0-385-05564-1. LC 75-25440. pap. $3.95.

A popular account of the historical development of libraries, with special attention to the 1950's and 60's; a summary of type of library service; and consideration of the future of libraries. Several appendixes provide information on federal allotments to libraries, types of Office of Education programs relevant to library service, and expenditures for acquisitions for libraries.

Matthews has drawn on a wide variety of sources including unpublished speeches, newspaper articles, and Congressional testimony. Major deficiencies, however, limit the book's value for librarians, students, or the general reader. It is, first of all, very uneven. A too brief overview of U.S. social history and the growth of libraries is followed by several detailed and interesting chapters on the development of major support for libraries. A greater problem seems to lie with the lack of formal documentation either through footnotes or a bibliography. In only half of the appended tables is the source of the information noted. Finally, there is a major focus on more affluent and developed systems and user groups. Such focus is not surprising given Mathews' extensive professional experience in Connecticut—the state with the highest per capita income in the country—but it does dilute the force of her arguments. An example of this is seen in the statement that "the media specialist has become a full-fledged member of the teaching staff, functioning in curriculum development, planning instruction and evaluating learning, and as accountable as any subject teacher."

Mathews' credentials are impressive. One can only conjecture that her book was written in haste to coincide with the U.S. Bicentennial and ALA's Centennial; and that the same time pressure prevented the luxury of careful editing.—LEIGH ESTABROOK, SCHOOL OF LIBRARY SCIENCE, SIMMONS COLLEGE, BOSTON

CHECKLIST

from Off the Wall

Poster catalog

A catalog of original posters printed between 1890 and 1930 is a fine reference as well as sales tool, as many of the over 100 illustrations appear for the first time. Among the poster artists whose works are featured are Alphonse Mucha, Paul Berthon, Ludwig Hohlwein, Walter Schnackenberg, Edward Penfield, Will Bradley, and J. C. Leyendecker. A highlight is a group of rare German Expressionist posters created during the political upheaval of post-World War I Germany. The posters sell for from $15 to $2300, but they can be enjoyed for $2 through this catalog, Off the Wall, from The Exhumation Gallery, Dept. Q, P.O. Box 2057, Princeton, N.J. 08540.

YA reading

An annotated bibliography which explores literature and films on sex and sexuality for the young adult has been issued by Bay Area Young Adult Librarians. Fiction and nonfiction books are described and recommended or not on the bases of readability, accuracy of information (current laws on abortion, rights of teenagers), and the author's attitudes toward subjects such as homosexuality and male and female roles. Recommended pamphlets and films are included, and there is a title index. Sex Is a Touchy Subject (23p.) costs $2 from BAYA, c/o Richard Russo, 2343 San Juan Ave., Walnut Creek, Calif. 94596. Checks should be made payable to Richard Russo.

Feminist issue

Collections on feminism might benefit from the addition of a special issue of the magazine Social Work. The November 1976 issue focuses on sexism and how it has affected women as workers in the economy, as clients in therapy, and as social workers in a field which has long been termed a "women's profession." The 22 articles in this issue of the journal of the National Association of Social Workers are indexed by subject and author. Send $4 with your request to NASW, Publication Sales, 1425 H. St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20005.

Special education thesaurus

Instructional Materials Thesaurus for Special Education is the official list of terms used in the National Instructional Materials Information System (NIMIS) and is the basic tool used to index the more than 25,000 instructional materials listed in NIMIS. The indexing terms are useful in helping to match instructional materials to the educational needs of handicapped children, and its compilers anticipate its use in the development of local, state and regional information centers and special libraries serving the handicapped. Sections of this third edition include an alphabetical listing of more than 850 defined descriptors; a categorical breakdown of these terms; a career cluster of occupational titles; a rotated key-word index; and a bibliography. Guidelines for indexing and retrieving are given, as well. Send $2 for Publication NC-76.505 (64p.) to Publication Sales Division, Ohio State University Pr., 2070 Neil Ave., Columbus, Ohio 43210. Checks should be made payable to the Ohio State University Press. Orders for less than $5 must be prepaid.

Mortgage strategies

The revitalization of city neighborhoods is the concern of two publications of The National Center for Urban Ethnic Affairs. Disclosure and Neighborhood Reinvestment: a Citizen's Guide (47p., $1.50) suggests action strategies for the utilization of the Home Mortgage Disclosure Act of 1975, which requires depository institutions to show where they make loans, what type of loans they grant, and what loans they purchase. It provides clarification of the final regulations for the Act, and includes a list of people and organizations involved in disclosure actions. Neighborhood Reinvestment: an Annotated Bibliography (18p., $1) lists entries under general headings of resource and research materials; reinvestment programs/general papers; government initiatives; private initiatives and commercial revitalization; community initiatives and proposed alternatives; and obstacles. Checks should be made payable to National Center for Urban Ethnic Affairs and sent to NCUEA in care of the Disclosure and Reinvestment Project, 1521 16th St., N.W., Washington, D.C.

Booksellers directory

The third revised edition of The Canadian Antiquarian Booksellers Directory contains the names, addresses and telephone numbers of antiquarian book stores and other information, including specializations. There is also a listing of stores in the United States which carry a stock of Canadiana. The 28-page directory is indexed by subject specialty, city, and periodicals subject. It costs $4 plus 20¢ for postage and handling from Maria Szivos, c/o John E. Robbins Library, Brandon University, Brandon, Manitoba, Canada R7A 6A9.

NYLA publications

The basic techniques for providing information and referral services are detailed in Do It? ($2), from the New York Library Association. Other recent Association publications include three pamphlets from the Children's and Young Adult Services Section: You Be You and I'll Be Me . . . Liberating Children from Sex Roles; Fantasy and Science Fiction for Children; and Science Fiction for Young Adults. Each is an annotated listing of books, and they are available for 30¢ each (25 copies, $3; 100 copies, $5). All orders must be prepaid, with check or money order payable to the New York Library Association, and sent to: NYLA Publications, 60 E. 42nd St., Suite 1242, New York, N.Y. 10017.

Energy credits study

Proposals for fostering energy independence through federal financial assistance to private energy firms are examined and found wanting in a study from the American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research. The authors of Government Credit Subsidies for Energy Development, Murray L. Weidenbaum and Reno Harnish, suggest the consideration of alternatives, including relying on normal market incentives; reducing the regulatory barriers against new and existing energy sources; stockpiling petroleum to reduce the threat of embargo; and encouraging more effective use of energy supplies. The 55-page study costs $3 from AEI, 1150 17th St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

MAGAZINES

Bill Katz, PROFESSOR, SCHOOL OF LIBRARY SCIENCE, STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK, ALBANY

Prospice

1974. Three issues a year. $5.50. Eds: J.C.R. Green & Michael Edwards. Aquila Publishing Co., Ltd., Isle of Skye, Scotland Iv42 8QB. Aud: Ac. (Subject: Literary Reviews)

Each issue of this impressive "magazine of poetry and poetics" is virtually a paperback book. Averaging 96 pages an issue, Prospice features major English and American writers, as well as those from the continent, e.g. No. 6 in late 1976, "Italian Poetry Today," was virtually an anthology of modern Italian poets and critical remarks on said poetry. Thanks to the high quality of the writers and the excellent editorial control, this is a major English language literary magazine which deserves a place in all large academic libraries.—BK

The British Library Journal

1975. Semiannual. $22. Ed: Howard M. Nixon. Oxford Univ. Pr., Neaden La., London NW10 0DD. Ill. Aud: Sa. (Subject: Bibliography. Issue examined: Vol. 1, No. 2, Autumn 1975)

Apparently this replaces the British Museum Quarterly, although each 100-page issue covers the same material, i.e., analysis of holdings of the British Library by a well known scholar. For example, one number featured articles on a manuscript poem by Robert Sidney, Jain illustrations, the Von Seibold collection, English bookbindings, and "recent acquisitions." Illustrated, well printed by Oxford University Press, and indexed at the end of each volume, this does credit to the British Museum library, whoops: the British Library.—BK

The Journal of California Anthropology

1974. Semiannual. $12; individuals, $7.50. Ed: Michael Kearney. Dept. of Anthropology, University of California, Riverside, Calif. 92502. Illus. Aud: Ac, Ga. (Subject: Anthropology, Amerindians. Issues examined: Vol 1, No. 2 and Vol. 3, No. 1, 1976)

Concerned primarily with the California Indians, this substantial 140-page journal deserves a wider readership than it is likely to get in most libraries. While obviously of importance for the dedicated scholar, the journal will readily engage the imagination of the layperson interested in the traditions which now make the Indians appear considerably more sophisticated and civilized than many later Americans. Divided between articles, reports, and comments, the journal is specifically dedicated to the "ethnology, archaeology, ethnohistory, languages, and arts of the native peoples of Alta and Baja California." While subs go to the University of California, the actual publisher is the Malki Museum on the Morongo Indian Reservation. Despite lack of funds and voluntary help, the magazine is handsome, carefully edited, and includes an adequate number of photographs and drawings. Given its likely interest for the lay and scholarly community, it can be recommended for both academic and public libraries.—BK

Atlantica & Iceland Review

1963. Quarterly. $9.25. Ed: Haraldur J. Hamar. Iceland Review, Storagerdi 27, P.O. Box 93, Reykjavik, Iceland. Illus. adv. Aud: Ga. (Subject: Travel and Regional)

Prompted by "how little many people knew about my country," the editor began this 50-page travel magazine over a decade ago. The eight to ten articles concentrate on Icelandic culture, history, nature, and business activities. The many full-color illustrations make it suitable for a general collection, particularly for the layperson with a yen to read about a too little publicized part of the world. What it does, it does marvelously well.—BK

Doing It!

1976. Bimonthly. $10. Urban Alternatives Group, P.O. Box 303, Worthington, Ohio 43085. Illus. Aud: Ac, Ga. (Subject: Urban Studies. Issue examined: No. 1, May 1976)

Directed to city dwellers, this is 80 pages of nonpolitical alternative schemes for everything from gardening and building to running a restaurant. Between the short articles and interviews are bits and bibliographical notes on self-help aids. The lack of any real focus other than a collection of 15 to 20 articles on aspects of alternative urban living works against the magazine. There isn't enough new material here to warrant purchase by any but the largest library.—BK

Green Mountain Quarterly

1975. Quarterly. $5. Green Mountain Editions, 462 N. Main St., Oshkosh, Wis. 54901. Illus. Aud: Ga, Ac. (Subject: Alternative Cultures. Issues examined: Nos. 1-4, 1975-1976)

Usually devoted to a single topic, this 80- to 100-page offset, illustrated magazine has considered feminism, free or nude beach activities, and a forgotten 1890s labor strike. The magazine is edited for the layperson, not the expert. It takes a prize for originality of topics, and while the authors are sometimes more urgent than brilliant, the materials seems accurate enough. The tone is liberal and progressive, and the monographic approach makes it a good choice for social science collections or for general reading where there is a call for alternative type publications.—BK

Photograph

1976. Monthly. $7.50. Ed: Will Faller, 250 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10010. Illus. adv. Aud: Ga, Ac. (Subject: Photography. Issues examined: Vol. 1, Nos. 1 & 2, 1976)

A 27- to 35-page tabloid printed on heavy, white stock, this is unique in that it is published by and for photographers and is supported by such as Roberta Hellman, Jim Hughes, A. D. Coleman, and other nationally famous photography critics. Controlled by a cooperative (all members so far work without pay), its aim is to present both practical information for working camera buffs and an intellectual appraisal of current and historical trends. In addition to four or five features, each issue normally includes an article on a famous photographer, critical appraisals, notes on education, and a large section devoted to photography shows, workshops, and lectures around the country. Although the format allows at least presentable pictures, most emphasis is on the writing, i.e., this is not simply a collection of photographs. In a sense, it is a thoughtful, carefully edited and produced little magazine for serious photographers and collectors. Among the growing number of photography magazines, it is one of the best.—BK

Harvest Quarterly

1976. Quarterly. $5. 907 Santa Barbara St., Santa Barbara, Calif. 93101. Illus. Aud: Ga, Ac. (Subject: Alternative Cultures. Issue examined: No. 1, 1976)

Plugging the collective way of survival, about half of each illustrated 50-page issue of Harvest Quarterly is devoted to articles on various alliances. The other half is the other side of the political-social picture—articles on the "police state" and the "company town." The editors open their pages to various liberal points of view which concentrate on methods of circumventing the present political and economic system. The writing is polemical yet informative. Still, it has little news to offer which is not now found in other magazines of the same type.—BK up market

In 1976-77, school libraries will spend nearly as much money on audio-visual equipment, materials and supplies as on books and periodicals combined. It is an estimated $168.5 million market . . . and growing.

up-to-date editorial

For intensive coverage of topics of importance to school and young adult librarians—including coverage on the use of non-print material for children and young adults—AV marketers cannot miss the opportunity offered in SLJ's April issue.

upper level influences

78% of the subscribers to SCHOOL LIBRARY JOURNAL influence the buying of AV hardware; 93% influence the purchase of software.
That's the upper level of purchasing power you get with SLJ.

up sales

SLJ, an editorial leader for over 24 years, is relied on today by more key library personnel than any other publication. In 1976, three-fourths of all advertising revenues for children's and young adult library services were placed in SLJ . . . so when it comes to upping your sales of AV hardware or software, this is the buy:

SLJ SCHOOL LIBRARY JOURNAL

APRIL AV ISSUE

March 8 for reservations and pub-set copy
March 15 for negatives or camera-ready art

Please send insertion orders and correspondence to School Library Journal, P.O. Box 641, Times Square Station, New York, N.Y. 10036
Send advertising material (mechanicals and artwork) to Advertising Traffic Dept., R.R. Bowker Co., 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10036

R. R. Bowker Company
1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10036

BUYERS' GUIDE

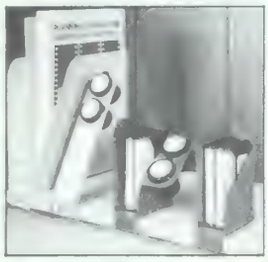
Thomas W. McConkey CHIEF, ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICE, FREE LIBRARY OF PHILADELPHIA

Every effort is made to evaluate carefully the products listed. However, mention here is not an endorsement. Prices are subject to change, and may vary in different geographical areas.

FIRE SIGNS

AUDIO-LEARNING DEVICE

MICROFOLDERS



INTEGRATED SHELVING

ARCHIVE BOXES

Fire equipment markers

Fire equipment location markers save valuable seconds by directing patrons and staff instantly to fire alarm boxes and fire extinguishing equipment. When electric power fails, the Seton series GSM Luminous Markers become visible in the dark. The markers are made of a flexible, heavy-duty, self-adhesive vinyl material which meets National Fire Prevention Association specifications. Metal markers, manufactured in two styles—single faced with four mounting holes or flanged with the same message on both sides to protrude from wall or post—are also available, as are fluorescent or standard vinyl markers, extinguisher class symbols, and porcelain sprinkler signs. For further information, contact Seton Name Plate Corp., 922 Boulevard, New Haven, Conn. 06505. (203) 772-2520.

Voice training aid

A new concept in voice training, which allows a person to hear his voice as others hear it, coordinates brain, speech, and hearing functions while eliminating outside noise. Valuable in teaching reading, speech improvement, and auditory discrimination, this learning device can be used as an individual practice aid or in group learning situations. Called the Enchanting Voice, this sound reflecting device consists of a mask that is secured to the user's head and conforms to the mouth in order to confine the voice to a predetermined region; tubes attached to the mask to conduct the sound from the mouth to the ears; and a chamber and diaphragm within the mask which receives sound for transmission through the tubes. The voice is transmitted directly to the middle and inner ear with perfect fidelity and no interference from outside noise. For further information, contact Gerwick, 189 Kaanapali Dr., Napa, Calif. 94558. (707) 226-2911.

Micrographic carriers

A new line of folder/carriers may be of interest to the increasing number of libraries loaning micrographics. Twelve different styles of folder/carriers are available for microfiche, jackets, aperture cards, and computer on microfilm (COM) generated materials. Some are designed to be used with standard three-ring binders; others to be carried, filed, transferred internally, or shipped anywhere. Each one features pockets to hold quantities of either microfiche or aperture cards and a companion large pocket to hold related source documents, printed material, instructions, details, blueprints, etc. Made of durable, all-clear vinyl with thermosealed and reinforced pockets, the folder/carriers are crack- and scratch-resistant and will not discolor with time. The average cost is 50¢ each in quantity; from Taylor-Merchant Micrographics, 25 W. 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10036. (212) 757-7700.

Media holders

Cassettes, filmstrips, guides, records, and transparencies can now be displayed alongside books in a new media holder called Unifiles and invented by media specialist Jennie Dameron of Abington, Virginia. The new shelving system eliminates the need for two separate storage and circulation systems for books and AV media; patrons simply retrieve media and borrower's card, if used, from the file which remains in position to receive returned media. Available in five different styles to hold different kinds and combinations of media, Unifiles are made of 20-gauge steel and finished in colorful epoxy. Each style is available in either rigid bracket for wood shelves up to 3/4" thick or spring-steel clip bracket for steel shelves to 1½" thick. Brackets are vinyl coated to prevent scratching of shelves, and since they are self-supporting, work like bookends to support adjacent books. Prices range from $1.25 each (in quantities of 10 or more) for units holding two cassettes to $5.63 each (in quantity) for larger units designed to accommodate a related group of filmstrips, records, manuals, etc.

A Unifile booktruck shelver is also available for keeping media in order when being moved from the circulation desk back to the shelves. Holding 30 filmstrips, 15 cassettes, and a 3" thick row of records and/or manuals and with space for 300 book cards, it fits atop a book truck with a flat top shelf. Also made of steel and finished with epoxy, it is 14" wide, 8" high, and 16" deep. Price is $15.95. Available from The Highsmith Co., Inc., Box 25, Highway 106, E. Ft. Atkinson, Wis. 53538. (414) 563-6356.

Print & document boxes

Print boxes, lined with Permalife and covered with a pyroxylin coated nonwoven substance of great durability, are now being used by the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New England Document and Conservation Center, and other major museums, galleries, and photographers. The boxes are available in the following sizes: 11" x 14" x 2½", 14" x 17" x 2½", and 16" x 20" x 1½"; and come with a brown washable covering. Other sizes and colors are available on special order. Prices, depending upon quantity and size, range from $6 to $11.25 each. From The Photography Place, Spread Eagle Village, 503 W. Lancaster Ave., Strafford, Pa. 19087. (215) 293-1222.

Coming from Academic Press

April-June 1977

ESSENTIAL ACQUISITIONS FOR YOUR SCIENCE AND TECHNICAL BOOK COLLECTIONS

Detailed information on these—and other—forthcoming publications from Academic Press can be found in the April/May/June AP* Report. Watch for your copy in the mail and keep it for reference.

ACADEMIC PRESS, INC.
A Subsidiary of
Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, Publishers
111 FIFTH AVENUE, N.Y., N.Y. 10003
24-28 OVAL ROAD, LONDON NW1 7DX

AP

Scientific, technical, medical, & business books

SCI/TECH & MEDICAL

REFERENCE

Audio Engineering Society, Inc.
Journal of the Audio Engineering Society Cumulative Index, 1953-1975.

Garland
Burton, P. E. A Dictionary of Microcomputing. Jan.
Watts, D. A Catalog of Operational Transfer Functions. Mar.

Marquis-Who's Who
Directory of Medical Specialists. 17th ed.
Environmental Protection Directory. 2d ed.
NIH Fact Book. 1st ed.
Standard Medical Almanac. 1st ed. May.
The NASA Fact Book. 2d ed.
The NSF Fact Book. 2d ed.
Who Was Who in American History.
World Who's Who in Science. 1st ed.

McGraw
McGraw-Hill. Encyclopedia of Science and Technology. 4th ed. Apr.
McGraw-Hill. 1977 Yearbook of Science and Technology. Jul.
Ouellette & King. Chemical Week Pesticides Register.

GENERAL

McGraw
Green. International Disaster Relief. Apr.
Greenwood & others. Nuclear Proliferation. Apr.

Mason/Charter
Perelman, L. J. The Global Mind.

AERONAUTICS & ASTRONAUTICS

Aero
Aero Staff. Airman's Information Manual. Jan.
Aero Staff. Federal Aviation Regulations for Pilots. Jan.
Burnham, F. A. Cleared to Land. Apr.
Friedlander, M. P., Jr. & G. Gurney. Higher, Faster and Farther. Feb.
Holder, W. G. Convair F-106 "Delta Dart". Jan.
Reithmaier, L. W. Private Pilot's Guide. Mar.
Thorpe, D. W. Japanese Naval Air Force Camouflage and Markings World War II. May.

AGRICULTURE & ANIMAL HUSBANDRY

American Society of Agricultural Engineers
Gray, R. B., comp. The Agricultural Tractor.
Rosenberg, S. H., ed. Rural America.

McGraw
Alth. How to Farm Your Own Backyard the Mulch-Organic Way.

ARCHITECTURE & BUILDING

McGraw
Anderson. Solar Energy. May.
Andrews. Building Mechanical Systems.
Architectural Record. Record House of 1977. Jul.
Architectural Record. Recycling Buildings.
Coombs & Palmer. Construction Accounting and Financial Management, 2d ed. Mar.
Harris. Historic Architecture Sourcebook. May.
Heimsath. Behavioral Architecture. Apr.
Izenour. Theater Design. May.
Lam. Perception and Lighting as Formgivers for Architecture. May.
Leggett & others. Planning Flexible Learning Places.
Palmer & Lewis. Planning the Office Landscape.
Stokes. Construction Law in Contractor's Language. May.
Whitman & Scharff. More First Aid for the Ailing House.

BIOLOGICAL SCIENCES

Churchill Livingstone
Smith, K. M. Virus-Insect Relationships. Feb.

CHEMISTRY & CHEMICAL TECHNOLOGY

Churchill Livingstone
Marsh, R. W., ed. Systemic Fungicides. Jun.

Gordon & Breach
Elias. Polymerization of Organized Systems. Mar.
Wessling. Polyvinylidene Chloride. Mar.

Springer-Verlag
Clementi, E. Determination of Liquid Water Structure.
Wagniere, G. H. Introduction to Elementary Molecular Theory and to Semiempirical Methods.

COMPUTERS & DATA PROCESSING

Follett
Horowitz, E. & S. Sahni. Fundamentals of Data Structure.
Van Cleempet, W. Computer Aided Design of Digital Systems. Vol. II.
Van Cleempet, W. Computer Aided Design of Digital Systems: a Bibliography.

Gordon & Breach
George. The Foundations of Cybernetics. Mar.

Mason/Charter
Schwob, P. R. How to Use Pocket Calculators.

Yourdon Pr.
Yourdon E. & L. Constantine. Structured Design. Dec.
Yourdon, E. & others. Learning to Program in Structured COBOL. Feb.

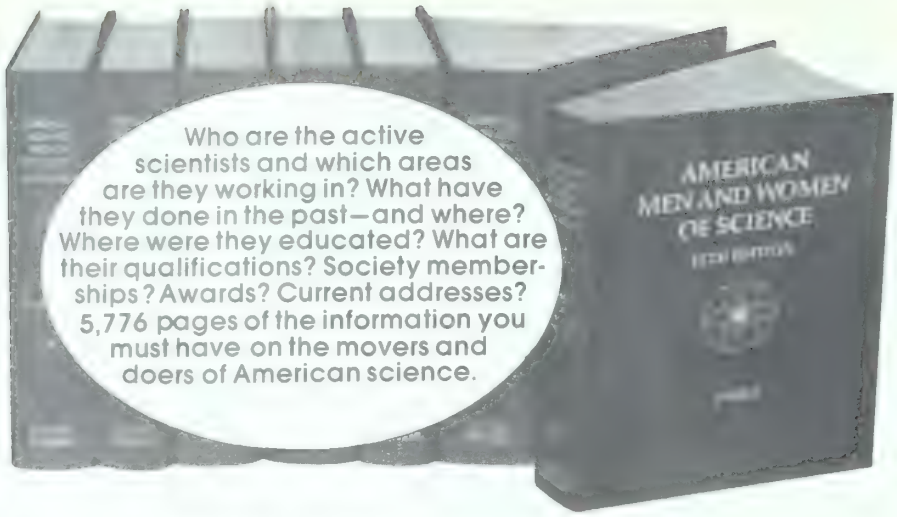
EARTH SCIENCE

Churchill Livingstone
Beavon, K. S. O. Central Place Theory.

Gordon & Breach
Jeffreys, Sir. Collected Papers of Sir Harold Jeffreys on Geophysics and Other Sciences. Mar.

Continued on p. 572

With this issue of LJ, publishers announce new titles for the spring season in the fields of science, technology, medicine and business. The following index, arranged by subject, includes: name of publisher, author, title, and date of publication if not already available. Additional information may be found in the directory of publisher's advertisements on p. 640.



Who are the active scientists and which areas are they working in? What have they done in the past—and where? Where were they educated? What are their qualifications? Society memberships? Awards? Current addresses? 5,776 pages of the information you must have on the movers and doers of American science.
AMERICAN MEN AND WOMEN OF SCIENCE

the one reference work you need to put the scientific community at your fingertips

AMERICAN MEN AND WOMEN OF SCIENCE

Thirteenth Edition

Since the 12th edition appeared, the world of science has altered dramatically. This new edition records all the changes and captures all the new scientists and projects. It provides the only comprehensive access to scienists active in universities, industries, foundations, government projects in every state of the union and Canadian province.

Prepared with the help of a distinguished advisory board the 13th edition has—

- current, concise, in-depth biographies of some 110,000 U.S. and Canadian scientists working and teaching in 1,000 areas of the physical, biological and selected social sciences...
- alphabetically-arranged entries—including full name, discipline, education, professional experience, memberships, areas of research, specialization and address...
- a separate index volume listing the scientists by city and state, province, or country if working abroad, and by 79 major subject headings. (Almost 30 percent of the names are listed under more than one subject area.)

AMWS is indispensable for finding out who's doing what in which scientific areas now...and what they've done in the past.

It belongs in every institution where scientists must be contacted, evaluated, researched, written about.

Edited by Jaques Cattell Press. ISBN 0-8352-0865-6. ISSN 0065-9347. LC 6-7326. 1976. 5,776 pp. $50 per volume. $300 the 7-volume set.

Order from R. R. Bowker Order Dept., P. O. Box 1807, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106.
Outside Western Hemisphere: Bowker, Erasmus House, Epping, Essex, England.

All orders plus shipping and handling. Sales tax added where applicable. Prices subject to change and slightly higher outside the U.S. and its possessions.

BOWKER
NEW YORK & LONDON

BUTTERWORTH'S

JANUARY

ADAPTATION TO ENVIRONMENT: Studies on the Physiology of Marine Animals
Newell, R.C. (0-408-70778-X) $49.50

CHEMISORPTION: An Experimental Approach
Vedler, G., translated by Klemperer, D. (0-408-10611-5) $24.95

CONSERVATION AND RESTORATION OF PICTORIAL ART
Brommelle, N.S. and Smith, P.
(0-408-70712-7) $37.95

IUCOP 1969;1973
BRITISH UNION-CATALOGUE OF PERIODICALS: New Periodical Titles 1969-1973
Gascoigne, J. (0-408-70796-8) $37.50

EVALUATED KINETIC DATA FOR HIGH TEMPERATURE REACTIONS, Vol. 3
Baulch, D.L., Duxbury, J., Drysdale, D.D. and Grant, S.J.
(0-408-70787-9) $39.95

MATHEMATICAL MODELLING
Andrews, J.G. and McLone, R.R.
(0-408-10601-8) $7.95

WORLD LIST OF NATIONAL NEWSPAPERS
Webber, R. (0-408-70817-4) $19.95

CLINICAL METHODS: The History, Physical and Laboratory Examinations, Vol. 1
Walker, H.K., Hall, W.D. and Hurst, J.W. (0-409-95003-3) $12.00

CLINICAL METHODS: The History, Physical and Laboratory Examinations, Vol. 2
Walker, H.K., Hall, W.D. and Hurst, J.W. (0-409-95004-1) $16.00

MODERN TRENDS IN PSYCHOSOMATIC MEDICINE, 3rd ed.
Hill, O.W. (0-407-31302-8) $29.50

ORAL MANIFESTATIONS OF SYSTEMIC DISEASES
Shklar, G. and McCarthy, P.
(0-409-95002-5) $19.95

CLINICAL METHODS: The History, Physical and Laboratory Examinations Vol. 1 & 2
Walker, H.K., Hall, W.D. and Hurst, J.W. (0-409-95006-8) $29.50

ESSENTIAL HEPATOLOGY
Chen, T.S. and Chen, P.S.
(0-409-95005-X) $24.50

FOUNDATIONS OF BIOCHEMICAL PSYCHIATRY
Siegal, D.S., Yager, J. and Sullivan, J. (0-409-95001-7) $19.95

FEBRUARY

MAMMALIAN CELL MEMBRANES, Volume 2: The Diversity of Membranes
Jamieson, G.A. and Robinson, D.M.
(0-408-70723-2) $49.50

MAMMALIAN CELL MEMBRANES, Volume 3: Surface Membranes of Specific Cell Types
Jamieson, G.A. and Robinson, D.M.
(0-408-70773-9) $37.50

METAL CUTTING
Trent, E.M. (0-408-10603-4) $19.95

MICROFORM & LIBRARIANSHIP
Teague, S.J. (0-408-70799-2) $8.50

NUTRITION AND THE CLIMATIC ENVIRONMENT
Haresign, W., Swan, H. and Lewis, D. (0-408-70819-0) $17.95

OPERATIVE SURGERY SERIES, 3rd ed., Vascular Surgery
Rob, C. (0-407-00644-3) $49.94

THE MOTORCYCLE MANUAL
Bacon, R.H. (0-408-00260-3) $6.95

MARCH

ALCOHOL DEPENDENCE (Postgraduate Psychiatry Series)
Hore, B.D. (0-407-00082-8) $10.95

PSYCHIATRY AND THE PEDIATRICIAN (Postgraduate Pediatric Series)
Stone, F.H. (0-407-00074-7) $12.95

NYLON PLASTICS TECHNOLOGY
Nelson, W.E. and Redfarn, C.A.
(0-408-00251-4) $19.95

PLANNING: Buildings for Habitation, Commerce & Industry 9th ed.
Mills, E.D. (0-408-00226-3) $27.50

DARWIN TO DOUBLE HELIX: The Biological Theme in Science Fiction
Isaacs, L. (0-408-71302-X) (Paper) $1.95

GALILEO AND COPERNICAN ASTRONOMY: A Scientific World View Defined
Morphet, C. (0-408-71303-8) (Paper) $1.95

RESEARCH & TECHNOLOGY AS ECONOMIC ACTIVITIES
Green, K. and Morphet, C.
(0-408-71300-3) (Paper) $1.95

TECHNOLGOY AND SURVIVAL
Braun, E. and Collingridge, D.
(0-408-71301-1) (Paper) $1.95

SOCIETY AND FOOD: The Third World
Manning, D. (0-408-71304-6) (Paper) $1.95

SCIENCE TECHNOLOGY AND THE MODERN INDUSTRIAL STATE
Pavitt, K. and Worboye, M.
(0-408-71299-6) (Paper) $1.95

APRIL

USE OF SOCIAL SCIENCE LITERATURE
Roberts, N. (0-408-10602-6) $19.95

MAMMALIAN CELL MEMBRANES, Volume 4: Membranes & Cellular Functions
Jamieson, G. A. and Robinson, D.M.
(0-408-70774-7) $37.50

MAMMALIAN CELL MEMBRANES, Volume 5: Responses of Plasma Membranes
Jamieson, G. A. and Robinson, D. M.
(0-408-70775-5) $37.50

SOURCES AND METHODS IN GEOGRAPHY: Sediments
Briggs (0-408-70815-8) $3.95

NATIONAL LIBRARY & INFORMATION SERVICES: A Handbook For Planners
Penna, C. V., Fosket, D. J. and Sewell, P. H. (0-408-70818-2) $16.95

REPRODUCTION
Cohen, J. (0-408-70798-4) $6.95

MENTAL HANDICAP IN CHILD HEALTH PRACTICE (Postgraduate Pediatric Series)
Mackay, R. J. (0-407-00113-1) $19.95

MAY

NEUTRON SCATTERING IN CHEMISTRY
Bacon (0-408-70800-X) $25.95

CLINICAL REFRACTION AND VISUAL SCIENCE Levene, J. R. (0-407-00043-7) $24.95

PATHOLOGY OF PERIPHERAL NERVES (Postgraduate Pathology Series)
Weller, R. O. and Cervos-Navarro, J.
(0-407-00073-9) $27.95

PRINCIPLES FOR FIRST AID FOR THE INJURED, 3rd ed.
Proctor, H. and London, P. S.
(0-407-36441-2) $13.95

ORAL MANIFESTATIONS OF INHERITED DISORDERS Sedano, H. O., Sauk, J. S. and Gorlin, R. J. (0-409-95050-5) $19.95

VERTEBRAL MANIPULATION, 4th ed.
Maitland, G. D. (0-407-43504-2) $17.95

WATSON'S ADVANCED TEXTILE DESIGN, 4th ed.
Grosicki, Z. J. (0-408-00250-6) $26.50

VEHICLE RECOVERY
Grice, R. J. (0-408-00264-6) $10.50

JUNE

CHILDHOOD DIABETES AND ITS MANAGEMENT (Postgraduate Pediatric Series) Cragi, J.O. (0-407-00126-3) $16.95

CONTACT LENS CORRECTION
Bier, N. and Lowther, G. E.
(0-407-00101-8) $54.95

DEVELOPMENTAL PEDIATRICS (Postgraduate Pediatric Series)
Holt, K. S. (0-407-00065-8) $11.95

DIAGNOSTIC RADIOLOGY IN PEDIATRICS (Postgraduate Pediatrics Series)
Gordon, I. R. S. and Ross, F. G. M.
(0-407-00121-2) $49.95

OPERATIVE SURGERY SERIES, 3rd ed., Hand
Pulvertaft, R. G. (0-407-00618-4) In Prep

CONCRETE FOR STRUCTURAL ENGINEERS
Wilby (0-408-00256-5) $19.95

EXPORT PRACTICE & DOCUMENTATION, 2nd ed. (Marketing in Europe Series)
Walker, A. G. (0-408-00271-9) $15.95

FURTHER COMPUTER APPRECIATION
Fry (0-408-00239-5) $7.95

HOME DECORATING (D.I.Y. Series)
Wilkins, T.
(0-408-00243-3) (Paper) $4.95

HOME ELECTRICS (D.I.Y. Series)
Burdett, G.
(0-408-00246-X) (Paper) $4.95

HOME PLUMBING (D.I.Y. Series)
Hall, E. (0-408-00246-8) (Paper) $4.95

METALLIC COATINGS FOR CORROSION CONTROL
Carter (0-408-00270-0) (Paper) $18.95

JULY

APPLIED CARDIOVASCULAR PHYSIOLOGY, 2nd ed.
Kelman, G. R. (0-407-10881-5) $22.95

APPLIED RESPIRATORY PHYSIOLOGY, 2nd ed.
Nunn, J. F. (0-407-00060-7) $35.00

NEUROMUSCULAR FUNCTION AND DISORDERS
McComas, A. (0-407-0058-5) $36.95

OPERATIVE SURGERY SERIES, 3rd ed., Colon, Rectum and Anus
Todd, I.P. (0-407-00606-0) In Prep

OPERATIVE SURGERY SERIES, 3rd ed., Gynecology and Obstetrics Roberts, D. W. T.
(0-407-00615-X) In Prep

AUGUST

VALENCY AND MOLECULAR STRUCTURE, 4th ed.
Cartmell, E. and Fowles, G. W. A.
(0-408-70809-3) $8.95

MECHANICAL TECHNOLOGY
Bacon, Stephen (0-408-00280-8) $13.95

SEPTEMBER

REMOTE SENSING OF THE TERRESTRIAL ENVIRONMENT
Peel, R. F., Curtis, L. F. and Barrette, E
(0-408-70805-0) (Paper) In Prep

ELEMENTARY REACTION KINETICS, 3rd Ed.
Burgess, A. E. and Latham, J. L.
(0-408-46102-0) Paper) $5.95

INDEX OF VIBRATIONAL SPECTRA OF INORGANIC & ORGANOMETALLIC COMPOUNDS, Vol. 3 1964-1966
Greenwood, N. N. and Ross, E. J. F.
(0-408-70791-7) (Paper) In Prep

USE OF MATHEMATICAL LITERATURE
Dorling, A. R.
(0-408-70913-8) (Paper) In Prep

GROUP PSYCHOTHERAPY (Postgraduate Psychiatry Series)
Cohen (0-407-00130-1) (Paper) In Prep

OPERATIVE SURGERY SERIES, 3rd ed., Cardiothoracic Surgery
Jackson, J. W.
(0-407-00604-4) (Paper) In Prep

OPERATIVE SURGERY SERIES, 3rd ed., Urology
Williams, D. I.
(0-407-00612-5) (Paper) In Prep

FUNDAMENTALS OF CARDIOLOGY
Davies, H. and Nelson, W. P.
(0-409-95060-2) (Paper) In Prep

All prices and publication dates subject to change without notice.

1977

BUTTERWORTH GROUP * 19 Cummings Park * Woburn, MA 0180

Specialists in Specialization

BIOSCIENCE

BIOCHEMICAL TOXICOLOGY OF ENVIRONMENTAL AGENTS A. De Bruin A balanced overview of the fields of toxicology and radiation biology at the biochemical level. 1544 p., $123.75, ISBN 0-444-41455-X, 1976.

SIDE EFFECTS OF DRUGS ANNUAL 1977 M.N.G. Dukes (ed.) Now published annually, the series is compiled by the same international team of physicians that contribute to Meyler's Side Effects of Drugs. 380 p., $38.50, ISBN 90-219-3038-2, 1977.

THE CELL SURFACE IN ANIMAL EMBRYOGENESIS AND DEVELOPMENT Cell Surface Reviews, Vol. 1 G. Poste and G.L. Nicolson (eds.) The first volume in this new series contains thirteen authoritative articles, offering a complete overview of the important stages of development. 790 p., $84.75, ISBN 0-7204-0597-1, 1977.

LABORATORY TECHNIQUES IN BIOCHEMISTRY AND MOLECULAR BIOLOGY, Vol. 5 Part 1: Techniques for Sample Preparation for Liquid Scintillation Counting Part 2: Isoelectric Focusing T.S. Work and E. Work (eds.) A new addition to this widely acclaimed series. 602 p., $59.75, ISBN 0-7204-4219-2, 1976.

PHARMACOLOGICAL AND CHEMICAL SYNONYMS E.E.J. Marler A valuable, up-to-date collection of more than 16,000 names of drugs and other compounds, drawn from the medical literature of the world. 520 p., $74.95, ISBN 90-219-9249-3, 1976.

PLATELETS IN BIOLOGY AND PATHOLOGY Research Monographs in Cell and Tissue Physiology, Vol. 1 J.L. Gordon (ed.) The first volume in this new series acquaints the physiologist and pathologist with the diversity of biological processes in platelets. 402 p., $50.95, ISBN 0-7204-0601-3, 1977.

PROTEINASES OF MAMMALIAN CELLS AND TISSUES Research Monographs in Cell and Tissue Physiology, Vol. 2 U.J. Barrett (ed.) Reviews isolation and properties of proteinases in vitro. 800 p. (approx.), $92.50 (tent.), Sched. 1977.

THE MOLECULAR BIOLOGY OF THE MAMMALIAN GENETIC APPARATUS, Vol. 1 P.O.P. Ts'o (ed.) The first of two volumes treating critical subjects in mammalian genetic apparatus. 468 p., $45.20, ISBN 0-7204-0625-0, Sched. 1977.

BUSINESS

THE MANAGEMENT OF ORGANIZATION DESIGN R.H. Kilmann, L.R. Pondy, P. Slevin (eds.) Volume I: Strategies and Implementation. Management design is seen as a conscious problem-solving and planning process. Volume II: Research and Methodology. In-depth discussions of research methods, including multivariate, cross-sectional and longitudinal analyses. Vol. I: 320 p., $19.50, ISBN 0-444-00188-3, 1976. Vol. II: 254 p., $19.50, ISBN 0-444-00189-1, 1976.

SOCIAL SYSTEMS DESIGN Normative Theory and the MAPS Design Technology R.H. Kilmann Advances the first comprehensive integration of organization design theories into a practical design technology. 334 p., $18.50, ISBN 0-444-00198-0, 1977.

MANPOWER PLANNING MODELS R.C. Grinold and K.T. Marshall An overview of manpower trade-offs and the mathematical models essential for analyzing policy. 296 p., $19.50, ISBN 0-444-00190-5, 1977.

FUNDAMENTALS OF DECISION THEORY D.J. White Broad perspective, comprehensive coverage and an introductory level approach to decision theory. 408 p., $35.00, ISBN 0-444-00193-X, 1976.

MODERN MATERIALS MANAGEMENT R.J. Tersine and J.H. Campbell Comprehensive and up-to-date coverage of materials, their costs, availability, demand and saleability in the production process. 304 p. (approx.), $16.95 (tent.), Sched. 1977.

CONSUMER AND INDUSTRIAL BUYING BEHAVIOR A.G. Woodside, J.N. Sheth and P.D. Bennett (eds.) Top authorities give an extensive analysis of both consumer and industrial buying behavior. 416 p. (approx.), $19.50 (tent.), Sched. 1977.

COMPUTER SCIENCE

COMPUTER PERFORMANCE MEASUREMENT AND EVALUATION METHODS: ANALYSIS AND APPLICATIONS L. Svobodova Details the problems of performance evaluation and analyzes available techniques for evaluation. 146 p., $14.95, ISBN 0-444-00197-2, 1976.

A STRUCTURE FOR PLANS AND BEHAVIOR E.D. Sacerdoti Describes the progress that has been made in computer science's ability to understand and reason about actions. 155 p. (approx.), $15.95 (tent.), ISBN 0-444-00209-X, Sched. 1977.

GRAMMARS FOR PROGRAMMING LANGUAGES J.C. Cleaveland and R.C. Uzgalis An invaluable introduction to what every programmer should know about grammar. 176 p., $15.95, ISBN 0-444-00199-9, 1977.

A PROCESS VIEW OF SIMULATION W.R. Franta Introduces, motivates and completely develops a flexible and powerful process-oriented simulation system. 195 p. (approx.), $15.95 (tent.), Sched. 1977.

FUZZY AUTOMATA AND DECISION PROCESSES M.M. Gupta and G.N. Saridis (eds.) Twenty-eight international experts give an up-to-date account of recent developments in the theory of fuzzy sets and its applications. 336 p. (approx.), $20.00 (tent.), ISBN 0-444-00208-1, Sched. 1977.

ELEMENTS OF SOFTWARE SCIENCE M. Halstead Collects and organizes developments in software physics previously unavailable in a single volume. 160 p. (approx.), $14.95 (tent.), ISBN 0-444-00205-7, Sched. 1977.

FLOW ANALYSIS OF COMPUTER PROGRAMS M. S. Hecht Provides a theoretical foundation for the flow analysis of computer programs. 195 p. (approx.), $15.95 (tent.), ISBN 0-444-00210-3, Sched. 1977.

MATHEMATICS

INTRODUCTION TO LINEAR ALGEBRA FOR SCIENCE AND ENGINEERING Second Revised Edition D.G.B. Edelen and A.D. Kydoniefs A clear presentation of theoretical principles and their applications. 288 p., $10.95, ISBN 0-444-00195-6, 1976.

INTRODUCTORY COMBINATORICS R.A. Brualdi A concise introduction to the ideas and methods of combinatorics. 320 p. (approx.), $18.50 (tent.), ISBN 0-444-00203, Sched. 1977.

ORDINARY DIFFERENTIAL EQUATIONS T. Myint-U Presents a fundamental theory of ordinary differential equations and important methods and techniques for solving a diverse class of equations. 288 p. (approx.), $14.95 (tent.), ISBN 0-444-00207-3, Sched. 1977.

MEDICINE

PSYCHOBIOLOGY AND HUMAN DISEASE H. Weiner The first in-depth review of psychosomatic medicine in two decades. 704 p. (approx.), Special Introductory Price $39.50, ISBN 0-444-00212-X, Sched. 1977.

HANDBOOK OF CLINICAL NEUROLOGY Vol. 28: Metabolic and Deficiency Diseases of the Nervous System P.J. Vinken and G.W. Bruyn (eds.) Another outstanding addition to the Handbook, a cooperative effort of more than 700 international experts in the fields of neurology. 636 p., $93.95, Subscr. price $79.95, ISBN 0-7204-7228-8, 1976.

HANDBOOK OF SEXOLOGY J. Money and H. Musaph (eds.) A comprehensive and definitive perspective on human sexuality. 1440 p., $79.95, ISBN 90-219-2104-9, 1976.

MEMBRANE MORPHOLOGY OF THE VERTEBRATE NERVOUS SYSTEM: A Study with Freeze-Etch Technique. Progress in Brain Research, Vol. 46 C. Sandri, J. M. Van Buren and K. Akert The latest volume in this series presents the results of extensive research in freeze-etch morphology along with 200 superb photographs of freeze-etch preparations. 400 p., $67.50, ISBN 0-444-41479-7, 1977.

SERONEGATIVE POLYARTHRITIS V. Wright and J.M.H. Moll The first comprehensive account of seronegative polyarthritis. 510 p., $61.50, ISBN 0-7204-0591-2,1976.

POWER AND ILLNESS The Political Sociology of Health and Medical Care Elliott A. Krause A thought-provoking analysis of our present system of medical care. 400 p., $13.50 (tent.), ISBN 0-444-99037-2, Sched. 1977.

Titles of additional interest

USING THE COMPUTER IN THE SOCIAL SCIENCES: A NON-TECHNICAL APPROACH R.J. Hy Offers a working knowledge of computer technology that is essential for all social scientists engaged in research. 160 p. (approx.) $8.95 (tent.), ISBN 0-444-00211-1, Sched. 1977.

THE INDUSTRIAL MOTOR USERS' HANDBOOK OF INSULATION FOR REWINDS L.J. Rejda and K. Neville The only available comprehensive source on modern insulation materials and systems used on industrial motors. 424 p., $35.00, ISBN 0-444-00191-3, 1977.

VOLCANOES AND IMPACT CRATERS ON THE MOON AND MARS P. Leonardi A complete and lavishly illustrated picture of our current knowledge of the Moon and Mars, based on telescopic observations. 448 p., $61.95, ISBN 0-444-99821-7, 1976.

TECHNICAL LITERATURE SEARCH AND THE WRITTEN REPORT D.J. Maltha A complete guide to obtaining technical literature and producing a written report. 204 p., $9.95 paper, ISBN 0-444-19501-7, 1976.

ENERGY POLICIES OF THE WORLD, Vol. 2 G.J. Mangone (ed.) A detailed analysis by leading experts of the energy policies of Indonesia, the North Sea Countries and the Soviet Union. 336 p., $19.50 (tent.), ISBN 0-444-00206-5, Sched. 1977.

All prices subject to change without prior notice.

ELSEVIER NORTH-HOLLAND INC.
52 VANDERBILT AVENUE NEW YORK, NEW YORK 10017

Praeger
Politics of Environmental Concern. Mar.

ENGINEERING

Follett
Breuer, M. Digital Systems Design Automation.
Breuer, M., ed. Journal of Design Automation and Fault Tolerance.
Breuer, M. & A. Friedman. Diagnosis & Reliables of Digital Systems.
Friedman, A. Logical Design of Digital Systems.
Friedman, A. & T. R. Nenos. Theory & Design of Switching Circuits.

McGraw
Brady & Clauser. Materials Handbook. 11th ed. May.
Chuse. Pressure Vessels. 5th ed. May.
Conover. Grounds Maintenance Handbook. 3d ed.
Considine. Energy Technology Handbook. May.
Giacoletto. Electronics Designers' Handbook, 2d ed. Mar.
Gieck. Engineering Formulas. 2d ed.
Graeme. Designing with Operational Amplifiers. Mar.
Hajek. Management of Engineering Projects. 2d ed. Apr.
Harper. Handbook of Components for Electronics. Apr.
Hewlett-Packard. Optoelectronics Manual. May.
Higgins & Morrow. Maintenance Engineering Handbook. 3d ed. Mar.
Lewis. Management Handbook for Plant Engineers.
Parmley. Standard Handbook of Fastening and Joining. Mar.
Peckner & Bernstein. Handbook of Stainless Steels. Apr.
Reid & others. The Properties of Gases and Liquids. 3d ed.
Shinsky. Distillation Control.
Smeaton. Switchgear and Control Handbook.
Texas Instruments, Inc. Power Transistor and TTL Integrated-Circuit Applications. Mar.

MATHEMATICS & STATISTICS

Gordon & Breach
Chihara. An Introduction to Orthogonal Polynominals. Jun.
Fortet. Elements of Probability Theory. Mar.

PHYSICS

Gordon & Breach
Balian & Peube. Fluid Dynamics. Apr.
Bacry. Lectures on Group Theory and Particle Theory. Apr.
Bennett. The Physics of Gas Lasers. Mar.
Levy. Cargese Lectures in Physics. Apr.
Nikolic. Methods in Subnuclear Physics. Mar.

Springer-Verlag
Bashkin, S., ed. Beam-Foil Spectroscopy.
Beck, R. & others. Table of Laser Lines in Gases and Vapors.
Holt, M. Numerical Methods of Fluid Dynamics. Apr.
Ibach, H., ed. Electron Spectroscopy for Surface Analysis. May.
Koechner, W. Solid-State Laser Engineering.
Letokhov, V. S. & V. P. Chebotayev. Nonlinear Laser Spectroscopy. May.
Mooradian, A. & others, eds. Tunable Lasers and Applications.
Thomas, A. W., ed. Modern Three-Hadron Physics. Jan.

MEDICAL SCIENCES

Churchill Livingstone
Symmers, W. St. Clair, ed. Systemic Pathology. Vol. 1 1976, Vol. 2 & 3 1977, Vol. 4 1978.
Thompson, R. B. Disorders of the Blood. 1977.
Wilson, J. N., ed. Watson Jones Fractures and Joint Injuries. Nov.

Continued on p. 578

MARQUIS
Who'sWho

Now publisher of more than 45 helpful and informative reference titles in science, business, education, medicine, politics, and of course, biography!

Publisher of Who'sWho in America since 1898.

Standard Medical Almanac, 1st Ed.
Statistical data and research reports on U.S. medical costs, facilities, manpower, education, diseases, and federal aid. Pub. May 1977; ISBN 0-8379-4001-X; 600 + pages; hardbound; $34.50

Who Was Who in American History—Science and Technology. More than 10,000 Who's Who sketches of outstanding scientists, engineers, and inventors. Pub. Aug. 1976. ISBN 0-8379-6301-2; 688 pages; hardbound; $47.50

NIH Factbook (National Institutes of Health), 1st Ed
A complete guide to current programs, grants, and activities of all 12 institutes that make up NIH. Pub. Jan. 1976. ISBN 0-8379-3401-X; 597 pages; hardbound; $44.50

NSF Factbook (National Science Foundation), 2nd Ed
Detailed statistics and descriptions of NSF grants, research, legislation, special projects, and more. Pub. Jan. 1975. ISBN 0-8379-2201-1; 561 pages; hardbound; $44.50

NASA Factbook (National Aeronautics and Space Administration), 2nd Ed. Statistics and descriptions of current programs, research, grants, and, legislation. Pub. Jan. 1975. ISBN 0-8379-1801-4; 613 pages; hardbound; $44.50

Directory of Medical Specialists, 17th Ed. 2 volumes Official roster of 159,000 + diplomates of member boards of American Board of Medical Specialties. Pub. Dec. 1975. ISBN 0-8379-0517-6; 3,766 pages; hardbound; $69.50

Environmental Protection Directory, 2nd Ed. Lists government and private organizations where users can seek information or assistance. Pub. Nov. 1975 ISBN 0-8379-2601-7; 526 pages; hardbound; $44.50

World Who's Who in Science, 1st Ed
32,000 Who's Who sketches of the world's most outstanding scientists from antiquity to the 20th century. Pub. 1968 ISBN 0-8379-1001-3; 1,855 pages; hardbound; $60.00

Directory of Registered Lobbyists and Lobbyist Legislation, 2nd Ed. Lists 16,000 lobbyists plus federal and state laws regulating their activities. Pub. Nov. 1975. ISBN 0-8379-2402-2; 645 pages; hardbound; $44.50

Consumer Protection Directory, 2nd Ed
Lists government and private organizations where users can seek information or assistance. Pub. Nov. 1975. ISBN 0-8379-2701-3; 466 pages; hardbound; $44.50

Send for new catalog listing all Marquis Publications

MARQUIS
Who'sWho INC.
200 East Ohio Street, Chicago, Illinois 60611 U.S.A.

AM/77-7 C7

Announcing... the new Fourth Edition of

The McGraw-Hill

ENCYCLOPEDIA OF SCIENCE & TECHNOLOGY

Daniel N. Lapedes, Editor-in-Chief

Revised, updated, and expanded to give your library the most complete and authoritative science reference ever published. (Available in April, 1977)

FREE ILLUSTRATED 16-PAGE PROSPECTUS

An earlier edition of this widely used Encyclopedia was described by Library Journal as "Preeminent in its field . . . highly recommended for school, college, and public libraries." And Wilson Library Journal unhesitatingly recommended it—even to libraries that already owned previous editions!

And now this newly revised, expanded work is of still greater value, because in growing and evolving, it is a clear, up-to-date reflection of a world that changes with each new discovery in science.

Boon to librarians

The Encyclopedia offers library patrons an indispensable reference to theories, concepts, and procedures, as well as to the latest developments in every scientific and engineering discipline from Acoustics to Vertebrate Zoology. It distills the knowledge and experience of today's greatest minds—scientists and engineers—top authorities from research and industry—all writing about their own activities in their respective fields.

A massive undertaking

Definitive, current, and readily accessible to all readers, the Encyclopedia is as timely as today's headlines. In addition to all traditional fields of science and technology, it provides coverage of topics that are eminently newsworthy—Pollution Control, Space and Undersea Exploration, Solar Power, Continent Formation, Drug Addiction, Nuclear Fusion, and many others. The famed Index volume, hailed by librarians everywhere as a "model" index, now contains nearly 140,000 citations, and there is also a topical listing of all articles in each specific field. (Note also that your purchase of the Encyclopedia at your institutional price, you are eligible to purchase the annual Yearbook of Science and Technology which keeps the Encyclopedia continually up to date. This volume is described in the Prospectus offered below).

Please take the time to examine the Prospectus at length. It will provide you with full information on the Encyclopedia itself, on the prestigious contributors, on the many new features, and on the enthusiasm of reviewers writing of earlier editions. Publication of this Fourth Edition represents a massive undertaking, and acqusition of the work will be of major importance to any library.

IMPORTANT: A curriculum-oriented Study Guide is included with every Encyclopedia, providing an integral part of any teaching or self-study program.

15 volumes • 7,800 articles • 13,100 illustrations with 354 in full color • 140,000-entry Analytical Index • 100-entry Topical Index • Readers' Guide • Scientific Notation Section with SI Conversion Tables • the work of 2,500 contributors • Special Institutional Price, $447.00 net (list price $497.00).

McGraw-Hill Book Company
1221 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10020

Please send the free full-color Prospectus describing the new Fourth Edition of the McGraw-Hill Encyclopedia of Science and Technology.

Name_____

Library_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____ Zip_____

☐ Check here if you wish your local McGraw-Hill representative to call and discuss the new EST further.

18961

McGraw-Hill Spring 1977

ARCHITECTURE

Behavioral Architecture (Heimsath). April. 0-07-027890-3. $15.50

Building Mechanical Systems (Andrews). Published. 0-07-001847-2. $24.50

Historic Architecture Sourcebook (Harris). May. 0-07-026755-3. $19.95

More First Aid for the Ailing House (Whitman & Scharff). Published. 0-07-069985-2. $14.95

Perception and Lighting as Formgivers for Architecture (Lam). May. 0-07-036094-4. $24.95

Planning Flexible Learning Places (Leggett, et al). Published. 0-07-037060-5. $18.50

Planning the Office Landscape (Palmer & Lewis). Published. 0-07-048415-5. $17.50

Record Houses of 1977 (Architectural Record). July. 0-07-002327-1. $5.00

Recycling Buildings (Architectural Record). Published. 0-07-002335-2. $19.50

Solar Energy (Anderson). May. 0-07-001751-4. $17.50

Theater Design (Izenour). May. 0-07-032086-1. $39.50

BUSINESS

Burglarproof: (Keogh & Koster). April. 0-07-034146-X $9.95

Chemical Week Pesticides Register (Ouellette & King). Published. 0-07-047498-8. $95.00

Do-It-Yourself Marketing Research (Breen). April. 0-07-007445-3. $14.95

The Gregg Reference Manual, 5/e (Sabin). March. 0-07-054388-7. $8.95

Handbook of Modern Accounting, 2/e (Davidson & Weil). Published. 0-07-015451-1. $29.95

Handbook of Wealth Management (Barnes & Feldman). June. 0-07-003765-8. $25.00

Insolvency Accounting (Wiener & Christian). Published. 0-07-070135-0. $16.50

Leaders in the Textile Industry (Christiansen). March. 0-07-063721-0. $35.00

McGraw-Hill Directory of Manufacturers' Representatives (Holtje). May. 0-07-029640-5. $60.00

Practical Operating Budgeting (Matthews). April. 0-07-040950-1. $14.95

Preparing Art and Camera Copy for Printing (Latimer). March. 0-07-036620-9. $16.50

Protect Yourself in Real Estate (Irwin). May. 0-07-032064-0. $12.95

Registry of Manhattan Office Spaces (Ballard). March. 0-07-003485-0. $75.00

Rewarding Executive Talent (Kaufman). May. 0-07-033421-8. $100.00

Stock Market Strategy (Crowell). April. 0-07-014720-5. $14.50

Successful Personal Money Management 1977 (McGraw-Hill) Published. 0-07-044750-0. $19.95

20,000 Words, 7/e (Leslie). May. 0-07-037392-2 $4.95

Working with the Public Accountant (Lurie). Published. 0-07-039107-6. $14.95

You Can Get Your Real Estate Taxes Reduced (Gettel). April. 0-07-023174-5. $11.50

ENGINEERING

Automatic Data Processing Handbook (Diebold). March. 0-07-016807-5. $29.50

Construction Accounting and Financial Management, 2/e (Coombs & Palmer). March. 0-07-012610. $21.50

Construction Law in Contractor's Language (Stokes). May. 0-07-061635-3. $17.50

Designing with Operational Amplifiers (Graeme). March. 0-07-023891-X. $17.50

Distillation Control (Shinskey). Published. 0-07-056893-6. $19.75

Electronics Designers' Handbook, 2/e (Giacoletto). March. 0-07-023149-4. $47.50

Energy Technology Handbook (Considine). May. 0-07-012430-2. $29.50

Engineering Formulas, 2/e (Gieck). Published. 0-07-023203-2. $9.95

Grounds Maintenance Handbook, 3/e (Conover). Published. 0-07-012412-4 $24.75

Handbook of Components for Electronics (Harper). April. 0-07-026682-4. $36.50

Handbook of Stainless Steels (Peckner & Bernstein). April. 0-07-049147-X. $35.00

Maintenance Engineering Handbook, 3/e (Higgins & Morrow). March. 0-07-028755-4. $39.50

Management of Engineering Projects, 2/e (Hajek). April. 0-07-025534-2. $15.95

Management Handbook for Plant Engineers (Lewis). Published. 0-07-037530-5. $29.95

Materials Handbook, 11/e (Brady & Clauser). May. 0-07-007069-5. $26.50

Optoelectronics Manual (Hewlett-Packard). May. 0-07-028605-1. $17.50

Power Transistor and TTL Integrated-Circuit Applications (Texas Instruments, Inc.). March. 0-07-063754-7. $16.50

Pressure Vessels, 5/e (Chuse). May. 0-07-010872-2. $18.50

The Properties of Gases and Liquids, 3/e (Reid, et al). Published. 0-07-051790-8. $27.50

Standard Handbook of Fastening and Joining (Parmley). March. 0-07-048511-9. $23.75

Switchgear and Control Handbook (Smeaton). Published. 0-07-058439-7. $32.50

SOCIAL SCIENCES

Boswell, Laird of Auchinleck (Reed & Pottle). May. 0-07-051520-4. $19.95

International Disaster Relief (Green). April. 0-07-024287-9 $6.95

New Meanings of Death (Feifel). March. 0-07-020350-4 $11.95

Nuclear Proliferation (Greenwood, et al). April. 0-07-024344-1. $8.95

Political Handbook of the World 1977 (Banks). May. 0-07-003641-1. $24.95

SPECIAL REFERENCE

Encyclopedia of Science and Technology, 4/e (McGraw-Hill). April. 0-07-079590-8. $497.00

How to Farm Your Own Backyard the Mulch-Organic Way (Alth). Published. 0-07-001128-1. $9.95

1977 Yearbook of Science and Technology (McGraw-Hill), July. 0-07-045344-6. $29.50

Prices subject to change without notice.

McGraw-Hill Book Company
1221 Avenue of the Americas
New York, New York 10020

Outstanding Business Books of 1976
as Selected by Library Journal

Telephone Marketing
by Murray Roman

Selling by telephone is quickly becoming one of the most effective marketing tools available to almost any business. With this comprehensive, authoritative guide, even the novice will be able to plan and implement a complete telephone selling operation. "The definitive guide to today's most effective marketing medium..."
—World Marketing

ISBN 0-07-053595-7
LC 76-9814 $16.50

Real Estate Investment and Finance
by Sherman J. Maisel and Stephen E. Roulac

Here is an integrated view of real estate investment that emphasizes both debt and equity investment decisions while providing detailed coverage of the institutional forces that affect real estate financing.

ISBN 0-07-039730-9
LC 75-35950 $14.95

The Human Economy
by Eli Ginzberg

"For many years Ginzberg has written incisive works on various aspects of human resources development...In his current book...he reviews six of the key issues which confront both developed and developing nations. These issues are the changing role of women, provision of talented manpower, educational training, the drive for equity, reconciliation of the desire for full employment with other economic goals, and changing expectations about work...Recommended for most social science collections."—Library Journal

ISBN 0-07-023283-0
LC 75-45400 $11.00

Captains of Consciousness
by Stuart Ewen

"(Ewen) has established a solid context for the deeper understanding of what we inadequately deplore as "conformity" or "passivity"—the spiritual matrices of a world "commodified" beyond the wildest dreams of 19th-century corporate greed."—Kirkus

ISBN 0-07-019845-4
LC 75-34432 $10.00

Harry Browne's Complete Guide to Swiss Banks
by Harry Browne

"Written by the author of the best-selling YOU CAN PROFIT FROM A MONETARY CRISES, this is a veritable compendium of every type of how-to activity related to Swiss bank accounts. This fast-reading book on a complex subject will have popular appeal. The many specific examples enhance the ease of understanding."—Library Journal

ISBN 0-07-008483-1
LC 76-4781 $9.95

Economists at Bay:
Why the Experts Will Never Solve Your Problems
by Robert Lekachman

"This is an elegantly written and hard-hitting analysis of our economic plight and the failure of the economics profession to come to grips with it. It is the single best book in economics I have read this year."
—Robert L. Heilbroner

"...the well known Lekachman embarks on a lively exploration of the reasons for the current economic situation."—Library Journal

ISBN 0-07-037153-9
LC 75-30759 $8.95

McGraw-Hill Book Company
1221 Avenue of the Americas
New York, New York 10020

The finest computer books from

COMPUTER SCIENCE PRESS

CHESS AND COMPUTERS
David Levy $11.95

1975 U.S. COMPUTER CHESS CHAMPIONSHIP
David Levy $6.95

"series . . . entertaining and instructive . . . two works are complementary and would be well obtained together" Library Journal

1976 U.S. COMPUTER CHESS CHAMPIONSHIP
David Levy $4.95 (Paper)

DIGITAL SYSTEM DESIGN AUTOMATION: LANGUAGES, SIMULATION & DATA BASE
ed. Melvin A. Breuer $19.95

"recommended" IEEE Spectrum

THEORY & DESIGN OF SWITCHING CIRCUITS
Arthur D. Friedman and P. R. Menon $19.95

"recommended for University library purchase" Choice

LOGICAL DESIGN OF DIGITAL SYSTEMS
Arthur D. Friedman $16.95

"good book on the subject" Digital Process

DIAGNOSIS & RELIABLE DESIGN OF DIGITAL SYSTEMS
Arthur D. Friedman and Melvin A. Breuer $18.95

COMPUTER AIDED DESIGN OF DIGITAL SYSTEMS—A BIBLIOGRAPHY
William van Cleemput $30.00

VOLUME II 1975-76
William van Cleemput $20.00

FUNDAMENTALS OF DATA STRUCTURES
Ellis Horowitz and Sartaj Sahni $16.95

JOURNAL OF DESIGN AUTOMATION & FAULT TOLERANT COMPUTING
Melvin A. Breuer, editor in chief $50.00 (Air mail $15 additional) quarterly journal-examination copy of the first issue Oct. 1976 available upon request

COMPUTER SCIENCE PRESS, INC.
4566 Poe Avenue
Woodland Hills, Ca. 91364
Order Dept. LJ

NEW from
World's Largest Publisher of AVIATION BOOKS

Federal Aviation Regulations for Pilots 0-8168-5733-4
$1.95 by Aero Staff — Jan. 1977

Airman's Information Manual by Aero Staff 0-8168-1356-6
$2.95 Jan. 1977

Convair F-106 "Delta Dart" by William G. Holder 0-8168-0600-4
$6.95 Jan. 1977

Higher, Faster and Farther by Mark P. Friedlander, Jr. and Gene Gurney 0-688-00204-8
$6.95 Feb. 1977

Private Pilot's Guide by L. W. Reithmaier 0-8168-7601-0
$9.95 2nd Edition Mar. 1977

Cleared To Land by Frank A. Burnham 0-8168-4500-X
$11.95 Apr. 1977

Japanese Naval Air Force Camouflage and Markings World War II by Donald W. Thorpe 0-8168-6583-3
$12.95 May 1977

AERO PUBLISHERS, INC.
329 West Aviation Road, Fallbrook, CA 92028

Send for gratis issue of

JOURNAL OF THE AUDIO ENGINEERING SOCIETY

foremost publication in field.

Just published,
CUMULATIVE INDEX OF 1953-1975

☐ Send gratis issue
☐ More information on Society
☐ U.S. Subscriptions: $35.00
☐ Cumulative Index: $9.00

Name _____

Address _____

_____ (Zip) _____

Subscriptions: Audio Engineering Society, 60 East 42nd Street, New York, N.Y. 10017.

ENCYCLOPEDIA OF ENVIRONMENTAL SCIENCE AND ENGINEERING
2 Vol. set, edited by James Pfafflin and Edward Ziegler 1976 1124 double-column pp., 7½" x 10½" $180

"This . . . is well written by excellent contributors, has an interesting and educational style and is well edited. All of the major topics that I would expect to find . . . are included. Laymen, students, civic leaders, and planners, as well as engineers will find this . . . useful and it should be placed on the reference shelf in all libraries—public and technical."
—WATER, AIR, AND SOIL POLLUTION

NOTE:
ANNUAL REVIEW OF ENVIRONMENTAL SCIENCE
An annual update of many of the aspects covered by this Encyclopedia, is in preparation.

MODERN ABSTRACT ALGEBRA
Yutze Chow 1977 712 pp. $60

ELEMENTS OF PROBABILITY THEORY
Robert Fortet 1977 544 pp. $45

COLLECTED PAPERS OF SIR HAROLD JEFFREYS ON GEOPHYSICS AND OTHER SCIENCES, VOL. 6
Sir Harold Jeffreys and Bertha Swirles (Lady Jeffreys) 1977 616 pp. $53

"... gives one the opportunity of following, not only the development of . . . science, but also of observing the development and increasing awareness of a great mind."
—GEOLOGICAL MAGAZINE (reviewing Volumes 2 & 3)

LASERS AND THEIR APPLICATIONS
Alberto Sona 1977 644 pp. $55

AGAIN AVAILABLE

TOPOLOGICAL GROUPS
L. S. Pontryagin 1966 560 pp. $49

"The thoroughness of the discussion, and the wealth of concrete examples given, seems likely to lead to the continuance of this book's present position as a basic reference work on, and introduction to, the subject of this title."
—J. KNOPFMACHER

SPRING ANNOUNCEMENTS

SODIUM-NaK ENGINEERING HANDBOOK, VOL. 3
O. J. Foust 392 pp. $33.50 (Additional volumes in preparation).

METHODS IN MICROANALYSIS, VOL. 5: The Determination of Oxygen, Sulfur and Other Sixth Group Elements
J. A. Kuck 520 pp. $52 (Volume 6 in preparation).

All titles now available on a 30-DAY APPROVAL basis when ordered by institutions directly from the publisher.

GB GORDON AND BREACH, SCIENCE PUBLISHERS, INC
ONE PARK AVENUE, NEW YORK, N.Y. 10016

Enrich your library in 1977 with Churchill Livingstone medical books and other references from Longman.

Medicine

WATSON-JONES FRACTURES AND JOINT INJURIES
Fifth Edition by J.N. Wilson

An authoritative, comprehensive and up-to-date working reference which provides firm guidance on the management of practically every fracture and joint injury. Considered as the classic text on the subject.
Two volumes in slipcase: Volume I-536 pages. Volume II-864 pages. Fully illustrated.
ISBN 0 443 01105 2
Library of Congress Catalog Card Number 75-7549
Nov. 1976 $95.00

THE RADIOLOGY OF SKELETAL DISORDERS
Second Edition by Ronald O. Murray and Harold G. Jacobson

The unorthodox method of presenting radiology employed in the first edition of this work received a popular welcome. This second edition maintains that method although its contents have been completely revised. It s extensive bibliography includes approximately 2,000 classical and current references; illustrations exceed 4,000. Four volumes in slipcase approx. 2,000 pages. Fully illustrated with Index, Appendix, Bibliography, Summaries, due May 1977.
ISBN 0 443 01267 9 $195.00

SYSTEMIC PATHOLOGY
Edited by William St. Clair Symmers

This work, in four volumes, represents the full range of contemporary thought and experience in tissue pathology, with special reference to diagnostic pathology in both necropsy and biopsy practice. It is an extensive revision of the first edition published in 1966 under the co-editorship of Symmers and the late George Payling Wright.
Volume 1 (now available) ISBN 0 443 01330 6 $45.00
Volume 2 (available June 1977) ISBN 0 443 01331 4
Volume 3 (available Sept. 1977) ISBN 0 443 01332 2
Volume 4 (available Jan. 1978) ISBN 0 443 01333 0
Standing orders invited for Volumes 2, 3 and 4 at 10% discount postpaid. The fixed price for each volume will be announced shortly before publication.

DISORDERS OF THE BLOOD
By R.B. Thompson

A completely new successor to Whitby and Britton's DISORDERS OF THE BLOOD first published in 1935 and printed in its tenth edition in 1969. This fresh publication maintains the reputation of the original book which rested largely on its clinical approach coupled with its value as a reference work.
Illus. approx. 792 pages, due mid-1977. ISBN 0 443 01197 4 abt. $60.00

Business & Finance

TAXATION AND MULTINATIONAL ENTERPRISE, Second Edition
by John F. Chown

Written for multinational companies involved with the tax systems of countries other than their own. This book serves as a guide to problems encountered in trading beyond one's own frontiers, and explains approaches to solving them. Chown has completely rewritten the section on tax laws of foreign countries including Japan and the Middle East.
July 1977. 320 pages, illus.
ISBN 0 582 44540 X cloth abt. $18.50

Science

SYSTEMIC FUNGICIDES, Second Edition
Edited by R.W. Marsh

Sixteen experts from the U.S., Great Britain and the Netherlands have brought together this definitive work on a vitally important kind of plant chemical. This new and enlarged second edition reflects the significant developments in the use and production of systemic fungicides in the past five years.
June 1977. 480 pages, halftones.
ISBN 0 582 44167 6 cloth abt. $22.50

VIRUS-INSECT RELATIONSHIPS
by Kenneth M. Smith

A major contribution to scientific literature. This volume consolidates for the first time extensive information on all known insect viruses and virus diseases, giving a concise description of each disease and a comprehensive account of the causative virus.
February 1977. 300 pages, line drawings, electron micrographs, bibliography, indexes.
ISBN 0 582 46612 1 cloth $23.50

These and other Longman books may be ordered from your local dealer or directly from us. Write us for our complete BOOKS IN PRINT catalog. CHURCHILL LIVINGSTONE, Medical Division LONGMAN INC./19 West 44th St./N.Y., N.Y. 10036

From the Garland Reference Library of Science & Technology

A DICTIONARY OF MICROCOMPUTING
by Philip E. Burton
LC 76-024762 ISBN 0-8240-9930-3 191 pages cloth $12.50

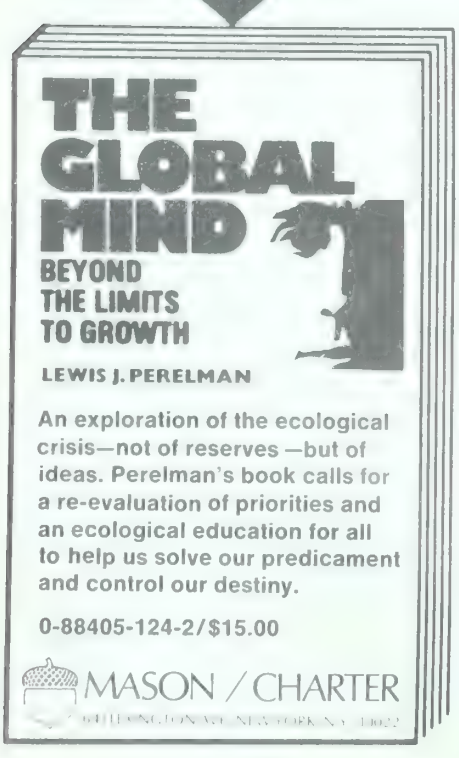
This book defines in clear, easy-to-understand terms all the essential vocabulary the student or layman needs to read and understand today's burgeoning microprocessing literature.

"Burton here presents a concise, coherent and, most important, accurate set of definitions for this new vocabulary. Although there are other microcomputer dictionaries available ... the definitions in the present work form a more continuous pattern in their reflection of current usage. This is an excellent reference or self-study book and belongs in all basic computing and electrical engineering collections." Library Journal

"... one of the best designed and executed dictionaries of computer related terms yet seen on the market. It is of particular relevance to those individuals who want a good general reference to numerous technical terms broadly covering hardware and software ..."
Byte Publications

Garland Publishing Inc.
545 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022

One of 50 Best Scientific, Technical, Medical Books of '76
—Library Journal



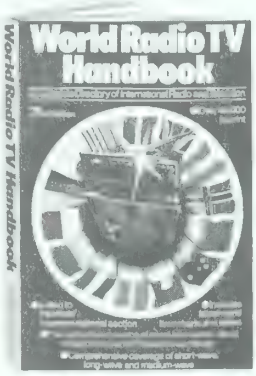
THE GLOBAL MIND
BEYOND THE LIMITS TO GROWTH
LEWIS J. PERELMAN
An exploration of the ecological crisis—not of reserves—but of ideas. Perelman's book calls for a re-evaluation of priorities and an ecological education for all to help us solve our predicament and control our destiny.
0-88405-124-2/$15.00
MASON / CHARTER

World Radio TV Handbook 1977

An Indispensable Reference For Anyone With A Working Interest In International Radio and TV
Bursting with over 500 revised and up-dated, information-packed pages, WORLD RADIO TV HANDBOOK 1977 — the most complete, authoritative source and guide to broadcasting and TV stations around the world —
- Names and addresses of broadcast companies and stations
- Names and titles of leading officials
- Listing by frequency of short wave stations
- Program data including frequencies, wave lengths, transmitter power, call signs, times

PLUS — a special, in-depth editorial section with professional articles, suggestions and tips:
- How to improve reception • Evaluating budget sets
- CB and amateur radio • A directory of equipment

And much, much more — for only $10.95!



WATSON-GUPTILL PUBLICATIONS
1515 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10036

Gordon & Breach
Lozanov. Suggestology and Outlines of Suggestopedy. Jun.

Human Sciences: Behavioral Pubs.
Chiland, C. Long-Term Treatments of Psychotic States. Feb.
Galassi, J. & M. Galassi. Assert Yourself. Mar.
Justice, B. & R. Justice. The Abusing Family.

McGraw
Feifel. New Meanings of Death. Mar.

Praeger
The Sociology of Health Care. Mar.

Springer-Verlag
Hungerford, D. S., ed. Leg Length Discrepancy. Apr.

BUSINESS BOOKS

BUSINESS GENERAL

Acropolis
Holdane, B. Job Power.

Follett
Ripley, T. M. & J. W. Loughary. Career & Life Planning Guide.
Stanat, K. W. with P. Reardon. Job Hunting Secrets and Tactics. Jan.

McGraw
Ballard. Registry of Manhattan Office Spaces. Mar.
Holtje. McGraw-Hill Dictionary of Manufacturers' Representatives. May.
Keogh & Koster. Burglarproof! Apr.
Leslie. 20,000 Words. 7th ed. May.

Marquis-Who's Who
Who's Who in Finance & Industry. 19th ed.
Sabin. The Gregg Reference Manual. 5th ed. Mar.

ACCOUNTING

Mason/Charter
DuBrin, A. J. Managerial Deviance.

McGraw
Davidson & Weil. Handbook of Modern Accounting. 2d ed.
Lurie. Working with the Public Accountant.
Matthews. Practical Operating Budgeting. Apr.
Wiener & Christian. Insolvency Accounting.

ADVERTISING & PUBLIC RELATIONS

McGraw
Latimer. Preparing Art and Camera Copy for Printing. Mar.

Continued on p. 584

Some Important New Pergamon Books

BEHAVIORAL AND SOCIAL SCIENCES

Physical Work and Effort
G. BORG — 425pp
ISBN 0 08 021373 1 — $30.00

Methods of Learning Communication Skills
P.R. DAY — 300pp
ISBN 0 08 018954 7 — $17.00
ISBN 0 08 018953 9 f — $10.50

Behavioral Treatments of Obesity
J.P. FOREYT — 375pp
ISBN 0 08 019902 X — $15.00

Group Theory for Social Workers
K. HEAP — 260pp
ISBN 0 08 018956 3 — $16.00
ISBN 0 08 018955 5 f — $ 9.00

The Anti-Authoritarian Personality
W.P. KREML — 196pp
ISBN 0 08 021063 5 — $14.50

Global Dialogue: The New International Economic Order
B.P. MENON — 100pp
ISBN 0 08 021498 3 — $10.00
ISBN 0 08 021499 1 f — $ 5.00

Contributions to Medical Psychology
S. RACHMAN — 208pp
ISBN 0 08 020511 9 — $24.00

Towards a Re-definition of Development
J.P. SCHLEGEL — 363pp
ISBN 0 08 020580 1 — $11.00
ISBN 0 08 020632 8 f — No price

Human Subject in the Psychological Laboratory
I. SILVERMAN — 250pp
ISBN 0 08 021080 5 — $12.50
ISBN 0 08 021079 1 f — $ 5.50

GEOGRAPHY (Economic, Human, Physical, Regional & Social)

The More Developed Realm: A Geography of its Population
G.T. TREWARTHA — 252pp
ISBN 0 08 020631 X — $14.00
ISBN 0 08 020630 1 f — $ 8.00

INDUSTRIAL & BUSINESS MANAGEMENT

Proceedings of the Fifth Biennial CODATA Conference
B. DREYFUS — 500pp
ISBN 0 08 021291 3 — $35.00
ISBN 0 08 021290 5 f — $15.00

Aspects of Management
S. EILON — 168pp
ISBN 0 08 020969 6 — $13.00
ISBN 0 08 020968 8 f — $ 7.00

BIOLOGICAL SCIENCES

The Brown Rot Fungi of Fruit
R.W. BYRDE & H.J. WILLETTS — 178pp
ISBN 0 08 019740 X — $12.00

The Science of Food
P.D. GAMAN & K.B. SHERRINGTON — 300pp
ISBN 0 08 019948 8 — $15.00
ISBN 0 08 019947 X f — $ 8.95

Chitin
R. MUZZARELLI — 350pp
ISBN 0 08 020367 1 — $20.00

Molecular Dynamics of Biosystems
K.H. NORWICH — 550pp
ISBN 0 08 020420 1 — $30.00

Albumin: Structure, Function and Uses
V.M. ROSENOER et al — 400pp
ISBN 0 08 019603 9 — $45.00

MEDICAL SCIENCES

Inhaled Particles IV
W.H. WALTON — 800pp
ISBN 0 08 020560 7 — $95.00

ELECTRICAL AND ELECTRONIC ENGINEERING

Electronic Inventions 1745-1976
G.W.A. DUMMER — 164pp
ISBN 0 08 020982 3 — $7.50

Electrical Machines and Their Applications 3rd Edition
J. HINDMARSH — 660pp
ISBN 0 08 021164 X — $25.00
ISBN 0 08 021165 8 f — $15.00

MECHANICAL ENGINEERING

The Characteristics of Mechanical Engineering Systems
R. HOLMES — 200pp
ISBN 0 08 021033 3 — $10.00
ISBN 0 08 021032 5 f — $ 5.50

MATERIALS SCIENCE AND METALLURGY

Metallic Shifts in NMR —A review of the theory and comprehensive critical data compilation of metallic materials.
G.C. CARTER et al — 2350pp
ISBN 0 08 021143 7 — $300.00

Fuels, Furnaces and Refractories
J.D. GILCHRIST — 158pp
ISBN 0 08 020430 9 — $14.00
ISBN 0 08 020429 5 f — $ 8.00

Sun Power - An Introduction to the Applications of Solar Energy
J.C. McVEIGH — 200pp
ISBN 0 08 020863 0 — $10.50
ISBN 0 08 020862 2 f — $ 4.95

Industrial Energy Conservation
D.A. REAY — 370pp
ISBN 0 08 020867 3 — $20.00
ISBN 0 08 021716 8 f — $12.50

CIVIL, STRUCTURAL AND ENVIRONMENTAL ENGINEERING

Noise Buildings and People
D.J. CROOME — 600pp
ISBN 0 08 019690 X — $50.00
ISBN 0 08 019816 3 f — $30.00

Principles of Water Quality Control 2nd Edition
T.H.Y. TEBBUTT — 200pp
ISBN 0 08 021297 2 — $11.00
ISBN 0 08 021296 4 f — $ 5.50

URBAN AND REGIONAL PLANNING

Land Policy and Urban Growth
H. DARIN-BRABKIN — 403pp
ISBN 0 08 020401 5 — $13.00

Citizen Participation in Planning
M. FAGENCE — 324pp
ISBN 0 08 020397 3 — $21.00
ISBN 0 08 020398 1 f — $14.50

How Cities Work: An Introduction
D.B. NEEDHAM — 250pp
ISBN 0 08 020529 1 — $15.00
ISBN 0 08 020528 3 f — $ 9.00

Human Aspects of Urban Form
A. RAPOPORT — 500pp
ISBN 0 08 017974 6 — $16.00

PHYSICAL SCIENCES

Helium-4 — International Thermodynamic Tables of the Fluid State
S. ANGUS — 260pp
ISBN 0 08 020957 2 — $35.00

Historical Supernovae
D.H. CLARK — 250pp
ISBN 0 08 020914 9 — $15.00
ISBN 0 08 021639 0 f — $ 7.50

Tables of Wavenumbers for the Calibration of Infra-Red Spectrometers
A.R.H. COLE — 219pp
ISBN 0 08 021247 6 — $22.50

Machine Takeover
F. GEORGE — 200pp
ISBN 0 08 021229 8 — $10.00
ISBN 0 08 021228 X f — $ 5.50

Modelling and Prediction of the Upper Layers of the Ocean
E.B. KRAUS — 290pp
ISBN 0 08 020611 5 — $26.00
ISBN 0 08 020610 7 f — $14.50

Quantum Mechanics 3rd Edition
L.D. LANDAU & E.M. LIFSHITZ — 640pp
ISBN 0 08 020940 8 — $30.00
ISBN 0 08 019012 X f — $18.50

Photographic Atlas of the Stars (3 volumes)
C. PAPADOPOULOS
Volume 1
ISBN 0 08 021622 6 — $100.00
Volume 2
ISBN 0 08 021623 4 — $150.00
Volume 3
ISBN 0 08 021626 9 — $100.00

Geotechnology
A. ROBERTS — 448pp
ISBN 0 08 019602 0 — $35.00
ISBN 0 08 021594 7 f — $17.50

All prices are approximate and subject to change — f = flexicover

Pergamon Press

Fairview Park, Elmsford, New York 10523
Headington Hill Hall, Oxford OX3 0BW, England

436

BIOMEDICAL TITLES—1977

BEST SELLERS

Atlas of Ultrasonic Diagnosis in Obstetrics and Gynecology, Schlensker, $19.00
Child Abuse, Ebeling and Hill, $15.00
Childhood Obesity, Collipp, ed., $12.00
Clinical Implications of Air Pollution Research, AMA, Finkel, ed., $20.00
Clinical Management of Cancer in Children, Pochedly, ed., $18.00
Clinical Pharmacy Sourcebook, ASHP, ed., $20.00
Coxarthrosis, Rutt, ed., $19.00
Double Contrast Examination of the Colon, Welin and Welin, $23.00
Drug Effects on the Fetus, Tuchmann-Duplessis, $18.75
Drug Information Services Handbook, Lazarus and Collins, $10.00
Drug Treatment, Avery, ed., $29.50
Efficiency and Limits of Radiologic Examination of the Pancreas, Anacker, ed., $19.00
Handbook of Ocular Toxicity, Smith, $20.00
Industrial Toxicology, Third Edition, Hamilton and Hardy, $24.00
Integrated Atlas of Gastric Diseases, Krentz, $30.00
Neuroblastoma, Pochedly, ed., $20.00
Noninvasive Brain Imaging, DeBlanc and Sorenson, $19.00
Nuclear Medicine in Clinical Pediatrics, Handmaker and Lowenstein, eds., $22.50
Obesity: Its Pathogenesis and Management, Silverstone, ed., $18.00
Radioimmunoassay, Luft and Yalow, eds., $23.00
Radionuclides in Nephrology, zum Winkel, $19.00
Radiopharmaceuticals, Subramanian, et. al., $30.00
Simplified Medical Records System, Gordon, $15.00
Spinal Cord Injuries, Hardy and Rossier, $13.50
Strabismus and Amblyopia, Newell, ed., $20.00

NEW RELEASES

Acid Base Homeostasis of Brain Extracellular Fluid, Loeschcke, ed., $20.00
Asthma in Children, Jones, $18.00
Atlas of Angiography, Loose and van Dongen, $69.00
Biochemical and Clinical Aspects of Ketone Body Metabolism, Soling and Seufert, eds., $24.00
Central Nervous Control of Sodium Balance, Kaufmann and Krause, eds., $23.00
Cerebral Vascular Disease, Meyer, et al., $26.00
Clinical Management of the Osteoporoses, Gordan and Vaughan, $18.00
Clinical Microneurosurgery, Koos, et al., $36.00
Coronary Angiography and Angina Pectoris, Lichtlen, ed., $26.00
Development of Angiography and Cardiovascular Catheterization, Doby, $18.00
Duodenitis, Cheli and Aste, $15.00
Epileptology, Janz, ed., $29.50
Hemophilia in Children, Hilgartner, ed., $20.00
Influenza, Stuart-Harris and Schild, $22.00
Malnutrition and Intellectual Development, Lloyd-Still, ed., $12.00
Mitral Valve: A Pluridisciplinary Approach, Kalmanson, ed., $25.00
New Approaches to the Evaluation of Abnormal Embryonic Development, Neubert, et al., $20.00
Pediatric Neuroradiology, Decker and Backmund, $32.50
Perinatal Medicine: 4th European Congress, Stembera, ed., $25.00
Primary Generalized Epilepsy, Tsuboi, $20.00
Somatosensory System, Kornhuber, ed., $25.00
Stylebook/Editorial Manual of the AMA, Sixth Ed., American Medical Association, $6.50
Viral Infections, Fox and Hall, $18.00

SPRING LIST

AMA Drug Evaluations, Third Edition, American Medical Association, $29.50
Atlas of Pathologic Anatomy, Doerr, et al., $79.00
Birth Defects and Drugs in Pregnancy, Heinonen, Slone and Shapiro, $75.00
Cancer of the Lung, Peterson, ed., $20.00
Clinical Psychopharmacology, Bernstein, $16.00
Hodgkin's Disease in Children, Nesbit, ed., $20.00
Human Chlamydial Infections, Schachter and Dawson, $18.00
Microbiological Hazards of Infusion Therapy, Phillips, Meers and D'Arcy, eds., $18.50
Mind Influencing Drugs, Egelston, et al., ca. $16.00
Myocardial Infarction, Chazov, ed., $20.00
Occupation: Child Abuser, Collins, ca. $16.00
Pregnancy Hypertension, Friedman, ed., ca. $40.00
Textbook of Medical Practice, Fry, et. al., $25.00

Prices subject to change without notice. Prices slightly higher in Canada.

In Canada, available from: Chimera Press, Inc., 150 Consumers Road, Suite 503, Willowdale, Ontario M4J 1P9

These books are available through your regular bookstore, or directly from:

PUBLISHING SCIENCES GROUP, INC. 545 GREAT ROAD • LITTLETON MASSACHUSETTS 01460

New Series from Springer-Verlag

New York Heidelberg Berlin Vienna

East-West European Economic Interaction

Volume 1
World Economy and East-West Trade
By F. Nemschak et al.
1977. 208p. paper $19.80
ISBN 0-387-81390-X

Lecture Notes in Chemistry

Volume 1
Introduction to Elementary Molecular Orbital Theory and to Semiempirical Methods
By G. H. Wagnière
1976. v, 109p. paper $6.10
ISBN 0-387-07865-7

Volume 2
Determination of Liquid Water Structure
Coordination Numbers for Ions and Solvation for Biological Molecules
By E. Clementi
1976. vi, 107p. paper $7.40
ISBN 0-387-07870-3

Progress in Orthopaedic Surgery

Volume 1
Leg Length Discrepancy
The Injured Knee
Edited by D. S. Hungerford
1977. approx. 150p. approx. 100 illus.
cloth $17.60
ISBN 0-387-08037-6

Springer Series in Computational Physics

Volume 1
Numerical Methods in Fluid Dynamics
By M. Holt
1977. approx. 220p. 100 illus. 2 tables.
cloth $40.20
ISBN 0-387-07907-6

Springer Series in Optical Sciences

Volume 1
Solid-State Laser Engineering
By W. Koechner
1976. xi, 620p. 36 illus. cloth $39.00
ISBN 0-387-90167-1

Volume 2
Table of Laser Lines in Gases and Vapors
By R. Beck, W. Englisch, and K. Gürs
1976. iv, 132p. cloth $19.70
ISBN 0-387-07808-8

Volume 3
Tunable Lasers and Applications
Edited by A. Mooradian, T. Jaeger, and P. Stokseth
1976. viii, 404p. 238 illus. cloth $24.90
ISBN 0-387-07968-8

Volume 4
Nonlinear Laser Spectroscopy
By V. S. Letokhov and V. P. Chebotayev
1977. approx. 550p. 193 illus. 22 tables.
cloth $29.60
ISBN 0-387-08044-9

Topics in Current Physics

Volume 1
Beam-Foil Spectroscopy
Edited by S. Bashkin
1976. xiii, 318p. 91 illus. cloth $28.30
ISBN 0-387-07914-9

Volume 2
Modern Three-Hadron Physics
Edited by A. W. Thomas
1977. xi, 250p. 30 illus. cloth $28.30
ISBN 0-387-07950-5

Volume 4
Electron Spectroscopy for Surface Analysis
Edited by H. Ibach
1977. approx. 200p. 123 illus. 5 tables.
cloth $28.20
ISBN 0-387-08078-3

Library Approval Plan

All books are supplied automatically on the date of publication. This saves extra correspondence, avoids delays, and reduces processing time. A minimum of one major discipline on all Springer-Verlag publications must be selected in order to receive the special discount. It is possible to specify that only English-language titles be sent. There are no postage and handling charges for books supplied under this plan.

For details on the Springer-Verlag Annual Prepayment Plan, please refer to the November 1, 1976 issue of Library Journal.

Details on all Springer-Verlag plans will be sent upon request. Contact our representatives or Ms. Helga Zollweg, Manager, Agency Services, at (212) 673-2660, ext. 52.

Prices are subject to change without notice.

Springer-Verlag New York Inc.
175 Fifth Avenue
New York, NY 10010

"I find the great thing in this world is not so much where we stand, as what direction we are moving."

–Oliver Wendell Holmes

Where is society moving in technology and health science? Three new titles from John Wiley keep readers up to date and help them understand the relationship between environment, health and technology.

MEDICAL BOTANY:
Plants Affecting Man's Health

Walter H. Lewis and Memory P.F. Elvin-Lewis

What plants are harmful to man? helpful? which ones induce hallucinations? This new book shows how man's health is affected by plants. It is heavily illustrated with works from the middle ages to the present. The material is presented in three groupings for easy references: harmful plants, beneficial plants, and psychoactive plants. It contains a medical-botanical glossary and a geographical oriented herbal bibliography.

ISBN 0 471 53320-3 LC#: 76-44376 CIP
1977 approx. 512 pp. $27.50

USING COMPUTERS

B.L. Meek & S. Fairthorne

Readers will appreciate this common sense approach to the use of computers. The authors give an overall picture of the nature of computing without distracting the reader with too many technical details. The emphasis throughout is on what the computer means to the user and on making clear the importance of adopting a thinking and responsible approach in order to best exploit the power of computers.

ISBN 0 470 98932-7 LC#: 76-26871 CIP
1976 200 pp. $14.95

ENERGY, ENVIRONMENT, POPULATIONS, AND FOOD:
Our Four Interdependent Crises
George L. Tuve

To solve the problems of energy shortage, environmental pollution, overpopulation and lack of food supplies, we must acknowledge their interdependence. While keeping the story simple, George Tuve gathers the scattered information currently available into a view of the whole. From discussion of past and present conditions, he optimistically projects a slower growth future.

ISBN 0 471 02091-5 cloth LC#: 76-40351
ISBN 0 471 02090-7 paper CIP
1977 256 pp. $14.95 Cl; $8.95 Pa

For further information contact Library Services-LJ.

Serving your information needs

JOHN WILEY & SONS, Inc.
605 Third Avenue
New York, N.Y. 10016
In Canada: 22 Worcester Road, Rexdale, Ontario
Prices subject to change without notice.

"Without labor nothing prospers."
–Sophocles

From finding a job to making it profitable, knowledge of the marketplace is essential. Wiley books help readers find information they need to prosper.

THE ARENA OF INTERNATIONAL FINANCE
Charles A. Coombs

Now for the first time, a senior official of the Federal Reserve System, involved in major international decision making throughout the past twenty-five years, records his recollections of the controversial events that really happened between the agreements at Bretton Woods, the collapse of the dollar, and the financial crises of today. Business Week (10/25/76) said: "The perspective and detail that Coombs brings to these events are fascinating . . . this insider's view of what really happened in defense of the sterling; the protracted, costly, and politically based delay in the devaluation of the franc; the rise and fall of the gold pool; and all the other tales he related, make for rewarding reading."

". . . one of the most interesting books on international economics to appear in years. As a Federal Reserve Bank official who bought and sold dollars on world markets from 1961 to 1975, Coombs was on the frontier of some remarkable events. He combines history, memoir and economic analysis to provide a vivid inside view. . . ."

Foreign Affairs, 1/77

ISBN 0 471 82485-2 LC#: 76-19093 CIP
1976 243 pp. $12.95

FINDING THE JOB YOU'VE ALWAYS WANTED
Burdette E. Bostwick

Bostwick describes successful, proven techniques that cut job search time in half. He discusses methods employers use to evaluate prospective employees; résumé preparation; answers to interview questions; and guidelines for conducting oneself in an interview. Ideal for anyone looking for a job, changing jobs, or reentering the job market.

ISBN 0 471 09059-X LC#: 76-25431 CIP
1977 243 pp. $12.95

INFLATION MANAGEMENT
One Hundred Practical Techniques for Business and Industry
Howe C. Stidger and Ruth W. Stidger

How can products be priced profitably when scores of costs are rising on an almost daily basis? Is a 10-percent annual salary increase adequate for motivating employees when inflation is spiraling upward at the same rate? How can budgetary controls be maintained when a piece of equipment quoted at $50,000 costs $55,000 by the time the purchase order is processed? INFLATION MANAGEMENT provides answers to these and many other business questions that have evolved with inflation. It sets forth 100 practical techniques to help business people adjust to it, learn to live with it, and maintain profitability in spite of it.

ISBN 0 471 82485-2 LC#: 76-8927 CIP
1976 434 pp. $15.95

For further information contact Library Services-LJ.

Serving your information needs

JOHN WILEY & SONS, Inc.
605 Third Avenue
New York, N.Y. 10016
In Canada: 22 Worcester Road, Rexdale, Ontario
Prices subject to change without notice.

plenum
the language of science

Bestsellers from Plenum

*THE GENESIS STRATEGY
Climate and Global Survival
by Stephen H. Schneider
National Center for Atmospheric Research with Lynne E. Mesirow
419 pages, illus., 1976, $14.95

*OUR FRAGILE WATER PLANET
An Introduction to the Earth Sciences
by C. L. Mantell
New Jersey Institute of Technology and Consulting Chemical Engineer and A. M. Mantell
221 pages, illus., 1976, $19.50

*GENETICS AND THE LAW
edited by Aubrey Milunsky
Harvard Medical School and George J. Annas
Boston University Schools of Law and Medicine
544 pages, illus., 1976, $22.50

*ORIGINS OF INTELLIGENCE
Infancy and Early Childhood edited by Michael Lewis
Educational Teaching Service
413 pages, illus., 1975, $17.50

GRANTS
How to Find Out About Them and What to Do Next
by Virginia P. White
Graduate School and University Center, CUNY
354 pages, 1975, $19.50

LIVING WITH OUR SUN'S ULTRAVIOLET RAYS
by Arthur C. Giese
Stanford University
185 pages, illus., 1976, $19.50

*Chosen by Library Journal as one of the best science and technology books of 1976!

PLENUM PUBLISHING CORPORATION
227 West 17th Street,
New York N.Y. 10011
In United Kingdom Black Arrow House,
2 Chandos Road,
London NW10 6NR England

Prices subject to change without notice.
Prices slightly higher outside the U.S.

BANKING, FINANCE & INVESTMENT

McGraw
Barnes & Feldman. Handbook of Wealth Management. Jun.
Crowell. Stock Market Strategy. Apr.
Irwin. Protect Yourself in Real Estate. May.
McGraw-Hill. Successful Personal Money Management 1977.

Pick Publishing Corporation
Pick, F. 1975-1976 Pick's Currency Yearbook.

COMMUNICATIONS & EDUCATION

Churchill Livingstone
Coveney, J. Glossary of English and German Management Terms. Apr.

COMPUTERS FOR BUSINESS

McGraw
Diebold. Automatic Data Processing Handbook. Mar.

Yourdon Pr.
Yourdon, E. How to Manage Structured Programming. May.

ECONOMICS FOR BUSINESS

Churchill Livingstone
Todaro, M. P. Economic Development in the Third World. May.

Gordon & Breach
Smith. Economics of Natural and Environmental Resources. May.

Springer-Verlag
Nemschak, F. World Economy and East-West Trade. Feb.

MANAGEMENT

McGraw
Christiansen. Leaders in the Textile Industry. Mar.
Kaufman. Rewarding Executive Talent. May.

Human Sciences: Behavioral Pubs.
Burke, W. Current Issues & Strategies in Organization and Development. Mar.

MARKETING

McGraw
Breen. Do-It-Yourself Marketing Research. Apr.

TAX

Churchill Livingstone
Crown, J. F. Taxation and Multinational Enterprise. 2d ed. Jul.

McGraw
Gettel. You Can Get Your Real Estate Taxes Reduced. Apr.

Library Journal Picks Ponte, Getty and Cavanagh for its 1976 Science, Technical and Business "Best List."

THE COOLING
by Lowell Ponte

"Ponte relates that since 1945, rays of daylight have diminished in strength, animals have been retreating to warmer climates, and volcanoes have become more frequent. Each reflects a cooling trend in Earth's atmosphere. . . . He believes that nations must work together to find alternative sources of energy and alterations of present weather cycles to ensure the future of mankind. . . . Recommended for its coverage of scientific and political implications."

— Library Journal (June 15, 1976)
ISBN 0-13-172312-X CIP $8.95

AS I SEE IT
by J. Paul Getty

"Reading this fascinating autobiography is like listening to a favorite grandfather relate his life's story . . . Getty's style is a joy to read . . . He exposes his personal philosophy on marital harmony, women's liberation, economic theory, taxation, welfare, etc. . . . a great deal of wisdom and enthusiasm . . . Essential reading for anyone who enjoys learning about the personalities of people in the public eye."

— Library Journal (November 1, 1976)
ISBN 0-13-049593-X CIP $10.95

AMERICAN BUSINESS VALUES IN TRANSITION
by Gerald F. Cavanagh

". . . Cavanagh believes the changed social and political situation . . . has eroded the legitimacy of traditional capitalism . . . provides a good starting point for moral reflection and social debate on how to shape the future of what is the central and characteristic institution of American society . . . offers sage advice on how the contemporary American corporation must develop in order to resolve the crisis (of legitimacy)."

— America (September 18, 1976)
ISBN 0-13-024141-5 CIP $9.95

Prentice-Hall
General Book Marketing Div.
Box 500, Englewood Cliffs, N.J. 07632

Business Books for the Business World

PRAEGER SPECIAL STUDIES

THE ARAB BOYCOTT OF ISRAEL

Economic Aggression and World Reaction

DAN S. CHILL

"Chill does an excellent job of tracing the history and present status of the Arab boycott. The book is well documented; it includes a section containing correspondence and official government documents showing the boycott in action, as well as extensive footnotes and bibliography. Any library desiring an excellent, well-written study of a very controversial subject would do well to purchase Chill's book." — Library Journal

138 pp. Sept. 1976 LC 76-14431 ISBN 0 275-56810-5 $14.00

NATIONAL CONTROL OF FOREIGN BUSINESS ENTRY

A Survey of Fifteen Countries

RICHARD D. ROBINSON

Analyzing the nature of entry agreements made between 13 host countries and two nations, Sweden and Japan, concerned with regulating their own overseas corporations, this volume presents guidelines and information for monitoring overseas business. A series of appendices provides invaluable examples of business forms and applications covering all aspects of entry agreements for industries investing abroad.

542 pp. August 1976 LC 75-44938 ISBN 0 275 56500-9 $30.00

EXPORT MARKETING MANAGEMENT

C. G. ALEXANDRIDES and GEORGE P. MOSCHIS

A practical and comprehensive guide for small and medium-sized businesses on how to develop an export market. Tells how and where to locate information and how to analyze it, and develops evaluation models of alternative exports markets. Discusses all phases of export strategy from advertising and distribution to financing and export shipping.

202 pp. Jan. 1977 LC 76-12839 ISBN 0-275-23610-2 $16.50

INTERNATIONAL ACCOUNTING AND FINANCIAL REPORTING

NORLIN G. RUESCHHOFF

Comprehensively examines and analyzes the latest developments in international accounting and worldwide accounting principles and concepts. Discusses accounting for foreign exchange, foreign trade, international tax planning, and accounting control for the MNC.

188 pp. Oct. 1976 LC 76-12871 ISBN 0-275-23110-0 $16.50

THE MULTINATIONAL CORPORATION AND SOCIAL CHANGE

Edited by DAVID E. APTER and LOUIS WOLF GOODMAN

With a range of viewpoints from liberal to socialist, seven experts analyze the MNC as a source of economic development and potential economic instability; as an agent of metropolitan hegemonic control; as a medium through which developing countries can manipulate metropolitan powers; and as an organization that changes in response to its involvement in the development process.

236 pp. August 1976 LC 75-1989 ISBN 0 275 23020 1 $16.50

THE MULTINATIONAL BUSINESSMAN AND FOREIGN POLICY

Entrepreneurial Politics in East-West Trade and Investment

JEFFREY M. BROOKSTONE

Based on confidential interviews with multinational business executives and U.S. government officials, this volume examines their differing viewpoints on U.S. foreign policy in East-West trade. Covers four main issues: grain inspection proposals; bulk agricultural commodity sales; U.S. USSR agricultural cooperation; and export licensing problems in high-technology sales.

204 pp. Nov. 1976 LC 76-12845 ISBN 0-275-23360-X $16.50

THE CASE FOR THE MULTINATIONAL CORPORATION

Edited by CARL H. MADDEN

Six prominent scholars in the field of international investment and trade objectively review criticisms leveled against MNCs and point out inadequacies and the need for change. Each paper is followed by candid, non-attributed comments by corporate managers and concerned government officials. Published in cooperation with the National Chamber Foundation.

234 pp. Dec. 1976 LC 76-12863 ISBN 0 275-23980-2 $18.50

COST-BENEFIT ANALYSIS

New and Expanded Edition

E. J. MISHAN

Completely rewritten and enlarged, this classic volume presents all aspects of cost-benefit analysis and describes the crucial economic concepts and procedures employed. "Considerable insight is brought to bear on a variety of conceptual problems ranging from the appropriate treatment of environmental spillovers to the measurement of the cost associated with the loss of life or disablement." — Finance and Development

478 pp. May 1976 LC 76-1988 ISBN 0 275-56530 0 $25.00

PRAEGER PUBLISHERS

A Divison of HOLT, RINEHART AND WINSTON, CBS Publishing Group

SPRINGER

The Psychological and Social Impact of Physical Disability

Robert P. Marinelli and Arthur E. Dell Orto, eds. Conceptual and methodological advances in rehabilitation, reflecting today's focus on the multifaceted needs of disabled persons and how they can be helped.
LC 76-58556 cip Mar 414p., $17.95

Handbook of Physical Therapy, 3rd Edition

Robert Shestack. Updated and expanded edition of this widely-used manual that "has the blessings of physicians and surgeons."—J.A.M.A.
LC 66-30317 Mar 208p., pap. $7.50

Care of the Patient with a Stroke, 2nd Edition

Genevieve W. Smith. This highly praised handbook for the patient's family and the nurse now includes information on physiology and suggestions concerning sexual relations, and more.
LC 67-21823 1976 166p., $11.50; pap. $6.95

Aging Patients
A Guide for Their Care

Mary W. Falconer, Michael V. Altamura, and Helen D. Behnke. Concise manual on disorders of the elderly, with emphasis on actions that can be taken to correct or arrest degenerative diseases.
LC 76-26943 cip 276p., $13.95; pap. $7.95

Expanding Horizons for Nurses

Bonnie Bullough and Vern L. Bullough, eds. Latest in the Bulloughs' series on issues in nursing, including impact of women's lib, effects of legislative changes, and more.
LC 76-47020 cip Feb. 360p., pap. $9.95

and 2 annuals

TRANSACTIONS OF THE AMERICAN NEUROLOGICAL ASSOCIATION 1976
LC 61-705 Vol. 101 Mar 334p. About $20.00

DRUGS IN CURRENT USE AND NEW DRUGS 1977
LC 72-622911 Jan 182p., pap. $6.50

Springer Publishing Company
200 Park Ave. South,
New York, N.Y. 10003

One of 50 Best Scientific, Technical, Medical Books of '76
–Library Journal

HOW TO USE POCKET CALCULATORS
by Pierre R. Schwob

Unique and practical handbook geared to laymen as well as professionals. Approaches basic problems of percents, finance and banking, measurement conversions, probability and statistics.

0-88405-335-0/$10.95

PETROCELLI/CHARTER
a division of Mason/Charter Publishers, Inc
641 Lexington Avenue, New York, New York 10022

THE MANAGERIAL CHOICE
by Frederick Herzberg

Frederick Herzberg's writings have changed the industrial world's perception of motivation, reward, and compensation. Now, in this new book, for which he has revised and updated 34 of his most popular articles, Dr. Herzberg talks about the practical applications of his theories leading to workable solutions to the workaday problems of people working together. Tough-minded advice—backed by rigorous research on the gut issues of leadership. $12.95

Dow Jones-Irwin
1818 Ridge Road, Homewood, Ill. 60430

W I C

WATER INFORMATION CENTER, INC.

Publishing in the field of water resources for over 18 years.
Send for catalog.

7 HIGH STREET
HUNTINGTON,
NEW YORK 11743

for DATA PROCESSING PROFESSIONALS
State-of-the-Art Publications
YOURDON PRESS

How to Manage Structured Programming
by Ed Yourdon

An indispensable management guide to the "structured revolution" and related "programming productivity techniques." Contains explanations of and solutions to the problems of implementing the new structured technologies in a typical organization and discusses the impact on budgeting, scheduling and standards.
188 pages $21.50 hardcover

Structured Design
by Ed Yourdon and Larry Constantine

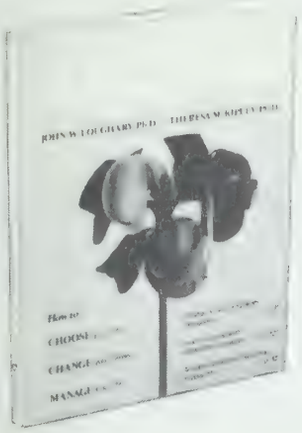
Acclaimed as the definitive work on such design concepts as structure charts, coupling, cohesion, transform analysis and implementation strategies for modular systems
600 pages $27.50 paperback

Learning to Program in Structured COBOL
by Ed Yourdon, Chris Gane & Trish Sarson

In wide use as an introduction to COBOL, the book deals with implementation of basic structures using an appropriate subset of the language. Many practical hints on commercial programming
252 pages $19.50 paperback

For additional information, write to:
Sheila Abbott
YOURDON PRESS
1133 Avenue of the Americas
New York, New York 10036
(212) 730-2670

"'Tis not what man does... but what man would do"
Browning



This innovative workbook motivates students to assess themselves completely and gives them important decision-making skills. Additionally, "Career" is an excellent text for career development and career change courses. Written by Dr. Theresa Ripley, Director of Career Planning, and Dr. John Loughary, Associate Dean, the University of Oregon.

". . . exceptionally well done."
S. Norman Feingold, editor
Counselor's Information Service, B'nai Brith

Deluxe paper (0695-80678-5) $5.95

Practical, useful advice by Kirby Stanat, until recently placement director at the University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee. (He followed his own advice and got a better job at the university.)

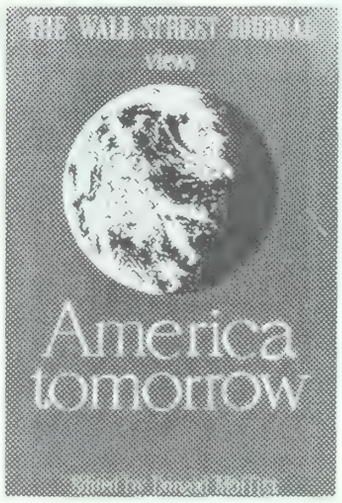
". . . tells the job seeker things that cannot be learned elsewhere."
E. W. Steele, Manager of Recruitment and Placement, 3M Company

Hardcover library edition (0695-40708-2) $9.95
Deluxe paper (0695-80708-0) $4.95

FOLLETT PUBLISHING CO.
Chicago, Illinois 60607

The Nation's Business Experts Peer Into the Future

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL VIEWS AMERICA TOMORROW



EDITED BY DONALD MOFFITT

What will life be like in the year 2000? Will today's crises — over-population, unemployment, the energy shortage, the decline of major cities, the rise of cancer and heart disease — be resolved? Or compounded? The Wall Street Journal looks ahead and discusses these and other provocative topics in this multi-faceted survey. Published by AMACOM, a division of American Management Associations

$9.95

One of 50 Best Business Books of '76

MANAGERIAL DEVIANCE

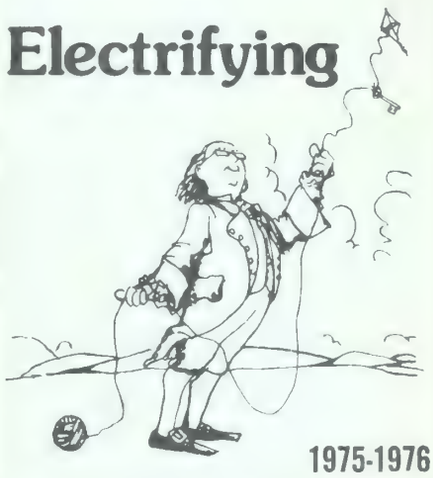
HOW TO DEAL WITH PROBLEM PEOPLE IN KEY JOBS

Andrew J. DuBrin

"DuBrin's approach to behavior modification is cautious, sound and thoroughly considered. Especially useful is his examination of discovery or detection techniques and confrontation methods." —LIBRARY JOURNAL 0-88405-134-X, $8.95

MASON / CHARTER
641 LEXINGTON AVE. NEW YORK, N.Y. 10022

Electrifying



1975-1976
PICK'S CURRENCY YEARBOOK

Acknowledged as the most complete single source of up-to-date currency information available, the yearbook describes 109 major monies with their accessory units, exchange controls, black market rates and transactions, debasement of purchasing power, plus the latest developments in 37 international gold markets.

PRICE. . . . $120.00
ISBN 0-87551-275-5

PICK PUBLISHING CORPORATION
21 WEST STREET • NEW YORK, N.Y. 10006

OVER 13,000 SOURCES OF UP-TO-THE-MINUTE INFORMATION . . .

ENCYCLOPEDIA OF ASSOCIATIONS

11th EDITION

Volume 1, NATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS OF THE U.S. Over 1,400 pages. Alphabetical Index to Organization Names and Keywords. CIP: LC No. 76-46129. ISBN 0-8103-0133-4. $70.00.

Get information quickly by calling or writing specialized associations—the primary sources of the latest and most authoritative facts, figures, and opinions. Volume 1 of the 11th edition of Gale's Encyclopedia of Associations keeps you in touch with these sources through detailed entries on over 13,000 active organizations—more than 600 listed for the first time and 90% of previous entries changed. Listings are divided into 17 major subject categories (trade, agriculture, education, law, religion, etc.). Entries give: official name of group, popular name or acronym, address, phone number, chief executive, number of members, committees, publications, convention/meeting schedule, and more.

Volume 2, GEOGRAPHIC AND EXECUTIVE INDEX. Over 700 pages. CIP: LC No. 76-46129. ISBN 0-8103-0134-2. $50.00.

Volume 2 is divided into two sections. The Geographic Index lists in state and city order all the associations that are arranged in Volume 1 by subject. Included are addresses, phone numbers, and names of executives. The Executive Index lists by surname all the executives mentioned in Volume 1, followed by their titles, names of their organizations, complete addresses, and phone numbers. Each listing in both sections gives the entry number of the more detailed organization entry in Volume 1.

Volume 3, NEW ASSOCIATIONS AND PROJECTS. A periodical supplement to Volume 1. Cumulatively indexed. CIP: LC No. 76-46129. ISBN 0-8103-0130-X. Inter-edition subscription, with binder for new subscribers. $60.00.

This supplement maintains and increases the usefulness of Volume 1 by furnishing full descriptions of newly formed associations, which are of particular interest to researchers because new groups tend to be concerned with new problems and new ideas not adequately covered elsewhere.

REVIEWERS HAVE HAD HIGH PRAISE FOR THIS STANDARD REFERENCE BOOK . . .

RQ: "The Encyclopedia of Associations has earned its reputation as a cornerstone of any sound general reference collection. . . . In a word, EA is a basic reference tool. All libraries should have it." (Spring 1973)

BOOKLIST: "The work is still the most comprehensive directory of associations in the U.S." ("Reference and Subscription Books Reviews," October 15, 1975)

AMERICAN REFERENCE BOOKS ANNUAL: "Highly recommended." (1973)

CHOICE: Included in Choice's "Opening Day Collection," 3rd Edition.

GUIDE TO REFERENCE BOOKS FOR SCHOOL MEDIA CENTERS: "The only comprehensive source of detailed information on nonprofit American membership organizations of national scope." (1973)

ASLIB PROCEEDINGS: "This reference work is a mine of useful information." (June 1975)

The Encyclopedia of Associations and all Gale books of a continuing nature are available on Standing Order. Complete catalog of Gale books sent on request.

GALE RESEARCH CO.

Book Tower • Detroit, Mich. 48226

Customers in the U.K., on the Continent, and in Africa should order direct from: Gale Research Co. • c/o European Book Service • P.O. Box 124 • Weesp, The Netherlands.

BOOK REVIEW

The Contemporary Scene

Elder, Rob & Sarah. Crash.
Atheneum. Apr. 1977. 245p. $8.95.

Shaw, Adam David. Sound of Impact: the legacy of TWA Flight #514.
Viking. Mar. 1977. 320p. ISBN 0-670-65840-5. $10. AERONAUTICS

On the night of December 29, 1972 a jumbo jet plummeted into the Florida Everglades, killing 103 of the 176 persons on board. What emerges in Crash, a factual re-creation of that tragedy, is a vivid impression of the terror and ordeal of its survivors and their rescue. These scenes are construed with a minimum of sensationalism and gore, but the Elders' reportorial style in no way diminishes the grim, moving, and horrifying aspects of the disaster. In efforts to follow through with the entire story, the authors paint an interesting picture of the readjustment of some who lived through the experience. Written in simple straightforward prose, Crash is based on coherent observations mingled with plenty of stark realism and human interest.

Shaw's interpretations of public and private records together with his own interviews culminate in another absorbing account of a fatal 1974 airline crash in which all 92 victims perished on a Virginia mountaintop. Like Crash, Sound of Impact contains journalistic overtones, but Shaw spares the reader most of the grisly physical details of the actual calamity. Somewhat philosophical, he projects his own feelings as he dramatizes the lives and backgrounds of several victims into a poignant and meaningful series of sketches which make up the greater portion of the book. It also serves as a kind of forum expressing an outpouring of sentiments and concerns of those left behind. Now and then the text founders slightly because of some inevitable slowdowns and a certain redundancy of eulogy and reactions. Taken as a whole, it conveys a quiet genuine pathos, and it is sensitively told. A definite contribution of each title is the attention given to the need for maximum safety precautions. If the public's fascination has not been jaded by the recent wave of disaster films and novels, these two books are likely to capture a large readership.—Monica F. Hashimoto, formerly with Los Angeles P.L.

Greeley, Andrew M. The American Catholic: a social portrait.
Basic Bks. Mar. 1977. index. LC 76-7683. ISBN 0-465-00129-7. $15. REL/SOC SCI

In his latest book on the sociological phenomenon of Catholicism, Greeley tries to correct certain myths: that Catholics are all blue-collar workers who are racist and anti-abortion; that priests are unhappy in their vocation; and that Catholics do not support parochial schools. The study is the result of 15 years of research on "the acculturation of the Catholic ethnic immigrant groups into American society." The work is highly readable and emerges with three themes: first, Catholics are underrepresented in certain cultural elite positions; second, Catholics have achieved economic and educational equality through America's melting-pot dynamic but still have family structures and values peculiar to them; and third, Catholic individuals (or the "Catholic collectivity," as Greeley calls it) are becoming distinct from the Catholic Church as an institution. A thoughtful attempt to challenge a stereotype that results not only in meeting that challenge but in defining the sociological import of a major religious group.—Sharon S. Peterson, Chula Vista P.L., Calif.

Moyer, Anne. Better Food for Public Places.
Rodale. Mar. 1977. 304p. index. ISBN 0-87857-155-8. $8.95. COOKERY/HEALTH

In place of dreary meals loaded with sugar, fat, and chemical additives, deficient in minerals, vitamins, and fiber, packaged or pre-plated, and supplied by giant vendors for service in institutional situations (schools, hospitals, nursing homes), Moyer urges those responsible for these facilities to serve tasty meals providing the best possible nutritive value. She recommends fresh, natural, whole foods, prepared with skill and respect for their inherent goodness. Persuasive case studies illustrate how lively instructional programs can benefit students and encourage their participation in school menu planning, how hospital patients enjoy improved well-being, and how food workers gain greater satisfaction from "real" cooking. Chapters covering the selection and use of equipment and of natural foods, menu plans (more than 100), and quantity recipes (about 50) give useful insights into the operation of a large natural-foods kitchen. Especially useful for food and health professionals and for parents of schoolchildren.—Eleanor H. Broadus, formerly with Northern Illinois Univ. Libs., DeKalb

Phillips, Steven. No Heroes, No Villians: the story of a murder trial.
Random. Apr. 1977. 244p. $8.95. LAW

In June 1972, John Skagen, an off-duty New York City Transit Authority cop accosted James Richardson, a black man, in a subway station. A scuffle followed, and in the rush hour confusion, Skagen was supposedly shot by both the fleeing Richardson and a uniformed New York City policeman. Skagen died, and Richardson was soon captured to stand trial for felony murder on the grounds that "he had brought about Skagen's death in furtherance of his escape." The case became a cause célèbre, with the noted attorney, William Kunstler, defending Richardson. Kun-

CONTENTS

The Contemporary Scene 589
Reference 590
Art 596
Biography 599
Business & Economics 600
Communications 601
Education 602
History 602
Home Economics 606
Humor 607
Literature 607
Music 610
Philosophy 611
Poetry 611
Political Science & International Affairs 612
Psychology & Psychiatry 615
Religion 617
Science & Technology 619
Social Science 622
Sports & Recreation 625
Theater 627
Fiction 628
Mystery, Detective & Suspense 635
Book Review & Professional Reading Author Index 637

Library Journal reviews are indexed in Book Review Index and Book Review Digest.

"Solidly documented and eye-opening study"*

ACTS OF GOD, ACTS OF MAN

Wesley Marx,

author of The Frail Ocean

"The author of previous books on environmental issues now advocates urban-planning reforms to significantly reduce our exposure to earthquakes, floods, and other natural disasters. Preservation of natural lands is integral to Marx's basic proposals. Models of success . . . provide incentives for a task of enormous complexity. . . . This articulate, solidly documented, and eye-opening study has much to commend itself."
—Library Journal.*

SBN 698-10631-8 $8.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.

200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

What's on TV?

TV Season is the complete and timely guide to everything and everyone that appears on television.

"One of the most useful reference books for television . . . one I think would be invaluable in the industry
Cecil Smith, Los Angeles Times

Recommended by ALA Booklist

TV Season is the only annual reference book devoted to what is produced and broadcast by the television industry

TV Season is fully indexed and covers Emmy and Peabody awards.

Every program listing is complete, and includes cast and characters, the creators, producers and writers. It's a virtual Who's Who in TV

ORYX PRESS

3930 East Camelback Road, A1
Phoenix, Arizona 85018
(602) 956-6233

TV-Season 75-76 ISBN 0-912700-21-1, 280 pages. 74-75 ISBN 0-912700-20-3, 228 pages. Each volume, hardcover, $13.95 plus $.95 postage and handling stler saw the case as "one cop killing another cop, and then charging a black bystander with the crime." Written by the assistant district attorney who prosecuted the case, this volume is an insider's chronicle of that highly politicized trial. Phillips takes the reader from the events leading to the crime through the laborious process of building and presenting the case against Richardson. The tedious, glacial movement of the courts slows the pace of the story itself but highlights interesting aspects of the work, such as the chapter on plea bargaining and the numerous reflections on the Kunstler style. It's a mildly absorbing story but it ultimately fails to arouse or provoke the reader, much less engender concern "about the criminal justice system in a modern urban setting."—Jerry Maioli, Walla Walla County Rural Lib. District, Wash.

Popenoe, David. The Suburban Environment: Sweden and the United States.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. Apr. 1977. 300p. index. $19. URBAN AFFAIRS

Through in-depth study of Vallingby, Sweden and Levittown, Pennsylvania, two "packaged" post-World War II suburban communities, urban sociologist Popenoe asks (and sometimes answers) provocative questions about the relevance of "built-environments" to social behavior. He contrasts the high-density, low-rise, well-serviced apartment closely tied to Stockholm by superior public transportation, to the low-density, single-family home, lacking in-community services, and greatly dependent upon the automobile, which links it loosely to the metropolis. For each he examines what he terms "environmental fit," relating differing age-level residents to their homes, recreational facilities, jobs, etc. He concludes that although Vallingby is not all things to all people, it serves more people in better ways than does its American counterpart. From here he goes on to consider future suburban planning. Popenoe spent three years gathering his material, which consists of interviews with residents, community leaders, scholars, and experts of each country, as well as data from secondary sources (e.g., censuses) and his own field observation. The introduction includes a meaningful review of the literature, and bibliographic notes are provided. Intended for professionals, this book may find use in academic and comprehensive public libraries.—Phyllis R. Poses, Queens Borough P.L., New York

Read, William H. America's Mass Media Merchants.

Johns Hopkins. 1977. 209p. index. LC 76-17231. ISBN 0-8018-1851-6. $10.95. BUS/COMM

The most subtle U.S. presence in the world is in the cultural sphere—the export of American values through movies, TV programs, and news media circulated to more than 100 countries. There is much useful information here about the business side of this activity, the virtual swamping of foreign cultures with American media products, from Hawaii Five-O (a TV favorite in 50 lands) to Time magazine (common reading among the world's elites). Read focuses on the dozen or so media multinationals who distribute worldwide, invest heavily abroad, and have a significant foreign impact. His corporate profiles pull together previously scattered data on their growth and present power. However, Read's justification of their activities as ultimately beneficial to world peace is patently ideological and does not even square with his own facts. He especially soft-pedals the effects of "mass media merchants" in the Third World, where the hidden value systems of commercial mass media are developmentally destructive, reinforcing the schism between privileged consumer elites and impoverished majorities. It is curious, and a shame, that such a well-researched study should defend this state of affairs.—Maxwell Brem, Dept. of Sociology, Ryerson Polytechnical Inst., Toronto, Canada

Weber, James A. Grow or Die! the overpopulation myth.

Arlington House. Mar. 1977. 245p. index. LC 76-49985. ISBN 0-87000-367-4. $11.95. ENVIRONMENT

Given the current wisdom that population growth inevitably leads to disaster, it takes courage to argue the very opposite: that in America the best solution to economic, environmental, and resource depletion problems is a growing population. And more shocking than this hypothesis is the convincing case that Weber makes to support it. His argument is based largely on past history, when the U.S. grew from a few to over 200 million people. During that period, we experienced incredible increases in living standards and resource discoveries and (in his opinion) improvement in the total environment, including the conquest of natural environmental deficiencies. He also effectively cites the opinions of respected thinkers and institutions to buttress his arguments. This book is bound to put the zero-growthers on the defensive. Recommended.—Daniel La Rossa, Systems Management Engineering, South Huntington, N.Y.

REFERENCE

American Music Before 1865 in Print and on Records: a biblio-discography.

Inst. for Studies in American Music, Brooklyn College, Brooklyn, N.Y. 11210. (Monographs, No. 6). 1976. 113p. pref. by H. Wiley Hitchcock. index. LC 76-23559. ISBN 0-914678-05-1. pap. $5. MUSIC/REF

The first three sections of this four-part title are devoted to music in print in performance editions, facsimile reprints, and in books, and comprise 199 entries under name of composer (or title of collection), title and imprint. In the case of collections, contents are included, except in the case of a few voluminous collections. Many of the listings are annotated. The wealth of bibliographical data make this a handy tool for the location of commercially available American music from its earliest days through the Civil War. The final section is a discography listing all relevant music recorded on long-playing records, whether in print or not. The 543 works are entered under composer and/or title, followed by record company and catalog number. A deficiency is that performer information is not included. Admittedly, this may not be a lack in considering the only performance of William Billings' America, but it is an inconvenience in the case of the same composer's Chester with 13 different performances. An "Index of Composers, Compilers and Titles" guides one to both recordings and scores. In general, where the composer is known, the titles are listed under his name, with the title entries reserved for anonyma. However, the reader is advised to check both listings—some works, like Root's "Just Before the Battle, Mother" are listed only by title.—William Shank, CUNY Graduate Sch. Lib.

An Annotated Bibliography of Homosexuality. 2 vols. by Vern L. Bullough & others.

Garland. (Reference Lib. of Social Science, Vol. 22). 1977. Vol. 1, 405p. Vol. 2, 468p. ea. vol: index. LC 75-24106. ISBN 0-8240-9959-1. set $75.
SOC SCI/BIBLIOG

This comprehensive guide to gay studies contains 12,794 references to books, pamphlets, and periodical articles up to 1976, in the categories of bibliography, the behavioral sciences, education, law, the military, religion, biography, literature, the arts, politics, and transvestism and transsexualism. There are author and pseudonym indexes, and an appendix that reprints a chapter from a doctoral dissertation on the history of the gay movement from 1948 to 1960. This work complements previous bibliographies but does not claim to replace them entirely. It is valuable and unique in several ways. Part of the Bibliography lists the contents of gay periodicals that can be found only in the Baker Memorial Library of One, Inc., Los Angeles, the most important gay library in the country. The Bibliography is also especially helpful in its coverage of European materials. The annotations are scattered and very brief, but often helpful. Not all entries are bibliographically complete, but the editors attempted to verify as many as possible. Highly recommended for academic, research, and public libraries.—Dennis Lampkowski, Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center Lib., New York

Bibliography of British History, 1851-1914.

Oxford Univ. Pr. 1976. 1606p. comp., ed. & pref. by H. J. Hanham. index. ISBN 0-19-822389-7. $73.50.
HIST/BIBLIOG

Long awaited, this bibliographical tour de force justifies every bit of the anticipation which has preceded its publication. Comprising 10,829 entries which cover perhaps four times that number of sources, the book immediately becomes the standard reference work for historians of the Victorian and Edwardian eras; and scholars in a host of other disciplines will also have cause for frequent recourse to its pages. The entries, which are arranged topically, provide an introduction (and often much more) to the available printed sources on virtually any relevant subject. The index does not come up to the very high standard of the bibliographic contents, nor is its precise method of entry explained. Nonetheless, it is a substantial one which will provide initial guidance to the researcher. An essential acquisition for any collection supporting work in British studies.—James A. Casada, Dept. of History, Winthrop College, Rock Hill, S.C.

Bibliography of Southern Appalachia.

Appalachian Consortium Pr., 407 E. Howard St., Boone, N.C. 28607 and Univ. of Tennessee Pr. 1977. 511p. ed. & annotated by Charlotte T. Ross. index. filmography. LC 75-15231. $72.50.
REGIONAL STUDY/REF

This prodigious undertaking contains 13,000 entries from the 11 consortium members and the catalogs and shelf lists of numerous other libraries. Each entry cites the author, title, copyright date, and frequently the location of the work. Many of the titles are annotated. The subject and author indexes are cross referenced for easy access, but the listings are limited to books and monographs. There is also an annotated "filmography" of tapes and films. Geographically, the volume is restricted to Southern Appalachia, with some exceptions for certain counties in Pennsylvania, New York, and Ohio. The compilers are to be congratulated for their assiduous efforts in producing a "record of the people" that documents every facet of the region, ranging from geology to belles-lettres. The book is not inexpensive but no research library should be without it. —Daniel Ring, Oakland Univ. Lib., Rochester, Mich.

The Black American Reference Book.

Prentice-Hall. 1976. 1026p. ed. by Mabel M. Smythe. index. LC 75-26511. ISBN 0-13-077586-X. $29.95.
REF

This is a revision (with more than 80 percent new material, according to the publisher) of John Davis' The American Negro Reference Book (LJ 10/1/65). Combining the factual approach of an almanac with the scholarly precision of a professional journal, these signed pieces incorporate historical, sociological, and psychological methodologies in analyzing virtually every aspect of the black experience. Beginning with John Hope Franklin's fine opening summary of black history, the volume maintains a consistently high level of quality. The contributors note significant advances in legal status, politics, education, and employment, yet they continually point out the failure of American society to provide total equality for blacks. Excellent studies on black religion, art, music, sports, literature, and theater chronicle black influence on American culture. The detailed bibliographies accompanying each chapter further enhance the book's value. An essential work for public and academic libraries. [See review of The Negro Almanac below.—Ed.]—Philip F. Mooney, Balch Inst. Lib., Philadelphia

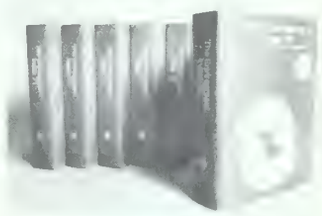
JUST THE COLD FACTS:

an entire year's worth of research, reviews, statistics, and literature on

...the energy crisis

Energy Index® '76:
A Select Guide to Energy Documents, Laws, and Statistics: 550 pp.; $65.00

...environmental quality



Environment Index® '76:
A Guide to the Key Literature of the Year: 800 pp., $85.00

...the land use revolution

Land Use Planning Abstracts '76-77:
A Select Guide to Land and Water Resources Information: 530 pp.; $65.00

Order now on ten day approval or request more information from:

EIC Environment Information Center, Inc.
Library Reference Dept.
292 Madison Avenue
New York, N.Y. 10017
(212) 949-9494

Essential new reference books from Harper & Row

THE ESSENTIAL GUIDE TO PRESCRIPTION DRUGS
What You Need to Know for Safe Drug Use

James W. Long, M.D. [illegible] estimated 75 million Americans taking one or more prescription [illegible] this compendium of basic information on the 200 most frequently prescribed generic remedies will be invaluable.
Glossary, indexes. LC 76-5141
ISBN 0-06-012676-0 Cloth, $25.00
ISBN 0-06-012677-9 Paper, $8.95

LIBRARY LOOKING-GLASS
A Personal Anthology

David Cecil. The author of the outstanding biography Melbourne has compiled "one of the most delightful anthologies to appear in years...a looking-glass literary portrait...surprising, fresh, thoughtful, wide-ranging."
—Publishers Weekly.
Index. LC 76-23516
ISBN 0-06-010696-4 $10.00

STRAIGHT TALK ABOUT YOUR HEALTH CARE

Mack Lipkin, M.D. A compact, fact-filled guide that helps consumers help themselves by learning to evaluate their physicians; hospital systems, services and costs; clinical diagnoses, tests and treatments; the pros and cons of the annual check-up; and much, much more.
Index. LC 75-25046
ISBN 0-06-012638-8 $8.95

THE PUBLIC SPEAKER'S TREASURE CHEST
Revised and Enlarged Third Edition

Herbert V. Prochnow and Herbert V. Prochnow, Jr. Nearly 5,000 humorous stories, quips, epigrams, curious facts, and one-liners assembled in ready-reference form for veteran and occasional speakers, toastmasters, and those who wish to add wit and sparkle to their everyday conversation.
Index. LC 75-25058
ISBN 0-06-013404-6 $9.95

THE ENCYCLOPEDIA OF MILITARY HISTORY
Revised Editon

R. Ernest Dupuy, Colonel, U.S.A., Ret. & Trevor N. Dupuy, Colonel, U.S.A., Ret. This mammoth survey of the world's military history has been updated through 1975 to include a new chapter covering the "official" end of the Vietnam war and the October war in the Middle East. Cross-referenced throughout.
Illustrated, index. LC 75-6333
ISBN 0-06-011139-9 $25.00

Harper & Row
10 E. 53rd St., New York 10022

Books in Series in the United States, 1966-1975: original, reprinted, in-print, and out-of-print books, published or distributed in the U.S. in popular, scholarly, and professional series.

Bowker. 1977. 2505p. LC 76-41665. ISBN 0-8352-0902-4. $50. BIBLIOG

The full title of this new reference work is cumbersome, but it does describe the scope. The work opens with a series section. Here, under each series entry, books are arranged by number, or if unnumbered, alphabetically by title. The many series beginning with identical words, such as "Advances in," are sorted out. Also listed are reprint series, e.g., "Essay Index Reprint Series"; this information is not readily or consistently available in PTLA. A random check shows that few series were missed and that in most instances all volumes issued within the stated time span are recorded. The entries include LC and ISBN numbers as well as current prices as reported for the 1976 edition of BIP. If a title has gone o.p. that is also noted. Children's books, elementary and high school textbooks, and U.S. government publications are the main exclusions. The other two sections of this guide give access by author and title. Both are very handy in determining whether the same title appears in two different series. The subject index to series should prove useful in locating original and reprint series in areas such as ethnic studies, science fiction, and molecular biology. The bound volume will be hefty—like the old one-volume edition of BIP. (The publisher plans to begin updating this first edition almost immediately by issuing Serials and Books in Series Quarterly. It will be interesting to compare that publication with LC's Monographic Series. One difference already known is that LC does not limit coverage to books having a U.S. imprint or a sole U.S. distributor.) Books in Series should be a time-saver for anyone involved in acquisitions work. And where catalogers have been stingy with series entries, it will be a boon to the reference people. Recommended.—Richard Heinzkill, Univ. of Oregon Lib., Eugene

Brusaw, Charles T. & others. The Business Writer's Handbook.

St. Martin's. Mar. 1977. 575p. bibliog. index. LC 75-38031. ISBN 0-312-10990-3. $12.95. BUS/ REF

This innovative guide features a "four-way access system" with an elaborate cross-reference system designed to facilitate the solving of specific problems relating to business writing. The principal segment is an alphabetical listing of trade terms, with prescriptive type definitions. A "topical key" section arranges entries into subject categories similar to a topical table of contents and is intended to assist readers involved in pursuing extensive subjects crossing several main entries. A "checklist of the writing process" classifies entries into a recommended sequence of steps applicable to a variety of writing projects. An excellent index of entries (with references to related terms) completes this systematic approach to business communication. For classroom or general use.—William H. Hoffman, Wichita P.L., Kan.

REFERENCE

Cass, James & Max Birnbaum. Comparative Guide to Two-Year Colleges and Career Programs.

Harper. 1976. 549p. index. LC 76-5552. ISBN 0-06-010644-1. $17.50; pap. ISBN 0-06-010692-1. $6.95. ED/REF

This companion to the author's Comparative Guide to American Colleges describes 1,740 two-year (and some four-year) institutions which offer two-year terminal programs. Descriptions include enrollment, founding date and affiliation, admission requirements, degrees offered, terminal programs the authors believe have good employment possibilities, tuition, and fees. One-third of the book lists some 200 programs and the institutions offering them. Accredited programs and number of 1973-1974 graduates are indicated. Some institutions listed under a program are not described in the book, including, among others, schools accredited by the National Home Study Council and the American Association of the Bible. Errors and omissions are surprisingly few for a first volume. Recommended.—Joe W. Kraus, Illinois State Univ. Lib., Normal

Dobyns, Henry F. Native American Historical Demography.

95p. LC 76-12371. ISBN 0-253-33974-0.

Heizer, Robert F. The Indians of California.

68p. LC 76-12372. ISBN 0-253-33001-7.

Helm, June. The Indians of the Subarctic.

91p. LC 76-12373. ISBN 0-253-33004-1.

Iverson, Peter. The Navajos.

64p. LC 76-12374. ISBN 0-253-33986-3.

Tanner, Helen Hornbeck. The Ojibwas.

78p. LC 76-12376. ISBN 0-253-34165-5.

ea. vol: pub. for Newberry Lib. Center for the History of the American Indian by Indiana Univ. Pr. (Bibliographical Series). 1976. pap. $3.95. BIBLIOG

Following a common purpose and format, these five brief paperbacks serve as ethnohistorical introductions to standard sources within their particular fields. Areas of emphasis include cultural topics, individual tribes, and contemporary and historical issues, with each volume containing an alphabetical source listing preceded by an essay keyed to citations in the bibliography. Collectively, the series attempts to "put Indians properly back into the central role of their own history and into the history of the United States as participants in, rather than as obstacles to, the creation of American society and culture." This objective is facilitated through the credentials of the authors, each a specialist in his/her field. Dobyns pinpoints sources and studies which dispel the notion that pre-Columbian Indian populations were small and therefore unable to prosper without European technological assistance; Heizer succeeds in compactly reviewing the numerous tribal communities in California from aboriginal times to the present; Helm focuses attention upon the Algonquian- and Athapaskian-speaking Indians who reside north of the 55th parallel; Iverson presents a thorough discussion of the Diné, tracing political pressures which have failed to weaken the cultural spirit and tradition of this people; and Tanner surveys the anthrohistorical dilemma of how a tribe can be distinguished from a band or a clan. These succinct bibliographies provide an excellent starting point for those interested in studying the areas covered, and will be welcomed by both high school and postsecondary library collections.—Ilene F. Rockman, California Polytechnic State Univ. Lib., San Luis Obispo

Finley, M. I., ed. Atlas of Classical Archaeology.

McGraw. Mar. 1977. 256p. illus. index. LC 76-16761. ISBN 0-07-021025-X. $22.50. ARCHAEOLOGY/REF

The physical remains of Greco-Roman civilization are spread liberally throughout the tricontinental region focused on the Mediterranean Sea. In this well-produced introduction to classical sites an intelligently selected sampling has been gathered to reflect the complex whole. Each section represents one historico-geographic zone and is prefaced by a short historical essay on the area. Within this framework there are brief historical and archaeological surveys of the individual places. The illustrative material, particularly the maps and diagrams, enhance the volume's appeal. This work will be a useful acquisition for collections serving travelers and beginning students. For those wanting a more advanced and comprehensive work, refer to the Princeton Encyclopedia of Classical Sites (LJ 10/1/76).—Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, N.Y.

Hartnoll, Phyllis. Who's Who in George Eliot.

Taplinger. (Who's Who in Literature). Mar. 1977. 183p. LC 76-39621. ISBN 0-8008-8273-3. $9.50. LIT/REF

Because the characters from Eliot's eight novels are interfiled into one alphabetical directory, it is difficult to construct a coherent plot synopsis for any single novel from this reference work. However, if the plot is wanted it can be pieced together by using an appendix which lists the characters book by book. The entry for each character discusses distinctive traits and importance in the story. Family trees would have been useful. Frank N. Magill's Cyclopedia of Literary Characters (LJ 2/1/64) offers adequate albeit briefer character descriptions of personages in seven Eliot novels. This is a small but interesting work whose price seems to have anticipated it having a limited demand.—Richard Heinzkill, Univ. of Oregon Lib., Eugene

Job Bias.

Facts on File. 1976. 190p. ed. by Lester A. Sobel. index. LC 76-41984. ISBN 0-87196-244-6. $9.95. LABOR/REF

If you have Facts on File in your library, you will not need Job Bias. The book excerpts, slightly rearranges, and indexes Facts on File in detail; there is no added information and little advantage to having the news on one topic in one volume. For the period from 1969 to 1976, Job Bias chronicles employment discrimination in the U.S. and its amelioration for blacks, with some attention also given to women and less to Indians, Chicanos, and other minorities. This book resembles more than two dozen other spin-off works from topics in Facts on File—such as Sobel's Consumer Protection (1976) and Energy Crisis (2 vols. 1974, 1975)—all of which you can do without if you have the original series or even the New York Times Index.—Janice Dunham, N.Y.P.L.

Koegler, Horst. The Concise Oxford Dictionary of Ballet.

Oxford Univ. Pr. 1977. 583p. ISBN 0-19-311314-7. $12.50. DANCE/REF

A basic reference work that includes more than 5000 entries covering all aspects of the world of ballet for the past four centuries. One especially interesting feature is an entry for cities important to the history of ballet. The explanations are concise, well written, and informative. If you don't have George Wilson's Dictionary of Ballet (A. & C. Black, London, 1974), add this one to the general reference collection.—Norma Feld, Rochester Sch. Dist. Libs., N.Y.

FOREIGN TRADE ENTERPRISE
ARS POLONA
KRAKOWSKIE PRZEDMIEŚCIE 7
00-068 WARSZAWA, POLAND

RECOMMENDS:

The undermentioned professional and language dictionaries which are available on ARS POLONA's book stock;

—Stanisławski: A PRACTICAL ENGLISH-POLISH DICTIONARY
Price: US $8.-
—Stanisławski: A GREAT ENGLISH-POLISH DICTIONARY, parts 1-2
Price: US $15.-
—Stanisławski: A GREAT POLISH-ENGLISH DICTIONARY, parts 1-2
Price: US $15.-
—Grzebieniowski: A CONCISE POLISH-ENGLISH, ENGLISH-POLISH DICTIONARY
Price: US $7.-
—ENGLISH-POLISH SCIENTIFIC-TECHNICAL DICTIONARY
Price: US $20,45
—POLISH-ENGLISH SCIENTIFIC-TECHNICAL DICTIONARY
Price: US $18,35
—WEBB-SAILING DICTIONARY IN 10 LANGUAGES
Price: US $4,60
—GLASS MAKING ENGLISH-GERMAN-POLISH DICTIONARY
Price: US $5,80

DICTIONARY ANNOUNCED FOR PUBLISHING:

—Billip: A MINIMUM POLISH-ENGLISH AND ENGLISH-POLISH DICTIONARY
Price: US $ ca 3.-

"Outstanding Reference Book – 1975"

The single most valuable reference on millions of dollars worth of research grants is available now. The 1976-77 edition of the Directory of Research Grants is the comprehensive, up-to-date guide to over 1500 unique research grants

Organized by subject, this invaluable reference saves many hours of time-consuming grant-searching. All grant sources are covered – public and private, domestic and foreign, and graduate and undergraduate.

Recommended by Choice

ORYX PRESS
3930 East Camelback Road A1
Phoenix Arizona 85018
(602) 956-6233

Available now ISBN 0-912700-41-6
Hardcover. 256 pages. $34 75 plus $1 25 postage and handling.

LJ RECOMMENDS:

BLYE, Private Eye

The Real World of the Private Detective

Nicholas Pileggi

"Revealing...often startling...authentic... will be useful on the sociology and crime shelves, while having special appeal for the detective fiction reader." —Library Journal

ISBN 0 87223-475 4 $8.95

PLAYBOY PRESS

Distributed by Simon & Schuster

Kulkarni, H. B. Stephen Spender, Works and Criticism: an annotated bibliography.

Garland. (Reference Lib. of the Humanities, Vol. 43). 1977. 264p. index. LC 75-24090. ISBN 0-8240-9960-5. $30. LIT/BIBLIOG

Spender was, along with Auden and C. Day Lewis, one of the original "Oxford group." Probably one of the lesser known of the group, Spender has generated less critical comment; but his diversity of interests, political as well as literary, has made compiling his bibliography an interesting if difficult task. Kulkarni's notes on each of Spender's major works attest a deep interest in his subject and may range from brief publishing background to interpretative summaries. Items are arranged chronologically within such sections as individual works, translations by Spender, anthologies to which Spender contributed, and criticisms of Spender. A thorough title index is appended. Useful and recommended.—Sheila Pepper, McMaster Univ. Lib., Hamilton, Ontario, Canada

The Negro Almanac: a reference work on the Afro American. 3d rev. ed.

Bellwether. 1976. 1206p. comp. & ed. by Harry A. Ploski & Warren Marr II. illus. index. LC 75-24805. $59.95. REF

This third edition, substantially revised and enlarged from its predecessor (see LJ 3/1/72), covers black American history, biography, and statistics. Unlike The Black American Reference Book (see review above), The Negro Almanac contains biographical sketches of many personalities, past and present. While the Reference Book tends to cover a subject by citing and analyzing many facts and statistics, the Almanac instead places more emphasis on significant persons. The Almanac presents statistical information (on income levels, housing, employment, population distribution, etc.) in easy-to-use graphs and charts, and it also has numerous black-and-white photographs, drawings, and reproductions of works of art. Sections of the Almanac combine to form an especially helpful directory of private organizations and federal programs that provide services—e.g., scholarships, vocational training, health care, loans—for black Americans and other minorities. Although the updated Almanac costs twice as much as The Black American Reference Book, it is better geared for a nonacademic readership, and is a valuable information source for most general collections.—Valencia Williams, Los Angeles County P.L. System, Lakewood, Calif.

Proffer, Ellendea, comp. & pref. An International Bibliography of Works by and About Mikhail Bulgakov.

Ardis. 1976. 133p. photogs. ISBN 0-88233-111-6. $15. LIT/BIBLIOG

Proffer has written extensively on Bulgakov, and this is her latest offering. For the "1283 entries in 24 languages," Proffer has first cataloged, by genre, all of Bulgakov's published works in Russian (indicating textual variants for major entries), and as many archival holdings as possible. "Critical Works About Bulgakov in Russian" is next, followed by "Bulgakov in English," which presents translations and reviews of translations, in addition to a welcome listing of critical studies in English. In contrast, the section "Translation of Bulgakov into Other Languages" is only marginally useful, since there is no consistent indication (in English or Russian) just which works are listed. Although there is some variation in notational conventions for citing journal articles and at least one inaccurate listing, these are small points. The book's chief aim is well served. Any reader interested in Bulgakov in Russian and/or English will find the book invaluable.—Linda Hart Scatton, Dept. of Language, Literature & Communication, Rensselaer Polytechnic Inst., Troy, N.Y.

Smith, Myron J., Jr. World War I in the Air: a bibliography and chronology.

Scarecrow. 1977. 271p. index. LC 76-45461. ISBN 0-8108-0990-7. $11. HIST/REF

Smith's title is misleading: the systematic exclusion of non-English-language sources produces a very one-sided impression of the war. This imbalance begins with the anti-Hun preface by the noted Germanophobe, Arch Whitehouse, who asserts without any substantiation that the "Red Baron" was not a baron at all. It shows up again late in the volume, where all the military aircraft shown in the illustrations are those of the Western allies. The author was mechanically diligent in tracking down obscure and largely useless periodical literature, though his own basic unfamiliarity with the subject is illustrated by treating famous father-and-son authors as one person. All in all, the subject deserves a better treatment, focused less exclusively on the Anglo-Saxons. The volume will, nevertheless, have some appeal to the serious hobbyist and the World War I military aviation buff.—Warren E. Gade, Dept. of History, California State Univ., Fresno

Trzyna, Thaddeus C., ed. with assist. of Joan Dickson Smith. Population: an international directory of organizations and information resources.

Public Affairs Clearinghouse, Box 30, Claremont, Calif. 91711. 1976. 132p. bibliog. index. LC 76-4269. ISBN 0-912102-22-5. pap. $18.75. SOC SCI/REF

This volume is a current directory of organizations concerned with population, family planning, and related topics. More than 600 groups—government and private, national and international—representing almost every country in the world, are described. The coverage includes all viewpoints on issues such as abortion and birth control. An introductory "User's guide to who's doing what" provides an overview of each topic and refers the reader to specific main entries. Separate indexes for organizations, acronyms and abbreviations, and subjects simplify access and increase usefulness. A bibliography of related directories and resource centers is included. Individual entries vary from name and address only to full-page explanation of purpose, structure, funding, activities, etc. Country listings cite local groups and describe government policy. This is a valuable reference tool for public affairs, family planning, and environmental collections.—Joan Scherer Brewer, Inst. for Sex Research Lib., Indiana Univ., Bloomington

Whalon, Marion K. Performing Arts Research: a guide to information sources.
Gale. (Performing Arts Information Guide). 1976. 280p. index. LC 75-13828. ISBN 0-8103-1364-2. $18. THEATER/REF
A selective, nicely annotated guide to reference and bibliographical resources for the performing arts—theater, film, opera, and dance. Peripheral areas such as costume, theater architecture, theatrical music, and sound recordings are also treated. Entries are arranged alphabetically by main entry with extensive cross references under seven main headings: guides; dictionaries, encyclopedias, and handbooks; directories; play indexes and finding lists; sources for reviews of plays and motion pictures; bibliographies, indexes, and abstracts; and illustrative and audiovisual sources. The sections on play indexes and sources for reviews seem especially thorough and useful. With the current burgeoning interest in these topics, this volume should find some use in larger libraries. Recommended.—John D. Campbell, Occidental Coll. Lib., Los Angeles

Larousse. The one source for all your French & Spanish book needs.

Over 1 million
imported foreign language books in stock; all French and Spanish publishers represented

Immediate answers to inquiries; telex connections between New York, France, Spain, South and Central America

Special weekly air-freight service with France and Spain

All orders
for books in stock processed in 48 hours

Exclusive distributors in the United States for all Librairie Larousse publications, and official distributing agents for Gallimard, Ltd. and Alianza Editorial

French & Spanish
bookstore/showroom in New York

Larousse & Co. Inc. DISTRIBUTOR OF FRENCH AND SPANISH BOOK IMPORTS

572 Fifth Avenue, New York N Y 10036
212-575-9515/Telex 12335

White, Norval. The Architecture Book.
Knopf. 1976. 343p. illus. LC 76-13713. ISBN 0-394-49326-5. $15; pap. $8.95. ARCHITECTURE/REF
A concise encyclopedia of architecture and architects that is both a useful reference tool and a pleasure to read. The author writes with obvious enthusiasm and humor on a wide range of architectural subjects and periods—from Aalto to zoophorus—and while there are some important omissions (the entire Russian Constructivist movement, for example) the book contains over 1400 entries and some 350 illustrations. Unlike other earlier dictionaries of architecture (by Saylor, Sturgis, Fleming-Honour-Pevsner, and others), this volume places emphasis on the work of contemporary architects, such as Venturi and Gwathmey. References to obscure architectural terminology have been omitted. Highly informative, and highly recommended for layman and professional alike.—H. Ward Jandl, National Register of Historic Places, Washington, D.C.

Worldmark Encyclopedia of the Nations. 5 vols. 5th ed. Vol. 1: United Nations; Vol. 2: Africa; Vol. 3: Americas; Vol. 4: Asia & Australasia; Vol. 5: Europe.
Wiley. 1976. 1770p. maps, some color. bibliogs. LC 76-26857. ISBN 0-471-74833-1. $99.50. REF
This established basic reference work has been extensively rewritten and completely updated. The volumes provide facts about the geographic, historical, political, social, and economic status of 162 nations and more than 90 dependencies. Volume 1, which describes the UN's origin, structure, and functions, unfortunately is the only volume that includes an index. In the other volumes, each nation is described in an introductory paragraph followed by 50 subject entries ranging from location and history to a bibliography of works about the country. Maps of all countries through late 1976 are included. This reference tool will not only be useful in schools and public and academic libraries, but it will also be an aid to historians, students of political science, environmentalists, et al.—Ina J. Weis, Univ. of Toledo Libs., Ohio

Recently Revised Reference Works

American Book Publishing Record Cumulative, 1970-1974. 4 vols.
Bowker. 1977. 5551p. index. LC 66-19741. ISBN 0-8352-0911-3. $99.50. REF
This third cumulative BPR includes "books published in 1969-72 as cataloged by the Library of Congress and a cumulation of Weekly Record issues for the period 1973-74." About 174,000 entries.

Thompson, Lawrence S., comp. A Bibliography of Dissertations in Classical Studies: American, 1964-1972; British, 1950-1972, with a cumulative index, 1861-1972.
Archon: Shoe String. 1976. 296p. LC 76-41178. ISBN 0-208-01457-8. $22.50. BIBLIOG
A supplement to A Bibliography of American Doctoral Dissertations in Classical Studies and Related Fields (1968), Ready Reference

Canadian Books in Print 1976
Edited by Martha Pluscauskas
As the only complete reference and buying guide to English-language books, the two volumes of CBIP are vital to the book profession.

Author and Title Index
Alphabetical listings of over 16,000 books published in Canada.
'an important benchmark in Canada's national bibliography.' Choice $35.00 net

Subject Index
Titles listed in 600 subject categories.
'an indispensable tool to libraries and booksellers.' The Booklist $25.00 net

Canadian Books for Children
Edited by Irma McDonough
Some 1400 in-print children's books and magazines have been carefully selected and annotated. Arranged by subject, with a separate author-title index. Includes a basic booklist for teachers, librarians, parents. $7.50

Canadian Serials Directory
Second edition
Edited by Martha Pluscauskas
Detailed and up-to-date bibliographic and buying information on more than 4,000 English- and French-language periodicals in a format redesigned to facilitate location of entries.
'by far the most comprehensive listing of periodicals and series published at the present time in Canada.' American Reference Books Annual $75.00 net

Canadian Essay and Literature Index 1974
Compiled and edited by Andrew D. Armitage and Nancy Tudor Provides access to printed materials in approximately 80 anthologies and 45 magazines. Entries are listed under author, title, and subject.
$35.00 net
Canadian Essay and Literature Index 1973 $27.50 net

prices are those suggested at time of publication

University of Toronto Press
33 East Tupper Street
Buffalo, NY 14203

this work "includes those North American doctoral dissertations omitted from the earlier work, picks up 1964 and 1965 titles not available at the time, and goes up through 1971, with a few later titles." It also includes British dissertations that were listed in the Index to Theses Accepted for Higher Degrees in the Universities of Great Britain and Ireland for the period 1950-1971.

—This highly selective listing was compiled by Robert R. Harris

ART

Baigell, Matthew. Charles Burchfield.

Watson-Guptill. 1976. 208p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 76-15169. $35. ART

The work of American painter Charles Burchfield (1893-1967) defies categorization. Born in Salem, Ohio and living nearly all of his adult life in suburban Buffalo, he was, in a sense, a regional artist whose style bore many similarities to that of Edward Hopper, but on the other hand his best works were the ones done expressionistically, where erratic brush work conveyed the pulse of nature. Baigell's monograph is an objective chronological study of the development of Burchfield's style. He minimizes psychological probing and biographical data in favor of stylistic analysis of the artist's numerous landscape and small town scenes. Burchfield used watercolor exclusively to capture the essence of his environment. The volume's color illustrations are adequate in giving a sense of the artist's use of earth tones and the range of his palette.—Barbara Hornick-Lockard, Univ. of Pittsburgh at Bradford Lib.

Brown, Jonathan. Murillo & his Drawings.

Princeton Univ. Pr. 1977. 200p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-9395. $25. GRAPHIC ARTS

The literature of the history of art has long neglected Spanish master drawing. This fine monograph makes a fundamental contribution to the organization and clarification of the almost unknown graphic oeuvre of the previously overrated and now underestimated Baroque painter B. E. Murillo (1617-1682). Handsomely produced and well thought out, it will doubtless become the foundation for subsequent investigations of Murillo's drawings. The author's lucid introductory essay not only characterizes the artist's graphic style and its evolution, but also elucidates his Sevillian sources and work at the local academy, the function of the drawings in his creative process, and the varied problems of copies, fakes, signatures, and inscriptions. All of the approximately 100 accepted works are well reproduced and carefully cataloged. Comparative material and valuable appendixes are also included. Basic for collections concerned with Hispanic art.—Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, New York

Generalić, Ivan. The Magic World of Ivan Generalić.

Rizzoli. 1976. 223p. intro. by Nebojša Tomašević. tr. from Italian by John Shepley. illus., mainly color. LC 76-11251. ISBN 0-8478-0044-X. $27.50. ART

This book offers an exceptionally thorough account of the Yugoslav peasant-artist's view of himself, his world, and his paintings. Details of Generalić's life form the first chapter together with documentary photographs. The second chapter records his views on his personal philosophy of art. A final chapter presents a representative array of Generalić's works, beautifully reproduced in full color, each accompanied by the artist's own comments on what he intended to produce in a given instance, why he chose his figures and coloring, and what it all meant to him personally. His reasoning about choices may startle advocates of esoteric symbolism, since his rationales are often charmingly logical and pragmatic—very much in contrast to the stark and surreal atmosphere pervading so many of his works. This is an enriching book, a landmark in understanding the significance of naïve art in our time, showing us how creativity in the man is inseparable from links with its wellsprings in the child.—Robert S. McCully, Dept. of Psychiatry & Behavioral Science, Medical Univ. of South Carolina, Charleston

Heller, Nancy & Julia Williams. The Regionalists.

Watson-Guptill. 1976. 208p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 76-12424. ISBN 0-8230-4516-1. $35. ART

This exasperating book is a feast of sorts and a famine at the same time. There are 142 full-page, crisply printed reproductions (48 in color), but the actual text consists of 37 pages and barely covers the essentials of the subject. For example, the chapter on Regionalist paintings of urban centers, a major visual theme of the period, has a text of six-and-a-half pages and the fate of Regionalist painting after the 1930's is covered in two pages. Data in the 36 biographies at the end of the book can be found elsewhere and the bibliography has 21 entries, of which five are monographs. Regionalism is an important aspect of America's art history. Most libraries should wait for a better presentation with more of a balance between text, illustration, and price.—William J. Dane, Newark P.L., N.J.

Howard, James K. Ten Years with the Cowboy Artists of America: a complete history and exhibition record.

Northland. 1976. 213p. fwd. by Frederick G. Renner. illus., some color. bibliog. LC 75-43345. ISBN 0-87358-150-4. $40. ART

As the title suggests, this work provides a biographical chronicle of the artist members of the Cowboy Artists of America organization from the date of its inception in 1965 up to 1975. The main section furnishes detailed descriptions of the art and careers of 33 of the 40 listed CAA members. Samples of each artist's work, in fine color and black-and-white illustrations, are provided, plus a full-page photo of each artist. The author also includes CAA award lists, CAA officer rolls for the ten years and a useful bibliography. A useful study of regional art at its best, Ten Years is recommended for public and academic libraries with American and Western art collections.—Richard Lietz, Graduate Sch. of Librarianship, Univ. of Denver

Levey, Michael. The World of Ottoman Art.

Scribners. Mar. 1977. 152p. illus., some color. maps. index. LC 76-40383. ISBN 0-684-14850-1. $10.95. ART

Levey's fascinating outline of 14th- through mid-19th-Century Ottoman art may have the same impact on the general public as did Kenneth Clark's Civilization. Like Clark, Levey has the ability of transmitting his own enthusiasm to the novice (an enthusiasm possibly due to the fact that Levey, Director of the National Gallery in London, is not an Islamic specialist). The reader is swept through a guided tour of Turkey, with pauses to contemplate and savor the masterpieces of Sinan, the great 16th-Century architect. Levey's emphasis is on architecture and its decorative elements but some painting is also discussed. Travelers will find this book an invaluable source since Levey also describes off-the-beaten-track monuments. Excepting those of the paintings, the illustrations are quite good, but no floor plans were included.—Jacqueline D. Sisson, Ohio State Univ. Lib., Columbus

Rice, David Talbot. The Illustrations to the "World History" of Rashid al-Din.

Biblio Dist. Center, 81 Adams Dr., Totowa, N.J. 07512. 1976. 192p. ed. by Basil Gray. illus., some color. index. $30. ART

David Talbot Rice, the internationally recognized Byzantine scholar, died shortly after completing the first draft of his text for the facsimile edition of this 1306 masterpiece. Basil Gray, the Islamic specialist, was asked to prepare the manuscript for printing, which resulted in an extremely interesting juxtaposition of theories. While Gray has not altered the text, his editorial notes provide an avenue for his theory of strong Chinese influences on the manuscript's painters. Rice's 32-page text explores establishing attributions for each of the 70 miniatures which are reproduced in excellent monochrome. Color microfiche of the entire manuscript are included in a book pocket. This innovative idea is both economical and extremely practical for students and scholars since it eliminates leafing back and forth between text and plates. Many of the plates have not been previously published, and Rice's priceless notes include extensive scholarly bibliographic information.—Jacqueline D. Sisson, Ohio State Univ. Lib., Columbus

Richman, Michael. Daniel Chester French: an American sculptor.

pub. for the National Trust for Historic Preservation by Metropolitan Museum of Art dist. by New York Graphic Society: Little. 1976. 208p. postscript by Paul W. Ivory. illus. LC 76-40897. ISBN 0-87099-153-1. pap. $5.95. ART

This handsome scholarly catalog of the first major exhibition of American sculptor Daniel Chester French (1850– 1931) reassesses French's contribution as a "maker of public monuments." Most Americans are familiar with the "Lincoln" of the Washington Memorial and the "Minuteman." This catalog presents some 50 working models and statuettes for public monuments with sketches and photos of the finished products as well as earlier versions; thus we see how the artist actually worked. The text abounds with direct quotes of French, skillfully intermingled with a chronology and account of his life. Bibliographical notes are meticulously done, reproductions numerous and excellent.—Gloria K. Rensch, Vigo County P.L., Terre Haute, Ind.

Welch, Anthony. Artists for the Shah: late sixteenth-century painting at the Imperial Court of Iran.

Yale Univ. Pr. 1976. 233p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 75-18188. ISBN 0-300-01915-7. $25. ART

In the preface the author states that he has worked on this publication since 1970 and that some sections appeared in his 1972 Harvard University dissertation. Yet, the book gives the appearance of haste. The text is frequently repetitive. This is atypical of Welch's publications and regrettable since this book's historical outlines, chapters on the painters Siyavush, Sadiqi, and Riza and those on patronage are important contributions to English language literature. Welch provides valuable translations of excerpts from primary sources and traces the development of artists' need for independence from royal patronage and the subsequent rise of single-page painting. The quality of the plates is not good; even a magnifying glass does not assist in seeing details mentioned in the text. The bibliography is an excellent basic list. Welch is deserving of better editing and illustrations.—Jacqueline D. Sisson, Ohio State Univ. Lib., Columbus

Architecture

Heckscher, August with Phyllis Robinson. Open Spaces: the life of American cities.

Harper. (20th Century Fund Essay). 1977. maps. by Dyck Fledderus. photogs. index. ISBN 0-06-011801-6. $15; pap. $6.95.
LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTURE

New York City's former Commissioner of Parks offers us a provocative rendering of the history and development of open space in major American cities. He describes the complex relationship between the planners—Cleveland, Olmsted, Moses—and the politicians they served. He reveals the evolving American view of green space seen against the background of the European tradition of great parks, the city beautiful movement, strip development, recycled inner city space. Twenty-seven cities were surveyed. Heckscher does not limit his analysis to the planning devices of the past but offers thoughtful and realistic solutions for preservation and continuity of development of our open space amenities. Since this volume was reviewed from proofs, the 100-plus maps and photographs were not available, but they can only enhance a valuable contribution to the history of urban landscape.—Phyllis Andersen, formerly with Boston Architectural Center Lib.

Page, Marian. Historic Houses: restored and preserved.

Whitney Lib. of Design: Watson-Guptill. 1976. 208p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-18966. ISBN 0-8230-7275-4. $25. ARCHITECTURE

Using 13 examples of major restored houses from the Colonial, Federal, Greek Revival, and Romantic periods in America and five of their stylistic antecedents in Britain, the author illuminates the character of each house through vivid descriptions of its architectural significance, regional and cultural setting, and the important events and personages that influenced its history. From the introductory survey of the four styles and the capsule chronology of each house to the specific problems and decisions encountered by the preservation organizations, technical consultants, and history scholars, the book clearly presents the restoration process as a combination of many efforts. The quality of the text is paralleled by the superb illustrations, including photographs of the furnishings, interior spaces, and exterior as well as architectural plan drawings and detail sketches. Neither overly technical nor purely historical, the book shows the comprehensive contribution of preservationists fostering the growing interest in our valuable architectural heritage.—Stephen P. Hamilton, Boston Architectural Center

Decorative Arts & Crafts

Bausert, John. The Complete Book of Wicker & Cane Furniture Making.

Drake. 1977. 123p. illus. photogs. LC 75-36148. ISBN 0-8473-1182-1. pap. $6.95.

Brown, Margery. Cane and Rush Seating.

Larousse. (Craft Series). 1976. 96p. illus. photogs. LC 76-15023. ISBN 0-88332-044-5. $8.95.
CRAFTS

Bausert provides detailed instructions for the replacement of chair seats by hand caning, machine-made cane, fiber rush, splint, or 6mm. binding cane. There are instructions as well for three simple construction projects: a wicker planter, a wicker chair, and a wicker-and-cane cocktail table. A complete list of materials needed for each project is given. Although the calligraphy used in place of type in the text is attractive, it is not very easy to read and may present problems for the person attempting to follow the instructions while in the midst of a caning project.

Brown is a teacher in England of the craft of weaving cane and rush chair seats. The instructions she gives here are very detailed and well illustrated with photographs and diagrams. She discusses cane, rush, willow, seagrass, and fiber cord, giving a variety of designs and explaining the pitfalls to be avoided when working with each one. A list of suppliers in Great Britain and the United States is included. This is a much better book than the Bausert both in instructions and illustrations

THE CROWELL CORNER

The Color Treasury of ORIENTAL RUGS
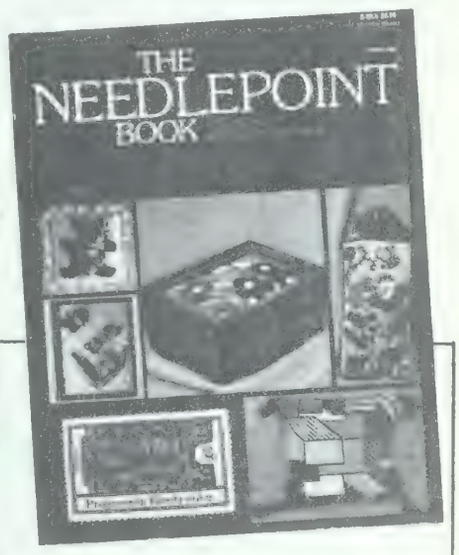
Stefan A. Milhofer
Tr. by D.D. Paige

"A good introduction to the craft and collecting of oriental carpets. Milhofer researches their history, manufacture, and the traditional designs, and then considers the styles and distinctive marks of individual regions and types.. An excellent survey [illegible]
Photographs
ISBN: 0-690-01060-5 $9.95

T.Y. CROWELL
666 Fifth Ave , New York, N.Y. 10019



"COMPREHENSIVE"

THE NEEDLEPOINT BOOK
by Jo Ippolito Christensen

"There is little about this book that I cannot recommend . . . Ranks among the better ones . . . comprehensive; the notation system designating the instructions is easy to understand, and it also includes a photo of each stitch pattern . . . A good buy."
— Library Journal (December 12, 1976)
ISBN 0-13-610980-2 CIP $17.95

Prentice-Hall
General Book Marketing Div.
Box 500, Englewood Cliffs, N.J. 07632

and is the preferred choice for library purchase.—Constance Ashmore Fairchild, Univ. of Illinois Lib., Urbana

Distin, William H. & Robert Bishop. The American Clock: the comprehensive pictorial survey 1723-1900 with a listing of 6153 clockmakers.

Dutton. 1976. 359p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-525-05310-7. $27.50. DEC ARTS

For almost 50 years, The Book of American Clocks (LJ 3/1/51) and its sequel, A Treasury of American Clocks (LJ 2/15/68), both by Brooks Palmer, have been the books on American clocks. Then in 1975 Chris Bailey's Two Hundred Years of American Clocks and Watches (LJ 12/1/75) was published; it is far and away the best history of American clocks. Now we have a fourth excellent book, this one by Distin, a former director of the National Association of Clock and Watch Collectors, a book which is basically an update of Palmer's books mentioned above. Like Palmer (which most libraries probably have), Distin is careful to note that his is not a history of American clocks, but photographs of significant clocks against which collectors can measure their collections. Like Palmer, Distin's book contains good photographs with little text, an index, and a list of makers, many of whom are already included in Palmer. So, if your library already has the volumes by Palmer and Bailey, this should be your third purchase on the subject of American clocks.—Donald Empson, Minnesota Historical Soc., St. Paul Fales, Dean A., Jr. The Furniture of Historic Deerfield.

Dutton. 1976. 294p. illus., some color. index. LC 76-25790. ISBN 0-525-11101-8. $25. DEC ARTS

A selection of the furniture collected to furnish Historic Deerfield, Inc., in Massachusetts. While not an exhaustive catalog, the book illustrates and discusses more than 500 pieces of New England furniture from the earliest times through the Federal period. Furniture is arranged by type, and each piece is discussed in the body of the text; text and illustrations are laid out so they work well together. Fales, an experienced writer on American furniture, gives a very thorough introduction to the particular qualities of this important collection of New England furniture which has not been widely published. This is not a catalogue raisonné such as those produced by Winterthur, but is highly recommended. The black and white illustrations are very good, the two dozen color plates are too red.—Jack Perry Brown, Yale Univ. for British Art & Studies Lib.

Medley, Margaret. The Chinese Potter: a practical history of Chinese ceramics.

Scribners. 1976. 288p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 76-6023. ISBN 0-684-14684-3. $20. DEC ARTS

It is fitting that this substantive text on Chinese ceramics was written by the curator of the Percival David Foundation of Chinese Art in London. To date, most of the monographs on this subject have been general histories with an aesthetic and stylistic approach. Requests for information on the technical phases have been difficult to fill. In 1975, Suzanne Valenstein's A Handbook of Chinese Ceramics (Metropolitan Museum of Art) was a step in the right direction. Now, thanks to Medley, we have a scholarly, meticulous work, solely concerned with the techniques employed by Chinese potters from the 4th Century B.C. to 1912. While style and ornamentation necessarily are touched upon, the primary factor in this book is the development of techniques, raw materials, glazes, and the refinement of the construction of kilns and firing techniques. Line drawings of kilns are included. Medley's access to laboratory analyses and familiarity with recent archaeological excavations are reflected in her syntheses of the latest developments in this complex field. This book is definitely not for the general reader. It is a highly specialized, technical book whose text and excellent illustrations will be invaluable to knowledgeable collectors, ceramicists, and specialists.—Jacqueline D. Sisson, Fine Arts Lib., Ohio State Univ., Columbus

Onassis, Jacqueline, ed. In the Russian Style.

pub. in coop. with the Metropolitan Museum of Art by Studio: Viking. 1977. 184p. intro. by Audrey Kennett. illus., some color. bibliog. ISBN 0-670-39696-6. $14.95. HIST/COSTUME

Here is a rich and varied glimpse into the court life of pre-Revolutionary Russia. Pages of costumes, memorabilia, portraits, and sketches follow a brief biographical sketch of each ruler, and the reader experiences a real sense of each era, begins to fathom the depths of this vast land. The only possible quibble with this volume concerns the paucity of color photographs. To walk through the costume exhibit at the Metropolitan Museum is to be in a fairyland of richly embroidered gowns, luxurious furs, vibrant colors. Unfortunately, black-and-white illustrations can only begin to hint at such magnificence. For general collections.—Gail R. Haar, Prosser Lib., Bloomfield, Conn.

Rosenthal, Iris. The Not-So-Nimble Needlework Book.

Today Pr: Grosset. Apr. 1977. illus. LC 76-560. ISBN 0-448-12449-1. pap. $5.95. CRAFTS

This book would be useful for experienced needleworkers who need to adapt their skills because of age or illness. The author's ideas are based on her own experience with failing ability and on her work with patients. Projects for embroidery, quilting, knitting, crocheting, rya, and simple weaving are included. The most helpful ideas are in the section on embroidery. The other sections present similar projects with fatter yarn and needles, but few adaptive techniques. The reviewer did not see all of the illustrations, but the samples were clear line drawings. Another book on this subject is Cora Bodkin & others' Crafts for Your Leisure Years (LJ 12/15/76). It covers all types of crafts, not only needlework. More adaptive techniques are given. Although the design quality of the projects in the Rosenthal book is better, of the two books, Crafts for Your Leisure Years is the better purchase.—Margaret Zeps, Chetco Community Lib., Brookings, Ore.

von Ragué, Beatrix. A History of Japanese Lacquerwork.

Univ. of Toronto Pr. 1976. 304p. tr. from German by Annie R. de Wassermann. illus. bibliog. index. LC 73-92299. ISBN 0-8020-2135-2. $35. DEC ARTS

A meticulous delineation of Japanese lacquerwork from the 9th Century to the present. The author defines with precision the Japanese terms used to describe the techniques and processes used to produce the works. In nearly all instances, the objects, which are described in detail, have been assigned a specific date. All but a few of these objects are illustrated in black-and-white. Both K. Herberts' magnificent Oriental Lacquer: Art and Technique (LJ 11/15/63) and Yu-kuan Lee's Oriental Lacquer Art (LJ 7/72) cover much of this material from a broader view. For the scholarly collection on Oriental art.—Paul von Khrum, formerly with New York Univ. Libs.

Photography

Gosling, Nigel. Nadar.

Knopf. 1977. 298p. photogs. index. LC 76-27546. ISBN 0-394-41106-4. $25. PHOTOG

Born Gaspard-Félix Tournachon, "le bon Nadar" (as he was better known to his contemporaries) became one of the greatest names in the history of 19th-Century photography. This is a fascinating and definitive biography of a man whose achievements and enthusiasms included, in addition to his marvelously dramatic portrait photographs, aerial photography from his balloon, experiments with photography using artificial light in the sewers and catacombs of Paris, and an interest in the early telephone and gramophone. It is a handsome volume, with 80 full-page photographs of the great men and women of Europe—Rossini, Baudelaire, Doré, Millet, George Sand, the Goncourts—plus numerous smaller photographs from the atelier Nadar. For every photography collection.—Elizabeth Lindquist-Cock, Dept. of Art History, Massachusetts Coll. of Art, Boston

BIOGRAPHY

Deane, Philip. I Should Have Died.
Atheneum. 1977. 182p. LC 76-25896. ISBN 0-689-10766-8. $7.95. HIST/PER NAR
Deane (born Gigantes), who described his brainwashing and torture experiences as a prisoner in I Was a Captive in Korea (Norton, 1953), now presents an abbreviated account of those three years of prison agony, along with details of his experiences in Greece during the 1960's as secretary-general to King Constantine. The most revealing portions of this detailed, highly informative volume deal with Deane's charges of CIA complicity in the revolt of the colonels, Greece's return to fascism in 1967, and U.S. involvement in Turkey's 1974 invasion of Cyprus. In several appendixes Deane gives supporting evidence. All in all, well worth reading and likely to be popular in public libraries.—Eli M. Oboler, Idaho State Univ. Lib., Pocatello

Edwards, Samuel. The Vidocq Dossier: the story of the world's first detective.
Houghton. 1977. 208p. bibliog. ISBN 0-395-25176-1. $7.95. BIOG
Despite the author's apologies that there is very little reliable information available on Vidocq, this is an interesting account of the detective's life. The man was both a hero and a crook and counted among his friends Hugo, Dumas, and Balzac. His colorful life is often used in other people's literature, so it is fun to read all about the real Vidocq for a change. Recommended for biography collections as well as sociology and crime areas.—Marilyn J. Sharrow, Univ. of Washington Libs., Seattle

Haslip, Joan. Catherine the Great.
Putnam. 1977. 394p. illus. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-399-11666-4. $12.95. BIOG
Haslip, whose biographies of world rulers include the enormously successful The Crown of Mexico, now offers a portrait of the "Empress of all the Russias." In a popular, lively style, she writes a detailed and factual account based mainly upon diplomatic dispatches, published diaries and memoirs, and previous scholarship. The book gives fascinating glimpses of Catherine's character and personal life, and thereby conveys a better insight into her political maneuverings. A chronology and a list of characters would have been a great help to the reader unfamiliar with Russian history. Nevertheless, the book is recommended for most libraries.—Pamela J. Hersh, New Jersey State Dept. of Education

Hillaby, John. Journey through Love.
Houghton. 1977. 269p. photogs. LC 76-48664. ISBN 0-395-24775-6. $8.95. PER NAR
Hillaby is a British naturalist who lives a dialog with all that surrounds him. European in sensibility, he enriches his "fragments of observation" by a perceptive interweaving of heritage, culture, and a world view distinctly different from ours. Hillaby is also a widower who lost his wife to cancer. (The chapter dealing with her death is written in the third person, a testimonial to his love and pain.) His trip to America becomes a symbol of the effect of her death—the rich descriptive passages of his earlier travels become thinner. Birds don't sing, the woods are scrub pine, and he loses his way on the Appalachian Trail—"those huge forests . . . were curiously alien in what could be seen and what . . . could be felt about the whole history of the land." Hillaby's wit, intelligence, gentle humor, and understanding of man and his world creates a unique genre—not quite a handbook for hikers, not quite a guide to off-the-beaten-path places and people, not quite a memorial to his wife—which succeeds in its description of a journey toward self-knowledge and acceptance.—Virginia W. Marr, Milton Academy Lib., Mass.

Ivanović, Vane. LX: memoirs of a Jugoslav.
HBJ. Mar. 1977. 320p. photogs. index. LC 76-27414. ISBN 0-15-154797-1. $12.95. AUTOBIOG
An ardently patriotic exile recalls his roots in this congenial but verbose account of his 60 eventful years. Born in Yugoslavia, educated in England, and settled there as an expatriate, Ivanović has been many things—among them a spearfishing innovator, consul of Monaco to Britain, and emigré leader of the opposition to Communist rule. The first half of his book is a strong, well-organized memoir with a long description of partisan activity in World War II. The second half is an assortment of short sketches on an astonishing variety of topics. Ivanović writes like a superb raconteur; his stories would surely do better in the living medium of speech than they do in cold print. Still, there may be interest in this authentic account.—Barbara Conaty, formerly with Madison P.L., Wis.

Madison, Arnold. Carry Nation.
Thomas Nelson. Apr. 1977. 160p. index. ISBN 0-8407-6540-1. $6.95. BIOG
Madison has written a workmanlike biography of one of America's most notable crusaders. He explains Nation's crusade against alcohol as largely a result of feelings stemming from a troubled childhood and the death of her first husband from alcoholism. Madison, who is sympathetic to his subject, also emphasizes the major role of religion in her behavior. His statement that "Nation must rank as one of the most

Library Journal recommends

Reproducing Furniture in Miniature

By ANN K. PIPE

"Step-by-step instructions for constructing furniture and tips on glueing, finishing, and upholstery. Particularly useful is her discussion of the use of power tools and the problems encountered in trying to work on small-scale pieces. . . . Recommended."—Library Journal

Illustrated.
SBN: 8294-1/$15.00 cloth;
SBN: 8072-8/$5.95 paper

HENRY Regnery COMPANY
Chicago, Illinois

New, edited version of The Growth of Industrial Art (1892) emphasizing agricultural and countryside development. Over 750 illustrations of farm implements, steam engines, horse-drawn transportation and household items. Historical text sketches progress of mankind's inventiveness. A 19th century book that extolls the virtues of American ingenuity to Americans of a century ago. Intriguing reading today. 160 pages, 8½ x 11 in., softcovered.

ISBN 0-916150-06-2 $9.95

AMERICAN SOCIETY OF AGRICULTURAL ENGINEERS
Box 410, St. Joseph, MI 49085
Phone (616) 429-0300

important makers of our nation" is dubious. In sum, a good, if at times superficial biography.—Stephen G. Weisner, Dept. of History, Springfield Technical Community Coll., Mass.

Painter, George D. William Caxton: a biography.

Putnam. Mar. 1977. 227p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-41134. ISBN 0-399-11888-8. $14.95. PUBLISHING/BIOG

This excellent biography first appeared in 1976 (London) with the sub-title "A Quincentenary Biography of England's First Printer." Painter discusses Caxton's family, his first 50 years as a merchant, and his contemporary society in order to explain the influence that politics and economics had on his subject's life and work. He clearly identifies the printer Johann Veldener of Cologne as Caxton's teacher; he shows that some of Caxton's dedications served Yorkist and Tudor ends, especially during the tumultuous 1480's; and he describes Caxton's role as the first printer to write "new translations in his own language" and to supply lengthy prologues. Painter's careful examination of every Caxton title provides a clear chronology of the printer-translator's editorial and typographic practices. This rich, fascinating portrait supersedes all other biographies of Caxton.—Paul S. Koda, Univ. of North Carolina Lib., Chapel Hill

Phelan, James. Howard Hughes: the hidden years.

Random. 1977. 201p. LC 76-53482. ISBN 0-394-41042-4. $7.95. BIOG

So many myths, stories, legends, and assorted hoaxes have been circulated in recent years about Hughes that the wary reader approaches yet another revelation of how the man lived and died with an understandable share of skepticism. This time we are told that shortly after Hughes died, two of his closest aides sought out Phelan, a journalist who had been stalking the mysterious billionaire with a kind of peanut-butter doggedness for 20 years, and gave him the real dope on how their boss spent his final years. Actually, few startlingly new revelations have been folded into this version; indeed, most of what is told has long since made the rounds. Phelan refers to his book as a beginning, implying that the whole story will come out in dribs and drabs. Wait until more dribbing and drabbing has occurred.—A. J. Anderson, Sch. of Library Science, Simmons Coll., Boston

Taylor, David. Zoo Vet: adventures of a wild animal doctor.

Lippincott. Apr. 1977. 256p. ISBN 0-397-01207-1. $8.95. ANIMAL HUSBANDRY/MEMOIR

An intriguing work of natural history and an inspiring story of the author's dedication as a veterinarian treating a great variety of wild animal species. Taylor, an Englishman and a graduate of Glasgow Veterinary College, specialized in treating exotic animals such as are found in zoos. He encountered many problems but the compensations were great, and here he shares many exciting tales of his experiences. He has spent more than 20 years participating in adventurous projects, including a study of animal acupuncture in China. While his book does not have the storytelling appeal of James Herriot's All Creatures Great and Small (LJ 8/72), it does impart the same feeling of a man's satisfaction with the life he has chosen.—Mary Blackwell, Detroit P.L.

Watney, John. Mervyn Peake.

St. Martin's. 1977. 255p. illus. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-312-53025-0. $10.95. LIT/BIOG

Peake is not a household word, but Watney has written a satisfying biography of the 20th-Century novelist, poet, playwright, and illustrator. Peake never achieved greatness because he spread himself too thin, yet he led an exciting life that was cut short by disease—his last deformed, demented years were as painful as his early ones were promising. If Watney is to be faulted anywhere, it is in his excessive reliance on straight storytelling instead of offering the reader some psychological depth. While the story Watney tells is exciting and factual, one never learns much about Peake's complex personality. Nevertheless, recommended for libraries with sizeable holdings in modern literature.—John L. DiGaetani, Dept. of English, Long Island Univ., Brooklyn

BUSINESS & ECONOMICS

Berry, Ralph E., Jr. & James P. Boland. The Economic Cost of Alcohol Abuse.

Free Pr. 1977. 194p. index. $13.95. SOC SCI/ECON

This is a monograph of very narrow focus, but it deals with an important problem. Berry and Boland attempt to make the best possible estimate of the economic cost of alcohol abuse and alcoholism, with the goal of providing a firmer foundation for programs dealing with six major economic areas: reduced worker productivity (the most important), additional medical and health services, motor vehicle accidents, fires, criminal and antisocial behavior, and social responses to alcohol abuse—social welfare, alcohol treatment, highway safety, fire protection, and criminal justice. Their conservative estimate of the total cost is $31.4 billion for 1971. Do such figures have significance? Berry and Boland argue that their estimates should be important in formulating policy, but they do not forge the link, except to suggest how much money can be saved in each category by prevention, control, and treatment. In itself, this is far from convincing; in fact, their estimates do seem merely to have the shock value of large numbers—an outcome about which the authors themselves express concern. Nevertheless, this is an impressive demonstration of quantitative research into an important economic and social problem that will doubtlessly be of great value to others working in this field.—Harry Frumerman, Dept. of Economics, Hunter Coll., CUNY

Karluk
The Great Untold Story of Arctic Exploration
William Laird McKinlay
"The little-known story, omitted from most standard histories, is vividly recreated in an incredible, bizarre tale...of human courage and survival against impossible odds."—Publishers Weekly (12/13/76). 192 pp. photos.
ISBN 0-312-45080-X. $10.00

St. Martin's Press
175 Fifth Avenue
New York 10010

Library Journal recommends
Laura
The Life of Laura Ingalls Wilder
By Donald Zochert
"Zochert has researched his subject thoroughly, retracing the route of the Ingalls family's travels and digging through countless documents and newspapers....His insights into the Ingalls family are welcome, even if it is a bit disconcerting to see Pa as living on the edge of failure. Laura's devotees of all ages will want to read this book."
—Library Journal
Illustrated/SBN 8174 0/$8.95
HENRY Regnery COMPANY
Chicago, Illinois

Brun, Ellen & Jacques Hersh. Socialist Korea: a case study in the strategy of economic development.

Monthly Review. 1977. 416p. ISBN 0-85345-386-1. $16.50. ECON

This study offers a different perspective on North Korea than that usually available in the West. From an independent Marxist position, Brun and Hersh view North Korea as a successful example of socialist industrialization in a hitherto backward economy. Their highly laudatory but intelligent account stresses the development of an indigenous economic model balancing industrial and agricultural growth—which prompts the authors to argue that a Kimist (after Kim Il Sung) model is a viable solution for other Third World states. While North Korea has certainly achieved some progress, other less partisan accounts have painted a less glowing picture of the country's economy. The militarization, obsessive secrecy, and regimented discipline of North Korea—which the authors refrain from even mentioning—also tarnish the model. In addition, Brun and Hersh's rationalization of the ugly personality cult surrounding Kim is sophistical at best.—Steven I. Levine, East Asian Inst., Columbia Univ.

Economics in the Future: towards a new paradigm.

Westview Pr. 1976. 123p. ed. by Kurt Dopfer & others. LC 76-2600. ISBN 0-89158-548-6. $17.50. ECON

This brief collection of essays contains some familiar and important criticisms of current orthodoxy in economics. The authors include four economists fairly well known to Americans (Sir Roy Harrod, Harvey Leibenstein, Gunnar Myrdal, and Jan Tinbergen) and three less familiar (Dopfer, K. William Kapp, and Shigeto Tsuru). The editor does not describe how these papers were assembled, but they do seem reasonably well related. The Dopfer, Harrod, and Leibenstein pieces will probably not be understood by most noneconomists; the remainder (and, in the reviewer's opinion, the better papers) are considerably broader in their appeal. The principal flaw is that the book is simply too expensive. Much of the content is available in other (admittedly dispersed) writings by these same authors, and the issues dealt with are not really new enough to justify the book as a "call to action."—Robert J. Caswell, Dept. of Economics, Ohio State Univ., Columbus

Engler, Robert. The Brotherhood of Oil: energy policy and the public interest.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. Mar. 1977. 322p. index. ISBN 0-226-20948-2. $12.50. POL SCI/ECON

Emphasizing a continuation of the larger patterns of industry control of energy and energy policy since 1973, this study is more than an update of Engler's earlier Politics of Oil (Macmillan, 1961). Although sometimes excessively argumentative in the early chapters, the book recovers by midstream and is very good indeed in its later chapters, which present case studies of corporate influence on public policy and the Interior Department's role as an industrial "fifth column" inside government. Throughout, the "public government's" commitment to the "private government" of the oil industry—and therefore to high and secure prices—is supported by excellent and abundant documentation. The final chapter's call for public planning of energy policy free from industry dominance is compelling; but so well does Engler describe the corporate network of control over government that such reforms seem unlikely at best. For both general and academic libraries.—Joseph R. Rudolph, Jr., Dept. of Political Science, Univ. of Tulsa, Okla.

Tannen, Jack. How To Identify and Collect American First Editions.

Arco. 1976. 192p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-668-03933-7. $10. PUBLISHING

Tannen's book consists of two distinct parts. The first is a list of American publishers with information on how to identify their first editions. Compared to Henry Sherman Boutell's First Editions of Today (Peacock Pr.; 4th ed., 1965), the main source of this information up to now, the present work lists fewer publishers and does not trace companies' histories. But Tannen's long experience in selling books adds a wealth of new, specific information. This is seen clearly in his description of the complicated "letter code" used by Scribner's to label all their editions. The second part is a beginner's guide to several modern collecting areas like detective fiction, Americana, private press books, and illustrated books. Along with a brief historical overview of each subject, it offers several bibliographies to help the new collector. The book is a worthwhile addition to our knowledge of American first editions of the past 100 years, and a good introduction to book collecting.—Paul S. Koda, Univ. of North Carolina Lib., Chapel Hill

communications

Sevareid, Eric. Conversations with Eric Sevareid: interviews with notable Americans.

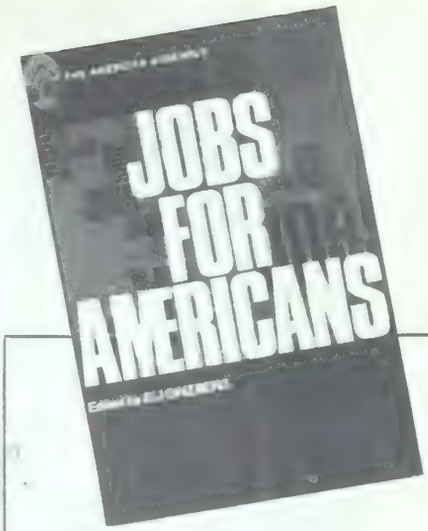
Public Affairs. 1976. 215p. ISBN 0-8183-0248-8. $6.50; pap. $4.50. COMM

It is always a pleasant surprise to find that words uttered on television can read well in print. Perhaps in this case it is because of the excellent questioning by Sevareid, who obviously knows his subjects well, and puts them at ease. But what makes the book most interesting is the roster of his guests: Supreme Court Justices Douglas and Black, former Secretary of State Dean Acheson, diplomats John McCloy and George Kennan, columnist Walter Lippmann, Leo Rosten, Robert Hutchins, Eric Hoffer, and now-Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan. My favorite was Sevareid's session with Mary Peabody, her daughter Marietta Tree, and her granddaughter Frances Fitzgerald, remarkable women who have accomplished much in three generations and



"INTERESTING"

JOBS FOR AMERICANS
edited by Eli Ginzberg

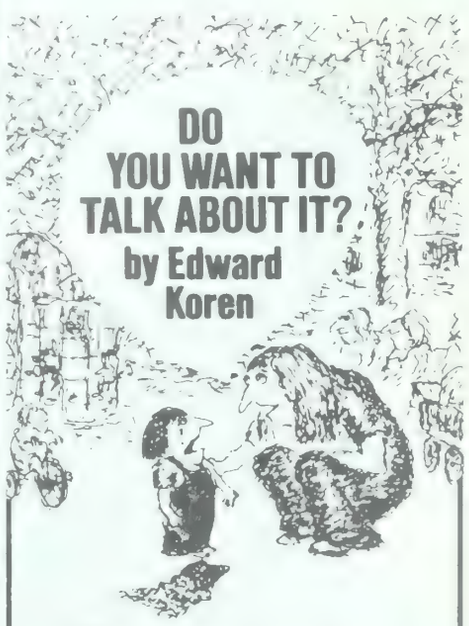
"The eight authors are all distinguished economists . . . directly involved in employment policy making . . . excellent history and summary of issues . . . the authors' closeness to the policy process . . . makes the book interesting to a wide readership."
— Library Journal (December 1, 1976)

ISBN 0-13-510024-0 CIP $8.95

Prentice-Hall

General Book Marketing Div.
Box 500, Englewood Cliffs, N.J. 07632



"An outstanding collection...

Koren's shaggy-line cartoons...are exercises in satire and absurdity These pokes at American lifestyles and manners...are potent and truly humorous."—Booklist (starred review) LC: 76-9988
$7.95 ISBN 0-394-40823-3

PANTHEON
201 E 50th St., New York 10022

have interesting family sidelights. Ideas shine through the conversations much more simply than if these "notable Americans" had attempted to write them formally.—Larry Friedman, New York

EDUCATION

Blake, Jim & Barbara Ernst. The Great Perpetual Learning Machine: being a stupendous collection of ideas, games, experiments, activities, and recommendations for further exploration.

Little. 1977. 308p. illus. index. LC 76-24124. ISBN 0-316-09938-4. $12.95; pap. ISBN 0-316-09937-6. $7.95. ED

This Whole Earth Catalog-like compendium of craft ideas, science experiments, language projects, and imaginative math problems will be a boon to both "open classroom" and traditionally oriented teachers in the upper elementary grades. The resource books for children that are abundantly suggested are both standards and new titles; all are in print, and most are in large public library collections. Three projects suggested in this book have been tested successfully by our staff of children's librarians at afterschool programs. There's a detailed, easy-to-use index of project titles and subjects, a list of "throwaway" materials that can be recycled for classroom activities, and a special 60-page section of ecology projects, offered in addition to the very complete chapter of science experiments. One quibble—there's nothing new or exciting on their list of "Favorite Children's Books"; teachers and students already know about the Charlie Brown books and E. B. White's modern classics. Recommended for elementary school and public library collections.—Joyce W. Smothers, Monmouth County Lib., Freehold, N.J.

HISTORY

Blassingame, John W., ed. Slave Testimony.

Louisiana State Univ. Pr. 1977. 880p. illus. index. ISBN 0-8071-0184-2. $37.50; pap. ISBN 0-8071-0273-3. $9.95. HIST

Blassingame's collection draws upon the so-called inarticulate and gives us history from the bottom up. Seeking to know "the heart of the poor slave—learn his secret thoughts," Blassingame has collected a wide range of narratives and descriptions of slavery. These are not those produced by slave owners (the usual source of knowledge of ante-bellum life), but by slaves and ex-slaves—in their letters, autobiographies, first-hand accounts in newspapers and journals. These documents tell us of the slave's quarters, religion, family life, folklore, as well as his traits, patterns of resistance, and personal perspective on bondage. They convey a sense of the richness and complexity of the black experience—on the

Wilberforce House, Kingston Upon Hull City Museum, England

From "Slave Testimony" by Blassingame slave ships, the plantation, the underground railway. In a carefully reasoned and illuminating introduction, Blassingame explains his approach, notes the general neglect of such sources, and explores the differences and shortcomings in the WPA interviews with about 2000 ex-slaves. His book is a most valuable supplement to that project and a tribute to the wise initiatives of editor and publisher.—Milton Cantor, Dept. of History, Univ. of Massachusetts, Amherst

Gregg, Pauline. Black Death to Industrial Revolution: a social and economic history of England.

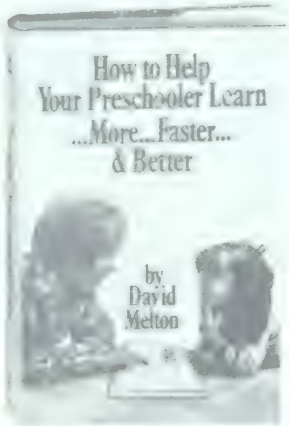
Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1976. 344p. maps. bibliog. index. LC 76-3815. ISBN 0-06-492540-4. $12.50. HIST

How England, still peripheral and relatively undeveloped in the 14th Century, attained by the mid-18th Century world commercial leadership and the threshold of industrial revolution remains one of the great stories of history. A popular account which takes cognizance of important new historical techniques, discoveries and interpretations deserves welcome. The present volume, however, draws rather little on recent advances in family studies, demography, economic change, and the like, while providing no apparent integrative thesis or frame. Instead literary and anecdotal evidence illustrates 24 descriptive chapters which move topically and temporally from agriculture and the extractive industries of the later Middle Ages through trade and institutions to government policy and social classes in the Georgian age. The student and general reader for whom the book seems in-

"A provocative book."
—Library Journal



"Melton presents convincing arguments to support his theory that the younger the child, the faster and easier it will learn.... He describes and recommends the Doman-Delacato Developmental Profile, a set of norms for comparing a child's development from birth to 72 months.... A provocative book addressed to parents... but of interest to educators as well."
—Library Journal

0-679-50614-4/$9.95 cloth
0-679-50633-0/$4.95 paper

McKAY

GERMAN WARSHIPS OF THE SECOND WORLD WAR

By H.T. Lenton

After a brief survey of the German shipbuilding program between the wars, Lenton begins a detailed and thorough examination of the German Navy of World War II—from its battleships to its ferries and auxiliary vessels. For each class of ship he gives details of size, machinery, armament, armor, names of ships within the class, dates and places of launching, and the ultimate fate of each ship. Most of the classes of ship are illustrated by either clear photographs or simple line plans. A short narrative description accompanies each class, while a longer analysis of the construction and development of German submarines outlines the changes that occurred in design from 1934 to 1945. Technically competent and well-illustrated, this book is an excellent reference volume and is far superior to many recent works on the weaponry of the war.
—John Buechler, Library Journal

397p. illus. bibliog. $19.95
LC 76-13609

arco PUBLISHING COMPANY, INC.
219 Park Avenue South, New York, N.Y. 10003

tended will lose track of chronology and causation.—Richard C. Hoffmann, Dept. of History, York Univ., Downsview, Ontario, Canada

Halliburton, R., Jr. Red Over Black: black slavery among the Cherokee Indians.

Greenwood. (Contribs. in Afro-American & African History, #27). Apr. 1977. 272p. illus. maps. bibliog. index. LC 76-15329. ISBN 0-8371-9034-7. $15.95. HIST Halliburton shows with considerable detail that black slavery existed among the Cherokees for over 150 years, and he argues that this was, in all respects, a microcosm of the institution in the U.S. as a whole. He claims that since the 18th Century, and perhaps earlier, the Cherokees considered blacks an inferior people, so that when the Cherokee became an agricultural and manufacturing people, black slavery was readily adopted. White missionaries, Indian superintendents, and Cherokee agents—who were largely Southerners—encouraged acceptance and expansion of the institution and extolled the benevolence of the Cherokee masters. In truth, Halliburton contends, the Cherokees were no more lenient than white masters. The extensive appendixes contain interviews conducted during the 1930's with former Cherokee black slaves; tables showing the names, occupations, and slave holdings of Cherokee masters; and more. This work, based on research in both primary and secondary source and treating a topic generally neglected in Indian and Afro-American historiography, is recommended to all libraries with serious collections of Indian and black history.—Charles A. D'Aniello, Richmond P. L., Va.

Jones, Michael Wynn. The World 100 Years Ago.

McKay. 1976. 224p. photogs. LC 76-28553. ISBN 0-679-50699-3. $9.95. PHOTOG/HIST

Although still cumbersome by modern standards, photography's paraphernalia had grown portable enough by the 1870's for determined photographers to carry almost anywhere. British author and journalist Michael Wynn Jones unites a broad sampling of the people and scenes they recorded with a text based on contemporary travelers' accounts to portray the several regions of the Western and non-Western world as they came to be known through word and picture in the decade between 1870 and 1880. The photographs are well chosen but might be better reproduced, and the text is more readable than profound; nevertheless, the book as a whole genuinely evokes a sense of the world as it appeared to Western eyes and minds a century ago.—B. C. Hacker, Oral History Program, M.I.T.

Leong, Sow-Theng. Sino-Soviet Diplomatic Relations, 1917-1926.

Univ. Pr. of Hawaii. 1976. 351p. bibliog. index. LC 76-4960. ISBN 0-8248-0401-5. $15. INT AFFAIRS/HIST

Using material from the newly opened archives of the Chinese Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Taipei, Leong's excellent monograph deals with the relations between the revolutionary Russian government and the official Chinese government in Peking. It provides a view from within and reveals that in spite of political fragmentation and changing war-lord leadership, the Chinese Foreign Office (CFO) exhibited surprising continuity and proved itself to be a viable policy-making organ. Capitalizing on the early weaknesses of the Bolshevik government, the CFO scored many initial successes: it reasserted China's right of navigation of the Amur system, removed Outer Mongolia from Russian protectorship, and decolonized the Chinese Eastern Railway. Revolutionary Russia, despite its anti-imperialist stance, was so concerned with problems of national security that its diplomacy ended up reasserting Imperial Russia's position in China, preventing the CFO from preserving its gains. This is a very valuable addition to the meager sources on war-lord China. Scholars and graduate libraries should welcome it.—Ranbir Vohra, Dept. of Political Science, Trinity Coll., Hartford, Conn.

Lerner, Gerda, ed. The Female Experience: an American documentary.

Bobbs. 1977. 443p. bibliog. index. LC 76-40258. ISBN 0-672-51555-5. $10.50. HIST

One advantage of the virtual exclusion of women from official history is that feminist historians, if they are not simply to reprint polemics, must examine documents bearing on private lives as well as public roles. Lerner has done this in assembling an extraordinary collection of writings in which American women from colonial times to the present record and comment on all aspects of their experiences. The organization is thematic: the three sections deal with family life, woman in male-oriented society, and women's efforts to reshape both society and the feminine role. Over half of the selections are taken from documents never before published. There are accounts, for example, of childhood in slavery, of domestic service on the farm, of frontier childbirth, of Civil War nursing, as well as writings of schoolmarms, doctors, and a female soldier in the Revolution. Well-written introductions and notes place each selection in context. The book is as engrossing for the laywoman as for the scholar.—Sally Mitchell, Milwaukee

Lewis, David L. District of Columbia: a bicentennial history.

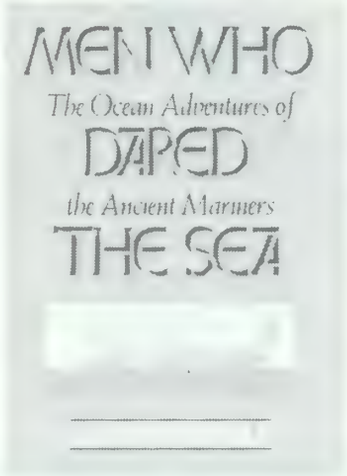
Norton. (States & the Nation). 1976. 208p. photogs. maps. bibliog. index. LC 76-28397. ISBN 0-393-05601-5. $8.95. HIST

Lewis surveys the early history of the district in the first three chapters, one devoted to the white city of "magnificent intentions," one to the black "second" city, and one to the cultural city of Anne Royall, Henry Adams, and Mary Hundley. Important throughout this portion of the book are the profound presence and influence of the city's large black population and the

We are looking for qualified persons to review works of Latin American history, politics, and economics. Contact Philip Mattera, The Book Review.

THE CROWELL CORNER



MEN WHO DARED THE SEA
The Ocean Adventures of the Ancient Mariners
by Gardner Soule

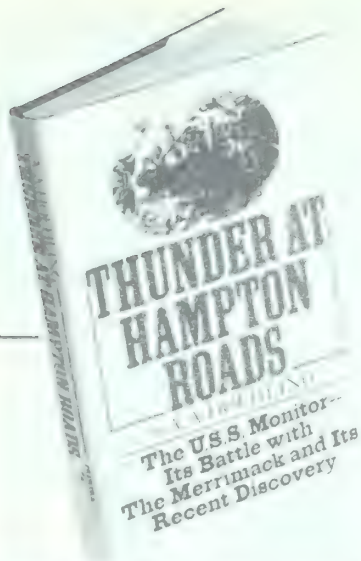
"A well-researched history of mankind's use of the sea, which gradually led to the development of oceanography as a science." —ALA Booklist
ISBN: 0-690-01095-8 $9.95

T.Y. CROWELL
666 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10019

THE ATLAS OF EARLY MAN
Jacquetta Hawkes

"A British archaeologist has produced an impressive and informative work in which she has divided early history from 35,000 B.C. to A.D. 500 into eight time steps to show what was happening concurrently around the globe....An essential supplement to the study of early man and civilization."—The Booklist (2/1/77). 256 pp. LC 75-43424 $15.00

St. Martin's Press
175 Fifth Avenue
New York 10010



"SIGNIFICANT"

THUNDER AT HAMPTON ROADS
by A. A. Hoehling

"a history of the historically significant U.S.S. Monitor . . . Also describes the raising and refitting of the Merrimack by the Confederates, and its great battle with the Monitor . . . for Civil War collections and libraries . . ."
— Library Journal (December 12, 1976)

ISBN 0-13-920652-3 CIP $9.95

Prentice-Hall
General Book Marketing Div.
Box 500, Englewood Cliffs, N.J. 07632

"Highly Recommended."
—Library Journal

JACK The RIPPER
THE FINAL SOLUTION

By Stephen Knight

"With the help of sealed files from Scotland Yard, the recently opened Home Office files, and the story of Joseph Sickert, Knight presents a new theory of Jack the Ripper. . . . This is an exciting and involving book . . . highly recommended for the general collection."—Library Journal

Illustrated/0-679-50711-6/$8.95

McKAY

monolithic control of the federal government over the district's affairs. The latter portion of the book presents a largely demographic portrait of the city and discusses the struggle for home rule and the continuing problems of an increasingly black city ringed by white suburbs. There are unfortunate omissions, however: the fact that Washington possesses, after New York, the greatest collection of museums in the Western Hemisphere is totally ignored and the legacy of 175 years of government architecture goes largely unnoticed. An even more serious problem is Lewis' emphasis on the negative aspects of the city's life. The picture presented is that of a wretched city in which to live and a depressing one to visit—which is by no means a complete portrait.—Samuel Allen Streit, C.C.N.Y. Lib.

Middlebrook, Martin. Convoy.

Morrow. 1977. 378p. photogs. maps. bibliog. index. LC 76-43148. ISBN 0-688-03138-2. $12.50. HIST

The ill-fated convoys SC 122 and HX 229 sailed for England from New York in March 1943. This is the story of the battle that followed, a battle in which 21 merchant ships were sunk in attacks by up to 42 U-boats. The narrative, skillfully interwoven with the individual accounts of some of the participants, is well calculated to hold the reader's interest. The result is a vivid insight into the tragedy of the war in the north Atlantic. While many collections may already contain accounts of the convoy battles for control of the Atlantic, this work adds greatly to a better understanding of that aspect of the war. In addition to the main theme, it recounts how the crews of the merchant ships, escorts, and U-boats, were recruited, worked, fought, and died. Recommended for most libraries.—George F. Scheck, SUNY at Oswego Lib.

Moore, John Preston. Revolt in Louisiana: the Spanish occupation, 1766-1770.

Louisiana State Univ. Pr. 1976. 246p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-5349. ISBN 0-8071-0180-X. $10.95. HIST

Moore offers a well-written, exciting, and scholarly account of the events surrounding the 1768 revolt of French settlers in Louisiana against the imposition of Spanish rule. Utilizing new material from the French and Spanish archives as well as the standard works in the field, Moore takes a fresh look at the founding of Spanish rule in Louisiana and at the place of that colony in the Spanish empire. He also points out interesting similarities with the revolt of the 13 colonies in the next decade. Recommended to academic and public libraries with collections in U.S. colonial history.—Mary Ann Miya, Loyola Univ. of Chicago Lib.

Morgan, Edmund S. The Meaning of Independence: John Adams, George Washington, Thomas Jefferson.

Univ. Pr. of Virginia. 1976. 85p. index. LC 76-8438. ISBN 0-8139-0694-6. $7.50. BIOG/HIST

In this slender volume, Morgan attempts to discover the broader meanings of independence for Americans. By focusing in turn on Adams, Washington, and Jefferson, he examines the way in which the Revolution opened larger fields of activity and helped to develop new talents and abilities. With stimulating originality, he then shows how certain personal qualities of the three men were "transformed" in the achievement of independence and how those individual traits were intimately linked to what independence meant to each man. A pleasing and valuable book, written with Morgan's usual clarity, brevity, and style; very highly recommended.—James T. Schleifer, Dept. of History, Coll. of New Rochelle, N.Y.

Simpson, Colin. The Ship That Hunted Itself.

Stein & Day. Mar. 1977. 193p. LC 76-41888. ISBN 0-8128-1926-8. $8.95. HIST

The author of The Lusitania (LJ 6/1/73) has written another account of passenger ships in World War I: the German Cap Trafalgar and the Cunard liner Carmania. When the war began, Germany's and England's maritime preparations were far behind their land mobilizations. Largely through the efforts of Winston Churchill, England's passenger fleet was readily converted to wartime rigging, while Germany's fleet was scattered and forced into rather makeshift arrangements. The Cap Trafalgar was a luxury liner in Buenos Aires; the opening of hostilities found her unable to secure fuel and provisions for return to Germany. By removing one of her funnels and fabricating a superstructure on her bridge, the Germans altered her profile to resemble the Carmania. As fate would have it, the Carmania sought to intercept her off South America; thus the title. Although the incident proved of no importance to the outcome of the war, Simpson's account of the two ships and their crews is entertaining and literate.—Michel Ridgeway, U.S. Military Academy Lib., West Point, N.Y.

Snell, John L. The Democratic Movement in Germany, 1789-1914.

Univ. of North Carolina Pr. 1976. 512p. bibliog. index. ed. & completed by Hans A. Schmitt. LC 76-10254. ISBN 0-8078-1283-8. $13.95. HIST

The late John Snell's intention was to show that democracy developed only slowly in Germany because the forces opposing it were strong rather than because democratic forces were, as he put it, "non-existent or weak." In practice what he and Schmitt have written is a history of German domestic political life. As a well-written synthesis, it performs a useful service, at least for a lay reader without German. The professional historian, however, will learn little that is new and may well be struck by the work's old-fashioned quality: the book in unrevised form was largely complete by 1959. It would hardly be possible now, I should think, to write a history of "democracy"—never defined—without considering more fully than is done the underlying social and economic structures, the intellectual assumptions and moral values, of which parties and pressure groups were merely vehicles of expression. One may indeed ask whether an account of "democracy's" triumphs and failures is a very fruitful way to lay bare the dynamics of German political life.—John G. Williamson, Yale Univ. Lib.

Solinger, Dorothy J. Regional Government and Political Integration in Southwest China, 1949-1954: a case study.

Univ. of California Pr. Apr. 1977. 300p. illus. maps. bibliog. index. LC 75-22662. ISBN 0-520-03104-0. $18.50. POL SCI/HIST Solinger analyzes how the Chinese Communist regime extended its control into the vast region of southwest China, whose provinces and even subprovincial districts had been largely self-sufficient and self-contained for nearly 40 years. Her primary concern is with the administrative arrangements by which these provinces were both welded into stronger units and integrated into the national polity. Her careful, well-researched, and clearly written study is not the first to deal with the problems of takeover and control in China, but it is the first study of the process in the Great Administrative Regions, which existed from 1949 to 1954. Scholars will welcome this contribution to our understanding of the evolution of Chinese Communist administrative practices.—Andrew J. Nathan, East Asian Inst., Columbia Univ.

Tillett, Leslie, coll. & ed. Wind on the Buffalo Grass: the Indians' own account of the battle at the Little Big Horn River, & the death of their life on the plains.

Crowell. 1976. 160p. illus., half color. index. LC 76-6098. ISBN 0-690-01155-5. $35. HIST

In addition to the Bicentennial, 1976 marked the 100th anniversary of the Battle of Little Big Horn, an event many Indians look upon as the birth of their modern nation. Wind on the Buffalo Grass is a beautifully produced collection of stories, reports, interviews, and illustrations by Indians who took part in the battle and by their survivors. More than just another rehashing of the events surrounding the battle, this is, for the first time, a humanly honest approach that portrays Little Big Horn in terms of social history: what led up to the battle, who acted in response, and how those who took part were affected. Illustrated with many now lost paintings by Amos Bad Heart Bull and others, this is a first-rate historical study that rightly should take its place among those books which were published to celebrate this country. Highly recommended.—Timothy Daum, Ohio University Lib., Athens

Wakin, Edward. Enter the Irish-American.

Crowell. 1976. 189p. index. LC 72-7582. ISBN 0-690-26722-3. $9.95. SOC SCI/HIST Wakin, a professor at Fordham University, has written a popular history of the Irish in America which deals chiefly, and rather superficially, with the period which began with the famine-inspired mass emigration of the 1840's and ended with the achievement of a measure of respectability by the descendants of the immigrants in the 1920's. Chapters are devoted to such familiar themes as the conflict with the nativist movement and Irish-Americans in the Catholic Church, in politics, and in the military during the Civil War and World War I. Public libraries in areas with sizeable Irish-American populations may wish to add this, but William V. Shannon's The American Irish (Macmillan, 1974. new ed. pap.) remains unchallenged as a comprehensive treatment of the subject.—John Moran, S.U.N.Y. at Fredonia Lib.

Wertheimer, Barbara Mayer. We Were There: the story of working women in America.

Pantheon. Apr. 1977. bibliog. index. LC 77-9597. ISBN 0-394-49590-X. $15.95; pap. ISBN 0-394-73257-X. $6.95. HIST

Another book reflecting the expansion of the concerns of the women's movement beyond a middle-class framework. This history of working women and women's work brings together a wide range of sources to show the changing nature of women's participation in the economy and to highlight their very active involvement in early union struggles, both by themselves and in cooperation with men. Wertheimer is at her best in graphic descriptions of labor heroines, organizing, and strikes. Thus, this book nicely complements the more analytical and more radical documentary, America's Working Women (LJ 11/1/76). Both demonstrate that what is missing in the equation leading to power for women is neither common interests based on class position nor ability to organize, but rather the consciousness of their position both as women and as workers. It is to be hoped that books like this will help remedy the situation, although this volume covers only the period up to World War I. Perhaps the wide library purchase it deserves will help stimulate a sequel.—Ken Nash, Queens Borough P.L., New York

Travel, Exploration & Adventure

Canetti, Nicolai (photogs.) & Sandy Lesberg (text). The Landmarks of Boston.

126p. LC 76-10527. ISBN 0-672-52258-6.

Canetti, Nicolai (photogs.) & Sandy Lesberg (text). The People & Places of Jamaica.

125 p. LC 76-10525. ISBN 0-672-52259-4.

Canetti, Nicolai (photogs.) & Sandy Lesberg (text). The Streets of San Francisco.

126p. LC 76-10524. ISBN 0-672-52210-8.

Canetti, Nicolai (photogs.) & Sandy Lesberg (text). The Walls of Jerusalem.

126p. LC 76-10526. ISBN 0-672-52261-6.

ea. vol: Haddington House, dist. by Bobbs. 1976. photogs., some color. $12.95.

PHOTOG/TRAV

These oversize volumes take the coffee-table-book concept about as far as it can go. The total text in each is less than a page and a half in length, and the captions, which are few in number, are very brief. About a third of the photographs are in color. Each volume conveys a visual sense of its area, albeit a rather selective one. Canetti favors street musicians and contrasting new and old buildings in the U.S. volumes,

Library Journal recommends

To Challenge A Distant Sea

The Life and Voyages of Jean Gau, Who Sailed Alone More Than Any Other Man

By JAMES TAZELAAR and JEAN BUSSIERE

"Tazelaar and Bussiere present Gau as a man obsessed by the sea and adventure, and they describe his encounters with sunken treasure, recently civilized head hunters, and, of course, the elements....They make extensive use of Gau's journals and present well-researched material on a man whose importance to single-handed sailing is as great as Bernard Moitessier's."

—Library Journal

Illustrated/
SBN: 7935-5/$10.00

HENRY Regnery COMPANY
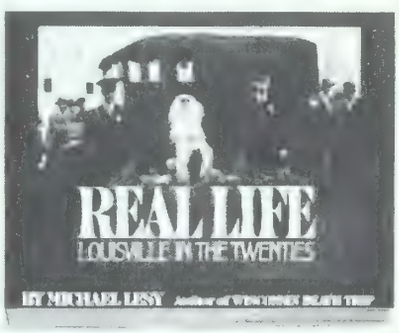
Chicago, Illinois



"Bizarre and haunting"*

"Lesy continues a thematic approach begun in his Wisconsin Death Trip, in which he submitted the history of a period to...an eerie and original personal vision...The cumulative effect is bizarre and haunting."—*Booklist. "Lesy uses this technique effectively to create a series of imaginative tableaus...He has a unique psycho-historical vision of the American past."

—Library Journal

158 photos LC: 76-9977
Cloth $15.95 ISBN: 0-394-49813-5
Paper $7.95 ISBN: 0-394-73235-9

PANTHEON
201 E. 50th St., New York 10022

and exotic common folk, preferably balancing loads on their heads, in the Jamaica and Jerusalem books. The paper is a dull and grainy white which tends to swallow up the black-and-white photos, and the binding is encased in thick cardboard stamped to resemble buckram. These books would be better library additions if they had more text to complement the photos.—Harold M. Otness, Southern Oregon State Coll. Lib., Ashland

Postal, Bernard & Lionel Koppman. American Jewish Landmarks: a travel guide and history. Vol. 1: The Northeast.

Fleet. Mar. 1977. 670p. fwd. by Jacob R. Marcus. index. ISBN 0-8303-0151-8. $18.50; pap. ISBN 0-8303-0152-6. $8.50. REL/TRAV

This is the first volume of a projected three-volume "guide to the description of Jewish landmarks and places of Jewish interest or association in the United States, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands." Arrangement is by state and then by city, with a too-long introductory essay on each state, followed by a list of places of Jewish interest within each city. The emphasis is on "great" Jews and Jewish accomplishments. The authors have so stretched their definition of "Jewish interest" that it becomes meaningless. For example, in the section on Washington, D.C., they include a sculpture in the Hirshhorn Museum that employs a six-sided star motif. The guide also contains factual errors: e.g., historian Oscar Handlin is described as a "Jewish Nobel Prize winner" (he has won a Pulitzer Prize). The section on New York City—one-third of the book—is far superior to the rest of the volume. The international, annual Jewish Travel Guide (Hartmore) contains much the same information, although in abridged form. Unfortunately, American Jewish Landmarks is the only Jewish guidebook exclusively for America currently available.—Judith E. Endelman, Atlantic Research, New York

Rahmani, L. Y. The Museums of Israel.

Rizzoli. 1976. 230p. photogs. by Peter Larsen. illus., some color. LC 76-15488. ISBN 0-8478-0051-2. $25. ART/TRAV

As a pictorial and verbal introduction to the 60 museums of Israel (all but eight of which developed since 1948), this work by the chief curator of the Israel Department of Antiquities and Museums reflects the cultural and historic interests of a struggling young state. In addition to a foreword and statement of the historical background, there are chapters on the museums of Jerusalem, Tel Aviv, Haifa, six other cities, and on district, local and site, historical and specialized museums. Each institution and its contents are summarized; significant objects are illustrated and described with an entry and commentary. Although the reproductions are undistinguished and there are no indexes to the specific museums, illuatrations, or artists, the work is informative and interesting, and recommended for art and general collections.—Robin Kaplan, Los Angeles County Museum of Art Lib.

Van Daalen, Nicholas. The International Golf Guide.

ISBN 0-88932-032-2.

Van Daalen, Nicholas. The New International Tennis Guide.

ISBN 0-88932-033-0.

ea. vol: Pagurian. 1976. 190p. illus. pap. $4.95. SPORTS/TRAV

Two new informative guides to the most exciting golf courses and tennis resorts in the world. The golf guide lists addresses, par, and yardage. It describes courses from Saint Andrew's in Scotland to the Wack-Wack Golf and Country Club in Manila. It covers prices and playing seasons and sometimes lists hotels near the courses. Ten of the finest courses in the U.S. and sources of golf travel information are included. The tennis guide describes the facilities at resorts, hotels, tennis clubs, and tennis schools. Information given includes address, number and composition of courts, tennis pro, cost, and number of rooms at hotels. Activities off the court—scuba diving, sailing, exploring ruined castles, etc.—are mentioned. Both guides have excellent photographs, are concisely written, and will answer the questions golfers and tennis players ask when planning a vacation.—Walter H. Roeder, California State Polytechnic Univ. Lib., Pomona

Home Economics

Hayward, Charles H., ed. The Complete Handyman.

344p. ISBN 0-8473-1341-7. pap. $5.95.

Hayward, Charles H. Tools for Woodwork.

127p. LC 76-49681. ISBN 0-8473-1338-7. pap. $4.95.

Trussell, John R. Introduction to Furniture Making.

142p. LC 76-49687. ISBN 0-8473-1339-5. pap. $4.95.

ea. vol: Drake. (Home Craftsman's Bks.). 1977. illus. index. TECH/HOME ECON

These three titles were first published in England, but this isn't made obvious in the books—and the unknowing amateur who seeks "glasspaper," "clout nails," or "distemper" at the local building supplier's may be a might miffed. For the most part, though, the British origin of these books does not detract from their general usefulness.

The Complete Handyman covers a variety of home areas frequently needing repairs or improvements—windows, drains, floors, doors, and shelves. Also discussed are brick and concrete work, furniture repair, wood pests (but not termites), and tools. This book is directly related to British living: it provides information on glazed roofs, gates and fences, and house water systems with hot-water cisterns. It would thus be of most use to Americans maintaining houses built before World War II. Much of this material is available in other, specifically American, titles. Tools for Woodwork is devoted to such hand tools as saws, planes, chisels, hammers and clamps. Only one brief chapter addresses portable power tools. The book gives useful tips on handling, care, and sharpening, and includes some technical data on sawtooth design not easily found elsewhere. This title is excellent and is especially recommended to libraries serving vocational education classes. Introduction to Furniture Making assumes a basic knowledge of woodworking techniques. It provides a quick introduction to design utilizing the mock-up-and-trial method, and covers joints and their uses, strengths, and construction. Drawers and other special constructions as tops, hinging, doors, and laminating are discussed in less detail. The balance of the text is devoted to materials; fittings as bolts, catches, and casters; glues; and finishing. This title is suggested to extensive furniture and woodworking collections.—W. T. Johnston, Coastal Plain Regional Lib., Tifton, Ga.

Cookery

Beebe, Ruth Anne. Sallets, Humbles & Shrewsbery Cakes: a collection of Elizabethan recipes adapted for the modern kitchen.

Godine. 1976. 128p. fwd. by William Ingram. illus. index. LC 76-14226. ISBN 0-87923-195-5. $12.50. COOKERY

A collection of more than 60 recipes from Elizabethan cookbooks adapted for the modern kitchen, this handsome book has been printed letterpress and features 16 woodcuts from the 15th Century. Compared with two recent Elizabethan cookbooks, Lorna J. Sass's To the Queen's Taste (LJ 1/1/77) and Madge Lorwin's Dining with William Shakespeare (LJ 11/15/76), Beebe's book is conservative in its range of recipes. Avoiding the more esoteric selections from period cookbooks, Beebe emphasizes dishes which are more familiar to the modern cook. One example of her more pragmatic approach to the subject is her treatment of spinach tart as a vegetable rather than as a dessert. (Sass, by contrast, tops her spinach tart with strawberries and sugar.) She also selects from herbs and spices commonly found in the modern kitchen. In opting for the pragmatic rather than the exotic, Beebe has assembled a series of recipes which should appeal to any cook.—F. Whitney Jones, English Dept., St. Andrews Coll., Laurinburg, N. C.

Bernard. Cooking with Bernard.

Grosset. 1977. 276p. illus. index. LC 74-27947. ISBN 0-448-11927-7. $12.95. COOKERY

Bernard, a Frenchman who is a TV chef and a Philadelphia newspaper food columnist, is a peculiar mixture of sophistication and high standards, and naïveté and low standards. He will use the most elaborate and expensive ingredients and combine them with frozen vegetables or specify garlic powder instead of real garlic cloves. He thinks Fettucine Alfredo is a "sensational accompaniment" to Beef Stroganoff, thereby drowning his followers in a surfeit of cream. He believes in making stock from scratch, but most recipes use bouillon cubes. His spring lamb stew includes nothing but winter vegetables. And yet among all this there are some recipes for French dishes prepared according to French standards. This is a book whose time has passed. Bernard's good recipes are by now commonplace, and who needs his poor ones? Julia Child doesn't have to move over yet.—Ruth Diebold, Finkelstein Memorial Lib., Spring Valley, N.Y.

Jordan, Julie. Wings of Life: vegetarian cookery.

Crossing Pr. 1976. 255p. illus. index. LC 76-43075. ISBN 0-912278-82-X. $9.95; pap. ISBN 0-912278-77-3. $5.95. COOKERY

Jordan's book shows a love of food and a willingness to experiment that mark creative cooking. Vegetarianism is shown to be more than just giving up meat; it is adding a wide variety of new flavors and textures to one's diet. In her introduction, the author, a professional vegetarian cook, explains her philosophy and tells how to spot a good natural food, not health food, store. She then gives a large variety of international, easy-to-follow recipes for breads, soups, main dishes, sauces, and desserts. The book's only real fault is the absence of more detailed nutritional information. Considering the rise in interest in natural foods, most collections could use this book.—John L. Albert, Media Center, Lancaster H.S., Ohio

Marshall, Lillian Bertram. Southern Living Illustrated Cookbook.

Oxmoor House. 1977. 454p. illus., some color. index. LC 76-22383. ISBN 0-8487-0419-3. $14.95. COOKERY

The eye-catching feature is the format: sizable print, charts, careful arrangement, and emphasis on technique through excellent black-and-white photographs. The first half of the book concentrates on specific types of preparation—fixing artichokes, poaching eggs, making crêpes—while the second part features menus for a variety of occasions and recipes by category—salads, meats, soufflés. The appealing recipes use common ingredients and some shortcuts such as biscuit mix. Particularly good were walnut glazed lamb chops and fresh lemon ice cream. There is a chapter on grits. An interesting appendix discusses building a cookbook library and cites some definitive Southern cookbooks. A useful addition to general collections regardless of area.—Julie Cummins, Rochester P.L., N.Y.

Polushkin, Maria. The Dumpling Cookbook.

Workman. 1977. 200p. illus. ISBN 0-911104-81-X. $7.95; pap. ISBN 0-911104-85-2. $3.95. COOKERY

Polushkin's definition of a dumpling is something that must be immersed, or dumped, in a cooking medium—water, soup, hot fat, steam. Her book includes recipes from many countries that go beyond the ordinary definition of a dumpling—wontons, gnocchi, quenelles, fritters for entrée or dessert, gefilte fish, egg rolls, piroshki. Instructions for the individual recipes are careful and clear, but the two recipes I tried, for dropped dumplings in stew, were rather doughy and heavy, although the flavor was good. (To be sure, dumplings are supposed to stick to the ribs, but not quite that much.) It would have been helpful if Polushkin had spelled out some general principles on cooking techniques. Nonetheless, this is an engaging book on an interesting and unusual subject.—Ruth Diebold, Finkelstein Memorial Lib., Spring Valley, N.Y.

HUMOR

Greenway, John. The American Tradition: a gallery of rogues.

Mason/Charter. 1976. 210p. LC 76-43104. ISBN 0-88405-379-2. $8.95. HUMOR

A lot of determination is required on the part of someone who is not of Greenway's mind-set to get through this book. It is an enfilade on just about everybody and everything in sight: American Indians, today's college youth and their teachers, women libbers, the police, liberal thinkers, and anyone else who gets in the author's way. The heart of Greenway's creed—or anti-creed, for his tone is destructive—seems to be that the world is out of joint because it doesn't share his views. Even when the reader can concede Greenway a point or two, he or she is likely to be distracted and insulted by the gratuitous and snide little comments which the author feels obligated to fire off every few lines.—A. J. Anderson, Sch. of Library Science, Simmons Coll., Boston

Literature

Adams, Stephen D. James Purdy.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1977. 166p. bibliog. index. LC 76-40878. ISBN 0-06-490014-2. $12. LIT

Adams views Purdy's work in overall terms as developing the notion that we are too often "absent" from our own "biography," meaning that our inner self is absent from the facts of our lives. He sees Purdy's characters as involved in a quest for selfhood in a society that assaults and anaesthetizes inner being. Adams discusses this quest in terms of the relationship between child and parents, the failure of society to make room for the "real" ingredients of life, the past which appears merely as an earlier version of the present alien and absurd world, and the spirit's confrontation with death and with the dissolution of time. The search for personal identity becomes an exploration of the national psyche. Adams places Purdy in the existentialist tradition because of his exploration of the spiritual void, and in the tradition of Hawthorne and Melville because of his command of intricate symbols and archetypal patterns of experience. A valuable scholarly study.—Jacqueline M. Courbin, Dept. of English, Univ. of Ottawa, Canada

Benedikt, Michael, ed. & intro. The Prose Poem: an international anthology.

Laurel: Dell. 1976. 621p. index. pap. $2.50. LIT

Ranging over a span of 150 years, The Prose Poem is a unique international anthology of a little-acknowledged literary form. By definition, the prose poem is "a genre of poetry, self-consciously written in prose, and characterized by the intense use of virtually all the devices of poetry, the sole exception being the line break." The material selected is introduced by dividing the text into nine sections—French, German, Spanish and Portuguese, Scandinavian, Middle-European, Russian, Japanese, American, and British. The poets in each of these sections appear chronologically, just as the sections themselves are placed according to the chronological contribution of each nation. The poems are all of good quality, and the sources for the translations are meticulously listed. There is also a useful biographical bibliography and two indexes, authors and titles. An important and interesting volume.—Marilyn E. Mercer, Chatham Coll. Lib., Pittsburgh

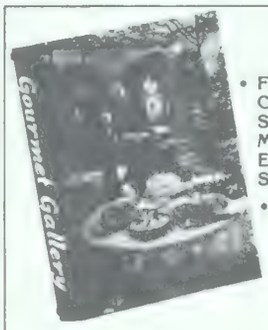
Beowulf: a dual-language edition.

Anchor: Doubleday. Mar. 1977. 384p. tr. & intro. by Howell D. Chickering Jr. LC 72-21250. ISBN 0-385-06123-3. pap. $4.95. LIT

This edition of the Anglo-Saxon poem Beowulf with a facing verse translation is designed for readers with little or no Old English. The translation into four- and five-stress lines with a heavy caesura and light alliteration attempts to capture the poem's "feel" while preserving literal meaning and taking only occasional liberties. The diction (which constitutes the brilliance of the original) is slightly archaic, as are some of



- FEATURES FRENCH, CHINESE, GREEK, SPANISH, AND MANY OTHER ETHNIC SPECIALITIES
- EASY GOURMET RECIPES FOR BUSY PEOPLE

The Cookbook of Cookbooks!

Gourmet Gallery has over 800 tantilizing recipes and many cooking tips for people who enjoy preparing fine foods. For beginning cooks and people "on-the-go" an Easy Gourmet symbol identifies recipes throughout the book that are quick and easy, yet strictly gourmet fare. In addition, special sections feature Men's Cooking, Good For You Foods, One Meal Dishes plus Citrus recipes.

GOURMET GALLERY, A COOKBOOK FOR EVERY OCCASION UNDER THE SUN!

Gourmet Gallery

Published by: Museum of Fine Arts
225 Beach Drive North
St. Petersburg, Florida 33701

Send check or money order for $6.95 per copy. Add .60 per copy for postage and handling. Florida residents add 4% sales tax.

the constructions, but it is everywhere vigorous. The introduction surveys style, language, oral reading technique, etc., with clarity; and a following literary commentary and selective notes assess the poem's meaning and success, mostly by balancing critics. Chickering opts for ambiguity as the poet's essential mode. He enjoys the poem immensely, and this attractive attitude shines everywhere. The bibliography includes works he used rather than works useful to a beginning reader—a minor flaw. This book is valuable for its extended literary appreciations and its facing text, while the Norton Critical Edition (1975) is to be preferred for its more literal translation by E. Talbot Donaldson, and Burton Raffel's rendering is superior for sheer sound.—Donald K. Fry, Dept. of English, SUNY, Stony Brook

Blair, Dorothy S. African Literature in French: a history of creative writing in French from West and Equatorial Africa.

Cambridge Univ. Pr. 1976. 348p. bibliog. index. map. LC 75-39374. ISBN 0-521-21195-6. $28.50. LIT

A worthy successor to Lilyan Kesteloot's pioneering Black Writers in French (LJ 5/15/74), Blair's solid, well-written historical and critical guide offers an up-to-date and comprehensive introduction to the literature of Francophone Africa. Her two- to six-page entries on more than 60 writers are divided into four sections covering the oral tradition, drama, poetry, and the novel. The four chronological subdivisions of the section on the novel range from "1935-55: Authors and Works in the Margin of Commitment" to "1964-74: in the Light of Independence," and are especially useful. The information on such a broad range of writers, introductory material to each section, plus theme and genre essays (e.g., Shaka, the Mali epics) make this volume a new landmark for students of and specialists in French-African literature.—Thomas A. Hale, Dept. of French & Comparative Literature Program, Pennsylvania State Univ., University Park

Christensen, Allan Conrad. Edward Bulwer-Lytton: the fiction of new regions.

Univ. of Georgia Pr. 1977. 268p. bibliog. index. LC 74-27550. ISBN 0-8203-0387-9. $12. LIT

In this study Christensen attempts to disprove the criticism best stated by Walter Allen that Bulwer-Lytton's "was an ambitious, restless talent, but that of the popularizer rather than that of the creator." Christensen views Bulwer-Lytton as a dedicated artist, the creator of mythic and archetypal patterns, with a definite artistic theory which he refined in his writings. However, this was not a fixed theory, but one which evolved as Bulwer-Lytton's metaphysical concepts matured. Thus, in such varied works as The Last Days of Pompeii, Pelham, and Zanoni, thoughtful critics can find the underlying principles of Bulwer-Lytton's metaphysics and his attitudes towards Darwinism, Benthamism, Marxism, and the other new philosophical approaches with which the Victorian mind had to contend. Although this is a thoughtful, well-documented study of a minor Victorian writer, the scholarly approach limits its recommendation to only academic libraries.—David A. Dillon, Univ. of New Orleans Lib.

Clemens, Samuel Langhorne. Mark Twain Speaking.

Univ. of Iowa Pr. 1976. 688p. ed. by Paul Fatout. index. LC 76-15986. ISBN 0-87745-056-0. $22.50. LIT

Mark Twain Speaking, the most comprehensive collection of the great humorist's lectures, speeches, and interviews ever published, reminds us that Clemens achieved much of his fame and success as a speaker. Fatout, who long ago established himself as the authority on the subject, introduces the collection with a splendid essay that illuminates not only Clemens' career on the platform, but also the place of public speaking in 19th-Century America. Bibliographical scholars will find much to discuss and dispute in the editorial methods Fatout has employed, but most scholars and most readers will simply rejoice that Fatout has rendered the riches in this volume accessible.—Robert Regan, Dept. of English, Univ. of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia de Camp, L. Sprague. Literary Swordsmen and Sorcerers: the makers of heroic fantasy.

Arkham. Apr. 1977. 313p. intro. by Lin Carter. index. LC 76-17991. ISBN 0-87054-076-9. $10. LIT

This book is essentially a discussion of nine fantasy writers (Morris, Dunsany, Lovecraft, Eddison, Howard, Pratt, Smith, Tolkien, White) by a writer who is himself a master of the genre. Actually the book deals in depth with ten fantasy writers, because Carter's introduction is an appreciative and perceptive discussion of de Camp and his work. De Camp is a pleasant writer to read and a solid critic with an enormous knowledge of his subject; he seems to have read every work of fantasy there is, but he is neither pedantic nor hagiographic. Each fantasist is the subject of a chapter in which de Camp surveys his life and work in an able and authoritative manner, mixing biography and criticism into a smooth narrative that brings the man and his writings vividly before our eyes. An excellent survey of fantasy that avoids the plodding monotony of most surveys of this sort and that should be of equal interest to the rabid fan and the general reader alike. Recommended.—Charles Bishop, Dept. of English, Univ. of New Orleans

Eakin, Paul John. The New England Girl: cultural ideals in Hawthorne, Stowe, Howells and James.

Univ. of Georgia Pr. 1977. 252p. index. LC 74-18583. ISBN 0-8203-0398-4. $11. LIT

The 19th-Century outlook was greatly influenced by two ideals, the Puritan one of renunciation and the Transcendental one of self-culture, both expressed in that "all-purpose symbol," the New England girl. As this work shows, to go from Stowe to Hawthorne is to see clearly the waning of the first ideal and the waxing, to a point, of the second. Then Howells, in his trenchant studies of rising secularism, demolished forever the possibility of a redeeming Puritan faith. But James, working with the same material and possessing (in his own words) the "grasping imagination" that Howells lacked, took the premise full-circle to show, in The Portrait of a Lady, that self-culture has its pitfalls and renunciation its merits. Thus do these authors dramatize some of the persistent and significant concerns of their day; hence the value of their work, its intrisic merits notwithstanding, as "historical" fiction. A slow-moving and overly cautious book, but one that is recommended for advanced undergraduate and graduate libraries.—David Kirby, Dept. of English, Florida State Univ., Tallahassee

Fellows, Otis. Diderot.

Twayne. (World Authors). Mar. 1977. bibliog. index. LC 76-43041. ISBN 0-8057-6265-5. $7.95. LIT

For nearly 30 years, not entirely unlike Diderot himself as he indefatigably saw the Encyclopédie and much else to completion, Fellows has promoted the belated fame of the most unpredictably original of the philosophes, in Diderot Studies. Generations of scholars have been nurtured by that generous enterprise, and it is entirely fitting that Fellows should be chosen to write Twayne's Diderot volume, not simply because he knows his subject so well but also because he can write about him—the life, the works, the history of their interpretation, the basic bibliography, all that a person seeking an introduction to Diderot requires—with affectionate, mellow clarity, as if writing about an old, beloved, and esteemed friend.—Frederick M. Keener, Dept. of English, Hofstra Univ., Hempstead, N.Y.

Gilderman, Martin S. Juan Rodriguez de la Camara.

Twayne. (World Authors: Spain). Mar. 1977. 168p. bibliog. index. LC 76-28774. ISBN 0-8057-6195-0. $9.50. LIT

This study of Juan Rodriguez—poet and creator of Spain's first sentimental novel—will satisfy neither scholar nor casual reader. Its weakness lies in wielding criticism to argue two psychological points about a writer whose biography is perforce mostly conjecture: his rebellion against the troubadour convention of female superiority ("a typical Spanish male reaction against subservience in the courtly love relationship"); and his assertion of Galician "cultural identity" in the 15th Century Castilian court. The book's strength is found in its minor themes: the predominance of parody, both of ecclesiastical and courtly love traditions, and the emergence of personal martyrdom as a self-serving fate. The latter features make Gilderman's comprehensive survey of this obscure writer's work potentially useful to the academic specialist.—Dru Dougherty, Dept. of Spanish & Portuguese, Univ. of California, Berkeley

Holbrook, David. Sylvia Plath: poetry and existence.

Humanities. 1976. 308p. bibliog. index. $15. PSYCH/LIT

Love, hate, human hope: Holbrook is doing old business at a new stand in an extended essay in which poetry, philosophy, and psychology merge. He posits Plath as a schizoid in a schizoid society and treats profound questions of artistic identity and the development of a human psyche. His central theme is the failure of confidence in the imagination and the future, and a deficiency of a sense of identity. Once the literary critic as psychotherapist begins a phenomenological analysis of the poetry, the reader must hold tight for a ride through regressed libidinal ego, a split-off male element built on hate, phallic phenemona, talion retribution fantasy, incestuous urges, and the like. Although some of Holbrook's exegeses seem excessively speculative, this is an impressive book, with an overview that is moral, civilized, and civilizing—a voice of post-nihilistic man.—James J. Martine, Dept. of English, St. Bonaventure Univ., N.Y.

Hughson, Lois. Thresholds of Reality: George Santayana and modernist poetics.

National Univ. Pubs: Kennikat. 1977. 180p. index. LC 76-44012. $12.50. LIT

Hughson's study concerns both the influence of and analogies between Santayana's mind and works and the "modernist" poetic themes and modes of expression. Santayana's "hopes and theories" are manifest in a "displacement of action by imagination," and Hughson's work devotes three chapters to their rendering in the poetry of Yeats, Eliot, and Stevens. The modernist poetic mind achieves "thresholds of reality" by making whole—as Santayana did—"the radical fragmentation and imperfection of experience." Like so many influence studies—especially those aimed at denoting "cultural continuities and disruptions"—Hughson's defines analogies more successfully than it depicts influence.—Bert C. Bach, Dean of the Coll. of Arts & Sciences, Univ. of Tennessee, Chattanooga

Huxley, Francis. The Raven and the Writing Desk.

Harper. 1977. 191p. illus. index. LC 75-30333. ISBN 0-06-012113-0. $8.95. LIT

This curious book is a half-serious attempt to explicate the riddle which the Mad Hatter asks of Alice in Wonderland: "Why is a raven like a writing-desk?" The answer is of course nonsense, a surd, "a radical whose meaning cannot be exactly ascertained," and that is precisely what Huxley has given us in this book. It is a delightful, zany, learned piece of nonsense as precise and arcane as its subject. And what is its subject? The book is at once a serious study of Lewis Carroll's life and work, a sort of critical parody, and an intricate nonsense game abounding in odd puns and off-the-wall logic. Though a single isolated quote cannot really do justice to the book, here is a sample: "If you are mad to put a right-hand foot into a left-hand shoe, and you are deaf because your left foot is in your right ear, what are you? Answer: A Bachelor." Recommended.—Charles Bishop, Dept. of English, Univ. of New Orleans

Jones, Peter G. War and the Novelists: appraising the American war novel.

Univ. of Missouri Pr. 1976. 260p. fwd. by M. L. Rosenthal. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-23268. ISBN 0-8262-0211-X. $12.50. LIT

Jones's valuable survey of this genre from 1944 to 1968 establishes the war novel as "one of the most logical modes of writing about life in the 20th Century" and places it in the mainstream of social and political criticism. He isolates four dominant themes—war as education, the structure of command, the sexuality of violence, and the psychology of combat—and these provide a valid framework of enquiry. He discusses many lesser known novels, and there are good analyses of The Caine Mutiny, Cozzens' Guard of Honor, and the works of James Jones. His primary critical tools are Freud and Leo Marx, but his adherence to them is the source of the book's deficiencies. He claims that all war novels support Leo Marx's nature-versus-technology thesis—a formula which seriously oversimplifies Mailer's Why Are We in Vietnam? Freud, Jung, and Erich Fromm confirm Jones's feeling that in technological cultures war is an inevitable part of human relations. Thus he overrates Vonnegut, whose pessimism and determinism he finds to be the most accurate expression of the idea of war as human nature. But, as an approach to the majority of American war novels, this study is highly recommended.—Michael Page, Dept. of Language Arts, Grand Rapids Junior Coll., Mich.

Kiell, Norman. Varieties of Sexual Experience: psychosexuality in literature.

Internat. Univs. Pr. 1976. 752p. index. LC 74-21187. ISBN 0-8236-6725-1. $25. PSYCH/LIT

Kiell has divided human sexual experience into 15 clinical categories, most of them deviant, and devotes one chapter of his lengthy book to each category. In each of the chapters, he provides a summation of psychological descriptions of an aspect of sexual behavior, and then cites copious examples from literature (mostly novels and short stories) which illustrate that particular area of human sexuality. One wonders for whom the book is intended. Students of literature will find no critical insight into the literary passages quoted, and students of psychology will surely find that the clinical studies are cited in a most elementary and cursory fashion. If this is intended to be a serious interdisciplinary approach to literature and psychology, it sadly falls between the proverbial two stools.—Mary McBride, Dept. of English, Louisiana State Univ., Shreveport

Miner, Earl, ed. Literary Uses of Typology from the Late Middle Ages to the Present.

Princeton Univ. Pr. Apr. 1977. 425p. index. $25. LIT

Originally a method of biblical exegesis according to which persons or events of the Old Testament ("types") were thought to "foreshadow" Christ or events in his life ("anti-types"), typology gradually became secularized. A bewildering variety of broader uses—including allusions (straightforward, parodic, structural, etc.) to classical, Hebrew, Christian, and other mythologies or histories, and even the "reading" of facts and objects of nature as spiritually significant—developed and displaced strict typology. The 12 essays in this collection doggedly track this long, complicated evolution, largely in British and American literature. The method is essentially compilation and survey of numerous examples in chronological sequence; the result is specialized, parochial scholarship rather than enlightening literary criticism. (Karl Keller's interesting essay seems a step in the right direction, however.) Profitable understanding of the history and theory of typology—or whatever we should call the ensemble of practices that stem from or are analogous to that exegetical method—requires a less narrowly specialized, more comprehensive and analytic approach than that which pervades this volume.—Richard Kuczkowski, Dept. of English, Bronx Community Coll., CUNY

O'Hara, John. "An Artist Is His Own Fault": John O'Hara on writers and writing.

Southern Illinois Univ. Pr. 1977. 226p. ed. & intro. by Matthew J. Bruccoli. LC 76-43279. ISBN 0-8093-0796-0. $8.95. LIT

This collection of O'Hara essays and lectures, largely unpublished until now, confirms earlier impressions. He was cantankerous and contentious; he could be patronizing or pretentious; and his words were often heavy with name-droppings. He accepted Fitzgerald and Steinbeck as his companionable peers, while Faulkner was a genius but no craftsman, apparently capable of automatic writing. It is this persistent insistence on his own continually developing craftsmanship that almost persuades the reader to look again at his later novels, but then it is remembered that he also believed he could write first drafts that needed no changing, a skill he proudly ascribed to his reporter's apprenticeship.—G. A. Masterton, Wayne State Univ. Lib., Detroit

Praise from Famous Men.

Scarecrow. 1977. 194p. ed. by Guy R. Lyle. LC 76-55402. ISBN 0-8108-1002-6. $8. LIT

Lyle has give us an anthology of some of the best, most interesting introductions he has come across. The writers included (from Auden on M. F. K. Fisher's The Art of Eating to Yeats on Synge's The Well of the Saints) are well known in their spheres and certainly qualified to introduce their subjects. They provide biographical and critical information seldom found elsewhere. That the tone of the pieces is favorable and laudatory is no great matter; the writing is revealing and relevant. A few gems: Edmund Wilson on Hemingway's In Our Time, Morris L. Ernst on Lord of the Flies, Freud on Reik's Ritual. This is a well-chosen selection, suitable, as Lyle quotes John Drinkwater, for "entertainment for serendipity minds at the last half-hour before the light is switched off at night."—Matthew Hartman, Univ. of British Columbia Lib., Vancouver, Canada

Raphael, Frederic. W. Somerset Maugham and His World.

Scribners. Mar. 1977. 128p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-19742. ISBN 0-684-14839-0. $8.95. BIOG/LIT

Somewhere between a photo-documentary and a biocritical study, this is an attractive, congenial companion to the life and work of Maugham. More than 100 photographs complement Raphael's thoughtful, well-written commentary. The author traces Maugham's long life, paying particular attention to the people, places, and experiences that most influenced his writings. Raphael considers each of Maugham's major works in turn, not to support any critical theory, but rather to elaborate on various aspects of setting, theme, or characterization in the light of Maugham's whole career. The reader unfamiliar with Maugham is at a disadvantage since most of Raphael's interpretive remarks presume a basic knowledge of the writings. Still, the easy flow of the text, the absence of footnotes, and the aptness of the illustrations make the book a worthwhile and enjoyable introduction. For all general literature collections.—Mary George, Univ. of Michigan Lib., Ann Arbor

Saccio, Peter. Shakespeare's English Kings: history, chronicle, and drama.

Oxford Univ. Pr. Mar. 1977. 224p. illus. bibliog. index. $10.95; pap. $2.95. HIST/LIT

A background reader for Shakespeare's ten history plays, this work recounts the historical events behind the dramatizations. It is a modest book, whose goals are limited to clarifying the complicated events of the Wars of the Roses, the reign of King John, and the reign of Henry VIII. Each history play is given a full chapter. The genealogical and chronological charts are adequate. The book is easy to read and since it is expected that the projected BBC TV production of all of Shakespeare's plays will be aired on U.S. public television in 1977 and 1978, this successful handbook should be in every library. Playgoers and Shakespeare buffs will find it indispensable.—Sanford Sternlicht, Dept. of Theater, SUNY at Oswego

Vidal, Gore. Matters of Fact and of Fiction: essays 1973-1976.

Random. Apr. 1977. 287p. $10. LIT

The first part of Vidal's latest volume of essays is concerned with aspects of contemporary fiction, ranging from appreciations of Louis Auchincloss and Italo Calvino to scathing attacks on best-sellers and novelists such as Barthelme and Barth. The second half examines other matters, with pieces on West Point and on the escapades of E. Howard Hunt and Robert Moses, historical portraits of the Adams and Grant families, and a personal recollection of Tennessee Williams. More than half of these writings have appeared in the New York Review of Books. The familiar Vidal themes are here: the decline of the American empire, the dangers of overpopulation, the search for taste and elegance in a vulgar world, the sterility of most contemporary serious fiction, and the shallowness of many literary critics. He is at his most witty, and vitriolic, when attacking academic hacks who can neither teach nor write. The tone of these essays is both despairing and angry. Many will violently disagree with some of Vidal's propositions, but he does provoke the reader into thinking about the issues. Recommended.—Morris A. Hounion, New York City Community Coll Lib./ Learning Resource Center, CUNY

Weatherby, W. J. Squaring Off: Mailer versus Baldwin.

Mason/Charter. Mar. 1977. c.225p. ISBN 0-88405-449-7. $8.95. BIOG/LIT

This curious book begins with the notion that Mailer and Baldwin are "reverse sides of the same coin, representative figures of the sixties, when blacks and whites were struggling creatively to understand each other." The narrative traces the lives and careers of both authors as reflected through their periodic encounters with journalist Weatherby. Although much of the biographical information is worth reading, particularly as it reflects on the difficulty of playing the dual role of writer and public figure, the central theme of Baldwin and Mailer as literary antagonists never really comes to life. More attention to the thematic contrasts in their work and less to their verbal sparring at dinnner parties might have helped. Literary gossip will always find an audience, but Squaring Off is a disappointment in spite of its readability. More is promised than is delivered.—William Ott, Timberland Regional Lib., Lacey, Wash.

Winnifrith, Tom. The Brontës.

Macmillan. (Masters of World Literature). Apr. 1977. 224p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-02-630270-5. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-02-007750-5. $3.95. LIT

Winnifrith created a stir with his first Brontë book, The Brontës and Their Background (London, 1973). He took exception to "amateurs" who read too much biography into their literary criticism, but his insistence on utilizing the tools of scholarship was a palliative sorely needed. His second Brontë book, which embraces the same critical standards as his first, will further enhance his reputation as a first-rate scholar. He is one of the few writers who can make sense of the juvenilia, which he accurately sums up as a "trail of red herrings." He is equally pointed (and courageous) in his assessment of the poetry—the Brontës were not good poets. The major portion of the volume is a detailed examination of the novels. A knowledge of them is assumed, and the book may be hard going for beginners; but it is an invaluable work that all college libraries should acquire.—Gilbert B. Cross, Dept. of English, Eastern Michigan Univ., Ypsilanti

Wolff, Cynthia Griffin. A Feast of Words: the triumph of Edith Wharton.

Oxford Univ. Pr. Apr. 1977. 464p. illus. $15.95. LIT

This biographical/psychological study of Wharton's writings read in tandem with R. W. B. Lewis' award-winning Edith Wharton (LJ 8/75) should spur new interest in the life and career of one of the best and most neglected of our novelists. In the author's view an understanding of the inner torment behind Wharton's successful façade is essential to an understanding of her work. The struggles of the "poor little rich girl" to emerge from her cold and conventional upbringing to maturity as woman and artist is as fascinating a behind-the-scenes story as that of any major figure in U.S. letters. Wolff's analysis is both meticulous and exciting, a first choice for libraries with solid collections in American literature.—Nina K. Wilson, Los Angeles County P.L. System

MUSIC

Bartók, Béla. Béla Bartók Essays.

St. Martin's. 1977. 567p. sel. & ed. by Benjamin Suchoff. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-5202. $75. MUSIC

This monumental collection is an essential companion to the St. Martin's publication of Bartók's letters (LJ 4/15/72), and, in spite of its high price, it's essential for serious music libraries. The material presented here has previously been scattered through many different compilations, periodicals, and folders of lecture notes. Much of it has never appeared in English before. Here we meet Bartók the adventurous folk-music collector, the scholar, the lecturer, the editor, the music critic, the polemicist, the objective analyst of his own compositions—and the human being of integrity. Not to be missed.—Dika Newlin, American Composers Alliance, New York

The Rolling Stone Illustrated History of Rock & Roll.

Rolling Stone Pr. and Random. 1976. 382p. ed. by Jim Miller. photogs. index. LC 76-14190. ISBN 0-394-40327-4. $19.95; pap. ISBN 0-394-73238-3. $9.95. MUSIC

A critical and historical survey of relatively comprehensive scope, containing 71 essays, each with selective discographies, more than 1,000 well-chosen black-and-white photos, and a name index of more than 900 entries. Drawing on 26 of the best-known writers in the field—such as John Rockwell, Ellen Willis, Greil Marcus, Nik Cohn—the book traces rock's evolution from gospel singing, rhythm & blues, and rockabilly up through soul, jazz, and glitter-rock of the 1970's. Along the way all the major groups and most of the minor ephemera are touched on, with coverage of the payola scandals, "top 40" radio, rock cinema and festivals—but none for rock opera. The topically arranged format and lack of subject index limit reference value, while the size (36 x 27 cm.) is clumsy and the arty layout makes matching of captions to photos something of a puzzle. Nonetheless, a recommended buy for public and academic libraries.—Paul G. Feehan, Univ. of Miami Lib., Coral Gables, Fla.

Philosophy

Copleston, Frederick, S.J. Philosophers and Philosophies.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1977. 184p. ISBN 0-06-491278-7. $12.50. PHIL

This is a collection of essays written during the past 25 years. Half are problem-oriented and half are about specific philosophers: Nicholas of Autrecourt, Spinoza, Hegel, Nietzsche, Bergson, Ortega y Gasset, and Sartre receive special attention. The topics range from reaction to "death-of-God" Christianity, to an analysis of Nicholas' view of incorrigibility in perception, to an overview of Bergson's ethics. If there is a common thread in these essays it is Copleston's eclectic combining of philosophies of different periods. Much of the work is thought-provoking, though most of the arguments do not seem to constitute a finished analysis. Copleston betrays a skepticism about any dialectical progress in the history of philosophy; yet he has not succumbed to philosophic relativism, for he believes that insight can transcend historical circumstances.—John B. McClatchey, Dept. of Religion & Philosophy, Catawba Coll., Salisbury, N.C.

Dillon, John. The Middle Platonists, 80 B.C. to A.D. 220.

Cornell Univ. Pr. Mar. 1977. 422p. LC 76-48382. ISBN 0-8014-1083-5. $21.50. PHIL

The Middle Platonists were the philosophers who, after the Skeptics, set out to recapture the metaphysical insights and courage of Plato's immediate successors. Overshadowed by Plato, Plotinus, and the Skeptics, these system builders—men like Antiochus, Eudorus, Calvenus Taurus, and Albinus—are at best only names to most of us. Philo alone stands out. Nevertheless, their concern that the conflicts of nature and human nature be overcome by knowledge retains its fascination. Heretofore, we have had to rely on Philip Merlan's From Platonism to Neoplatonism (Humanities, 1960. rev. ed.) and on the section (also written by Merlan) in A. H. Armstrong's Cambridge History of Later Greek and Early Medieval Philosophy (LJ 4/1/67). The first deals with a special set of technical problems; the second is sketchy. Dillon has performed an important service in assembling a full if somewhat unexciting account. Yet, his decision to stop before Plotinus leaves the general reader without a standard of comparison, and his assumption that he has (and we share) a clear idea of what Plato meant is questionable. Still, this is a book every serious general library should have.—Leslie Armour, Dept. of Philosophy, Cleveland State Univ.

Dupré, Louis. Transcendent Selfhood: the loss and rediscovery of the inner life.

Crossroad: Seabury. 1976. 140p. ISBN 0-8164-0306-6. $8.95. PHIL

Dupré has distinguished himself both as a religious writer and as a philosopher. In this work, he proposes that although much attention has been paid to the self by the present age, our understanding of it remains superficial, and that a true vision of the self must include self-surpassing states and experiences. The author exhibits a remarkable knowledge of the philosophical positions relating to the self, especially those of Husserl and Heidegger. His investigation of time and memory will be of particular interest to the student of Bergson. Despite this ability to draw upon sources to support his arguments, the exact point made is often obscure. By Dupré's own admission the work is not a comprehensive theory of the transcendent self. However, one can only regret that it is not more polished, since in its present form it will most likely fail to interest the general reader and will frustrate the philosopher.—Claude L. Parker, formerly with London P.L., Ontario, Canada

Schwartz, Stephen P., ed. Naming, Necessity, and Natural Kinds.

Cornell Univ. Pr. Mar. 1977. 288p. $15. PHIL

Eight of the ten papers anthologized here deal with the philosophical position that what a word refers to is not, in general, a function of the concept that the word expresses. Saul A. Kripke, Hilary Putnam, and Keith S. Donnellan, whose recent work is responsible for the development of this important view, are well represented in five articles; three other articles (one especially written for this volume) continue the discussion of this position, and the two remaining articles present views about natural kinds that the editor claims (not wholly convincingly) are related to the other discussions. A useful though schematic general introduction relates this new work to the traditional philosophical view that reference depends on meaning; the editor suggests, however, that there is greater agreement between Kripke, Putnam and Donnellan than actually seems to exist. The selections are chosen wisely, and the collection will be of great use for philosophers and those in related fields concerned with language.—David M. Rosenthal, Dept. of Philosophy, Lehman Coll., CUNY

POETRY

Berryman, John. Henry's Fate & Other Poems, 1967-1972.

Farrar. Apr. 1977. 94p. $7.95. POETRY

On January 7, 1972, John Berryman took his life by leaping from a bridge in Minneapolis, as if to confirm the suicidal implications of his most famous work, The Dream Songs. This second posthumous volume of Berryman's verse reproduces previously unpublished Dream Songs as well as several fascinating fragments and unfinished poems. Berryman captures his "failing life, his whisky curse" in language that is taut and agonized. "The place is crawling with ghosts," and the desperate poet must "dance on a needle." Berryman articulates his themes—alcoholism, adultery, love of his daughter, and the woes of teaching—by engaging in dialogue with his famous alter egos, Henry and Mr. Bones. Henry's Fate is a significant and revealing addition to Berryman's poetic canon; his tragic and untimely death now becomes more comprehensible.—Daniel L. Guillory, Dept. of English, Millikin Univ., Decatur, Ill.

Engels, John. Blood Mountain.

Univ. of Pittsburgh Pr. 1977. 125p. $6.95; pap. $2.95. POETRY

The poems in this collection tell a story about the "difficult/ climate" we live in as we try to dream our way out of "the darkness that is/ everywhere." Traveling up the mountain, we become confused; and our blood "darkly congeals"; we struggle in bad weather, "wanting neither to go up/ nor down," and "cannot decide." We realize, however, that the climate is "not relentless," that we "bring night" on ourselves. Hence, we must learn again to be "easily astonished" when "we stand/ At whatever center most employs us," where lights flicker "on and off/ like a cardinal at the dark/ heart of a pine." This book is for readers who want to be led past the obvious or commonplace and who are willing to face, at the end, a hard truth: "We will/ no doubt, not hear from one another." Tragically, this is true. But the poet's words still wait for us, "warm with the smell of resin."—Joseph Garrison, Dept. of English, Mary Baldwin Coll., Staunton, Va.

Hecht, Anthony. Millions of Strange Shadows.

Atheneum. 1977. LC 76-48223. ISBN 0-689-10784-6. $7.95. POETRY

Much of Hecht's poetry is dense and opulent. There are overwrought images (the moon of the astronauts in "A Lot of Night Music" becomes "Poor, poxed Diana, laid open to the charge/ Of social Actaeons"). Then, too, punning and heavy-handed alliteration can distract from meaning: "The Feast of Stephen" is marred by lines such as "Mens sans in men's sauna, in the flush/ Of health and toilets." When these punning and slick-elegant mannerisms are not running full gear, however, Hecht produces lovely poems. Especially pleasing are "After the Rain," "Going the Rounds," and "Apprehensions." "Coming Home" (which purports to come from a journal entry by the British lunatic poet John Clare) is touching and memorable, and so is "The Hunt," a very successful mixture of prose and verse.—Rowe Portis, New York

Marshall, Jack. Bits of Thirst & Other Poems & Translations.

Blue Wind Pr., 820 Miramar, Berkeley, Calif. 94707. 1977. 80p. LC 75-9874. ISBN 0-912652-15-2. pap. $2.95. POETRY

The best poems in Marshall's book

Library Journal recommends

Two African Statesmen: Kaunda of Zambia and Nyerere of Tanzania

By JOHN HATCH

"A competent new work by the author of ten previous books on Africa, this will likely be much in demand in view of the widespread interest in the two presidents it treats.... Recommended for academic libraries, large public libraries, and libraries in high schools."
—Library Journal

Illustrated.
SBN: 8405-7/$15.00 cloth;
SBN 7979-7/$5.95 paper

HENRY Regnery COMPANY
Chicago, Illinois

*"A must for all libraries"

THE TRANSFORMATION OF SOUTHERN POLITICS

Social Change and Political Consequence Since 1945

Jack Bass & Walter DeVries

"Careful, comprehensive, unique."—Choice.*

"Intensive and scholarly, this volume may establish itself as the standard reference work."
—The Booklist.

"Absolutely first-rate... required reading for Carterologists."
—Jonathan Yardley, Washington Post.

"Definitive."—Tom Wicker.
ISBN: 0-465-08965-0
LC: 75-36375 $15.95

BASIC BOOKS INC
10 EAST 53RD ST. NEW YORK 10022

evolve with quiet simplicity of language and tone from the poet's personal reflection and growth as a human in relationship with others. "In your shoes" begins: "Wherever you imagine yourself most real,/ go there./ Out of a love that is not gentle/ as the dust of a room,/ but a love that happens in a room/ and becomes dust,/ whatever room you wake in now/ is the room of your birth." "Some Questions of Distance" ends: "Each morning, each evening,/ and the blanks in-between,/ I watch you belong to no one." His long poem sequence Floats revels in the hit or miss flow, the bits and pieces of words and phrases that make up our thought process (would it be easier to think without words?): "I know/ Every like a long time ago/ Something I was/ Ages." But Floats succeeds merely as a series of small poems; the larger connection exists only in the title.—Gary Hotham, Laurel, Md.

Merwin, W. S. The Compass Flower.
Atheneum. 1977. 150p. LC 76-27345. ISBN 0-689-10768-4. $4.95. POETRY
The best poems here occur in the first of the four parts; they are mysterious, solitary, dream-traveling poems, reminiscent of The Moving Target, The Lice, and especially of the wonderful journey poems in The Drunk in the Furnace, books which I feel contain the best of this fine poet's work and which are generally free, for the most part, from that strong tendency towards abstraction which haunts a lot of his recent work. There is a distinct falling off from the high level of the first part, particularly in the third section of The Compass Flower, mostly love poems of autumn (the spirit of Kore) and harvest. The poems here are rather exotic and allegorical in diction and finally they are insubstantial, slipping quickly out of memory. The mountain of the first part—mysterious, an obstacle, a limitation, a challenge, vested with a kind of metaphysical reality—becomes in the third part merely a pretty image in a somewhat oriental landscape: "so we climb the mountain together after all/ even with it between us . . ./ The candles flutter on the stairs of your voice/ gold in the dark . . ." (from "Kore").—C. W. Truesdale, Dept. of Humanities, Cooper Union, New York

Soto, Gary. The Elements of San Joaquin.
Univ. of Pittsburgh Pr. 1977. 100p. LC 76-26104. ISBN 0-8229-3335-7. $6.95; pap. ISBN 0-8229-5279-3. $2.95. POETRY
Soto's poems are brief, revealing, complete glimpses of his reality—landscapes, childhood vignettes, pieces of the here and now. There is little emotionalism in his voice as he focuses on basically grim details; in some poems the unmodulated tone stumbles, the images are dry and the lines become choppy, but his best poems are self-explanatory and as unadorned and unambiguous as the California desert he is so familiar with. His images expand the reader's perception rather than transcend it. The world perceived is one of dust, clouds, and unfulfilling labor, and concluding lines such as this one whisper the desperation of ". . . the gray space between each word/ That reaches to say you are alone." In the best poems ("San Fernando Road," "Street," "October," "Moving") the alienation and pathos of existence is part of the landscape. For modern poetry collections; it would make a good addition to a Chicano collection as well.—Kathleen Purnell, Indiana Univ. Lib., Bloomington

Political Science & International Affairs

Atkins, G. Pope. Latin America in the International Political System.
Free Pr. 1977. 435p. bibliog. index. $10.95. INT AFFAIRS
This work discusses the formation of Latin American foreign policy and emphasizes U.S./Latin American relations. Atkins adds to traditional treatments of this subject some attention to intracontinental relations and to the role of states not on the mainland of Latin America. Relatively free of jargon, the book does use a political systems approach, treating Latin America as a subsystem of the international system. Based upon a sound bibliography, it certainly provides direction for as much depth of reading as anyone might wish and has the advantage of being as current as possible. The bibliography alone makes this a useful reference work.—I. E. Cadenhead, Jr., Dept. of History, Univ. of Tulsa, Okla.

Ben-Veniste, Richard & George Frampton. Stonewall.
S. & S. Apr. 1977. 416p. index. LC 76-56340. ISBN 0-671-22463-8. $11.95. PER NAR/GOVT
The authors, who were assistants to the Watergate Special Prosecutor, present the story of their pursuit of the conspirators in a tone that tends to be self-congratulatory. But while their account adds little in the way of new facts about the events surrounding Watergate, it does offer novel insights into the workings of the Special Prosecutor's office. Of special note are the descriptions of the approach and style of the two major prosecutors, Archibald Cox and Leon Jaworski; the younger attorneys' often differing perspective on the investigations and prosecutions; and the sharp conflicts between the staff and Jaworski in particular. Yet, because so many books on this subject are being published, only libraries building comprehensive Watergate collections should consider this an essential purchase.—Wes Daniels, Univ. of Lowell Lib., Mass.

Eckstein, Susan. The Poverty of Revolution: the state and the urban poor in Mexico.
Princeton Univ. Pr. Apr. 1977. 290p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-3253. ISBN 0-691-09367-9. $17.50. SOC SCI/POL SCI
How have the Mexican poor fared since the 1910 revolution? This is the question Eckstein poses in a comprehensive study of three settings in modern Mexico City. Although her focus shifts from an examination of the three neighborhoods (ranging from squatter settlement to lower middle-class) to a broader commentary on the nature of Mexican national politics, her findings are similar in both instances—the poor have been coopted in favor of capitalist interests. An institutionalized revolutionary party, consequently, provides few avenues for the expression of populist aims, either in the urban or rural sector. This study suffers from an overemphasis on theoretical analysis, making it tiresome for the general reader. Still, it is quite informative and offers plausible explanations of contemporary Mexican society, especially in light of the recent land seizures.—Roberta Marx Delson, Dept. of History, Rutgers Univ., Newark, N.J.

Hirschman, Albert O. The Passions and the Interests: political arguments for capitalism before its triumph.

Princeton Univ. Pr. Mar. 1977. 156p. LC 76-24293. ISBN 0-691-04214-4. $10; pap. ISBN 0-691-00357-2. $2.95. ECON/POL SCI

Hirschman's basic conclusion is that early capitalist ideology was a current of opinion that arose right in the center of the "power structure" and the "establishment" of the time and was an answer to a felt need in statecraft. This thesis, contrasting sharply with the traditional conflictual interpretations, is supported with a sketch of the rise of interest theory. The basic problem was how to harness the drives of men that impel them to harmful actions; the concept of countervailing passions was finally seen as the clue to the solution. Eventually (by the end of the 18th Century), avarice was accepted as a positively beneficial passion. A world dominated by self-interest would be predictable, free of inconstancy, and uncertainty. This is a brilliant essay and one that should stimulate thought in advanced courses in economic and political thought.—R. A. Fenn, Dept. of Political Economy, Univ. of Toronto, Canada

Jureidini, Paul A. & William E. Hazen. The Palestinian Movement in Politics.

Lexington: Heath. 1976. 139p. bibliog. index. LC 76-17506. ISBN 0-669-00858-3. $13.50. INT AFFAIRS

This is a solid study of the Palestinian movement that takes the Palestinians seriously and sorts through their often violent tactics to find hope of eventual settlement through creation of a Palestinian state, coexisting with Israel, made viable by links to the Syrian-Lebanese-Jordanian entente. The authors provide details on the organization of the Palestinian Revolutionary Movement and its relations to Arab states, particularly Jordan and Lebanon which both turned against the too-disruptive Palestinians. They list and analyze numerous terrorist actions, and accept them as necessary tactics. The book provides valuable data to counter the overly romantic view of Palestinians held by some, but adds little that is new to the 1973 study by William Quandt and others, The Politics of Palestinian Nationalism (LJ 3/1/73). Too, it is marred by occasional awkwardness in organization and style.—Elizabeth R. Hayford, Asst. Dean for International Education, Oberlin Coll., Ohio

Kornberg, Allan & William Mishler. Influence in Parliament: Canada.

Duke Univ. Pr. (Pubs. of the Consortium for Comparative Legislative Studies). 1976. 403p. index. LC 76-5322. ISBN 0-8223-0364-7. $14.75. POL SCI

This latest volume from the consortium is a useful book but a narrowly academic one. It is a close study of Canada's 28th parliament, based on interviews with 189 members of that body. The result is a great deal of information on what sort of men exert influence in parliament, and why. The study suffers, however, from its narrow perspective on a single parliament; the sections of historical background are often inaccurate. For the general reader, the most serious deficiency of the book is its poor presentation. Written in the darkest "social-sciencese," it seems to have been deliberately designed to be impenetrable.—Michael S. Cross, Dept. of History, Dalhousie Univ., Halifax, Canada

Manning, D. J. Liberalism.

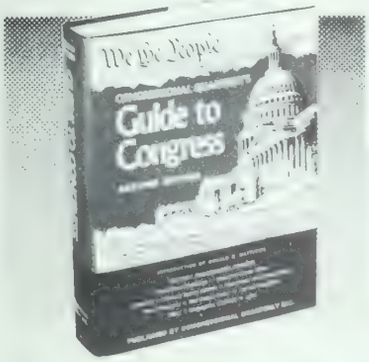
St. Martin's. (Modern Ideologies). 1976. 174p. bibliog. index. LC 76-15053. $10.95; pap. $4.50. PHIL/POL SCI

This is a lucid, informative, and admirably objective account of liberalism and

Just Published!
Second Edition



Guide to Congress
Second Edition

1,100 pp. 8½" x 11". $49.50

Just published, an extensively revised edition of the work widely accepted as the reference on the U.S. Congress. Includes major Congressional reforms enacted in the aftermath of Vietnam and Watergate. How Congress works, its powers, history and the pressures upon it.

This is no coffee-table edition. It belongs in every high school, college and public library.

Please order directly from:

Congressional Quarterly Inc.
Box 77, 1414 22nd St. N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20037

ONE OF LJ'S "BEST" IS EVEN BETTER IN ITS 2nd EDITION

The Politics of Environmental Concern SECOND EDITION
WALTER A. ROSENBAUM

A completely revised and updated second edition of the book Library Journal cited as "One of the Hundred Best Sci-Tech Books of 1973."

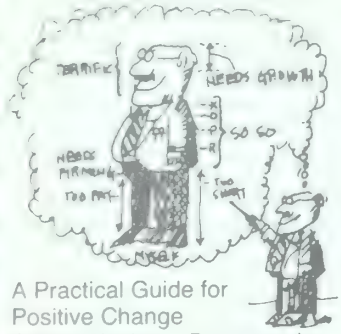
Reviewing the first edition in Perspective, Charles O. Jones said: THE POLITICS OF ENVIRONMENTAL CONCERN "deserves to be widely read... It conveys the sense of public urgency which has come to dominate decision-making in this area, without ignoring either the legitimate economic and industrial interests... or the troublesome dilemmas raised by enforcing tough standards."

In this new second edition, Rosenbaum traces the subsequent progress of environmental agencies, air and water pollution, water resources and solid waste disposal. Energy needs and land use, two increasingly important issues, also receive special attention.

320 pp. LC 76-41964
ISBN 0-275-24150-5 cloth $12.50
ISBN 0-275-64820-6 paper $ 4.95

PRAEGER PUBLISHERS
/A Division of HOLT, RINEHART AND WINSTON, CBS Publishing Group

ASSERTING YOURSELF



A Practical Guide for Positive Change
Sharon Anthony Bower and Gordon H. Bower

. . outlines a new training program for developing assertive speaking patterns and appearance . . . a very useful programmatic guide."
Library Journal

272 pp. LC 76-5077
$8.95 hardcover
ISBN 0-201-00837-8
$4.95 paperback
ISBN 0-201-00837-8

ADDISON-WESLEY
Reading, Massachusetts 01867

HUMAN SCIENCES PRESS
formerly BEHAVIORAL PUBLICATIONS INC.
72 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK, N.Y. 10011

THE ABUSING FAMILY
by Blair and Rita Justice

"The Justices have done a remarkable job of pulling data from a vast array of sources together. This compilation of information plus the addition of new material based on their own analyses and research make the work an important addition to the growing body of literature on child abuse." —Library Journal
ISBN 87705-294-8 Cloth $14.95
ISBN 87705-315-4 Paper $5.95

Current Issues and Strategies in Organization Development
ISBN 87705-270-0 Cloth $24.95

Long-term Treatments of Psychotic States
ISBN 87705-252-2 Cloth $37.95

Organizing Against Crime: Redeveloping the Neighborhood
ISBN 87705-301-4 Cloth $14.95

New Career Options for Women
Volume I: New Career Options for Women: A Counselor's Sourcebook
ISBN 87705-297-2 Cloth $16.95

Assert Yourself!
ISBN 87705-299-9 Paper $9.95

Profiles in Social Work
ISBN 87705-296-4 Cloth $14.95

Handbook of Medical Specialties
ISBN 87705-232-8 Cloth $16.95
ISBN 87705-292-1 Paper $9.95

Send for FREE Catalog of all titles its varied manifestations in the writings of such men as Locke, Mill, Spencer, and T. H. Green. Perhaps the most interesting part of the book is the suggestive interpretative scheme Manning provides to illuminate the persistent features of the liberal vision of experience. He calls this liberalism's symbolic form and shows it to consist of three principles analogous to the principles—those of balance of the parts, of spontaneous generation and circulation, and of uniformity—which govern the Newtonian universe. Parallel to these are the liberals' abiding convictions that a balanced society is most desirable and it can be attained when power, wealth, and influence are not concentrated; that the source of initiative and progress lies within the individual will and not in the external coercion of the state; and that human nature is the same everywhere. Highly recommended.—Wesley Teo, Dept. of Philosophy, Chicago State Univ.

Nelson, Richard R. The Moon and the Ghetto.

Norton. Mar. 1977. 160p. index. ISBN 0-393-05611-2. $7.95. SOC SCI/POL SCI

This book is about neither space travel nor deteriorating cities. It is about public policy and what should be done to make policy decisions more responsive to the needs of the general public. In this work—whose title comes from the often-repeated question: If we can land a man on the moon, why can't we solve the problems of the ghetto?—Nelson argues that a major reason for inefficient public policy has been the inability of analysts to break out of the preconditioned constraints of their own disciplines. Because of such narrowness, he contends, economists see most solutions in terms of market interactions, political scientists usually call for additional bureaucracy, and engineers unfailingly depend on the god, technology. Nelson uses case studies of the day care controversy and the development of the SST and the fast breeder reactor program to make his case; but these illustrative linkages are often strained, and most of Nelson's suggestions have already been voiced. As a result, his book's primary appeal will be to comprehensive collections in the public policy area.—Gene R. Laczniak, Dept. of Business Administration, Marquette Univ., Milwaukee

Orbach, William W. To Keep the Peace: the United Nations condemnatory resolution.

Univ. Pr. of Kentucky. Apr. 1977. 167p. LC 75-41989. ISBN 0-8131-1341-5. $13.75. INT AFFAIRS

Orbach assesses the concept of collective delegitimization in the UN by examining three cases of condemnatory resolutions. His first chapter, based on a larger selection of such resolutions, would have benefited from some analytical linkage with the extensive literature on the subject. It is, nevertheless, an excellent overview and analysis of the condemnatory resolution—its development, its impact, and its moral, legal, and political implications. The rest of the volume, focusing on resolutions against Communist China (1951), South Africa (1962), and Israel (1968), reviews these cases exhaustively and evaluates the efficacy of the resolutions. In all, Orbach presents a basis for seeing the possibility of a new UN orientation toward the role of neutral arbiter.—Clifton Wilson, Dept. of Political Science, Univ. of Arizona, Tucson

Rosenfeld, Alvin. The Plot to Destroy Israel.

Putnam. 1977. 220p. index. ISBN 0-399-11854-3. $8.95. INT AFFAIRS

"The Arab states are waging a savage and genocidal war against Israel." To support this thesis, Rosenfeld assembles extensive but unsystematic information on Arab duplicitous diplomacy, the fate of the Palestinian refugees, terrorist tactics and activities, and the Arab use of oil and manipulation of Western governments. Throughout, his tone is strident, his bias complete. Convinced that further fighting is inevitable at higher and higher cost, the author conveys despair but little enlightenment about the true complexities of the conflict.—Elizabeth R. Hayford, Asst. Dean for International Education, Oberlin Coll., Ohio

Schwartz, Bernard. The Great Rights of Mankind: a history of the American Bill of Rights.

Oxford Univ. Pr. Apr. 1977. 288p. $11.95. LAW/POL SCI

Schwartz has presented a lucid account of the evolution of a still radical idea—that individual liberties can be identified, guaranteed, and subsequently protected. While giving due credit to the seminal importance of the Magna Carta and the English Bill of Rights of 1689, he focuses attention on vital contributions made by the American colonists, especially their pressure to expand and incorporate into state charters those freedoms considered "basic" and their efforts towards achieving an enforcement mechanism culminating in the checks and balances written into the Constitution. Schwartz shows that the final form of the Bill of Rights was a distillation (largely by James Madison) of clauses already present in the various state constitutions. Madison, in addition, made two contributions characterized by extraordinary vision: replacing "ought not" with the imperative "shall not," and "law of the land" with the more elastic "due process." Recommended.—Joseph R. Sakmyster, Dallas

Silvert, Kalman H. The Reason for Democracy.

Viking, Mar. 1977. 134p. ISBN 0-670-59059-2. $8.95. POL SCI

This work by Silvert, who died after its completion, is a thoughtful, rather personal essay on democracy. Noting that he would find it impossible to live in a totalitarian state, Silvert proceeds to explain the need for democracy through his personal observations and his synthesis of an interesting array of sources. Though the book is well written, the inclusion of Chapter 3 is awkward, because its specific emphasis on Latin America contrasts with the general approach of the rest of the work. Recommended for academic libraries supporting graduate courses in political science.—Marcie Stevenson Kingsley, Univ. of North Carolina Lib., Greensboro

Psychology&Psychiatry

Cohen, David. Psychologists on Psychology.

Taplinger. Apr. 1977. 359p. bibliog. LC 76-11687. ISBN 0-8008-6557-X. $12.95; pap. ISBN 0-8008-6558-8. $6.50. PSYCH

Why is so little written on the psychology of psychologists? As a partial answer to this need, Cohen has interviewed eight European and five American innovators in the field of psychology (among them Skinner, Laing, Eysenck, Chomsky), and in the process much is revealed of themselves, their research methods, and their conceptual frameworks. We learn that the kind of psychology each espouses is reflected in each of their backgrounds, that each is an evangelist for one particular point of view, that goodwill and tolerance for opposing viewpoints are usually lacking, and that concern for a philosophy of psychological methodology is notably absent in these and other eminent psychologists. The most important conclusion of this book, besides confirming the presence of the power motive in psychologists, is in the discovery that writing, i.e., post hoc theorizing, is the most enjoyable part of the process of psychological discovery, and thus it follows that most eminent psychologists are skillful writers. The journalistic immediacy of the interviews conveys this articulateness very well. The questions are rigorous, and elicit answers that will fascinate anyone interested in academic psychology or in the history of ideas. A particularly useful book for undergraduate libraries.—William Abrams, Portland State Univ. Lib., Ore.

Johnson, Stephen M. First Person Singular: living the good life alone.

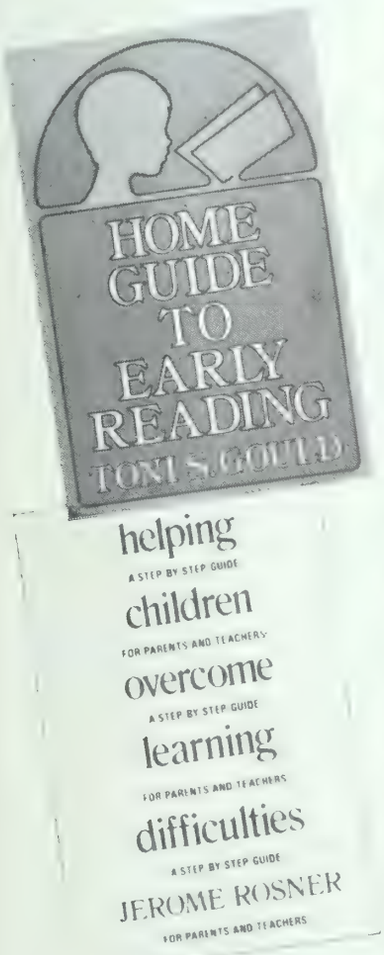
Lippincott. May 1977. 368p. ISBN 0-397-01162-8. ca. $8.95. PSYCH

A number of recent books have dealt with the legal and practical aspects of divorce, single parenthood, and living alone. Johnson is a clinical psychologist; his emphasis is on the emotional adjustments required to make single adulthood a rewarding lifestyle. The first secton of the book is about uncoupling, and identifies the pitfalls to be avoided if one is to become emotionally independent. The second section uses the techniques of behavior modification to identify the goals of autonomous adulthood and to suggest concrete steps for achieving desired personal skills. The third and longest section is devoted to establishing and nurturing new heterosexual relationships. The writing is admirable for its clarity, nonpatronizing tone, and studied avoidance of sexism. The book will provide emotional support for those who are in phases of transition or who are unhappily single.—Sally Mitchell, Milwaukee

Riegel, Klaus F. & John A. Meacham, eds. The Developing Individual in a Changing World. 2 vols. Vol. 1: Historical and Cultural Issues. Vol. 2: Social and Environmental Issues.

Aldine. (New Babylon Studies in the Social Sciences, 24). 1976. 736p. ea. vol.: illus. bibliog. index. Vol. 1, ISBN 0-202-26083-6. Vol. 2, ISBN 0-202-26084-4. set $43. SOC SCI/PSYCH

These collected papers on child development from the 1973 meeting of the International Society for the Study of Behavioral Development examine how the child is influenced by the changing social roles of children; by changing definitions of childhood; by changes in education, communication, economics, and socio-political conditions. Specific topics of immediate interest are the impact of early preschool education programs, socio-cultural deprivation, mass communications, immigration experiences, alternative family life styles and living arrangements, medical care and nutrition. There is a copious bibliography to support the 70 different papers, so that these volumes are a rich resource of new data and new syntheses of research. A valuable addition to our current thinking about how children be-



Highly recommended books on Early Childhood Education

HOME GUIDE TO EARLY READING
With Reading Readiness Games and Exercises for Your Preschool Child
by TONI S. GOULD

"...highly recommended not only for parents and nursery school teachers, but also for early intervention work with the learning-disability child."
–Library Journal

"Here Toni Gould adapts her admired classroom technique to the home so that interested preschoolers can have the option of learning to read from parents prepared to teach them." –Kirkus Reviews

With illustrations, index, and extensive bibliographies of books to read aloud and books for beginning readers.
$9.95 ISBN: 0-8027-0531-6

HELPING CHILDREN OVERCOME LEARNING DIFFICULTIES
A Step-by-Step Guide for Parents and Teachers
by JEROME ROSNER

Now in its fourth printing (26,000 copies in print), this proven guide remains the best source of clear and concise help for parents of children with learning difficulties. "The book provides parents with a clearly written practical plan of action with clear step-by-step teaching procedures for skills in reading and mathematics...." –Instructor

"A practical plan of action drawn from Rosner's extensive experience...."
–Booklist

With 300 line drawings, bibliography, and index.
$12.50 ISBN: 0-8027-0462-X

WALKER AND COMPANY • 720 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10019

British Books in Print 1976—gives you all the current bibliographic details you need to find and order over 276,000 books of all kinds from 8,700 British publishers' imprints. The books are listed in one straight alphabetical sequence of authors, titles, and subjects. Includes a directory of British publishers. Dist. in WH by Bowker.
ISBN 0-85021-095-X. ISSN 0068-1350.
LC 2-7496. 1976. 7¼" x 12". 4,701 pages.
$67.50 the 2-vol. set.

Whitaker's 3-Year Cumulative Book List 1973-1975 includes more than 103,000 books published during that period, and lists them by author and title in one straight A-Z index—even those now o.p. Dist. in U.S. by Bowker.
ISBN 0-85021-094-1. ISSN 0000-0183.
LC 25-4576. 1976. 7" x 10". 2,199 pages.
$48.50.

Verzeichnis Lieferbarer Bücher 1976/1977, Sixth Edition, the German Books in Print that provides full bibliographic data on more than 237,000 books of all kinds from over 2,100 West German, Austrian, and Swiss publishers. All books are listed in one alphabetical sequence of authors, titles, and subjects. Dist. in WH by Bowker.
ISBN 3-7657-0603-5. ISSN 0067-8899.
LC 72-142166. 1976. 8½" x 11". 4,815 pages.
$128.00 the 3-vol. set.

Italian Books in Print 1976, Second Edition Catalogo dei Libri in Commercio 1976—arranges more than 119,000 books of all kinds available from 691 Italian publishers alphabetically by author and title. Entries provide all the bibliographic data needed to find and order them. A directory of Italian publishers is included. A separate Subject Volume classifies more than 78,000 of these books under 14,000 subject headings, with finding and ordering data for each. Dist. in WH by Bowker.
Authors and Titles:
ISBN 0-8352-0972-5. 1977. 8½" x 11¾". 1,500 pages. $50.00 the 2-vol. set
Subjects: ISBN 0-8352-0976-8. 1977. 8¼" x 11¾". 700 pages. $27.00.

BOWKER INTERNATIONAL BOOKFINDER

Libros en Venta Supplement 1973 updates the 2nd edition of Libros en Venta with author, title and subject listings of Spanish-language books published in 1973. Entries provide the same bibliographic information as in the base volumes.
ISBN 0-8352-0780-3. ISSN 0075-9198.
LC 64-3492. 1975. 8½" x 11". 260 pages. $28.50 ppr.

Libros en Venta Supplement 1974 continues where the first updating of the 2nd edition left off and lists Latin American and Spanish books published in 1974. Entries are arranged by author, title, and subject and provide full bibliographic and ordering details.
ISBN 0-8352-0935-0. ISSN 0075-9198.
LC 64-3492. 1976. 8½" x 11". c. 300 pages.
$30.00 ppr.

Libros en Venta, Second Edition; is the "Spanish Books in Print" that Library Journal called "an important part of the bibliographic arsenal of any library." More than 120,000 books published through 1972 from 1,200 publishers in 24 countries are listed by author, title and subject. Distributed in the U.S., Canada, and Greenland by Bowker.
ISBN 0-8352-0682-3. ISSN 0075-918X.
LC 64-3492. 1974. 8½" x 11". 2,185 pages.
$54.00 the 2-vol. set.

Repertoire des Livres de Langue Francaise Disponibles, 2nd Edition, is the French Books in Print that Choice called "an outstanding bibliographic achievement." More than 200,000 in-print books from 4,000 French, Belgian, Swiss, and Canadian publishers are listed in 2 Author and 2 Title volumes.
Dist. in U.S. by Bowker. ISBN 2-229-00005-5. ISSN 0080-1003. 1976. 8½" x 11". 4,019 pages.
$150.00 the 4-vol. set.

BOWKER
NEW YORK & LONDON

R. R. Bowker Order Dept.
P.O. Box 1807, Ann Arbor, Mich. 48106

All orders plus shipping and handling. Sales tax added where applicable. (Prices subject to change and slightly higher outside the U.S. and its possessions.)

come adults.—E. Mansell Pattison, M.D., Dept. of Psychiatry & Human Behavior, Univ. of California, Irvine

Wachtel, Paul L. Psychoanalysis and Behavior Therapy: toward an integration.
Basic Bks. 1977. 301p. bibliog. index. LC 76-9348. ISBN 0-465-06562-7. $15. PSYCH
Convinced that psychoanalysis and behavioral therapy are not incompatible, Wachtel attempts to integrate these two apparently divergent psychological approaches in this important book. Focusing on the latent motives, thoughts, and emotions, a psychodynamic perspective can provide a keen understanding of a patient's problems. Considering manifest events and emphasizing the unlearning of maladaptive responses and the learning of more adaptive ones, a behavioral approach can provide a more precise therapeutic technique to resolve these problems. Bringing together a vast amount of literature in two different fields, Wachtel, understanding both in depth, provides an intelligent, integrative framework.—Robert N. Mollinger, Dept. of English, Nassau Community Coll., Garden City, N.Y.

Parapsychology & Occultism

Carroll, David & Barry Saxe. Natural Magic: the magical state of being.
Arbor House, dist. by Dutton. 1977. 264p. index. $9.95; pap. $4.95. OCCULTISM
Here is a book that tries to take magic out of the gypsy tea parlors and late-night TV and to restore it to a place on the path of spiritual experience, with the argument based on examples from mythology, religion, and folklore, including such topics as Taoism, aikido, and hypnosis. Obviously, "magic" is broadly interpreted. The authors include events that occur outside scientifically proven and accepted physical laws. They also examine what the existence of magic means and how an understanding of its laws may bring manifestations of unusual power. A most interesting excursion into our latent potentials.—Susan C. Curzon, Los Angeles County P.L. at South El Monte Goodman, Jeffrey. Psychic Archaeology: time machine to the past.

Putnam. 1977. 224p. ISBN 0-399-11843-8. $8.95. ARCHAEOLOGY/PARAPSYCH
Can ESP be used as an archaeological tool? It sounds harebrained, of course, but Goodman (who is trained as a geologist as well as an archaeologist) presents facts to back up his wild idea. He surveys past efforts to use "psychic archaeology" (Bligh-Bond's work at Glastonbury and that of Stefan Ossowiecki and Edgar Cayce); he describes his own excavations in Flagstaff, Ariz. guided by detailed predictions from psychic/engineer Aron Abrahamsen from Oregon and his own precognitive dreams; and he concludes with a worldwide survey of current archaeological activities in which use is made of psychics to locate promising sites. He offers valuable practical suggestions on how to work with psychics as well.—Rhea A. White, East Meadow P.L., N.Y.

Religion

Clark, Elizabeth & Herbert Richardson. Women and Religion: a feminist sourcebook of Christian thought.
Forum: Harper. 1977. 224p. ISBN 0-06-061398-X. pap. $4.95. REL
Intended primarily for classroom use, this volume collects about 20 texts largely from the history of Christianity (though Aeschylus appears) to illustrate the development of attitudes toward women. Each selection is accompanied by an introduction that puts the text in context and uses it as "an interpretive key to the rest of an intellectual position." The story is dismal, and only about a fourth of the texts are at all "feminist." The editors curiously tend to ignore the most feminist traditions in classical Christianity and emphasize such fringe movements as the "Shakers" and "Oneida Perfectionism." Footnotes lead the reader to other literature. The level is rather technical and may restrict the use of an otherwise helpful volume.—Donald W. Dayton, North Park Theological Seminary Lib., Chicago

Cleary, Thomas & J. C. Cleary, tr. from Chinese. The Blue Cliff Record. Vol. 1.
Shambhala, dist. by Random. 1977. 250p. bibliog. LC 78-146511. ISBN 0-87773-094-6. pap. $5.95. REL
The Blue Cliff Record (Pi Yen Lu) is a collection of 100 cases or koans with commentaries and appreciatory verses from the teachings of the Chinese Buddhist masters. First compiled in 1125, this collection in its Chinese and Japanese versions has been a treasury for Zen Buddhist scholarship and practice. The 35 cases comprising Volume 1 of the Cleary translation are meticulously yet gracefully rendered, and should make this classic welcome both to scholars and Zen students, and even to casual readers. A nice addition is the inclusion of biographical information about the Chinese masters.—M. V. W. Wolfe, Los Angeles County P.L. System, Huntington Park

Ferlita, Ernest, S.J. The Way of the River.
Paulist/Newman. Mar. 1977. 120p. pap. $1.95. REL
Father Ferlita traces the path of Jesus Christ on earth through a series of 30 essays. These readings discuss the joy of advent, the pain of loneliness, the bitter acceptance of pain and death. Tying all together is the symbol of the river of life: just as Christ followed the River Jordan from life in Galilee to death in Jerusalem, so, too, do we trace the river of human consciousness from our birth to death. These essays are short. Yet Ferlita, drawing on the works of philosophers, novelists, naturalists, and fellow theologians, adds a degree of thoughtfulness not usually found in "An excellent basic reference collection."

Essential for collections serving students or professionals in the fields of psychiatry, psychology, social work, pastoral counseling, and education."—Library Journal

THE AMERICAN HANDBOOK OF PSYCHIATRY Second Edition

"A must...for the comprehensive academic and public library."—Choice. Recommended by Booklist.

Volume I: The Foundation of Psychiatry
Edited by Silvano Arieti, M.D. $29.50

Volume II: Child and Adolescent Psychiatry
Edited by Gerald Caplan, M.D. $24.50

Volume III: Adult Clinical Psychiatry
Edited by Silvano Arieti, M.D. and Eugene B. Brody, M.D. $24.50

Volume IV: Organic Disorders and Psychosomatic Medicine
Edited by Morton F. Reiser, M.D. $32.50

Volume V: Treatment
Edited by Daniel X. Freedman, M.D. and Jarl E. Dyrud, M.D. $32.50

Volume VI: New Psychiatric Frontiers
Edited by David A. Hamburg, M.D. and H. Keith H. Brodie, M.D. $32.50

The Complete Set, Vols. I-VI $169.50

BASIC BOOKS, INC
10 E. 53rd St., New York 10022

Highly Recommended Columbia Titles

THE CAVE BEAR STORY
Life and Death of a Vanquished Animal
Björn Kurtén. "Kurtén has written books on dinosaurs and on Tertiary and Pleistocene faunas, but when he writes about cave bears he is in his area of expertise. Here is an excellent, absorbing, semi-popular summary of the knowledge and controversy surrounding this extinct European mammal. Topics addressed include cave bear origins, morphological specializations and habits of cave bears, sex dimorphism and size variation, human interactions, and extinction.... Though some of Kurtén's inferences can be challenged, he has produced a fine natural history and sample of paleontological interpretation." —Library Journal. Illustrated.
LC 76-3723 $9.95

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF PLANT VIRUSES
And Index to Research
Compiled and edited by Helen Purdy Beale. "This bibliography will simplify literature searches for specialists in the field of plant virology. There are more than 29,000 entries covering the literature of higher plant viruses published from 1892 to 1970, with occasional entries for lower plant viruses and pre-1892 material. The body of the work is an alphabetical listing of entries by author. Two cross-reference indexes follow, one organized alphabetically by viral genus and host, the other arranged to allow access to broader topics as they apply to individual virus genera.... For collections in virology and plant pathology and major biological libraries."
—Library Journal
LC 73-3200 $75.00

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY PRESS
Address for orders:
136 South Broadway
Irvington, New York 10533

"devotional" readings. A book that will reward meditative study.—Helen Wright, Santa Fe Springs Lib., Calif.

Kee, Howard Clark. Community of the New Age: studies in Mark's Gospel.
Westminster. (New Testament Lib.). May 1977. index. ISBN 0-665-20770-7. $15. REL
In understanding Mark, previous studies concentrated on literary and conceptual models. Kee proposes models from the realm of social history as well. His conclusions: Mark was produced just prior to the fall of Jerusalem by an apocalyptic community in southern Syria who saw in Jesus God's agent in the establishment of the community of the new covenant. Mark was written to fulfill the needs of this group whose members went about proclaiming this secret to others while awaiting God's vindication of Jesus. While this approach broadens the base for the understanding of the Gospel, the results are not as far reaching as one would expect. Lucidly written, though at times too detailed.—Sakae Kubo, Andrews Univ. Lib., Berrien Springs, Mich.

Maclay, Elise. Green Winter: celebrations of old age.
Reader's Digest, dist. by Crowell. Mar. 1977. 160p. ISBN 0-88349-122-2. $7.95. POETRY/REL
Though the 14 photos were not seen, the word pictures furnish a celebration of aging in prose poems about people Maclay has known over the years. Humor, despair, wisdom, and courage are portrayed beautifully. The shortness of the selections makes them good for devotions, meditations, and just plain reading. A lovely, loving and thought-provoking book; but the relatively high price may limit it to church and public libraries with no budget problems.—Judith R. Forester, Lansing P.L., Mich.

Pannenberg, Wolfhart. Theology and the Philosophy of Science.
Westminster. 1976. 458p. tr. by Francis McDonagh. index. ISBN 0-664-21337-5. $17.50. REL
The theological community has long been awaiting Pannenberg's full-blown statement on theology as a science. Here it is. Agreeing with such American scholars as Schubert Ogden and David Tracy, Pannenberg argues that theology is, or can be, as much a scientific pursuit as any other university discipline. Part 1 is a detailed analysis of contemporary scholarship (mostly German) on the philosophy of science; Pannenberg endorses a unity of method which links all sciences, even the long-disjuncted natural and human sciences. In Part 2 he shows how theology can adopt this method. Carrying on his criticism of most continental Protestant theology, he holds that the theses of faith are to be the hypotheses of theology. To verify these hypotheses, theology must admit the historical, future-oriented quality of human experience and it must be based on a "science of religions" not just on its own traditions. The style is turgidly teutonic, not at all helped in translation. A highly significant study, but only for specialized readership.—Paul Knitter, Dept. of Theology, Xavier Univ., Cincinnati

Rogers, Jack & others. Case Studies in Christ and Salvation.
Westminster. Apr. 1977. ISBN 0-664-24133-6. pap. $7.95. REL
Intended primarily as a college or seminary textbook, this unusual approach to Christian soteriology should nevertheless be of interest to clergy and lay reader as well. Each chapter is treated as a "case," following the model developed at the Harvard Business School which has already been applied in several other works of theology. The "cases" range from the Council of Nicaea and the Arian controversy to the most recent meeting of the World Council of Churches at Nairobi and the question of whether salvation is a matter of saving the individual person from sin through evangelism, or whether it involves saving people and nations from injustice, exploitation, and want through Christian social action. The authors are scrupulously objective and make no attempt to offer solutions. In fact, each chapter leaves the reader to draw his own conclusions as to how well the "case" was handled, and some chapters end with specific questions for the reader to ponder. There are suggestions as to how the book might be used in class, including role-playing.—Douglas S. Marsh, Memphis & Shelby County P.L., Tenn.

Saddhatissa, H. The Life of the Buddha.
Harper. Mar. 1977. 96p. illus. ISBN 0-06-067025-8. $5.95; pap. ISBN 0-06-067026-6 $2.95. REL
As with the lives of many great religious leaders, the historical events of the Buddha's 45-year ministry have been embroidered with fantasy and miracles by devoted followers. The author, himself a Buddhist monk and scholar, has consulted original sources in Sanskrit and Pali, at the same time realizing the impossibility of disentangling history from its more fanciful bedfellows. He has written a slender volume which incorporates the essential teachings of the Buddha against a backdrop of the circumstances of his life. The approach is neither romantic nor academic and quite readable and accurate. The volume will undoubtedly become a standard text for studying Buddhism, but should also be important in other areas such as oriental art and literature which deal with the Buddha, his times, and the symbolism which grew up around him.—Ruth S. Haas, formerly with Harvard Coll. Lib.

Schneidau, Herbert N. Sacred Discontent: the Bible and Western tradition.
Louisiana State Univ. Pr. 1976. 331p. illus. bibl. index. LC 75-18044. ISBN 0-8071-0181-1. $15. RE
The thesis of this book is that Western culture has been shaped by its adoption of the biblical view of nature and culture, according to which both are seen as having only relative value since God alone is absolute. Most of the book delimits this biblical view, arguing that the Bible dismantles the mythologies of the world around it, denying imm nence of the divine in nature or culture in consequence of the absolute transcendence of God. This is hardly original, but it is formulated freshly and provocatively, drawing upon current biblical exegesis and anthropology, and calls attention to a central feature of the Bible not always so clearly perceived. In his final chapter Schneidau proposes that this biblical view is the source of the critical attitudes characteristic of Western culture, chiefly by arguing that literature continues the biblical relativization of all forms. This is original and plausible, though unproven.—Terrance Callan, Dept. of Theology, Xavier Univ., Cincinnati

The Secret Garden: an anthology in the Kabbalah.

Continuum: Seabury. Mar. 1977. 256p. ed. & intro. by David Meltzer. LC 76-6524. ISBN 0-8164-9285-9. $12.95. LIT/REL

Other than S. L. Mather's Kabbalah Unveiled (Weiser, 1970. reprint.) and Gershom Scholem's translation of the Zohar (Schocken, 1963. reprint.), there has been little published of the actual texts of the truly "secret garden" of the Kabbalah, the esoteric, mystic tradition of Judaism. Finally we have an anthology of Kabbalistic literature, and what a fine one it is! Included are selections from the Shiur Qoma and the Sefer Bahir, two of the earliest Kabbalistic texts; the Hekhalot; the Zohar (previously untranslated selections); the writings of the 17th-Century "false messiah" Sabbatai Zevi; and other texts from the seventh through the 17th centuries. Selections range from the practical (permutations and combinations of Hebrew letters) to the theoretical, from mystical concentrations on images and symbols to philosophical expositions thereof. Brief commentary is given where needed. A long-awaited garden of mystic delights, indispensable to the student of the Kabbalah at any level.—Marcia G. Fuchs, Free Lib. of Philadelphia

Strassfeld, Sharon & Michael Strassfeld, comp. & ed. The Second Jewish Catalog: Sources & Resources.

Jewish Publication Society. 1976. 464p. illus. by Stuart Copans. photogs. LC 73-11759. ISBN 0-8276-0084-4. pap. $7.50. REF/REL

Like its predecessor The Jewish Catalog (LJ 5/1/74), The Second Jewish Catalog is a rich varied compendium of information about Judaism. There are guides here to rituals—circumcision, bar mitzvah, prayer—and interpretations of traditional Jewish attitudes toward contemporary human concerns—sexuality, organ transplant, abortion. There are suggestions for ways in which Jews today can enrich and personalize traditions, to give women new roles in religion, for instance, and practical advice on everything from how to choose a rabbi to how to order a Yiddish play. An addendum, "The Jewish Yellow Pages," lists in phone-book format Jewish products, services, and resources all over the U.S. and Canada. The style is lively and clear and the book is charmingly illustrated. Most exciting is the celebration of the diversity and humanity of Judaism and its compatibility with modern life.—Rita Weinberg Tesler, Dept. of English, Jersey City State Coll.

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

Barash, David P. Sociobiology and Behavior.

Elsevier North-Holland. 1977. c. 365p. fwd. by Edward O. Wilson. illus. bibliog. index. $9.95; pap. $4.95. SOC SCI/BIOLOGY

The synthesis of evolutionary biology and behavioral science as presented by Edward O. Wilson in Sociobiology (LJ 10/1/75) has precipitated much supportive and rebuttal literature. Barash's book, which supports Wilson's work, is an introductory explanation of sociobiology aimed at social science students who previously have not emphasized the genetic component of animal behaviors. Most of the subjects covered (e.g., altruism, sexual selection, territoriality) are also treated in Wilson's larger work, but Barash has extracted the kernel of each topic and has added data from his own work. While emphasizing nonhuman behavior and its value in making comparisons and testing predictions, Barash does attempt some application of sociobiology to humans. Here he is especially careful to explain areas of sociobiology that have been misconstrued or criticized. For example, he maintains that elucidation of a genetic component in a human

PUBLICATIONS FROM UNITED NATIONS

YEARBOOK OF NATIONAL ACCOUNTS STATISTICS 1975
Detailed estimates of national income and related economic measures for some 126 countries and areas. Among the many subjects covered are: gross domestic product and expenditure, distribution of the gross domestic product, composition of private consumption expenditure, government and revenue expenditure and external transactions.
3 volume set (not sold separately)
Order No.E.76.XVII.2 Clothbound $60.00

MULTINATIONAL CORPORATIONS IN WORLD DEVELOPMENT (Reprint)
Order No.E.73.II.A.11 $10.00

PETROLEUM IN THE 1970's. (Report of the Ad-Hoc Panel of Experts on Projections of Demand and Supply of Crude Petroleum and Products)
Order No.E.74.II.A.1 $8.00

REPORT OF THE WORLD FOOD CONFERENCE, ROME 5-16 NOVEMBER 1974
Order No.E.75.II.A.3 $4.00

THE DEMAND FOR WATER: PROCEDURES AND METHODOLOGIES FOR PROJECTING WATER DEMANDS IN THE CONTEXT OF REGIONAL AND NATIONAL PLANNING (Natural Resources/Water Series No. 3)
Order No.E.76.II.A.1 $10.00

A NEW UNITED NATIONS STRUCTURE FOR GLOBAL ECONOMIC CO-OPERATION
Order No.E.75.II.A.7 $7.00

WORLD ECONOMIC SURVEY—1974, Part I: Mid-Term Review and Appraisal of Progress in the Implementation of the International Development Strategy
Order No.E.75.II.C.1 $9.00

WORLD ECONOMIC SURVEY—1974, Part II: Current Economic Developments
Order No.E.75.II.C.3 $8.00

United Nations Publications
Room LX-2300
New York, N.Y. 10017

or

United Nations Publications
Palais des Nations
1211 Geneva 10, Switzerland

The Structure of the Universe
Jayant Narlikar
1977 272 pp.; 18 photos.; 94 illus.
cloth $12.00 paper (OPUS) $4.50

The Versatile Satellite
Richard W. Porter,
General Electric Company
1977 250 pp.; 43 photos. $11.00

Man in Urban Environments
Edited by G.A. Harrison and J.B. Gibson
1977 380 pp.; 67 illus. $15.75

Trees and Bushes of Europe
Oleg Polunin; with drawings by Barbara Everard
1976 224 pp. $11.50
192 pp. color illus.

History of Science

Graph Theory 1736-1936
Norman L. Biggs, E. Keith Lloyd, and Robin J. Wilson
1976 254 pp.; 2 plates; 130 figs. $21.00

Richard of Wallingford
An edition of his writings with introductions, English translation and commentary
Edited by J.D. North. ☐ This is the first critical edition of the writings of the renowned medieval mathematician and astronomer.
1976 1,340 pp. in three volumes; 24 plates; 128 figs. $158.00 the set

Linacre Studies
Essays on the Life and Work of Thomas Linacre
c. 1460-1524
Edited by Francis Maddison, Margaret Pelling, and Charles Webster. ☐ This volume brings together twelve studies of the life and work of the founder of London's Royal College of Physicians.
1977 490 pp.; 20 plates; 6 figs. $26.50

Prices are subject to change.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
200 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y. 10016

behavior pattern does not mean that such behavior is moral or proper in today's society. This clearly written, well-researched book will be valuable to informed adults and college students.—Margery C. Coombs, Dept. of Zoology, Univ. of Massachusetts, Amherst

Bova, Ben with Trudy Bell. Close Up: new worlds.

St. Martin's. Mar. 1977. 240p. fwd. by Mark Chartland. photogs., some color. index. ISBN 0-312-14490-3. $15. SCI

Bova's intention is to show what recent unmanned space probes have revealed about our own double planet, the five "wandering stars" of the ancients (Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, and Saturn), and the little-known "new worlds" beyond. Each chapter is the work of a scientist who is also a fine sf writer; each does an admirable job, and indulges in a little speculation about future explorations and uses of the planets. A final chapter summarizes the latest theories on the origin of the solar system itself. Though it does not include data from the Viking Mars landing, the book as a whole is an easily understandable, fun-to-read summary on the planets. A good bet for public libraries.—Joel Davis, Spokane County Lib., Wash.

Burnham, Frank. Cleared to Land: the FAA story.

Aero. Apr. 1977. 256p. photogs. ISBN 0-8168-4500-X. $11.95. GOVT/AERONAUTICS

The immense Federal Aviation Administration is responsible for civilian flying regulations; pilot licensing structures; aircraft certification, inspection, and safety; air traffic control; and similar functions. The growth of the FAA is recounted from the early days of powered flight through the burgeoning aviation technology of today. Much of the book is given to popular treatment of the heroics of air traffic controllers in radio communication with pilots operating under abnormal and stressful conditions. Accompanying the text are numerous photographs which did not appear in the review proofs. Recommended where there is high interest in flying.—William A. McIntyre, Laconia State Sch. Lib., N.H.

Darwin, Charles. The Collected Papers of Charles Darwin. 2 vols.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. Mar. 1977. ed. by Paul H. Barrett. fwd. by Theodosius Dobzhansky. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-226-13657-4. $40. SCI

Much biographical and historical material has already been written about Darwin's theory of evolution by natural selection. Barrett's collection of 152 of Darwin's short- to medium-length articles spanning 50 years allows Darwin to speak for himself and is a valuable addition to available editions of his larger works and collected correspondence. Included are a number of papers not listed in previous bibliographies; all of the papers retain original footnotes and have also been annotated by the editor. Darwin, both as man and scientist, is well revealed by his works. His excellent command of English, his curiosity, powers of careful observation, and critical mind, his command of a variety of subjects (geology, entomology, botany, ethology), and his modesty all are manifest. This compilation will be welcomed by Darwin students and admirers.—Margery C. Coombs, Dept. of Zoology, Univ. of Massachusetts, Amherst

Geoarchaeology: earth science and the past.

Westview. 1977. 408p. ed. by D. A. Davidson & M. L. Shackley. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-25224. ISBN 0-89158-635-0. $30.

ARCHAEOLOGY/EARTH SCI

"Geoarchaeology" is the application of the theories and techniques of the earth sciences to the investigation of archaeological sites. The 29 authors of the 23 papers in this volume (originally presented at a 1973 symposium at the University of Southampton) represent the fields of archaeology, geography, geology, geomorphology, physics, and soil science. Most of the contributors are British; some leading American researchers have been left out of this volume. Colin Renfrew's introduction reviews the study of soils, sediments, landforms, and other aspects of the physical environment in interpreting the context of a site. The first group of papers deals with field and laboratory techniques, espcially sediment recording and analysis. The second and third groups treat specific environments: coastal and lacustrine sediments, and terrestrial environments. The last set examines biological sediments, principally concerning pollen, insects, and land snails. Though these papers represent but a sampling of the stuff of geoarchaeology, they clearly demonstrate that such studies can yield rich insights into the environmental context of our knowledge of the past. Recommended for subject collections.—John Whitling Hall, Dept. of Social Sciences, Louisiana State Univ., Shreveport

Wyatt, Barb (text) & Julie Zolot (illus.). The Greasy Thumb Automechanics Manual for Women.

Iowa City Women's Pr., 116 ½ E. Benton St., Iowa City, Iowa 52240. 1976. 220p. index. pap. $5.50. TECH

If a super chip on the shoulder, a plastic spiral binding, uneven photographic quality, and amateurish pen drawings don't deter you, this could be a useful guide for the uninitiated car owner of either sex. It strikes me as reverse discrimination when the author(s) boast (rationalize?) that "The Greasy Thumb is a lesbian-produced book. Dykes wrote, illustrated, printed, and bound this book." So what? Proselytizing tracts and how-to books make unsuitable soulmates, especially if either is to reach or satisfy its intended audience. That aside and considering the low budget, The Greasy Thumb really isn't too bad. The organization is logical; the details on basic tools and how a car works are well suited for the beginner. Explanations are better than those in most be-

CORRECTION: The title of the book by Robert B. Taylor, M.D. (LJ 2/1/77) has been changed to Welcome to the Middle Years: a doctor's guide.

SCIENCE

ginner books on the subject and the author(s) have earnestly tried to write at an understandable level even though the vocabulary is not geared down to the slow reader.—Ruth E. Almeida, North County Lib., Glen Burnie, Md.

Botany & Horticulture

Elbert, Virginie F. & George A. Elbert. The House Plant Decorating Book.
Sunrise: Dutton. 1977. 243p. illus. by Mark Rabinow. index. LC 76-7411. ISBN 0-87690-220-4. $14.95.

Skelsey, Alice & Cecile Mooney. Every Room a Garden.
Workman. 1977. 336p. illus. by Tom Stoerrle. index. LC 75-20176. ISBN 0-911104-64-X. $12.95; pap. ISBN 0-91104-91-7. $6.95.
INTERIOR DEC/HORT

Although these two books both cover the basics of decorating with plants quite adequately, they are very different in their style and personality. The Elberts' book is organized in a more scholarly way, technical subjects are covered in a detailed manner, cultural requirements for over 200 plants are described with coded symbols, and the line drawings are clear and precise. The section on artificial lighting is particularly good, and overall it is an excellent resource book for those seriously interested in the subject.

The Skelsey and Mooney book, on the other hand, is organized on the basis of rooms—and this is helpful for the reader seeking specific suggestions but less so for the person wanting to learn general principles of decorating with plants. It includes sparse cultural information on about 90 plants in a plant guide set off from the rest of the book by green paper and illustrated by drawings. The book also contains a broad range of information on miscellaneous matters related to the home, such as how to make a lattice canopy, painting wooden floors, and cooking beef bok choy. It is written in a light, breezy, and encouraging manner which makes it fun to read, and it directs the reader to expert sources if he wants information in more depth.—Jane Mattes, New York

Elbert, Virginie F. & George A. Elbert. The Miracle Houseplants: the Gesneriad family.
Crown. 1976. 242p. illus., some color. index. LC 76-20478. ISBN 0-517-52532-1. $9.95; pap. ISBN 0-517-52533-X. $6.96. HORT

The Elberts have written the most inclusive book on the gesneriads to date. The African violet, episcia, columnea, and florist gloxinia—the most popular varieties—are all included, but in all, 57 different gesneriads are discussed here, in varying depth. The book begins with a brief history, then addresses general gesneriad culture and propagation, including a discussion of fluorescent gardening. Sections describing the individual gesneriads provide information on their potential as house plants and on special cultural requirements, lists of recommended species and hybrids, and, for most cases, a photograph of the plant under discussion. There is a glossary, a list of plant sources, a list of sources of house-plant supplies, and an index. The several societies specializing in gesneriads are mentioned frequently, but no addresses are given. In sum, this is a valuable addition to most collections, and one which should make this family of plants even more popular.—Marilyn Chandler, Brooklyn P.L.

Straub, Pat. From the Loving Earth.
Sunrise: Dutton. 1977. intro. by Eric Hoffer. index. LC 76-18710. ISBN 0-87690-226-3. pap. $5.95. HORT

The wife of the governor of Oregon here writes about her experiences as an amateur gardener. She treats the basics of organic vegetable gardening in limited depth. Information is accurate in most respects, although an occasional error or oversimplification reminds us that the author is not an expert. Furthermore, some of the practices she details are limited in applicability to the climate of the Northwest. Public libraries needing additional basic books on the subject will find this a good secondary purchase at a reasonable price.—Gordon S. Wade, Carroll P.L., Iowa

Health & Medicine

Bean, Constance A. Labor and Delivery: an observer's diary; what you should know about today's childbirth.
Doubleday. 1977. LC 76-18333. ISBN 0-385-11249-1. $6.95. HEALTH

Bean, a childbirth educator, observed many births in hospitals and homes and recorded with admirable objectivity the wide variations in the course of each labor based on experiences and attitudes of the mother, her birth attendants, and the place in which she chose to deliver, and on the uniqueness of the labor itself. Careful explanations in lay terms of many medical procedures are most helpful. The author studiously avoids generalizing about births. The resultant picture is realistic and useful to prospective parents. This is neither a teaching text nor a consumer's guide, but the message is clear that one must take the responsibility for choosing the kind of birth experience one wishes.—Elizabeth M. Johnson, R.N., Lamaze Childbirth Assn., Columbus, Ohio

Biermann, June & Barbara Toohey. The Diabetic's Sports and Exercise Book: how to play your way to better health.
Lippincott. Mar. 1977. 256p. photogs. index. ISBN 0-397-01115-6. $10.95. pap. $5.95.
HEALTH

This is the third book on how to cope with diabetes written by these authors, one of whom is a diabetic herself. Of the three elements of diabetes control—diet, medication, and exercise—Biermann and Toohey argue that exercise is most often neglected by the medical profession. After interviewing more than 150 diabetics (some of them professional athletes) the authors became convinced that regular physical activity can often decrease the amount of insulin needed, promote a sense of well-being, and prevent cardiovascular problems associated with the disease. Written in an intimate, conversational style, their book also offers helpful suggestions for how to prepare for insulin

We at Johns Hopkins are pleased to publish the work of Resources for the Future, a private non-profit organization established in 1952 to study all facets of humankind's relationship to the natural environment.

Long before ecology became a fashionable word and twenty years before the OPEC crisis, the staff of RFF was devoting careful attention to both the quality of our environment and the quantity of our resources. They focus on the basic resources — land, water, minerals, and air — and the goods and services derived from them. The relationship of population and economic growth to the environment and resource use is a prime concern.

Some fifteen new RFF publications are issued annually — both books and interim working papers aimed to make current research available quickly. A few recent examples:

Forests for Whom and for What? by Marion Clawson. "A sound, worthwhile study . . . essential reading for those concerned with future timber supplies." — Library Journal LC 74-24399
0-8018-1698-X $11.95
0-8018-1751-X $ 3.65 paperback

Land Use and the States by Robert G. Healy. "Basic for those in government, industry, and community affairs who consider the regional impact of developments such as airports, race-tracks, power plants . . ." — Choice LC 75-37017
0-8018-1822-2 $10.00
0-8018-1823-0 $ 2.95 paperback

The Economics of Natural Environments by John V. Krutilla and Anthony C. Fisher. "Strongly recommended . . . easy style; good index; useful chapters and bibliographies." — Choice LC 74-24400
0-8018-1699-8 $16.95
0-8018-1752-8 $ 4.50 paperback

Coping with the Oil Crisis by Horst Mendershausen. "In a broad sense, the study leads the reader to realize how the energy crisis has had impacts on basic economic policies." — Public Finance LC 75-35485
0-8018-1812-5 $7.50
0-8018-1813-3 $2.95 paperback

Won't you write to us for a complete annotated publication list. We will also be glad to add your name to the mailing list to receive the RFF bulletin Resources, available three times a year without charge.

from Johns Hopkins

The Johns Hopkins University Press
Baltimore, Maryland 21218

Library Journal
recommends

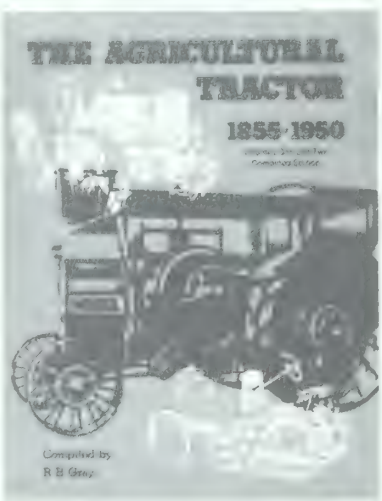
HOW WEAPONS WORK

By CHRISTOPHER CHANT

"This lucid text and fine set of illustrations should enable even the neophyte to gain an understanding of the function of the various basic types of weapons. The illustrated descriptions, including short histories of each type mentioned, are offered for such areas as small arms and ammunition, artillery, tanks, warships, aircraft, and missiles.... A thorough study that works well within its self-imposed limits, it is recommended." —Library Journal

Illustrated/
SBN: 7998-3/$14.95

HENRY Regnery COMPANY
Chicago, Illinois



The illustrated history of the development of the agricultural tractor in the U.S. Over 500 photographs and drawings are packed into this 160 page, 8½ x 11 in. soft-covered work by the late Roy Gray. The ag tractor book may well be the best reference book of its kind on the market.

ISBN 0-916150-01-1 $11.95

American Society of Agricultural Engineers
P.O. Box 410 St. Joseph, MI 49085

shock, and includes personal experiences of both the author and the interviewees. An appendix gives short profiles of the interviewees and guidelines designed to help school personnel recognize insulin reactions. Highly recommended for most libraries.—Beatrice Sichel, Western Michigan Univ. Libs., Kalamazoo

Speer, Frederic, M.D. Migraine.

Nelson-Hall. 1977. 160p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-25172. ISBN 0-88229-301-X. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-88229-467-9. $4.95. MED

Addressed to migraine sufferers, this book presents basic information on what a migraine is, how it acts, what factors precipitate its onset, and how these can be avoided. History, prevalence, mechanisms, and manifestations of the ailment are put forward, and attention is directed to the problem of migraines afflicting patients with other diseases. The presentation of factors that may precipitate a migraine underlines its multiple etiology and the difficulty that this presents in controlling or preventing attacks. Migraine remains poorly understood, but this book is a welcome addition to the limited information that migraine sufferers have at their disposal.—Beatrice J. Kalisch, Dept. of Parent-Child Health, Univ. of Michigan, Sch. of Nursing, Ann Arbor

Natural History & Zoology

Clarke, Herbert & Arnold Small. Birds of the West.

A. S. Barnes. 1976. 143p. illus., mostly color. bibliog. index. LC 70-85195. ISBN 0-498-06965-6. $30.

Lambert, Terence (paintings) & Alan Mitchell (text). Lambert's Birds of Garden and Woodland.

Scribners. 1977. 128p. color photogs. index. LC 76-21893. ISBN 0-684-14795-5. $12.50.

Lansdowne, J. F. Birds of the West Coast. Vol. 1.

Houghton. 1976. 175p. color paintings & drawings by the author. bibliog. index. fwd. by S. Dillon Ripley. ISBN 0-395-24580-X. $40. NAT HIST

The book by Clarke and Small is unusual in that the arrangement is by habitat, with color photographs and descriptions of the birds most likely to be found there. Ten different habitats of the West, ranging from the ocean and seashore to the Southwest deserts are described in some detail, and about 200 bird species are included. Unfortunately the quality of the book as a whole is poor—paper, binding, layout, photographic reproduction are all inferior—and this has done a disservice to the authors, both knowledgeable in the field and good photographers. The price is inflated and the book's value to libraries, other than inclusive Western collections, is doubtful. By contrast the Lambert and Mitchell book is distinguished by careful design, providing a suitable vehicle for Lambert's exquisite and meticulous paintings of 59 British birds. Each painting is accompanied by a brief discussion of the bird's distribution, habits and behavior. Libraries interested in good bird painting might wish to consider purchase, but its limitation to British birds will reduce its interest for general collections.

Lansdowne's fourth book of paintings is a handsome addition to his previous contributions in this field and serves to enhance his already considerable reputation. There are 52 paintings, several of which are unusual in that they show the bird in immature or eclipse plumage. The accompanying text is a nice blend of fact and personal reminiscence. A sketchbook of the preparatory drawings is included in the latter section of the book, providing insight into the way an artist works. For libraries able to afford it this book is worth the price.—Jean Boyer Hamlin, Rutgers Univ. Lib., Newark, N.J.

The Living World of Audubon Mammals by Robert Elman.

Ridge Pr./Grosset. 1976. 272p. color photogs. by Erwin A. Bauer & others. color illus. by John James Audubon. index. LC 76-432. ISBN 0-448-12459-9. $35. NAT HIST

This book consists of reproductions of 62 color plates prepared by Audubon for The Viviparous Quadrupeds of North America (1846–1854), complemented by modern photographs of the same animals. The accompanying descriptive text is brief but adequate, and the introduction provides a short biography of Audubon. The juxtaposition of 19th-Century paintings and 20th-Century photographs makes for interesting comparisons, sometimes serving to show how accurate Audubon's observations were, at other times showing up awkwardness in posture and proportion. Useful for general collections as an introduction both to the mammals of North America and to the work of Audubon.—Jean Boyer Hamlin, Rutgers Univ. Lib., Newark, N.J.

Social Science

Banish, Roslyn. City Families: Chicago and London.

Pantheon. 1976. 181p. photogs. LC 76-9981. ISBN 0-394-49906-9. $15. PHOTOG/SOC SCI

An album of 80 London and Chicago families, recruited voluntarily, this work by a professional photographer couples posed family "sittings" with informal interviews that include the subjects' evaluations of their pictures. Banish hoped to catch "ordinary" Pimlico (London) families of broad economic and social range in their home settings; she decided to include the accompanying taped remarks upon (rightly) sensing that the photos lacked intrinsic information. Then, in an effort to be cross-cultural, she did the same with Lincoln Park (Chicago) families. The total adds up to some speculative, intuitive, and interesting commentary on a variety of people, their neighborhoods, jobs, and aspirations, which lacks either serious sociological depth that would be meaningful to the social scientist, or sustained entertainment value for the more casual reader. For $15 one gets a cursory, haphazard, and disjointed look into the lives of "the common folk" with limited-interest photographs. That's too much for any library to pay for a questionable potential audience.—Phyllis R. Poses, Queens Borough P.L., New York

Brain, Robert. The Last Primitive Peoples.

Crown. 1976. 288p. photogs., some color. bibliog. index. LC 76-7230. $14.95. ANTHROPOLOGY

For Brain, a well-known anthropologist, the term "primitive" indicates a society that is personal and small-scale, living simply in a generally less-than-favorable ecological niche. In accordance with this broad definition and with the author's desire to record quickly-vanishing modes of existence, the scope of the book is worldwide. In addition to predictable inclusions, there are profiles of the cultures of Appalachian mountaineers, European gypsies, and others not commonly called "primitive." The result is an original celebration of cultural heterogeneity. The numerous color plates and maps and the attractive book design will please most readers. Admittedly, the broad scope yields several problems—too many lists, and profiles too brief to be very informative. Further, some will object that social structure and rituals are described at the expense of adequate coverage of subsistence techniques. Still, this book is more scholarly, comprehensive, and well-illustrated than Rupert Furneaux's Primitive Peoples (LJ 9/1/76), and more objective than Robin Clarke and Geoffrey Hindley's The Challenge of the Primitives (LJ 4/1/76). Recommended for public and larger secondary school libraries.—Christine M. Roysdon, Lehigh Univ. Libs., Bethlehem, Pa.

Bujak, Adam (photogs.) & Marjorie B. Young (text). Journeys to Glory.

Harper. 1976. 201p. bibliog. LC 76-9953. ISBN 0-06-069732-6. $15; pap. ISBN 0-06-069733-4. $5.95. PHOTOG/CUSTOMS

This awesome collection of nearly 150 photographs records the observance of eight virtually undocumented religious festivals which draw thousands of pilgrims to remote areas of Poland throughout the Christian liturgical year. Bujak, himself a Pole, has taken great care, not only to capture the varied details and tone of these festivals, but to preserve their present form of existence: he has left the actual sites unnamed, and before taking pictures, he shared the life of his subjects, so that his photographs are the expressions of a participant rather than a bystander. Young's accompanying text describes the sequence of each celebration, including descriptions of vestments, portions of prayers or chants recited, and some historical background. The fascinated reader will probably wish for an occasional interview with a participant. But it is left to the starkly splendid black-and-white photographs to reveal the deepest emotions of their subjects as they join together in experiencing the mysteries of life, death, and resurrection. This book is, indeed, a unique celebration of the human spirit transcending time and place, and it will be of special interest both to laypersons and scholars.—Joan W. Gartland, Univ. of Detroit Lib.

SOCIAL SCIENCE

Coffin, Margaret M. Death in Early America: the history and folklore of customs and superstitions of early medicine, funerals, burials, and mourning.

Thomas Nelson. 1976. 252p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-7513. ISBN 0-8407-6482-0. $7.95. CUSTOMS

This book is a haphazard, anecdotal compendium of customs and superstitions connected with various aspects of death; there is no analysis of the material presented. The first chapter enumerates reasons for early death and offers a few remarks on the development of the medical profession in America; succeeding chapters discuss such topics as funeral customs, places of burial, gravestones, epitaphs, and mourning customs. There are many black-and-white photographs of old gravestones, coffins, and related items. Recommended only as supplemental material for public libraries.—Joan Berman, Humboldt State Univ. Lib., Arcata, Calif.

De Villiers, André, ed. English-Speaking South Africa Today: proceedings of the National Conference July 1974.

pub. for 1820 Settlers National Monument Fdn. by Oxford Univ. Pr. 1976. 387p. ISBN 0-19-570072-4. $17.50. SOC SCI

This volume contains 17 scholarly papers delivered at a conference in Grahamstown mainly concerned with analyzing South Africans speaking English as their first language. (Scant attention is given to the many leading nonwhites using English as an important, if second, tool of communication.) The essays (all but two by South Africans) are almost uniformly excellent and render a detailed picture of a group which makes up about 37 percent of all South African whites, and hence is a minority within a minority (whites comprise about 17 percent of the total population). The resulting lack of self-confidence, a theme that appears in several essays, is understandable—the numerically superior Afrikaans-speaking whites have controlled politics since 1948. Other themes: English-speakers as a group lack cohesion, but generally consider themselves different from, and superior to, Afrikaners; they are almost exclusively urban and tend to dominate commerce and industry; they harbor much guilt about apartheid, but few are willing to take effective action to change it (many rationalize by saying apartheid was devised by Afrikaners, even though English-speakers played an early and leading role in institutionalizing segregation). The volume contains much statistical material not readily available elsewhere. Strongly recommended.—Thomas F. Hirsch, New York

Halebsky, Sandor. Mass Society and Political Conflict: toward a reconstruction of theory.

Cambridge Univ. Pr. 1976. 309p. index. LC 75-18118. ISBN 0-521-20541-7. $19.95; pap. ISBN 0-521-09884-4. $6.95. POL SCI/SOC SCI

Since the eruption of the masses onto the stage of world history at the time of the French Revolution, many social theorists have been concerned with little other than popular impact upon

AMERICA'S #1 INDUSTRY GETS A THOROUGH EXAMINATION

For dollars spent and sheer size, health care is the nation's largest industry. Now students can find a truly interdisciplinary look at our health care system in one comprehensive volume, THE SOCIOLOGY OF HEALTH CARE.

THE SOCIOLOGY OF HEALTH CARE
DARRYL ENOS AND PAUL SULTAN

Darryl Enos and Paul Sultan present an in-depth socio-economic analysis of the health care system as a whole and of its diverse components, from doctor-patient relations to health care for minorities. And they discuss health maintenance in terms of modern medicine as it relates to such critical issues as malpractice and national health care insurance.

Essential for students in a variety of fields from the social sciences to pre-med, THE SOCIOLOGY OF HEALTH CARE is destined to become the standard work in its field.

320 pp. LC 76-17250
ISBN 0-275-56970-5 $12.00

PRAEGER PUBLISHERS
/A Division of HOLT, RINEHART AND WINSTON, CBS Publishing Group

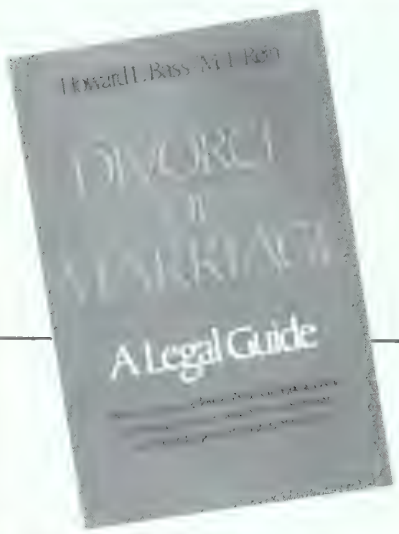
The rise and fall of the SLA: a riveting, behind-the-headlines report!

The Voices of Guns

By VIN McLELLAN & PAUL AVERY

"In a dramatic chronicle...the background of the Symbionese Liberation Army and its emergence from a coalition of black prison inmates, Berkeley New Leftists, and alienated middle-class whites are well covered, but the real center of interest is a detailed relation of the astounding coup de guerrilla theater in which the army abducted Patricia Hearst, allegedly converted her, gained enormous publicity, and eventually destroyed their own movement."—The Booklist. Photos, index.
SBN: 399-11738-5. YA. $14.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016



"VALUABLE"

DIVORCE OR MARRIAGE:
A Legal Guide
by Howard L. Bass and M. L. Rein

". . . chapters on taxation, choosing a counsel, and attorneys' fees are particularly valuable . . . What is also unique is the stress on the psychological damage . . . of divorce and separation . . . Recommended for all libraries serving the general public."
— Library Journal (December 15, 1976)

ISBN 0-13-216390-0 CIP $9.95

Prentice-Hall
General Book Marketing Div.
Box 500, Englewood Cliffs, N.J. 07632

political, social, and cultural life. Halebsky has bravely undertaken the complex and difficult effort to reconstruct the enormously influential theory of mass politics and to criticize its partner, pluralist theory. Concentrating on the conservative (as distinct from the Marx-to-Mills radical) version of the theory, Halebsky's success lies not in any original insight but in his ability to pull together a variety of critical strands and research findings into an effective if turgidly written critique that, in good post-Vietnam/student movement fashion, sees radical movements as being a rational, cognitive, and interest-based response to objectively inadequate social circumstances and elite failure. He thus focuses on social structural variables, differential resource distribution, and dynamic historical processes to set aside the picture of radical movements as the work of anomic crazies. An important theoretical building block.—Henry J. Steck, Dept. of Political Science, SUNY at Cortland Horowitz, Irving Louis. Ideology and Utopia in the United States, 1956-1976.

Oxford Univ. Pr. 1977. 464p. index. LC 76-9252. ISBN 0-19-502106-1. $17.95; pap. $5.95.
SOC SCI

In this collection of essays written over the last 20 years, Horowitz examines a wide range of the critical issues of the recent past. Analyzing subjects from Presidential politics to economics, ecology, and the changing class structure of America, he illuminates the distortions and despair all too common in our society and institutions. Indeed, Horowitz calls the theme of the book "The American Experience with Political Tragedy." Perhaps the collection's most appealing piece is its final and most recently written essay, "The Evolution of Falling Expectations," which shows how the problem of the scarcity of resources is in direct conflict with the rising demands of have-nots both here and around the world. Rich in insight and wit, this is a worthy addition to most subject collections.—Michael Fenenbock, Washington, D.C.

Lande, Nathaniel. Mindstyles–Lifestyles: a comprehensive overview of today's life-changing philosophies.

Price/Stern/Sloan. 1976. 495p. color illus. by Corita Kent. intro. by Hans Selye. bibliog. index. LC 76-10562. ISBN 0-8431-0409-0. $19.95; pap. $7.95.

Radl, Shirley L. & Carol A. Chertkovich, eds. . . . And the Pursuit of Happiness.

Metamorphosis Pr., 220 Miramonte Ave., Palo Alto, Calif. 94306. 1976. 224p. illus. LC 76-40845. pap. $9.
PARAPSYCH/SOC SCI

These two cover nearly the same ground, with sections on the mind, the body, sex, new consciousness techniques, alternative lifestyles, the occult, etc. Happiness, with its large format and hip informality, has a slightly feminist slant and a cheery personal style. Each section includes pieces about groups, movements, and processes, with emphasis on delightfully readable book reviews. Addresses for contacts are interspersed and there is a brief subject index.

Mindstyles is more formal, with a heavier style, in two-column book format enlivened by graphics and several colorful Corita Kent illustrations. There are interviews with people like John Lilly, Bucky Fuller, and Barbara Brown, and capsule data on almost every school of psychotherapy and its leader. An annotated list of groups appears at the end, along with a brief bibliography and index of topics. This one fits better on the shelf and will appeal to the more serious reader, while Happiness, though floppy, is lots more fun. I just wish both indexes were more complete.—Jeanne S. Bagby, Tucson P.L., Ariz.

Urban Administration: management, politics, and change.

National Univ. Pubs: Kennikat. 1976. 385p. ed. by Alan Edward Bent & Ralph A. Rossum. index. LC 76-17078. ISBN 0-8046-7106-0. $18.50; pap. ISBN 0-8046-7109-5. $8.95.

Urban Governance and Minorities.

Praeger. (Special Studies in U.S. Economic, Social, & Political Issues). 1976. 220p. ed. by Herrington J. Bryce. LC 75-44875. ISBN 0-275-23500-9. $18.50.
URBAN AFFAIRS

Urban Administration is a collection of 19 articles that gives expression to the various functional, structural, and political problems in the cities of the U.S. today. The first section treats the role of the urban administrator in labor relations, fiscal responsibilities, and human services; the second deals with political processes, community power, citizen participation, and social change, with stress placed on the conflict between the need for such change and political expediency. Highly recommended for academic and public libraries.

The second volume consists of papers from a Public Policy Forum held in Washington in 1975. Of particular note are the pieces by Bryce et al., Thomas Pettigrew, Ray Bahl and Alan Campbell, Seymour Sacks, and Kenneth Gibson. The volume suffers from the inclusion of comments or observations made by forum participants that are superficial and of no interest to the reader. On the whole, the volume is suitable for most academic libraries.—Benjamin N. Levy, Dept. of Urban Studies, Southern Connecticut State Coll., New Haven

Wilkinson, Doris Y. & Ronald L. Taylor, eds. The Black Male in America: perspectives on his status in contemporary society.

Nelson-Hall. 1977. 322p. bibliog. index. LC 76-44310. ISBN 0-88229-227-7. $17.50; pap. ISBN 0-88229-409-1. $8.95.
SOC SCI

A collection of essays (most of which have been published elsewhere) by professional academicians, this work seeks to rescue the black American male from the Moynihan report. Most of the articles suggest that black men are not simply defeated or disturbed, but rather complex human beings often reacting positively to very difficult circumstances. The contributions are quite uneven in quality, and much of the book is riddled with unreadable sociological jargon. A short annotated bibliography of the subject would have sufficed.—Anthony O. Edmonds, Dept. of History, Ball State Univ., Muncie, Ind.

SOCIAL SCIENCE

Law & Criminology

Hurst, James Willard. Law and Social Order in the United States.

Cornell Univ. Pr. Apr. 1977. 320p. bibliog. LC 76-28015. ISBN 0-8014-1063-0. $15. SOC SCI/LAW

The dean of American legal historians recapitulates the major themes of his life-long preoccupation with the relationship between law and society in this masterly overview of the subject. The continuing and unresolved tension between our "Constitutional Ideal" that all significant power be held publicly accountable and our practice of encouraging largely unchecked agglomeration of private corporate power is what lies at the heart of Hurst's concerns. His book is expressly designed to stimulate further scholarship into central (though neglected) questions of social and legal history and often purposefully raises more questions than it answers. Whether viewed as guide or reference (there are 25 pages of rich bibliography), Hurst overwhelmingly documents our belief that law—its processes and history, its concerns and neglects—is an invaluable index to knowledge of the American condition and character. Hurst richly demonstrates that law is more than just a handful of Supreme Court decisions; it encompasses the totality of our attempt to build a society both wealthy and just.—Isidore Silver, Dept. of History, John Jay Coll. of Criminal Justice, CUNY

McLauchlan, William P. American Legal Processes.

Wiley. (Viewpoints on American Politics.). 1977. 240p. index. LC 76-26579. ISBN 0-471-58560-2. $10.95; pap. ISBN 0-471-58561-0. $6.95. LAW

McLauchlan's overview of judicial procedure presents models of civil and criminal processes and notes the usual deviations. In discussing courts of lesser jurisdiction (such as small claims and traffic courts), appellate procedure, the environment in which courts operate, and the effects of judicial decision, he raises important issues, such as the propriety of plea bargaining and the means by which court decisions are communicated to the public. On balance, however, this book cannot be recommended. The material is not always accurate (e.g., a chart in which concluding arguments and instructions to the jury are placed at the post-trial stage) or up-to-date (McLauchlan mentions proposals to provide compensation to crime victims, apparently unaware that such systems are already in operation in a number of states). In addition, McLauchlan does not write well; his grammar, diction, and syntax are frequently deplorable.—Jack Ray, Loyola-Notre Dame Lib., Baltimore

Scull, Andrew T. Decarceration: community treatment and the deviant: a radical view.

Prentice-Hall. 1976. 184p. bibliog. index. LC 76-40335. ISBN 0-13-197657-5. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-13-197640-0. $3.95.

Wiles, Paul, ed. The Sociology of Crime and Delinquency: the new criminologies.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. Mar. 1977. 237p. LC 76-46838. $14. CRIMINOLOGY/CORRECTIONS

Decarceration describes the inadequacies of the latest liberal method of dealing with "the mad and the bad" by discharging them from the asylums and prisons back into the community. These developments are presented by Scull as beneficial reforms; but in reality, the policy shift from incarceration to "community corrections" is based on the state's need to cut the costs of social control. Scull argues that the dangers to the community and to the deviants themselves are being ignored; he is not concerned enough with the implications of public outrage at released mental patients who act in an antisocial manner and felons who are free to walk the streets. Still, Decarceration is important sociological criticism in an area that affects us all.

The Sociology of Crime and Delinquency is a collection of readings intended to introduce British literature on the subject. Criminology in England owes much to American theories, but a distinctly British theory has begun to emerge now that sociological studies have become prominent within the field. The articles included here cover a wide range of highly fragmented disciplines. Both works are valuable for collections dealing extensively with the sociology of deviance, though the British emphasis of the Wiles book might limit its usefulness for many collections.—Vincent P. Schmidt, Cumberland Trail Lib. System, Flora, Ill.

Villasenor, Victor. Jury: the people vs. Juan Corona.

Little. Mar. 1977. ISBN 0-316-90300-0. $8.95. LAW

As a reconstructed account of the eight-day deliberations of a jury in a mass-murder trial, Villasenor's work is an exciting drama. By the nature of the situation, though, the information had to be derived solely from the jurors' memories (and only as much as they were prepared to tell)—and for that reason the accuracy of the account can be questioned. Despite this, the book is a worthwhile addition to the literature on the viability of the jury system, since it raises a variety of questions about the role of jurors and the responses of "ordinary people" to that role. It also presents a fascinating example of the type of group interaction that leads to a unanimous verdict. Good reading for law and sociology students as well as the general public.—Philippa Merriman, Lancashire Probation & Aftercare Service, England

SPORTS & RECREATION

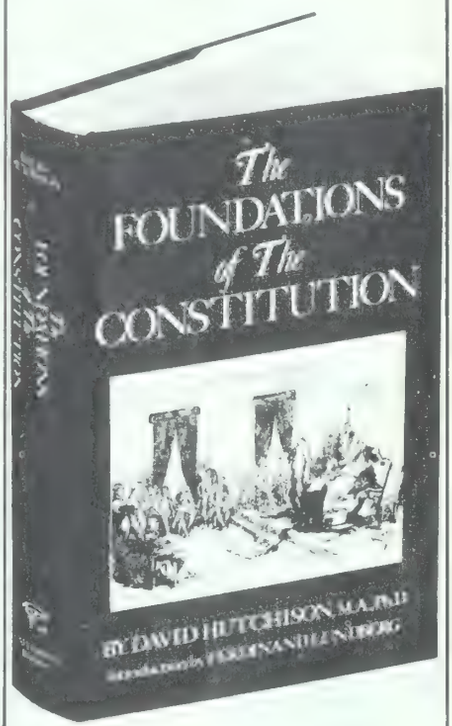
Auerbach, Arnold "Red" & Joe Fitzgerald. Red Auerbach: the man, the dynasty and the legend.

Putnam. Mar. 1977. 324p. photogs. ISBN 0-399-11893-4. $8.95. PER NAR/SPORTS

It is Fitzgerald who should be listed as the main author of this fascinating and well-written story of Auerbach and the Boston Celtics pro basketball team. Fitzgerald gives us the details of Auer-

Ferdinand Lundberg, sociologist, historian, eminent author of THE RICH AND THE SUPER-RICH, says in his introduction:

"This book provides at all times a succinct, clear, direct, and often dramatic roadway into the very bones and sinews of the Constitution of the United States. It is, indeed, a veritable treasure trove."



THE FOUNDATIONS OF THE CONSTITUTION is vital and timeless. David Hutchinson does not attempt to examine the interpretations of the document that evolved over the decades, but rather does a word-by-word, line-by-line, phrase-by-phrase dissection of it. He explains where the elements of the Constitution originated and why they were used.

Mr. Robinson was a professor of government for many years at Albany State College, now incorporated into the State University of New York.

6⅛" x 9¼", 432 pages, LC 75-2959
ISBN 0-8216-0254-3, Cloth $15.00

UNIVERSITY BOOKS
120 Enterprise Ave.
Secaucus, NJ 07094

"Simple...easy to read and understand."
—Library Journal

The Horseplayer's Guide to Picking Winners

by Bernard Gould

"By applying a simple formula to past winnings and betting two or more of the highest rated horses, while taking other factors into consideration, the bettor can win a considerable amount....The advantage this system seems to have over so many others is that it is simple and easy to read and understand. Necessary for collections that have a need for this type of book."
—Library Journal

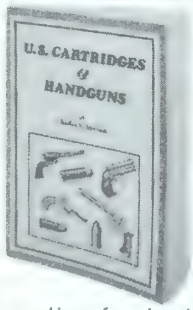
0-679-50639-X/$5.95 paper

McKAY

U.S. CARTRIDGES and their HANDGUNS

C.R. Suydam



The first book ever printed showing what gun used what cartridges. A whole encyclopedia of valuable information compiled by Charles Suydam, one of America's leading authorities on cartridges and firearms.

Important for the cartridge and gun collector as well as students in need of primary reference material on each subject. Over 350 pages, 550 illustrations.

$9.95 softback
ISBN 0-917714-07-5
$14.95 hardback
ISBN 0-917714-04-0

Beinfeld Publishing, Inc.
DEPT. LJ
13222 Saticoy Street
North Hollywood, Ca. 91605

bach's life and coaching career; Auerbach's comments follow at the end of each chapter. This arrangement works well and results in a skillfully edited account of Auerbach the man, of his coaching and training methods, and of how he literally created the Celtic dynasty. Auerbach's acerbic comments on referees add spice to one of the chapters. There are also chapters on individual stars, such as Bob Cousy and Bill Russell, and on the psychology of coaching. Well done.—Marshall E. Nunn, Glendale Coll. Lib., Calif.

Bodo, Peter & David Hirshey. Pelé's New World.

Norton. Mar. 1977. 256p. photogs. ISBN 0-393-08757-1. $8.95. BIOG/SPORTS

Recent books on Pelé are numerous. The authors of this one, sportswriters who have covered soccer and traveled with the New York Cosmos for several years, tell Pelé's story of how he came to New York, some of his life before, and much of his life during and after, including the peculiar world of American soccer. Don Kowet's Pelé (LJ 4/15/76) for the young adult, Joe Marcus' Pelé (LJ 4/15/76) for the reader of biography, François Thébaud's The World of Pelé (LJ 9/15/76) for the soccer fan, and now this title expressing some of Pelé's own words and thoughts. All portray Pelé simply as a believer. He remained this way through all the publicity that surrounded him. He was both a missionary and millionaire, and he wanted to popularize soccer in the last country to resist its mass appeal. Bodo and Hirshey show us how Pelé proceeded to accomplish his mission.—Kathleen J. Voigt, Univ. of Toledo Libs., Ohio

Brown, Jim. Tennis Without Lessons.

Prentice-Hall. 1977. 159p. bibliog. illus. index. LC 76-18801. ISBN 0-13-903252-5. $8.95. SPORTS

Brown's thesis is that you can learn to play tennis without formal instruction by reading his book and applying the principles therein. Perhaps the dedicated, superior athlete can, but most will need the pro. Aside from that, Brown has written a good book covering some topics most books aimed at this level do not cover as well, e.g. what the beginner and intermediate player can learn by watching tennis and by reading about it (although his bibliography contains several misspellings). The sections on strategy and intelligent play are good. Recommended.—David Peele, Coll. of Staten Island Lib., New York

Fischler, Stan. The Triumphant Islanders: hockey's new dynasty.

Dodd. 1976. 126p. photogs. LC 76-39668. ISBN 0-396-07444-8. pap. $4.95. SPORTS

The busy chronicler of pro hockey has produced another of his oversized team profiles. This one is somewhat optimistically titled since the Islanders, though very successful for an expansion team, have yet to overtake the Canadiens and Flyers as the NHL rulers. With his usual brisk enthusiasm, Fischler gives the team's history, accounts of key games, and biographies of star players, along with a flock of action photos. Active hockey collections may want to add this.—Morey Berger, Monmouth County Lib., Freehold, N.J.

Havlicek, John & Bob Ryan. Hondo: Celtic man in motion.

Prentice-Hall. 1977. 192p. photogs. LC 76-53719. ISBN 0-13-394601-0. $8.95. PER NAR/SPORTS

A major reason for the Boston Celtic's basketball success is Havlicek. Here is his life story—from his childhood in Ohio, to college excellence, to stardom in Boston Garden. The book does little to increase reader empathy with Havlicek and is often overwritten; but it is, nevertheless, readable and sometimes intriguing. It focuses on the key games, the big-name competitors, etc.; and at times, too much attention is paid to game situations. That notwithstanding, this book should be of interest to basketball buffs, especially in junior and senior high schools. For other readers, it is a marginal investment.—Curt Smith, Hamilton Coll., Clinton, N.Y.

Kopay, David & Perry Deane Young. The David Kopay Story.

Arbor House, dist. by Dutton. 1977. 400p. photogs. LC 76-29229. ISBN 0-87795-145-4. $8.95. AUTOBIOG/SPORTS

The sports world was stunned in December 1975 when Kopay, a former National Football League running back, publicly acknowledged that he was a homosexual. Tired of a life of secrecy and shame, Kopay is painfully honest about himself and the incidence of homosexuality in the NFL. The search for his "sexual identity" encompassed the years of an unhappy childhood, a stay in a junior seminary, an unsuccessful marriage, and ten seasons with the San Francisco 49ers, Detroit Lions, and other teams. The most unsettling thing about the book is the disparity between the picture of Kopay painted in the newspaper clippings quoted from his playing days and the reality of his true feelings. The comparison is jarring; the implications are ironic. How many others are leading similar double lives? Unfortunately, those who need to be convinced that homosexuality is "normal" will not be by this book. A controversial title that should be in demand.—Josephine A. DeLapo, Queens Borough P.L., New York

Potvin, Denis with Stan Fischler. Power on Ice.

Harper. 1977. 224p. ISBN 0-06-013387-2. $9.95. PER NAR/SPORTS

The star defenseman of the New York Islanders and the dean of hockey writers team up to record in easy moving style Potvin's progress from a backyard rink to the NHL's All-Star team. Raising this above the usual sports biography are Potvin's candid comments on the effects of fame and fortune on a rookie; his appraisals of Bobby Orr, Brad Park, and other players; and his attitude toward violence on ice. Recommended for active hockey collections especially on Long Island.—Morey Berger, Monmouth County Lib., Freehold, N.J.

Rosenow, Frank. The Ditty Bag Book.
SAIL, dist. by Norton. Mar. 1977. 127p. illus. by the author. index. LC 76-4286. ISBN 0-914814-05-2. $7.95. SPORTS
A ditty bag is a sailor's tool bag, and traditionally novice sailors were introduced to seamanship via the construction of such a bag. Rosenow shows you how to construct a ditty bag and at the same time, how to stitch, splice line, and wire rope, sew grommets, seize jib hanks, mend sails, and much more. The explanations are to the point, easy even for the weekender to comprehend and almost always well illustrated by the author's 90 line drawings, which are both practical and a joy to behold. Although there are other books that cover the same subjects, few, if any, can give you these kinds of tips and friendly dock-side advice.—John Kenny, San Francisco P.L.

Samson, Jack. The Sportsman's World.
Holt. 1976. 252p. photogs., mainly color. LC 76-4729. ISBN 0-03-017606-9. $16.95.
PER NAR/SPORTS
Samson has written about some of his most exciting hunting and fishing experiences from all over the world. His description of the Wyoming One-Shot Antelope Hunt is one that all sportsmen will enjoy. But this is more than a reminiscence of a life-time of hunting and fishing. At the end of the chapters are practical and informative tips on how you can accomplish what has been just described. The three appendixes (general tips, fish and game departments of the U.S. and Canada, and foreign hunting and fishing information) give sound advice or information on where to write for it. The numerous color photographs help to make a more attractive book. Though the price may keep it out of range for smaller libraries, if you can afford the luxury it's one to have.—Steve George, Yuma City-County Lib., Ariz.

Senzel, Howard. Baseball and the Cold War.
HBJ. Mar. 1977. 256p. LC 76-27427. ISBN 0-15-110693-2. $8.95. SPORTS
The third baseman of the Rochester Red Wings was shot (or at least shot at) during a regulation game in Havana at the time of the Cuban revolution, and soon afterwards American baseball left Cuba. The memory of this incident started Senzel on his odd "search for meaning, history, and baseball" that resulted in this book. How does one make coherent sense out of John Foster Dulles, Fidel Castro, the Jewish community in Rochester, Bob Dylan, George Sisler Jr., Vinegar Bend Mizell, and Pete Rose? Senzel doggedly, almost obsessively tries to figure out how a culture that once richly supported minor league baseball now supports only celebrity superstars, fast-food chains, and artificial grass. In the process he tries to figure out his own identity as well. Baseball and the Cold War is certainly offbeat, perhaps off-the-wall. It seems perfectly serious though, and anyone whose heart leaps up at the notion of a Cal Abrams-model fielder's glove will find the book weirdly intriguing. I was reminded in some ways of Frederick Exley's Fan's Notes, though Senzel's book isn't really in that league. Anyway, I haven't missed my baseball cards and big Stan Jok so keenly in years.—Keith Cushman, Dept. of English, Univ. of North Carolina, Greensboro

Torbet, Laura. The Complete Book of Skateboarding.
F. & W., dist. by Crowell. 1976. 119p. illus. LC 76-26710. ISBN 0-308-10266-5. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-308-10267-3. $4.50. SPORTS
Torbet covers much the same ground as was covered in Anybody's Skateboard Book (LJ 9/15/76) by Tom Cuthbertson and Rich Morrall and The Skateboard Book by Ben Davidson (LJ 10/1/76), with chapters on equipment, safety, basic and fancy board work, resources and competition. However, she adds rules for competitions, a glossary, and a real innovation—a skateboard who's who. In place of a detailed text, she uses effectively the many photos and diagrams to explain the ins and outs of skateboarding. If your library has an enthusiastic skateboarding audience, be sure to add this one.—Morey Berger, Monmouth County Lib., Freehold, N.J.

THEATER

Mazo, Joseph H. Prime Movers: the makers of modern dance in America.
Morrow. 1977. 225p. photogs. bibliog. index. $12.50. DANCE
Mazo has chosen to concentrate on the truly great figures of modern dance and limit his report to those who have made important contributions to a traceable line of development from the 1890's to the present. Loie Fuller, Isadora Duncan, Ruth St. Denis, Ted Shawn, Doris Humphrey, Martha Graham, Merce Cunningham, Alwin Nikolais, Alvin Ailey, Paul Taylor, and Twyla Tharp are discussed in detail. Others are discussed in relationship to them; and some big topics, such as the dancing of black Americans, are touched on in passing. Mazo has not been content to give us the same old facts and conclusions. His research was obviously carefully done, and he uses his facts to tell a lively story. A stimulating book. —George Louis Mayer, N.Y.P.L.

Payne, Ben Iden. A Life in a Wooden O: memoirs of the theatre.
Yale Univ. Pr. 1977. 250p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-48988. ISBN 0-300-02064-3. $12.50.
MEMOIR/THEATER
Producer, director, and educator, Payne is remembered best for his "modified Elizabethan staging" of Shakespeare. This is more than a memoir, for Payne's career—from his Manchester (England) debut in 1898 to his retirement from the University of Texas in 1973—spans an epoch of growth and discovery in Western theater. Beyond discussing his experiments with fluidity of action in Shakespearean productions, Payne sheds light on those with whom he shared "life in a wooden O"—Yeats, Shaw, Frank Ben-

From its origins as a fifth-century war game to the Fischer-Spassky cliff-hanging contests of the 1970s...

CHESS
A History

By Harry Golombek

"Concise and readable...long on factual data, not to mention photos of famous players and famous chess sets. Numerous well-known games are included. ...Attractive in appearance, this is a book of general interest as background to the game and is suitable for libraries." —Library Journal. 8" x 10". Index. Illustrated with 32 full-color plates and 160 black-and-white photos & diagrams.
SBN: 399-11575-7. $16.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

"Orderly...informative ...useful...and worth every cent." —Library Journal

Ocean Yacht Navigator

by Kenneth Wilkes

"An orderly format, a refreshing clarity in writing about a difficult subject, and informative illustrations define this useful book....Of interest to novice and advanced navigators, and worth every cent." —Library Journal. Illustrated. Indexed.

0-679-50636-5/$9.95

Write today for our free, illustrated catalog of useful nautical books.

McKAY

"Miles above the usual trivia about the movies"*

Ginger, Loretta and Irene Who?

By GEORGE EELLS
Author of Hedda and Louella

Ginger Rogers, Miriam Hopkins, Ruth Etting, Loretta Young, Kay Francis, Irene Bentley—all had talent, looks, and driving ambition to make it to the top. Here's what happened when they did. "Perfectly chilled, dry, topshelf movie writing and that rare book you hate to finish." —Kirkus Reviews. "Remarkable for insight and candor." —Publishers Weekly.* "General readers taken with the glitter and heartbreak that was Hollywood...should find pleasant reading here."—Library Journal. Photos. Index.
SBN: 399-11822-5. $9.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

RECOMMENDED

"This story of intrigue at the court of the son of Mary, Queen of Scots . . . turns out to be an engaging and instructive excursion through the serpentine practices of politics and religion . . . along with a love story . . . An intelligent, witty rendition."
—Kirkus Reviews

ISBN 0-394-40042-9
LC 76-14194 $8.95

THE KING JAMES VERSION
by Stanley Stewart

RANDOM HOUSE
201 E. 50th St., New York, N.Y. 10022

RECOMMENDED

son, William Poel, Miss Horniman, and the Barrymores. Recommended for all serious theater and Shakespeare collections. (The index, bibliography, and pictures were not seen by this reviewer.)—Chuck Broadbent, Ursinus Coll. Lib., Collegeville, Pa.

Siegel, Marcia B. Watching the Dance Go By.
Houghton, Apr. 1977. 328p. illus. index. $12.95.
DANCE

This collection of reviews and articles will be of special value to libraries since the pieces are reprinted from a dozen newspapers and magazines which only the most avid dance fan could have seen and which only the largest library could produce for readers in their original form. And brought together, they do make a book. Siegel has a gift for describing dances so that a reader who has not seen them can get an impression of what they looked like. Her critical standards are high and she is tough on dancers, choreographers, and companies that do not achieve or maintain high performance standards. Both ballet and modern dance are covered; and the reports on the recent activities of Graham, Cunningham, Tharp, and others are of special interest and value.—George Louis Mayer, N.Y.P.L.

Stoppard, Tom. Dirty Linen and New-Found-Land.
Grove, dist. by Random. 1977. 75p. LC 76-45521. ISBN 0-8021-0130-5. $6.95; pap. $2.95.
THEATER

Travesties established Stoppard as a master of verbal gymnastics. Words roll and tumble from the tongues of his characters in so many finely articulated witticisms. But Stoppard's recent works—all surface polish—are hollow at the core; they are simply intellectual exercises. His two latest plays are examples of the playwright's dramaturgical decorativeness. Dirty Linen is about an investigation of sexual indiscretion in high government, and New-Found-Land is virtually an ode to the American landscape. Filled with foreign phrases, word plays, and cultural allusions, they also provide much sexual titillation. All of which pleases middle-brow audiences. There are many more worthy contemporary British playwrights.—Bonnie Marranca, "Performing Arts Journal," New York

Cinema

Barsacq, Léon. Caligari's Cabinet and Other Grand Illusions: a history of film design.
New York Graphic Society: Little. 1976. 264p. rev. & ed. by Elliott Stein. fwd. by René Clair. photogs. bibliog. index. LC 75-27222. ISBN 0-8212-0620-6. $19.95. CINEMA

Except for those in opulent spectaculars, film sets generally go unnoticed. Yet, as this book amply demonstrates, sets affect virtually all other aspects of film making and are often crucial to a film's intent. Barsacq structures his history of sets upon a convenient dichotomy expressed by the earliest French film makers: Lumière who sought to recreate reality, and Méliès who sought to create the fabulous. With the knowledge of a practitioner, Barsacq illuminates the problems of providing sets for various film genres and under varying conditions, such as using color film or achieving special effects. Originally published seven years ago in France, the text has been updated for its first U.S. publication and provided with a useful designers' filmography. Lavishly illustrated with superb photographs, this book is absolutely indispensable to any serious cinema collection.—Charles Michaud, Brockton P.L. System, Mass.

fiction

Annandale, Barbara. The Bonnet Laird's Daughter.
Coward. 1977. 275p. LC 76-25900. ISBN 0-698-10781-0. $8.95. F

Although it begins awkwardly, this light historical romance is saved by a fairly galloping plot. Fictional characters Margaret Menteith and her Gavin Napier are admirably fleshed out, but real-life personages such as Dr. Johnson, Michael Arne, John Paul Jones, etc., generally come off less well. The famous David Garrick and Dr. Franklin fare better. The color in the French, English, and Scottish settings is hinted at, with people more in focus. Late 18th-Century intrigue is adequately portrayed. The work, too, is adequate, but not essential for medium and large public libraries.—Judith R. Forester, Lansing P.L., Mich.

Bainbridge, Beryl. A Quiet Life.
Braziller. Mar. 1977. 156p. ISBN 0-8076-0846-7. $7.95. F

A Quiet Life is a minor work but involving because of superb characterizations of some essentially dull people. Alan meets his sister Madge to divide a slim inheritance after their mother's death. In a long flashback, he recalls a period of family strife just after World War II and just before their father died. Bainbridge's portrait of this "close family," separated by misunderstanding and an almost amusing lack of communication, is nicely done. Alan misperceived the people he loved then and misperceives them still; that final irony has a quiet impact. Not a distinctive novel, but attractive enough; it should appeal to readers who like low-keyed British fiction.—Janet Wiehe, P.L. of Cincinnati & Hamilton County

Bredes, Don. Hard Feelings.
Atheneum. 1977. ISBN 0-689-10745-5. $8.95. F

In most respects Bernie Hergruter is your average American (circa 1963) 16-year-old boy. He enjoys sports, daydreams endlessly about sex, curses like a longshoreman, and waters down beer with ice in order to kill the taste. But Bernie has a problem in the person of Richard Linwood, a demented playmate with a fondness for switchblades, firearms, and assorted Nazi memorabilia. For no expressed reason, Richard is out to dismember or otherwise make

LIPPINCOTT

"A marvelous, complicated, absorbing book." — New York Times Book Review

POLONAISE

Piers Paul Read

"The novel is well named after the spirited dance. Read's characters whirl through sexual escapades, the Spanish Civil War, flight from the Russians, and a jewel theft, and the reader has little inclination to put down the book." — Library Journal. "A vivid portrayal of pre-World War II Poland. . . . Read delivers an explicit novel with transcendent levels of meaning and perversity." — Booklist

LC 76-15306

ISBN 0-397-01150-4 $10.00

J. B. Lippincott Company
East Washington Square
Philadelphia, Pa. 19105

life miserable for young Bernie; and our likable hero fights back as best he can—by relying on luck and the fervent belief that he is smarter than his foe. Prior to the climactic confrontation between the two youths, Bernie runs away from home, befriends two ghetto-schooled Blacks, falls in and out of love, saves the day for the varsity tennis team, and variously depicts the joys and disappointments of young adulthood. Bredes has written a better than average novel which deserves a wide audience.—Philip M. Fragasso, Lucius Beebe Memorial Lib., Wakefield, Mass.

Cookson, Catherine as Catherine Marchant. The Slow Awakening.

Morrow. 1977. 281p. LC 76-42259. ISBN 0-688-03136-6. $8.95. F

An orphan of mysterious origins, who is sold to a tinker at 14 and mother of his unwanted child at 15, Kirsten MacGregor is the naïve pivotal figure in this novel of rural England circa 1850. When the child of the local lady of the manor is stillborn, Kirsten's boy is surreptitiously substituted, and she is installed as his nurse. With this basic plotting over, the author proceeds, smoothly, to investigate Kirsten's relationships with the arrogant master of the manor, his silly, ineffectual wife, and the warm, loving Flynn family, who happen to be the master's enemies. This is an historical mood novel, heavy on character development. Good reading for a rainy night.—Carol A. Zajchowski, Bay Area Reference Center, San Francisco P.L.

Darcy, Clare. Eugenia.

Walker. 1977. 244p. LC 76-39591. ISBN 0-8027-0556-1. $8.95. F

A dashing romance in Darcy's usual engaging style, this novel concerns a headstrong girl who rescues a long-lost cousin from the Bow Street Runners, then proves his legitimacy, thus insuring him an inheritance, and of course marries him. Fast-paced and lots of fun; one of Darcy's best.—Melanie Axel-Lute, Montclair P.L., N.J.

Delbanco, Nicholas. Possession.

Morrow. 1977. 188p. $8.95. F

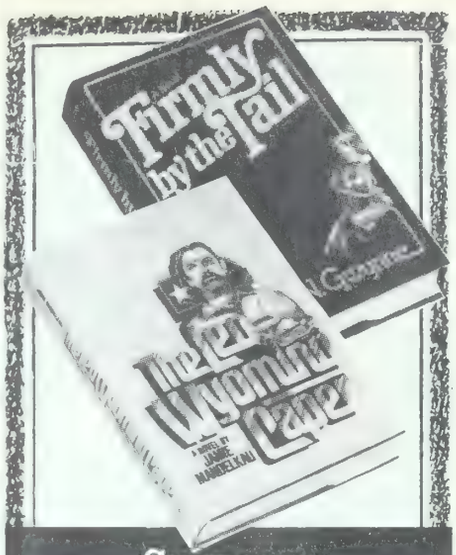
This is Delbanco's eighth book, and his errors are ingrained; he may be fond of them; why else would they be so frequent and so persistent from book to book? From spelling ("tieing") to diction ("he sang it with a plangent grace") to verbal numbness ("It made for them; she made out a man at the wheel") to the exasperating broken rhythms of redundant obviousness ("she had felt, perceptibly, relief"), he continues to indulge in arty carelessness at the expense of story, characters, and readers. He replaces drama with interminable summaries: "It is suspension's welter that she fears—the moment (known so quickly, unmistakable) when the grasp and reach go fuzzy, when her fingers are too fat or weak to catch what she herself has thrown . . ." The novel heaps flashbacks on one day in the life of a rich old gentleman farmer. It is a Vermont ver-

Duchess

Josephine Edgar

"An indisputably appealing romance...head and decollete shoulders above others of its kind."—Kirkus Reviews (11/1/76). "This rags-to-riches romance set in late Victorian London is delightful and cheerful reading."—Library Journal (2/1/77). 288 pp.
ISBN 0-312-22085-5 $8.95

St. Martin's Press
175 Fifth Avenue
New York 10010



Suspense delightfully spiced with humor

FIRMLY BY THE TAIL

By P.N. Gwynne

"A good-humored, jaunty adventure story involving a British agent for a diamond conglomerate in a new African country recently liberated from the French. The suspense element...is only a small part of the plot. By far the most interesting part consists of a close and level scrutiny of a Franco-African society...in a country gone hopelessly insane. The characters are splendid....A lot of highly gaudy crookery and unexpected fun."—Library Journal.
SBN: 399-11767-9. $8.95

THE LEO WYOMING CAPER

By Jamie Mandelkau

"Leo Wyoming of Yellow, Texas, is a millionaire...[and] practical joker par excellence. His latest caper is a restaging of the Kennedy assassination....Unfortunately, the assassin really assassinates and Leo is kidnapped....The unraveling of the affair, the rescue of Leo, and the disposition of the million in ransom money provide us with an extremely funny novel. The weird characters are vivid, the dialogue crisp."—Library Journal. A BERKLEY PUTNAM BOOK
SBN: 399-11882-9. $7.95

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N. Y. 10016

THE CROWELL CORNER

THE ALEXANDRIAN
by Martha Rofheart
"Rofheart's Cleopatra is...a fully delineated, fascinating and wholly sympathetic figure."
—Publishers Weekly
"A lively, enjoyable re-creation of history." —ALA Booklist
"Totally absorbing...the tragic suspense is almost more than one can bear." —LYNN FONTANNE
ISBN: 0-690-01148-2 $8.95
T.Y. CROWELL
666 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10019

"Spellbinding"*

Little Angie
Emma Cave

"This is a spellbinding tale, reminiscent of Lilith and The Collector. . . . The dashing Sir Peregrine Dunnisthorpe, lord of crumbling Fox Hall, imprisons [Angie] in a unique mènage ā trois, setting her on a regime of psychological terrorizing and erotic initiation. . . . A suspenseful interweaving of the factual and the fantastic."—Publishers Weekly
SBN 698-10806-X $7.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.
200 Madison Avenue New York 10016

sion of Stella Gibbon's Cold Comfort Farm, though not intentionally funny.—J. D. O'Hara, Dept. of English, Univ. of Connecticut, Storrs

Ducker, Bruce. Rule By Proxy.
Crown. 1977. 345p. LC 76-10217. ISBN 0-517-52662-X. $8.95. F
This novel about the law is a cross between Auchincloss' The Great World and Timothy Colt and James Gould Cozzens' By Love Possessed. Tom Swalleck's life as a practitioner is neatly portrayed: he works for a prestigious Midwestern law firm, leaves for an up-and-coming but ruthless Charles Schine, is fired for not bringing in the family business, becomes an expert on securities matters and, finally, in letting his conscience be his guide too late, finds his future very much less than secure. The novel, qua novel, is not particularly good, but what does sustain the reader is the lawyer's role in corporate shenanigans known as mergers, takeovers, tender offers, and proxy contests.—E. J. Bander, NYU Law Lib.

Egan, Ferol. The Taste of Time.
McGraw. Mar. 1977. LC 76-48209. ISBN 0-07-019050-X. $9.95. F
At the age of 70 Jed Wright, widower and farmer, decides in 1859 to make the trip West he had longed to undertake ten years earlier. During the journey he teams up with two young men and a Chinese aristocrat. He also marries a young Indian girl with a gold-mine claim. Before striking gold he becomes involved with Mormons, gunfighters, and a delightful gallery of characters ranging from frontier saloon keepers to hungry Indians. The author has a real feeling for the time and place of these adventures, and the result is a warm, often exciting blend of character and incident. A most enjoyable book, suitable for YA's. The only discordant note is the price.—Robert H. Donahugh, Youngstown P.L., Ohio

Evans, Jean. The Phoenix Rising.
St. Martin's. 1977. 205p. LC 76-10552. ISBN 0-312-60760-1. $7.95. F
For this addition to her novels about British monarchs Evans turns to the final months before the execution of Charles I and to his son's struggle to regain the throne. The action, depicting the future Charles II in exile, his brief futile alliance with the Scots, and his danger-fraught escape into exile again, is sketched only in basic outline. Secondary players appear with scant introduction and exit with few asides on their outcome. Most of the action is conveyed through conversation and musings which lack immediacy. The result is a historical novel with a slight plot, minimal action, and characters lacking in depth.—Ellen Kaye Stoppel, Drake Univ. Law Lib., Des Moines, Iowa

Galt, John. The Last of the Lairds or the Life and Opinions of Malachi Mailings, Esq. of Auldbiggings.
Rowman & Littlefield. 1976. 170p. ed. from the original manuscript by Ian A. Gordon. $6.75. F
This is the first unaltered edition of an 1826 novel of western Scotland. An elderly laird, deep in debt, is persuaded to marry an old spinster for her money. He then outwits his creditor by auctioning off his voting rights to his estate before foreclosure. An amusing picture of rural life, heavy with Scottish dialect (there is a glossary), and full of broadly-drawn characters, this will be of interest to students of literature or history. It is not likely to be generally popular, however, because of its last-century style and difficult language. For academic and special collections.—Melanie Axel-Lute, Montclair P.L., N.J.

Gardner, John. October Light.
Knopf. 1976. 435p. illus. by Elaine Raphael & Don Bolognese. LC 76-13718. ISBN 0-394-49912-3. $10. F
With splendid invention (including a marvelous novel within the novel), precise and empathically drawn characters, superb writing, Gardner explores people and a place uniquely American. After cranky old Vermonter James L. Page has shotgunned his older sister Sally's TV and chased her to her room she, in turn, goes on "strike," refusing to emerge. The battle of principles is joined, fought with firm Yankee resolution. Relatives and friends helplessly watch the war grow more intense. Only the family past, as it begins to grow and blossom from sorrowful roots, can create a deepening respect, understanding, and love that leads to a strangely tender denouement. This is a strong and lovely book, probing deeply into the soul and profoundly touching the reader with both the poverty and riches discovered therein.—Thomas D. Bedell, Editor, "Valley Stream MAILeader," N.Y.

Gonzalez-Aller, Faustino. Niña Huanca.
Richard Seaver: Viking. Mar. 1977. 288p. tr. from Spanish by Margaret Peden. ISBN 0-670-51338-5. $10. F
This is the story of a coup d'état in Nicaragua engineered by an illegitimate, part-Indian son in order to take revenge on his father who refuses to recognize him, and who rules the country with no concern for its Indian population. The translation captures the character of the original, and the earthy, raw language has been rendered bluntly. Images, allusions, symbols, and a host of water-front characters are presented in such rich profusion that the story seems at times to lack focus. However, the angry message that comes across is that capitalism fails in countries where social injustice is institutionalized, and that "our brothers the Indians . . . are the image and cry of millions . . . of beings who claim recognition of their dignity as men . . . ." For larger fiction collections.—Dayle Manges, Univ. of Louisville Lib., Ky.

Hedrin, Sam. Network.
Pocket Bks: S. & S., dist. by Pocket Bks-Ace. 1976. 188p. based on a screenplay by Paddy Chayefsky. ISBN 0-671-80767-6. pap. $1.75. CINEMA/F
Imagine watching the evening news on television and hearing a renowned newscaster announce his plan to commit suicide on next week's broadcast. So begins this novel which attempts to expose the politics and power plays within a major television network. The story touches on some interesting ideas about television as a social force and/or opiate, but fails to develop the characters beyond stereotypes, with the possible exception of Howard Beale, "mad prophet of the airways." Not an essential library purchase, but a fair evening's reading.—J. R. Bossman, Fort Lewis Coll. Lib., Durango, Colo.

FICTION

Howatch, Susan. The Rich Are Different.

S. & S. Mar. 1977. ca. 832p. ISBN 0-671-22669-X. $11.50. F

Paul Van Zale, founder of a dynasty of New York City banking tycoons, and his emancipated British mistress are the protagonists of this delicious family saga, which spans the 1920's and 1930's. Arranged like the author's earlier best sellers, Penmarric and Cashelmara, it is narrated in sequence by five central characters. Though the novel is exceedingly long, the author periodically throws baited hooks to recapture the reader before interest lags. In Howatch's books it's usually easy to detect parallels between the lives of her main characters and those of English kings and queens, but in this book the author's intent is less apparent; The life of "Dinah Slade" seems loosely based on that of Queen Elizabeth I. When devotees of historical romance try this literate example of the genre, they'll never return to the likes of lesser writers.—Joyce Smothers, Monmouth County Lib., Freehold, N.J.

Kernochan, Sarah. Dry Hustle.

Morrow. Mar. 1977. 288p. ISBN 0-688-03149-8. $8.95. F

Dry hustlers, of which there are two chief exemplars in this scatological first novel, are women who elaborately set up their prospective Johns, then take the money and run. Kernochan has an obvious feel for language, some flair for vivid imagery and characterization, and a macabre sense of humor. It's incomprehensible why she wastes her talent on this unsavory and pointless tale. Perhaps her protagonist, Randy, is an attempt at a latter-day, raunchier Candy. Randy's cross-country travels with her mentor Kristal, a Hungarian hooker, develop their manipulative, manhating skills but provide no particular insight. Whole hazy sections are spewed, rather than written, with oozy, slimy imagery involving every bodily secretion and excretion. One hopes the author of this picaresque sleaziness can clean up her act.—Mary Pradt Ziegler, Brooklyn P.L.

MacDonald, John D. Condominium.

Lippincott. Apr. 1977. 448p. $10. F

In recent years, Florida's coastline has been outlined by high-rise condominiums. MacDonald takes one such development, adds a killer hurricane, and comes up with a terrifying disaster tale. A grasping land developer builds structurally unsound condominiums on one of Florida's unstable keys. The apartments are inhabited by a mixed lot of people, mostly retired couples. Just after a marine engineer issues a report on the condominiums' vulnerability, hurricane Ella roars in, smashing buildings, people, and the key itself into a new contour. MacDonald fleshes out the story with sympathetic portrayals of the old folks and ruthless depictions of those who prey on them. With his familiar streak of down-home morality, many of the wicked and foolish get their just desserts while the good characters survive to live and love another day. MacDonald knows South Florida so his descriptions and dialogues always are effortlessly authentic and realistic. The novel is so convincing that condominium owners and developers will read it with growing apprehension, hoping that no hurricane comes their way. The story suffers from being too long but MacDonald fans won't mind.—Barbara Conaty, formerly with Madison P.L., Wis.

Miller, Dallas. Girlfriends.

Avon. 1977. 352p. pap. $1.95. F

This muddled attempt at combining The Group and The Best of Everything traces several weeks in the lives of three lifelong friends; Kate, Julie, and Neeka as they search for happiness and fulfillment. Shallow characterizations, unoriginal plot, awkward sex scenes, trite flashbacks, and stilted dialogue make this novel not only a bore, but a chore to read. Do not be taken in by the advertising.—Nina Kahn Fennenbock, formerly with City-County Lib., Glasgow, Mont.

Morrison, Leona. Island of Eden.

Morrow. Mar. 1977. $8.95. F

This first novel follows Howard Halston from wartime service through his career in finance, in which he transcends his English working-class origins but becomes corrupt. Through contacts with British aristocrats, Halston becomes an investment banker in Santa Serena, a Caribbean island haven for semi-Beautiful types avoiding the cold and taxes. A real problem with narrative point of view emerges as the focus shifts to the women in Halston's life. Eleanor, an American, loves Halston, wins him from his wife, loses him to a younger woman, but in the end bests him financially, with the help of an aging, lascivious woman. The author has a clear sense of her female characters' motivations. Themes of love, sex, and respect between men, however, are introduced but never pulled together meaningfully. Story and setting work well, but the protagonist remains inscrutable.—Mary Pradt Ziegler, Booklyn P.L.

Nickerson, Sheila. In Rooms of Falling Rain.

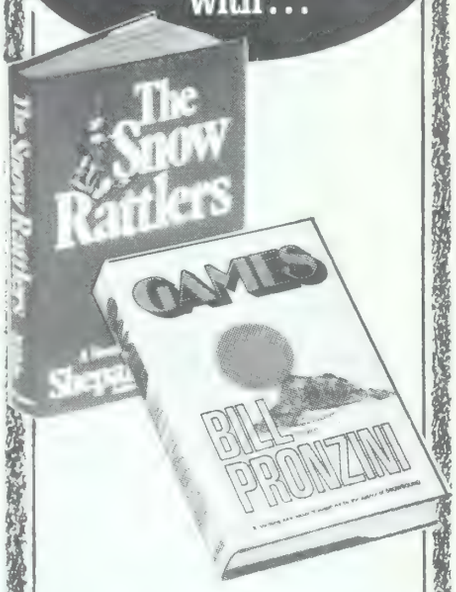
Thorp Springs. 1977. 132p. LC 76-28466. ISBN 0-914476-56-4. $8; pap. ISBN 0-914476-59-9. $3.50. F

This story of three people adrift in seemingly meaningless lives opens with a terrible windstorm that destroys the home of John and Harriet Thayer and kills their oldest child. The tragedy tears loose the tenuous threads that bind them to each other and to their im-

Meet the demand for super-thrillers with...



Games

By BILL PRONZINI

Author of Snowbound

"U.S. Senator David Jackman has a father whose political hold and memory are unbeatable, a cold wife, a mistress, and the threat of assassination. But Pronzini uses this merely as an overlay for a thriller with sustained tension. The Senator's political philosophy has been based on gamesmanship, but he suddenly finds himself trapped on his Maine island retreat by a group of devil cultists who engage him in a game for survival...in this well-executed mystery."—The Booklist.

SBN: 399-11588-9. $7.95

The Snow Rattlers

By SHEPARD RIFKIN

Author of McQuaid

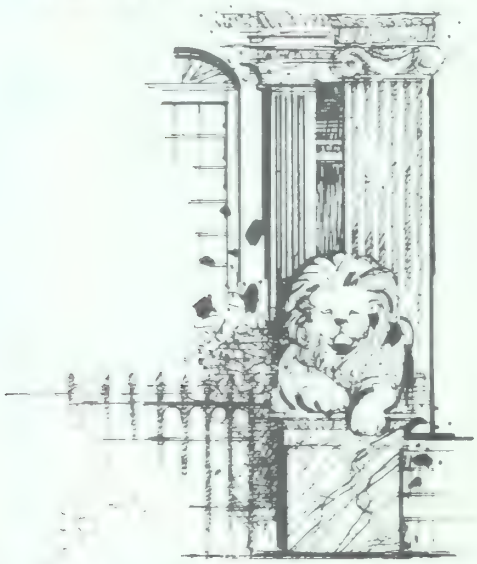
Murder and the theft of priceless Indian artifacts take homicide detective Damian McQuaid from New York to New Mexico and the Navajo nation in "a classy thriller with vigorous characters and a flawless plot."—Publishers Weekly. "The Indians and their rites are real...the people believable and original...the ending especially effective."—Library Journal. "Lots of action...a lively tale."—The Booklist.

SBN: 399-11880-2. $7.95

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

BOWKER
NEW YORK & LONDON



Archives and Libraries... a time for dialogue

ARCHIVE-LIBRARY RELATIONS

Edited by Robert L. Clark, Jr.

To the general public the distinctions between libraries and archives are blurred, but in reality they perform different functions even when both are located in the same institution. Each deals mainly with different formats of information, controls its information separately, and has a heterogeneous clientele.

Historically libraries and archives have tended to develop apart to the detriment of both. Formal relationships are of relatively recent origin; but as this volume makes clear, there is much that librarians and archivists can learn from each other and, in so doing, benefit their professions and their clientele.

0-8352-0770-6, September 1976, 218 pp., $15.95

Outline of Contents

1. The Setting by Robert L. Clark, Jr. The Archival Setting. The Library Setting. The Archivist and the Librarian. 2. Similarities and Differences by Frank G. Burke. Materials and Methodology. Education. 3. Common Issues by Miriam I. Crawford. Legislation. Copyright and Literary Property Rights. Access and Confidentiality. Social Responsibility. 4. Shared Concerns by Frank G. Burke, Robert L. Clark, Jr., and Frazer G. Poole. Public Relations and Fund Raising by Frank G. Burke. Collection Building and Acquisition Policies by Frank G. Burke. Standardization and Technology by Robert L. Clark, Jr. Preservation by Frazer G. Poole. Library Management of Archives by Robert L. Clark, Jr. 5. Professional Communication by Robert L. Brubaker. The Need for Communication. Historians and the Information Professions. The Society of American Archivists and the American Library Association. Regional and State Associations. Annotated Bibliography by Marietta Malzer. Writings on Archive-Library Related Topics. Bibliography. Index.

R. R. Bowker Order Dept.
P.O. Box 1807
Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106

Outside Western Hemisphere: Bowker, Erasmus House, Epping, Essex, England. Prices are subject to change and slightly higher outside the U.S. and its possessions.

portant values. Harriet turns to a family friend, Ren Hadley, for comfort; John throws himself into the dislodging of a corrupt, repulsive mayor, and is reunited with his father after years of antipathy. These contacts are superficial and fleeting, and provide little emotional satisfaction. Ren is forced out by the mayor, while John and Harriet rebuild the semblance of a happy home and have another child. In the end, Harriet envisions that they have constructed their own mausoleum. The reader proceeds in morbid fascination, expecting a happy resolution that never comes. An evocative and poetic novel that ebbs and flows in perfect harmony with its subject.—Marcia R. Hoffman, Woodbridge P.L., Colonia, N.J.

Olsen, Jack. The Secret of Fire Five.
Random. Mar. 1977. 270p. $8.95. F

Fire Five is a "commando company" of hand-picked firefighters who rove around the city, help out other stations, and do a little of everything. They excel at their work; but when they are not "humping hose," the brave men of Fire Five are ogling the rounded derriere of the station's first "firebroad," hiding in closets to avoid cleanup duty, or engaging in macho-style high jinks that would demean the mentality of an eight year old. They drink too much and cuss too much, and they all smoke Camels—because "your average fireman don't bother with filters." Olsen doesn't reward his forgettable cast of characters with much in the way of plot complications; and except for the ultimate downfall of an ill-tempered battalion chief and the occasional appearance of the Torch, a Bible-carrying maniac who is fond of attacking infirm winos and setting them afire, nothing much happens. The dialogue is frightful and characterization is nonexistent.—Philip M. Fragasso, Wakefield P.L., Mass.

O'Rourke, William, ed. & intro. On the Job: fiction about work by contemporary American writers.
Vintage: Random. Mar. 1977. 281p. pap. $3.95. F

Novelist, critic, and professor of English at Rutgers, O'Rourke has gathered (and thoughtfully introduced) some 30 short stories or portions of novels written within the last 12 years which show Americans at work as seen by some of our foremost contemporary writers of fiction. Most of the items have not previously been anthologized, and most are of considerable literary merit. The roster of authors includes Malamud, Bukowski, Kesey, Wallant, Sheed, Algren, Oates, Updike, and others less familiar. Stories and excerpts are widely varied but similar in their concern with the private rather than the partisan, with neo-realistic, unphilosophical social fiction, and with the familiar made strange. They take us from a New England fish packing plant to the CosmiColor Candle Factory in Berkeley. Along the way they describe a multiplicity of jobs—prize-fighting, retail trade, mailmen, gas pumping, male and female prostitution, TV, soldiering, housekeeping, the jungle of pop music, the garment trade, dope peddling, writing, lumbering, and the sleazy world of the private eye.—L. W. Griffin, Univ. of Wisconsin Lib., Madison

Penner, Jonathan. Going Blind.
S. & S. 1977. 192p. ISBN 0-671-22442-5. $7.95. F

A first novel and an excellent one. The author, a creative writing teacher, has delivered a beautifully crafted and moving work which should serve to nullify that tired old adage: Those who can, do; those who can't, teach. For he has done both. It will take no more than a day or two to finish. The characters are so alive, particularly, and ironically, when experiencing the limits of human physical endurance and suffering, and the plot so absorbing, that reading is effortless. The pages fly. Professor Paul Held, medieval specialist, has good reason to worry about contract renewal and tenure at his New York City university. The English Department is always the first to be skimmed. But what about an English professor who is also gradually, irrevocably, going blind? How well and for how long can he continue to disguise his increasing disability, and what will happen when he is found out? The reactions of colleagues and lovers to his misfortune are sensitively portrayed, but none so acutely rendered as Paul's own anguished response and self-recriminations. This is one to read, to remember. A lesson in learning how to win a losing battle.—Lisa R. Bankoff, Guadalajara, Mexico

Percy, Walker. Lancelot.
Farrar. Mar. 1977. $8.95. F

Lancelot Lamar, a "failed" man in the manner of Thomas More in Percy's last novel, Love in the Ruins, narrates the story of the catastrophe that brought Belle Isle, his ancestral home in Louisiana, to ruin. Lancelot's discovery of his wife's affair with Robert Merlin, director of the film company on location at Belle Isle, leads to destruction of the old and the possibility of a new beginning—in Percy's vision, a return to traditional values, Christian love and decency, a time when men will be gallant and "women will once again be strong and modest." As cautionary a tale as Love in the Ruins, Lancelot is so much like that earlier novel in style and substance that one can praise it only as "another good book by Walker Percy" rather than as a work of distinction or originality. Indeed, Lancelot lacks the ebullience, the wildly imaginative, comic touches that made Love in the Ruins so special. Percy's heavy use of symbols—some tired, some clever, some unclear—is almost annoying here; yet his prose, so beautiful and rich and controlled, is still very easy to respond to. Percy is a fine writer; his first novel in five years will be an important addition to collections of contemporary fiction.—Janet Wiehe, P.L. of Cincinnati & Hamilton County

Rule, Jane. The Young in One Another's Arms.
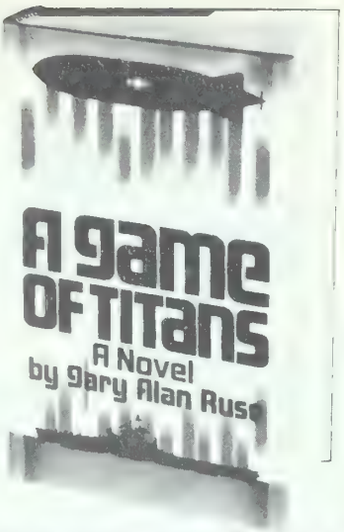
Doubleday. Mar. 1977. ISBN 0-385-11660-8. $6.95. F

Accidents have always been a part of



"SUPERIOR"

A GAME OF TITANS
by Gary Alan Ruse

"A remote island in the South Pacific, a downed jetliner, a medical research outpost, a defecting scientist from Eastern Europe with secrets both Russia and America want desperately: these are some of the ingredients in this . . . superior entry."
— Booklist (December 15, 1976)

ISBN 0-13-346080-0 CIP $8.95

Prentice-Hall

General Book Marketing Div.
Box 500, Englewood Cliffs, N.J. 07632

A chilling new novel of romantic suspense by "a name to watch." —Los Angeles Times

FOXGLOVE SUMMER

By NAIDRA GREY
Author of Dark Sun, Pale Shadows

"A stalwart governess whose antecedents are cloudy; her young charge; the scheming lady of the manor with a much older husband and a series of lovers; a local witch whose ancestor cursed the family generations earlier; a black-hearted villain; and a handsome suitor are ingredients in a contemporary Gothic written with verve and a sense of suspense."—The Booklist. "Lightly and divertingly handled for Gothic fans."—School Library Journal. SBN: 399-11765-2. YA. $7.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

"One of the better defector thrillers"*

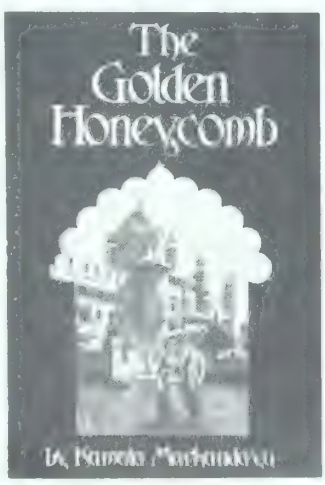
Three Potato, Four

Wilfred Greatorex

"A Russian, either a diamond expert or an officer in the KGB, escapes during an East-West meeting in Helsinki and begs asylum from the English. The British, more perfidious than usual, fear that détente may be imperiled and get one of their field operators . . . to drain the Russian dry and then to return him to Moscow. . . . Exceptionally exciting and full of verisimilitude."—Library Journal.*
SBN 698-10764-0 $8.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.
200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

THE CROWELL CORNER



THE GOLDEN HONEYCOMB
by Kamala Markandaya

'Imperial India at the height of its glittering pageantry is the historical setting for this morality on the inevitability of social upheaval when power promotes injustice."
—ALA Booklist

ISBN: 0-690-01208-X $10.00

T. Y. CROWELL
666 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10019

Ruth Wheeler's life. Each one has taken from her another piece of herself; first her father, then her own right arm, then her only daughter. Ruth is an experienced survivor, always managing to make a new life for herself out of the compensation for the last accident. Her suffering has made her independent and unwilling to accept help from others, but it has not lessened her capacity to give of herself. The gaps in her life are filled by the assortment of young people who come to her boarding house for refuge. When the house is to be razed to make way for a road, Ruth and the young people work together to build a new life, learning to need each other in the process. This novel, Rule's sixth, is sensitively and lyrically written. The characters are portrayed sympathetically and believably. Rule makes good use of symbolism of youth and age, progress and destruction, accident and purpose. The British Columbia setting is used to good advantage.—Fae K. Hamilton, MIT Libs., Cambridge, Mass.

Sheridan, Anne-Marie. The Far-Off Rhapsody.
S. & S. Apr. 1977. 236p. LC 76-54898. ISBN 0-671-22601-0. $8.95. F

Events from the last years of the reign of Napoleon III—the 1867 Great Exhibition in Paris, the Franco-Prussian War—and the horrors of the Commune of Paris provide the background for the suspenseful story of Tessa Thursday's parentage, her rise from rags to riches and the sad end of her long-time protector, Oliver Craven, ambitious leading actor of an English mime company based in Paris. Contrary to Oliver, Tessa not only shows ambition but also pureness of heart and never violates her dignity. She relates the story in a straightforward, matter-of-fact style, and since she has an interest in politics as well as a perceptive eye for the people and splendor around her, we get a surprisingly direct and fresh sense of her turbulent times. Although some pieces of the story seem a bit forced to fit together, and Tessa speaks at times from the point of view of a modern woman, the novel manages to be moving as well as entertaining.—Marie Bednar, Penn State Univ. Lib., University Park

Uhlman, Fred. Reunion.
Farrar. Apr. 1977. intro. by Arthur Koestler. $5.95. F

The year is 1932, the place the Karl Alexander gymnasium in Stuttgart. A new boy comes to the school: the young Count of Hohenfels, son of blue-blooded German aristocracy. Hans Schwarz, the shy Jewish boy who is telling the story, is powerfully attracted to the young Aryan and a strong friendship develops between the two 16 year olds. Like Demian and Sinclair, Konradin and Hans share their most private thoughts, argue about the benevolence of God, the existence of evil, the past and future of Germany; without knowing it, they influence each other's destiny. This brotherhood lasts one year: 1933 comes and Hans is sent to America by his farsighted parents while Konradin is drawn into the circle around Hitler by virtue of his station. The narration ends. Thirty years later, in America, Hans learns Konradin's fate in a shattering surprise ending. After one closes the book, the little story keeps expanding. The author has most skillfully managed to convey to his reader the essence of the Jewish-German dilemma, and, further, the fascination and ultimate disillusionment of the German people with their Führer.—Gerda Haas, Bates Coll. Lib., Lewiston, Me.

Upton, Arvin. Lorenzino.
Norton. Apr. 1977. 192p. ISBN 0-393-08762-X. $7.95. F

In 1537, Lorenzino de' Medici murdered his despotic bastard cousin Alessandro, Duke of Florence. Why? Upton contends that the answer "must lie in the character of Lorenzino, which since it is not revealed in history deserves to be explained in fiction." The product of this promise is a short historical novel in which Lorenzino tells his own story: he was influenced by family pride and an aesthetic reverence for pure power. But although these motives are clearly exposed, the book rarely takes life. Except for a few scenes of shocking violence and cruelty, this is principally a novel of talk—elegant, lifeless dialogues about power, good, the Platonic state. Unfortunately, this enigmatic episode in Italian history must await a more vivid and believable realization. For comprehensive collections.—George J. Soete, Arizona State Univ. Lib., Tempe

White, Suzanne. Ladyfingers.
Playboy, dist. by S. & S. 1977. 240p. ISBN 0-87223-473-8. $8.95. F

What can you say about Sally Ann Morrison, who discovers the joys of masturbation as a preschooler, dallies with dogs in early adolescence, nicknames herself "Clit" in her teens, and leads a far richer life in fantasy (as she fondles herself) than in fact? Only that her story is pointless, its humor forced, and its effect as soft porn more boredom than titillation. Lacks taste and technique; totally unnecessary.—Michele M. Leber, Virginia Beach P.L.

Wilhelm, Kate. Fault Lines.
Harper. Mar. 1977. 208p. ISBN 0-06-014656-7. $8.95. F

"The worst way of being lost is to wander alone in one's own head and find that there is no exit." Seventy-year-old Emily Carmichael, trapped under a collapsed house for the entirety of the novel, spends her enforced immobility reflecting on her life of fierce independence—rejected by her mother for her willful ways, forced into divorce by a class-conscious mother-in-law, Emily works her way up to a prestigious magazine editorship, maintaining her professional integrity until being forced into retirement. Never remarrying, she has a series of lovers and raises an illegitimate son. Now, lying beneath the rubble, she converses with ghosts from her past, justifying her life, and alternately preparing herself for death or planning a new future. A departure from Wilhelm's earlier directions, Fault Lines is an engaging portrait. Emily Carmichael stands out among feminist heroines because she has lived, not just talked about it.—Marcia R. Hoffman, Woodbridge P.L., Colonia, N.J.

Science Fiction

Harrison, Harry. Skyfall.
Atheneum. 1977. 270p. LC 76-23433. ISBN 0-689-10764-1. $8.95. F
An exciting account of the Prometheus project, a joint U.S.–Soviet space effort in which nearly everything that can go wrong does—mainly because of the self-serving actions of generals and politicians on both sides. The professional dedication and bravery of a few technicians and astronauts (including the first black woman in space) is poignantly contrasted with the mistrust, deception, and excessive secrecy routinely practiced by power-seekers in Washington and in Moscow. The technical descriptions of the space mission are as realistic and intriguing as the human drama that results from the subversion of this cooperative venture to gather more solar energy for Earth. Skyfall is a compelling novel; recommended.—Walter P. Hogan, Albion Coll. Lib., Mich.

Pohl, Frederik. Gateway.
St. Martin's. Mar. 1977. 224p. LC 76-10561. ISBN 0-312-31780-8. $7.95. F
Reminiscent in vehicle of Portnoy's Complaint, this tale of space travel in pursuit of immense wealth is related in first-person flashback by Robinette Broadhead, a wealthy, successful male space prospector. Chapters alternate between chronological unfolding of the tale and Rob's interplay during psychotherapy with his computer-analyst. The novel is additionally paced by sample logs and reports issued by the Gateway Authority, a corporation founded to coordinate space exploration via enigmatic ships left on Gateway by the lost Heechee civilization. The plot combines mystery and adventure with an excellent psychological profile of a very lucky antihero. An outstanding work which is highly recommended for sf collections.—Jerry L. Parsons, Sacramento State Univ. Lib., Calif.

White, James. Monsters and Medics.
Del Rey Bks: Ballantine: Random. Mar. 1977. 272p. ISBN 0-345-25623-9. pap. $1.50. F
A short novel and six short stories comprise this sf collection. Some of the stories deal with aliens and others with medical themes, but a more common theme is optimism. Somehow things come out all right for White's characters; no tragedies here, and certainly no apocalypses. A couple of standard sf themes—the last man left alive, and the first human contact with aliens—are handled in an interesting manner, if less majestically than is usual. The author's short introduction answers the where-do-you-get-those-crazy-ideas question for these particular stories. This collection will kill an evening more pleasantly than most TV fare.—Richard W. Ryan, Ohio Univ. Lib., Athens mystery ... detective ...suspense...

A Capitol Crime (Viking. Mar. 1977. ISBN 0-670-20336-X. $8.95) by Lawrence MEYER is a first novel and just the sort of thing I like: corruption and wickedness in high places, especially in Washington, and all of it is quite believable. A muckraking and not too scrupulous investigative reporter is found shot (in a Senate manhole), and a fellow reporter discovers the existence of secret files, the raw material for a potential blackmailer. In hot pursuit are an oil lobbyist, a chemical tycoon with Mafia connections, a venal Senator, and, perhaps, a fervid reforming presidential candidate, who may not be as clean as he looks. All varieties of Washington power are displayed: business, the press, labor, and government, and there is a lovely icing of buggery and fraud. Not a thing is left out, and Meyer clearly knows what he is doing, a welcome change. The spicy bits involving a beautiful woman Senator may be a little silly, but I have read a lot worse, that's for sure. This one is for a really good time.

With a Vengeance (McGraw. Mar. 1977. $8.95) by Gerald DiPEGO is also a first novel, and not a bad one. A fantasizing college professor suddenly takes it into his shaky mind to avenge the death of his son who was burned to a crisp by a group of young men during a fraternity hazing some 20 years earlier. He leaves his job without warning and takes off after the group's families. First there is a rather nice chess player, the son of one of the hazers, who gets pushed off a roof; then a vain jock, another son, gets run over while jogging. A Chicago cop notices a link and starts hounding the professor. The murders go on and on, all over the United States, until the professor runs out of victims. There is not one ounce of humor in this one, which is a pity, and the doings of a solemn lunatic eventually lose interest. However, perhaps the next one will be better.

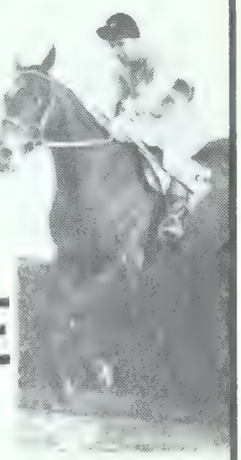
Closet Bones (Putnam. Mar. 1977. ISBN 0-399-11874-8. $8.95) by Thomas BUNN is another first novel. The plot involves the disappearance of a groom married in dubious circumstances to an ex-prostitute, the ceremony being performed by the leader of a drug-dealing hippy commune, casting doubt on the validity of the marriage. People start turning up dead and the live ones are immeasurably sinister. There is also a family-owned business in the background, and large sums of money being churned around. This is all well and good, but the treatment is secondhand; the investigating private eye, the done-upon bride, the money-mad business executive, the corrupt county sheriff all are conventional. We can but hope for some fresh observations in Bunn's next novel.

Street 8 (Seymour Lawrence: Delacorte. 1977. LC 76-28245. ISBN 0-440-

CORRECTION: The title of Tim Heald's new book is Let Sleeping Dogs Die (LJ 1/1/77).

The big new suspense story by the author of Knockdown, High Stakes, and many other bestsellers

Dick Francis
IN THE FRAME
A Novel



Murder, arson and theft of the most original kind draws a talented painter of horses to faraway Australia in an effort to solve this latest and most menacing Dick Francis crime caper.
LC 76-47255
ISBN 0-06-011341-3 $8.95

Harper & Row
10 E. 53rd St., New York 10022
1817

HARPER NOVELS OF SUSPENSE

SCHROEDER'S GAME
Arthur Maling. Chicanery in the business world involves the brokerage firm of Price, Potter & Petacque (whom readers first met in Ripoff) in the brutal killing of one partner's brother and his wife. Top-notch storytelling and suspense from an author at home in the world of high finance.
LC 76-5547
ISBN 0-06-012811-9 $7.95

THE SOUL HIT
Charlie Haas and Tim Hunter. The untimely death of a California disc jockey sets off a murder investigation that brilliantly reveals the dark side of the rock-and-soul recording industry—from payola and celebrity promotion to disillusionment, drugs and devious deals.
LC 76-26269
ISBN 0-06-011708-7 $7.95

Harper & Row
10 E. 53rd St., New York 10022
1817

HARPER NOVELS OF SUSPENSE

"... A SUSPENSEFUL THRILLER."
—A.L.A. Booklist.

THE MAN WHO LOST EVERYTHING

By Paul Kuttner

JUST PUBLISHED

His wife kidnapped and threatened with mutilation, Harry Bensonny is torn between her survival and the mistress he loves. What would you do? Scenes of nightmarish tension and warm sentiment bring the story to an unbearable peak ... with two surprise twists at the end! A terrifying narrative of a middle class New Yorker living through a weekend of horror "... all lovingly described in pitiless detail." —Library Journal.

$7.19 net to libraries from Sterling Publishing Co., Inc.
419 Park Avenue S., New York, NY 10016

RED MASK MYSTERY

A new Putnam Red Mask Mystery

It Shouldn't Happen to a Dog

By COLIN WATSON

"As witty, disciplined, and suspenseful as all of Watson's previous books. A young lout, unexpectedly drunk, falls out of a fairground whirlabout; the accident may be murder. A young married couple, ghastly and discontented...are separately approached by a specialist in matrimonial readjustment, which may mean killing off one or the other partner....Our old friend, Miss Teatime, and her animal charities are still around, as are many of the old Flaxborough police force. Not to be missed, not for any excuse."—Library Journal.
SBN: 399-11881-0. $7.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

06167-9. $7.95) by Douglas FAIRBAIRN takes place among the Cuban exiles in a foul-weather Miami. A used-car man, lonely and decent, employs as a salesman a Cuban who suddenly becomes politically active and vociferously against an emerging Cuban politician, perhaps a gangster. There are the usual tactics: the salesman gets killed and the owner is threatened regarding his business and his emotionally damaged daughter. The Cubans take over the car lot as a bomb factory. The used-car man survives, which in this ominous and threatening book is as close to winning as one can get. Gloomy and gray, but totally involving.

McGarr and the Politician's Wife (Scribners. Mar. 1977. $6.95) by Bartholomew GILL introduces McGarr, a chief inspector on the Dublin police force who investigates the assault of a drunken American, an expert sailor found battered almost to death on a decrepit yacht at a chic Dublin yacht club. All kinds of evil doings soon emerge: there is a rich, spoiled, nymphomaniacal girl friend and a very close connection with the most violent sections of the IRA. This leads directly to a corrupt and vindictive government minister and his reckless wife, and from there to a nasty but efficient plot to frame an honest policeman. This one is beautifully modulated, from an agreeable and pleasant beginning to a realistic and driving ending.

Andrew YORK's new novel is called Tallant for Trouble (Doubleday. 1977. ISBN 0-385-12355-8. $5.95). It involves a black Guyanan detective in a newly emerging Caribbean country, a rapidly developing Bahama-type archipelago, whose leader is turning it into a police state. A yacht is found derelict and two leaders of the community are presumed to have drowned, one at the hands of the other (but who did what and to whom?). Revolutionary elements on the islands come to the fore; martial law is quickly and stupidly imposed after riots and bomb outrages disturb the peace. York is an expert storyteller and the establishment is elegantly laid bare. The policeman is a sensible and attractive man, and the solution is arrived at with the provision of the vital clue by a troubleshooter from Washington.

Dick FRANCIS is unfailingly fascinating, and although he has not entirely abandoned the race course, In the Frame (Harper. Mar. 1977. ISBN 0-06-011341-3. $8.95) is an interesting departure. A young painter of horses goes to Shropshire only to find his cousin's house looted and the wife sadly murdered. The police are suspicious and probably capable, but fortunately the painter falls in with a rich but fading woman whose house has been burned to the ground and whose collection of a lifetime has been destroyed. Looking into this matter brings to light a curious multiplicity of Munningses, works of a painter much esteemed by horse lovers, all seeming to come from an obscure little gallery in Sydney. The painter contrives to get the rich woman's backing and goes to Australia after what turns out to be a gang of forgers, thieves, and murderers, under the control of a mastermind, violent and nasty. A lot goes on in this sprawling novel; all of it is exciting and gloriously inventive.

In Schroeder's Game (Harper. Mar. 1977. ISBN 0-06-012811-9. $8.95) Arthur MALING owes a debt to Emma Lathen. This is a particularly good story of business frauds, knowledgeable and full of convincing twists. A specialty brokerage partnership is in danger of breaking up when one of the partners unexpectedly wants to sell out his share and then disappears. Another partner, with the help of an aggressive and intelligent trainee, uncovers a trail of embezzlement in a Phoenix billing firm and accountancy fraud, leading to a double murder, perhaps linked to an earlier shooting. Wrongdoing, obstruction, and coverups are doggedly and imaginatively exposed. I have no idea whether or not such a series of crimes is indeed possible, but I haven't the slightest difficulty in believing the worst.

The Diehard (Random. Mar. 1977. ISBN 0-394-41030-0. $6.95) by Jon A. JACKSON is a smooth if not very distinguished thriller in which a youngish and rich Detroit lawyer for a bankrupt insurance company is involved in a gigantic computer fraud. His wife, equally rich but unhappy, wants to rat on her husband and, not surprisingly, is killed. A thief and a hired gun get at her in a detailed though not convincing murder scene, and are in turn killed as the Detroit cops investigate, poking and prying with endless questions. In the end the real question is what happened to all that embezzled money, a perfectly reasonable question since people do not seem to matter too much.

Enough! (Evans, dist. by Lippincott. Mar. 1977. ISBN 0-87131-226-3. $7.95), the eagerly awaited new Donald WESTLAKE, is very peculiar, with a novelette, "A Travesty," about a movie critic who accidentally kills his girl friend and is blackmailed by a watching private eye. A trackless meander, the plot defies synopsis, but, among other things, the critic solves the murder of a movie buff during a private showing, as well as the murders of a travel agent, a nagging wife, and a UN diplomat, to the gratification and admiration of the New York Police Department. I never said that Westlake was true to life. Modestly entertaining and meat for movie buffs. The second story, "Ordo," seems to have been tagged on for some reason known only to the publisher. It has something to do with a Hollywood sex goddess and her childhood husband. It has no business being here.

In Azor! (St. Martin's. Mar. 1977. LC 76-28033. ISBN 0-312-06370-9. $8.95) by Jim HENAGHAN, Jeff Pride, a sort of tough but not very bright agent for an international security firm, masquerades as a travel agent when he is sent to Spain to look into the death of another agent, mysteriously murdered. Under cover of shepherding a convention of refrigerator salesmen, he encounters all kinds of close shaves—a couple of blown-up cars and other murderous attacks. Ready to help him is a blimpish English drunk, possibly a secret agent, who gets killed, and to hinder him is a beautiful woman, also possibly a secret operative, who vanishes. The pivot is a mysterious Gypsy assassin of political figures, a Times Square operator of a flea circus. Wow. This is one of the latter-day swashbuckling adventures, synthetic, unconvincingly over-macho, but a pleasant enough read, if you like this sort of thing. The ending is preposterous though imaginative.

Case Closed (Doubleday. 1977. LC 76-19623. ISBN 0-385-12267-5. $5.95) by June THOMSON is a rather stupid and stodgy mystery that takes place in England. A detective inspector is being tailed, and this leads to the reopening of a four-year-old unsolved murder of a girl through information gained from a petty thief. The reinvestigation is connected with a gang of armed robbers specializing in raids on London jewelers. To the surprise of nobody, everything gets nicely sorted out.

For all its trappings of political and social consciousness, The Capablanca Opening (St. Martin's. Mar. 1977. LC 76-29858. ISBN 0-312-11865-1. $8.95) by David T. CHANTLER has all the verisimilitude and humanity of a blue movie. The American consul general is kidnapped in a Latin-American city by an urban guerrilla band backed by Soviet interests, and opposed by the Americans and the local power structure. Everybody gets into the act: the Russians, local goons, the CIA person at the consulate, the English, all for different reasons. Double agents and infiltrators are rife. There is any amount of devious political maneuvering, to little account since there does not seem to be any contact between the characters and there is sense of neither place nor time. A vacuum.

I had forgotten that Ngaio MARSH could write quite so badly, and Last Ditch (Little. Mar. 1977. ISBN 0-316-54674-7. $7.95) exhibits her worst faults. It is not uncharitable to call her style pretentious and affected. Her attitudes are a caricature of a dimly remembered England of 40 years ago, although there is every reason to believe that Marsh intends her story to be up to the minute. To top it off, her dialogue is so dated as to be bizarre. There is the same cast of characters; Alleyn's son is now grown up and has gone to stay with friends on one of the Channel Islands. A promiscuous young woman, the daughter of a religious maniac, gets herself pregnant and killed. There is a drug connection through a local talentless painter, the local plumber is entirely too prosperous, and somebody got the poor girl into trouble. It would be unfair to specify whether drugs or sex is responsible, but it is not a bit unfair to say that the story is bogus, condescending, and boring.

Robert BLOCH has put out a collection of reprinted short stories of his called The King of Terrors: tales of madness and death (Mysterious Pr., P.O. Box 334, East Station, Yonkers, N.Y. 10704. 1977. LC 76-16892. ISBN 0-89296-029-9. $10; ltd. ed. ISBN 0-89296-030-2. $20.); Lesley EGAN has written The Blind Search (Doubleday. Mar. 1977. ISBN 0-385-12356-6. $5.95); Noel B. GERSON's 42nd novel (not to count 22 works of nonfiction) is called Liner (Doubleday. Mar. 1977. LC 73-10537. ISBN 0-385-08281-9. $8.95); Journey's End (Doubleday. Mar. 1977. ISBN 0-385-12415-5. $6.95) is Evelyn BERCKMAN's 24th novel.—Henri C. Veit, Brooklyn P.L.

INDEX:

Adams, S.D., 607
American book publishing record cumulative, 1970-1974, 595
American music before 1865 in print and on records, 590
Annadale, B., 628
Annotated bibliography of homosexuality, 591
Atkins, G. P., 612
Auerbach, A., 625

Baigell, M., 596
Bainbridge, B., 628
Banish, R., 622
Barash, D. P., 619
Barsacq, L., 628
Bartók, B., 610
Bausert, J., 597
Bean, C. A., 621
Beebe, R. A., 606
Benedikt, M., 607
Ben-Veniste, R., 612
Beowulf, 607
Berckman, E., 637
Bernard, 606
Berry, R. E., 600
Berryman, J., 611
Bibliography of British history, 1851-1914, 591
Bibliography of Southern Appalachia, 591
Biermann, J., 621
Black American reference book, 591
Blair, D. S., 608
Blake, J., 602
Blassingame, J. W., 602
Bloch, R., 637
Bodo, P., 626
Books in series in the United States, 1966-1975, 592
Bova, B., 620
Brain, R., 623
Bredes, D., 628
Brophy, P., 561
Brown, Jim, 626
Brown, Jonathan, 596
Brown, M., 597
Brun, E., 601
Brusaw, C. T., 592
Bryan, H., 561
Bujak, A., 623
Bunn, T., 635
Burnham, F., 620

Canetti, N., 605
Carroll, D., 617
Cass, J., 592
Chantler, D. T., 637
Christensen, A. C., 608
Clark, E., 617
Clarke, H., 622
Cleary, T., 617
Clemens, S. L., 608
Coffin, M. M., 623
Cohen, D., 615
Cookson, C., 629
Copleston, F., 611

Darcy, C., 629
Darwin, C., 620
Deane, P., 599
de Camp, L. S., 608
Delbanco, N., 629
De Villiers, A., 623
Dillon, J., 611
DiPego, G., 635
Distin, W. H., 598
Dobyns, H. F., 592
Ducker, B., 630
Dupré, L., 611

Eakin, P. J., 608
Eckstein, S., 612
Economics in the future, 601
Edwards, S., 599
Egan, F., 630
Egan, L., 637
Elbert, V. F., 621
Elder, R., 589
Engels, J., 611
Engler, R., 601
Evans, J., 630

Fairbairn, D., 636
Fales, D. A., 598
Fellows, O., 608
Ferlita, E., 617
Finley, M. I., 593
Fischler, S., 626
Francis, D., 636

Galt, J., 630
Gardner, J., 630
Generalić, I., 596
Geoarchaeology, 620
Gerson, N. B., 637
Gilderman, M. S., 608
Gill, B., 636
Gonzalez-Aller, F., 630
Goodman, J., 617
Gosling, N., 598
Greeley, A. M., 589
Greenway, J., 607
Gregg, P., 602

Halebsky, S., 623
Halliburton, R., 603
Harrison, H., 635
Hartnoll, P., 593
Haslip, J., 599
Havlicek, J., 626
Hayward, C. H., 606
Hecht, A., 611
Heckscher, A., 597
Hedrin, S., 630
Heizer, R. F., 592
Heller, N., 596
Helm, J., 592
Henaghan, J., 636
Hillaby, J., 599
Hirschman, A. O., 613
Holbrook, D., 609
Horowitz, I. L., 624
Howard, J. K., 596
Howatch, S., 631
Hughson, L., 609
Hurst, J. W., 625
Huxley, F., 609

Ivanović, V., 599
Iverson, P., 592

Jackson, J. A., 636
Job bias, 593
Johnson, S. M., 615
Jones, M. W., 603
Jones, P. G., 609
Jordan, J., 607
Jureidini, P. A., 613
Kee, H. C., 618
Kernochan, S., 631
Kiell, N., 609
Koegler, H., 593
Kopay, D., 626
Kornberg, A., 613
Kulkarni, H. B., 594

Lambert, T., 622
Lande, N., 624
Lansdowne, J. F., 622
Leong, S., 603
Lerner, G., 603
Levey, M., 596
Lewis, D. L., 603
Living World of Audubon mammals, 622

MacDonald, J. D., 631
McLauchlan, W. P., 625
Maclay, E., 618
Madison, A., 599
Maling, A., 636
Manning, D. J., 613
Marsh, N., 637
Marshall, J., 611
Marshall, L. B., 607
Mathews, V. H., 561
Mazo, J. H., 627
Medley, M., 598
Merwin, W. S., 612
Meyer, L., 635
Middlebrook, M., 604
Miller, D., 631
Miner, E., 609
Moore, J. P., 604
Morgan, E. S., 604
Morrison, L., 631
Moyer, A., 589

Negro almanac, 594
Nelson, R. R., 614
Nickerson, S., 631

O'Hara, J., 609
Olsen, J., 633
Onassis, J., 598
Orbach, W. W., 614
O'Rourke, W., 633
Page, M., 597
Painter, G. D., 600
Pannenberg, W., 618
Payne, B. I., 627
Penner, J., 633
Percy, W., 633
Phelan, J., 600
Phillips, S., 589
Pohl, F., 635
Polushkin, M., 607
Popenoe, D., 590
Postal, B., 606
Potvin, D., 626
Praise from famous men, 609
Proffer, E., 594

Radl, S. L., 624
Rahmani, L. Y., 606
Raphael, F., 610
Read, W. H., 590
Rice, D. T., 596
Richman, M., 596
Riegel, K. F., 615
Rogers, J., 618
Rolling Stone illustrated history of rock & roll, 610
Rosenfeld, A., 614
Rosenow, F., 627
Rosenthal, I., 598
Rule, J., 633

Saccio, P., 610
Saddhatissa, H., 618
Samson, J., 627
Schneidau, H. N., 618
Schwartz, B., 614
Schwartz, S. P., 611
Scull, A. I., 625
Secret garden, 619
Senzel, H., 627
Sevareid, E., 601
Shaw, A. D., 589
Sheridan, A., 634
Siegel, M. B., 628
Silvert, K. H., 614
Simpson, C., 604
Skelsey, A., 621
Smith, M. J., 595
Snell, J. L., 604
Solinger, D. J., 605
Soto, G., 612
Speer, F., 622
Stoppard, T., 628
Strassfeld, S., 619
Straub, P., 621

Tannen, J., 601
Tanner, H. H., 592
Taylor, D., 600
Thompson, L. S., 595
Thomson, J., 637
Tillett, L., 605
Torbet, L., 627
Trussell, J. R., 606
Trzyna, T. C., 594

Uhlman, F., 634
Upton, A., 634
Urban administration, 624
Urban governance and minorities, 624

Van Daalen, N., 606
Vidal, G., 610
Villasenor, V., 625
von Ragué, B., 598

Wachtel, P. L., 617
Wakin, E., 605
Watney, J., 600
Weatherby, W., 610
Weber, J. A., 590
Welch, A., 597
Wertheimer, B. M., 605
Westlake, D., 636
Whalon, M. K., 595
White, J., 635
White, N., 595
White, S., 634
Wiles, P., 625
Wilhelm, K., 634
Wilkinson, D. Y., 624
Winnifrith, T., 610
Wolff, C. G., 610
Worldmark encyclopedia of the nations, 595
Wyatt, B., 620

York, A., 636

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

All advertisements for the Positions Open and the Positions Wanted classifications will be edited to exclude direct or indirect references to race, creed, color, age, and sex as conditions of employment. Positions open and positions wanted, $1.80 per line, minimum charge, $5.40, all other types of ads, $2.75 per line, minimum charge $8.25. If voucher forms are required for billing, please send them at the time advertisements are submitted for insertion. Copy for ads and requests for cancellations must be received at the LJ office 45 days preceding date of issue. Write: Classified Advertising Department, Library Journal, 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, New York 10036.

OUT-OF-PRINT

EXCLUSIVE WANT LISTS get prompt attention, wide search, reasonable prices, from International Bookfinders, Inc., Box 1-LJ, Pacific Palisades, Calif. 90272.

COLONIAL "out-of-print" Book Service, Inc. Want Lists invited, 23 E. 4th St., New York City 10003.

EXCLUSIVE WANT LISTS advertised & searched plus 150,000 vol. indexed stock. PAB 2917 Atlantic, Atlantic City, NJ 08401.

WE FIND BOOKS. Free International Search. Exclusive want lists invited. Realistic prices. Eva Davis Books. 108 Prince Charles, Williamsburg, VA 23185.

OUT OF PRINT books located. Send in title, author to: Free Search Service, Dept. LJ, 41 Union Square West, New York, NY 10003.

OP BOOKS in literature; social sciences, humanities. EGLI; Lamont; BCL, etc. Book Lande, 8926 National Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90034.

BUILDING SPECIAL COLLECTIONS is one of our specialties. Foreign books and periodicals, current and out-of-print. Albert J. Phiebig Inc., Box 352, White Plains, N.Y. 10602.

MAGAZINES—BACK NUMBER

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC: (1888-1977). Free quotes and discounts. Price guide for appraisal. $5. Don Smith, 3930 Rankin St., Louisville, KY 40214.

REPLACEMENT ISSUES of recent subscriptions. Subscribers to journals listed in Science Citation Index have a good chance of immediately locating lacking issues for years 1970-1975 with the Replacement Serials Section of M.S.I, the worldwide back-issue house. Please address your queries to Maxwell Scientific International (now a Pergamon Press, Inc. division), Fairview Park, Elmsford, New York 10523.

BACK ISSUE MAGAZINES, general, scholarly, technical. Designed to serve high school and jr. college libraries. Please send want lists to Back Issues West; P.O. Box 6688, Tucson, Arizona 85716.

FAST: WE SHIP your back issue orders from stock within 48 hours. Hawkeye, Box 231, Redfield, SD 57469.

OVER 2,000,000 backdate magazines. Send want lists. Magazine Center, Room 406, 145 West 29th, New York, NY 10001.

INTERNATIONAL UNIVERSITY Booksellers, Inc., 101 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10003. We buy: Would like to hear of periodical backfiles of scholarly significance, individual titles or entire collections, surplus to your present needs. We sell: We carry one of the most comprehensive inventories of periodicals in all fields and langauges and are a major supplier to academic libraries in all parts of the world. Call or write Mr. Becker.

SPECIAL NOTICES

J. B. LIPPINCOTT Company announces a new library discount schedule effective Feb. 1, 1977, applicable to direct orders from school, public, and college libraries, special libraries, and government sources for two or more copies of all trade books published by Lippincott and its client publishers (New Columbia Encyclopedia discounted separately).

Discounts (F.O.B. Shipping Point):

Annual Trade Book Budget	Trade Hardbound RB, & Paperbound Editions	LLB Editions
Under $25,000	30%	10%

Following discounts granted by prior arrangement:

$25,000-$49,999	34%	10%
$50,000-$74,999	36%	10%
$75,000 and more	38%	10%

J. B. Lippincott Company, E. Washington Sq., Phila., PA 19105.

MICROFORMS

MICROFORMS. Good second-hand microfilm of periodicals of established micropublishers bought and sold. Write or call Microforms International Marketing Company, Fairview Park, Elmsford, New York 10523. (914) 592-9141.

WANTED TO BUY

NEW GENEALOGICAL Library needs obsolete city, street, and telephone directories; any city, any year or condition; the older the better. Also old Who's Who, other regional or national professional, occupational, social, educational directories, etc. Send description and condition of each directory available. Phyllis Heiss, Librarian, 550 N.E. 5 Ave., Boca Raton, FL 33432.

SERVICES—PERSONNEL

THERESA M. BURKE Employment Agency, 8 West 40th St., N.Y., N.Y. 10018. Specializing in the recruitment of library and information personnel for special, academic, and public libraries.

FOR SALE

SEASONED BOOKMOBILE seeking new owner in temperate climate. 1962 Gerstenslager 24-ft. Transit Bus Forward Control style, I-H chassis, PS, manual transmission, required 220-volt hookup to operate self-contained A/C. Somewhat more than shopworn, but could provide your growing library with another outreach service after June 1st for only $6,500 or reasonable offer. Detailed specifications from: Michael Garrison, Head Librarian, Quincy Public Library, 526 Jersey, Quincy, IL 62301.

POSITIONS WANTED

M.L.S., Mar. 1977, desires entry level position in health sciences library. Para-professional experience in medical and academic libraries, Licensed Practical Nurse (018582), Tennessee), fluent in French and German, familiar with OCLC. Will relocate. Reply: Christian M. Cupp, Rte. #1, Box 100A, Johnson City, TN 37601.

POSITIONS OPEN—NORTHWEST

HEAD LIBRARIAN, City of Lewiston. Library degree; four years min. experience as librarian in community of 20,000+. Thorough knowledge of modern library system. Send résumé and salary requirements to: Personnel Director, City Hall, P.O. Box 617, Lewiston, Idaho 83501. Equal opportunity employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—NORTHWEST

CURRICULUM LIBRARIAN for resource center serving university students and faculty, and school personnel in SW Idaho. Oversees acquisition, processing and circulation of all types of book and non-book materials. Demonstrates new and innovative materials to teachers and students. Maintains effective liaison with the school of education. Require: M.L.S. from ALA accredited school, background in education and knowledge of curriculum materials sufficient to provide required services. Skills required: demonstrated ability to provide effective leadership in directing services of a curriculum resource center, and to supervise paraprofessional staff; basic working knowledge of selection, acquisition, cataloging of non-book materials; ability to establish good inter-personal relationships, and to work with faculty and library administration to plan and coordinate services. Must show strong commitment to service. Twelve-month appointment, faculty rank, 24 days' annual leave. Salary $12,000-$14,000 depending on qualifications. Position open July 1, 1977. Deadline for submitting placement credentials is April 15, 1977. Send application, résumé, credentials, and names of three references to: Mrs. Carol Bettis, Associate Librarian, Boise State University Library, Boise, ID 83725. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

LIBRARIAN to administer cataloging and processing unit of technical service division, including cataloging, marking, card production, filing, bindery preparation, and bibliographic participation in state network; also serve as cataloger. Required: ALA accredited M.L.S.; 5 years' related experience including cataloging. Rank: librarian 3, minimum salary $17,000. Faculty status. Send résumé, three recent letters of reference to Dr. Allene Schnaitter, Director of Libraries, Washington State University, Pullman, WA 99164, by April 1, 1977. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—MIDWEST

LIBRARY DIRECTOR: City of 41,000. New $2.6 million building under construction. Staff of 27.8 FTE. Current budget is $375,000. Must have an M.S. in library science from ALA accredited school and at least 3 years' administrative public library experience. Salary $16,000-$18,000. Send cover letter and résumé to: W. E. Schamburg, Board President, Withers Public Library, 202 E. Washington St., Bloomington, IL 61701. An equal opportunity employer.

READERS' SERVICES Librarian to join staff July 1, 1977 as second professional in small public library in college community of 20,000 in northeast Ohio. Duties: to assist director with oversight and extension of adult, YA and children's services, collection development, multi-library cooperative efforts, and administration. Unique opportunity to work with patrons of all ages and with varied socio-economic, racial and town-gown backgrounds. Requirements: M.L.S. from ALA-accredited library school, outreach orientation, multi-media skills. Salary range, depending on qualifications and experience: $9,500-$12,000; excellent benefits. Application deadline: April 15, 1977. Address letter, résumé, references to Eleanor E. Owen, Director, Oberlin Public Library, Oberlin, OH 44074.

LIBRARY DIRECTOR for Public Library System in South Central Nebraska. Multimedia center serving six counties, with two bookmobiles. Staff: eleven full-time and eight part-time. Requirements: M.L.S. (ALA accredited). Desire experience in administration, budgeting and public relations. Salary: $12,000 minimum. Fringe benefits. Send résumé to: R. F. Delaney, Atlanta, Nebraska 68923 by March 15th.

POSITIONS OPEN—WEST

CATALOGER: The University of Utah has an opening for a professional cataloger to do original cataloging of monographs in the science fields. Qualifications: M.L.S. from an ALA accredited school and a working knowledge of a Western European language. An undergraduate degree in either the biological or physical science fields with supporting classes in the non-degree area of science. One year of cataloging experience. Experience with OCLC or a similar system preferred. Benefits: Faculty appointment on a 12-month contract (25 days vacation), TIAA-CREF, U-paid retirement and health insurance, other fringe benefits. Salary negotiable depending on experience. Minimum: $9,500. Application deadline: April 1, 1977. Send résumé naming three references or placement bureau address and a cover letter describing qualities you have that you think would fit you for the job to: Winnifred Margetts, Library Personnel Officer, 328 Marriott Library, University of Utah, Salt Lake City, Utah 84112. Equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

CATALOGER with reading knowledge of Arabic and Persian to catalog books dealing with Middle Eastern subjects, both in the above languages and in major European languages. M.L.S. from accredited library school. 2-3 years' cataloging experience preferred. Salary commensurate with experience, minimum $9,500. Instructor rank with 12 months contract. (25 days vacation.) TIAA-CREF, other fringe benefits. Equal opportunity employer. Please send résumés with 3 names of references to: Winnifred Margetts, Library Personnel Officer, 328 Marriott Library, University of Utah, Salt Lake City, Utah 84112. Equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHEAST

DIRECTOR OF LIBRARY: Austin Peay State University, Clarksville, Tennessee, 45 miles N.W. of Nashville. Responsibilities: Leadership and administrative management of 180,000 volume modern library facility with budget of $423,000 and staff of 20 (5 professional); serving 4600 students. Reports directly to chief academic officer. Qualifications: M.L.S. from ALA accredited library school and additional subject Master's degree, with Doctor's degree preferred. Eight to ten years library experience including three to five years of academic library administrative experience. Salary open. Starting date July 1, 1977 or nogotiable. Résumé must include degrees, experience, 3 references (one from current employer), scholarly contributions and professional activities and must be received by March 1, 1977. Apply to: Vice President for Academic Affairs, Austin Peay State University, Clarksville, Tennessee 37040. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

DIRECTOR of Library Services: Closing date: March 1, 1977. Salary: $11,628. Duties: Department head status; reports to cty. admin.; supported by Citizen Advisory Council. Direction and coordination of medium sized, new county library system 35 miles from Washington, D.C. Administrative duties include supervision of more than 20 employees, budgeting, and general administration of 3 branches and a bookmobile. Responsible for cataloging, audio-visual services, and coordination of book selection. Qualifications: ALA accredited M.L.S.; minimum of 2 years' experience, part of which must be supervisory. County of Loudoun, Office of Personnel, 18 North King Street, Leesburg, VA 22075.

POSITIONS OPEN—NORTHEAST

BIBLIOGRAPHER. Responsible for the selection of materials in the fields of English/American and Western European literature. May be expected to assume other assignments as needed. Requirements: M.L.S. from ALA accredited school; fluency in French and German and working knowledge of Italian and/or Russian; advanced degree in literature and previous library experience preferred. Salary: $9,500+ depending on experience. Send résumé to: Jane Titus, Personnel Librarian, Temple University Libraries, Philadelphia, PA 19122. An equal opportunity employer.

CATALOGER: Responsible for original cataloging of monographs in Spanish and Portuguese, including descriptive and subject cataloging and Library of Congress classification. Must have an M.L.S. from an ALA accredited library school, and two years' experience in an academic library; undergraduate major or equivalent ability in Spanish is required. Familiarity with Library of Congress classification, and reading knowledge of Portuguese or one other European language are desirable. Please send resumé, together with salary history to: Richard F. MacDonald, Business & Personnel Manager, University of Massachusetts Library, Amherst, MA 01003. Equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

LIBRARIAN OPENINGS: (1) Acquisition Librarian to supervise collection development of book materials; Requirements: M.L.S., three years' experience (preferred in academic library, knowledge of bibliographic tools and book trade), ability to work with students, faculty, staff, understanding of library automation (OCLC), strong liberal arts background; salary: $13,150/12 months; Résumé: Attention N. Belz. (2) Cataloger to catalog and classify monographs, serials, non-print materials; Requirements: M.L.S., three years cataloging experience (preferred in academic library), knowledge of LC classification and OCLC; salary: $13,150/12 months; Résumé: Attention N. Belz. (3) Public Service/Media Librarian to provide reference service, emphasis on servicing media materials; Requirements: M.L.S., knowledge of reference tools/media, resources, one to two years experience (preferred in academic library); salary: $11,360/12 months; Résumé: Attention W. Stahl. All applicants should possess strong commitment to user services and library instruction. All positions available 7/1/77, include one month vacation/excellent fringe benefits. Reply by April 1 to: Stockton State College Library, Pomona, N.J. 08240. Affirmative action equal opportunity employer.

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS

Academic Press 566
Addison-Wesley Publishing Co. 614
Aero Publishers 576
American Management Associations 587
American Society of Agricultural Engineers 599, 622
Arco Publishing. 602
Ars Polona 593
Audio Engineering Society 576

Baker & Taylor Co. 531
Basic Books 612, 617
Beinfeld Publishing 626
Book House 534
R. R. Bowker Co. 538, 542, 564, 568, 616, 632
Butterworth Group 569

Churchill Livingstone 577
Columbia University Press 618
Computer Science Press 576
Congressional Quarterly 613
Coward, McCann & Geoghegan 590, 630 634
Thomas Y. Crowell Co. 597, 603, 630, 634

Davey Co. 534
Demco Educational Corp. 532
Dietz Verlag Berlin 526
Dow Jones-Irwin 586

Elsevier North-Holland 570, 571
Environment Information Center 591

Follett Publishing Co. 587
Funk & Wagnalls 525

Gale Research Co. 588
Garland Publishing 578
Gaylord Bros. 528
Gordon & Breach Science Publishers 576

Harper & Row, Publishers 592, 635
Highsmith Co. 536
Human Sciences Press 614

Robert Jacobson: Design 530
Johns Hopkins University Press 621
Josten's Library Services Division 530, 533

Larousse & Co. 595
J. B. Lippincott Co. 629

McGraw-Hill Book Co. 573, 574, 575
McGregor Magazine Agency 532
David McKay Co. 602, 604, 626, 627
Marquis Who's Who 572
Mason/Charter Publishers 578, 586, 587
Microfilming Corp. of America 4th Cover
Museum of Fine Arts 607

New American Library 521

Oryx Press 590, 594
Oxford University Press 620

Pantheon Books 601, 605
Pergamon Press 579
Pick Publishing Corp. 587
Playboy Press 594
Plenum Publishing Corp. 584
Praeger Publishers 585, 613, 623
Prentice-Hall 584, 597, 601, 604, 624, 633
Publishing Sciences Group 580
G. P. Putnam's Sons 624, 627, 628, 629, 631, 633, 636

Random House 628
Henry Regnery Co. 599, 600, 605, 612, 622

St. Martin's Press 600, 603, 629, 3rd Cover
Security World Books 560
Springer Publishing Co. 586
Springer-Verlag 581
Stechert Macmillan 539
Sterling Publishing Co. 636
Lyle Stuart 522

UNESCO 537
United Nations Publications 619
University Books 625
University Microfilms International 535
University of Toronto Press 595

Walker & Co. 615
Washington Irving Gallery 598
Water Information Center 586
Watson-Guptill Publications 578
John Wiley & Sons 582, 583

Yourdon Press 586

Sales-Business Offices

NEW YORK:
R.R. Bowker Company
1180 Avenue of the Americas
New York, New York 10036
Dominick Ciarletti 764-5246
Carlton H. Thiele 764-5135
Business & Production Manager,
Maureen J. Rose 764-3363
Classified Advertising Manager,
Frieda Johnson 764-3362

MIDWEST:
Walter Freed and Associates, Inc.
1720 Algonquin Road
Mount Prospect, Illinois 60056
Walter Freed 312 593-5255

WEST:
James K. Levitt and Associates, Inc.
13208 Saticoy Street
North Hollywood, California 91605
John Bolduc 213 875-1517

SOUTH:
Metropolitan Publishers
Representatives, Inc.
2045 Peachtree Road, N.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30309
Marvin Arnsdorff 404 352-2173

If you work with children's books... use SCHOOL LIBRARY JOURNAL to work with you.

SLJ reviews over 85% of all books published for children and young adults. It's the one and only magazine that serves your special needs. Best news of all, the cost is only $13.00 for a year's subscription, and we'll gladly bill you later. To start service, simply send your name and address to:

SLJ SCHOOL LIBRARY JOURNAL
1180 AVENUE OF THE AMERICAS
NEW YORK, N.Y. 10036

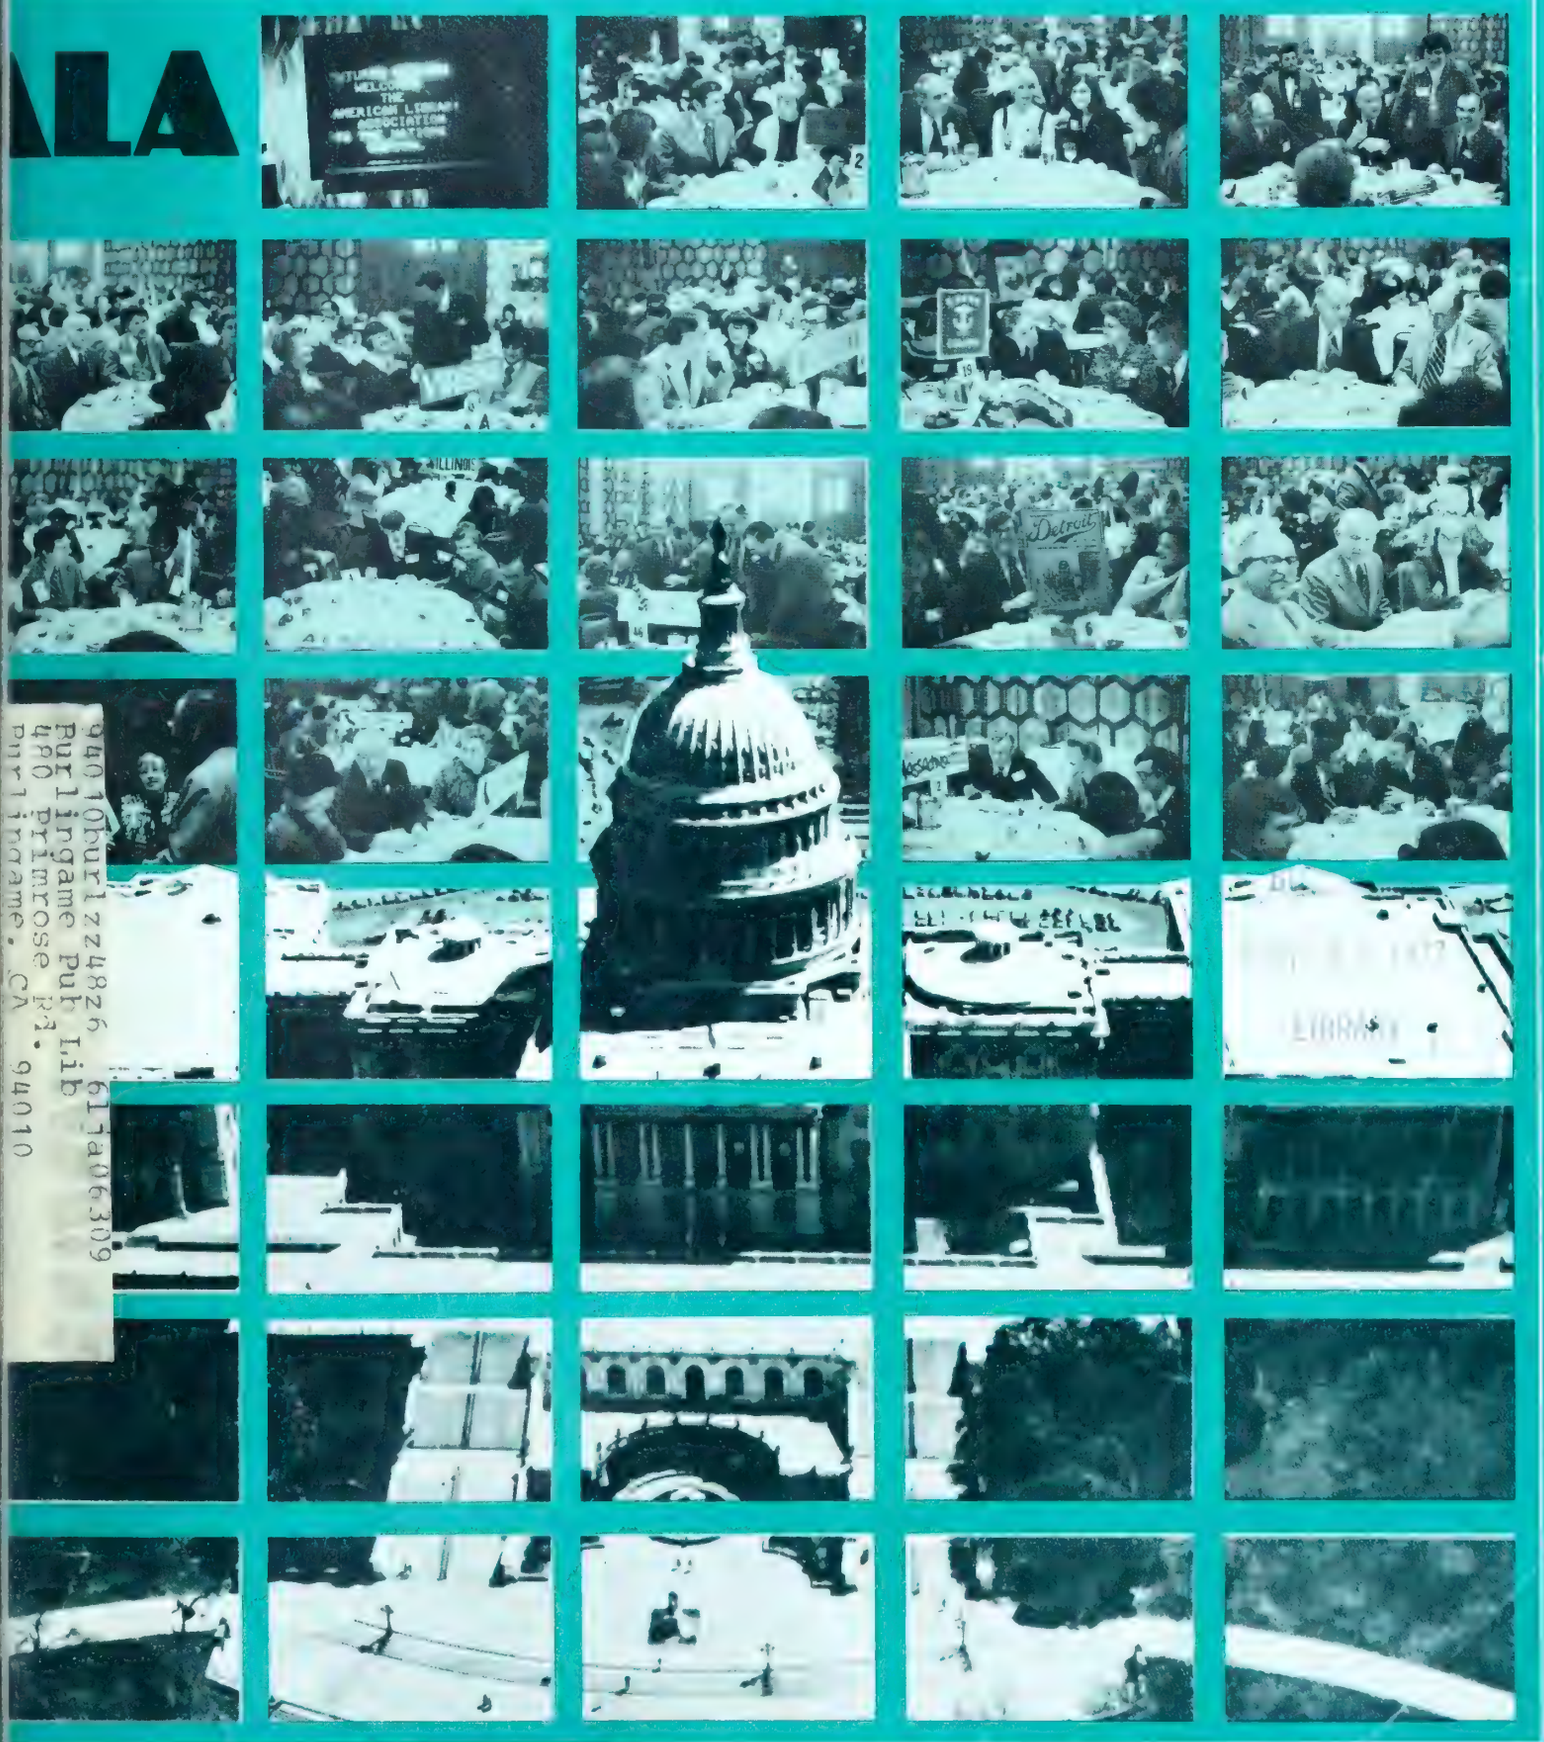
3/1

MARCH 15, 1977/ISSN 0000-0027

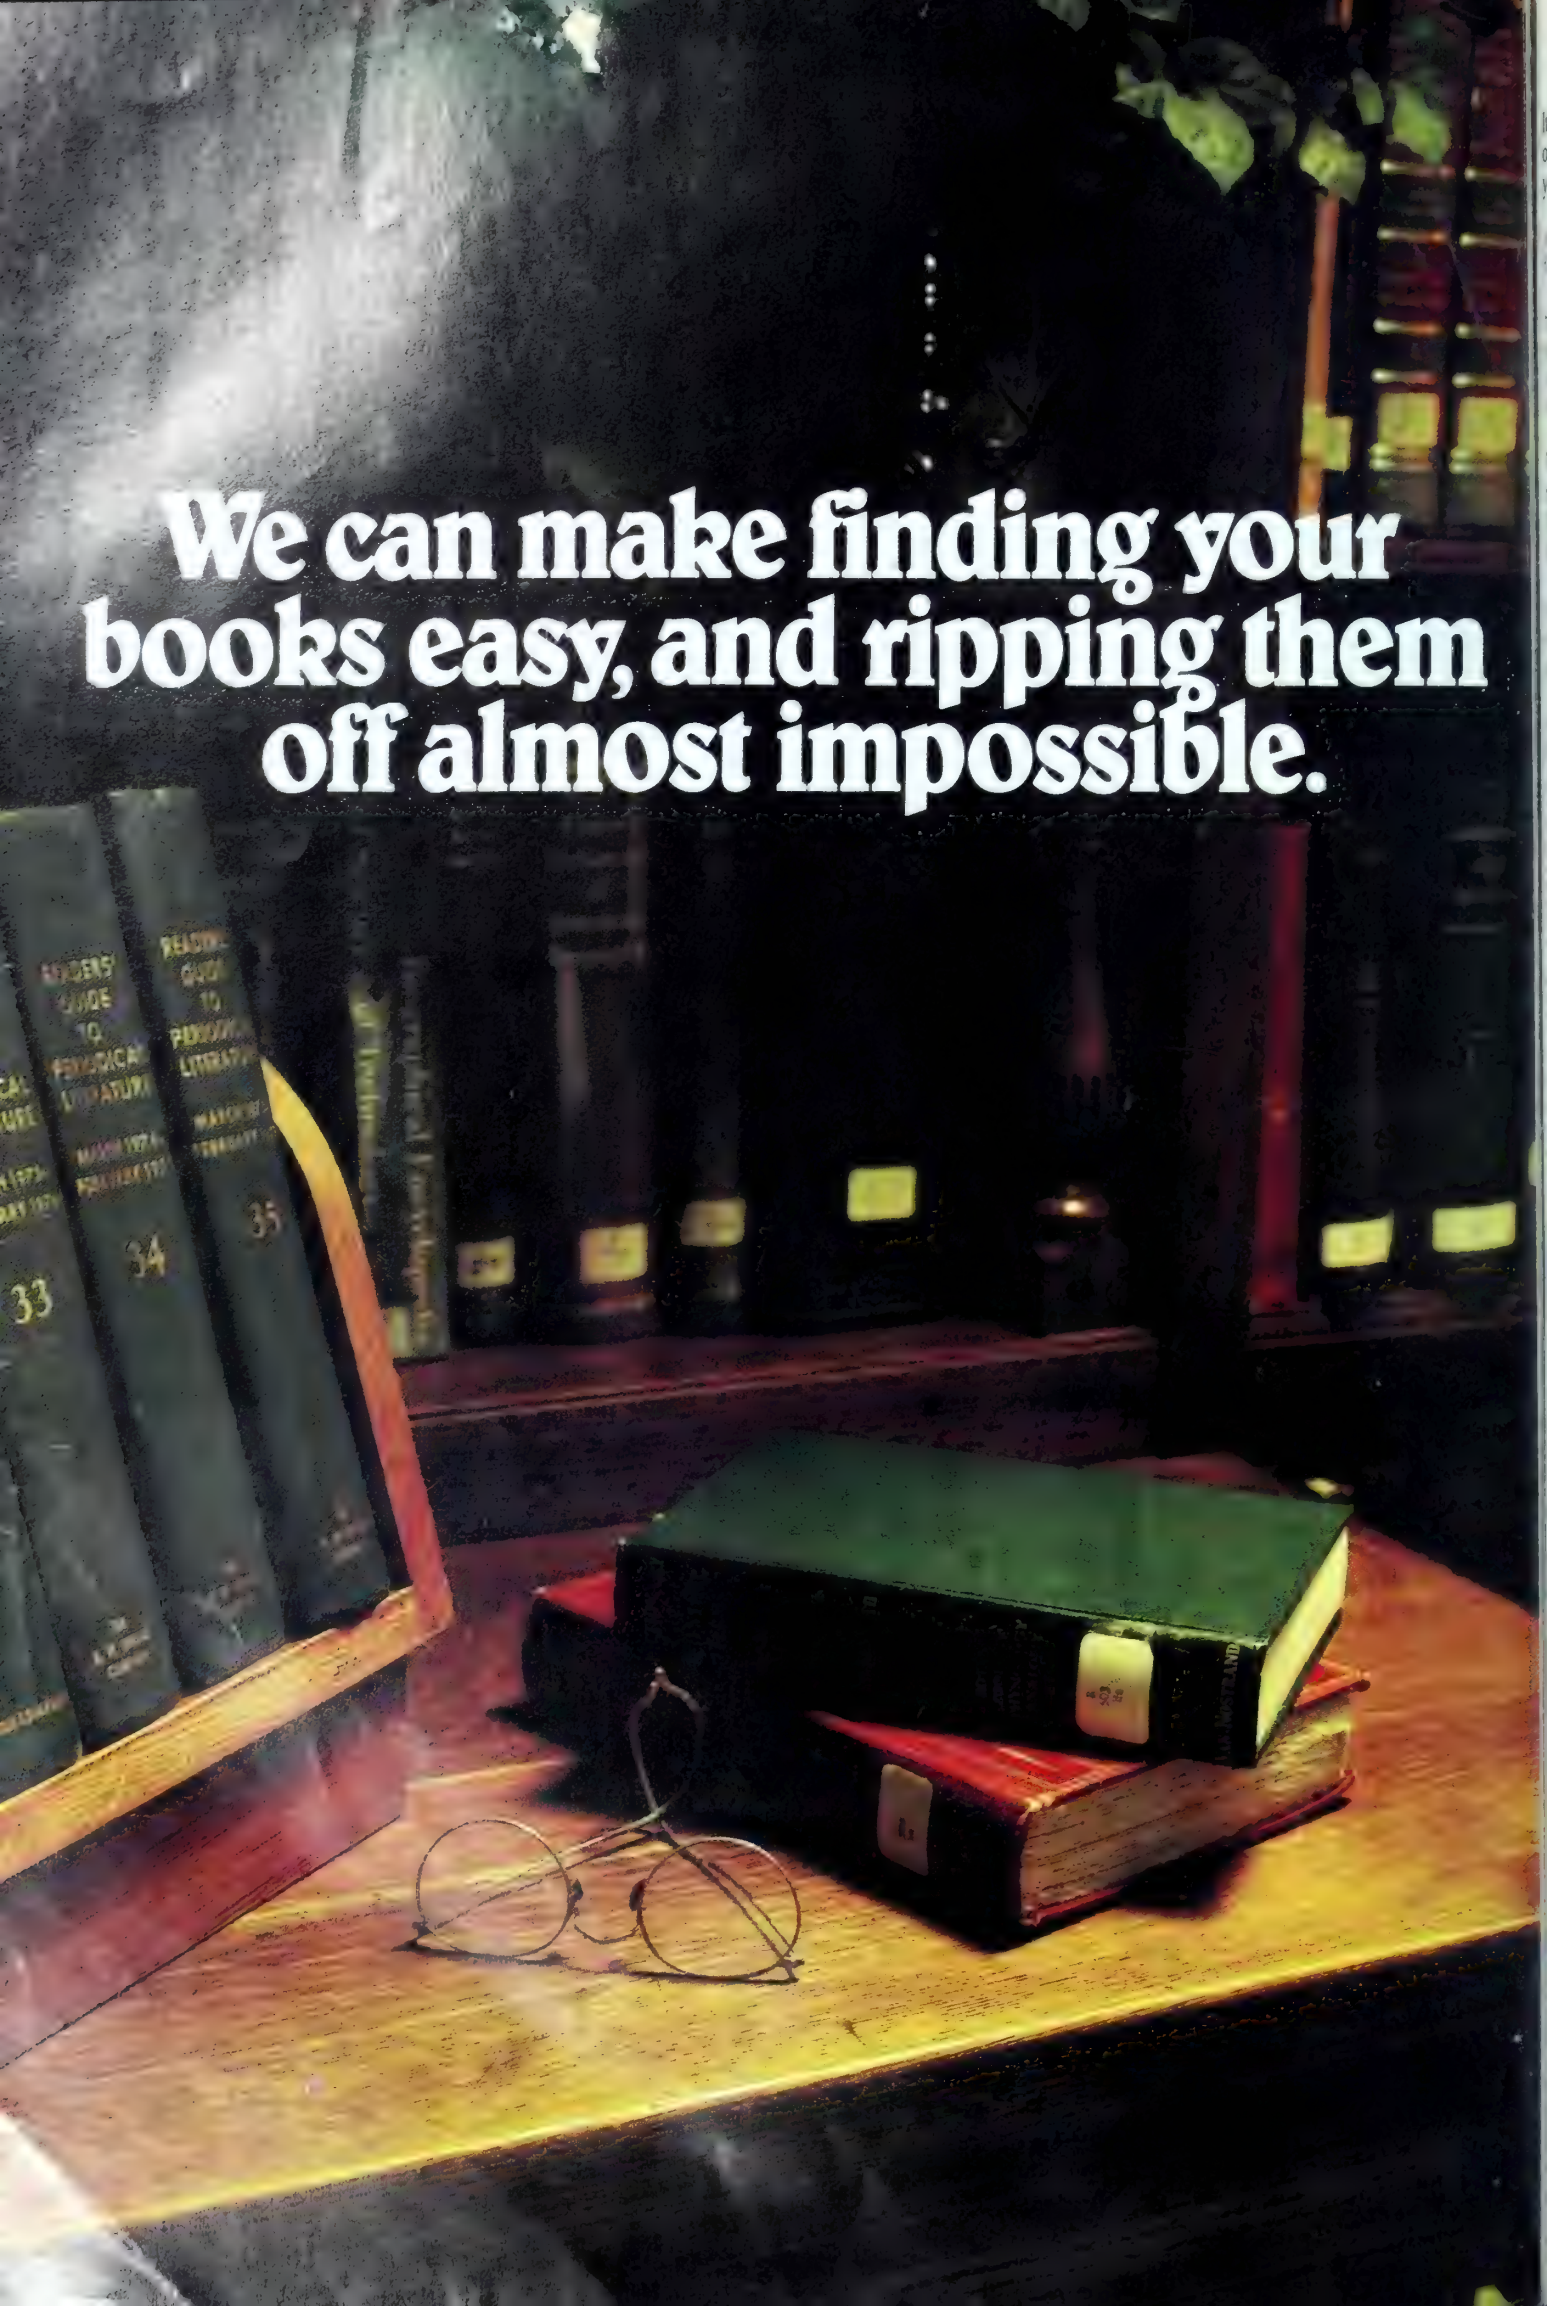
LIBRARY JOURNAL

LJ The High Cost of Hiring
ALA Midwinter Report

In the News: Database vendors start slashing prices; Nebraska academic libraries ponder merger; grassroots input sought for N.C. state plan



940106urlzz4826 611a06309
Burlingame Pub Lib
480 primrose Rd.
Burlingame, CA 94010



We can make finding your books easy, and ripping them off almost impossible.

In the catalog, on the shelf, or out on loan – we make sure you'll find the books you want.

One of the most critical library tasks is processing material for easy retrieval when you need it.

At 3M, we've used this logic to develop new and more efficient ways to streamline cataloging, control circulation, and solve the problem of book theft.

Your new books will find their way to the shelves faster with our Micrographic Catalog Retrieval System (MCRS).

MCRS speeds up the cataloging process and simplifies verification for acquisitions and interlibrary loans.

Here's how it works: MCRS subscribers receive, on microfiche, the latest catalog records of the Library of Congress, the National Union Catalog, and shared entries of eight major Canadian universities on a weekly or monthly basis. In addition to the current year's entries, subscriptions include up to five complete years of retrospective microfiche data containing the cumulated entries of these sources.

MCRS regularly supplies an updated Title Index and Main Entry Index on microfiche and a hard copy L.C. Card Number Index, allowing you to find cataloging information through several access points.

You'll find catalog card production quicker with a 3M Model 500 Microfilm Dry Silver Reader-Printer.

Cataloging speed isn't the only way MCRS saves you money. By using a 3M Model 500 Reader-Printer, MCRS subscribers can make an intermediate catalog card master directly from the data fiche. Then add your own call numbers and produce in-house card sets ready for headings.

Pinpoint any book's location, who has it, and when it is to be returned with the 3M Brand Inventory Control System (ICS).

And these are only a few of the jobs that ICS can do for you.

The 3M Brand Inventory Control System uses a light pen and bar code label, identifying each unique library item and patron, to link every transaction on-line to a powerful minicomputer. This minicomputer can process and coordinate a multitude of data elements, fully automating all your library's circulation functions.

The ICS performs fast, accurate check-out and check-in; records holds; computes fines; automatically prints overdue mailers; generates patron directories; keeps track of items interloaned between library branches; determines inactive items to help 'weed' your collection; keeps track of reserve collection loans; and much, much more.

It is the only system that can be connected directly to the "Tattle-Tape" system and tie in book security to the ICS operation.

With its ultra fast response time, elimination of separate files, and extensive report-generating capabilities, the 3M Inventory Control System provides you with the circulation control you need today, to meet the exploding demands of tomorrow.

It's truly the one System that can do it all!

Keep your books available for patron use with our "Tattle-Tape®" Book Detection System.

Advanced cataloging methods and automated circulation control are wasted efforts if you're continually losing your collection by theft.

Proven in over 1,000 installations throughout the world, the "Tattle-Tape" Book Detection System stops book thieves cold. Attempts to take a treated book through the detection area without proper charge-out will automatically trigger an alarm alerting the library staff.

No matter what angle the book is carried or whether it is hidden under clothing, or inside a conventional briefcase, backpack or purse.

A book thief doesn't mind tearing a security marker out of a book. But "Tattle-Tape" markers are completely hidden... so thieves can't find them.

To find out more about our products, just send us this coupon or reply by letter!

All the coupons and letters we receive will be included in a drawing to give away a facsimile edition of The Birds of America, volumes 1 and 2, from original drawings by John James Audubon; 29½" x 39½". It will be presented to the winner's library, with an imprinted dedication in the name of the winner. The drawing will be held on June 20, 1977 in Detroit, Michigan during the American Library Association's Annual Conference.

Please send me more information about:

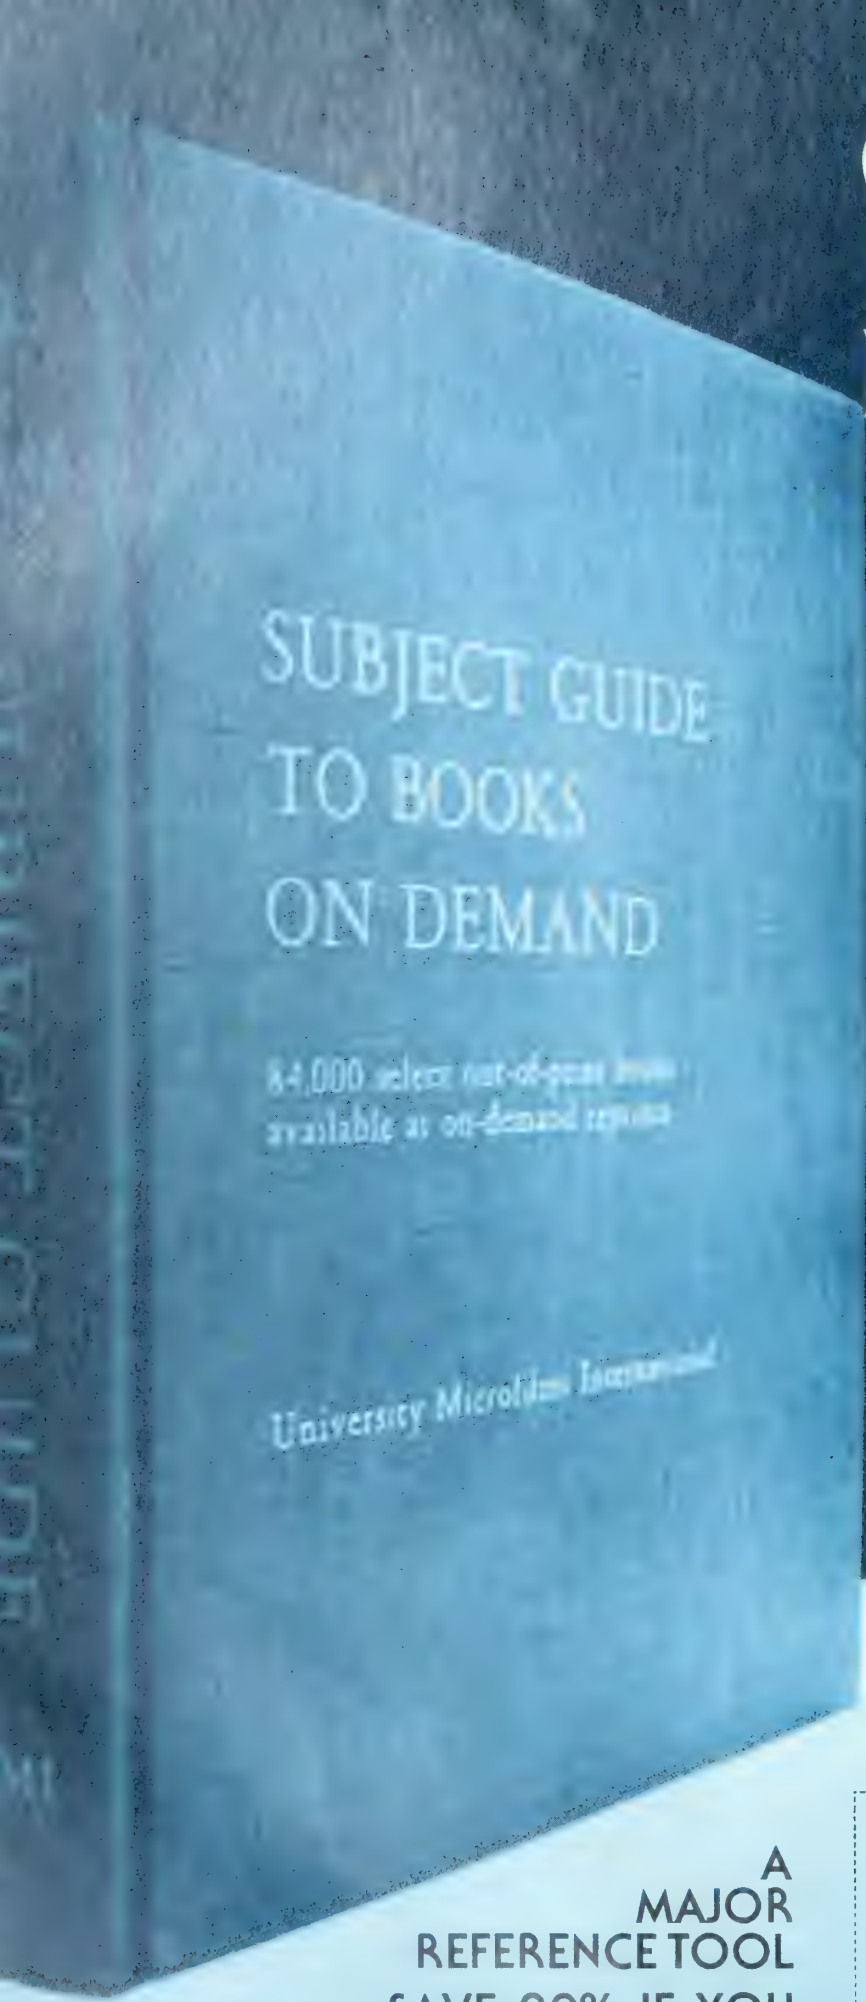
_____ Micrographic Catalog Retrieval System
_____ Inventory Control System
_____ Model 500 Microfilm Reader-Printer
_____ "Tattle-Tape" Book Detection System
_____ I'd like a 3M Library Systems representative to call.

Mail to:
3M Company
Library Systems
Bldg. 220-9E, 3M Center
St. Paul, Minnesota 55101

Your Name_____
Title_____
Name of Library_____
Institution_____
No. of Volumes_____
Address_____
City_____ State_____ Zip_____
Telephone No._____

Library Systems 3M COMPANY
MICROFILM PRODUCTS DIVISION
3M CENTER · SAINT PAUL, MINNESOTA 55101

coming may 15th



University Microfilms announces Subject Guide to Books on Demand...a long-awaited reference tool that's designed to unlock the whole body of scholarship contained in out-of-print works.

With 263 subject headings, plus a cross-referencing index, this library-bound volume belongs on every reference shelf next to Books in Print.

This fall, University Microfilms intends to carry its reference service two steps further by publishing an Author Guide and a Title Guide to Books on Demand.

The three volumes will comprise the most complete bibliographic treatment ever devoted to out-of-print works.

Best of all, if you order before publication, you can save 20% off the regular $24.50 price and enjoy a ten-day free examination.

And, if you order the three volume set before May 15th, you'll save an extra 10%!

A MAJOR REFERENCE TOOL

SAVE 20% IF YOU ORDER YOURS NOW

MORE THAN 800 PAGES

FULL BIBLIOGRAPHIC AND ORDERING INFORMATION

BOOKS ON DEMAND

Mail to
University Microfilms International
P.O. Box 1467, Ann Arbor, MI 48106

☐Yes, we want the 3-volume reference set. Ship as each is published and bill us $17.55, plus $1 for shipping and handling, per volume

☐Yes, we want Subject Guide. Please ship upon publication and bill us $19.50, plus $1 for shipping and handling

Name _____

Organization _____ Title _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Purchase Order # _____ Tax Exempt # _____

These prepublication prices valid until May 15, 1977 L

LIBRARY JOURNAL

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF: John N. Berry III
SENIOR EDITORS: Shirley Havens
Karl Nyren
EDITOR, BOOK REVIEW: Janet Fletcher
ASSOCIATE EDITORS:
Book Review: Robert R. Harris
Bibliographic: Bette-Lee Fox
News: Noël Savage
PRODUCTION EDITOR: Ellen Mangin
ART EDITOR: Gilbert Fletcher
REVIEW EDITORS: Marlene Charnizon
Ellen Kozlowski
Philip Mattera
Anneliese Schwarzer
ASSISTANT EDITORS: Maureen Crowley
Ann Sankar
PRODUCTION ASSISTANTS: Nancy Brown
Ann Yazejian
EDITORIAL ASSISTANTS: Andrea Kowler
Anne Richter

ADV. SALES MANAGER: Richard H. Brown
BUSINESS & ADV. PRODUCTION MANAGER: Maureen J. Rose
PUBLISHER: Paul J. Carnese

LIBRARY JOURNAL is published by R. R. Bowker Co., a Xerox company. Robert F. Asleson, President.

Direct editorial and advertising correspondence to 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York 10036. Telephone: (212) 764-5100. Subscription inquiries and changes of address should be directed to R. R. Bowker Company, Subscription Dept., P.O. Box 67, Whitinsville, Mass. 01588. Publications Offices at 117 Church Street, Whitinsville, Mass. 01488. Issued twice a month, September through June, monthly in July and August. Second class postage paid at Whitinsville, Mass. and additional mailing offices. Copyright © 1977 Xerox Corporation.

LIBRARY JOURNAL is indexed in Library Literature, Library & Information Science Abstracts, and Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature. SUBSCRIPTIONS: USA: 1 year $19.00; 2 years $36.00; 3 years $51.00. Canada and Postal Union of the Americas and Spain, add $2 per year; elsewhere, add $3 per year. Single copy $1.35. Spring, fall, and winter announcement numbers, $3.25 each. POSTMASTER: Please send Form 3579 to R. R. Bowker Company, P.O. Box 67, Whitinsville, Mass. 01588.

LIBRARY JOURNAL reserves the right to make its own independent judgment as to the acceptability of advertising copy and illustrations in advertisements. Advertiser and advertisng agency assume liability for all content (including text, representation and illustrations) of advertisements printed, and also assume responsibility for any claims arising therefrom against the publisher. Offers to sell products, which appear in LIBRARY JOURNAL, are subject to all laws and regulations and are void where so prohibited.

Letters 645
Calendar 646
Editorial 651

News:

Database vendors start slashing prices . . . North Carolina launches statewide planning effort . . . 1977's energy crunch forces libraries to shut down . . . GPO says private sector to do more gov't. printing . . . nominations for ALA Council & Presidency sought . . . academic library network proposed in Nebraska . . . OCLC governance study slated . . . 1st MARC record transmitted computer-to-computer by LC . . . more libraries switching to computer-output-microfilm . . . statewide computerized circulation eyed in Illinois 665

People 675

FEATURES

The High Cost of Hiring
BY REA CHRISTOFFERSON 677

It All Boiled Down to Money
Report of the Midwinter Meeting of the American Library Association 682

Professional Reading 692
Checklist 694
Magazines 695

THE BOOK REVIEW

Book Reviews 696
Index to Reviews and Professional Reading 732

Classified 733
Index to Advertisers 736

January 1977 marks the culmination of a remarkable publishing event.

THE READER'S ADVISER

A Layman's Guide to Literature

Volumes Two & Three of the new 12th edition of The Reader's Adviser: A Layman's Guide to Literature will be published in January, 1977. The 3-volume set will be complete. For more than a half a century previous editions of this classic work have filled the information needs of librarians, students, scholars, teachers, booksellers, and booklovers. This new 12th edition maintains and expands that tradition of service and excellence.

Volume One: The Best in American and British Fiction, Poetry, Essays, Literary Biography, Bibliography, and Reference
Edited by Sarah L. Prakken

"A must for the book-minded reader."—John Barkham Reviews

"In chronological order from Anglo-Saxon times to Colin Wilson and Philip Roth, each author is characterized in pleasant biographical and critical notes, and his or her books are listed with publishing data ... an incredible supply of carefully selected literary information."—Saturday Review

Each period is introduced by a critical essay written by an acknowledged specialist. It lists the most important general works on the period. It tells you about the most important writers of the period—who they were, why they wrote, what they achieved, how they were regarded in their own time and now. It lists all editions of all their works and all important works about them. It's a biographical directory, buying guide, comprehensive survey of English and American literature, booklover's feast of hidden elements in literature—all rolled into one, easy-to-use volume.
0-8352-0781-1, 1974, 808 pages, $25.00.

Volume Two: The Best in American and British Drama and World Literature in English Translation
Edited by F.J. Sypher

Here's the same "incredible supply" of carefully selected information on American and British drama and foreign literature in translation. Experts prepared the individual chapters, providing new introductions, new biocritical sketches on the pertinent authors, and annotated listings of books by and about the authors. Pub date, publisher, and price are given for the books listed. Chapters covering the sweep of American and British drama, from earliest times to the present, have been updated as have those on major European and world literatures. But the greatest expansion has been in the volume's coverage of other European, Middle East, and Asian literatures. Countries like Estonia, Bulgaria, Latvia, Albania, the Ukraine, Armenia, and Turkey are being adequately represented for the first time.
0-8352-0852-4, January 1977, c. 775 pages, $25

Volume Three: The Best in the Reference Literature of the World
Edited by Jack A. Clarke,
University of Wisconsin, Madison

The final volume of the 12th edition of The Reader's Adviser is a thoroughly updated, expanded guide to the best of the available English-language books on a wide range of nonliterary subjects. Covering general reference books and biography, Bibles, world religions, philosophy, psychology, the sciences, history, the lively arts, communications, folklore, humor, travel—it lists the most important authors in each subject together with complete bibliographic listings of their works in print. While the emphasis is on recently published material, available reprints of standard works are included.
0-8352-0853-2, January 1977, c. 950 pages, $25

BOWKER
NEW YORK & LONDON

Order all books from:
R.R. Bowker Order Department,
P.O. Box 1807, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106.
Outside Western Hemisphere order from:
Bowker, Erasmus House, Epping, Essex, England.
All orders plus shipping and handling.
Sales tax added where applicable.
Prices are subject to change and slightly higher outside the U.S. and its territories.

LETTERS

City branches, what and where

David Macksam
Branch Librarian, Enoch Pratt Free Library, Baltimore, Maryland:

The symposium on "The Branch Library in the City" (LJ January 15, p. 161-73) was one of the most stimulating articles to have appeared in the last year.

As a front liner in branches, I would like to offer several comments and reactions:

1. People, young and old, rich and poor, black and white, who want library service will seek it out, be it a kiosk, bookmobile, or traditional branch library. Active library users are more interested in the contents than in the container.

2. What is more important, the provision of a geographic spread of library outlets or the actual provision of the piece of material or item of information requested? As library funding decreases the operating costs of large branch systems consume an ever increasing percentage of the total budget, leaving less and less funds for materials. What is the validity of access to facilities which cannot provide the materials requested?

3. As large cities revitalize their core areas to serve as loci of cultural activities and as efficient public mass transportation develops, it seems likely that large central libraries located in downtown areas will remain as viable service outlets.

4. The proper type and size of branch outlets can only be determined when both the library and the community clearly know what their public service priorities are.

That damned image

Alice Wittig
Librarian, Mendocino Elementary School, Mendocino, California:

Your editorial of January 1, 1977 (p. 7) was worth several huzzahs, assorted cheers, and this small note of appreciation. Ever since 1975 when NLW was handed over to an ad agency, I have been sick about the image projected, our use of funds for this purpose, and what it says about our lack of belief in ourselves.

The LJ issue on Energy is a fine addition to the literature, but as you well pointed out, the use of it depends on getting the library known as the "different" place that it is. If memory serves, the Rosenthal Agency came up with the forgettable slogan for 1975, "your library has all the answers," and then proceeded to put such spokespersons as Carroll O'Connor and Valerie Harper to advance this idea.

If we really believed in ourselves, then the calm notices that you advocate would be heard. If we really believed in our holdings we would boot out the clever writers. The greatest ideas and finest wit of the world are waiting to speak our message if we wish. It remains the sad fact that librarians don't have enough faith in the true worth of libraries to stand up to the fads and to trust quality over trendy. That damned image again of the out-of-step profession has just enough validity with us to keep us from seeing that we are way up front with the most.

"a disinterested horse"

Marvin Scilken
Editor, *The U*N*A*B*A*S*H*E*D Librarian*, New York, N.Y.:

Some time ago the New York Times (a local paper) ran a trailer after the evening news on local TV stations to the effect: "If there's something in the news tonight that you'd like to know more about, pick up a copy of the New York Times tomorrow." Thinking librarians could play in that league, the *U*N*A*B*A*S*H*E*D Librarian* purchased an ad (after initial rejection) in the Times to the effect, "If there's something in today's newspaper you'd like to know more about, stop by your local library." The ad appeared in the personal/commercial notices column. So far as I recall, no one noticed. No one wrote, none of my friends even mentioned it.

In theory your slogan, "You need to know more about energy . . . and the only place in town you can find out is the library" (LJ, January 1, p. 7), is a good one, but in reality I find that the American public rejects many appeals on their need to know. Even during the Arab oil boycott there was little interest in the "Energy Crisis," at least in the library I work in. To help people find the stuff we established a subject heading, "the Energy crisis," and still not much moved. No matter how full the trough, a disinterested horse will not partake.

U.C.'s serials locating

Richard M. Dougherty
University Librarian, University of California, Berkeley:

The January 1 LJ includes an account of a METRO resource sharing conference at which Richard Boss, University Librarian, Princeton, is reported to have commented that one-half of the serial volumes at the University of California could not be located (p. 24-25). Is Boss referring to the University's nine campuses or to the University of California, Berkeley? In either case, his statement is patently incorrect. Like all libraries, some volumes are misshelved, but the situation at the University libraries is no better or worse than at comparable libraries. I can assure readers of LJ that users of the University's libraries are far more successful in locating serials than might be inferred from the Boss statement.

ED. NOTE—Boss, as noted in LJ, was quoting Dougherty.

Parking meter fuss

Jane B. Nida
Director, Arlington County Department of Libraries, Virginia:

You are partially correct in your response in the December 15th issue of LJ ("LJ's old year awards," p. 2525). The Arlington County Public Library did not attempt to raise funds by installing parking meters in the library parking lot. The County Board of Arlington County placed the meters in the parking lot. The staff joined the Friends of the Library and a large lobby to have the parking meters removed.

Our elected officials were completely amazed over the "fuss" that the citizens did make about paid parking lots for library users. The County Board quickly responded and removed the meters.

For clarification, Arlington County does not have a Library Board. Of course, the staff would not suggest that revenue be obtained from parking meters. In any event, we are glad that you did report on it. We hope that other jurisdictions will not be faced with like problems.

"Fine Print" pitch

Sandra Kirshenbaum
Editor & Publisher, Fine Print, San Francisco, California:

I have nothing but admiration for the manner in which Bill Katz is able to digest and present for librarians the significant and enduring aspects of small press publishing in this country, a field of publishing which is confusing and frequently frivolous and narcissistic, yet just as often vital and precursive (". . . LJ's Small Press Roundup," LJ, December 15, 1976, p. 2537-45).

However, Professor Katz failed to bring to the attention of the LJ readership an important new bibliographic tool for dealing with this field. Fine Print, a Review for the Arts of the Book, is now entering its third year, and is the only review which covers the output of small fine presses. These are the so-called "limited edition" or "press" books in which a highly personal effort has been put into format and materials in order to create a totally apt expression of content. Some of these books are hand-made on private letterpress equipment, others are produced in small university or commercial presses, but always the emphasis is on the book as an object of physical beauty and originality as well as a conveyor of literature. This is a field which deserves the constant scrutiny of librarians because here is material which may have lasting significance from both literary and artistic standpoints, to say nothing of its importance in the publishing history of a region. Moreover, these books are not necessarily expensive. Indeed, they represent the best bargains, value for dollar, to be had in book production today.

If libraries have countless books and magazines reviewing painting, sculpture, weaving, and photography as art forms, should they not have at least one review that treats the book as a physical entity and an artistic object? Can librarians be conservators and purveyors of books and yet be blind to books? Librarians have long been criticized for not reading books. I believe they deserve equal criticism for not seeing books. Fine Print presents one medium for learning how to see a book, and those who do not learn to do so, in one way or another, deserve every crummy (and I use the word purposely), sloppily printed, shoddily bound book their budgets can afford.

In addition to detailed bibliographic descriptions and criticisms of fine press books, FP features articles on printing and typography, bookbinding, calligraphy, papermaking, and the history of the book. There are also reviews of trade books related to these subjects by distinguished people in the field and a calendar of events which is probably the most complete listing published of current book exhibits in libraries around the country.

The graphic and book arts today represent a growing medium of personal literary and artistic expression among Americans, and librarians need to become aware of that trend, much as they came to recognize the protest literature of the sixties and the feminist literature of the seventies as authentic cultural phenomena worthy of analysis, preservation, and access.

Our "foolish logo"

Huibert Paul
Serials Librarian, University of Oregon Library, Eugene:

I read your "Creative Serial Records Award" (LJ, December 15, 1976, p. 2525). The people of the NSDP at LC did the right thing when they regarded your foolish logo "LJ" right in front of Library Journal as an official title change. We did the same thing at the University of Oregon Library, and to our chagrin we now have another title change, namely from LJ/Library Journal back to Library Journal.

Serials librarians are accustomed to the clownish behavior of publishers. What we really find repulsive, however, is the fact that you now even have the nerve to make fun of us. Yours is a prime example of frivolous title changes which cost us many thousands of dollars per year. You should have known better.

I hope you will repent and apologize in a future editorial. Please read my article in Vol. 14, Nov. 1, Winter 1970, of Library Resources and Technical Services.

"Personal" is inadequate

Sidney L. Jackson
Professor, School of Library Science, Kent State University, Ohio:

That "the basic assumptions which relate to knowledge . . . always transcend empirical observation" is true ("IR history," A review of John Metcalfe's Information Retrieval, British & American by Louis Vagianos, LJ, October 15, 1976, p. 2151-52). But, are "the philosophic foundations" of classification schemes "at best, personal"?

Individuals may think of their schemes as "personal," but when the schemes are considered at large, historically, their roots can be identified in ideas about the classification of knowledge, publication records and library experience, and the impact thereon of social change. For example, Dewey's scheme owed a great deal to Hegel; LC's, to pragmatism. To speak of either one as "personal" seems to me grossly inadequate.

CALENDAR

MAR. 24-26—ILLINOIS ASSN. OF SCHOOL LIBRARIANS, Pick-Congress Hotel, Chicago. Theme: "Carnival of Knowledge." Contact: Ms. Jane Block, Belvidere Community Unit, District #100, Belvidere, Ill. 61008.

MAR. 27-28—INSTITUTE ON QUANTITATIVE MEASUREMENT and Dynamic Library Service, Unit II, Critical Evaluation of Quantitative Methods for Library Management. School of Lib. Science, Simmons College, Boston. Contact: Coord. of Continuing Ed., School of Library Science, Simmons College, 300 The Fenway, Boston, Mass. 02115. (617) 739-2222.

APR. 6-8—ALABAMA LA, Montgomery, Governor's House Motel. Contact: Patricia Moore, Exhibits Chairperson, Alabama LA, P.O. Box 9266, Mountain Brook, Ala.

APR. 12-16—TEXAS LA/NEW MEXICO LA, Joint Conference, El Paso Civic Center. Theme: "In Search of Learning." Contact: Jerre Hetherington, Texas LA, P.O. Box 505, Houston, Tex. 77001.

APR. 17-23—NATIONAL LIBRARY WEEK.

APR. 18-21—INFO. INDUSTRY ASSN., Information Industry Conference & Exposition, Washington, D.C., Shoreham Americana Hotel. Theme: "The Information Manager . . ." Contact: Paul G. Zurkowski, IIA/Washington, 4720 Montgomery Lane, Bethesda, Md. 20014; (301) 654-4150.

APR. 20-23—NEW JERSEY LA, Atlantic City, Howard Johnson's Regency Motor Hotel. Contact: Anne King, Exhibits Chairperson, 3-25 Dorothy St., Fair Lawn, N.J. 07410.

APR. 24-25—CONF. ON ED. FOR INFO. SCIENCE, Strategies for Change in Library School Programs. School of Library Information Science, State U. of N.Y. at Albany. Sponsored by ISAD/LED of American LA, AALS, ASIS, SLA, MLA. Contact: Irving Klempner, School of Library and Info. Science, State U. of N.Y. at Albany, 1400 Washington Ave., Albany, N.Y. 12222; (518) 457-6157.

APR. 28-30—WASHINGTON LA, Vancouver, Washington. Contact: Janet Blumberg, Program Chair, Washington State Library, Olympia, Wash. 98504.

MAY 5-7—WYOMING LA, Jackson.

MAY 8-20—LIBRARY ADMINISTRATORS DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM, College of Library and Info. Services, U. of Maryland, College Park. John Rizzo, Prof. of Management, Western Michigan U., Director. Contact: Effie T. Knight, College of Library and Info. Services, University of Maryland, College Park, Md, 20742.

MAY 11-14—FLORIDA LA, St. Petersburg Hilton. Contact: V. Nistendirk, Exec. Secy., 2862 W. W. Kelly Rd., Tallahassee, Fla. 32301.

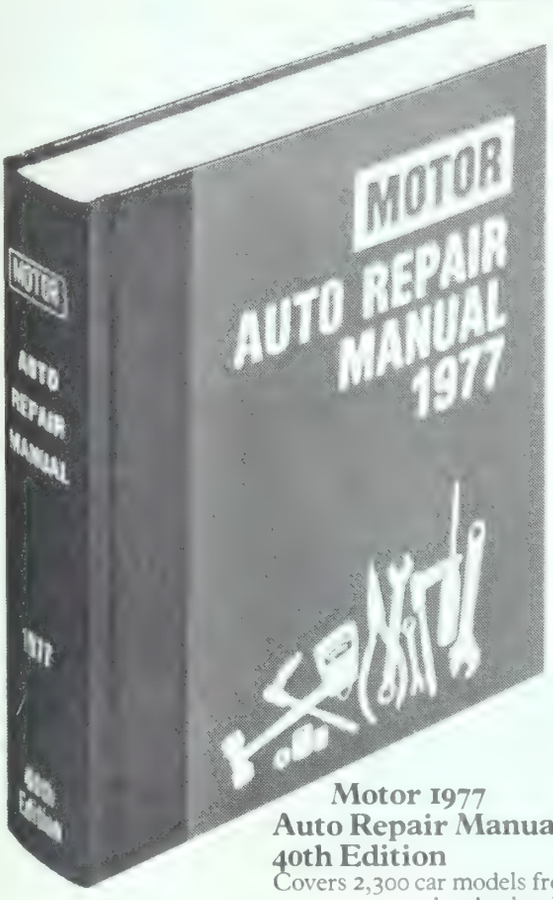
JUNE 17-23—AMERICAN LA, Detroit.

JUNE 20-24—AMERICAN Theology. Contact: John Trotti, Librarian, Union Theological Seminary, 3401 Brook Road, Richmond, Va. 23227.

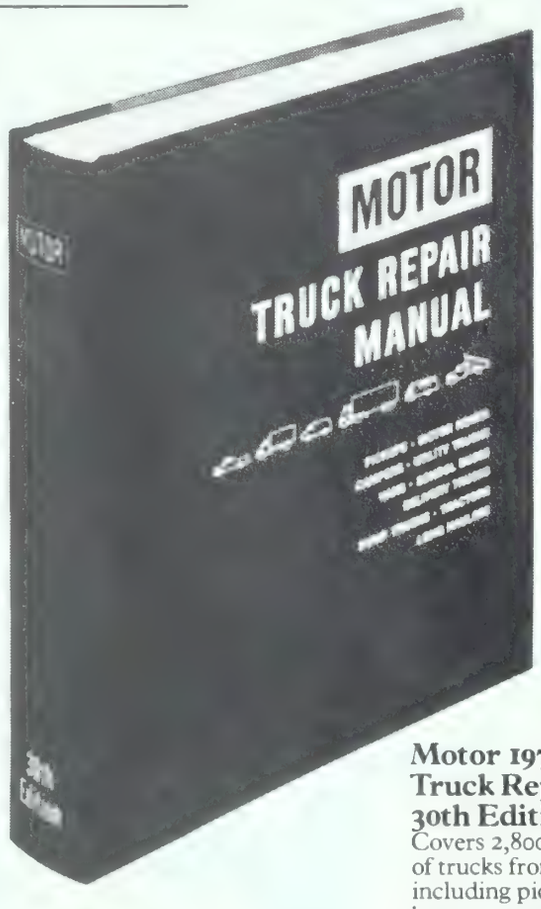
Now from Franklin Watts Hearst Books

Franklin Watts, Inc. is pleased to announce a distribution arrangement with Hearst Books. All Hearst Books are now available to schools and libraries direct from Franklin Watts.

MOTOR BOOKS

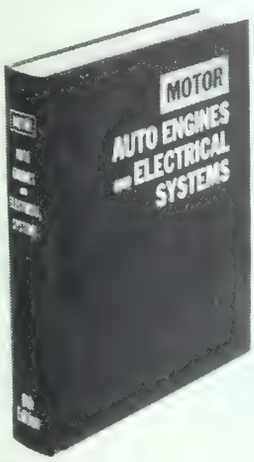


Motor 1977 Auto Repair Manual, 40th Edition
Covers 2,300 car models from 1971 to 1977– the absolutely definitive work on the subject.
$14.95 1,376 pages

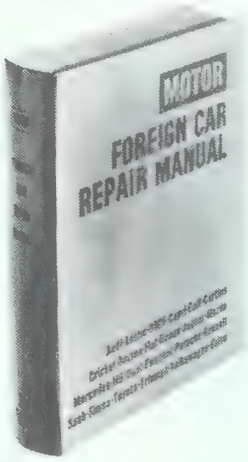


Motor 1977 Truck Repair Manual, 30th Edition
Covers 2,800 popular models of trucks from 1966 to 1977, including pickups, motor homes, campers, vans, and utility vehicles.
$21.95 1,472 pages

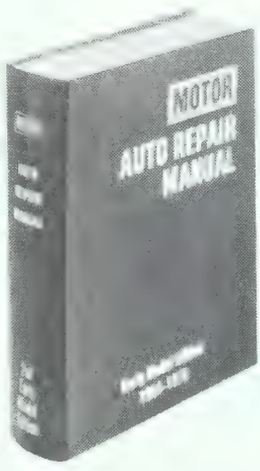
PLUS



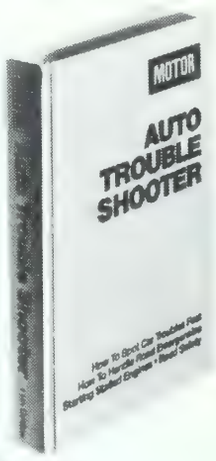
Motor Auto Engines and Electrical Systems
$13.95 712 pages



Motor Foreign Car Repair Manual
$18.95 864 pages



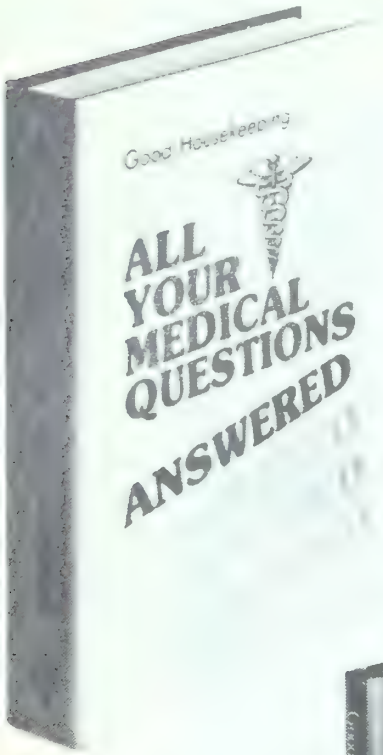
Motor Auto Repair Manual– Early Model Edition 1964-70
$14.95 1,104 pages



Motor Auto Trouble Shooter
$5.95 336 pages

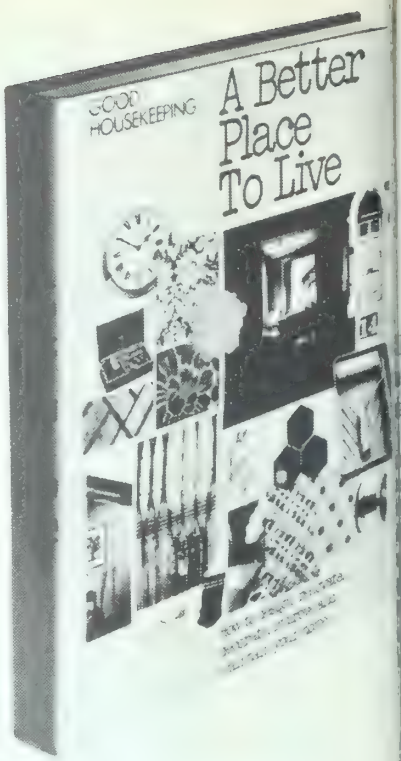
and lots more.

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING BOOKS



Good Housekeeping All Your Medical Questions Answered
by Lester L. Coleman, M.D.
a K. S. Giniger book
Vital detailed information on hundreds of health problems in easy-to-use question-and-answer form, by the author of the nationally syndicated column, Speaking of Your Health.
$9.95 336 pages
Publication Date: April, 1977

Good Housekeeping A Better Place To Live
by Albert Jackson and David Day
A unique new guide to planning, converting, and repairing any home, with projects and complete instructions for readers of every level of skill.
$14.95 256 pages
Publication Date: May, 1977



Good Housekeeping Book of Quilt Making
by Vera P. Guild
"Unlike the McCall's Book of Quilts... in which the book designers literally ran out of pages, Guild's book has been laid out with plenty of elbow room– and contains more detailed instructions and graphs than McCall's. Some of the more unusual patterns in this collection of 26: a granny comforter, an alphabet comforter, a medley quilt, and a Dutch countryside quilt."
—Booklist
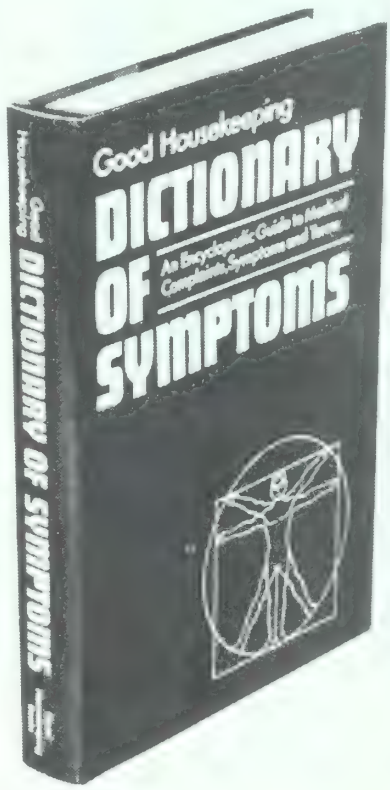
$10.95 160 pages



Good Housekeeping Dictionary of Symptoms text by A. Ward Gardner, M.D.
intro by Winfred Van Atta
"The Good Housekeeping Publication... is intended to prepare the layman to become an informed and responsible patient. The book contains information about the common and serious human diseases along with the physical signs and symptoms that signal their presence.... An extensive chapter on first aid and a special section on nursing the sick at home are important features....for public library collections... The Good Housekeeping book would be my selection."
—Phyllis S. Mirsky, UCLA Biomedical Lib. in Library Journal
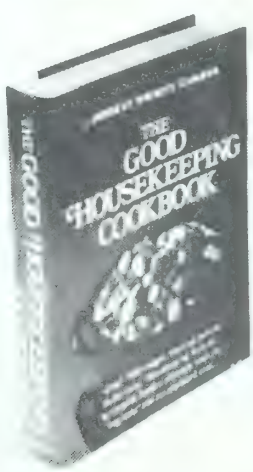
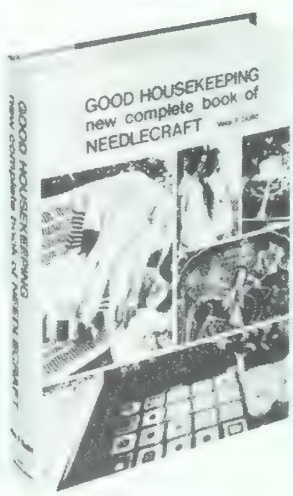
$9.95 256 pages

PLUS



The Good Housekeeping Cookbook
$9.95 812 pages



Good Housekeeping New Complete Book of Needlecraft
$9.95 560 pages
by Vera P. Guild

Good Housekeeping Basic Gardening Techniques
$8.95 320 pages

and lots more.

Hearst Books now available from Franklin Watts

MOTOR BOATING & SAILING BOOKS

oting, Seamanship
d Small Boat
ndling, 52nd Edition
Charles F. Chapman
e most complete and widely
d of all boating books.
oroughly updated, this ion covers the latest nges in governmental ulations. Includes laws, es, charts.
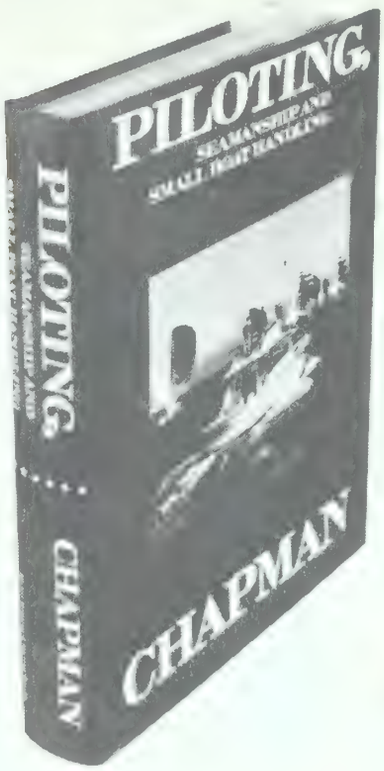
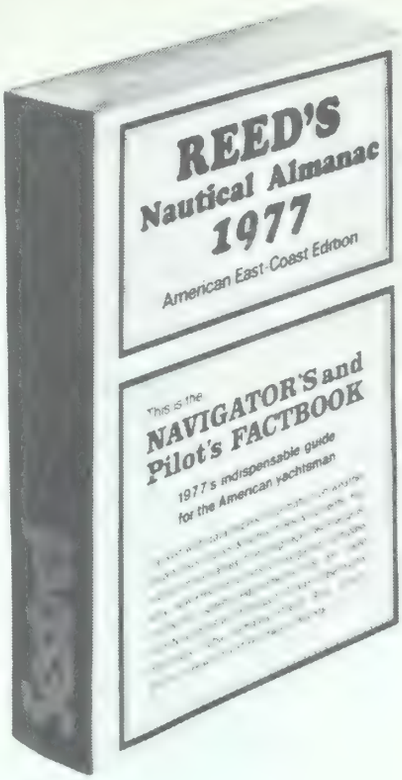
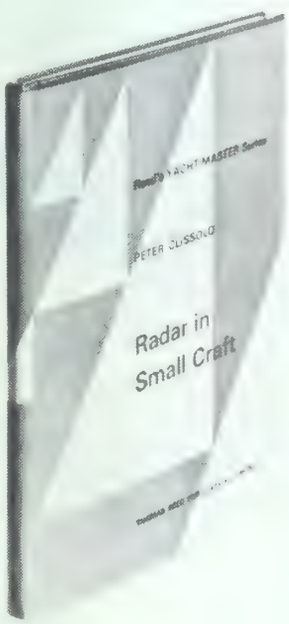
ndard Edition: $11.95
pages

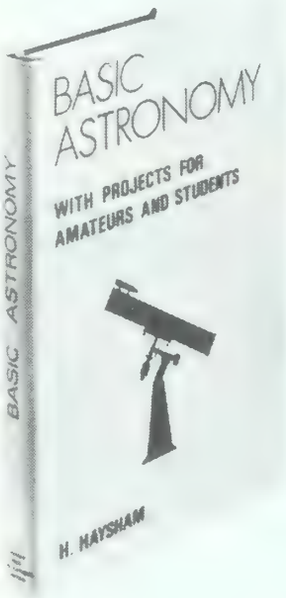




Reed's Nautical Almanac 1977 U.S. East Coast Edition
The indispensable guide for the American yachtsman covers the entire East Coast from Halifax, Nova Scotia through the Islands to the Gulf of Mexico.
$12.95 854 pages



Radar In Small Craft
by Peter Clissold
Basic principles of radar explained. Methods of applying radar information to navigation and the use of radar in the all important function of collision avoidance explained. Glossary of radar terms included.
$8.95 134 pages



Basic Astronomy
by H. Haysham
Meets the needs of amateur astronomers and has special appeal to nautical students. Each chapter contains a section devoted to practical projects and research problems. Suitable for use in either hemisphere.
$9.95 228 pages

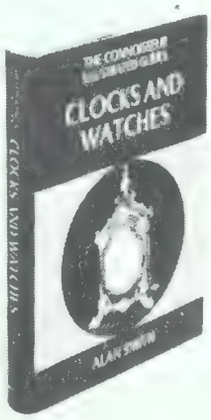
and lots more.

CONNOISSEUR BOOKS

The Connoisseur Illustrated Guides

Furniture
$10.00 226 pages

Pottery and Porcelain
$10.00 232 pages

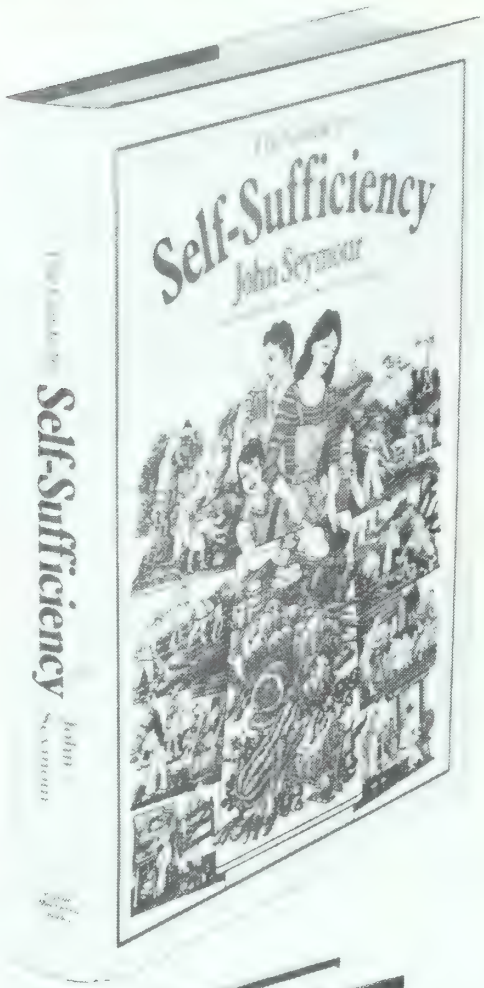


Clocks and Watches
$10.00 222 pages

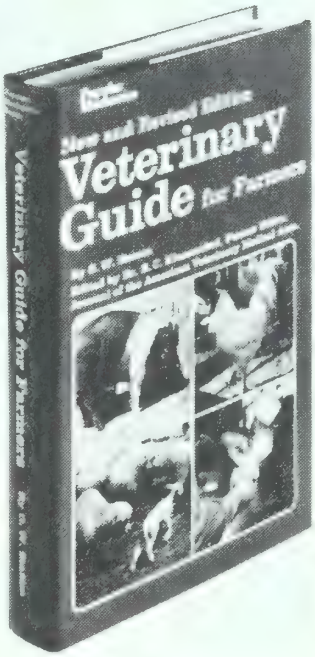
Glass
$10.00 222 pages

Hearst Books now available from Franklin Watts

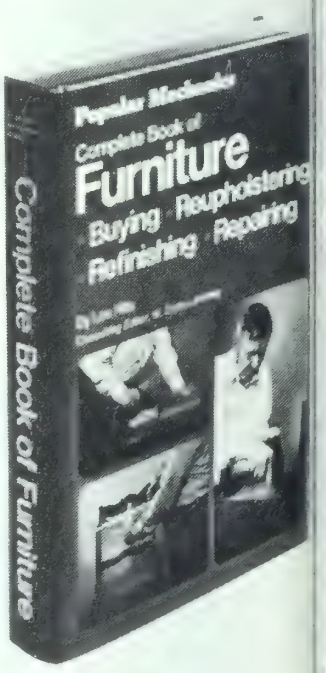
POPULAR MECHANICS BOOKS



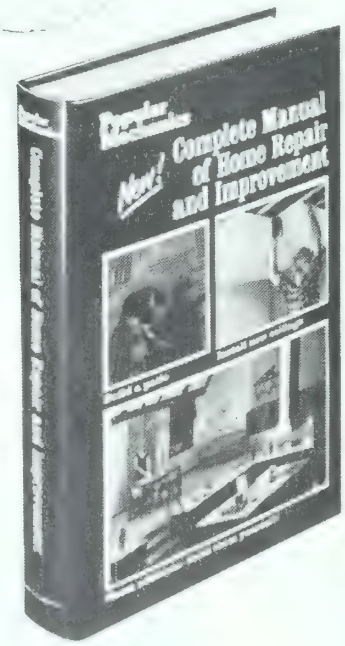
The Guide To Self-Sufficiency
by John Seymour
Here's the first totally comprehensive book on being totally or partially self-sufficient in every way. The author places his twenty years of practical experience at the disposal of everyone and gives comprehensive, practical step-by-step information on how to do it.
$11.95 256 pages



Popular Mechanics Veterinary Guide for Farmers
by G.W. Stamm
$9.95 304 pages



Popular Mechanics Complete Book of Furniture
by Len Hilts
$8.95 320 pages



Popular Mechanics Complete Manual of Home Repair and Improvement
$8.95 480 pages

Popular Mechanics Complete Appliance Repair Manual
by Mort Schultz
$8.95 304 pages

and lots more.

Now available to schools and libraries direct from:

FRANKLIN WATTS, INC.
730 Fifth Avenue
New York, N.Y. 10019

Write to Franklin Watts, Marketing Department, for a complete catalogue of Hearst Books and the name of your local FRANKLIN WATTS representative.

EDITORIAL

The fee dilemma

". . . Therefore be it resolved that ALA reaffirm the concept of access without charge, to information in public libraries and tax-supported libraries, and be it further resolved that ALA go on public record against the charging of fees by tax-supported libraries for providing information and reference services which have traditionally been free." The resolution, already passed by the California Library Association, was introduced by Zoia Horn at a session of the ALA Council during the recent ALA Midwinter Meeting in Washington, D.C. (LJ's Midwinter report begins on p. 682).

In a roll-call vote, after angry debate, the Council turned down the resolution, leaving the Association in the curious, and somehow alarming position of being unwilling to reaffirm what Karl Nyren called "the once orthodox faith of free public access" (see LJ/SLJ Hotline, February 14, p. 1).

The issue of fees for library service resounded throughout the Midwinter Meeting. The growing use of commercial online data bases by libraries, with their hourly charges and relatively high prices, coupled with the fact that many libraries are offering other fee-based services, has brought the fee issue to the forefront.

The Midwinter debate reviewed various arguments for and against fees. For example, John Carter of the Wyoming State Library, argued that denying a service to the user who is willing to pay is also an unfair limitation on access. Others replied that to use library resources and staff time developing fee services could only downgrade the free services. They added that in this era of zero-based budgeting, governing authorities may see fees as a way to relieve the tax burdens caused by libraries.

In the Council debate, and in a fascinating discussion in the newly formed Machine Assisted Reference Services Discussion Group of RASD (MARS) the members, most of whom work with the new data bases, were quite sympathetic to the view that ALA ought to firmly endorse the principle of free access to information, and oppose all barriers to it, even those caused by a user's inability to pay. On the other hand, many librarians in MARS came from libraries where fees are currently levied for information services. They assert that fees are "unavoidable" because limited budgets cannot absorb the costs of the data bases or the staff search time, but that both are in demand from users who can afford to pay.

In short, no one seemed happy with the dilemma. Most librarians to whom we talked at Midwinter would support ALA's taking a stand for free and equal access to information for every citizen. The MARS group, as Peter Watson reported it to LJ: "voted in this spirit, to express support for the idea of a special ALA committee to look into charging, and to endorse the first part of the declaration of principle 'that ALA reaffirm the concept of free access to information . . .' but not the second part . . . because it came closer to condemning libraries for their present, unavoidable, practice of charging." Both MARS and the Social Responsibilities Round Table promise to devote their programs to this issue at the Annual ALA Conference in Detroit this summer.

Some observers at Midwinter said the cause of the Council rejection was the tendency on the part of those supporting the Horn resolution, and we are among them, to condemn or blame those libraries currently charging fees. When faced with an accusation or condemnation, those who are levying fees are obviously unwilling to vote to condemn or accuse themselves. Thus, when the debate took place in the Council session, the principle of free access was lost because so many were engaged in the practice of charging fees. In a slightly out of order aside from the chair, ALA President-elect Eric Moon tried to nudge the motion along: "Let's establish the principle, and then we can deal with the practice!"

ALA has often been willing to establish principles that were being violated in library practice. Many U.S. libraries violate "The Library Bill of Rights," particularly the section that endorses free access to the entire library collection for children, to cite only one example. Indeed, there are very few examples of perfect library practice in the world, but that doesn't mean libraries don't strive for perfection.

We urgently hope that ALA's membership and Council will have the opportunity to reverse the decision on Zoia Horn's resolution this summer in Detroit. Let's all agree that we are forced to violate principles from time to time—but let's also agree that we should establish and reaffirm principles anyway—especially a principle as fundamental to our democracy as freedom of access to information. It has been a part of our heritage since we wrote the Constitution and that other Bill of Rights.

John Berry

G. K. HALL & CO. means... GREGG PRESS

The Best Science Fiction in the Best Hardcover Editions

THE SCIENCE FICTION OF JACK LONDON: An Anthology (1901-1918)

With a New Introduction by Richard Gid Powers. An original anthology that brings together eleven of London's most fanciful and imaginative science fiction tales.

". . .a model of what a composite reprint should be, and with its excellent introduction (the best treatment of London's SF that I have yet seen) is a real bargain. . . ." —Science-Fiction Studies

ISBN 0-8398-2307-x $15.00

Alfred Bester

The Stars My Destination

(New York, 1957)

With a New Introduction by Paul Williams

". . .one of the masterpieces of science fiction. . . one of the great romantic adventures, brilliantly inventive, loaded with surprises, and one of the most exciting books I've ever read."—Science Fiction Review Monthly

ISBN 0-8398-2300-2 $10.00

For sale only in the U.S. and Canada

Thomas M. Disch

334 (New York, 1974)

With a New Introduction by M. John Harrison

". . .this is a novel comparable in quality to BNW [Brave New World] or 1984; of novels set in a future extrapolated from present trends, it is perhaps the best that the SF movement has yet produced. . . ."—Science-Fiction Studies

ISBN 0-8398-2331-2 $12.50

Walter M. Miller, Jr.

A Canticle for Leibowitz

(New York and Philadelphia, 1960)

With a New Introduction by Norman Spinrad

". . .this story comes as close to being an undisputed masterpiece as any that has come out of the science-fiction movement." —Science-Fiction Studies

"No short comment can convey work's excellence. Named by many as best SF novel of modern period." —Anatomy of Wonder: Science Fiction

ISBN 0-8398-2309-6 $13.50

For sale only in the U.S. and Canada

Theodore Sturgeon

Venus Plus X (New York, 1960)

With a New Introduction by Paul Williams

". . .what makes this Gregg Press edition downright indispensable is the Introduction. . . . Were it not that everything else about the book's packaging and presentation is so fine, the Introduction alone would make it worth buying. Highly recommended." —Delaps F & SF Review

ISBN 0-8398-2321-5 $8.50

Available for Shipment This Month!

The Witch World Novels of Andre Norton

TITLE	ISBN 0-8398-	PRICE
Witch World	2355-x	$7.95
Web of the Witch World	2357-6	$7.95
Three Against the Witch World	2358-4	$7.95
Warlock of the Witch World	2359-2	$7.95
Sorceress of the Witch World	2360-6	$7.95
Year of the Unicorn	2356-8	$7.95
Spell of the Witch World	2354-1	$7.95

Now is the time to order the complete seven-volume set of The Witch World Novels of Andre Norton for the special set price of $50.00. Titles may be ordered individually at the prices indicated.

Please use the coupon to request a complete descriptive brochure on all 74 exciting SF titles in the Gregg Press Science Fiction Series.

Gregg Press

A Division of G. K. Hall & Co.

G.K.HALL&CO. G.K.HALL&CO. G.K.HALL&CO.

G. K. HALL & CO. means...

The Merriam-Webster Dictionary for Large Print Users

A Merriam-Webster®

The Merriam-Webster Dictionary for Large Print Users is a basic, up-to-date reference book that can be easily used by all readers — young and old. The guide words appear in 18-point type, the word entries in 14-point type, and definitions in 12-point type. Supplementary sections such as charts and tables appear in 16-point type. All entries in The Merriam-Webster Dictionary for Large Print Users are based on Webster's Third New International Dictionary, unabridged, and definitions were developed by Merriam-Webster's own staff of dictionary specialists.

The Merriam-Webster Dictionary for Large Print Users includes not only the A-Z vocabulary of 57,000 entries, but also:

- a list of 500 foreign words and phrases
- a list of the nations of the world
- latest census figures for U.S. and Canadian cities
- tables of the metric system, weights and measures, money, and planets
- signs and symbols used in astronomy, business, mathematics, and weather

All reproduced in enlarged type in an 8½ x 11 easy-to-use SINGLE VOLUME that conforms to standards set by the National Association for Visually Handicapped.

One Copy May Not Be Enough...

- Place it near your large print collection for use by large print readers in the library.
- Acquire a circulating copy for your large print patrons.
- Add this enlarged type edition to your general reference shelf.
- Use it as a teaching aid in your Young Adult collection.

SAVE 20%... By ordering two or more dictionaries before April 30, 1977.

[1 copy: $27.50, 2 copies: $44.00,
3 copies: $66.00]

ISBN: 0-8161-6459-2

Don't miss best-selling titles such as THE DEEP, SAVING THE QUEEN, RAGTIME, and more. . .all now available in Large Print!

Please use the coupon to request further information on the Merriam-Webster Dictionary for Large Print Users and on the many other titles available in Large Print.

G.K.HALL & CO.
70 Lincoln St., Boston, Mass. 02111

bourse \'bůrs\ n : a European stock exchange bout \'baůt\ n 1 : CONTEST, MATCH 2 : OUTBREAK, ATTACK ⟨a ~ of measles⟩ 3 : SESSION bou•tique \bü-'tēk\ n : a small retail store; esp : a fashionable specialty shop for women bou•ton•niere \ˌbüt-ᵊn-'iər\ n : a flower or bouquet worn in a buttonhole ²bow•ler \'bō-lər\ n : DERBY 3 bow•line \'bō-lən, -ˌlīn\ n : a knot used to form a loop that neither slips nor jams bowl•ing \'bō-liŋ\ n : any of various games in which balls are rolled on a green (bowling green) or alley (bowling alley) at an object or a group of objects; esp : TENPINS bow•man \'bō-mən\ n : ARCHER bow•sprit \'baů-ˌsprit\ n : a spar pro-

G.K.HALL & CO. G.K.HALL & CO. G.K.HALL & CO.

G. K. HALL & CO. means...TWAYNE PUBLISHERS

The Immigrant Heritage of America Series

America's Immigrant Women

by C. S. Neidle
ISBN 0-8057-8406-3 $9.50

". . .a well-documented work which provides biographical sketches of some well-known, and many not so well-known immigrant women." —Library Journal

Zion in America: The Jewish Experience

by Henry L. Feingold
ISBN 0-8057-3298-5 $12.95

". . .important and useful not only to the scholar but also to interested beginners in the field of American Jewish history." —Choice

The Oriental Americans

by H. Brett Melendy
ISBN 0-8057-3254-3 $7.95

". . .a valuable addition to the increasing store of material produced in response to recent interest in Asian American studies." —Pacific Northwest Quarterly

THE IMMIGRANT EXPERIENCE IN AMERICA

Frank J. Coppa and Thomas J. Curran, Editors
ISBN 0-8057-8406-3 $9.50

This book is an outgrowth of an enthusiastically received television series presented nationally in the summer of 1973 on CBS-TV. Included are eight essays on specific immigrant groups: Hispanics, Blacks, Asians, Germans, Jews, Norwegians, Italians, and Irish. . .plus analyses of such aspects as immigrant assimilation and recent immigrant legislation.

The Pennsylvania Dutch

by William T. Parsons
ISBN 0-8057-8408-x $9.50

". . .it is the only full-length study in print on this remarkable ethnic group. . . .Recommended for undergraduate and graduate collections in immigration studies and American social history." —Choice

The Dutch in America 1609-1974

by Gerald F. DeJong
ISBN 0-8057-3214-4 $9.95

". . .serious, readable, and well-documented book. . . ." —Library Journal

The German-Americans

by La Vern J. Rippley
ISBN 0-8057-8405-5 $8.95

"This work surpasses all modern histories of the German-Americans and should become a standard on the subject." —Robert E. Ward, Editor, German-American Studies

The Norwegian-Americans

by Arlow W. Anderson
ISBN 0-8057-3249-7 $8.95

". . .well done. . .a remarkable amount of pertinent information. . . ."—Choice

". . .a readable and interesting. . .description of the extensive Norwegian migration to the U.S." —Library Journal

The Immigrant Heritage of America Series includes histories of individual ethnic groups, accounts of immigrant communities in urban centers, as well as probing studies of major aspects and problems of immigration.

For complete descriptions of all titles in the Immigrant Heritage of America Series, please use the coupon to send for your free copy of the latest Twayne Catalog.

Twayne Publishers

A Division of G. K. Hall & Co.

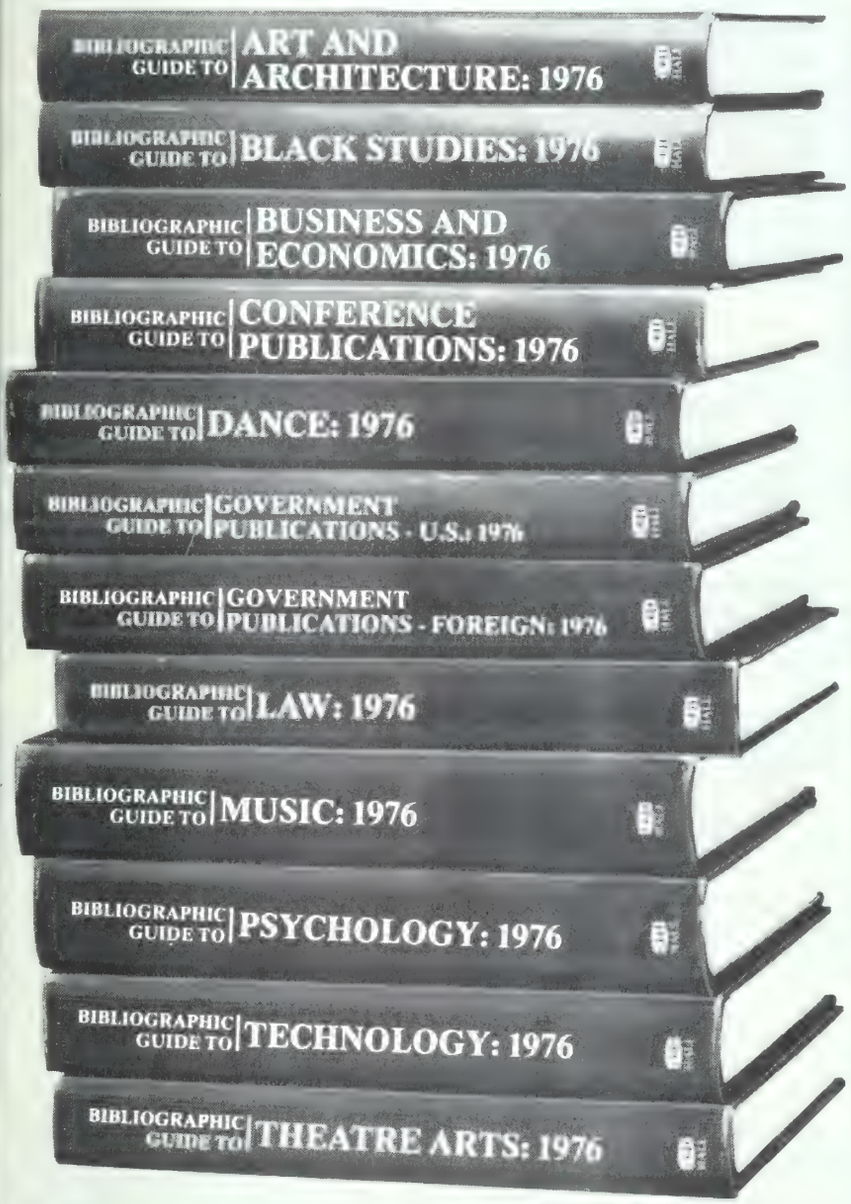
G.K.HALL&CO. G.K.HALL&CO. G.K.HALL&CO.

G. K. HALL & CO. means...

BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDES: 1976

the current and comprehensive guide for acquisitions, cataloging, and research

BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDES are annual, multiple access subject bibliographies based on publications cataloged by The Research Libraries of The New York Public Library and Library of Congress Marc Tapes.
BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDES -- a valuable current awareness tool in 12 subject areas



BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE TO ART AND ARCHITECTURE: 1976
BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE TO BLACK STUDIES: 1976
BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE TO BUSINESS AND ECONOMICS: 1976
BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE TO CONFERENCE PUBLICATIONS: 1976
BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE TO DANCE: 1976
BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE TO GOVERNMENT PUBLICATIONS - U.S.: 1976
BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE TO GOVERNMENT PUBLICATIONS - FOREIGN: 1976
BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE TO LAW: 1976
BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE TO MUSIC: 1976
BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE TO PSYCHOLOGY: 1976
BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE TO TECHNOLOGY: 1976
BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE TO THEATRE ARTS: 1976

Prices do not include shipping and handling charges. Prices outside the U.S. are 10% higher. Orders from individuals must be accompanied by full payment including a shipping and handling charge of 50 cents per book. Please indicate ISBN on all orders.

GKH G.K.HALL & CO.
TWAYNE PUBLISHERS
GREGG PRESS
70 Lincoln St., Boston, Mass. 02111

BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDES include:

- All types of materials — non-book resources as well as books and serials.
- Works in all languages, including non-Roman languages.
- Complete LC cataloging information including tracings (LC subject heading and added entries), ISBN, and identification of New York Public Library holdings.

Multiple access to this valuable information by:

- Main entry (personal authors, corporate names, names of conferences or symposia, etc.)
- Added entries (joint authors, editors, or compilers, etc.)
- Titles and series title
- Subject heading

All conveniently arranged in one alphabetical sequence. Complete bibliographic information is given in the main entry, with abbreviated citations for secondary entries.

Please use the coupon to send for complete information on G. K. Hall's Bibliographic Guides: 1976, Bibliographic Guides: 1975, and G. K. Hall's Book Guides for 1974.

G.K. HALL & CO., 70 Lincoln St., Boston, Mass. 02111
Please send me information on the following:

- ☐ The Gregg Press Science Fiction Series and the Witch World Novels of Andre Norton.
- ☐ The Merriam-Webster Dictionary for Large Print Users and other titles available in Large Print.
- ☐ The Immigrant Heritage of America Series and the more than 800 other titles available from Twayne.
- ☐ Bibliographic Guides.

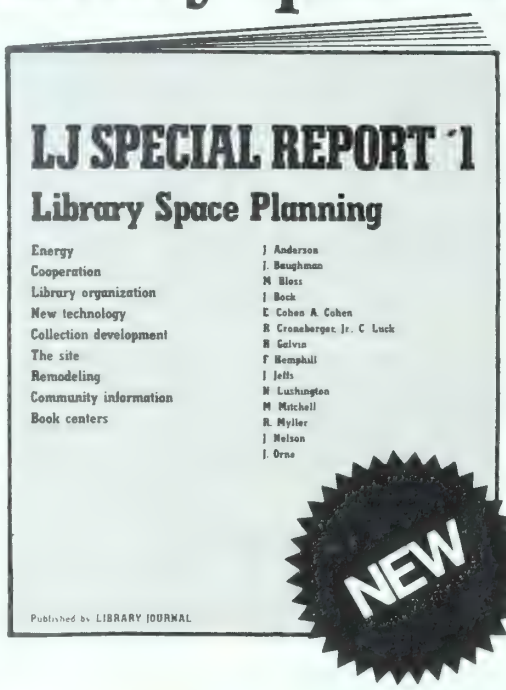
Name_____
Library/Institution_____
Address_____
_____ Zip_____

LJ-3

LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING
helps you make better use of your library space tomorrow.



Perhaps you are involved with plans for a new library. Or with remodeling the library you're in now. Or simply making more efficient use of existing space—on a non-existing or minimum budget.

Whatever the case, you will want a copy of the new LJ Special Report #1—LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING.

Here, in one practical, 80-page, paperbound handbook—8½ x 11 size—are the thinking and ideas of 32 leading librarians, library consultants, and architects.

Among the subjects covered: Energy . . . Cooperation . . . Library Organization . . . New Technology . . . Collection Development . . . The Site . . . Remodeling . . . Community Information . . . Book Centers. The information you'll find in LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING will be equally valuable to librarians in public, academic, and special libraries . . . in urban, suburban and rural communities.

LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING is the first of the LJ Special Reports—designed to keep librarians well informed on topics of immediate interest and importance.

In the library field, where so many changes occur so often, yesterday's plans and assumptions must also change.

The problems of library funding, the energy crisis, the evolution of the local library into a community information center, the response of the academic library to the new demands of higher education—all these and other factors require innovative thinking and planning now for libraries of the future.

LJ Special Report #1—LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING—is currently off press and copies are available to LIBRARY JOURNAL readers on a first come, first-served basis.

The cost is only $3.95 per copy on prepaid orders; $5.00 per copy on billed orders.

Use the convenient coupon to send in your order now.

Better use the coupon below to send for your copy today!

To: Edward W. Martin, Circulation Director—R. R. Bowker Co.
1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10036

Please send LJ Special Report #1—LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING—as indicated:

_____ (No.) at $3.95 each, for which payment is enclosed.

_____ (No.) at $5.00 each. Send bill as shown.

Name _____

Address _____

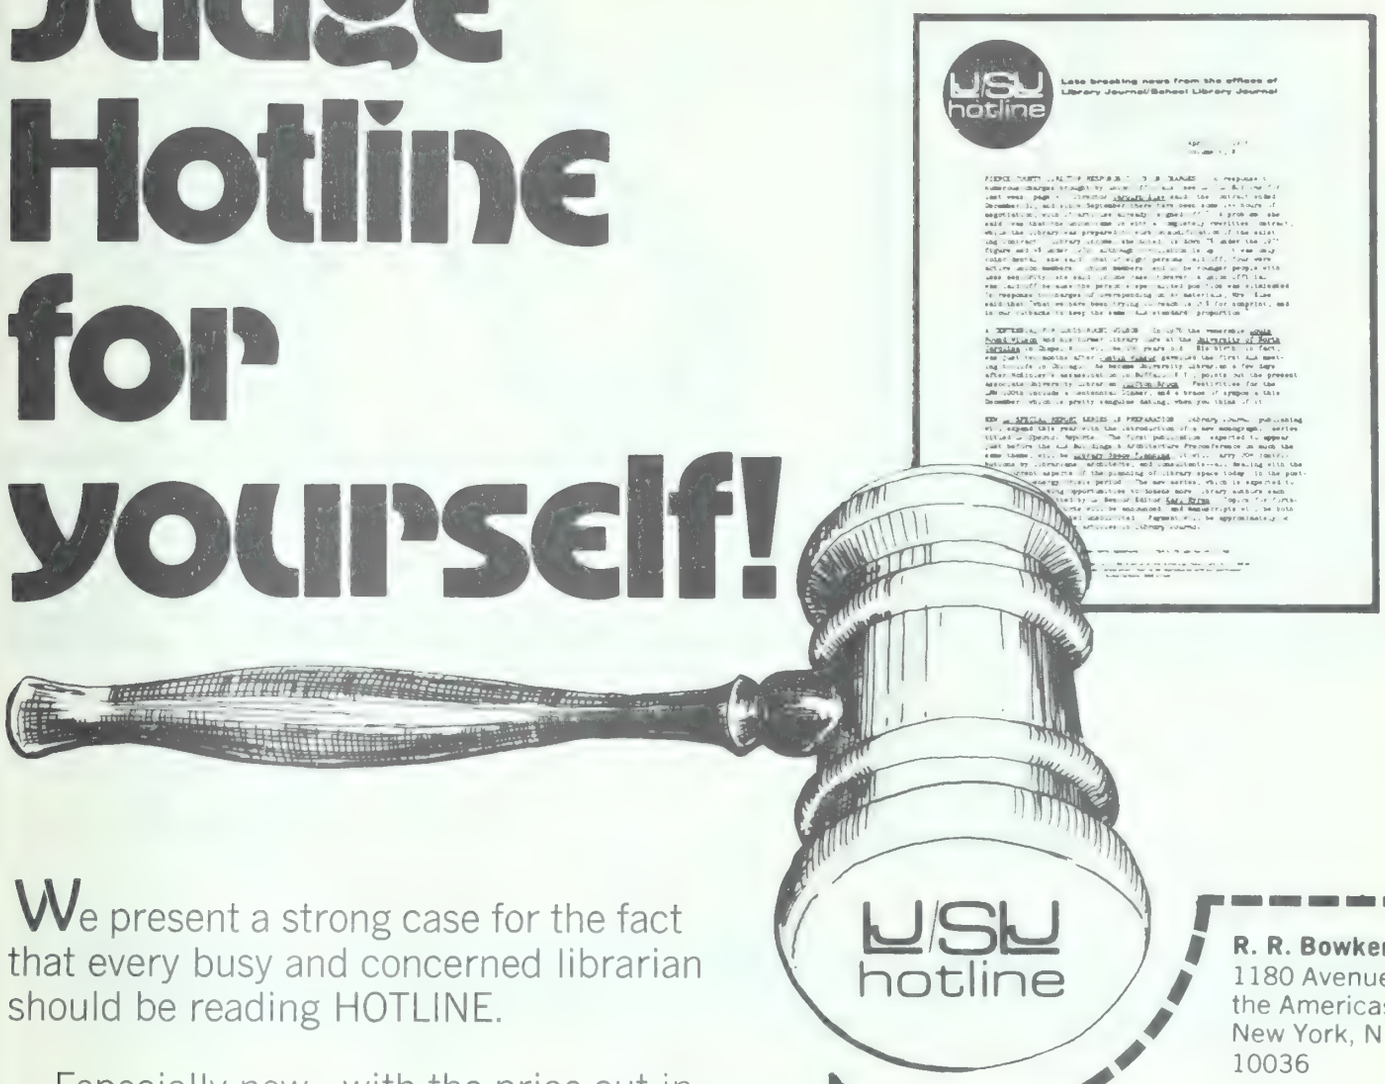
City _____

State _____ Zip _____

☐ Send information on quantity discount orders—10 or more copies.

LJ

Judge Hotline for yourself!



We present a strong case for the fact that every busy and concerned librarian should be reading HOTLINE.

Especially now—with the price cut in half. From $50 a year to only $25!

To back up our case, we offer the best possible evidence: a sample copy of HOTLINE in this issue of LJ. (See following pages.)

As a HOTLINE subscriber, you'll have this kind of useful, put-right-to-work information mailed to you every week. There's no faster, surer way to get late-breaking news and developments affecting you, your library, your services, and your patrons. (Unless you're moonlighting on the LJ/SLJ editorial staff!)

Look at the evidence. Then decide. If your verdict is that HOTLINE is for you, use the handy order form today to subscribe.

LJ/SLJ hotline

R. R. Bowker Co.
1180 Avenue of the Americas
New York, N.Y. 10036

Subscription Order Form

Price Reduced 50%-Act now!

Please enter ___ HOTLINE subscriptions as indicated below at the new, low price of only $25 each for one year. (Former price was $50.)

☐ Bill me ☐ Bill library or org. ☐ Payment enclosed (Please make checks payable to R. R. Bowker Co.)

HOTLINE is printed 44 times a year.

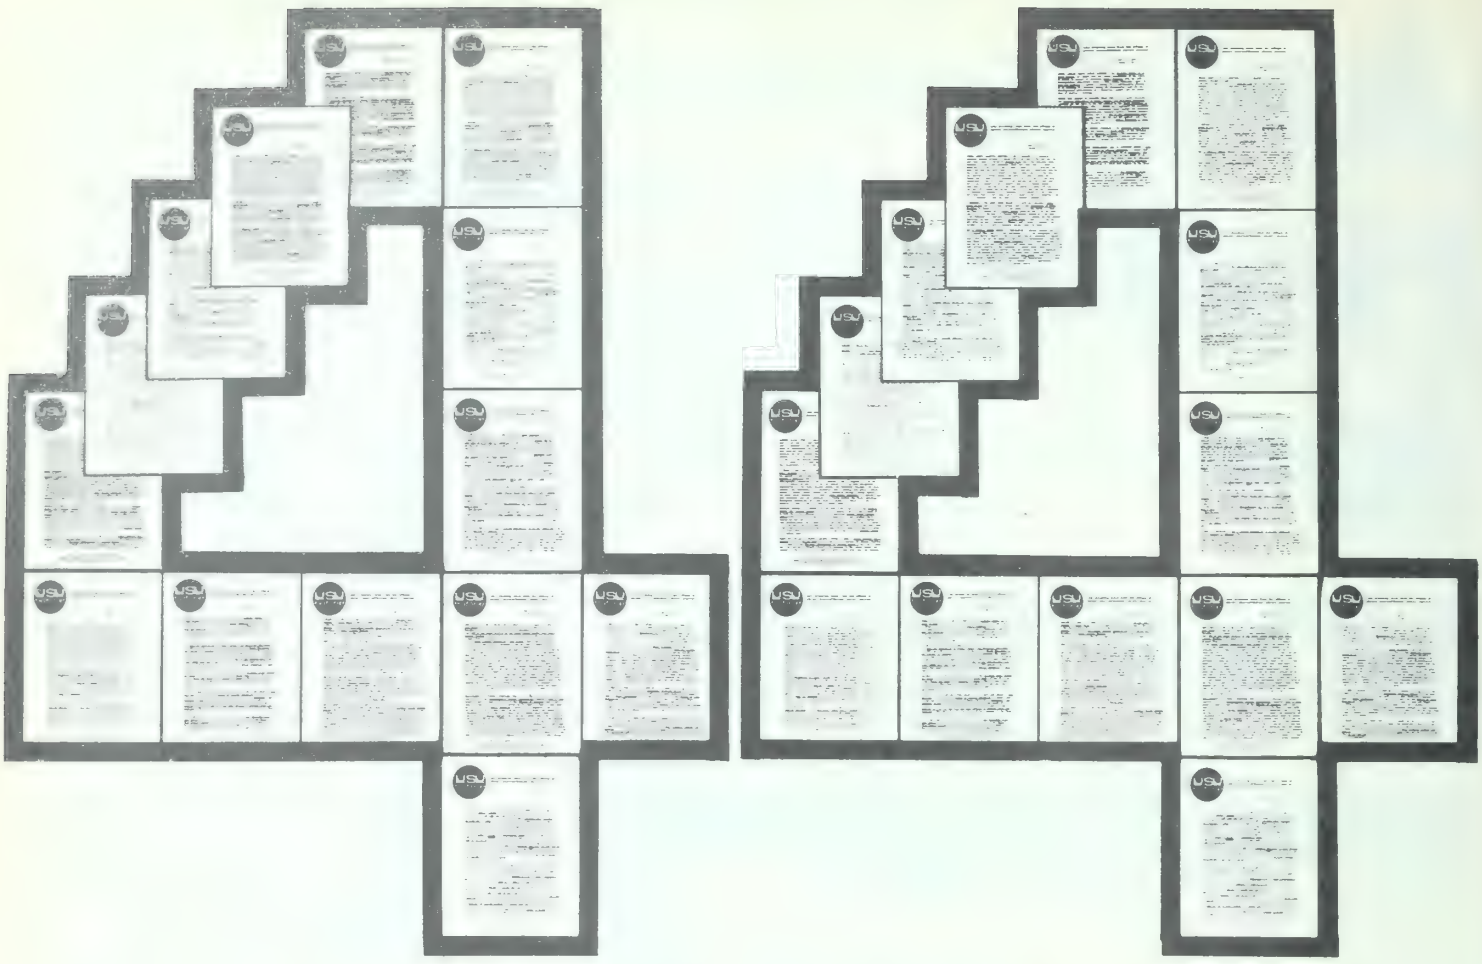
Name _____

Library or Organization _____

Address _____

City _____

State _____ Zip _____



ISSUES OF HOTLINE A YEAR.

THAT'S A LOT OF LATE-BREAKING NEWS, PUT-RIGHT-TO-WORK INFORMATION FOR ONLY $25—

HALF THE ORIGINAL PRICE!

ADVERTISEMENT

LJ/SLJ hotline

Late breaking news from the offices of Library Journal/School Library Journal

February 14, 1977
Volume VI, No. 7

ALA REFUSES TO CONDEMN INFORMATION FEES: In the most significant action to occur at the ALA Midwinter Meeting in Washington, D.C., the ALA Council voted 96 to 36 against a resolution urging access to information regardless of the individual's ability to pay. The resolution, submitted by Zoia Horn (Stockton Public Library, California) seemed most directly aimed at the charging of fees for the use of online database services. The vote, which with few and notable exceptions divided along the ideological fault line that separates left from everybody else (as well as right) in the ALA Council, seems to relegate the once orthodox faith of free public access to the status of an unpopular left-wing position. Whether this view will prevail in the setting of national policy is far from certain, however. The resolution submitted by Zoia Horn has already been passed by the big California Library Association and other large state and regional library organizations could go along with CLA in a position which says, basically, that public libraries and publicly supported academic libraries should provide free access to online database services just as they do to other library materials, regardless of price. And the ALA Council action may turn out to be a lot less indicative of membership sentiment than of the left-right ballgame that persists in that deliberative body. A vitriolic attack on Ms. Horn by Councillor Kathleen Molz bore eloquent witness to the smoldering hostilities that may have swayed the vote. On the other hand, an ally of Ms. Horn did her best to fan the flames from the other side: Dorothy Broderick demanded--and got--a roll call vote, a move that some people still on the fence took as a threatening gesture and responded to with an angry "no" vote. If the resolution had been presented by some of the people who voted for it, but who do not usually stand shoulder-to-shoulder with Zoia Horn, Pat Schuman, and Jerry Shields, the outcome could have been far different. As it was, Council followed this "no" vote with approval of a second resolution by Ms. Horn proposing a study of current practice in the charging of fees for reference services.

ALA DIVISIONS STRUGGLING TO SURVIVE: While a few ALA Divisions have drawn enough memberships (at $15 per, over and above the basic $35 ALA dues) to assure their ability to function effectively, others are facing reduction of their activities to a very low level at the end of the fiscal year, when the current "subsidies" provided to them are discontinued. While Division members could still meet, discuss, deliberate, and set standards for their areas of competence, it costs $50,000 just to have a fulltime executive secretary with normal clerical backup (although the Executive Secretary probably wouldn't get over $20,000) and some of the smaller divisions could wind up with no more

To report news items, telephone: 212-764-5179, ask for HOTLINE.

Published by R.R. Bowker Co., 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10036
Copyright 1976 by Xerox Corporation. Not to be reproduced without permission.
Subscriptions: $25 per year

ALA DIVISIONS STRUGGLING TO SURVIVE, (CONT'D): than $10,000 a year. But according to ALA Treasurer Bill Chait (Dayton and Montgomery County) they could still get along as they did in the old days--before the divisional exec became customary--with only clerical help at ALA HQ and the rest of the work handled by volunteer members. At ALA Midwinter, the "endangered divisions" were given the opportunity to offer alternatives and they did. The Library Education Division brought in a well-documented set of alternatives showing the relative fiscal implications of continued "subsidy" and of adding the responsibilities of LED to the ALA HQ as a function that affects and concerns all the membership. This would mean the further growth of the ALA Headquarters, staff-run operations. Another alternative, proposed by ASLA (Association of State Library Agencies) and HRLSD (Hospital and Rehabilitative Services Division) would be a merger, hopefully in their case one which would draw to them not just their own two small membership groups, but also all those other members concerned with cooperative, statewide, and regional library operations. A third alternative, put forth by the American Library Trustee Association (ALTA) proposed continued "subsidy," although ALTA's President Donald Earnshaw proposed that a better term would be "matching funds," since a lot of ALA members, he said, belong only for what they get out of a Division like ALTA. Earnshaw was openly bitter about the possibility of ALTA being cast on its own slender resources, and actually threatened that an "overriding concern with money" might bring upon ALA the unfavorable attention of the Internal Revenue Service. During an unstructured "committee of the whole" discussion period, Council members spoke up freely on the alternatives and there was much support for the plight of the Divisions. Among those who questioned the preponderance of money going into staff-run HQ operations such as the ALA Washington Office, the Intellectual Freedom Office, and the Office for Library Manpower Resources, was Councillor (and ALA Presidential Candidate) Bill Summers (University of South Carolina, Davis), who asked why there had to be "free enterprise" for the Divisions and "socialism" for the ALA HQ operations and units. At one Executive Board Meeting, member Betty Fast suggested that some of the money now being spent at HQ for OLPR (Office of Library Personnel Resources) might better go to the Library Education Division or to a committee. And Al Trezza (NCLIS), who has been fighting for the survival of the Association of State Library Agencies (ASLA), finally achieved some kind of a breakthrough in Executive Board discussion when he pleaded that "the Association is allowing its commitment to high level concerns to be decided for it on a solely material or numerical basis." Executive Board member Alice Ihrig agreed and suggested that " we haven't offered enough alternatives to the non-income-producing Divisions." What's ahead: the ALA staff will now design a reorganization plan which will be presented to the April meeting of the Executive Board, to the ALA Council in Detroit next summer, and at the 1978 Annual Conference in Chicago the final plan could be okayed by Council, allowing for the launching of new ALA units by January 1979 (and final dissolution of units to be terminated).

ALA OKAYS 1978 ACRL CONFERENCE WARILY: The Executive Board of ALA has approved the planned 40th Anniversary Conference of ACRL (Association of College and Research Libraries), one of ALA's strongest and most independent Divisions. It will be held in Boston in the fall of 1978 with the ACRL New England Chapter as host and the multitude of outstanding academic and research libraries in the Boston metro area available for visits. The ALA Executive Board eyed the ACRL project warily, expressing hope that this would not turn out to be "another step along the road toward federalism" and that it would not cut into ALA attendance--and income--at its Annual Conference. The fear was also voiced that the ACRL project might set a precedent for Divisions, encouraging them to take this means of generating revenue by running their annual meetings separate from ALA's Conference and gaining income--from registration fees and exhibits--that they wouldn't be able to get their hands on at the ALA Annual Conference. So the final motion

ALA OKAYS 1978 ACRL CONFERENCE WARILY, (CONT'D): for approval contained the admonition that this was "not to set a precedent"--about the same phrasing used last year in ALA's grudging permission for ACRL to keep the surplus profits it earns from CHOICE. The whole discussion revolved around the question of whether this could "hurt ALA"--with a notable and characteristic exception: Alice Ihrig pointed out that this kind of meeting "could fill a gap which ALA is not at the moment prepared to fill," providing high level professional conferences where scholarly papers can be read and highly specialized materials can be discussed --as well as providing to many people a unique opportunity to attend a national conference. A suggestion by Executive Director Robert Wedgeworth that the ACRL meet could take off some of the burden of providing committee meeting rooms at the ALA Annual Conference was thumbed down, however; ACRL Committees are to stay within the Annual Conference framework for their business.

PETITION NOMINATIONS TO COUNCIL MADE EASIER: It will now be easier for state and regional library groups in less heavily populated areas to get their candidates on the ballot for ALA Council. All a candidate needs now is the signatures of 25 members. Formerly it took 100 ordinary member signatures--or only ten Council member signatures, something that was very easy to get if one made it regularly to Council meetings or enjoyed good communications with a group of like-minded Councillors. The minor coup was pulled off by Richard Waters, (Dallas Public Library), who last year failed to get through a similar measure that was more aimed at making nomination by petition harder for the people who used that procedure most--the social responsibilities group. First he proposed that Councillors and ordinary members be on the same basis, with only ten signatures of either required. This brought visions of hordes of candidates swamping the election process, and against that background, the proposal for 25 member signatures of any type seemed marvelously reasonable. State and other library groups should now reassess their prospects for putting a representative on Council as an at-large candidate.

ALA MOVES AGAIN TOWARD A NEW BUILDING: The expanding ALA HQ operation has led to a renewed effort to provide more space for a staff which is expected to grow as more and more activities (formerly handled by membership groups at little or no direct cost or need for facilities, which were usually provided by member libraries) are taken over by paid staff at 50 East Huron Street. ALA backed out of its most recent venture into real estate--one which involved selling the present building and moving into rented quarters in a new building. The latest venture, for which the staff is to be allowed up to $10,000 for exploration, involves keeping the present building and building another structure nearby. When the Board began questioning the amounts of money that had been spent in the past on such explorations ($70,000) Wedgeworth scolded them with the charge that the reason they got into a situation from which extrication was costly was that they hadn't been willing to put up $10,000 for a proper study. The Board promptly shut up and okayed the $10,000.

NEW LIBRARY INSTRUCTIONAL ROUND TABLE FORMED: It took two years of massive petition signing, and had the approval of just about every other group in ALA, and there will finally be a Round Table for the many people working actively today in teaching people to use libraries. This new Round Table will bring together the resources and experience of people already working at all levels and in all types of libraries.

DOES THE LIBRARY BILL OF RIGHTS BAR "RAISING THE AWARENESS OF LIBRARY USERS TO... RACISM AND SEXISM?" Last summer, ALA's Council passed a Resolution on Racism and Sexism Awareness. One of its provisions (the third) urged library association divisions dealing with the public to "develop a program to raise the awareness

DOES THE LIBRARY BILL OF RIGHTS BAR "RAISING THE AWARENESS OF LIBRARY USERS TO... RACISM AND SEXISM?" (CONT'D): of library users to the pressing problem of sexism and racism." The Board of Directors of the Children's Services Division has brought before the Intellectual Freedom Committee the charge that the resolution seems to be in direct conflict with the Library Bill of Rights, specifically with "Sexism, Racism and Other -Isms in Library Materials--an Interpretation of the Library Bill of Rights" adopted by Council in 1973. The CSD statement went on to say that such "raising the awareness of users...violates our professional responsibility to promote no cause and further no movement and can only result in expurgation, labeling, and removal of materials for content." CSD urged "speedy appropriate action to effectuate reconsideration of this resolution." Speaking for the CSD Intellectual Freedom Committee, Charles Robinson (Baltimore County Public) made this point: It's the same sort of censorious action the Office of Intellectual Freedom claims resulted from the now defunct CSD Policy on Re-evaluation of Children's Library Collections, which used racism and sexism as examples for discarding considerations." The Intellectual Freedom Committee, reporting that it had not fully examined the resolution in question until the ALA Midwinter week, proposed first a complete rescinding of the entire Resolution on Sexism and Racism. This created a storm in the Executive Board, and vigorous opposition by ALA President Clara Jones, who saw in the IFC proposal a craven step backward and the throwing away of a victory won already. Before the matter could get any worse in front of company, the IFC presentation was halted abruptly, and in its final statement on the matter, IFC said that "clarification of the relationship to and effect of the Resolution on the Library Bill of Rights is urgently required lest it be construed as inconsistent and counterproductive by some librarians and libraries... (to) remove any inference that librarians should engage in censorship practices ...formal guidelines should be prepared and disseminated governing the application and implementation of the Resolution....the Committee proposes to review with all concerned divisions and Committees the impact of the Resolution on their members, purposes, and policies and propose for consideration of this Council....such explanations and interpretation...as will clearly accommodate the Resolution with the Library Bill of Rights."

ASSOCIATION OF AMERICAN LIBRARY SCHOOLS: Meeting January 28-30 in Washington, just before ALA Midwinter, AALS drew 363 registrants to hear that Petition Candidate for President Gary Purcell had been elected. This was a bit of a switch on the usual petition candidacy. The two regularly nominated candidates, Diana Spirt and Miles Jackson were the first such not to be deans or directors of library schools, and were evidently chosen to give the rank-and-file a crack at the top spot. But a petition was got up to place Gary Purcell (Director at Univ. Tennessee) on the ballot and he won....Meanwhile, Margaret Goggin (Denver) took the gavel for 1977-78 from Guy Garrison....Dues were boosted across the board, with personal memberships up from $10 to $15....Membership in CNLA (Council of National Library Associations) was dropped ("CNLA has passed its prime," said Ed Holley (North Carolina)....A new Women's Interest Group, chaired by Gay Detlefsen, was established....The AALS Position Paper on Sixth Year Programs is still in the works; it is expected to be a focus of controversy at next year's meeting....Guy Garrison (past President) will be press liaison for AALS this year; hopes are for better publicity for the Association. (To be continued)

Karl Nyren

Karl Nyren, Editor

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

Rate: $3 per line; 4 line minimum. Deadline: Noon every Tuesday for issue dated the following Monday. To place ads, call 212-764-5179 or 5180. Or mail to: LJ/SLJ HOTLINE, R.R. Bowker Co., 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10036.

POSITIONS AVAILABLE

LIBRARY DIRECTOR: Responsible for complete management of a regional library system with a staff of 48 and an expanding service program serving a university city-county area of 125,000 population. M.S.L.S. and eight (8) years of progressively responsible experience in professional library work including three (3) years of responsible administrative experience; or an equivalent combination of education and experience. Salary: $17,160-$21,965 plus excellent benefits. The City is an Affirmative Action/Equal Employment Opportunity Employer. Send resume to Personnel Director, P.O. Box 490, Gainesville, Florida 32602.

DIRECTOR OF LIBRARY SYSTEMS: Provides service to nine counties and 18 member libraries in Northwest Kansas. The Director is responsible for planning and administering overall library operations. ALA-accredited MLS, minimum of two years library administration experience. Starting salary from $15,000. Fringe benefits include retirement, medical health insurance, and generous vacation allowance. Position open February 15, 1977. Send resume to: Pat Berry, Chairman, Executive Board, Northwest Kansas Library System, 408 North Norton, Norton, Kansas 67654.

HEAD LIBRARIAN: Town of Plainville. MLS degree and at least two (2) years experience including some supervision in a public library system. Duties include supervision and scheduling of supportive staff, budget preparation, community public relations work, and collection building and maintenance. Beginning salary $12,347 per annum. Application forms are available in the Office of the Town Manager. Please submit application and full resume to: The Office of the Town Manager, Plainville Municipal Center, 1 Central Square, Plainville, CT. 06062. Closing date for applications is March 1, 1977.

HEAD, CATALOGING DEPARTMENT: Supervises a department using OCLC system, AACR, and L.C. classification and subject headings to catalog all forms of materials. Qualifications: MLS from accredited school; three to five years' professional experience in an academic library cataloging department. Salary and rank commensurate with qualifications and experience. Apply before April 1, 1977 to: Shirley M. Tarlton, College Librarian, Dacus Library, Winthrop College, Rock Hill, SC 29733. An Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer.

HEAD, ACQUISITIONS DEPARTMENT: Supervises a department which acquires monographs, serials, microforms, and non-book materials and is responsible for acquisition via U.S.B.E. and Duplicate Exchange Union of ALA. Qualifications: MLS from accredited library school; three to five years' professional experience in an academic library acquisitions department. Salary and rank commensurate with qualifications and experience. Apply before April 1, 1977 to: Shirley M. Tarlton, College Librarian, Dacus Library, Winthrop College, Rock Hill, SC 29733. An Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer.

CHILDREN AND YOUTH LIBRARIAN: Minimum qualifications: Possession of a Master's Degree in Library Science and a minimum of one year of experience in children and youth subject matter. Salary $12,605-$15,933. Open: January 24, 1977-February 11, 1977. Contact: Dorina Martinez, City of Phoenix, Personnel Department, 10 North 3rd Ave., Phoenix, AZ 85003.

CHILDREN'S LIBRARIAN: Fastest growing city in Nebraska (adjacent to Omaha). Require MLS. Salary $8400, with city paid life, health and dental coverage, plus pension and vacation. Resumes to: Jim Dertien, Bellevue Public Library, 1003 Lincoln Road, Bellevue, NE 68005.

COORDINATOR FOR LIBRARY SYSTEMS: Young, dynamic, upper division university seeks a coordinator for library systems for its non-traditional teaching library. The coordinator reports to the Dean of Library Services. Job responsibilities include long range planning & providing guidance for the implementation of those plans in the areas of technical services and automated support systems, establishing performance standards & in-house training programs, and doing some original cataloging.

Commitment to participatory management is essential. MLS degree or equivalent plus considerable experience in all areas of technical services, including OCLC & computerized support systems is required. Salary: $17,000-$21,000 commensurate with qualifications. Faculty status.

Sangamon State University is an equal opportunity employer.

Send resume by March 21 to Barbara Klintworth, Chairperson, Library Search Committee, Sangamon State University, Brookens 140, Springfield, Ill. 62708. The telephone number is (217) 786-6592.

HEAD, BIBLIOGRAPHIC SEARCHING UNIT: Position Available: Immediately. Closing Date for Receipt of Application: March 15, 1977. The Unit is responsible for searching for and retrieval of bibliographic data from external data bases. This function includes, but is not limited to, preorder searching and pre-cataloging searching, using computer terminals, card catalogs, book catalogs, Library of Congress proof slips, and other bibliographic tools, as necessary. The Unit is also responsible for making adjustments, within defined limits, to cataloging records; inputting original cataloging into the OCLC data base; and generating and controlling the production of catalog cards. The Head of the Unit has overall responsibility for its efficient operation. The Unit is presently staffed by five paraprofessionals and two clerks. Minimum Qualifications: MLS plus at least two years experience in bibliographic searching, including OCLC terminal searching. Must be able to train others in the use of the OCLC system in all its various search modes. Some professional experience in Cataloging preferred, with facility in one or more European languages. Supervisory experience preferred. Minimum Starting Salary: $11,500, depending on qualifications. State or TIAA Retirement Systems. Good fringe benefits. Send applications and names of three references to: Recruitment Committee, SUNY-Binghamton Library, Binghamton, N.Y. 13901. We are an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer.

COORDINATOR FOR HEALTH SCIENCES LIBRARIES IN IOWA: (Librarian II). Responsibilities: to strengthen the bond of the various levels of organization in the Health Sciences Libraries Network within a 6-state area; to explore and implement programs helping the health science professional; to work with health science librarians and non-health science librarians, users and nonusers; to cooperate in avoiding duplication of effort and encourage resource sharing among libraries; to support continuing education opportunities for health science librarians, and to assist appropriate groups design, implement, and evaluate programs; to solve problems involving information service providers and users. Education, experience, and special requirements: MLS from accredited library school and two years experience, preferably in the Health Sciences area. Salary range $11,700-$15,886. Applicants will be selected from the Iowa Merit Employment Register. Applications must be received by 4:00 P.M., April 1, 1977. Please send application and resume to: Jack W. Hurkett, Assistant Director, State Library, Historical Building, East 12th and Grand, Des Moines, Iowa 50319. An Equal Opportunity Employer.

ASSISTANT DIRECTOR PERSONNEL: Personnel background, accredited MLS, second master's & 2 yrs. academic library

(Cont'd on pg. 6)

BRANCH LIBRARIAN: Position available in new library, duties include: supervision of branch and staff, book selection, community relations.
AUDIOVISUAL SPECIALIST: Supervises A/V collections development for 18 branches. Both require MLS from ALA-accredited school with previous supervisory experience. Applications accepted through February 28. Contact: Director, Harris County Public Library, 2301 Caroline, Houston, Texas 77004.

LIBRARY SCIENCE: Assistant Professor, August 1, 1977. M.L.S. and doctorate, library science or related field, professional library and teaching experience. Competence in two of the following: public or community college libraries; library administration; literature and bibliography of the sciences or humanities; technical services. Salary competitive; favorable fringe benefits and course load. Resume and references by April 1, 1977 to Professor Cora Paul Bomar, Library Science/Educational Technology Division, School of Education, University of North Carolina at Greensboro, North Carolina 27412. Affirmative Action, Equal Opportunity Employer.

LIBRARY FACULTY: Continuations Catalog Librarian for microforms work includes cataloging, maintenance of pertinent records, service to users and supervision of appropriate personnel. An accredited MLS degree required plus minimum 3 years experience.
Educational Resources Librarian to work as curriculum specialist with emphasis on selection and cataloging of curriculum materials and ability to interpret them to users by means of reference and media utilization. 3-5 years of experience required plus accredited MLS degree preferred; equivalent advanced degrees will be considered if earned in curriculum, instructional media or educational systems technology.
Order Librarian (Assistant Acquisitions Librarian) assist head acquisitions librarian in the ordering of rare, out-of-print, desiderata, non-trade books; supervises appropriate personnel; establishes and maintains a close watch of routines and jobber performance; acts in absence of head of acquisitions. Accredited MLS required plus 2 or more years experience in order work, supplemented by activities in technical service and bibliography. 9-month position(s) and academic rank based on degrees and years of experience. Salary depends upon rank (e.g. Instructor $7,941-$14,752, Assistant Professor $10,367-$17,488) etc. Usual fringe benefits. Job descriptions available upon request. Send resume to: Dr. Ray R. Suput, Department of Library Service, Ball State University, Muncie, Indiana 47306. Deadline is March 31, 1977. Ball State University practices Equal Opportunity in Education and Employment.

PERSONNEL LIBRARIAN: Directs personnel program of the University's libraries (staff of 300) in accordance with university policies; assists in development and interpretation of policies and procedures; responsible for maintenance of personnel records. Serves on various administrative committees; works with University Office of Personnel Services. Expected to meet university requirements for research, service, and publication. MLS from graduate program accredited by ALA required; 3 years minimum appropriate successful experience required. Salary: $18,000-$21,000 annually, depending upon qualifications and experience. Available April 1, 1977.
GENERAL REFERENCE LIBRARIAN: Reference Department. Provides assistance primarily to faculty and graduate students. Emphasis on statistical sources, legislative research, national and foreign government documents and bibliographies. Responsibilities include formal bibliographic instruction program, use of various on-line computer search systems, assigned duty 1 evening per week and every other weekend. MLS from graduate program accredited by ALA required. Knowledge of 1 foreign language. 1-3 years' appropriate experience preferred. Available immediately. Salary $9,840-$13,440 annually depending upon qualifications and experience. Send resume for either position to Rita Hirschman, Personnel Librarian, The Ohio State University Libraries, 1858 Neil Avenue Mall, Columbus, Ohio 43210. An Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer.

ASSISTANT DIRECTOR PERSONNEL (Cont'd) experience required. Salary $13,440-$18,564, 12 mos.
HEAD, SOCIAL SCIENCE REFERENCE: Accredited MLS, second master's, 2 yrs. professional experience. Salary: $13,440-$18,564, 12 mos. or $11,724-$16,152, 10 mos.; with four yrs. appropriate experience $17, 304-$20,856 12 mos. or $15,072-$18,132, 10 mos.
UNIVERSITY ARCHIVIST: Accredited MLS, second master's, & 2 yrs. professional experience. Salary: $13,440-$18,564, 12 mos. or $11,724-$16,152, 10 mos.
ASSISTANT TO THE DIRECTOR: To assist with grants, surveys, community relations, public information, and reports. Requires accredited MLS, second master's & 2 yrs. recent academic library experience. With experience in grants, library automation, community relations, & publications. Salary: $13,440-$18,564, 12 mos.
Application deadline: March 15. For further information, write to Lloyd Kramer, Associate Director of the University Library, California State University-Long Beach, Long Beach, Calif. 90840. An Equal Opportunity, Affirmative Action Employer.

ASSISTANT DIRECTOR FOR MANAGEMENT & PUBLIC SERVICES: Old Dominion University, Norfolk, Virginia, is seeking an Assistant Director who will work with the Director in all phases of library management and will assume middle management responsibility for all public service units. The library serves approximately 16,000 students and 1650 faculty, is a member of SOLINET and the Old Tidewater Consortium, and is working toward implementation of automated library systems. Qualifications include a master's degree from an ALA-accredited school (second master's helpful), 8 years of progressively more responsible library experience, including administrative duties, education and/or experience in both computer and business applications in libraries Salary $18,000-$21,000. Send inquiries and resume to Dr. Cynthia Duncan, Library, Old Dominion University, Norfolk, Virginia 23508. Closing date, March 21, 1971. An Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer.

REFERENCE LIBRARIAN: Emory University, Open June 1, 1977. Responsibilities include general reference services, with an emphasis on the social sciences, especially business and economics, and participation in library instruction. Qualifications: Accredited MLS; several years of professional experience in reference; reading knowledge of at least one modern European language; background or library experience should be in the social sciences with preference in business and economics. Salary commensurate with qualifications, but not less than $11,500. Send resume and names of at least three references by March 31, 1977, to: Director of Libraries, Robert W. Woodruff Library, Emory University, Atlanta, GA 30322. An equal opportunity employer.

ACQUISITIONS DEPARTMENT HEAD: South Dakota State University Library. Responsibilities include planning, organizing, and directing the acquisitions program, developing acquisitions policies, and supervising a department of three clericals plus student assistants. Ordering and accounting procedures are automated. Master's degree in library science and minimum of two years experience required. Additional subject master's desirable, but not required. Preference given to candidates with academic library experience in either cataloging or acquisitions. Minimum salary: $10,000. An equal opportunity and affirmative action employer. Application deadline: March 20, 1977. Apply with resume and three letters of reference (one from current employer) to: Leon Raney, Dean of Libraries, South Dakota State University, Brookings, South Dakota 57006.

LIBRARIAN, TECHNICAL SERVICE: Small liberal arts college seeking MLS from accredited school, minimum 2 years experience acquisitions and cataloging. Experienced L.C. cataloging in print, media and music collections. Manage reclassification; supervisory responsibility for support staff and students. Faculty status, 12 month appointment, effective July 1, 1977. Resume due March 1. Fred Borchuck, Director, Coe College Library, Cedar Rapids, Iowa 52402. An Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer.

NEWS

Database vendors in a price war?

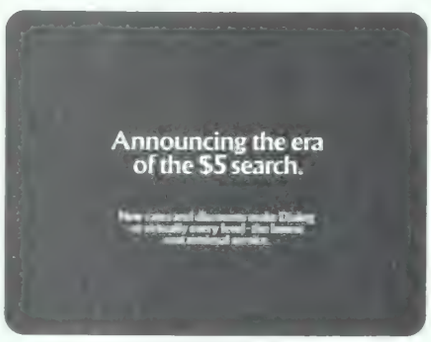
BRS (Bibliographic Retrieval Services, Inc.) is starting to cut into the old territory of Lockheed and the System Development Corporation and lure database service customers away with its discount offer. And both SDC and Lockheed are starting to pare down their prices in efforts to offset a stampede for cheaper access to formerly expensive databases.

The low cost ($10 to $30 per connect hour) of the BRS retrieval service was cited by the Medical College of Wisconsin library as the main reason for its decision to switch from System Development Corporation to BRS. The MCW library switched over to the lower cost BRS for access to BIOSIS, CHEMCON, INFORM, NTIS, ERIC, and CAIN, and also signed up for access to two other databases, Psychological Abstracts and INSPEC.

And the Midwest Library Network (MIDLNET) is the first network reported to sign a contract with BRS. MIDLNET plans to serve as a broker for libraries in the West and Midwest; it offers database access at a rate ten percent lower than individual libraries could secure from BRS on their own.

Noting the "proliferation of discount policies" that are apparently cutting into its business, SDC has announced a discount policy of its own, and it has also reduced hourly rates for both TYMSHARE and TELENET (down from $10 to $8).

And Lockheed has started advertising new rates and discounts that it says "make DIALOG—at virtually every level—the lowest cost retrieval service." Among the price reductions announced: TELENET fees down from $8 to $5 an hour and TYMSHARE TYMNET down from $10 to $8 an hour; BIOSIS Previews reduced from $65 to $45 per hour; Chemical Abstracts CONDENSATES from $45 to $35 per hour; and automatic discounts of $5 to $15 per hour plus special discounts for groups or institutions that have signed a contract.



Lockheed announces new cheap rates

Among the questions raised by the database price war: were vendors overcharging their library customers earlier; how far can the vendors go in reducing prices (and still make a profit); and will the lower prices create a much broader clientele for such specialized services. Another question worth pondering: in view of declining prices for specialized data base services, will libraries (especially academic) still be able to justify the need for fees. At ALA Midwinter, Council rejected by a vote of 96 to 36 a resolution that said that public libraries and publicly supported academic libraries should provide free access to online database services just as they do to other library materials (like an expensive reference book) regardless of price. The resolution that ALA Council nixed, incidentally, already had the approval of the California Library Association and other large state and regional library organizations could go along.

Statewide planning in N.C.: community analysis launched

North Carolina State Librarian David McKay reports that every county in the state will participate in a major planning effort leading to the reevaluation of public library service statewide. North Carolina, said McKay, nixed the idea of commissioning another state survey from an outside consulting firm and decided to go after a great deal more grass roots participation in planning—something North Carolina librarians have asked for.

The survey effort will be directed by Roger Greer of the University of Denver Graduate School of Librarianship. Teams of two from participating libraries are to come to a series of community analysis institutes, where they'll learn how to construct a community profile, evaluate present library resources and services, and develop and implement a long-range plan of services responsive to individual community needs.

The planning effort, said McKay, will result in an unprecedented analysis of the needs and resources of every community in the state. And he contended that community analysis is superior to relying upon an outside consultant. McKay said with this approach he expects to get "better data, [and] improved planning documents at the local level . . . which will result in better planning documents at the state level." Also expected: the development of "locally derived objectives which will allow for less control but better evaluation of progress by the State Library, and a move to include service as well as institutional standards for public libraries."

Technology & the catalog; tradition vs. the new wave

The Catalog in the Age of Technological Change is the topic of a forthcoming institute, which promises to be marked by lively debate, with traditionalists at odds with the proponents of change. The institute, sponsored by ALA's Information Science and Automation Division and its Resources and Technical Services Division (ISAD/RTSD), will be held April 22-23 in New York City, and will then be repeated in Los Angeles on May 19-20.

High spots of the institute will include a confrontation between a proponent of the new wave of cataloging and a classical theorist, when Michael Gorman of the British Library and Seymour Lubetzky of the University of California-Los Angeles address the question of how traditional cataloging values have been affected by the new technologies. And there should be some spirited debate on the proposed new edition of the Anglo-American Cataloging Rules, with John Byrum, head of ALA's Catalog Code Revision Committee, defending his approach to the revision of AACR in the face of tough critiques from Phyllis Richmond of Case Western (at the New York City meet) and Bernadine Hoduski of the U.S. Congress Joint Committee on Printing (at Los Angeles).

And heated discussion is likely when Sanford Berman of Minnesota's Hennepin County Library and Joseph Howard of the Library of Congress present their divergent viewpoints. Howard, recently appointed director of LC's Processing Department, will make a strong case for automated cataloging as he talks about progress logged in such broad-gauge projects as CONSER (Conversion of Serials), COMARC, and UBC (Universal Bibliographic Control). He'll also touch upon such topics as superimposition, desuperimposition, and the projected closing of the LC catalog. Berman, on the other hand, is expected to zero in on the problems that the technologically influenced catalog creates for the user; he is expected to continue his fight to make the catalog more responsive to user needs. Ann Lipow, teamed up in the program with Berman, will examine the needs of the research person; she will also peg limitations of the traditional library catalog and evaluate the new data base services as one alternative.

And Jean Weihs of Seneca College, New York will look at the problems of nonbook cataloging, discuss the value of title entry for nonbook materials, and suggest new cataloging procedures. Weihs is the author of the Canadian Rules for Cataloging Nonprint.

To get in on the ISAD/RTSD institute, contact Donald Hammer, ISAD, ALA, 50 E. Huron St., Chicago, Ill.

LIBRARIAN'S SPECIALTIES

Preservatives, book & document stands, page weights, slip cases, boxes, restoratives, bookplate remover, etc.

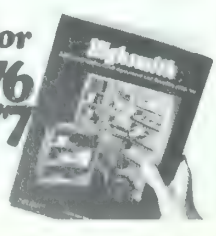
Send for illustrated brochure listing items for book and document care and preservation.

THE CURRENT COMPANY
P.O. Box 46 / Bristol, R.I. 02809

New, for '76 '77

Write for free copy
Almost 13,000 items:
library/AV equip./office

The Highsmith Co., Inc.
P.O. 25-0800
Fort Atkinson, WI 53538



1977's energy crunch: libraries shut down

The natural gas shortage of 1977, like the fuel crisis of the early 70's, serves as a harsh reminder that the U.S. must cut down its consumption of energy now. The new energy crunch forced schools, libraries, and businesses in a number of states to shut down. Early reports on the crisis told of library closings in Virginia. And the Minneapolis Public Library and Information Center cut its hours of service (adopting a five-day schedule) to save energy.

The Free Library of Philadelphia, under orders from the City, closed some 40 library branches heated by natural gas and laid off or "furloughed" the entire staffs of these facilities without pay—although staffers were given the option of charging the days laid off to vacation time. At the height of the shortage, in late January and early February, only the main library and seven facilities built in recent years—and not relying on gas—were kept open. According to Free Library of Philadelphia Director Keith Doms, "we switched away from dependence on gas some six or seven years ago, when we saw this energy crisis coming down the road."

Fund-raising in Iowa

The Iowa State Library Commission ticks off some of the unusual fund-raising gambits that worked for libraries in Iowa: a Bikeathon (Farmington); sale of oversize coloring books and a benefit dance (Swea City); and a Halloween dance to convert an old theatre building into a library (Garnavillo).

Private sector to do more gov't printing, says GPO

In its first five-year plan, the Government Printing Office predicts that the demand for government publications will keep growing at a rate of about ten percent a year, but GPO does not intend to step up in-house production. Instead, commercial printers will handle the extra printing load.

Meanwhile, GPO intends to go on modernizing, phasing out letterpress and replacing it with offset where possible, and increasing its use of automation—steps aimed at helping the agency "perform its mission in an efficient, cost-effective manner."

The announcement stresses—as if it were something out of the ordinary—that all key officials were involved in the plan, and that "the Public Printer and his staff personally participated in the formulation of this first five-year plan." But murky language is used to describe the planning role of GPO management, as in this excerpt from the announcement: "The individual managers' inputs respond to the Public Printer's definitions of the Government Printing Office's mission, policy, and character of mission performance and standards of satisfactory performance, as they affect each manager's area of responsibility."

Nominations sought by ALA for Council & Presidency

The ALA Nominating Committee is seeking candidates for the 1977 slate for Council and ALA President, and it asks that ALA members send in names (including their own). The committee says it is particularly interested in potential leaders "who may not yet have served at the national level, but who have been active in regional and other activities."

Stressing that it wants a slate that is "representative of the heterogeneity of the association," the Nominating Committee asks that the following information be provided with nominations: name of candidate, address, present position, age, sex, race, telephone, ALA participation, other professional activities, publications, and a brief statement telling why the person would be a good choice. The deadline for nominations is April 1. Send nominations to Regina U. Minudri, Alameda County Library, 224 W. Winton Ave., Hayward, Calif. 94544, or to Patricia Glass Shuman, Neal-Shuman Publishers, 77 Fulton St., New York, N.Y. 10038; or to David Kaser, Graduate Library School, Indiana University, Bloomington, Ind. 47401.

Increase your staff... without increasing your payroll.

L to r: Wendell Lotz, Manager–Approval Program; Asha Kapoor, Co-Manager–Cataloging Dept., Don Bogart, Director–Special Services; Ernest Muro, Director–Technical Services; Stefan Mellin, Dimity Berkner, Technical Program Representatives; Bent Andersen, Manager–Continuation Service; Doyle Pickett, Director–Program Services; Bill Sprandel, Co-Manager–Cataloging Dept.

These library professionals are members of Baker & Taylor's 60-person Technical Services staff. They function as though they were members of your staff, even though they're on our payroll. They can help you enjoy the services of a larger staff, at no extra cost. In fact, they can even help you save money.

A Cataloging and Processing Program: More Dollars for More Books.

The amount of time necessary to make a book shelf-ready is considerable, nearly one hour per book. We can accomplish this for you, and save you big dollars. Only 39¢ for a complete cataloging kit...only 79¢ for a totally processed book. Savings that can mean more new books on your shelves.

A Continuation Service: Tailored to Meet Your Serial Needs.

Nothing is more time-consuming than monitoring and ordering newly-released serial titles. We can perform these tasks for you, saving you dozens of research hours and worry about missing a vital publication. Plus, discounts are the best available, with no service charges.

BATAB: An Automated Buying System Designed to Eliminate Routine Chores.

Now, you can take advantage of the time-savings of computerization and enjoy the benefits of a team of computer professionals. A fund-control program. Statistical reports. And more. The costs are nominal, the results proven in libraries of all types across the country.

An Approval Program: The Ultimate Acquisition Service.

We can also provide you with an Approval Program to maintain your collection automatically. We will fine-tune your Approval profile to ensure minimum returns, and spend hours needed to track over 30,000 new scholarly titles released annually. We will process all your orders, handling paperwork that you would otherwise have to do. Generous discounts and no service charges provide additional savings.

Find out more about how our staff can increase your staff without increasing your payroll.

Yes, I want to increase my staff without increasing my payroll. Please send me information on:

- ☐ Cataloging & Processing
- ☐ Continuation Service
- ☐ BATAB
- ☐ Approval Program
- ☐ I would like to be contacted by a Baker & Taylor representative

Name_____

Title_____

Library_____

Address_____

City_____

State_____ Zip_____

(Please mail to your nearest Baker & Taylor Distribution Center)

Baker & Taylor

Working for your library. Today, more than ever.

Western Division
Reno, NV 89502
380 Edison Way
(702) 786-6700

Southwest Division
Clarksville, TX 75426
Industrial Park
(214) 427-3811

Midwest Division
Momence, IL 60954
Gladiola Avenue
(815) 472-2444

Southeast Division
Commerce, GA30529
(404) 335-5000

Eastern Division
Somerville, NJ 08876
50 Kirby Avenue
(201) 722-8000

Nominees for Immroth Award

Nominations for the John Phillip Immroth Memorial Award, consisting of a plaque and $500, are now being sought by the Intellectual Freedom Round Table. The award, which honors the first chairperson and a founder of the Round Table, will be made for notable contributions and demonstrations of personal courage in the cause of intellectual freedom. Names of candidates (nonlibrarians as well as librarians) should be sent by April 15 to Professor Clara O. Jackson, chairperson of the Immroth Memorial Award Committee, Kent State University, School of Library Science, Kent, Ohio 44242.

ALA issues booklist, "Notable Books for Adults"

The American Library Association issued at its Midwinter meet in Washington, D.C. its 1976 list of Notable Books for Adults. A team of ALA Council members reviewed 1976's book crop and picked for inclusion on the list those titles found to have literary merit and general appeal to adult readers.

Titles named to the list included: Kinflicks by Lisa Alter (Knopf); The View from Highway 1: Essays on Television by Michael J. Arlen (Farrar); Collected Poems by W. H. Auden, edited by Edward Mendelson (Random); New Burlington; the Life and Death of an American Village by John Baskin (Norton); The Transformation of Southern Politics: Social Change and Political Consequence Since 1945 by Jack Bass & Walter de Vries (Basic Bks.); The Uses of Enchantment: the Meaning and Importance of Fairy Tales by Bruno Bettelheim (Knopf); Drama of the Oceans by Elizabeth Mann Borgese (Abrams); The Autobiography of My Mother by Rosellen Brown (Doubleday); Friendly Fire by C. D. B. Bryan (Putnam); Watches of the Night by Henry Caudill (Little); Women of the Shadows by Ann Cornelissen (Atlantic); The Damnable Question by George Dangerfield (Atlantic); World of Wonders by Robertson Davies (Viking); and The Survivor: an Anatomy of Life in the Death Camps by Terrence Des Pres (Oxford Univ. Pr.).

Also: Interview with History by Oriana Fallaci (Liveright); Human Intelligence by Jack Fincher (Putnam); Terra Nostra by Carlos Fuentes (Farrar); Autumn of the Patriarch by Gabriel Garcia Marques (Harper); October Light by John Gardner (Knopf); The Body Is the Hero by Ronald Glasser (Random); The Strong Brown God by Sanche de Gramont (Houghton); Children of the Sun: a Narrative of "Decadence" in England after 1918 by Martin Green (Basic Bks.); Ordinary People by Judith Guest (Viking); The Black Family in Slavery and Freedom, 1750-1925 by Herbert Gutman (Pantheon); Roots: the Saga of an American Family by Alex Haley (Doubleday); Beyond Culture by Edward Hall (Anchor); Freedom Spent by Richard Harris (Little); World of Our Fathers by Irving Howe (Harcourt); Heat and Dust by Ruth Jhabvala (Harper); and Gramp by Mark and Dan Jury (Grossman).

Also: Face of Battle by John Keegan (Viking); The Woman Warrior: Memoirs of a Girlhood among Ghosts by Maxine Kingston (Knopf); Born on the Fourth of July by Ron Kovic (McGraw); Nightmare: the Underside of the Nixon Years by Anthony J. Lukas (Viking); Plagues and Peoples by William H. McNeill (Anchor); Blood Brothers by Richard Price (Houghton); The Gates by Muriel Rukeyser (McGraw); Passages: Predictable Crises of Adult Life by Gail Sheehy (Dutton); Portraits of Chinese Women in Revolution by Agnes Smedley (Feminist Pr.); The Russians by Hedrick Smith (Quadrangle); The Takeover by Muriel Spark (Viking); Adolf Hitler by John Toland (Doubleday); Angels at the Ritz, and Other Stories by William Trevor (Viking); Searching for Caleb by Anne Tyler (Knopf); Marry Me: a Romance by John Updike (Knopf); 1876, a Novel by Gore Vidal (Random); Beautiful Swimmers by William Warner (Atlantic); Letters of E. B. White, collected and edited by Dorothy Lobrano Guth (Harper); Easter Parade by Richard Yates (Delacorte); and Family Feeling by Helen Yglesias (Dial).

To order copies of the booklist, contact ALA's Reference and Adult Services Division (RASD), 50 E. Huron St., Chicago, Ill. 60611.

NLW materials catalog available from Upstart

Upstart Library Promotions, a Maryland firm which is giving ALA serious competition in the sale of National Library Week PR materials, has issued its new catalog. The catalog illustrates with verve and color the latest selection of NLW materials available: posters, mobiles, buttons, streamers, bumper stickers, pocket patches, and billboards—all tying into the slogan, "Libraries Are Something Else." Upstart spotlights a T-shirt with the message, "librarians are novel lovers," new three dimensional reading boosters, and a library orientation teaching aid.

To get free copies of the 16-page catalog, write to Upstart, Box 889, Hagerstown, Md. 21740.

Sugar Bowl $$ to Pitt

Part of the proceeds won by the University of Pittsburgh's football team will go to Pitt's Libraries; $100,000 of Pitt's take at the 1976 Sugar Bowl will be used to buy books ($80,000) and AV materials ($20,000).

Corrections

In the February 1 issue of Library Journal, the following titles in the New Spring Books index were incorrectly listed as being published by University of Massachusetts Press. In fact, they are published by Houghton Mifflin.

ART

Siegel, M. B. Watching the Dance Go By. Apr.
Welsch, U. The World I Love to See. Mar.

BIOGRAPHY

Carpenter, H. Tolkien. Jun.
Corry, J. Golden Clan. Mar.
Edwards, S. The Vidocq Dossier. Mar.
Gilbert, M. Winston S. Churchill. Vol. 5. Mar.
Griffin, J. H. Black Like Me. 2d ed. Apr.
Hahn, E. Mabel. May.
Skehan, E. M. Rocky Marciano. Apr.

FICTION

Allen, W. To Tojo from Billy-Bob Jones. Apr.
Guthrie, A. B., Jr. The Genuine Article. Jun.
Jante, J. The Brotherhood of the Grape. Mar.
Katz, R. Ziggurat. May.
Osborn, J. J. Jr. The Only Thing I've Done Wrong. Mar.
Perry, R. One Good Death Deserves Another. Apr.
Swigart, R. Little America. Mar.
Turnbull, A. S. The Winds of Love. May.
Van de Wetering, J. Death of a Hawker. Mar.
Weiss, E. The Eyewitness. Jun.
Wilkinson, S. Shadow of the Mountain. Mar.

HISTORY & GEOGRAPHY

Carson, G. The Golden Egg. Mar.
Conrat, M. & R. The American Farm. Mar.
Galbraith, J. K. The Age of Uncertainty. Mar.

HOME ECONOMICS

Powell, T. & B. Powell. Your Garden Homestead. Jun.

LITERATURE

Thoma, H. F., ed. The American Prospect. Apr.

POETRY

McHugh, H. Dangers. Mar.
Williams, C. K. With Ignorance. May.

POLITICAL SCIENCE

Yergin, D. Shattered Peace. May.

PSYCHOLOGY

Long, K. "Johnny's Such a Bright Boy, What a Shame He's Retarded." May.

SCIENCE & TECHNOLOGY

Agran, L. The Cancer Connection. Apr.
Halle, L. J. Out of Chaos. Apr.
Lappe, F. M. & J. Collins. Food First. Jun.
Milunsky, A., M.D. Know your Genes. Apr.
Moss, S. Your Child's Teeth. Jun.
Pasquier, R. F. Watching Birds. May.

SOCIAL SCIENCES

Smitherman, G. Talkin and Testifyin. May.

SPORTS & RECREATION

Ensminger, M. E. Horses and Tack. Apr.
ffrench Blake, R. L. V. Intermediate Dressage. Jun.
Kramer, J. Silhouettes. Mar.
Lettvin, M. Maggie's Back Book. Jan.
Swan, S. Home-Made Baby Toys. Mar.

In the February 1 issue of LJ, "First Novelists" section, the correct spelling of the author of Split Ends is Pamela Chais.

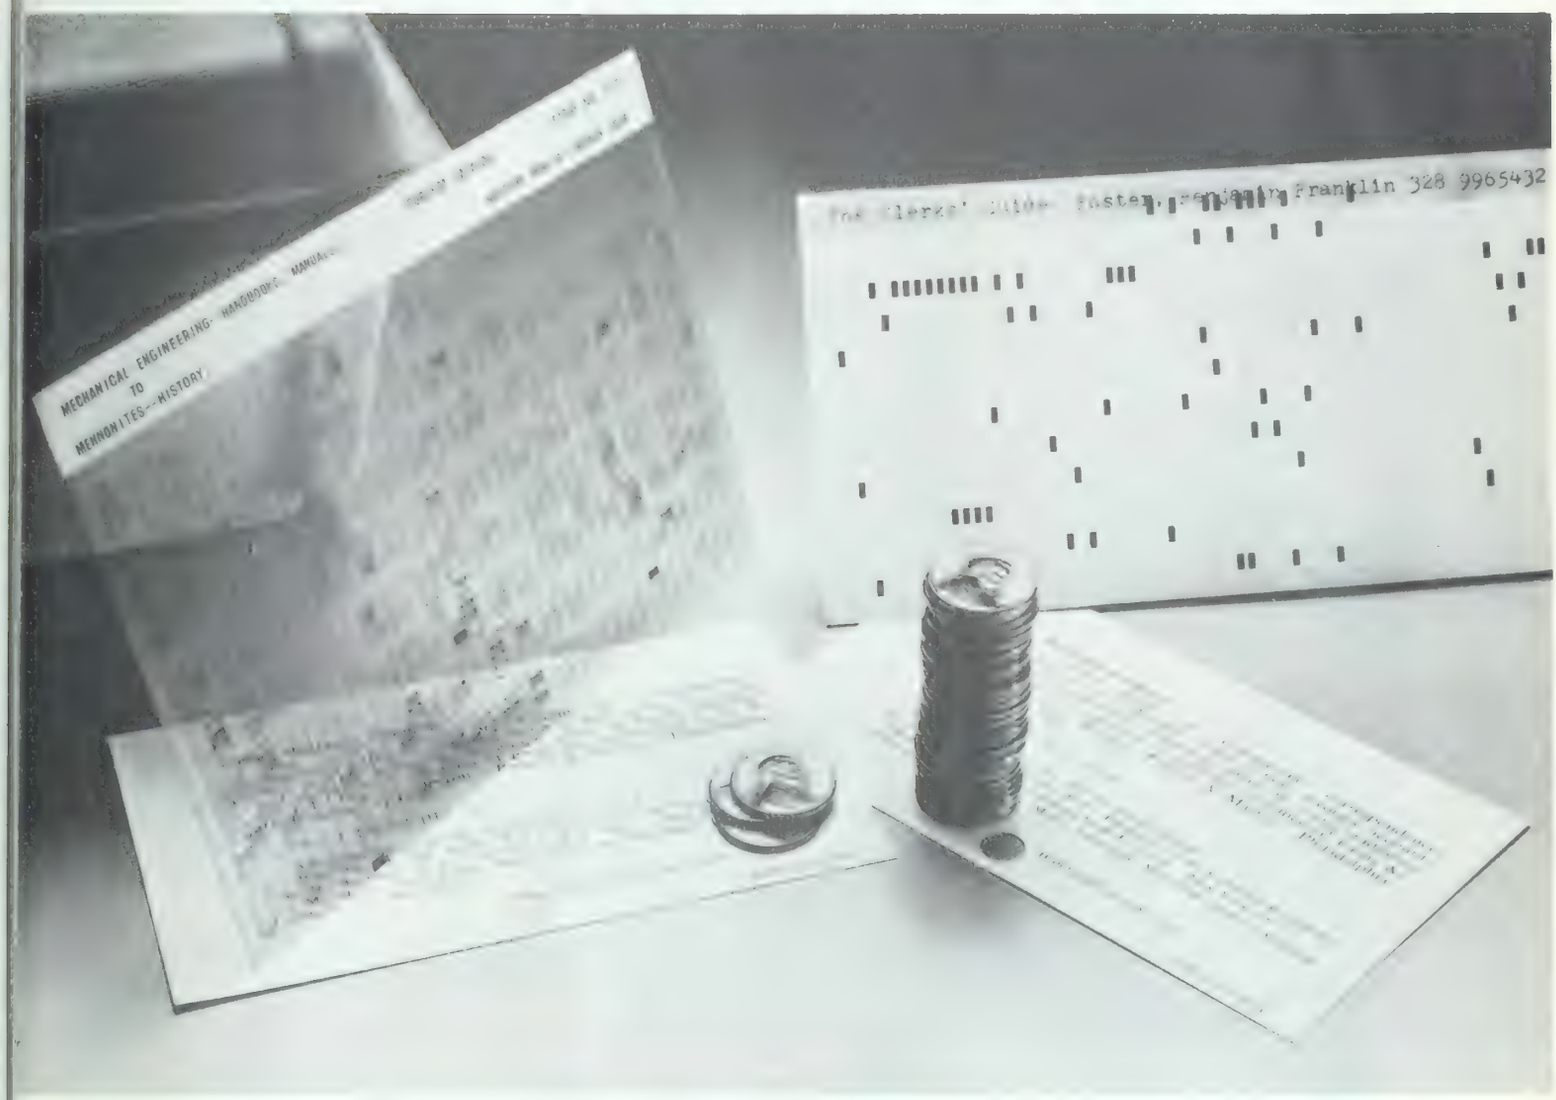
Money is a good reason to convert your card catalog by Cardcam instead of computer.



You're probably considering converting, or possibly freezing, your card file. Isn't everyone.

And probably, too, your new titles will go into a computer. But what about the thousands of cards you have now?

Consider University Microfilms' new Cardcam services. Cardcam could very well be your solution to the high cost of retrospective conversion.

To put it in numbers: converting via Cardcam costs about three cents per card. Converting into machine readable form costs a lot more—up to ten times more.

And converting by Cardcam is so convenient you'll hardly know we're in the library.

We'll film each drawer in minutes. And put two drawers (that's 1,980 cards!) on a single, clearly indexed microfiche. (Or, if you prefer, your catalog can be duplicated on card stock and microfilm.)

If you'd like to hear more about Cardcam's economies for your library, call or write Griff McDonald, our General Manager of Cardcam Services.

We'd like to work with you.

And get in our three cents.

CC
AA
RM
D

A way to keep your card file. And share it.

University Microfilms International
Dept. D, 300 N. Zeeb Rd., Ann Arbor, Mich. 48106
Phone: (313) 761-4700

Network of academic libraries proposed in Nebraska

A computerized network of holdings information, a centralized depository for little-used materials, statewide reciprocal on-site borrowing privileges, and a sharing of reference and resource services are among the features of a proposed statewide network of academic libraries in Nebraska. The blueprint for a network which would encompass the state's university, college, and community college libraries and information resource centers (and exclude other types of libraries at least for starters) appeared in The Nebraska Plan for the Coordination of Postsecondary Educational Libraries. The architects of the plan are the Postsecondary Library Directors of Nebraska (PLDN), a group which in November of 1974 started exploring cooperative schemes which could offset spiraling acquisitions costs and "undesirable" duplication.

PLDN, which represents six university, 16 college, ten community college libraries and/or media centers, and the Nebraska Library Commission (John Kopischke, director), initiated in 1974 widespread reciprocal borrowing that was eventually extended in many cases to students as well as to faculty. But the group decided that reciprocal borrowing was only a "partial solution" to the cost and space problems faced by Nebraska's postsecondary educational institutions, and it noted that the borrowing scheme had built-in limitations because not all academic institutions agreed to extend such privileges.

Building on its initial experiment with cooperation, PLDN has outlined an ambitious plan to strengthen cooperation in the academic library community; but the plan will require governmental or foundation support for realization. In building its case for support, the group notes that Nebraska's academic libraries have had to cope with astronomical price increases, and resource sharing is becoming essential to their survival.

What is needed for starters, says PLDN, is an online information system of the holdings of Nebraska's academic libraries. The Nebraska Union Catalog, started in the depression years as a Works Progress Administration project, does not work for academic libraries. Among its limitations: the manual catalog, located in the Nebraska Library Commission offices, lacks information (only 15 academic libraries have submitted inventory cards), and there are delays in processing, retrieving (information is available only via a main entry search), and communicating data.

As for nonprint media, PLDN noted that lack of action in standardization of bibliographic information for AV materials has created "unnecessary and undesired duplication of these materials" and has slowed down interlibrary loan. The solution suggested for Nebraska: production on computer-output microfiche of a union list of nonprint media—until it is possible to put nonprint materials in an online system.

Other cooperative measures suggested by PLDN: utilization of an online telecommunications network to speed up interlibrary loan requests (loan operations, it was charged, are too slow because libraries must rely on

YOUR GUIDE TO THE GLOBAL LILLIPUTIANS

MICROFORM MARKET PLACE 76-77
An International Directory of Micropublishing
2nd Edition

Edited by Alan M. Meckler

Some 250 micropublishers in all parts of the world are listed. Name, address, telephone number, key personnel, major programs, and subject areas are provided for each. One hundred of these micropublishers are new to this edition.

■ Includes an expanded subject index and a new calendar of important microform meetings and events.

■ Provides a geographic index, bibliography, names & numbers directory...separate sections on mergers & acquisitions, reprographic centers, jobbers, organizations.

(Published in association with Microform Review. Distributed in North & South America by Bowker.)
ISBN 0-913672-00-9. LC 74-4811. 1976. 190 pages. Softcover. $14.95

Order from R.R. Bowker Order Dept., P.O. Box 1807, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106.
All orders plus shipping and handling. Sales tax added where applicable.

BOWKER
NEW YORK & LONDON

the Nebraska Library Commission as an intermediary); development of a more rapid and reliable delivery system—one utilizing such things as truck or van services, commercial delivery services, telefacsimile transmission, or video transmission via CRT or TV.

Also suggested; access to automated data banks either by contracting with commercial vendors or establishing an in-state service bureau; a central repository (or several regional ones) for seldom-used materials to help ameliorate space problems at individual libraries; and the sharing of nonprint materials, media production facilities, and AV specialists.

Recommended as means of achieving the desirable goal of substantially upgrading reference resources and services: creation of regional information clearinghouses, development of a toll-free telephone network linking Nebraska's post-secondary institutions, disseminating information about library instruction programs, and developing services to support community independent study programs. Also urged: "equal access to quality educational opportunities" for library personnel on a statewide basis.

Summing up, PLDN stressed the need for "coordination with other state, regional, and national groups or networks." But the group seemed to be more interested in services offered by recently established cooperatives serving a number of states than in strengthening ties with other types of libraries in Nebraska. PLDN cited interlibrary loan as the only "mutually beneficial cooperative activity" between academic and public libraries now going on in Nebraska. And it noted that the Nebraska Library Commission has "established six regional multitype library networks, which are possible structures for establishing cooperative library activities in the state."

But PLDN then pointed to the desirability of having Nebraska libraries (presumably academic) "join with a larger, regional network which, by cost-sharing, would be in a position to have larger funding and which, therefore, could accomplish more" than a network of Nebraska libraries alone. And PLDN said that it sees as its three "immediate options": Denver's Bibliographic Center for Research, the Midwest Library Network (MIDLNET), and the Western Interstate Library Coordinating Organization (WILCO).

Noting the difference between PLDN's almost solely academic library approach and the trend in other parts of the country towards multitype regional library structure, LJ asked Library Commission Director Kopischke for a comment. He said that there is widespread support in both library and legislative circles for the multitype approach, but that the Commission had helped sponsor the publication of the Plan as a progressive step toward the development of statewide library cooperation. The Plan, said Kopischke, at present is somewhat arbitrary; what is needed is strong leadership. He sized up as some of the problems to be faced: the lack of relationship between the academic library community and other libraries, or with the old, still manually maintained Nebraska Union Catalog.

OCLC governance study: new role for out-of-staters?

The Council on Library Resources has put up $122,000 for a study aimed at determining whether or not Ohio College Library Center (OCLC) members from out of state should have a role in the governance of OCLC. At present, only libraries in Ohio can participate actively in the governance of OCLC because of OCLC's existing corporate charter; member libraries from out of state cannot vote. But in 1975, OCLC's Ohio membership passed a resolution directing the OCLC board to investigate broadening membership privileges for out-of-state members.

An Advisory Council, named by OCLC after the Ohio membership demanded that OCLC governance be reviewed, has picked the consultant firm of A. D. Little to do the study.

1st MARC record transmitted computer-to-computer by LC

Michael Malinconico of New York Public Library's Systems Analysis and Data Processing Office calls attention to a breakthrough: in mid-January a MARC record was transmitted successfully for the first time directly from LC's data base to the Research Libraries Group network at NYPL.

Said Malinconico, "This represents the successful completion of the first step in an 18-month pilot project intended to test the value of linking the LC computer facility and another serving a consortium. Although MARC records are regularly transmitted from a computer facility to terminals in a format for display, no one has previously used a telecommunication facility to transmit a MARC record in the communication format. Nor has one computer previously caused a second remove computer to initiate programs stored within it, retrieve a MARC record, and pass it back to the first computer for processing."

Malinconico noted that "this can be considered to be the first step toward establishing a national library network of interconnected bibliographic utilities. This pilot project initiated by

We're branching out

In just two years, Faxon has added six full-time regional sales managers to add yet another dimension to Faxon's personalized service.

East:
Roy J. Reinalda
18 Bobwhite Ct.
Forked River,
NJ 08731
Tel. 609-693-8524

Southeast:
James L. Smith
Nat'l. Sales Mgr.
P.O. Box 1000
Marietta, GA 30061
Tel. 404-971-1323

Midwest:
David R. Fritsch
P.O. Box 338
Saline, MI 48176
Tel. 313-995-0108

Southwest:
James R. Bohrer
12633 Memorial Dr.
Apt. 222
Houston, TX 77043
Tel. 713-461-4323

New England:
Douglas N. Fernald
15 Southwest Pk.
Westwood, MA 02090
Tel. 617-329-3350

West:
John C. Van Dyke
1351 Rhoda Dr.
LaJolla, CA 92037
Tel. 714-454-4946

Contact the representative in your area today to learn how Faxon's fast, personalized service can apply to your library.

F.W. FAXON COMPANY, INC.
Library Magazine Subscription Agency
15 Southwest Park, Westwood, MA 02090
Tel 800-225-7894 (toll-free)
617-329-3350 (collect in Mass. and Canada only)

WE HAVE THE OTHER HALF OF YOUR VIDEO SYSTEM.
Top-flight video, is more than cameras, monitors, and VTR's. To get the best results with the least effort, you need the right accessories, supplies and sundries. The proper connectors, adapters and cables. Test and lighting equipment. Graphic aids. Tools. Cleaning and maintenance supplies. Videotape. Plus lamps, microphones and dozens of other items. In short, all the things you get here under one roof, by dialing our toll-free number. Call now for our free 64-page catalog.
Comprehensive
VIDEO SUPPLY CORPORATION
Northvale, New Jersey 07647 201-767-7990
CALL TOLL FREE: 800-526-0242 except in N.J. and metro N.Y.
COMPREHENSIVE VIDEO SUPPLY and ACCESSORY CATALOG

YOU WILL HAVE—
"CONFIDENCE"
In Our Complete Periodicals Service—
All American and Foreign Titles

Promptness is a Traditional part of McGregor Service . . . as well as:

- EXPERIENCE
- TRAINED PERSONNEL
- FINANCIAL STABILITY
- AMPLE FACILITIES
- RESPONSIBLE MANAGEMENT

An attractive brochure is available for the asking.

SUBSCRIBE TO McGREGOR PERIODICALS BULLETIN

OUR 44th YEAR

McGREGOR Magazine Agency

MOUNT MORRIS, ILLINOIS 61054

G.E., Sylvania & Norelco

PROJECTOR LAMPS

Please don't give us lamp orders at list price. We'd rather give you

35% TO 45% OFF

Compare Sitler's Prices With What You Have Been Paying:

LAMP NO	LIST PRICE	6 to 23 (35% OFF)	24 & Up (45% OFF)
CWA	[illegible]	8.78	7.42
DCF	11.35	7.38	6.24
DFK	9.90	6.44	5.44
DYC	14.10	9.17	7.75
ELH	14.85	9.65	8.17
EMM	14.85	9.65	8.17
FCR	11.05	7.18	6.08
FCS	7.85	5.10	4.32
1240	4.30	2.80	2.36

You may assort for best price. Many other numbers in stock. Transportation paid on $100.00 or more net orders. Minimum order, $25.00. Satisfaction guaranteed. ORDER TODAY, OR WRITE FOR OUR COMPLETE PRICE SHEET.

Sitler's SUPPLIES, INC.

P.O. Box 10-X
702 E. Washington St.
Washington, Iowa 52353
Phone 319-653-2123

LC and RLG is intended to test the efficacy of LC distribution of single MARC records on demand via telecommunication facilities to users, rather than distributing an entire week's output of MARC records on magnetic tape. The implications are that a consortium would need to receive and store only those MARC records for titles which its members actually hold. A member of a consortium unable to locate a MARC record in his data base could then redirect his request to LC."

Online interlibrary loan

The Ohio College Library Center (OCLC) is launching a pilot online interloan service; selected libraries around the U.S. will use their OCLC terminals for all their loan business. Participating libraries can get locations for monographs or serials on the terminal, and once keyed, their request will automatically be sent to the terminal of a designated library—one picked by the sender or selected by the OCLC system.

NEW TECHNOLOGY

More libraries switch to COM catalogs

Only a few years ago, LJ reported that one library system had to get a van to deliver its printed book catalog. Now an increasing number of libraries—California's Black Gold Library System, Minnesota's Arrowhead Library System, and the Enoch Pratt Free Library among the latest—are switching to COM (Computer-Output Microfilm) catalogs. The new trend towards initially expensive—but in the long run cost-effective—microform catalogs could signal the approaching extinction of the bulky, hardcopy book catalogs—which only recently replaced the card catalog in many institutions.

• Houston & COM: The Houston Public Library will install a COM (Computer-Output-Microfilm) catalog in four new branches as a step toward the eventual conversion of its entire catalog to COM. Library Interface Systems, Inc. (Minnetonka, Minnesota) will produce the software; Information Design (Menlo Park, California) will provide the hardware. Jay Clark and Ann Adams of HPL are in charge of the COM project.

• Black Gold goes COM: The Black Gold Library System, with seven member libraries serving three central California counties, plans to replace its printed hardcopy catalog with a COM catalog. Brodart will produce the catalog, which will be displayed on Information Design's ROM 3 COM terminals. Dixie Adeniran of the Ventura County Library Services Agency is in charge of the COM project.

• COM for Enoch Pratt: The Enoch Pratt Free Library is putting its entire catalog on microfilm; Auto-Graphics, Inc. (Monterey Park, California) will supply Pratt with 210 Auto-Graphics LCR 1100 microfilm readers, film, and processing services.

• COM for Arrowhead: Minnesota's Arrowhead Library System, a consortium of 28 libraries in the Duluth area, is converting its card catalog to a COM Union Catalog for display on Information Design ROM 3 terminals. Library Interface Systems, Inc. will produce the catalog.

• Smithsonian serials on COM; Washington's Smithsonian Institution has installed Information Design ROM 3 COM terminals for a COM serials list and in-process file.

• Hardcopy out in Hildalgo: The Hildalgo County Library System of McAllen, Texas will replace its hardcopy book catalog with a COM catalog. Science Press will manage the bibliographic data base and produce film for display on Information Display hardware.

• COM in Austin: The Austin Public Library (Texas) will convert its existing book catalog to a COM catalog; the city's computer center, which had published the automated hardcopy catalog, will produce COM film for display on Information Design ROM 3 terminals. Austin is reportedly the first public library in Texas to use the contemporary form of roll-film COM catalog.

• Kansas goes COM: Work is underway on the preparation of a COM Union List for the state of Kansas; it will include the holdings of the State Library and its affiliate library systems. Library Interface Systems, Inc. will create the data base for the Union List, which will be displayed on Information Design's ROM 3 COM terminals. State Librarian Ernestine Gilliland is in charge of the project.

• COM for Department of Consumer Affairs: The U.S. Department of Consumer Affairs will put its bibliographic resources on COM; it will use Information Design ROM 3 hardware. Jeane Moody is director of the project at DCA.

• MICROCAT in Maryland: The Maryland State Library has instituted a holdings list on COM for the state's major libraries, including Enoch Pratt, Prince George's County, Baltimore County, Montgomery County, Anne Arundel County, the University of Maryland, Towson State University, and Essex Community College. The Project, called MICROCAT, required the processing of over one million titles; but duplicate holdings were consolidated by computer programming (rather than manual editing), and this de-duplication process reduced the number of entries to 800,000. AutoGraphics of Monterey Park, California provided film for MICROCAT and LCR 1100 readers to all Maryland public libraries, participating academic libraries, and other academic libraries in the Interlibrary Network of Baltimore County.

Computerized circulation eyed in Illinois

The newsletter of the Illinois Regional Library Council reports on a proposed University of Illinois Library Sharing Project that is seen as a step toward the development of a statewide circulation system; the project was proposed by Hugh Atkinson, who is now library director at the University of Illinois, Urbana.

Says the IRLC newsletter, "The project will permit the library to convert its shelf list to machine-readable format in order to implement a computerized circulation system (a la Ohio State University) [Atkinson's last post]. This represents the first step in the development of a statewide circulation system. The system will tie in directly with the interlibrary loan network (ILLINET) and can incorporate any academic library seeking membership. . . . Budget for the project is $450,000."

"Home brew" saves $$ in Georgia

The Macon/Bibb County Public Library (Georgia), reports Director Charles J. Schmidt, recently completed its in-house automation program with the coming on stream of an automated, light-pen type circulation system for the main library and four branches. Macon/Bibb uses a "home brew combination of IBM and NCR firmware along with Monarch bar code labels and wand readers."

And Macon-Bibb's automated system costs a lot less than most custom-built or even off-the-shelf jobs: it took something like $18,000 to get into action, as opposed to a possible $200,000 needed to buy into established systems, says Schmidt. The county library modeled its approach on a system developed for the Oklahoma City Library. Macon was able to take advantage of high-powered LEAA (Law Enforcement Assistance Administration) computers already in place.

PERSONNEL ISSUES

Broad gauge D.C. conference to eye new "info managers"

Librarians, information specialists, data processors, and corporate or government executives are among the professionals urged to take in the first National Information Conference and Exposition, slated for April 18-21 at Washington, D.C.'s Shoreham Americana Hotel. The meet, which is announced as a public service of the Information Industry Association, has as its theme The Emerging Information Manager: Bridging the Gap. There will be seminars on management and on career advancement, "hot topic" workshops, and an exhibit of new products.

For $150 you get in on a three-day Management Seminar (Herbert Brinberg of American Can Company is the chairperson) which addresses such topics as information budgeting and audits, new developments in technology, comparative management approaches, career clinic workshops, and "getting off the ground."

For $75 ($45 without meals) you can attend both seminars in Career Advancement and "hot topic" Information Workshops. The half-day Career Advancement Seminars (Paul Zurkowski of the Information Industry Association is the chairperson) touch on such topics as on-demand information brokers, overcoming career roadblocks for information personnel, education for information literacy, and information management programs of professional and trade associations. The Information Workshops (Paul Owen of Predicasts, Inc. is chairperson) deal with seven "hot topics." Among them: government energy and environment information policies, copyright, microforms, and the legal implications of the new online systems.

Special group rates are available. To register, contact N.I.C.E. Headquarters, Suite 904, 4720 Montgomery La., Bethesda, Md. 20014. For information, call Helena Strauch at (301) 654-4150.

500 LIBRARIES CAN'T BE WRONG!

Discover why over five hundred libraries of every size and type subscribe to weekly MARCFICHE. Call toll-free

800-821-2270 Ext. 318

MARCFICHE is the inexpensive source of cataloging data. Samples or complete sets are immediately available for free trial.

MARC APPLIED RESEARCH COMPANY
Post Office Box 40035, Washington, D.C. 20016

Miss. graduate students have library advisors

Asserting that universities must assume a "proactive stance" in dealing with the new problems of bibliographic access, Calvin J. Boyer, director of libraries at the University of Mississippi, writes to describe one step in this direction. "UM's new graduate student outreach reference library service," he says, is "based on the premise that students too often fail to utilize what is available. . . . as the collection grows larger, access becomes more complex."

At UM, each new graduate student is assigned a permanent library advisor to act as guide, teacher, and counselor. The primary emphasis is on information search strategies: the librarian and the student work together in planning searches and reviewing the results. The program starts out with an orientation period, then focuses on information needs generated by class assignments, and culminates in work required for the graduate student's major research project. Both traditional and nontraditional search techniques are taught in the process.

The model for the new approach, says Boyer, "is the extended client-practitioner relationship found in other professions: law and medicine, for example. Through increased mutual awareness, the student more readily seeks the counsel of the librarian and the librarian better understands the student, the student's background, and his information needs throughout the graduate program."

Texas & N.M. associations slate joint conference

The Texas Library Association and the New Mexico Library Association will hold a joint annual conference in El Paso on April 13-16. One feature will be a Tribute to Southwestern Culture, with Lawrence Clark Powell as guest speaker at a luncheon honoring Carl Hertzog, Tom Lea, José Cisneros, and Peter Hurd. It will be held April 14 at the El Paso Civic Center. And Powell will be on hand Thursday afternoon at the booth of Northland Press to autograph copies of his book, From the Heartland.

Also slated: Richard Bradford, author of Red Sky at Morning and So Far from Heaven, two YA novels dealing with life in New Mexico, will talk to the Young Adult Roundtable on Friday at 1:45.

And special librarians, including members of the Rio Grande Chapter of the Special Libraries Association and the Special Libraries Division of both TLA and NMLA will meet April 15, 3:00 P.M. at the El Paso Natural Gas Company Auditorium, where Harry Gevertz will talk on The Energy Riddle—Scare or Scarce?

More information on the conference is available from Margaret Mathis, TLA Publicity Chairperson, 501 N. Oregon, El Paso, Tex. 79901. Her office phone number: (915) 543-3812.

Role of children's services topic of ALA preconference

Both library system directors and coordinators of children's services are urged to take in the June 16 ALA-preconference workshop, The Changing Role of Children's Work in Public Libraries—Issues and Answers. The workshop, which is to be held at the Detroit Public Library, will "identify factors that impede strong library service to children in public libraries"; the conclusions reached are to be published after the preconference in a "Recommendation to the Profession." ALA President Clara Jones is in charge of the workshop.

Jones urges attendance by library administrators and program coordinators; some library school faculty and

Ethnic American Minorities

A GUIDE TO MEDIA AND MATERIALS

Compiled and edited by Dr. Harry A. Johnson, Director, Learning Resources Center & Chairman, Department of Educational Media, Virginia State College

If you teach or serve minority students of any age or educational level—this finely-honed media selection tool and pedagogical guide is a must.

Dr. Johnson, the author of the highly-acclaimed Multimedia Materials for Afro-American Studies (Bowker, 1971), lists and annotates hundreds of the best non-print materials of all kinds and arranges them in separate minority sections. Each listing is prefaced by a wide-ranging, often controversial, always probing position paper on methodology and goals—Johnson on Black Americans...Minako K. Maykovich on Asian Americans...Lourdes Miranda King on Spanish speaking Americans... S. Gabe Paxton, Jr. on Native American Indians.

A separate section lists materials on Jews, Eskimos, Migrants, and other groups. Includes a current directory of all publishers represented.

ISBN 0-8352-0766-8. LC 76-25038. CIP. November, 1976. 304 pages. $15.95.

Order from: R. R. Bowker Order Dept., P.O. Box 1807, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106. Outside Western Hemisphere: Bowker, Erasmus House, Epping, Essex, England.

All orders plus shipping and handling. Sales tax added where applicable
(Price is subject to change and slightly higher outside the U.S. and its territories)

BOWKER
NEW YORK & LONDON

trustees will also be asked to attend. All attendance to this all-day affair will be by invitation only. Anyone who wants to participate should contact Mary Ploshnick, Coordinator of Children's Services, Detroit Public Library, 5201 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich. 48202.

SLA changes conference site from Atlanta to Kansas City

The Special Libraries Association's Board of Directors has decided to switch the site of the SLA June 11-15, 1978 Conference from Atlanta to Kansas City. The reason for the change, says, SLA, "was the commitments made by the Convention Bureau and one hotel to another organization without so advising SLA . . . with the result that SLA members would have had an unsatisfactory dispersal of meeting rooms, sleeping room, and exhibit space." SLA stressed that "the need to move the 1978 Conference site in no way reflects adversely on either Atlanta or on the SLA's South Atlantic Chapter." SLA plans to schedule its 1981 Conference in Atlanta; it will be SLA's first in a Southeastern city.

The Kansas City Conference Program Chairman will be Robert B. Lane, director, Air University Library, Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala. 36712. Inquiries about exhibits should go to: John S. Rock, Conference and Exhibits Coordinator, Special Libraries Association, 235 Park Ave. S., New York, N.Y. 10003.

ULC membership zooms

The Urban Libraries Council reports that since it initiated a new (cheaper) dues structure, ULC membership (of public libraries serving populations over 100,000) has "skyrocketed," with 22 libraries signing up as 1976 ended, and another 12 committing themselves to ULC at the start of the new year. The 47 current members, notes ULC, represent "almost one-third of the 155 potentially eligible libraries. . . . These 155 large urban public libraries would represent in excess of 50 million citizens, or ca. 25 percent of the entire U.S. population. This sleeping giant is coming to—we can use his might for the benefit of all."

Rare books preconference

The 1977 annual Rare Books and Manuscripts Preconference, sponsored by ALA's Association of College and Research Libraries (ACRL) will be held June 14-17 at the Park Plaza Hotel in Toronto—not in Detroit, site of ALA's annual meet. The preconference has as its theme 19th-Century book selling and buying in the British and American book trades, with scheduled speakers including Simon Nowell-Smith, Stuart Schimmel, Robert Nikirk, Terry Belanger, Douglas Lochhead, Franklin Gilliam, Judith St. John, and Robert Stacey. Richard Landon of the University of Toronto Libraries is preconference program chairman. More program information is available from ACRL Executive Secretary, 50 E. Huron St., Chicago, Ill. 60611.

ASIS community info group

The American Society for Information Science reports the creation of a new Special Interest Group on Community Information (SIG/CIS). The ASIS Council gave the new SIG its blessing in October, at which time CIS put on its first technical session, with speakers from organizations concerned with the aging, the Alliance of Information and Referral Service, and Georgia's TIE-LINE. The CIS chairperson is H.J.A. Goodman, Associate Professor of Education at Calgary, Canada. Technical sessions are planned for the mid-year ASIS meeting in May 1977; the group is also putting out a newsletter.

Recruiting booksale volunteers

The Free Library of Philadelphia Friends group has come up with a very simple but highly effective way to get people to volunteer for the annual booksale—as donors and/or workers. It's a postcard which asks the library patron to check off his willingness to work on one of six specific tasks. Among the jobs listed: "sort books; assist in picking up books; donate books; move books with my car; solicit book donations; and assist media promotion staff." There's room on the card for one's name, address, phone number, and comments.

PEOPLE

GEORGE S. BOBINSKI, Dean and Professor at the School of Information and Library Studies, State University of New York at Buffalo, has been appointed Acting Director of Libraries and Chairperson of the Search Committee for Director of Libraries at SUNY Buffalo.

LESLIE BURK, formerly Cable TV Coordinator at the Ocean County Library, New Jersey, is now Coordinator of Children's Services at the Phillipsburg Free Public Library and Area Reference Center, New Jersey.

MICHAEL G. GARRISON, formerly Public Services Coordinator of the Tempe Public Library, Arizona, is now Head Librarian, Quincy Public Library, Illinois.

BENJAMIN C. GLIDDEN, formerly Assistant Director for Technical Services, U.S. Air Force Academy Library, Colorado, is now Director of Academy Libraries.

DEAN C. GROSS, formerly Director of the Citizens Library, Washington, Pennsylvania, is now Director, Norfolk Public Library, Virginia.

KENNETH F. KISTER, formerly at the West Palm Beach Public Library, Florida, has resigned to devote his full time to a new edition of his Encyclopedia Buying Guide, and two other book projects, a consumer guide to general English-language dictionaries and a guide to specialized encyclopedias and dictionaries, both to be published by the R. R. Bowker Company, New York.

JUDY KLAPPROTH, formerly Assistant Librarian, Redwood City Public Library, California, is now Librarian, Eureka-Humboldt Library, Eureka, Calif.

LAWRENCE E. LEONARD, formerly Chief of the Catalog Department, Stanford University Libraries, California, is now Library Services Program Officer, Region IX, U.S. Office of Education, San Francisco.

SAMUEL S. MCCONOUGHEY, Dean of Professional Librarians on the staff of the Toledo-Lucas County Public Library, Toledo, Ohio, has retired after 39 years of service.

JANE MCGRAW, formerly Adult Services Librarian, East Detroit Memorial Library, Michigan, has been appointed Director.

RONALD F. MILLER, formerly Director of the New England Library Information Network (NELINET), has been appointed the first Executive Director of the newly formed California Library Authority for Systems and Services (CLASS), San Jose.

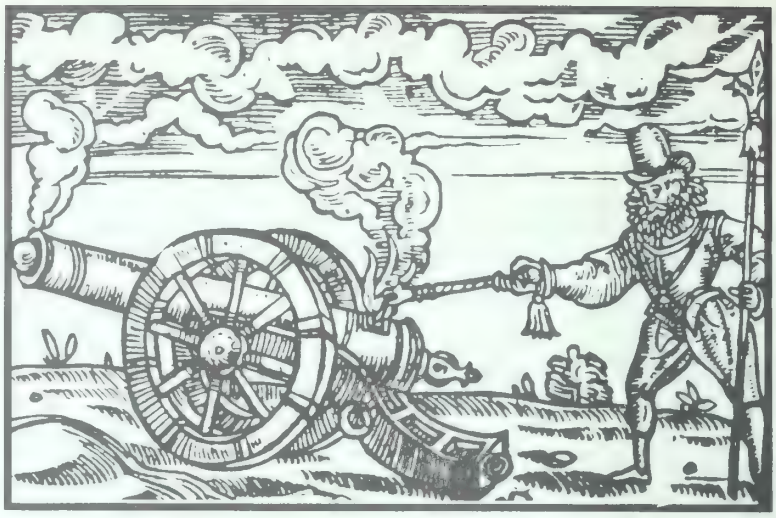
JIM MINGES, formerly Public Library Consultant, South Dakota State Library, is now Network Coordinator, Northwest Regional Library Development Association, St. Joseph, Mo.

CHARLES F. MOORE, formerly Director, Avon Public Library, Massachusetts, is now Director, Woonsocket Harris Public Library, R.I.

MICHAEL MURPHY, formerly Assistant Librarian, Serials Department, State University of New York at Stony Brook, is now Periodicals Librarian, Case Western Reserve University Libraries, Cleveland.

PEGGY A. SULLIVAN, currently Dean of Students, Graduate Library School, University of Chicago, will become Assistant Chief Librarian for Branches and Regional Libraries, Chicago Public Library on April 1.

For The First Time ...THE THOMASON TRACTS



University Microfilms, in cooperation with the British Library, offers you the complete collection on 35mm microfilm.

This unique, comprehensive collection includes virtually all the books, pamphlets, newspapers and monographs circulating in London during 1640-1661—the period of the English Civil War.

The Thomason Tracts collection includes more than 22,000 publications—all primary source material—providing contemporary historians and political scientists with eyewitness accounts of such events as the Love Plot, the political victory of Oliver Cromwell, the restoration of the Monarchy and the coronation of Charles II.

The Thomason Tracts will be published on microfilm in eight subscription units over the next several years, with units one and two to be released March 31. The purchase of units one and two at $1,150 each enters your standing order and entitles you to a 15% discount off the regular price of subsequent units.*

With your order you also receive—at no additional cost—the Catalogue of the Pamphlets, Books, Newspapers and Manuscripts... compiled by G.K. Fortescue. Don't delay! Order this important collection, and save on standing orders, too.

*Prices outside the U.S. and Canada are slightly higher. All prices subject to change without notice. Outside North and South America please inquire of University Microfilms International, 18 Bedford Row, London WC1R 4EJ, England.

Microform Collections

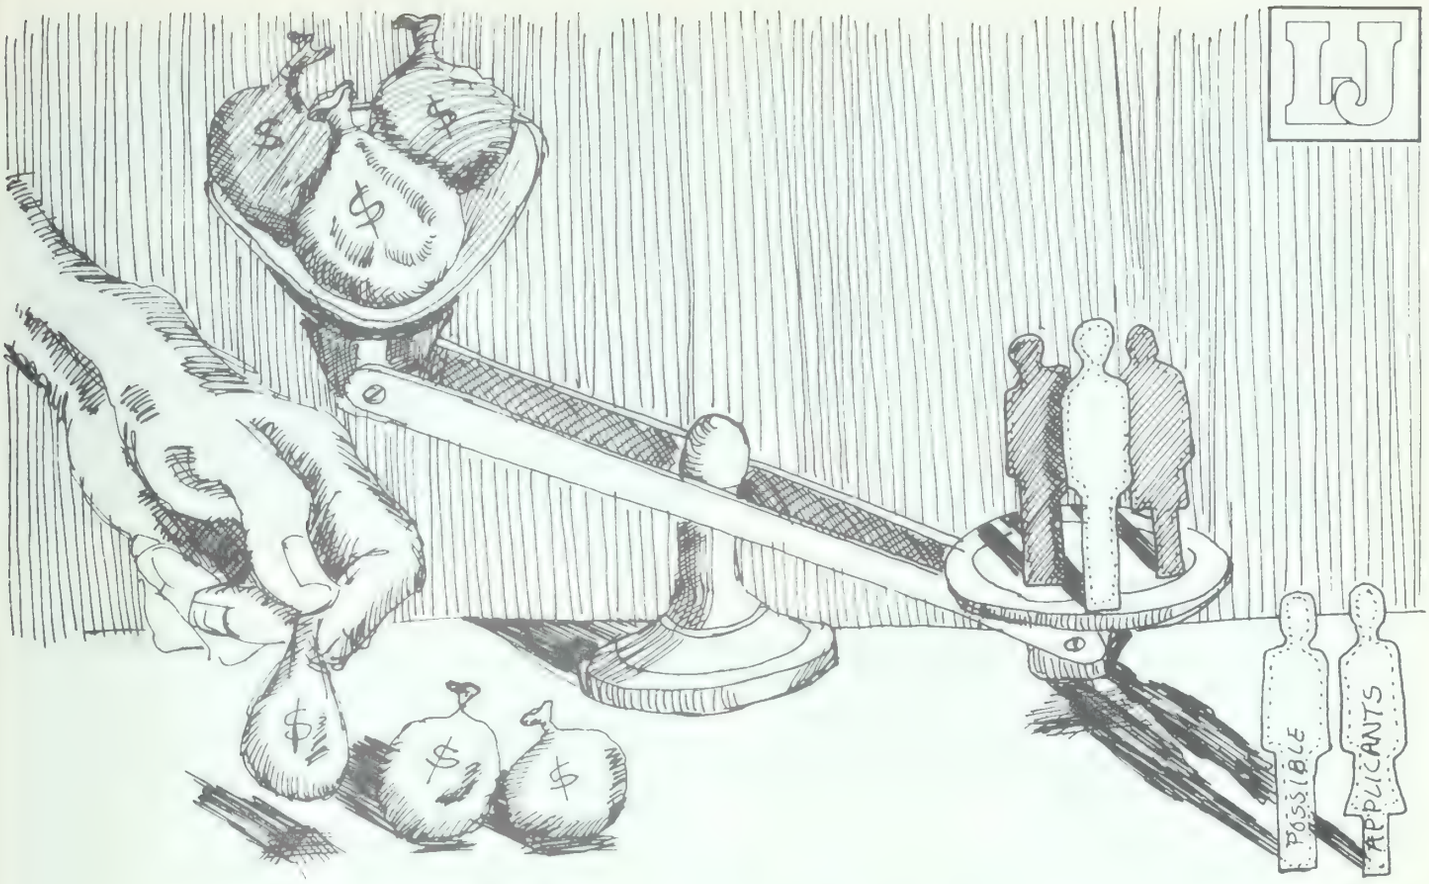
ORDER NOW!

☐ Yes! Please enter our order for the Thomason Tracts and send the Fortescue Catalogue at no additional cost with units one and two.
☐ Please send additional information.

Name _____
Title _____
Institution _____
Street _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
Purchase Order Number _____ Tax Exempt Number _____

Mail to:
University Microfilms International
Microform Collections
300 North Zeeb Road
Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106

LJ-3



THE HIGH COST OF HIRING

By Rea Christofferson

WHAT IS INVOLVED in hiring a professional librarian in a large state-supported academic library today? How much does it cost? How long does it take? What steps are involved?

At the University of Georgia Libraries we recently did an informal study to try to answer these questions so that we could make a realistic hiring timetable and checklist of procedures for our own internal use. The results were startling. We found:

• It costs some $1750 to advertise, interview for, and do the paperwork necessary to fill a faculty vacancy, and even after going to this expense, a suitable applicant may not be found.

• If we follow all federal, state and university system regulations to the letter, the hiring procedure takes at least six months between drawing up the job description and the appointee's first day at work.

• The hiring procedure requires some 26 different steps involving dozens of library, university and state employees, ranging from clerks to top administrators.

While some of our procedures are no doubt peculiar to the Georgia University System, talks with administrators in other academic libraries indicate that they share many of our problems.

According to those who have been in the personnel field for some time, hiring used to be a relatively

Rea Christofferson is Assistant to the Director at the University of Georgia Libraries, Athens short and simple process. The six basic steps in filling an academic vacancy were: advertising the vacancy; receiving and sorting applications; interviewing; selecting; obtaining approval of the appointment; and notifying unsuccessful candidates of the decision. In recent years, however, laws designed to combat discrimination in hiring have combined with tighter fiscal controls to produce hundreds of regulations which turn faculty hiring into a long, rigid, and expensive procedure. One personnel official at the University of Georgia summed up this change by saying: "Personnel work used to be like practicing public relations—now it's more like being a lawyer."

The 26 steps required for making a faculty appointment at the University of Georgia are:

Donald Petty, executive assistant to the director of libraries, reviews changes in staffing patterns

1. Write a job description

Every faculty appointment must now begin with a detailed job description which includes the duties of the position, the skills required, and any special training or experience an applicant must have. A great deal of care must be taken in preparing this description as it is the yardstick against which the "most qualified" applicants will be measured.

Although rigid job descriptions are meant to combat discriminatory hiring practices, the problems they can create are readily apparent. They tend to increase the importance of good "paper qualifications" at the expense of superior, but less orthodox, qualifications. They also make it difficult to alter an appointee's duties once the job has begun.

2. Write job advertisements

A good job advertisement must detail the job requirements (responsibilities and activities of the job, the date the job begins); applicant requirements (education, experience, intangibles such as discretion or type of personality, and required skills, such as typing); remuneration and benefits (salary range per annum, fringe benefits); the application procedure (closing date for submitting applications, address to which applications must be sent, what constitutes an acceptable application—resume, references, etc.); a protective statement saying the job will be filled only if a suitable applicant is found; and finally, the Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer statement. If an employer omits any of this information, he risks a reprimand from the campus EEO officer or a complaint from a disgruntled applicant.

Barbara Stephens, personnel assistant, sorts through faculty appointment forms at University of Georgia

3. Advertise the job nationally, making special efforts to reach minorities and females

Our EEO officer has advised us that all faculty positions should be advertised in at least one national medium, and that all responses should be handled very carefully. We recently advertised for six experienced public service librarians; we received 117 applications. This alone slowed up the hiring process considerably.

For professional openings we try to place one ad in a national medium such as Library Journal or The Chronicle of Higher Education; one in a medium such as The Affirmative Action Register, aimed primarily at minority and women applicants; and one in Interface, the UGA Libraries monthly newsletter which goes out to all members of the Association of Research Libraries. For certain openings, we go to even greater lengths, such as recruiting at ALA conventions and contacting minority educational institutions.

The lead time between submitting an advertisement and its date of publication varies from ten to 45 days, and the costs of one insertion range from $20 to $85 on the average. After an ad appears, another 21 days must be allowed for the receipt of applications to show that the advertisement was indeed a good faith attempt to solicit qualified applicants. By this time, some ten weeks have passed since the job description was written.

4. Notify the campus Equal Employment Opportunity Office of the job opening

Most campuses under Affirmative Action plans have EEO officers to monitor hiring procedures. For this system to be effective, the EEO officer must be routinely notified of all new job openings. This notification must include the title of the position, the job description, the screening criteria used in the selection process, the advertisement(s) and where and when they appeared, and the membership of the screening committee.

5. If there is a problem in locating minority or female applicants, members of the Georgia University System must request a list of possible applicants from the Applicant Clearinghouse

The Applicant Clearinghouse is a centralized data bank of applicants garnered from short-lists of academic positions filled in the university system during recent months. These names may be pulled by academic discipline and candidates are identified by race and sex.

6. Post the vacancy internally

Internal posting is accomplished by putting a copy of the advertisement on the bulletin boards in the staff rooms of each branch library on campus and by running the ad in Interface which goes out to all staff members. By the time this step is complete, the job has been open for nearly two months.

7. Receive, sort, and evaluate applications from all sources

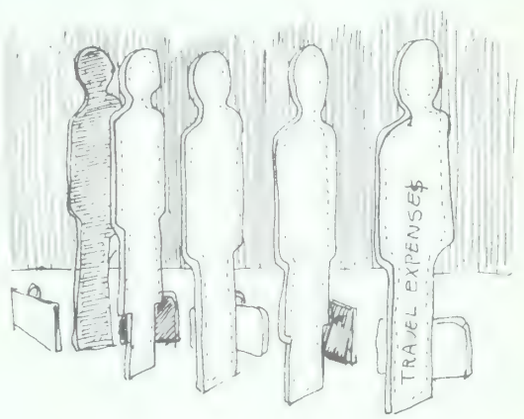
Advertisements, the Applicants' Clearinghouse, internal postings, and other sources all may yield applications for the advertised position. Each application must be carefully considered before an interview list is drawn up. The broader the applicant pool, the more difficult it is to select an interview list. Our tendency has been to interview more candidates than required so that we would not miss out on good candidates who just didn't happen to look good on paper.

8. If any applicant on the interview list works for the university system, the director of libraries must write to the President of the university, who in turn must contact the Chancellor for permission to interview that candidate

This step is not an Affirmative Action requirement. Rather, it probably began as a simple courtesy among state system administrators so that they would not be taken by surprise when an employee took a job elsewhere in the system. Now, however, it has become an elaborate procedure which generates up to eight memos and occupies the time and office staff of the top administrators in the system.

9. Invite the best qualified applicants to interview

This is the single most expensive step in the entire procedure, costing some $875 in travel expenses, lodging expenses and staff time. A typical interview schedule lasts from 9 A.M. until 3 P.M. or later. During this time the applicant meets with a large cross-section of the libraries' staff including the director, his executive assistant and assistant, each assistant director, and the relevant department head(s) and their staffs. This large selection team insures that no individual's prejudices will dominate the hiring process.



10. Create a statistical sheet for each opening to record information such as race and sex of each member of the applicant pool

This information must be kept on file to answer any potential discrimination complaints. It is illegal, however, to ask for this information on the application form. To do so, implies that it plays a part in the hiring decision; therefore, it must be recorded separately.

11. Make a decision from among the applicants, creating a "short list" showing first, second, and third choices from among all the candidates who applied

Creating a short list is far more exacting than it used to be. It is no longer sufficient to justify the candidates selected for the list; one must also record the reasons for rejecting the other candidates in case the decision is ever challenged.

12. Notify the successful candidate of the decision in writing and enclose all of the forms the candidate must fill out

In Georgia there are several forms a candidate must fill out if his/her appointment is to be approved. These include such exotica as a security questionnaire/loyalty oath, which must be notarized and which, therefore, takes longer to complete than ordinary paperwork. We try to allow ten days for this step, but it can take longer, particularly if materials are held up in the mails or if the number one candidate turns the job down.

13. After a candidate has accepted the position, request a degree certification from his/her university

This certification is necessary to obtain the Board of Regent's approval of the appointment. It can take two weeks or more to get the certification back, and Interviewing: left, Warren N. Boes, director of libraries, and, right, John Edens, assistant director for processing the process must often be prodded along by means of long distance telephone calls.

14. Generate internal university forms necessary to have appointment approved

This series of multi-part forms includes a budget amendment, personnel report, and a two-page appointment cover sheet. Most of this information is transferred directly from the official application form by a personnel assistant.

15. Prepare a Dean's Monitoring Statement

This is a memorandum signed by the dean or director responsible for the appointment (director of libraries in our case). It states the size of the applicant pool, the composition of the pool by race and sex, describing affirmative action efforts made to reach applicants from under-utilized groups, and stating why the appointee is best qualified for the job. This statement fixes the responsibility for actions surrounding the appointment at the dean or director level.

16. The director of libraries writes a letter to the vice president for instruction, recommending the candidate's appointment and enclosing supporting documentation

This documentation includes the Dean's Monitoring Statement, a copy of all applications from the short list, the Affirmative Action Checklist detailing the composition of the applicant pool by race and sex, the Degree Certification, a Patent Agreement, the notarized Security Questionnaire/Loyalty Oath, the Budget Amendment, the Personnel Report, and the two-part Appointment Cover Sheet. Ideally, copies of all these forms should be kept in an Appointment File, and additional copies should go into the candidate's Personnel File after he/she begins work. By the time this paperwork has been completed and submitted for approval, an average of four and one-half months has elapsed.

17. The vice president for instruction approves the appointment and passes the paperwork on to the university's Faculty Records Office

We try to allow five days for this step so if any paperwork is missing or incomplete, the vice president will have time to kick it back to the libraries for correction.

18. The university's Faculty Records Office processes the paperwork and sends it on to the Board of Regents' Office

The official schedule allows seven days for this step.

19. The Regents' Office processes the application and places the appointment on the agenda of the next Board of Regents' meeting for approval

The average time allowed for this step is 16 days, but it can take up to one month if the paperwork reaches the Regents just after one of their monthly meetings.

20. The Libraries are notified in writing of the Board of Regents' approval

While approval used to be nearly automatic, it no longer is. The Board of Regents recently held up three key university appointments because of a dispute over the duties of one of the appointees. Even when approval is immediately forthcoming, it takes at least five days for written notices to get back to the libraries.

21. The Libraries notify the appointee of the Regents' approval

This is done in writing. Previously, an appointee could begin work pending the Regents' approval of his appointment. This is no longer allowed. If an appointment is temporary, the appointee must be warned that the job will have to be reopened if it becomes a permanent position.

22. Enter all unsuccessful candidates from the short-list into the Applicant Clearinghouse data bank

When each candidate applies, he is given a form to fill out asking him to give permission to submit his name to the Clearinghouse in the event that he is not selected to fill the position. Most candidates agree and their names, addresses, and other relevant data are transferred to elaborate, multipart coded input forms and entered into the data bank.

23. Update the appointment file

The appointment file which records all activities surrounding a given appointment, and duplicate copies of all relevant paperwork, is the libraries' chief source of defense material if the appointment is ever challenged. To be complete the file must also contain:

a) Copies of all employment ads; b) where and when each ad appeared; c) the total applicant pool for the position, including: names and addresses of all applicants; identification of each applicant by race and sex; an indication of which applicants were invited to apply for the position; candidates interviewed and why they were selected; short-list (serious) candidates and why they were selected; the candidate recommended for appointment and why that individual was the best qualified.

24. Write unsuccessful candidates and inform them of the libraries' decision

This step often cannot be completed until two months or longer after a candidate has been interviewed, because if the original appointee turns the job down at any point before starting work, all other applicants automatically become re-eligible for the position. Premature notification makes it difficult to reactivate their candidacy.

25. The appointee begins work

It is library policy to start faculty appointees on the first working day of a month. As the Regents usually meet in the middle of the month, some two weeks must elapse between the time of an appointee's approval and the day he/she begins work. This is some 180 days, or six months, after the original job description was written.

26. The appointment file must be kept for an additional five years

Several questions inevitably arise after reviewing this lengthy procedure: Is it worth it? Are our hiring practices more fair now than they were before? Are we really getting more qualified candidates than we were previously? According to UGA libraries' administrators, the answer to these questions is a qualified yes. John Edens, Assistant Director for Processing (whose career with the libraries reaches back into pre-Affirmative Action days) says: "We are getting better candidates. This is partly because of Affirmative Action procedures and partly because of the fact that hiring responsibility is being distributed among more library staff members. The assistant directors now see most of the applicants who apply for a position, and no individual can override the rules. The old practice of hiring the first or second applicant we saw just to get the process over with has completely stopped. Applicants and employers now have more time to make up their minds."

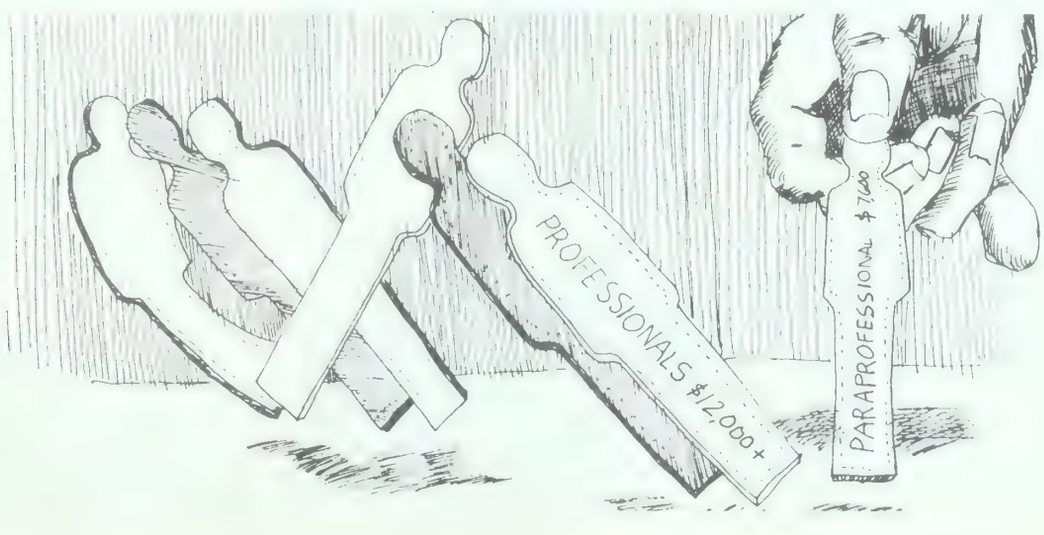
The other administrators also agree with the goals of the new hiring procedures. Nearly all of them want to do away with discriminatory hiring practices and to get the best value for their personnel dollars. Without exception, however, they find fault with the methods being used to achieve these ends, and everyone has a pet peeve or Affirmative Action "horror story" to relate.

The major complaints are: it takes too long to fill positions; the procedure costs too much, particularly now when budgets are so tight; the rules are too rigid; and there is too much paperwork.

According to Donald Petty, Executive Assistant to the Director of Libraries: "The job description has to be cast-iron. When we hire someone, we can't afford to make a mistake because there's no way to shift them to other duties if they don't work out in the job as it was advertised. This means in some cases that we can't take a chance on a black or a female when we would like to."

In economic terms, the new rules are often counter-productive. Instead of creating new employment opportunities for minority and female librarians, they have actually removed some existing opportunities by causing professional librarians to be replaced by paraprofessionals. Each time a faculty position becomes vacant, library administrators are faced with this dilemma: Shall we spend $1750 and six months of our time looking for a faculty librarian who will cost us $12,000 per year? Or shall we shift this position to our paraprofessional budget and fill it at almost no cost, in five days, with a person who has an advanced degree in some field outside of library science, but who will only cost us some $7600 per year?

As funds remain tight and academic libraries spend between half and two thirds of their budgets on personnel costs, it becomes more and more difficult to justify each faculty appointment.



IT ALL BOILED DOWN TO

LJ's report of the Midwinter Meeting of the American Library Association, January 30-February 5, 1977, Sheraton-Park and Shoreham Hotels, Washington, D.C.

IT WAS the largest Midwinter Meeting in ALA history, attended by some 3,855 members. It featured breakfast with Congress, a fine President's Program on telecommunications and libraries, legislative workshops, visits to Capitol Hill, notable books, Newbery-Caldecott awards, Register of Copyrights Barbara Ringer on the impact of the new copyright law, grantsmanship, preservation tours at LC, parties, receptions, and heavy traffic in the exhibits.

The subjects were ALA and library legislation, most of which was boiled down to money: how to get it, how to use it, how to save it, how to determine how much of it an organization or a library needs, how to convince a Congressman to vote for what you decide, and whether you should ask for money from users in return for library service!

It was a working and lobbying conference, but after the last sessions, usually at about 10:30 each night, the corridors and rooms of the Sheraton-Park-Shoreham complex were teeming with activity and revelers. There was even a rumor that the top management of one corporate group were seen at midnight one night heisting a piano through the halls to entertain their overworked librarian friends.

Federal legislation

From a grand reception at LC, to the joyous party at the D.C. Public Library where members of the ALA Black Caucus entertained members of the U.S. Congressional Black Caucus—from the early sessions of the Urban Libraries Council to the late nights of the Chiefs of State Library Agencies (COSLA)—and from the massive breakfast for librarians, trustees, and members of Congress at the Shoreham to the offices on Capitol Hill, the purpose of the 1977 Midwinter Meeting of ALA was federal legislation.

The Urban Libraries Council (ULC), proud and happy at recent gains in its membership, met early in the week in stuffy, crowded quarters in the Sheraton Park Hotel. Those present were told of ULC's gains, that its 70 member institutions now represent libraries serving some 38 million people, and have the potential of reaching all 153 eligible cities.

MONEY

ULC's members also heard Rodney Lane of Government Studies & Systems, Inc., Philadelphia, briefly describe the firm's recent study for ULC. "Improving State Aid for Libraries" should provide useful ammunition and tactics for public libraries and state agencies in the pursuit of improved state funding. The study's aim was to provide evidence that public library development is "an integral part of the states' mandate to provide public educational services . . ." and it was completed under a ULC commission, with a large assist from the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science (NCLIS). The study dovetails with NCLIS's own "Evaluation of the Effectiveness of Federal Funding of Public Libraries."

Title V, LSCA

It is apparent, despite ALA's support and the approval of nearly every constituency, that the drive of ULC to get the Library Services and Construction Act (LSCA) amended to include a Title V to provide federal aid to urban libraries is not going to be easy.

Detroit's Clara Jones reviewed objections to Title V with the ULC group, and many of the trustees and librarians present asked for specific information they could take to their senators and representatives in support of the amendment.

Nearly all those once openly opposed to Title V have been mollified and have said they'll support it. But in private conversation, and at the COSLA meeting at Midwinter, it became apparent to LJ that state library agency people still oppose Title V or, at best, place it at the bottom of their legislative priorities.

A COSLA resolution offered support for Title V only after all funding goals for all other titles of LSCA have been met. It wasn't the kind of argument that you'd expect to go over on Capitol Hill, or that you'd expect from these experienced government types. In private conversations with several state agency people after the session, the prospects for Title V were assessed as dim. A few state agency folks even admitted to lobbying against Title V in favor of better funding for LSCA's Title I.

Up the Hill

Nonetheless, ALA's legislative efforts at Midwinter have to be regarded as the success of the Conference.

The Congressional breakfast at the Shoreham drew thousands, and as the pictures accompanying this report attest, there was good Congressional representation. Following it, a packed Legislative Workshop heard Don White of the California State Department of Education describe the nitty-gritty realities of the lobbying process. After the first portion of his talk, a kind of elementary civics lesson, White went behind the scenes with words and slides to tell in specific detail how one works with an elected official, and how one influences one. White did not shy away from suggesting campaign contributions, nor did he pretend that all those letters and telegrams that go to Congress are actually read. (They are counted, and then machines send out individually typed replies with individual machine-made signatures.) White was particularly strong at advising the would-be lobbyists on how to establish a personal relationship with a senator or congressmember, and an honest assessment of the work and time it would take to achieve that goal.

Alice Ihrig and Eileen Cooke were their usual competent selves in discussions of "Growing Your Own Grass Roots" (Ihrig) and "Prospects for the New Congress and Upcoming Legislation" (Cooke).

The Conferees boarded buses to spend the afternoon seeking legislators on Capitol Hill. We went to their party and recap that night, and from those present, we were told that many had conferred with their senators and representatives. Most felt the sessions were successful and would achieve results in new funding.

Wedgeworth on federal aid

We were surprised when the executive director of ALA, Robert Wedgeworth, took the occasion of his "State of the Association" address to the ALA Council to develop a pointed review and relatively harsh critique of the past of federal library support, along with his thoughts on some new, and controversial, changes in the direction of librarianship's legislative aims.

Our first reaction was to wonder why he would go to such lengths to dampen the enthusiasm of legislative troops from all over the U.S. who had come to Midwinter to pursue specific legislation with their representatives on Capitol Hill. In later discussions, Wedgeworth told LJ that the speech was not directed at current legislation, but was, rather, the starting point in what he hoped would become a dialogue regarding long-term library legislative policy. Wedgeworth said he was trying to start fundamental rethinking of the profession's federal legislative aims so that when the promised White House Conference on Libraries is held, a legislative policy for the next several years can be developed, and more specific federal library legislation can be drafted.

Wedgeworth began with a series of questions about the purposes and uses of federal library aid, and the bureaucracy that administers the resulting programs.

"I think we must ask ourselves if our real funding needs mesh with the expressed concerns of the federal government as well as they did ten or 15 years ago. . . ." Wedgeworth then asserted that federal library support in the past few years has been inconsistent, and that the feds in HEW had never been able to properly accommodate libraries. "A remarkable chameleon in the bureaucracy . . ." he labeled the OE library agency. After a nod to the library construction and scholarship programs under federal aid, Wedgeworth expressed deep doubts about appropriations and expenditures in recent years.

Citing the fact that 81 percent of library support came from local funds in 1973, the year of the highest level of federal aid, Wedgeworth went on to the point he was apparently trying to make: "Although it may shock some of you to hear me say so, I believe that all of us in the library community have been well served by this rather stringent financial diet from Washington. Or, to turn the situation around, had we been receiving as much as 20 percent of our library budget from Washington in 1973—instead of only seven percent—and had local communities been contributing only 60 percent instead of the 81 percent they gave in 1973—then our library programs would be in even worse shape than they are today . . ."

At this point one shocked librarian turned to us with this rejoinder: "That wouldn't be true if the 60 percent local support was the same amount of money as the 81 percent, and it probably would have been!!! What we're after is a larger federal share, not a smaller local one."

The ALA Executive Director singled out Atlanta, Cleveland, and Youngstown as communities where local voters have passed bond issues for library support, and where "library services . . . have never had greater encouragement . . ."

Wedgeworth continued: "Just as big welfare creates the demand for more welfare, so 'the big federal fix'—as Daniel Moynihan described it—creates a yearning for another and yet another and stronger financial boost.

"Do we, the library community, want to see ourselves go the route of the health care system, or the social security system? Do we want to see ourselves funded into the same corner of many of our large educational institutions? . . . Today, many of these projects have either been cancelled or cut down in size and scope. Faculties have been trimmed. Yet their service components . . . the library collections, the building, . . . all developed in response to government money, must still be maintained . . . How successful has government spending been for library programs? Have these programs been popular enough to be sustained after government funding was cut back?

"How many dollars does it take to really help educate economically disadvantaged persons? We already know from some research that unless these persons have a community anchor of some kind—participation in a formal education program, ties with a political or community group—our success is bound to be very limited. We have no research to dispel some of the doubts that a good school library really does enhance the reading ability of a youngster. We do know that facilities alone are not the determining factor in academic achievement.

". . . Need as defined by our users and not by the professionals may lead us to some conclusions that could be considered heretical. Young people who come from poor, broken homes, belong to street gangs, and are flunking out of school are not our prime market. We may think they need us. But we're probably low on their list of priorities, behind food, better housing, educational counseling and personal motivation. If we insist on trying to reach them, what does it cost us to prove that our priorities are right and theirs are wrong? Are we better off focusing on those who are ready to use our services—but for some reason or other we haven't been able to attract yet?"

Welcome from a hotel television set

Wedgeworth then listed the most pressing needs of librarianship that ALA should immediately pursue. Among those needs: a better statistical reporting system, done not by the federal government but by ALA, and more "ongoing research that will help answer some of the questions I have raised today. . . .

"We do need government aid for certain urban library systems where, clearly, in the immediate future, there will not be enough local tax support to maintain an adequate library facility. We do not need federal tax dollars for those communities with a solid mandate from the people just to do 'interesting projects'. . . We need government aid to help certain school systems maintain top-flight media centers, especially in highly impacted inner city schools . . . We need government aid in developing a national bibliographic system, and, of course, in establishing national networking. . . .

"If we are to enlarge our popular mandate and eventually to serve at least 50 percent of the population instead of our present 35 percent, it is the heart of the market we must never neglect . . . We must recapture the loyalty of the average user . . .

"We need funds for the construction of libraries in areas where there are none within a reasonable distance. I estimate we now need some 1500 construction projects . . . The rest of the funding for libraries ought to come from the state, and most especially from the local community. . . ."

Wedgeworth continued with a plea for more communication with mayors, city counselors, housewives, and children. He suggested a national media campaign on behalf of libraries, and backed up with research.

Reactions to the Wedgeworth speech were surprisingly mild. During the remainder of the Midwinter week we asked a number of librarians, outreach workers, legislative insiders, and others, how they felt about the executive director's remarks. Those who had heard him took sides that were predictable in terms of their own working situations. Librarians in federally funded outreach activities were angry. Legislative types wanted to hear more. Hard-pressed urban library trustees and administrators liked his emphasis on inner city aid.

Wedgeworth promises to follow up in Detroit, with more specifics, particularly on the question of urban library deterioration, and the fact that city libraries apparently carrying a larger pro-rata burden of the fiscal cutbacks than other city services.

"Power" in ALA

"You should be walking behind Council and the Executive Board with a pointed stick!" The Division Interests Special Committee (DISC), that new power bloc in ALA deliberations, went to the right place to get political advice. Nearly 300 members of DISC, Division Boards, and Division Committees gathered for a four-hour "Orientation." They heard the indefatigable Alice Ihrig deliver a few lessons on the nature of political power, translated into the acronym laden language of ALA.

The Ihrig talk, which was peppered with shots at ALA's governing authorities, particularly the Council and Exec Board, but not sparing the Divisions and the general membership of ALA, was truly a call to arms. Ihrig suggested that the leadership vacuum at the top of the current ALA structure was ready to be influenced, coerced, and cajoled into giving important power concessions to the bloc that could properly arm itself to make the right demands.

"If there is a structure that appears impenetrable, it is because no one with the right weapons has come along . . . power comes from the members . . . many of whom are 'stay at home, do-nothings' . . . but they have real effects, they vote in ALA elections . . . Council has never really managed to get its act together . . . it may be best to let it meander . . . it is not a cohesive group . . . Council is vulnerable . . . most councillors seek advice, listen . . . The group that learns how to manipulate Council will own ALA!"

Ihrig went on to tell the Division leaders to fight for and accept committee assignments, to get to know more about members, to attend the Council meetings, and to plan effective programs at Conferences. "The most powerful thing at a conference is an overflow crowd at your program . . ."

"It is important not to surrender to other elements," Ihrig continued. She told the DISC folks not to allow other groups to take over division responsibilities, and to aggressively go after more power. "There is a great deal of joy in power," she said.

All this talk of "power" took place in the context of an ALA Midwinter meeting during which several proposals for reorganizing ALA were put forth, argued, and sent to various bodies for consideration. DISC and the Division troops seem to be the most militant in pursuing their goals for ALA's future. If they prevail, it will be a future with most of the old Divisions intact, but with mergers, and other changes to strengthen all. The chances are slim that DISC's concern for existing divisions will be totally overlooked in any new ALA structure. DISC and its constituents are well organized, and pressing ALA for solutions. The Divisions carry enormous clout through their publications, program activity, and their importance in ALA's membership recruiting and retention.

Inching toward reorganization

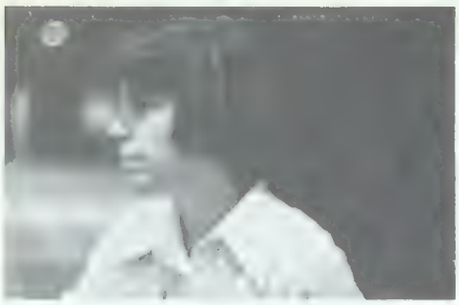
In addition to the fear that ALA will be plunged into another set of deeply divisive ANACONDA and ACONDA type debates, there are many other factors that seem to be impeding progress toward an ALA reorganization to solve problems created by the current dues structure.

For example, the Future Structures Committee, chaired by Helen Tuttle, was considering three or four proposals for reorganization during midwinter. Rather than recommend any one the committee apparently plans to submit several options to the ALA Exec Board and Council. Their Midwinter meetings were extremely difficult for observers to follow because no one had copies of the documents being discussed. Four drafts were released to LJ after the last meeting of the Committee. They range from what committee members call the "band-aid" approach whereby minor structural changes and a realignment of some divisions through merger or dissolution, would be attempted; to more radical proposals suggesting that the current division structure be junked in favor of totally new units and hierarchies.

The committee seemed to be devoting its time to discussions of each of these proposals, and in fact, it did basic editorial work on a couple. Its discussions were bogged down in this activity, plus an inability to resolve fundamental differences apparent among its members since their first sessions.

Chicken and egg debate

At Midwinter it was Bob Wright of the Pitt Library School who asserted that he felt it was impossible to develop a structure without a more precise re-



Chairperson Virginia Sherwood watches Council vote to approve LIRT statement of ALA's goals and purposes. Tuttle and others on the committee responded that this was outside the Committee's charge. And so it went, with neither side particularly satisfied with the responses of the other.

It would be surprising if the Future Structures Committee comes up with the plan that is eventually used to reorganize ALA. First, there is the hang-up of that "chicken and egg debate" over goals and purposes. Secondly, the committee's decision to offer options instead of one recommendation means that some other body will have to argue the merits of the various plans and choose one. Finally, the committee's method, meticulous review of each of four or five proposals from its members and elsewhere, suggests that it may still be deliberating and editing after the basic organizational decisions have been made elsewhere.

The Divisions respond

More direct, and obviously more interested in fast action, several ALA Divisions unveiled proposals at Midwinter that could influence the direction of ALA change.

Unique in its fullness, and in the careful way in which it was prepared was a proposal from the Library Education Division (LED) asking that it be allowed to become an ALA Committee, with an ALA Office along the lines of the Intellectual Freedom or Legislation Committees. The rationale for this proposal was the fact the library education, as Exec Board Member Elizabeth Fast put it, "is just too important to be left in the hands of the library educators." The LED plan includes proposals for a Library Education Assembly to insure membership input to the committee; enhanced membership participation by the formation of committees on library education within divisions and other units of ALA. The Assembly members would be drawn from the committees. The plan also envisages a Library Education Officer at ALA headquarters to "provide the staff liaison and support necessary to the effective and authoritative functioning of this tripartite library education arm of the Association."

Division merger

Another plan, submitted by the presidents of the Association of State Library Agencies (ASLA) and the Health and Rehabilitative Library Services Division (HRLSD) suggests the merging of these two divisions. The two divisions, building on new and long-standing strengths, would combine, to take over all of ALA's responsibilities in the areas of multi-library cooperation; specialized library services for those with sensory, physical, behavioral, or health problems; state library agencies; standards for the areas of its responsibility; and a number of other, typical division responsibilities.

The only threat we could see in the ASLA-HRLSD proposal was the notion implied in item 4 of their responsibilities. Here the two boards agreed that the new division ought to develop "policies, studies, and activities in matters affecting state library agencies and multi-library cooperatives relating to a) state and local library legislation, b) state and other grants-in-aid and appropriations, and c) relationships among state, federal, regional, and local governments . . ."

These are clearly matters of importance to many other units, and should not be given to the new group. ALA has a strong legislative arm, with the Legislation Committee and its Assembly, plus the ALA Washington Office. It would be a mistake to center this activity in one division. The current rift between the two groups outside of ALA, the Urban Libraries Council (ULC), and the Chief Officers of State Library Agencies (COSLA) is evidence enough of why this is a bad idea.

On balance, however, there is good reason to support a merger of these two failing divisions, and good evidence to suggest that the result might be one strong division.

ALTA threats

The American Library Trustee Association (ALTA), in a whimpering memo from its president-elect Donald Earnshaw, asked the ALA Council for continued "subsidy" of the Division. Earnshaw apparently sees ALTA's 1467 members as indicating potential for "yet another sharp increase in personal memberships" despite the fact that the division's membership hardly skims the surface of its potential in terms of the number of library trustees in the U.S. In any case Earnshaw seems to be telling ALA's Exec Board and Council that ALA is dependent upon the Division for lobbying help, for the plan to develop the hoped-for White House Conference on Libraries. Because it contributes to the "catholicity" of ALA, according to Earnshaw,

OLPR's very effective Margaret Myers

Zoia Horn moves against library fees

ALTA may be crucial to ALA's tax-exempt status. Earnshaw's memo ends with a divorce threat: ". . . we do, nevertheless, suggest that careful inquiry should be made into the adverse effects of a divorce, as to whether or not it might bring examination by the Internal Revenue Service as to whether or not ALA's continuing tax exemption would be allowed." As we read it, and we'll welcome other interpretations, ALTA is saying, "ALA must subsidize us with 'matching funds' or we'll have to leave the Association, and then you'll have tax troubles."

Luckily, the ALTA proposal got nowhere, nor did any other proposal for reorganization, or specific relief to a specific division.

Broderick and reorganization

In an attempt to fill the leadership vacuum that Alice Ihrig cited, Dorothy Broderick, a petition nominee for the ALA presidency, chose to pin her campaign hopes on a strong plea for the survival of the existing divisions and round tables of ALA.

"In agreeing to run for the presidency of ALA," Broderick wrote, "I am motivated by the over-riding concern that the Divisional structure of ALA be preserved." In a campaign memo addressed to "ALA members" Broderick bases her concern on the fact that it is through the Divisions that ALA members are given the opportunity to participate in ALA activity (some 2,100 ALA members are currently active through the divisions, according to her). The memo goes on to point out that "the experience of working on committees with other professionals with mutual interests sends most—if not all—of us back to our jobs with renewed commitment and new insights, and the journals and newsletters are among the most respected in the world of librarianship . . ." In the debate of the SRRT Action Council over whether or not to endorse Broderick's nomination (reported below) the candidate's strong division stand was a unanimous SRRT reservation. The SRRTers endorsed Broderick, but not her position on division survival.

Back to 50 E. Huron

The ALA Council, at the recommendation of the Exec Board, suspended its rules for a brief debate of all the reorganization plans as a "committee of the whole." ALA Presidential candidate Bill Summers opined that it appeared that the current structure was keeping ALA and headquarters "in socialism" while forcing the Divisions to make it in "free enterprise."

There was praise for the LED proposal, and a review of both the ASLA/HRLSD merger and the ALTA plea for subsidy.

A Council Document #33 appeared at the meeting, apparently prepared by an ALA staffer. Entitled "Tentative Timetable for ALA Structural Changes," it suggested that the referral action taken at Midwinter was somehow preordained.

The Council will take no action "until staff input is received." All the proposals and theories about reorganizing the ALA will be reviewed by ALA staff, and the staff and the Future Structures Committee will report their progress at the Spring meeting of the ALA Exec. Board. Meanwhile COPES will restudy the ALTA proposal, and the other two proposals will go to appropriate committees for study.

After many complicated twists and turns, and slow progress through all the units, committees, and governing boards, and after Council has debated and voted, probably at every session from now until the end of 1978, this round of reorganization should be complete. The "timetable" suggests final action at the end of 1978, and only then will we know how it all turned out. Will the divisions survive? Will Broderick get elected because of her platform "memo" supporting that result? Will ALTA file for divorce? Will the Future Structures Committee develop a usable option? Most important, will the new structure help unify librarians under the banner of ALA, or simply continue the regrettable tendency to fragment the Association and increase the competitive aggressiveness with which ALA units pursue members and money? Indeed, after it is all over, will we be able to decide the direction of our profession and association on the basis of consensus, or will the budget still be the fundamental policy document of ALA?

The deficit threat

ALA's budget watchdogs, the Program Evaluation and Support Committee (COPES), have put ALA in the black in recent years, but there is a deficit threat for fiscal year 1977–78. Luckily, COPES has sent out plenty of early warnings, and action is being taken now to avoid dipping, once again, into ALA's endowment. According to projections for that next fiscal year, if all requested expenditures are needed and all income is properly forecast, there will be a deficit ranging from a low of $164,718 to a high of $461,553. Low membership figures, projected losses on the 1977 Midwinter Meeting and the Annual Conference in Detroit (possibly $140,000), plus high budget requests apparently account for the problem.

To cut costs and increase revenue a Special Committee of the Exec Board will study ALA finances, recommendations will be developed to increase conference revenues, and COPES has asked all units to set new priorities for reducing their budget requests.

When this was reported to the Council, COPES brought along a proposal to increase ALA's organizational dues. The new dues schedule eliminates many cheaper categories of membership. In basic terms, organizations (chapters, affiliates, foreign organizations, and nonprofit groups other than libraries or library schools) can join for $50, and get certain publications and a discount on others. For U.S. libraries or library schools, the basic dues will be $50 if their total budgets are $50,000 or less. For those with larger budgets, the dues increase by $1.15 per $1000 of budget, up to a maximum of $850. If the dues exceed $57 the organization can join two divisions free; if they exceed $150, they can get 3 free divisions; at $300 they get 6; at $500 they get 9, and at $700 an organization gets membership in all of ALA's divisions. This change, which the Council approved, will not affect any other categories of membership. According to COPES, ALA would gain about $71,000 through the dues change.

This year COPES has come up with projections early enough so the Association can do something about them. It will be most interesting to see which units "bite the bullet" willingly, and which fight against further cuts. Given all the current debate about saving the "endangered" divisions of ALA, and given ALTA's threat to pursue divorce if they don't get ALA subsidy, the budget cutters will face hostile forces in Detroit. For another year at least, it looks like fiscal problems will dominate ALA decision making.

Racism/Sexism and IFC

It wasn't originally on the docket for discussion, but the "Resolution on Racism and Sexism Awareness," passed last summer by membership and Council, became this Midwinter's cause célèbre for the Intellectual Freedom Committee. Midweek at Midwinter, the Board of Directors of the Children's Services Division and its Intellectual Freedom Committee brought their observations and objections to the resolution to the attention of IFC. CSD charged that the resolution "seems to be in direct conflict" with the Library Bill of Rights and the "Sexism, Racism and Other -Isms in Library Materials . . ." interpretation of the LBR adopted by Council in 1973. CSD rejected the resolution's Preamble which declared that ALA (and thus, CSD) had "failed to aggressively address the racism and sexism within its own professional province"; and took exception to the resolution's Step 3 which urged the divisions to develop programs "to raise the awareness of library users to the pressing problem of racism and sexism." This, contended CSD, "violates our professional responsibility to promote no cause and further no movement and can only result in expurgation, labeling, and removal of materials for content." CSD asked IFC to review the Preamble and Step 3, and requested that ALA's President and Executive Board "take speedy appropriate action to effectuate reconsideration of the resolution."

In a series of meetings over the next three days, IFC examined the resolution, by its own admission, "for the first time." The contradiction of principles, the implications of censorship, the conflict of ALA policy statements—all were discussed and debated. Suggested paths of action included suspending implementation of the resolution until the conflicts could be resolved (CSD had already declared that for the present it would "refrain" from developing any user awareness program); or outright recinding of the resolution. Committee sentiment ranged from a reluctance to take any action until Detroit when membership could again speak to the resolution, to condemnation of the resolution as "discriminatory" and an attempt to censor "certain books for personal bias." At the end of the first day's bout with the matter, IFC voted for recision.

Bradford Chambers, of the Council on Interracial Books for Children and the original proponent of the resolution, who has for some time been involved in the bitter debate over the racism/sexism issue and had been observing this part of IFC's deliberations, termed the decision a "bitter tragedy."

In the following day's discussion, the Committee honed its report for presentation to the Executive Board and considered the addition of a proposal to develop a "compatible synthesis" of the "substantive requirements of the fight against racism and sexism with the procedural requirements embodied in the Library Bill of Rights."

The bitterness which has plagued this issue—before and since the acrimonious debate in Chicago—surfaced again in a stormy session with the Executive Board. Viewing the resolution as a hard-won victory, the Board and ALA President Clara Jones were not about to see it wiped off ALA's books in any such retrogressive action. IFC and its proposal for recision were summarily dismissed.

Since IFC had already completed its agenda for the week, the Committee reconvened just before Council on Friday morning to finalize its report which by now had become an information—not an action—item. IFC concluded that it would be necessary 1) to clarify the relationship to and effect of the resolution on the Library Bill of Rights; and 2) to clarify the resolution itself "in a manner which will remove any possible implication that librarians should engage in censorship practices." A compatible set of ALA policies against racism and sexism and for intellectual freedom is to be developed with input from other ALA units and most especially the Intellectual Freedom Committees of CSD, YASD, AASL, and ALTA.

The next installment will take place in Detroit when racism and sexism will definitely be on the docket.

Intellectual Freedom Committee caucuses on racism/sexism resolution

IF litigation

In other intellectual freedom concerns, the Freedom to Read Foundation presented progress reports on two old cases and news of a new one on which the Foundation is about to embark:

Moore v. Younger—The books are still open on this long-running case, but the Foundation ventured that an opinion from the California Attorney General would be forthcoming "within the month."

Smith v. U.S.—In defense of Jerry Lee Smith, the Iowa bookseller convicted of violating federal postal laws by mailing allegedly obscene materials, the Foundation has filed three briefs and presented oral arguments before the Supreme Court this past December.

Pico v. Island Trees—During its Midwinter meeting, the Foundation reached a decision to become "involved" in this case which concerns the banning of books by the School Board of the Island Trees School District in Nassau County, N.Y. (Details of this censorship case have been reported both by LJ and School Library Journal over the past year.) The Foundation discussed various options in support of the present complaint or in entering a separate suit. Joint action with the Island Trees Teachers' Union is one possibility, but if this is not feasible (the Union has already filed a grievance), the Foundation has the green light and the funding to explore other means of assistance.

Free access vs. fees

In what many considered to be the most significant debate of the Midwinter Meeting, the ALA Council voted 96-36 against a resolution asking ALA to "reaffirm the concept of access without charge, to information in public libraries and tax-supported libraries . . ." The resolution went on to ask the Association to "go on public record against the charging of fees by tax-supported libraries for providing information and reference services which have traditionally been free."

The Horn resolution, which was easily passed by the California Library Association in December, and had been "reviewed for conformance with guidelines" by ALA's resolutions committee, brought out some of the most angry debate of Midwinter.

Among the many arguments put forth were those like John Carter's (Wyoming State Library) that the service couldn't be offered without fees because otherwise a library couldn't afford it. Others didn't want to vote for the principle when they were violating it by charging fees for services in practice. Presidential candidate Russ Shank spoke out strongly against the "insidious practice" of repackaging government subsidized data bases to be sold, but voted against the measure. The other candidates split on the issue, Dorothy Broderick voting for the motion after demanding, and getting, a roll-call vote. Bill Summers voted against it. In the midst of the debate Councillor Kathleen Molz angrily denounced the motion as "fuzzy" in its wording and meaning. Horn's rejoinder was that the members of the California Library Association had no trouble understanding the resolution, nor had the ALA Resolutions Committee.

After the motion was defeated, the Council quickly passed another Horn resolution asking for an ad hoc committee to study the variety of fees being charged for reference and information service by tax-supported libraries. The Council dropped the committee and asked the ALA president "to explore ways to determine" the fees which are in use.

Richard Waters—tilting at ALA Council windmills pays off

So it was that the ALA Council, possibly reflecting the true sentiment of the members, but possibly not, decided not to reaffirm what we had come to regard as a fundamental dogma of librarianship, that information service ought to be accessible to people without charge. The matter will surely reemerge in Detroit, where ALA's members will be allowed to vote.

High waters

ALA Councillor Richard Waters has been tilting at the ALA Council windmills in a one-man reform effort for years. His campaign paid off at Midwinter. The Council approved Waters' resolution requiring that members of the Council be limited to one other ALA activity. They also voted to equalize the number of signatures on a nominating petition for members as well as Councillors, and set the number required at a very low 25 signatures. We can expect longer ballots, if the doubts

A Few New Projects . . .

"WE SHOULD now be pushing towards our stated priorities and also consider a few new projects" was the positive note struck by incoming AALS President Margaret Goggin (Denver). It symbolized an AALS annual meeting at which areas of professional concern featured much more prominently than they have in recent years. Legal incorporation, a new constitution, obtaining tax-exempt status, and preparation of a detailed procedure manual for the guidance of officers have all been necessary activities in the past few years. Together they now provide the firm basis from which the Association can develop a more aggressive and constructive program.

The meeting, in addition to its various committee and interest group sessions, had as its main address "The Information Professional as Change Agent." Keynote speaker Ronald Havelock, Institute for Social Research, University of Michigan, had very little new to say in his survey of the 11 key functions which link R&D producers and knowledge sources with the information agency and users and potential users. He identified these functions as acquisition, screening, cataloging, storage, transforming for users, user access, dissemination, assistance to users in the field, communication from users and potential users, prediction of user needs, and feedback to users. Two short papers followed as a form of response. Bob Taylor (Syracuse) advanced his case for the kind of curriculum he believes necessary to produce the new information professional, and he stressed the need to cut the umbilical cord to the institution. Robin Crickman (Drexel) felt that communication is the foremost skill required, with an emphasis to be placed on being literate and articulate. She also wanted risk taking to pervade the curriculum, having noted that librarians by temperament are not noted risk takers.

Accreditation & salaries

The Task Force on Accreditation (see LJ, "Editorial," February 1, p. 301) chaired by Sister Lauretta McCusker, had set up taping sessions throughout the meeting at which deans/directors and site team members made known their views on the recently completed round of accreditation visits. Individual faculty members asked to join in, and their comments will be added to the report which Sister Lauretta will present to the AALS Board at its spring meeting in Denver at the beginning of April.

Russell Bidlack (Michigan) made two major reports on accreditation and faculty salaries. Acting on behalf of COA, he had received responses from 69 of the 74 schools visited under the 1972 Standards in response to questions concerning the process and procedures. The schools were generally positive in their replies on the Standards, the self-study, and the composition of the site visit teams, and there was no criticism of the role of ALA accreditation officer, Elinor Yungmyer. Perhaps understandably, the schools differed with COA itself over the necessary frequency of site visits; instead of COA's within six years, the schools generally favored revisits at seven- to ten-year intervals; one school said 20 years!

On faculty salaries, Bidlack gave a preview of his full report which will appear in the Journal of Education for Librarianship. The highest paid dean is now at $45,393; the average starting salary for new faculty members at the assistant professor level showed women receiving less than men, even though more women were appointed at this rank than men and the women appointed had a greater proportion of completed doctorates than did the men; and the biggest percentage increase in salaries last year was at the assistant professor level.

Jean Lowrie (Michigan) reported progress on the position paper on sixth-year programs. It is hoped that the draft version will be available for next year's annual meeting, and it seems likely that it will be a matter of debate then: Should it be a certificate or a degree? How many credits should be required? Is it a credential in its own right? Is it linked to the doctorate, possibly as a consolation prize for those not completing the thesis? Can these programs be accredited in some manner? These were some of the unresolved items.

expressed by some Councillors in the debate come true.

Waters' third and final motion was to further complicate the ballot by asking candidates a set of questions prepared by a new Council committee. There were other options offered in the relatively complicated proposal, and while it was well-intentioned, the Council wisely voted it down because of the costly and elaborate procedures the system would have required.

Other Council action

The Council, after brief debate, authorized the establishment of a new Library Instruction Round Table, despite previous referrals and some apparent edginess over the impact of this new unit on Division membership.

In a group of "non-controversial" resolutions passed without debate the Council resolved that the Committee on Accreditation should "encourage graduate library schools seeking accreditation to enrich their curricula to assure that course content reflect the cultural heritage and needs of the Spanish-speaking people of the United States and that the schools be encouraged to include bilingual/bicultural individuals on their faculties."

Blues-singing, guitar-playing, mouth-harping, Washington, D.C. poet David Kresh, a Reference Librarian in the Main Reading Room of the Library of Congress, gave a poetry reading at the Folger Shakespeare Library during the ALA Midwinter Meeting. His poems have been published in many leading poetry journals such as the Carleton Miscellany. A Midwinter example entitled "We Spoke Often": "We spoke often/of the virtues of silence" (Mitch Freedman photo)

In a widely complicated set of actions a new Planning Assembly was created, but it turned out to be comprised of the same people as the existing Budget Assembly, and, we guess, what was really being done was changing the name. It is now the Budget and Planning Assembly, and it will do what it has always done. So it goes.

The council endorsed the restoration of U.S. funding to Unesco and encouraged Congress to appropriate the money.

ALA's Council also endorsed legislation to establish a Charles S. Pierce National Historical Site to honor the great American thinker.

The ALA Minority Scholarship was renamed the Louise Giles Minority Scholarship in honor of the former president of ACRL who was tragically killed.

The Annual Meeting of the Association of American Library Schools January 28-30, 1977, Shoreham Hotel, Washington, D.C.

Pauline Vaillancourt (Albany) is chairing a review committee to examine the Association's position paper on continuing education with a view to possible revision and updating. Betty Stone (Catholic), on behalf of CLENE, presented the first draft of guidelines for a suggested voluntary program for continuing education recognition. Home study and correspondence courses may qualify for CEUs under this proposal.

Harold Goldstein (Florida State) is to chair the Task Force on Organizational Alignment in which AALS will examine its relationships with other groups—ALA's Library Education Division, ASIS (American Society for Information Science), MLA (Medical Library Association), SLA (Special Libraries Association), CCS (Council of Communication Societies), IFLA (International Federation of Library Associations and Institutions) and others.

At the annual general meeting, with Guy Garrison (Drexel) presiding, AALS voted to assure the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science (NCLIS) of its support for the White House Conference on Library and Information Services. Garrison noted, a little ruefully, that AALS had broached the matter with NCLIS as Executive Director Al Trezza had not corresponded directly with the Association or the library schools—"and he's a Drexel graduate too." At the instigation of the deans and directors group within AALS, the Association expressed its dismay at the COA's discontinuance of the annual "Statistical Data from Annual Review Reports" and proposed a meeting with COA "to design an appropriate statistical reporting system for publication of data."

Women yes, CNLA no!

Mike Marchant (Brigham Young), supported by Harold Goldstein (Florida State), questioned the value to AALS of continued participation in the Council of National Library Associations. Jane Stevens (Albany) felt that there were occasions, e.g. on copyright, when joint statements could be of value. Ed Holley (North Carolina) was not impressed by the copyright statement and felt that "CNLA has certainly passed whatever prime it may have had." It was voted unanimously not to continue affiliation. On a more positive note, it was agreed to accept the foundation of a new interest group, that on Women in Librarianship. Sydney Pierce (Emory) and Kathleen Weibel (Wisconsin) presented a report on the group's purposes—research on the position of women in librarianship, fostering greater awareness in library educators of the present and potential impact of library education on women in the profession, and identification of means of encouraging broader career aspirations in women as students, practitioners and library educators. Ellen Gay Detlefsen (Pittsburgh) will chair this new group.

Dues increase

Having heard this, the Association voted an increase in personal dues; this follows an increase in institutional dues passed last year. Executive Secretary Jan Phillips reported that membership was at an all-time high with over 650 personal members and 98 institutional members (64 accredited programs and 34 not). The Association's membership committee is looking at ways of extending membership by bringing graduate library schools from overseas into institutional membership and faculty members from overseas schools at all levels into personal membership. Attendance was a record with close to 400 registrants. Elected were petition candidate Gary Purcell (Tenn.), president; Rose Mary Magrill (Mich.), bd. of directors.

One odd note—the Council of Deans and Directors ballot for president-elect had Charles Bunge (Wisconsin) and Annette Phinazee (North Carolina Central) in a tie vote. The ballot for secretary/treasurer had Harold Goldstein (Florida State) and Norman Horrocks (Dalhousie) also in a tie vote. "Typical of deans and directors—coming down firmly on the fence" was one, perhaps unkind, comment. Presiding officer Venable Lawson (Emory) applied what was termed a Georgia Solution by declaring all four elected with co-presidents and co-secretary/treasurers for the coming year!—Norman Horrocks, Director, School of Library Service, Dalhousie University, Halifax

"Job-lorn" volunteer advisers: Terry McLaughlin, Geauga County P.L., Ohio; Judy Boch, West Virginia University; Jackie Wagner S. Charleston P.L., W. Va.

A resolution, at issue since the ACONDA reforms, asking that Divisions be represented on the Council, was referred to the Detroit membership meeting.

Washington area librarians and the ALA Washington Office were thanked for their gargantuan efforts to make Midwinter successful. It was.

Finally, in the joyous language of P. T. Barnum, Fred Glazer of the State Library of West Virginia introduced a motion resolving that "the public library remain as a refuge and a shelter of learning to all citizens during this winter of our discomfort . . ." and that ALA's Executive Director communicate to all public officials concerned in all states the importance of maintaining public library hours during the fuel crisis.

Executive Board actions

ALA's Executive Board ratified a new salary package for Exec Director Wedgeworth. The three-year contract includes a $5000 increase (to $45,000) plus a six percent interest-bearing loan of $15,000 to enable him to purchase new housing.

In a discussion of the appeals procedure of the ALA Committee on Accreditation, it came out that the appeal by San Jose State University costs $14,418.47. The Board asked COA to recommend who should pay for appeals, after some discussion of the effect on an institution (it might decide not to try) if it were asked to bear the cost.

DISC was given a new lease on life—two more years as an ad hoc committee. DISC's recommendation on charging varying fees for conference programs was referred to COPES along with a DISC proposal that fees for a librarian's first conference be applied to membership dues.

It was announced that Norman Horrocks and Don Trottier were elected from a field of four "official" nominees and four petition candidates, to the Executive Board. The two were both "official" candidates.

With some fear they they might be launching a competitor, the Exec Board approved plans for a 40th Anniversary Conference of ACRL, one of its strongest and most independent divisions. It will be held in Boston in the fall of 1978. The precedents and dangers of this move were much debated.

Despite costs of $70,000 and five years spent in "explorations" regarding ALA headquarters building space and development of its Chicago real estate, the Board voted to allow another $10,000 to be used for new explorations of the space problem. This time the staff will "explore" the possibility of building near 50 East Huron Street.

Placement

A well-organized placement service handled hundreds of applicants for many jobs. There were some complaints about the treatment afforded candidates by prospective employers, many of the latter of whom did not bother to reply to requests for interviews, or follow-up in other ways. There was one unique, new, touch, a Job Hunters Comfort Station where several experienced librarians sat for hours every day to listen, and advise on any problems the young unemployed professionals wanted to discuss.

Another Midwinter first, as far as we know, was the meeting of library school placement directors to compare notes, pick up ideas, exchange literature, and generally try to work together to improve the placement situation. Margaret Myers of ALA's staff deserves kudos for her efforts in all of this very effective placement activity. It is one of our most urgent problems.

Division odds and ends

The working nature of ALA's Midwinter sessions makes reporting it difficult, at best. Most units, including division boards and committees, pursue their agendas, and get as far as they can. LJ's reporters did stop in at some to get a sense of the direction in which various working groups were going.

We heard, for example, a discussion of catalog code revision prompted by John Byrum's report of the Catalog Code Revision Committee to the Resources and Technical Services Division (RTSD) Board. Despite some antagonism from observers over rather tight restrictions on the distribution of the drafts of the pending code, the Board did endorse a draft agreement extending the life of the Joint Steering Committee for Revision of the Anglo-American Cataloging Rules.

RTSD's Board did endorse the widely discussed Resolution on Racism and Sexism that reemerged from the summer conference, unlike the Children's Services Division which voted not to act on the resolution's imperatives.

Division finances occupied much of the Board's time, including discussion of the costs of sending Byrum to IFLA and the impact of adding 48 pages to the budget of Library Resources and Technical Services to present the Revised AACR.

The RTSD/AAP (Association of American Publishers) Joint Committee discussed plans for elaborate programs at the Detroit Conference. A report on library (non)use of ISBN (International Standard Book Numbers) caused much concern. While there is great potential for ISBN use in ordering, interlibrary loan, and similar activities, the study showed that few libraries outside the research elite were using ISBNs.

Plans for the entry of the Ohio College Library Center into online acquisitions services were described in detail by OCLC's Jim Rush. OCLC has completed a user survey designed to determine user requirements for an acquisition service and has announced August 1, 1977 as a target date for initial demonstrations.

Andy Uszak, vice president of the R. R. Bowker Company, briefly described Bowker's interests in making its data bases available for different uses, including the possibility of a book ordering service.

A new division?

We also ran into Bob Schremser of the Community and Junior College Library Section of ACRL. CJCLS has just completed an analysis of its members, to determine how many of the 3,405 librarians and media specialists in the U.S. belong to the section. The result was 326, or about 9.5 percent. More startling was the fact that in the current membership of the section the two-year college people are outnumbered two to one. Much of this work is part of a concerted drive by some members of CJCLS to pull out of ACRL where their visibility and power to act is minimal, at best, and form a separate division for two-year colleges. It was a surprise to find this crack in the armor of ACRL, long regarded as the most unified, strongest ALA division.

The status of women

Liz Dickinson reviewed the founding of the Status of Women in Librarianship Committee, and the activities for which the new unit of ALA had been formed. Members discussed whether the Committee should be a "watchdog" to monitor the action of other concerned groups, or take actions of their own. There was strong support for more data gathering on women in the profession, and Clara Jackson pushed hard for the development of a "profile" of all women in ALA. They were all concerned with dispelling what one member called "subjective feelings" about the status of women. Kathy Weibel described her project on the history of women in librarianship, and suggested that it might have spinoffs for the Committee. The conclusion was that the Committee is "in business," they want to publicize the fact, and they want input from the field on what kinds of help are needed.

The "old girl network"

The Women Administrators Discussion Group, led by Kay Cassell and Sherrie Bergman, emerged dynamically at Midwinter. The majority of the participants, women in administrative positions, felt that the needs of women at the managerial level are not being served by LAD or other units of ALA such as the SRRT Task Force on Women. After warm debate, the group agreed that a counterbalance to the "old boy network," was needed. The resulting "old girl network" would include a mentor system to provide coaching for women facing job interviews. Programs to provide practical training in leadership and management skills were identified as an important need also. The group will seek permanent status to insure a formal time slot at ALA Conferences, and tactics for that purpose were discussed. Among the options, using membership drive leverage to gain acceptance by an existing division, or applying for ALA committee status.

SRRT-alive and well

The Social Responsibilities Round Table (SRRT) pursued varied fare during the Midwinter Meeting, with some 19 scheduled meetings of its Action Council, Clearinghouse, and various task forces. LJ simply couldn't get to all of them. It was impressive, however, to see how the Action Council moved through its agenda at Midwinter. There is apparently a new spirit in SRRT, and while it has always been a struggle to get activists to actually take jobs on the Action Council and Clearinghouse, they do function very effectively.

ALA Presidential hopefuls Broderick, Shank, and Summers; below: SRRT Action Council debates ALA candidate endorsement

In addition to all the business of coordinating the activity, SRRT's Action Council managed to endorse the petition candidacy of Dorothy Broderick for ALA President. It was the fullest discussion of the nomination and election process at ALA we heard all week. Lillian Shapiro, who is a member of both SRRT Acion Council and the ALA Nominating Committee, described the elaborate and difficult procedures the committee uses to arrive at choices for ALA office. It is a rigorous and searching process that should secure input from every constituency. She opposed the endorsement of Broderick, but abstained from the voting because of her dual positions.

Jackie Eubanks and others on the SRRT Council explained that petitions are also an "official" route to a candidacy, and might be preferred by some candidates for tactical or practical reasons.

The discussion then turned to the three candidates, Shank, Summers, and Broderick. Based upon her work with the SRRT Women's Task Force, and other SRRT activities, but with deep reservations about her stand on division survival and representation on Council, the SRRTers voted to endorse Broderick. The voting record of the three candidates, as far as it was known, was also considered, particularly their votes on the SRRT-endorsed resolution asking ALA to oppose fees for library information and reference service. Shank and Summers voted against the resolution, Broderick for it.

The Detroit agenda

By the time ALA meets in Detroit this summer, many questions debated at Midwinter will be answered by the U.S. Congress, warmer weather, and the continuing work of committees, boards, and other groups connected with the Association.

We'll know, for example, whether or not there will be a Title V to LSCA this session. We'll know whether or not COPES and others have found ways to increase ALA revenue or cut costs. We'll have a better idea of which library responsibilities will be undertaken by the federal government and at what price tag.

Nonetheless the 1977 Midwinter Meeting did leave plenty for the Detroit agenda. Membership will surely want to consider again the question of fees for library service. There will be much more discussion of long-range legislative policy, much of it in reaction to Bob Wedgeworth's speech to the Council. We'll all look forward to more Moon-shots from the chair. And by summer we'll know whether there's a mandate in the election of ALA President Broderick, Shank, or Summers.

The Editors

PROFESSIONAL READING

Management map

SHIMMON, Ross, ed. A Reader in Library Management.

Clive Bingley & Linnet. 1976. 213p. bibliog. ISBN (Linnet) 0-208-01378-4. LC 76-10382. $10.

This book was written at the request of the Association of British Library and Information Studies Schools (ABLISS) to fill a void in the field of library management. It was felt there was a paucity of suitable teaching material for students in the library management field so that a reader which could offer a "map" of the subject area, indicate points of controversy within the field, make links with appropriate management studies in other fields, and select additional readings was needed and would be helpful.

The reader divides the field into five sections: Why library management? Purpose and Planning; Organization; Personnel; Evaluation. It includes an introduction, conclusion, and bibliography with linking commentaries by John Allred, K. H. Jones, and Peter Jordon (though the reader can't determine who wrote what). If one assumes minimal knowledge on the part of the reader, the well-written, succinct commentaries, together with the many references and bibliography, provide a useful tool. The selections included, however, are, at best merely adequate, exhibiting (as the editor points out) a number of different levels of treatment. This may be understandable if one accepts (the reviewer does not) as valid the constraints faced by the editor in choosing material: willingness of copyright holder to allow reprint at a reasonable fee; seminal management texts in monograph form were already available and it was felt preferable to send students to the original rather than derivative articles; library school students resist materials which derive directly from industrial and commercial contexts.

In the introduction the author argues that most organizations accept the need to be managed and the need for staff with management expertise, but people concerned with libraries deny, or accord low priority, to the study of library management. One hopes this is no longer the case in North America, but one wonders how the editor hopes to help resolve this problem if, in developing his course in library management, he continues to be influenced by the fact that students of librarianship are resistant to materials which derive from commercial contexts.—LOUIS VAGIANOS, DALHOUSIE UNIVERSITY, HALIFAX, NOVA SCOTIA

AACR under attack

HOFFMAN, Herbert H. Descriptive Cataloging in a New Light: Polemical Chapters for Librarians.

Rayline Printing Co., Santa Ana, Calif. 1976. 171p. index. pap. $4.

About half of this heterogeneous work is a critical analysis of AACR: to expose its inconsistencies, ambiguities, imprecisions; to clarify, à la Lubetzky, underlying conditions ignored or misunderstood by our multitudinous rules. The rest is detailed elementary instruction in typing catalog, shelf list, added entry, and cross reference cards. Experienced librarians will not likely be interested in the latter part nor beginners in the former. One indeed wonders if such emphasis on typed cards suggests an ideal point of view for critique of an international code. Hoffman treats ISBD in a few pages as "hastily developed" and "designed without regard for the block layout of the standard catalog card."

His critical style is, as advertised, polemical. This may alienate his intended beneficiaries, our code makers. He indicts librarians generally for miscomprehending basic concepts, offers his definitive clarifications, usually with new terminology, schematics, and elaborate tables. He may be accused by the unsympathetic of constructing straw men, interpreting AACR with unreasonable literalness, belaboring the obvious, drawing unwarranted inferences. Some solutions startle: that "book" be defined as any information container, e.g. sound recording or film. Sometimes he seems out of touch, as when he calls for standardizing the medium statement—hardly a neglected concern. Yet he scores valid points, especially against AACR wording and the structure of AACR Part III. Neither style nor occasional ingenuousness should deter revisers of AACR from giving even a partially effective gadfly attack its due attention.—RICHARD J. HYMAN, DEPT. OF LIBRARY SCIENCE, QUEENS COLLEGE, FLUSHING, N.Y.

Humanities defined

LANGRIDGE, D. W. Classification and Indexing in the Humanities.

Butterworths. 1976. 143p. index. bibliog. ISBN 0-408-70777-1. $11.95.

The effect of cataloging/classification upon reference in the major sectors of the universe of subjects has been examined already in two works which have the status of classics ("venerable classics"?); now comes the third to fill out the set. First Vickery on Cl. & Ind. In Science and D. J. Foskett on Cl. & Ind. in the Social Sciences; now Langridge. Just as Vickery and Foskett were not identical in organization, depth, or scope, so does Langridge differ from both of them, focusing primarily on the definition (delimitation) of the humanities and the arts both from the sciences and into manageable internal groups, and on comparing the treatments of these groups ("history and biography," "philosophy, religion and the occult," "arts, crafts and entertainment") in the various general classification systems (BC, CC, DC, LC, UDC—and he is less favorable to CC than anyone who knows him would expect). There is a very useful exemplification of the process (as against the mere "idea") of the construction of a special classification.

Though a good deal is necessarily left out (especially valuable would have been a consideration of the various verbal systems, both as used in libraries and in published bibliographies and periodical-analytic indices—as in the comparison of the general classifications viewing them primarily in terms of the retrieval they enable), the book is generally helpful—especially, I would expect, in teaching—except for its pronouncedly British slant.—JEAN M. PERREAULT, UNIVERSITY OF ALABAMA IN HUNTSVILLE LIBRARY

In Brief

MAGNOTTI, Shirley. Master's Theses in Library Science, 1970-1974.

Whitston. 1976. 198p. appendix. ISBN 0-87875-100-9. LC 75-8232. $10.50.

Author and subject indexes to 700 master's theses accepted by 24 American Library Association accredited library schools. Contains some theses from 1960's not listed in the 1960-69 volume.

SOME OF THE MOST INTERESTING MONUMENTS IN THE WORLD ARE LIBRARIES.

Historically, architecturally, and culturally such libraries as the Bibliothèque nationale in Paris, the Biblioteca Medicea Laurenziana in Florence, and the Folger Shakespeare library in Washington, are equal to the great museums, palaces, and cathedrals of the world. Each is unique. Each offers a collection of materials like no other in the world and a history that is a vital part of the country in which it is situated.

Yet libraries as cultural institutions are often undervalued. Their histories are unappreciated. Their collections are known only to a few.

Now there is a guide to 300 libraries in 71 nations around the world.

Compiled by Colin Steele, Assistant Librarian of the Bodleian Library, Oxford, Major Libraries of the World: A Selective Guide lists and describes many of the world's great libraries in terms of history, collections, facilities, and services. Each entry includes—

- Full name, address, and telephone number.
- A brief historical sketch of the development of the library under consideration.
- A description of special collections and treasures.
- Information on exhibitions, hours, public transport and parking, admission policy, materials for sale, guidebooks, restaurants and snack facilities, facilities for copying, and much more.
- Photographs of almost all the libraries described and occasional photographs of significant items.

A black Book of Hours in Upper Manhattan* and, in Berlin, the greatest Oriental manuscript collection of the Western world.

From the national libraries of Albania and Algeria to the Peking University Library and the library of the Popes in the Vatican, Major Libraries of the World presents a fascinating overview of each library's special collections and treasures: One of the finest collections of Arabic MSS in the world in the Egyptian National Library in Cairo; St. Augustine's De civitate Dei printed in Toulouse in 1488 in the library of the Musée Calvet in Avignon; the Manesse Codex in the library of the University of Heidelberg; the rich collection of incunabula in Trinity College Library, Cambridge; the first printed Russian newspaper in the Lenin Library, Moscow.

Put some libraries on your next trip itinerary.

If you are a scholar doing research, a librarian, a publisher, or if you are simply interested in books, history, or art, Major Libraries of the World will fascinate you with the whole new world of information it provides. Order your copy today.

MAJOR LIBRARIES OF THE WORLD

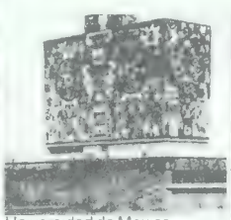
A Selective Guide
Compiled by Colin Steele, Bodleian Library, Oxford
0-85935-012-6, 1976, xix + 479 pp., $18.50

*In the library of the Hispanic Society of America.
In the Staatsbibliothek Preussischer Kulturbesitz

Cornel University, Library.

McLennan Library.

Biblioteka Narodowa, Warsaw.



Universidad de Mexico

Gennadius Library, Athens

Taylor Institution, Oxford

Order from:
R. R. Bowker Order Dept. P.O. Box 1807 • Ann Arbor, Mich. 48106

Please send me___copy(ies) of Major Libraries of the World: A Selective Guide compiled by Colin Steele. (0-85935-012-6, 1976, xix + 479 pp.) at $18.50 per copy.

___My check (money order) for $_____ is enclosed. (Please include applicable sales tax.)

___My Purchase Order No._____ is attached.

___Please charge my___American Express___BankAmericard___Master Charge.

Card No._____ Valid through___/___

Interbank No. (MC only. Above Customer's name.):_____

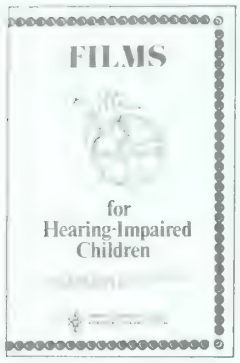
Name _____
(please print)

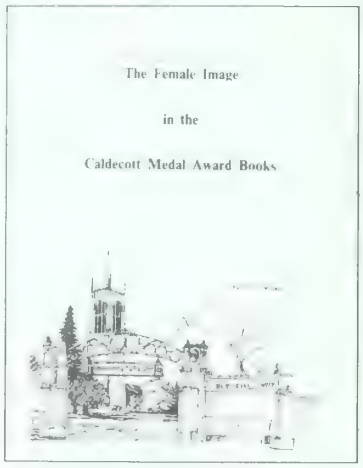
Address _____

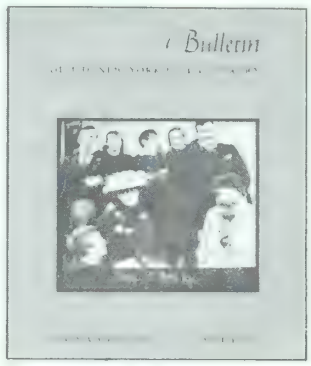
City/State/Zip _____

Satisfaction Guaranteed! Books in salable condition may be returned for any reason within 14 days of receipt. Postage and handling are paid on prepaid and charged orders. Prices are subject to change and slightly higher outside the U.S. and possessions. Outside the Western Hemisphere, order from Bowker, Erasmus House, Epping, Essex, England.

CHECKLIST







Specialized filmography

Over 100 films which do not depend on narration or sound effects for their appeal described in Films for Hearing-Impaired Children. The 16mm films were selected from the collection of the Prince George's County Memorial Library System and do not include Captioned Films for the Deaf. A copy of the filmography is available for 25¢ plus a stamped, self-addressed 8" x 11" envelope from Children's Services at the Library, 6532 Adelphi Rd., Hyattsville, Md. 20782.

Caldecott sexism

Patricia L. Roberts finds the prestigious Caldecott Medal Award books stereotypical in the female images they present. In an abstract of her doctoral dissertation, she reports on her content analysis of the 37 award books, and suggests that teachers and others sharpen their awareness of the sexist attitudes and behaviors emphasized in these "best" books for children. The Female Image in The Caldecott Medal Award Books (46p. $2) may be obtained from Dr. Robert L. Reimer, Director, Bureau of Educational Research and Field Services, School of Education, Univ. of the Pacific, Stockton, Calif. 95211.

Woolf issue

The current interest in Virginia Woolf and in the major archive of her manuscripts in the Berg Collection has prompted the New York Public Library to devote a special issue of its Bulletin to Woolf. Two previously unpublished episodes written for her novel The Years are featured, and critical essays focus on The Years and on Three Guineas, Woolf's feminist, anti-war essay. Illustrations include a photograph of the Stephen family, jacket designs, and a cartoon depicting the dilemma facing male reviewers of Three Guineas: "The struggle . . . to combine respect and loathing." The special issue, No. 2 of Volume 80 of the Bulletin, costs $3.50 (prepaid) from Readex Bks, 101 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10003.

Course directory

Directory of Courses on Indexing in Canada and the United States describes courses offered by library schools, information science programs, government agencies, professional associations, and private organizations. A topical index indicates which courses cover each of twenty discrete topics related to indexing, and a bibliography of textbooks used in the courses is included. Published by the American Society of Indexers, the 37-page directory is available from its compiler, James D. Anderson, Library Science Dept., Queens College, Flushing, N.Y. 11367. Copies cost $3 each postpaid ($2 to ASI members). Payment must be enclosed with orders, and checks should be made payable to American Society of Indexers.

Oral history materials

Columbia University offers a number of publications on oral history. The New York Times Oral History Program, 1977 (free) lists, by subject categories and alphabetically, the 606 memoirs in the Columbia Collection now available on microfiche; and it gives information on other oral history microforms. Other publications include Bibliography on Oral History, compiled by Manfred Waserman, which costs $3; Oral History ($1), a reprint of a 16-page entry in Encyclopedia of Library and Information Science; and Oral History, Columbia Report for 1975 (free). Send your requests to Oral History Research Office, Box 20, Butler Library, Columbia University, New York, N.Y. 10027.

Alternative library publications

A four-page list of alternative library publications will be sent free to anyone who requests it. Write: Sanford Berman, Coordinator, ALA Social Responsibilities Round Table Task Force on Alternative Library Publications, Cataloging Section, Hennepin County Lib., York Ave. S. at 70th, Edina, Minn. 55435.

Library history

Brunswick, Maine, has the distinction of turning down the offer in 1903 of Andrew Carnegie to build a public library for its sea coast community. Instead, it accepted the gift of its native son, Captain John Curtis, who gave $12,000 and named the library after his father, a sea captain. A local historian, Louise R. Helmreich, has now written A History of the Public Library in Brunswick, Maine as a bicentennial contribution. It is available for $2 plus 10¢ postage from the Capt. John Curtis Memorial Lib., Brunswick, Me. 04011.

Visiting scholars directory

The 1976-77 Directory of Visiting Lecturers and Research Scholars gives brief biographical data on some 500 persons from 64 countries who are in the United States under the Mutual Educational Exchange Program (Fulbright-Hays Act). Many will be available to give talks or lectures on their specializations or about the history and culture of their home countries. The exchange participants are listed under their fields and are indexed by country. For a free copy of the 30-page directory, and additional information on the scholars listed, write Council for International Exchange of Scholars, Suite 300, 11 Dupont Circle, Washington, D.C. 20036.

Highway safety news

A free newsletter on highway safety topics focuses on how public affairs and public information managers in both the public and private sectors can use mass communications to promote greater highway safety. Issues contain articles on communications research, campaign techniques, evaluation surveys and materials relating to the 55-miles per hour speed limit, anti-drunk driving countermeasures, and safety belts. Send your requests, on letterhead stationery, for The Highway Safety Communicator to Center for Public Communications, National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, 475 L'Enfant Plaza, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20024.

MAGAZINES

Bill Katz, PROFESSOR, SCHOOL OF LIBRARY SCIENCE, STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK, ALBANY

Canto Libre

1975. Quarterly. $10; individuals, $5. Center for Cuban Studies, 220 E. 23rd St., New York, N.Y. 10010. Illus. Aud: Ga, Sa. (Subject: Latin America. Issue examined: Vol. 2, No. 1)

With articles in both English and Spanish, this offset, illustrated 50-page magazine emphasizes Cuban artists with a nod to other Latin American cultures. Editorially it is liberal with the emphasis on "people's" art, music, folklore, etc. There are film, record, and some book reviews. The editorial viewpoint is that art is part of the political-social movement, not an isolated function of the creative artist. Well written, illustrated with black-and-white reproductions and photographs, the magazine will have appeal where the Cuban viewpoint is desired.

The same publisher has issued since 1974 a bimonthly ($10) Center for Cuban Studies Newsletter, which is a 48-page magazine providing readers with "contemporary Cuban documents and articles in translation." Again, carefully edited and illustrated. The Center was opened in New York in 1972, includes a library, and distributes literature, films, and exhibits on Cuba and Latin America. It is worth stressing that the Center is a nonprofit organization whose sponsors include such people as Noam Chomsky, Francis Ford Coppola, Jules Feiffer, Jack Gelber, etc.—BK

Pages

1976. Annual. $24. Ed: Matthew J. Brucolli. Gale Research Co. Detroit. Illus. Aud: Ga. (Subject: Books and Book Reviews. Issue examined: No. 1, 1976)

Remember the old Colophon and the ambivalent feelings it caused? If not, this quarto book/magazine is on the same order as Horizon and Art in America. And no wonder—the art director is from American Heritage. Dedicated to the nonprofessional bibliophile, the annual runs to 304 pages with 33 entries, including a rediscovered play by Ring Lardner. Most of the material is new, and all is highly professional (James Dickey, Malcolm Cowley, Madeline Stern, Ray Bradbury, etc.). Book collecting fantasies, from auctions and illustrators to publishing and literary comment, are included. My favorite: a photo essay which compares the appearance of poets in 1952 and again in 1973. The format is excellent, with sepia drawings, prints, and photographs on every page. The exception to praise: a ghastly, sturdy, mud brown binding. While it's a coffee table luxury item, the first volume is in the best romantic tradition of A. Edward Newton, Frank Mumby, and Helen Hanff of the book and television play, "84 Charing Cross Road." Two or three pieces are terrible, although the majority will delight those who haunt libraries and bookstores. It is expensive, might have been done for less cost as a paperbound magazine, and the professional bookperson is likely to be blinded by deja vu. Still, for the lovers of reading who neither know nor want to know the meaning of discretion, this could have been three times its present size. Ambivalent? Yes, but even with that it is highly recommended for those mad about book collecting lore. In one word: JOY!—BK

CounterSpy

1975. Quarterly. $10. P.O. Box 647, Ben Franklin Sta., Washington, D.C. 20044. Illus. Aud: Ga, Ac. (Subject: News. Issue examined: Winter 1976)

Best known for identifying over 200 CIA operators, CounterSpy devotes its 65 or so pages to ferreting out what the editors consider undemocratic and secret activities of the CIA, the FBI, and your local police force. (The government blamed CounterSpy for the late 1975 murder of agent Richard Welch in Athens, Greece.) Published by a nonprofit organization, with support from such as Philip Agee, Dave Dellinger, and Victor Marchetti, the magazine concentrates on three to four articles per issue. These are preceded by editorial comments and followed by "CIA Around the World," a lengthy feature which identifies operators and activities of the organization. The accuracy of the information is rarely questioned. Aside from an ongoing war with the authorities, the editors and supporters represent no political viewpoint, draw support from liberals, conservatives, and middle-of-the-roaders. (Incidentally, CounterSpy has no corner on tracking down CIA agents. The English magazine of events and activities, Time-Out, has been known to publish names and pictures of American agents operating in London.) The attitude of readers towards the magazine is summed up by letters to the editor. The first ends with: "I'm proud to know people in the tradition of Lincoln Steffens, Upton Sinclair, and Ida Tarbell." The second begins: "You bastards better clear out of our country." As a major newsmaking magazine in its own right, CounterSpy should be found in almost all libraries. Guaranteed to generate constant readership and blessings and curses on the librarian. (For a lengthy study see Newsweek, January 5, 1976, p. 41.)—BK

Makara

1976. Bimonthly. $7.50. Pacific Women's Graphic Arts Co-operative Assn., 1011 Commercial Dr., Vancouver, B.C., Canada V5L 3X1. Illus. Aud: Ga, Ac. (Subject: Women: Feminist Movement. Issue examined: Vol. 1, No. 3, April/May 1976)

"Fantasy, fiction, and revolution" are the themes of this Canadian 48-page feminist magazine. There are four or five articles on a theme, interviews, poetry, fiction, and excellent graphics. Each number is devoted to a separate area such as the environment, although in total there is enough solid variety to make it perhaps more general than the editors suspect. There is a definite Vancouver focus which in no way detracts from the good to sometimes excellent material. Comparatively, this is literary/political adventure which strikes a good balance between radical and middle-of-the-road feminist thinking. The writing is sometimes uneven, but the thematic material is of enough interest to carry the involved reader over the rough spots. Recommended.—BK

Art Libraries Journal

1976. Quarterly. Membership; nonmembers, appx. $10. Ed: Philip Pace. Preston Polytechnic Library, Corporation St., Preston PR1 2TQ, Lancashire. Illus. adv. Aud: Sa. (Subject: Art. Library Periodicals. Issue examined: Vol. 1, No. 1, Spring 1976)

Smaller in format, more formal in style, Art Libraries Journal is, nevertheless, the English equivalent of the quite excellent American ARLIS/NA Newsletter. It includes four to five articles, as well as book reviews, and it concentrates on English and European art libraries from the "artist as book maker" to holdings of the Central Lettering Record. ARLIS/NA is much more chatty, and in the end more informative. If choice has to be made it would come first, although Art Libraries is a solid runner-up. It is useful for laypersons involved with the arts, including the book. Recommended.—BK

BOOK REVIEW

The Contemporary Scene

Blandford, Linda. Super-Wealth: the secret lives of the oil sheikhs.

Morrow. Mar. 1977. 320p. ISBN 0-688-03135-8. $10. CULTURAL STUDY

The Saudis extended every courtesy to British journalist Blanford in hopes that she would correct their global image as wealth-swamped oil sheiks with harems and a love of wild shopping sprees. This image is not entirely dispelled in Super-Wealth, but the reader is given an inside view of people and places rarely seen by Westerners. Blandford emphasizes the women who have been catapulted into a world of unlimited wealth, and reveals a new generation of people caught between traditional social customs and the ways of the jet set. An excellent journalistic commentary on the society surrounding Middle East oil economics.—Susan S. DiMattia, Commack P.L., N.Y.

Carson, Gerald. The Golden Egg: the personal income tax; where it came from, how it grew.

Houghton. Apr. 1977. 188p. index. ISBN 0-395-25177-X. $10. GOVT/ECON

Carson begins with a fairly sketchy, somewhat dry rendering of the history of income taxation in the U.S. and goes on to describe individual and group attempts at protesting the tax, as well as loopholes and the stories of famous tax evaders. Everyone knows that tax money supports such things as the operation of government, waging of wars, and travel allowances for senators, but Carson lists some of the lesser-known tax-dollar expenditures. (Example: the Pentagon spent $375,000 to study the flight of the frisbee.) An extensive chapter on the IRS, the "biggest business in the U.S.," is enlightening, and excerpts from letters to the agency provide comic interludes. On the whole, the book is ephemeral and tongue-in-cheek, but it will be attractive to casual readers.—Susan S. DiMattia, Comack P.L., N.Y.

Culliney, John L. The Forests of the Sea: life and death on the continental shelf.

Sierra Club, dist. by Scribners. 1977. 290p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-21296. ISBN 0-87156-181-6. $9.95. ENVIRONMENT/ZOOLOGY

Marine biologist Culliney reports on the fascinating hidden world of the continental shelf in prose that far outshines the too frequently dreary attempts to popularize the science of the sea. Unlike the glossy Sierra Club picture books to which we've become accustomed, this account is adorned only by some decorative line drawings. The villain of the piece is human greed. Oil spills threaten to coat and kill not only waterfowl but even more insidiously, the fish larvae which form the base of the food chain. Tankers and commercial trawlers cut trap lines, thus leaving lobsters to die in ghost traps. Overfishing continues though it is ultimately self-defeating. Interspersing clearly written accounts of current research, speculative but not improbable scenarios, and warnings of disaster to the sea environment, this is a valuable contribution. Let's hope its warnings are read and heeded.—Ilse B. Moon, Rutgers Univ. Graduate Sch. of Library Service, New Brunswick, N.J.

Fryer, Donald W. & James Jackson. Indonesia.

Westview Pr. (Nations of the Modern World). Apr. 1977. 302p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-3707. ISBN 0-89158-028-X. $24. POL SCI

This general introduction to Indonesia follows the pattern of previous volumes in the series. After a brief description of the geography and ethnographic complexity of the country and a survey of its history, the book focuses on the current political and economic problems. Separate chapters are devoted to food and population, export agriculture, industrialization, urbanization, and foreign relations. The authors do not skirt controversial issues, and their views, though well-argued, will not meet with universal acceptance among specialists. The book is a formidable and informative introduction for the general reader to Indonesia as a "new state" of the Third World.—Charles R. Bryant, Yale Univ. Lib.

Holmes, Nicholas, ed. Environment and the Industrial Society.

Westview Pr. 1977. 247p. illus. index. LC 76-23406. ISBN 0-89158-641-5. $15. ECON/ENVIRONMENT

This is a timely collection of scholarly essays that uncovers the full impact of industrial pollution upon modern society. A well-expressed line of economic reasoning is applied to aspects of current and future pollution. Holmes's careful organization of materials leads the reader from problems to solutions. Environmental options facing decision-makers in both the private and public sectors are carefully presented and explored. The work ends with an excellent summary of the problems presented and with some well-documented scenarios of alternative futures. Advanced scholars and serious students of society will appreciate this volume.—Kent D. Talbot, Lyndon B. Johnson Sch. of Public Affairs Lib., Austin, Tex.

Metzger, Norman. Energy: the continuing crisis.

Crowell. 1977. 288p. bibliog. index. LC 76-18270. ISBN 0-690-01161-X. $9.95. pap. ISBN 0-690-01487-2. $6.95. ECON/ENVIRONMENT

A wide-ranging study of energy supply and the control of its demand. Metzger stresses the many difficulties to be real-

CONTENTS

The Contemporary Scene	696
Reference	697
Art	698
Biography	700
Business & Economics	703
Education	704
History	705
Home Economics	709
Language Arts	710
Literature	710
Music	712
Philosophy	712
Poetry	713
Political Science & International Affairs	714
Psychology & Psychiatry	715
Religion	717
Science & Technology	718
Social Science	722
Sports & Recreation	724
Theater	726
Fiction	727
Book Review & Professional Reading Author Index	732

Library Journal reviews are indexed in Book Review Index and Book Review Digest.

istically dealt with in the years to come, particularly and most convincingly, the time needed to commercially emplace new technologies. Along the way, he lambastes environmentalists for being selective in their concerns, and reviles conservatives for their nearsighted faith in the market system. He has included some dated or inaccurate information (e.g., the price of uranium), and never expanded in the text on some enticing introductory remarks about entropy. Nevertheless, this provocative book is recommended for public libraries and undergraduate collections.—Frank D. Doble Jr., Onondaga Community Coll. Lib., Syracuse, N.Y.

Quester, George H. Offense and Defense in the International System.

Wiley. (International Relations). 1977. 219p. index. LC 76-28329. ISBN 0-471-70255-2. $10.95; pap. ISBN 0-471-70256-0. $6.95. INT AFFAIRS

Quester argues that advances in offensive and defensive military technology and tactics have been largely responsible for warlike and peaceful periods in international relations. Starting with the ancient world, he endeavors to show that improvements in offensive weaponry have led to aggressive behavior among nations, while advances favorable to defense have fostered peace and stability. Viewing our own nuclear age, in which effective defense is impossible, he argues that the ability of each side to stage a counteroffensive is a strong factor in preventing the outbreak of a nuclear holocaust. Quester further maintains that disarmament schemes, despite the good intentions of their sponsors, will not decrease the likelihood of war, because disarmament would be a destabilizing factor in the international equation. The book is marred by the author's habit of employing the jargon of the professional political scientist, but the insights that are offered are well worth disseminating to a wider public.—Warren E. Gade, Dept. of History, California State Univ., Fresno

Winn, Marie. The Plug-in Drug.

Viking. Mar. 1977. 223p. $7.95. COMM/SOC SCI

This is a compelling discussion of the negative effects on children of telvision viewing. Winn concerns herself here not with programming, but with television watching as an activity. And it is her thesis that that activity is detrimental to the healthy growth of children because it encourages passivity and inhibits, for example, communication among family members. Although she talked with professionals too, Winn bases her work on interviews with families in and around Denver and New York. The frustration of concerned parents echoes throughout the pages, along with the passivity and anxiety of children. The overuse of TV is seen as a force related to alienation, apathy, and dehumanization, and a disease from which it is difficult to cure both children and adults. The book contains some notable case studies of families who gave up television.—Andd Ward, Dept. of Instructional Technology, Rhode Island Coll., Providence

REFERENCE

Annual Bibliography of British and Irish History: publications of 1975.

pub. for the Royal Historical Society by Humanities. 1977. 155p. ed. by G. R. Elton. index. ISBN 0-391-00619-3. $14.75. HIST/BIBLIOG

Research scholars and university librarians interested in British studies and history should find this new series extremely useful. Under the general editorship of G. R. Elton, this first bibliography covers books, monographs, scholarly periodical articles, and collected essays published in 1975. The editors caution that speed of production, not exhaustive coverage, has been their first priority. Still, the scope of the work (Roman period to 20th Century) and the numerous chronological and topical subdivisions leave little doubt about the editors' attention to comprehensiveness. This reference work is well organized and quite easy to use. The only comparable, up-to-date bibliography of articles in British history is contained in the American Historical Association's Recently Published Articles, which is equally comprehensive but more cumbersome to use. For academic and large public libraries that simply need a good, short bibliography of books on the post-Tudor period, G. R. Elton's Modern Historians on British History, 1485–1969 (LJ 5/1/71) is useful. The Annual Bibliography, in turn, is highly recommended for university libraries.—Donald J. Murphy, Dept. of History, Chabot College, Livermore, Calif.

Beale, Walter H. Old and Middle English Poetry to 1500: a guide to information sources.

Gale. (American Literature, English Literature, & World Literatures in English). 1976. 454p. index. LC 74-11538. ISBN 0-8103-1247-6. $18. LIT/BIBLIOG

This is among the first of a series designed to cover the whole range of English poetry and prose up to 1950. The project is an ambitious one; and if the present volume on Old and Middle English poetry is representative, it may have the limitations of such ambition: too much is covered, dealt with too capriciously, and printed off too soon. This bibliography aims to be critical, selective, representative, and helpful for the undergraduate, the graduate, the teacher, the scholar, and the librarian alike. For some of the above, it can be a "useful tool," as the editor claims. Others may prefer a more professional instrument. There are no inclusive dates set. Occasionally criticism as late as 1973 is listed; more often it dates back 20 or 30 years. The scholar likes a comprehensive bibliography. The teacher often favors the most recent, and the graduate and undergraduate alike are apt to be put off any interest in the Anglo-Saxon scop by reading a book printed in 1903. In short, this bibliography is not so deep as a well of information nor so open as a door to learning, but it will serve if nothing else is handy. But better and often cheaper guides are readily available—such as William Matthews' bibliography in the AHM "Goldentree" series, the revision of John E. Wells's Manual, Fred C. Robinson's Old English bibliography, and Donald K. Fry's for Beowulf.—Hugh T. Keenan, Dept. of English, Georgia State Univ.

Caplan, H. H. The Classified Directory of Artists Signatures, Symbols & Monograms.

Gale. 1976. 738p. illus. ISBN 0-8103-0985-8. $75. ART/REF

A well-balanced, accurate, and carefully documented single-volume dictionary of facsimiles of artists' signatures, monograms and symbols is a much needed elementary reference tool. Unfortunately, this volume fulfills none of these requirements. The signatures are arranged alphabetically according to the masters' surnames. In addition to the copies of the signatures there are given the artists' first names, places of birth, birth and death dates, genres, and places of exhibition. These brief citations are encumbered with erroneous, outdated, and often valueless data. Most important, however, the signatures themselves seem generally derived not from an investigation of objects but reproduced from various well-known but unacknowledged secondary sources. Thus, many of the specimens appear to be imitations of those earlier reproductions. An inordinate amount of space is given over to tertiary British moderns, while the greats of both Europe and America are severely slight-

BAKERSFIELD · CHICO · DOMINGUEZ HILLS · FRESNO · FULLERTON
HAYWARD · HUMBOLDT · LONG BEACH · LOS ANGELES · NORTHRIDGE
POMONA · SACRAMENTO · SAN BERNARDINO
SAN DIEGO · SAN FRANCISCO · SAN JOSE
SAN LUIS OBISPO · SONOMA · STANISLAUS

THE CALIFORNIA STATE UNIVERSITY AND COLLEGES'

UNION LIST OF PERIODICALS AND SERIALS

7th Edition

WILL SOON BE RELEASED

The California State University and Colleges (CSUC) Union List of Periodicals and Serials (ULPS) is published semi-annually. A must for interlibrary loan and reference, the ULPS is in its 7th edition. This soft cover photocomposed union list was previously only available to CSUC libraries. On a wider scale, resource sharing will be satisfied by its availability to academic and public libraries outside California. Within the Union List of Periodicals and Serials is an alphabetical listing of the titles and title references for over 24,000 magazines published worldwide. Of vital importance to professor, researcher, and student is the listing of those CSUC libraries at which each title can be found and brief information concerning the dates of publication for the volumes and issues held by those libraries.

PRICE: $7.00

ORDER YOUR COPIES NOW:
FROM THE CHANCELLOR'S OFFICE
DOCUMENTS DIVISION
400 GOLDEN SHORE
LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA 90802

• • •

ed. Though this work may have some value to art librarians seeking a quick answer to difficult queries, their responses will need to be tempered with caution and recourse to traditional sources.—Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, New York

Haliburton, Gordon. Historical Dictionary of Lesotho.

1977. 223p. LC 76-49550. ISBN 0-8108-0993-1.

Imperato, Pascal James. Historical Dictionary of Mali.

Mar. 1977. 204p. illus. LC 76-55775. ISBN 0-8108-1005-0.

ea. vol: Scarecrow. (African Historical Dictionaries.) $10 HIST/REF

Lesotho and Mali are well served by these modestly produced but quite adequate works. Following the format of earlier dictionaries in the series, each book consists of a short chronology of significant events, maps, an introductory survey, the dictionary, and finally a general bibliography on the country. Haliburton has prepared an introductory essay that is a strictly historical survey of Lesotho, emphasizing the 19th and 20th centuries. Imperato adopts a more general approach in his essay, which is in the format of an encyclopedic entry on Mali. The dictionaries proper contain short paragraphs on persons, ethnic groups, historical events, political organizations, geographical features, anthropological terms, and even recent political occurrences. Biographees include not only Africans but colonial administrators, missionaries, and soldiers. The rendering of African names, often confusing to Westerners, is not clarified in either work by consistency or cross references. Why some names are entered under the first name, presumably in line with African usage, or why others appear according to Western custom under surname, remains unclear. Dates of persons are sometimes given but other times omitted even when they are obviously known. And this detracts from one of the most useful aspects of these dictionaries—their provision of biographical information. There are a few editorial slip-ups (compare, for example, "lithoko" and "praise poems" in the Lesotho dictionary). In both books the bibliographies are probably as useful as the dictionaries themselves, as they are not restricted to history, but rather provide a representative selection of the whole range of literature on the two countries. Although most literature on Mali is in French, English-language materials have been selected where possible and there is a particularly instructive bibliographic essay of sources on Mali. These dictionaries will be of special interest for collections on African history, politics, and colonialism.—Janet Stanley, Inst. for Scientific Information, Philadelphia

Iversen, Nick. Record Makers and Record Breakers.

Jonathan David. 1976. 240p. index. LC 76-10227. ISBN 0-8246-0208-0. $9.95. BIOG/REF

This book covers records in the area of sports, the arts, daily life, business, politics, religion, the military, science, etc. It is limited in coverage and sometimes duplicates records given in The Guinness Book of World Records. Its strength lies in the paragraphs given about each record holder. Unfortunately, finding the records is difficult. The sole index is listed by the record holder's name. Entries under the broad subdivisions of the book are also listed alphabetically by name, with the name of the event given after. A book such as this has limited use in ready reference. It is a last resort, after standard reference tools, for finding biographical information about record holders.—Larry A. Miller, Moraine Valley Coll. Lib., Palos Hills, Ill.

Radwin, George E. & Anthony D'Attilio. Murex Shells of the World: an illustrated guide to the muricidae.

Stanford Univ. Pr. 1976. 284p. color photogs. by David K. Mulliner. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-7485. ISBN 0-8047-0897-5. $35. ZOOLOGY/REF

This comprehensive work on the Muricidae, the first to appear since George W. Tryon and Henry A. Pilsbry's Manual of Conchology (1879–1927), will be welcomed by both amateur collectors and professional malacologists. The book provides detailed information on 390 species of Muricidae, with numerous photographs and wash drawings of specimens. The authors have made some changes in the traditional classification of the shells, and they include line drawings of certain structural features (radular dentitions, protoconchs, opercula, and intritacalx) to explain the reasons for these changes. Other valuable features of the book include an appendix describing 16 new species, an illustrated glossary, and a review of the literature on classification, biology, and life history of the Muricidae. The high price is offset by the book's clarity, scholarship, and thoroughness. Recommended for scientific collections and college libraries.—Rosalie H. Lipsett, New York

The Rand McNally Atlas of the Body and Mind.

Rand McNally. 1976. 208p. illus., mainly color. index. LC 75-41710. ISBN 0-528-83040-6. $30. SCI/REF

This is an exciting account of man's knowledge of himself. More than 400 color photographs and illustrations portray the complexity and beauty of the human machine. The 11 sections cover the evolution of man, body framework, control systems, the senses, the brain, intellect, reproduction, etc. The text and glossary are refreshingly clear. This enthralling voyage of interaction between body and mind is highly recommended.—James E. Bobick, Temple Univ. Libs., Philadelphia

Women and Literature: an annotated bibliography of women writers. 3d ed.

Women & Literature Collective, Box 441, Cambridge, Mass. 02138. 1976. 212p. illus. index. LC 76-47335. ISBN 0-915052-02-4. pap. $3.50. LIT/BIBLIOG

This is that rare "enjoyable" bibliography—one that is comprehensive, accurate, and whose subject strikes a responsive chord. This third edition is the labor of a women's collective that is in its own third manifestation. The second edition was published by the Sense and Sensibility Collective in 1973 and contained 399 items arranged by author. Expanded to twice the size, this version is more usefully arranged by country, with author and subject indexes. It, too, focuses on fictional writings, but includes not only "heavy" feminist fiction, but also such mystery novels as Dorothy Sayers's Gaudy Night. The biographical notes and the background material on individual titles are smooth and professional, eliminating much of the high-school tone and colloquialism of the earlier edition. Definitely a useful purchase.—Sheila Pepper, McMaster Univ. Lib., Hamilton, Ontario, Canada

ART

Archer, W. G. Visions of Courtly India: the Archer Collection of Pahari miniatures.

Internat. Exhibitions Fdn., dist by Sotheby Parke-Bernet, 81 Adams Dr., Totowa, N.J. 07512. 1976. 156p. illus., some color. bibliog. LC 76-18030. ISBN 0-85667-032-4. $20. ART

Except for W. G. Archer's important two-volume Indian Paintings from the Punjab Hills (Sotheby Parke-Bernet, 1973) and a few other publications, mostly journal articles, the literature on the painting of the Hill States of North India is quite limited as is the public's awareness of its singular beauty. This latest addition to Archer's prolific list of publications is a catalog for the traveling exhibit sponsored by the International Exhibitions Foundation. The 80 handsome plates, 12 of which are in color, are arranged by states and Archer's succinct but informative comparative texts facing each miniature point out the sometimes subtle stylistic similarities and in other cases the unique qualities of each region. Several of these miniatures selected from the vast Archer collection have not been previously published.—Jacqueline Sisson, Ohio State Univ. Libs., Columbus

Baro, Gene. 30 Years of American Printmaking: including the 20th National Print Exhibition.

Brooklyn Museum, dist. by Universe Bks. 1976. 160p. illus., some color. index. LC 76-17486. ISBN 0-87663-249-5. $15; pap. ISBN 0-87273-058-1. $8.95. GRAPHIC ARTS

After a brief history of printmaking, both in the East and West, from the 15th Century to the present, Baro describes the development of the various graphic techniques, listing outstanding graphic artists and reviewing the pre-20th-Century functions of printmaking. Considering recent American printmaking, he surveys its significant artists, innovations (especially in terms of lithography and serigraphy), and artistic movements (emphasizing Abstract Expressionism and pop art). The book's major portion consists of an illustrated catalog of every work exhibited in the Brooklyn Museum's 20th National Print Exhibition, giving a short description of each artist's graphic history as well as technical data. Regrettably, most illustrations are in black and white. Reproducing a number of major graphics in the exhibition in color might have been preferable to illustrating every print. Baro's superb explanatory text would have easily compensated for those works not illustrated.—Paul Grootkerk, Dept. of Fine Arts, Univ. of New Orleans

Eisler, Colin. Paintings from the Samuel H. Kress Collection: European schools excluding Italian.

Phaidon, dist. by Abner Schram. Mar. 1977. 639p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. $37.50. REF/ART

Although most significantly represented in the National Gallery of Art, Washington, D.C., important elements of the pictorial treasures accumulated by the Kress Collection are found in galleries across the country. This excellently produced catalog documents all of the Foundation's 320 non-Italian paintings. The works span the crucial period between c. 1400 and c. 1850 and are organized according to national schools. Individual artists are arrayed chronologically under these national headings. Useful biographical sketches precede the analysis of the paintings. The richly detailed discussions of the works include an indication of physical condition; a description and analysis of iconographic content: a summary of scholarly opinion with the author's perceptive additions; provenance; exhibition history; and references. The excellent and comprehensive photographic documentation is supplemented by the inclusion of reconstructive diagrams, related drawings, prints, and paintings. There are several useful indexes. Scholars may lament the delay between the completion of the manuscript in 1972 and its final publication, but considering both the importance of the Kress holdings and the exemplary quality of the research of this reasonably priced tome it should become a basic reference tool for art and museum libraries.—Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, New York

Architecture

Boston Society of Architects. Architecture Boston.

Barre, dist. by Crown. 1976. 192p. intro. by Walter Muir Whitehill. photogs. maps. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-517-52501-1. $12.95; pap. ISBN 0-517-52502-X. $5.95. ARCHITECTURE

Rather than attempt an overall history of Boston's architectural development, the authors have wisely divided the metropolitan area into nine broad areas, with existing landmark buildings illustrated and discussed in the context of their particular neighborhoods. Emphasis is placed on the contemporary Boston of Gropius, Pei, Rudolph, Sert, and others and on the many 19th-Century buildings that have been successfully recycled. It is unfortunate that largely anonymous buildings, such as the row houses lining Commonwealth Avenue and the ubiquitous "triple deckers" of Cambridge and elsewhere, an equally important part of Boston's architectural heritage, are barely mentioned. More than an architectural guidebook, Architecture Boston, with its excellent introduction by Whitehill, handsome graphics, and useful maps, shows the impact of contemporary design upon a city already rich in architectural resources.—H. Ward Jandl, National Register of Historic Places, Washington, D.C.

Decorative Arts & Crafts

Cole, Christopher. Make Your Own Dolls' House: a practical guide showing how to make the building of your choice in miniature.

Van Nostrand Reinhold. 1976. 76p. illus., some color. LC 76-14481. ISBN 0-442-21618-1. $8.95. CRAFTS

A hassle-free, warm-hearted workbook which takes the mystique out of building a dollhouse of museum quality. Neophytes easily will be able to work from plans for the model house (London's Charles Dickens house) and with a little practice set off on an independent venture. Cole presupposes no knowledge of mechanical skills and possession of few tools; simple techniques are supported with plenty of illustrations, diagrams, and plans.—Gail Jacobson Yaffo, formerly with Columbia-Greene Community Coll. Lib., Hudson, N.Y.

Goldemberg, Rose Leiman. Antique Jewelry: a practical & passionate guide.

Crown. 1976. 148p. photogs. by Edward R. Height Jr. illus. by Minda Novek & Lee Schiller. bibliog. index. LC 76-16088. ISBN 0-517-52653-0. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-517-52654-9. $5.95. DEC ARTS Goldemberg writes chiefly about pieces that are from 50 to 100 years old, but she does refer to some made earlier; she is concerned with pieces which may be found in shops, not with royal jewels or those demanding great wealth. Her rules for buying are sound and emphasize the consideration of quality and pieces in perfect condition. A particularly practical chapter is given to the care of jewels and jewelry (which are far more fragile than most people recognize). Public libraries will wish to consider.—Paul von Khrum, formerly with New York Univ. Libs.

Johnson, Mary Elizabeth. Prize Country Quilts: designs, patterns, projects.

Oxmoor House. Mar. 1977. color illus. photogs. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-8487-0444-4. $12.95. CRAFTS

The main feature of this book on prize-winning quilts, besides the variety of designs pictured, is that it is a personal book. While it contains the standard instructions for appliquéing and quilting one would expect to find in a craft book, the stories by the quiltmakers themselves (contestants in the second Progressive Farmer quilt block contest) probably do more to stimulate creative thinking than do instructions in design. The abundant color photos also show that familiar patterns can be put together in endless new ways and that drawings "not necessarily perfect by art school standards" have a place in design. Recommended highly.—Lois Horowitz, Univ. of California Lib., San Diego

"Important background material"* for modern art shelves

MEMOIR OF AN ART GALLERY

By JULIEN LEVY

"Gallery owner and supporter of 20th-century art, Levy played a significant role in introducing contemporary artists to the U.S. and...as a champion of the surrealist movement. His narrative abounds with the names of the century's greatest artistic and literary figures, as he reminisces about his celebrated days at the vortex of a cultural whirlpool."—The Booklist. "The anecdotes are entertaining....The book is certainly difficult to put down once started."—Library Journal.* Illustrations. Index.
SBN: 399-11847-0. $8.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

24 pages, 10 full color illustrations, full-sized patterns — 8½" x 11" book

A concise manual on the art of combining Japanese silk flower making (no sizing required) with artistic arrangements of the blossoms in the style of IKEBANA.

Each step is explained in detail allowing the handcratter to improvise their own color combinations and have satisfactory results. All arrangements are illustrated in full color. ISBN 0-918126-04-5

$1.50 Retail

Write for our attractive Dealer discounts.

HUNTER PUBLISHING CO.
P.O. Box 9533
Phoenix, AZ 85068
Ph. (602) 944-1022

Skurka, Norma. The New York Times Book of Interior Design and Decoration.

Quadrangle, dist. by Harper. 1976. 320p. photogs., mainly color. bibliog. index. LC 76-9690. ISBN 0-8129-0653-5. $25. INTERIOR DEC

Skurka, home editor of the New York Times magazine, gives us a professional's guide through many of the most distinguished interiors in today's world. The lavish color illustrations include examples of the best work of outstanding designers. The extensive text covers the history of furniture, color dynamics, and the elusive question of style. An interesting arrangement shows many of the homes as a whole, enabling the reader to see how the rooms relate to each other. Skurka's philosophy of decorating is the same one dominant in the field today—a tolerance for accepting unusual combinations of periods, motifs, and colors, and always stressing that the greatest ingredient a room possesses is the reflection of the owner's individual taste and imagination. Glossary of decorative terms and index. Expensive but one of the best in this category.—Mary Blackwell, Detroit P.L.

Photography

Exposure: ten photographers' work.

Creative Artists Public Service Program, dist. by Light Impressions. 1976. 132p. photogs. LC 76-15075. $11.95; pap. $7.95. PHOTOG

CAPS is a nonprofit program of the New York State Council on the Arts that awards artistic grants and also seeks an audience for the work created. Exposure has already been distributed gratis to 250 New York State libraries. There are ten images from each photographer, representing quite divergent styles: personal, psychological works (Naomi Bushman, Charles Harbutt); environmental portraiture (Anthony Barboza, James Carroll, Rene Gelpi); quirky social commentary (Charles Gatewood); photojournalism (Mark Godfrey). The rest of the contributors may be loosely described as social documentarians. The volume is uneven and cursory—more works from fewer photographers would have been better—but there are many strong images nonetheless. Better reproduction would have helped, too. Still, an interesting batch that needn't be limited to New York, good for extensive photography collections.—Thomas D. Bedell, Editor, "Valley Stream MAILeader," N.Y.

Hill, David Octavius & Robert Adamson. An Early Victorian Album: the photographic masterpieces (1843-1847) of David Octavius Hill and Robert Adamson.

Knopf. 1977. 372p. ed. & intro. by Colin Ford. essay by Roy Strong. photogs. index. LC 74-21315. ISBN 0-394-49733-3. $35. PHOTOG

The two Scotsmen, Hill and Adamson, were among the earliest photographers in the world, working only three years after the announcement of photography and ceasing a decade later. Their original object was to provide photographs to which a painter might refer, but with their beautiful control of the calotype process they produced their own art form with their portraits of Scottish clergy, artists, and intellectuals of the day. The text traces the history of their calotypes from their inception to their place today in the National Portrait Gallery in London, and provides good biographies and backgrounds of both men. The more than 250 reproductions are almost entirely in the original size and afford a fascinating glimpse into the posed Victorian world. Important for special collections.—Robert Enequist, Coll. of Insurance Lib., New York

Novotny, Ann. Alice's World: the life and photography of an American original: Alice Austen, 1866-1952.

Chatham, dist. by Dutton. 1976. 224p. pref. by Oliver Jensen. LC 76-18489. ISBN 0-85699-128-7. $22.50. PHOTOG

Born on Staten Island, New York, Alice Austen was a gifted amateur photographer whose work has only recently been accorded the recognition it deserves. Her photography offers one of the most important visual documentations of the lifestyle of upper-class New York families in the Victorian period. At other times, most notably in her series on New York street waifs, her work is in the best tradition of Lewis Hine and Jacob Riis. In Alice's World we are given both the story of her life and a generous sample of the photographs that were her life's work. The biographical narrative is lively and well written, although the source of quotations in the text is not made clear. One occasionally wonders why a poorly composed or technically imperfect photo has been chosen for inclusion, but this is, at best, a minor criticism of an important addition to the photo-history literature.—William E. Tydeman, Mars Hill Coll. Memorial Lib., Mars Hill, N.C.

BIOGRAPHY

Blaise, Clark & Bharati Mukherjee. Days and Nights in Calcutta.

Doubleday. 1977. 300p. LC 75-40711. ISBN 0-385-02895-4. $8.95. CULTURAL STUDY/PER NAR

This is the diary of a year spent in India by a Canadian husband—Blaise—and his Indian wife—Mukherjee. Both are sharp observers, have well-developed senses of humor, and write well. The book would serve as a good introduction to India for the first-time tourist—it's rather like visiting the continent with a couple of intelligent, liberal, academic friends. But that is all it is. There is a troubling lack of analysis behind most of what is said. Blaise's section treats the entire Indian phenomenon with an irony that barely hides his assumption of Western superiority. And the motive of Mukherjee's section seems to be to defend India from the cold eye cast on it by her Occidental spouse. Blaise's guilty liberalism makes him retract his mostly legitimate gripes; Mukherjee's yearning for authenticity causes her to romanticize the Indian reality.—Shernaz Mehta Mollinger, New School for Social Research, New York

Blake, N. F. Caxton: England's first publisher.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1976. 220p. illus. index. LC 76-2874. ISBN 0-06-490450-4. $22.50. PUBLISHING/BIOG

One of several recent books published during the 1976 quincentenary of Caxton's first printing in England. It is "meant to complement" Blake's Caxton and His World (LJ 4/15/70), an exposition of Caxton's literary abilities. Both books describe him as a man concerned more with publishing than with printing. Blake stresses the mediocrity of the printing; but he is not wholly convincing when well-known printing practices are treated as unusual activities: for example, the process of casting-off (a term he does not seem to know). This is not to diminish the importance of his questions, but he is more successful in portraying Caxton's relationships with his patrons and activities as a merchant-publisher. This is a deserving book, but the first choice for those on limited budgets should be George Painter's biography (LJ 3/1/77).—Paul S. Koda, Univ. of North Carolina Lib., Chapel Hill

Breslau, Alan Jeffry. The Time of My Death.

Dutton. Mar. 1977. 309p. LC 76-18699. ISBN 0-525-21992-7. $9.95. PER NAR

This miraculous story of life and the will to live tells of the persons aboard a Mohawk Airlines flight which crashed on takeoff during an intense summer thunderstorm in Rochester, New York. Breslau's narrative of the circumstances surrounding the 1963 accident and the ensuing investigation is revealing and offers insight into the operations of the airlines and the FAA. The author also relates his own survival epic, in gruesome detail, as he underwent 46 burn and restorative operations.—William A. McIntyre, Laconia State Sch. Lib., N.H.

Hardy, Alan. Queen Victoria Was Amused.

Taplinger. Mar. 1977. 214p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-55035. ISBN 0-8008-6566-9. $9.50. BIOG

Queen Victoria may, in her old age, have squelched a dubious joke with a royal "We are not amused," but, as her diary records, she was "VERY AMUSED" by dancing, horse-races, opera, Macready in King John, and even the demonstrations accompanying a lecture on physics. Hardy has unearthed from letters, journals, and memoirs an extensive record of the Queen's pleasures. His biography of the lighter side of Victoria's life is not intended to replace standard historical studies, but it calls attention to a continuous thread in her character. One of the pleasures of becoming monarch at 18 was that it allowed her to dance until sun-up at Palace festivities, and she was still dancing in her sixties at gillies' balls in Scotland. The Queen was not amused by either bishops or bores, and disliked having the latter in her Cabinet. Sophisticates criticized her partly because simple pleasures amused her so much, and the puritanical disliked her card-playing and her lax observance of Sundays. The book affords a new and pleasant portrait, backed unobtrusively by thorough scholarship.—Sally Mitchell, Milwaukee, Wis.

Heymanns, Betty. The Bittersweet Triumph.

Doubleday. 1977. 191p. LC 76-22997. ISBN 0-385-12456-2. $5.95. PER NAR

Heymanns' courage and frankness in sharing her experiences and feelings as she struggled to handle the limitations imposed on her by cerebral palsy are evident in her straightforward, basically unsentimental book. She learned to walk by the age of seven by working with ropes strung across her parents' living room despite predictions that she would never walk. Later she became a professional photographer after finding solutions for such difficulties as her inability to hold the camera steady in her hands. While some people accepted her readily as a fellow human with certain physical limitations (e.g., a waitress cut a hamburger on a bun in two before serving her), others reacted to her as if she were mentally retarded and incapable of understanding them. But Heymanns, determined to be "normal," kept on working to overcome her handicap. She eventually came to the realization that life changes constantly and that "normal" is only a relative term.—Marion Amdursky, Albion, Mich.

Hyman, Sidney. Marriner S. Eccles: private entrepreneur and public servant.

Graduate Sch. of Business, Stanford Univ., dist. by Univ. of Chicago Pr. 1977. 456p. illus. index. LC 76-46152. $15. BUS/BIOG

Hyman covers several histories in this biography of the prominent banker and public official. First is that of the Eccles family—its humble beginnings in Scotland, its Mormon conversion and move to Utah, and the successes of two generations of its hard-working entrepreneurs, David Eccles and his son, Marriner. We then have an insider's view of the economic issues of the New Deal years, and yet another of the history of banking during the turbulent years of the late 1920's and the 17 years Eccles spent in Washington as governor of the Federal Reserve System. Expanding on Eccles' well-received and now out of print memoir, Beckoning Frontiers (Knopf, 1951), Hyman (who was its editor) now gives Eccles' point of view more depth with comments and analyses by contemporaries and others, gathered from letters, interviews, and Eccles' own papers. The scope is also expanded to cover Eccles' later years as a private citizen, when he was still outspoken and involved on behalf of Planned Parenthood and the antiwar movement. Recommended for academic libraries, as well as public libraries with serious readers of banking and economic history.—Eloisa G. Yeargain, UCLA Graduate Sch. of Management Lib.

Josefsberg, Milt. The Jack Benny Show: the life and times of an American entertainer.

Arlington House. Apr. 1977. 484p. photogs. index. LC 76-56172. $12.95. COMM/BIOG

Josefsberg was one of the four writers who provided Jack Benny with material during his peak years (1943–1955). This biography of Benny concentrates on those years, but the rest of Benny's life receives some coverage also. The work is not definitive—minor mistakes have crept in, and Josefsberg has admittedly omitted anything from his book which "could even in the most remote manner be a [derogatory] reflection on Jack's reputation." Comparing this book with Irving Fein's Jack Benny (LJ 12/15/75), one finds that Josefsberg has included many of the same anecdotes, slightly differing in detail and written a little better; however, Fein concentrated on Benny's later years, and provided a more critical (and probably more realistic) view of Benny's personal life.—John Smothers, Monmouth County Lib. System, Freehold, N.J.

Koss, Stephen. Asquith.

St. Martin's. (British Political Biography). 1976. 310p. bibliog. index. LC 76-20200. $12.95. BIOG

The reputation of Asquith, Britain's last Liberal Party Prime Minister (1908-1916), has fluctuated from adulation by sentimentalists who idealize pre-1914 British politics and society to recent scholarly assessments that portray him as a pathetic political opportunist. Koss succeeds here in a more balanced, yet critical, view of Asquith's career. As Koss concludes, Asquith is interesting because he embodied the complexity, the virtues, and the more obvious failings of his generation of British leaders. He argues that Asquith deserves more credit for the impressive Liberal social reforms of 1906-1914 than he has received. But he also reveals Asquith's crucial limitations: temporizing, laziness, and an inordinate attraction to the splendid social life of the country-house set. With his old Liberal principles and lethargic ways, Asquith almost inevitably proved irrelevant to the sustained crisis of World War I, and was replaced by a Tory-dominated coalition headed by the renegade Lloyd George. Koss' superb study, lively, well-written, and scholarly, is a model of concise political biography. Highly recommended for university and large public library collections.—Donald J. Murphy, Dept. of History, Chabot Coll., Livermore, Calif.

Lašić-Vasojević, Milija M. Enemies on All Sides: the fall of Yugoslavia.

North American Internat., Box 28278, Central Station, Washington, D.C. 20005. 1976. 290p. illus. by Glenn L. Reitze. intro. by Milorad M. Drachkovitch. index. LC 76-41596. ISBN 0-88265-010-6. $10. HIST/MEMOIR

This account of the author's personal experiences and his observations on the role and fate of the Serbian people in World War II centers on the civil war in Montenegro, which began with Yugoslavia's fall to Hitler in 1941 and in which the author fought with nationalist forces. Writing from a staunch anticommunist point of view, the author sees the partisans under Tito as a force as evil and destructive of the Serbian people as the German Nazis or the Croatian Ustasi. Without according any recognition to the strategic considerations of the Allies, he blames the "totally absorbing"

—Saturday Review

WOODBROOK
David Thomson

"The book operates at various levels: one a picture of country life, full of local character, custom, and color; one the bittersweet love story of the young tutor and his eldest pupil; one the starkly brutal history of Ireland since the building of Woodbrook in the early 17th Century . . . The book illuminates, on a very human level, and from a unique vantage point, the scope and depth of Ireland's troubles."—Library Journal

"Woodbrook is several kinds of a love story, all of them enchanting."—Brendan Gill

"Combines artistic skill and wisdom . . . a masterpiece of historical writing. The book has moved me deeply and I greatly admire it."—A.J.P. Taylor

"Brilliantly original mix of love story, memoir, and history."—Brian Moore

"Reads like a novel . . . is a mix of autobiography, travel, and history . . . totally absorbing."—William Cole, Saturday Review

314 pages $10.00 LC75-34588
0-87663-255-8
UNIVERSE BOOKS
381 Park Ave. So., N.Y. 10016

An engrossing account of the life and loves of Natalie Barney

The Amazon of Letters
By George Wickes

From Dayton, Ohio, to the glittering salons of turn-of-the-century Paris—the fascinating story of the American millionairess who became the most notorious lesbian of the 20th century. "The book succeeds as high gossip, and it also works as a portrait of a woman rich and tough-minded enough to establish her own lifestyle and make the world swallow it."—Kirkus Reviews. Illus. with rare photos of her lovers, her friends, her Paris. SBN: 399-11864-0.
$10.00

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

Western Allies, particularly the British, for having surrendered Yugoslavia to the communists. Burdened with numerous names and places, the memoir adds to our knowledge of a very complex phase of Yugoslav history. The story would have been more effective, however, had it been rendered in better English.—Radmila Milentijevic, Dept. of History, C.C.N.Y.

Lebeaux, Richard. Young Man Thoreau.

Univ. of Massachusetts Pr. May 1977. 256p. bibliog. LC 76-45048. ISBN 0-87023-231-2. $12.50. LIT/BIOG

Applying the psychoanalytic-sociological theory of Erik Erikson, Lebeaux has written a detailed analysis of Thoreau's prolonged "identity crisis." Thoreau, the Thoreau family, and 19th-Century New England seem to be ready-made for Eriksonian analysis, and Lebeaux applies each of Erikson's eight stages of "life crisis" to Thoreau's life in a demonstration that Thoreau "continued to struggle throughout his life with issues first encountered in earlier developmental stages." Given Thoreau's importance as the spokesman for many who find in his doctrines an alternative to "lives of quiet desperation" and his even greater reputation as the source of "passive resistance," Lebeaux's thesis that Thoreau's works are founded upon an extended "identity crisis" of an oedipal nature is certain to arouse considerable controversy, especially since Lebeaux has built his case with care. Recommended.—Walter Waring, Dept. of English, Kalamazoo Coll., Mich.

Litvag, Irving. The Master of Sunnybank: a biography of Albert Payson Terhune.

Harper. Mar. 1977. 320p. illus. index. ISBN 0-06-126345-1. $10.95. LIT/BIOG

An admirer's look at the creator of Lad, Wolf, Bruce and countless other canine heroes. Litvag's book is a light yet detailed biography of Terhune and his family, including the most famous of his dogs. It's based on Terhune's papers and on interviews with his acquaintances. Terhune is portrayed as a likeable, outspoken bear of a man with two overriding drives: to make money from his writing and to live undisturbed on his New Jersey estate. Terhune's success as a writer of dog stories is put in the context of his private life and entire career, with some mention of the popular and critical reception of his most well-known tales. An awkward, if predictable, sentimentality pervades the book as Litvag, disguised as "the Visitor," bares his feelings on seeing the deserted and decayed Sunnybank and, yes, the graves of Lad and his master. Since one doesn't really expect a deep biography of the man, this one will do as a nice addition to any Terhune collection.—Mary George, Univ. of Michigan Lib., Ann Arbor

Mee, Charles L., Jr. A Visit to Haldeman and Other States of Mind.

Evans, dist. by Lippincott. Mar. 1977. 216p. ISBN 0-87131-229-8. $8.95. PER NAR

Another victim of the post-Vietnam/Watergate malaise has decided to exorcise it all and put his dislocation down on paper. The reader will find nothing new here: Mee's mixed feelings about a middle-class Catholic upbringing, alienation from his editorship of Horizon magazine, his sense of betrayal by both Democratic and Republican administrations, his two disintegrated marriages, and his unsatisfying fling in the Haight-Ashbury scene of the mid-1960's. For all we learn of Haldeman, the title might as well read "A Visit to Other States of Mind," because he appears only briefly as a supporting character in the opening and concluding sections of the book. Most all of us have experienced some sense of being cast adrift in the last two decades. Fortunately, most of us seem to be able to carry on without recourse to this type of public therapy.—Robin J. Masters, Placentia Lib. District, Calif.

Nies, Judith. Seven Women: portraits from the American radical tradition.

Viking. Apr. 1977. 192p. bibliog. index. $8.95. HIST/BIOG

The women Nies portrays are Sarah Grimke, Harriet Tubman, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Mother Jones, Charlotte Perkins Gilman, Anna Louise Strong, and Dorothy Day. This selection was apparently made in an attempt to illuminate a variety of aspects of the American experience and to recreate for today's women the radical tradition that is part of their heritage. A sketch of each woman's career covers her personal life and relates her to the radical movements she took part in. Most of the sketches also illustrate the author's point that, unlike the male radical, the female activist must usually sacrifice a normal family life. The accounts are written in a spirit of unquestioning sympathy with the subjects and take little account of possible criticism. (The section on Dorothy Day is a partial exception.) This is a very well written and highly enjoyable book for the general reader and young adults as well.—Nancy C. Cridland, Indiana Univ. Libs., Bloomington

Percy, Thomas & William Shenstone. The Correspondence of Thomas Percy & William Shenstone.

Yale Univ. Pr. (Percy Letters). Mar. 1977. ed. & intro. by Cleanth Brooks. $18.50. LIT/CORRESPONDENCE

In this painstakingly careful edition of a subtle correspondence (1757-1763), we are privy to the intimate critical voices of Percy, the scholar, and Shenstone, "his special authority on literary taste," as they give birth to the Reliques. Brooks presents a sympathetic view of the long-vilified editorial practices that evolved through this collaboration—the only one Percy seems to have annotated for publication. In the letters we find energetic, intelligent, sympathetic men, responding eagerly to the literary symptoms current at mid-century: ballads, fables, odes, etc. Every name comes up in a steady stream of literary evaluation: Johnson, Walpole, Gray, Collins, Smollett, et al. And Brooks supplies excellent notes on the less familiar. Simplicity is Shenstone's refrain. Percy responds. We feel them growing closer and ourselves drawn to them as to figures in a delicate, perfect cameo. Highly recommended for students of the 18th Century.—Joan Owen, Dept. of English, C. W. Post Coll., Greenvale, N.Y.

Pritchett, V. S. The Gentle Barbarian: the life and work of Turgenev.

Random. Apr. 1977. 243p. $10. LIT/BIOG

Two interesting and respected biographies of Turgenev, by Avrahm Yarmolinsky (Turgenev, LJ 7/59) and David Magarshack (Turgenev, LJ 12/15/54), already exist in English. By his own admission, Pritchett's new biography is based in large part on these studies. The aim of the present book, we are told, is to enlarge our understanding of the novels and short stories by exposing the autobiographical elements in Turgenev's art. Consequently, the biography is structured on strictly chronological lines (though without precise dates); petty biographical details, attempts at psychological analysis of Turgenev's personality and "Russian soul," plot summaries, and critical generalizations succeed each other indiscriminately along a time line. Though he can't be faulted on his general analysis of Turgenev's talents or temperament, Pritchett adds nothing new; and his sweeping comments on Turgenev's great contemporaries are often downright fatuous. Readers would be well advised to stick with the old stand-by biographies.—Madeline G. Levine, Univ. of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

Schiff, Harriet Sarnoff. The Bereaved Parent.

Crown. Mar. 1977. 192p. LC 76-47047. ISBN 0-517-52681-6. $7.95. PER NAR

Written by one who suffered "the ultimate tragedy," the death of her child, this book conveys with strength, compassion, and brevity a positive self-help message of survival in the face of such tragedy. When the author's son died after open-heart surgery at the age of 10, she was numbed by the experience and believed she had reached bottom. She draws anecdotally upon this terrible time and the months following it, upon the reactions of her family as well as the experiences of others in similar circumstances. Recommending that we carry our sadness rather than let it carry us, she confronts squarely such subjects as bereavement and the funeral, powerlessness, anger, guilt, siblings, day-to-day functioning, and, especially, the rest of one's life. For most general collections.—Mary Soete, Phoenix P.L.

Shaw, Irwin & Ronald Searle. Paris! Paris!

HBJ. Mar. 1977. 224p. drawings by Ronald Searle. LC 76-27415. ISBN 0-15-170968-8. $10.95. TRAV/MEMOIR

Shaw, who lived in Paris for almost 25 years, shares his impressions and experiences: his first glimpse of the city, as a PFC, on Liberation Day, August 1944; a charming, descriptive fantasy of Paris in the Fifties which originally appeared in Holiday magazine; a piece on the neighborhood in which he last lived, between the Invalides and the Eiffel Tower; his observations of changes over the years, mostly for ill; and, at a café table preparatory to departure, his memories of people, places, and events he encountered (and he moved in an illustrious artistic circle). Searle, a British artist of established reputation, contributes 36 humorously perceptive drawings, remarkably complementing the text though writer and artist worked separately. Enjoyable light reading; for popular collections.—Marian Petrow, formerly with Queens Borough P.L., New York

Tittler, Robert. Nicholas Bacon: the making of a Tudor statesman.

Ohio Univ. Pr. 1977. 256p. illus. index. LC 75-36976. ISBN 0-8214-0225-0. $15. BIOG

Nicholas Bacon has always been a half-revealed figure, a reflection of his youngest son and of his brother-in-law (Burghley). This curious deficiency—for Bacon was an important Elizabethan—has now been redressed, to the limits of the best available documentation. It is a tale without outward drama, but is, rather, a record of solid service in law, administration, fiscal policy, and local government; and it gains depth from its examination of Bacon as "new man," politique, and humanist. Chapters dealing with Bacon's reforms in Chancery and with his political organization in East Anglia, though brief, are welcome additions to the scant material on these topics. Students will find this a useful complement to the work of Alan Simpson and appreciate the light it turns on the less accessible corners of Tudor England.—Neal R. Shipley, Dept. of History, Univ. of Massachusetts, Amherst

Willwerth, James. Badge of Madness: the true story of a psychotic cop.

Evans, dist. by Lippincott. Apr. 1977. 252p. ISBN 0-87131-230-1. $7.95.

LAW ENFORCEMENT/BIOG

Without attempting to explain the causes, Willwerth describes the deterioration of Pete Bon Viso's state of mind, telling the story of the terror and stress of one man's experience as a police officer in New York City. The account details the joy Bon Viso finds in his job and in the special relationship he has with his partner. Bon Viso is a man who has come from the streets he patrols, he is street wise, he has made it to suburbia; yet, his world starts to come apart when he begins to "see" and fear one of the men he has arrested and who is serving time in prison. The cover-up by his partner after a phantom shoot-out by Bon Viso, the inability of the Police Department to help him when his true condition becomes known—these are part of Bon Viso's painful story. As a result of the book's well-paced and involving style, the reader becomes caught up in the horror of Bon Viso's hallucinations. Recommended for popular collections; readers of Joseph Wambaugh's fiction will be particularly interested.—Beth Larsen, Los Angeles County P.L. System, Lakewood

BUSINESS & ECONOMICS

Askari, Hossein & John Thomas Cummings. Middle East Economies in the 1970s: a comparative approach.

Praeger. (Special Studies in Internat. Economics & Development). 1976. 581p. bibliog. index. LC 76-25351. ISBN 0-275-23130-5. $37.50.

Oil, the Arab-Israel Dispute, and the Industrial World: horizons of crisis.

Westview Pr. (Special Studies on the Middle East). 1976. 331p. ed. by J. C. Hurewitz. bibliog. index. LC 76-6470. ISBN 0-89158-043-3. $17.50; pap. ISBN 0-89158-105-7. $6.95.

INT AFFAIRS/ECON

Askari and Cummings have written an interesting introductory analysis which draws comparisons between the major economic and social sectors within the countries of the Middle East and in the region as a whole. State planning, employment, agriculture, land redistribution, and the brain drain are some of the areas covered, but—and this is the major shortcoming of the book—some of these are not fully analyzed nor compared. Still, this book could serve as a supplement to an upper-level Middle East economics course.

Hurewitz does an excellent job of comparing the interaction and interdependence between the Middle East and Europe, Japan, Canada, and the U.S. The issues analyzed include responses to the energy crisis, changes in the Arab-Israel dispute since 1973, oil and politics, and the prospects for the future—all in chapters written by experts from the latter group of countries listed above. They provide a balanced analysis that draws upon national, regional, and international perspectives, making this a book that belongs in every academic library.—Gary Golden, Southern Illinois Univ. Lib., Carbondale

The Business of Publishing: a PW anthology.

Bowker. 1976. 303p. intro. by Arnold W. Ehrlich. index. LC 76-42195. ISBN 0-8352-0893-1. $11.95. PUBLISHING

The professional book world will find this a useful anthology of 45 pieces selected from the past five years of Publishers Weekly. The range is wide, with articles distributed under seven major sections. There are case histories of successes, but the chronic headaches and imbecilities of the trade are not ignored. The contributors are expert, which doesn't preclude sharp disagreement. No one pretends to know all the answers or even many of them. Still, this is a provocative gathering for both oldtimers and newcomers, from author, agent, editor and publisher to the long line of specialists in manufacturing, multimedia, paperbacks, marketing, and distribution—not to mention librarians. For some strange reason children's books are almost totally ignored.—Milton Meltzer, New York

Flemming, J. S. Inflation.

Oxford Univ. Pr. 1976. 136p. index. ISBN 0-19-877085-5. $7.25; pap. ISBN 0-19-877086-3. $3.50. ECON

Slim as this volume is, it is not inflation made easy, nor a simple solution to its problems. Addressed to the informed layman, the author's purpose is "to present a synthetic account of the complex inflationary process with its many interacting elements and ramifications." The first part examines the monetary aspects of inflation: demand and supply of money, production and prices, and exchange rates. The second part focuses on the effects of labor on inflation and the role of the trade unions. In the final portion, devoted to policy choices in the control of inflation, Flemming argues that the rate of inflation can only be reduced by a combination of wage or price controls and deflationary measures.—Jean Deuss, Federal Reserve Bank of New York Lib.

Henry, Rene A., Jr. How To Profitably Buy and Sell Land.

Wiley Interscience: Wiley. (Real Estate for Professional Practitioners). 1977. 203p. illus. index. LC 76-22522. ISBN 0-471-37291-9. $14.95.

Rejnis, Ruth. A Woman's Guide to New Careers in Real Estate.

Regnery. Apr. 1977. 224p. index. ISBN 0-8092-8159-7. $8.95.

Temple, Douglas M. Making Money in Real Estate.

Regnery. 1976. 314p. index. LC 76-6292. ISBN 0-8092-8255-0. $12.95. BUS

The literature on real estate has been expanding fairly rapidly over the last few years, partly because of a transfer of interest from a languishing stock market to other forms of investment. Temple provides a useful overview for the individual amateur investor, emphasizing a conservative approach, with the ultimate payoff over the longer term. Financing, taxation, raw land, income property, syndicates, and basic methods of analysis are clearly summarized. Those looking for more detail about investing in unimproved land will find it in Henry's book, part of Wiley's excellent series. The 15 chapters of the volume cover just about every aspect of transactions in land for the individual or company, including acquisition technique, leasing, financing, risk factors, and marketing methods. While slanted toward the large investor, Henry's advice will be helpful to anyone concerned with raw land. Since women have long found lucrative careers as residential real estate salespersons, the only unique aspect of Rejnis' book is the discussion of women in construction work, appraising, commercial leas-

How to Use Your Physical and Emotional Ability to OVERCOME YOUR PROBLEMS AND REACH YOUR GOALS

by Eugene J. Benge

A down-to-earth guide to the living of a richer, fuller life. The author tells the reader how to take stock of his many assets, some of which he may be unaware of! Also covered are care of one's health; improving one's mental outlook; on becoming a social being; and numerous other topics in the same vein. $8.95

Dow Jones-Irwin

1818 Ridge Road, Homewood, Ill. 60430

ing, auctioneering, and other activities that have in the past been male-dominated. All three of these volumes deserve a place in any library where there is a strong interest in real estate.—James B. Woy, Free Lib. of Philadelphia

Matthews, Jack. Collecting Rare Books for Pleasure and Profit.

Putnam. 1977. 328p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-21863. ISBN 0-399-11775-X. $12.95. PUBLISHING

Matthews introduces book collecting to the beginner and offers advice about investing in books. After mentioning traditional kinds of collecting, he discusses popular areas like modern firsts, private press books, science and detective fiction, and children's books. His extensive commentary acquaints the novice with many aspects of collecting like preservation, insurance, and pricing. Unfortunately, this large amount of information is marred by poor presentation. The text is peppered with values, but prices are more readily available in standard price guides (he does not mention references like Bookman's Price Index and Used Book Price Guide). And his frequent use of ridicule and slang—"that dumb old portrait of Napolean III"—may not attract the reader to the fascinations of book collecting. Other works, like Seumas Stewart's Book Collecting (LJ 9/1/74), do more for the contemporary would-be collector.—Paul S. Koda, Univ. of North Carolina Lib., Chapel Hill

On Teaching
HERBERT KOHL

"May well be the most important work of this half-century for teachers and those interested in our venerable profession."
—Choice

Hardcover $7.95
(3633-3) CIP

SCHOCKEN
200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

Maxa, Rudy. Dare To Be Great.

Morrow. 1977. 210p. index. $8.95. BIOG/BUS

This is the story of Glenn W. Turner, the harelipped son of a sharecropper, who created his own promotional wonderland by means of the pyramid principle. Turner and his subordinates "jacked up" people with frenzied visions of easy riches to get them to pay several thousand dollars each to join their company. Each prospect could then, theoretically, earn handsome commissions by inducing others to invest, and so on. A combination of P. T. Barnum, Billy Sunday, and Norman Vincent Peale, Turner made millions before his enterprises collapsed under a barrage of government prosecutions. Maxa's enjoyable and instructive account of these successes and travails shows that there was more novelty in the destruction of Turner's empire than in its creation. Perhaps the only lesson the book imparts is that there are individuals so glib and audacious as to be able to sell air, and people gullible and greedy enough to buy it. Library-users should have access to this lucid, level-headed work.—Thomas M. O'Brien, Facts on File, New York

Pages: the world of books, writers, and writing. Vol. 1.

Gale. 1976. 304p. ed. by Matthew J. Bruccoli & C. E. Frazer Clark Jr. illus. LC 76-20369. ISBN 0-8103-0925-4. $24. LIT/PUBLISHING

Pages aims to give the general reader an inside view of the book world, past and present. Some 30 pieces touch upon a great variety of subjects: the writing of fiction, TV plays, film scripts; the collecting, auctioning, editing, marketing, and censoring of books; the reading habits of whalemen; the designing of book jackets. There are pieces by or about such writers as Caldwell, Heller, Bradbury, Hawthorne, Gardner, Lardner, Sendak, McMurtry, Cowley. The editors have sought for a light, easy tone and dressed their pages in the handsome style of American Heritage and Horizon. In so scattershot an approach there were bound to be misses, but the casual reader will be entertained.—Milton Meltzer, New York

Labor

Workers' Struggles in Puerto Rico.

Monthly Review. 1977. 240p. ed. by Angel Quintero Rivera. bibliog. LC 76-40343. ISBN 0-85345-342-6. $11.95. HIST/LABOR

The editor bases his book on the premise that a people's history is too often portrayed as the actions of a few major personalities and of one class. However, the documents chosen here to reveal the "flesh and blood" of Puerto Rican labor history frequently merely echo the rhetoric of the times, especially the writings of the early 1900's, where the book begins. The reader never knows what it is like to work in the sugar cane fields or cigar factories. In addition, the broader social and historical context is missing, as the author assumes a knowledge of the island's history on the part of the reader. There are no indications of the translator and exact sources of the documents, nor of why several letters and articles are attached as an appendix. Yet, because very little has been published on the subject, libraries with extensive collections on Puerto Rico, labor history, or socialism may want the volume, if only for the detailed bibliography.—Susan Jones, formerly with Blue Island P.L., Ill.

Yellowitz, Irwin. Industrialization and the American Labor Movement, 1850-1900.

National Univ. Pubs: Kennikat. (American Studies). 1977. 183p. bibliog. index. LC 76-23090. ISBN 0-8046-9150-9. $12.50. HIST/LABOR

The central concerns of this book are the effects of industrialization on skilled craftsmen during the Gilded Age and the organized response to a system of production which downgraded their skill, limited their mobility, and largely consigned them to permanent membership in the working class. This is not a new story, and the author's approach to the subject is in no way revisionist. That is not to say that this is not a useful book, only to point out that there is little here to interest the specialist. Yellowitz identifies several major themes around which craftsmen developed a clear ideology with which to confront unrestrained industrialization. Unfortunately, he pays little attention to important alternative ideologies, particularly socialism, which put forward different, more revolutionary answers. Nor is any attention given to attempts by unskilled workers in mass-production industries or railroads to develop strategies of resistance relevant to their needs. Recommended for undergraduate libraries.—Ronald L. Filippelli, Pennsylvania State Univ. Libs., University Park

EDUCATION

Decker, Anne Folger & others. A Handbook on Open Admissions: success, failure, potential.

Westview. (Special Studies in Higher Education). 1976. 161p. LC 76-7463. ISBN 0-89158-044-1. $18. ED

This volume is a case study of the 1970 Open Admissions decision taken by the New York City Board of Higher Education to equalize higher educational opportunity, and the subsequent reaction and changes occurring within the City University of New York (CUNY) system. More than three-quarters of the handbook is devoted specifically to changes which took place at Hunter College, i.e., the instituting of placement testing, an academic advising system, remedial course offerings for credit, and peer tutoring, as well as changes in registration procedures. The haphazard manner in which programs were planned, instituted, and revised at Hunter and throughout the CUNY system was shocking though not surprising. Finally, a weak argument is made that the quality of higher education has not been diluted. However, the admission that these new programs, now used by all students, were not necessary prior to Open Admissions, leaves plenty of latitude for debate. Only recommended for collections specializing in higher education.—Susan M. Allen, Assoc. Editor, "College Student Personnel Abstracts," Claremont, Calif.

Klaeser, Barbara Macknick. Reading Improvement: a complete course for increasing speed and comprehension.

Nelson-Hall. Apr. 1977. 384p. index. ISBN 0-88229-232-3. $12.95; pap. ISBN 0-88229-406-7. $6.95. ED

This is a practical, self-instruction manual for the busy adult or college student who wishes to be able to read faster and to get more pleasure or information from what he reads. Part 1, a general, descriptive text, discusses kinds of reading material, both recreational and informational, the benefits of rapid reading, and the importance of eye movements in reading. Techniques for increasing reading speed, phrase reading, and reading for comprehension and retention are described. Prereading, skimming, reviewing, and special techniques for reading materials in mathematics, social science, and literature are emphasized. Part 2 contains practice selections varying in reading level, length, and subject matter. Each section in the eight chapters in Part 1 is keyed to a corresponding reading selection in Part 2. Each reading selection is followed by a quiz designed to measure understanding. Answers to quiz questions, graphs for charting individual progress both in speed and in comprehension, and a bibliography are also included.—Shirley L. Hopkinson, Dept. of Librarianship, California State Univ., San Jose

Milstein, Mike M. Impact and Response: federal aid and state education agencies.

Teachers Coll. Pr., Columbia Univ. (Policy Analysis & Education). 1976. 170p. bibliog. index. LC 76-14887. ISBN 0-8077-2502-1. $12.95; pap. ISBN 0-8077-2501-3. $6.95. ED

This well-documented, logically organized book investigates the growth and impact of federal funding programs upon state education agencies. Following a brief historical synopsis of such program growth, the book looks at the organizational dynamics involved in these agencies, analyzes tasks which state agencies have pursued in response to federal programs, and discusses these agencies' interactions with other groups such as legislatures. Finally, after reviewing the generally dismal record of response by the state agencies to this ongoing federal influence, Milstein projects some probable developments. Excellent scholarship. Recommended.—Jerry L. Parsons, Sacramento State Univ. Lib., Calif.

Schiavone, James. Help Your Child To Read Better.

Nelson-Hall. 1977. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-29055. ISBN 0-88229-221-8. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-88229-464-4. $4.95. ED

The virtue of this short book lies in the fact that its author offers no magic solutions and apparently has no "ax of his own to grind" in promoting a special system. Rather, he presents succinctly basic facts about dyslexia, vision, and the reading process, and describes reading stages from preschool through high school. He recommends an eclectic approach rather than heavy concentration on phonics. Suggestions for helping the child include games and experiences designed to encourage enjoyment of reading, but intensive home tutoring is not recommended. This is one of the more realistic and practical books explaining reading for parents that have appeared recently.—Marian Wozencraft, Dept. of Education, SUNY at Geneseo

HISTORY

Belz, Herman. A New Birth of Freedom: the Republican party and Freedmen's rights, 1861-1866.

Greenwood. (Contributions in American History, No. 52). 1977. 199p. bibliog. index. LC 76-5257. ISBN 0-8371-8902-0. $16.95. HIST

The first moves to abolish slavery in 1862 by a Republican-dominated Congress were directed, says Belz, at using the freedman in the war effort and "hardly placed the welfare of Negro slaves uppermost." Belz has drawn together a vast amount of research to offer a scholarly yet readable account of the Republican Party's drive to fashion a "civil rights policy that rested on settled constitutional principles and was intended to guarantee American citizenship and equality before the law to the freed slave population." A valuable contribution is the author's discussion of the Congressional fight between a laissez-faire and a more paternalistic approach to Negro welfare when the 1865 Freedmen's Bureau Act was under consideration. Above all, the reader is presented a clear, well-thought-out account of the Republican Party's commitment to a civil rights scheme based on full equality for blacks in the aftermath of Appomattox.—Paul D. Casdorph, Dept. of History, West Virginia State Coll., Institute

Bowman, Larry G. Captive Americans: prisoners during the American Revolution.

Ohio Univ. Pr. 1977. 146p. bibliog. index. LC 75-36984. ISBN 0-8214-0215-3. $9; pap. ISBN 0-8214-0229-3. $3.50. HIST

The lot of prisoners of war during the Revolution was not good; but Bowman argues that British treatment of American military captives was relatively humane by the standards of the time, even though the fate of the captives was tied to complex political issues. Yet, American military captives were treated as prisoners of war from the outset, while the British were unwilling formally to accord such status—fearing it implied recognition of American sovereignty—until late in the war. Similarly, the exchange of prisoners was limited by British reluctance to go beyond local arrangements. What Bowman does not recognize is the powerful influence of reciprocity (or the hope of it) upon actual conditions. For this reason, a more substantial treatment of Ameri-

THE INDIAN AND THE WHITE MAN IN NEW ENGLAND

by Chandler Whipple

American Indian problems are not confined to Wounded Knee or the Far West. Today's Indians are fighting for their rights in Passamaquoddy, Plymouth Bay, Mashpee, and even Boston.

Written in part from interviews with descendants of New England tribes, this book provides an even-handed study of the historical conflicts between the white men and the Indians of all six New England states and discusses Indian life before the arrival of the first explorers and settlers. It offers an unbiased, objective view that will furnish libraries, students and teachers with a useful background for the study of today's Indian problems.

Portions of this book are already being used in junior and senior high schools as texts and supplementary readings. It includes maps showing the location of original tribes, a bibliography, a useful index, and striking illustrations.

THE INDIAN AND WHITE MAN IN NEW ENGLAND, Whipple; 272 pp.; 0-912944-38-2; paperback, $5.95; 0-911944-41-2; hardcover, $10.00.

Berkshire Traveller Press

Stockbridge, Massachusetts 01262

413-298-3636

can policy than he provides is necessary. Recommended only for large academic collections.—Robert L. Burr, Coll. of William & Mary Lib., Williamsburg, Va.

Crisp, Olga. Studies in the Russian Economy Before 1914.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. (Studies in Russian & East European History). 1976. 278p. bibliog. index. LC 75-39083. ISBN 0-06-491317-1. $25. ECON/HIST

These essays, all but one previously published, examine important aspects of the Tsarist economy. Three of the eight are devoted to the best-known side of the subject: the French financial involvement in Russia during the last three decades of the empire's existence. This is primarily a work not for the expert but for the interested student or layman. The articles usefully remind us that Russia's pre-1914 economic condition, often neglected in favor of her political life, merits closer attention than it usually gets from non-Marxist historians. There is a most impressive (and useful) bibliography.—R. H. Johnston, Dept. of History, McMaster Univ., Hamilton, Ont., Canada

Fass, Paula S. The Damned and the Beautiful: American youth in the 1920's.

Oxford Univ. Pr. Apr. 1977. 448p. index. $15. SOC SCI/HIST

In this extensively researched book, Fass argues that the native, white, middle-class, college-going American youth of the 1920's were not as "flaming" as historians have suggested, but were, rather, a newly enlarged and recently defined segment of society passing through a peer-controlled phase between the subjective nurture of the family and the bureaucratized, objective requirements of the new mass society. In their attempts to work out the tension between the twin American values of competition and conformity, these seemingly rebellious young people served, according to Fass, as the necessary and relatively conservative vanguard of change. Basing her research on public opinion polls and college newspapers, Fass comes to a sophisticated understanding of the subtle nuances of social change, but one that is seriously flawed by the narrowness of the sample and by her attempt to respond to a variety of sociological models that she does not develop sufficiently. Her important ideas and interesting findings are often lost in a welter of abstract jargon. For these reasons, this work, while helpful to the specialist, is not recommended as a general source.—Carol M. Petillo, Dept. of History, Rutgers Univ., New Brunswick, N.J.

Foner, Philip S. Labor and the American Revolution.

Greenwood. 1977. 257p. bibliog. index. LC 76-18034. ISBN 0-8371-9003-7. $14.95. HIST Lawyers and landed aristocrats have consistently upstaged "leather aprons" in most histories of the American Revolution. Foner seeks to rectify this with a succinct survey of the workingman's vital contribution to the evolution of our independence. The term "labor" for this purpose includes artisans, mechanics and the like, as well as occasional consideration for seamen and slaves. The hardships induced by British economic policies gradually drove American workers into some semblance of organized political activity, so that labor was, as Foner so adequately demonstrates, "in the forefront of the struggles both for home rule and over who should rule at home." The author arranges the bits and pieces of the labor story into a coherent framework as he traces developments in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, and Charleston. His conclusion that the Revolution was a "momentous landmark" for American labor, while not surprising, is certainly well documented. Foner complements his text with copious notes, a 12-page bibliography, and many references to other authorities.—Mark Norton Schatz, Ann Arundell County Historical Society, Glen Burnie, Md.

Garitee, Jerome R. The Republic's Private Navy: the American privateering business as practiced by Baltimore during the War of 1812.

Wesleyan Univ. Pr. (American Maritime Lib., Vol. 8). Apr. 1977. 416p. illus. bibliog. index. $17.50; special ed. $35. HIST

Privateering, the practice of hiring out a privately owned, armed ship for the purpose of capturing enemy merchant ships, reached its height of activity and success in Baltimore during the War of 1812. Garitee begins in medias res and then reverts to a history of privateering from the Middle Ages up to the beginning of his study. Copious footnotes, listings of ships and their inventories, investors, proceeds from sales, and an extensive bibliography provide more than adequate substantiation for the author's conclusions. Highly recommended for special collections on nautical history, Baltimore, and the early U.S.—Scott R. Johnson, Coastal Carolina Campus, Univ. of South Carolina, Conway

Geanakoplos, Deno John. Interaction of the "Sibling" Byzantine and Western Cultures in the Middle Ages and Italian Renaissance (330-1600).

Yale Univ. Pr. 1976. 416p. illus. maps. bibliog. index. LC 74-29722. ISBN 0-300-01831-2. $27.50. HIST

Geanakoplos, long interested in the relationship of Byzantium and Western Europe, here presents his third major book on the subject. In the prologue he outlines "the changing social-cultural milieux within which these cultural exchanges and interactions took place." Employing historical and sociological methods, he identifies and discusses four periods representing the main "contact situations" of the two peoples. The body of the book then presents sharply focused studies of the interactions. Among the most interesting of his findings is the little-studied phenomenon of strong Western influence on Byzantium in certain fields. Geanakoplos has made a significant contribution to the better understanding of the cultural dynamics operating within and between the Greek and Latin cultures from 330 to 1600. Historians and sociologists especially will read this book with interest and considerable profit.—Jaroslav Folda, Dept. of Art, Univ. of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

Hill, B. W. The Growth of Parliamentary Parties 1689-1742.

Archon: Shoe String. 1976. 265p. bibliog. index. LC 76-21898. ISBN 0-208-01593-0. $15. HIST

The subject of the early development of recognisable political parties in England has been one hotly debated by historians, and this fine work is certain to add more fuel to the fire. Hill traces what he sees as three generations of distinct Whig-Tory political alignment, from the Glorious Revolution to the fall of Walpole, and argues that Sir Lewis Namier was off base when he claimed that the two-party system had little importance prior to the 1770's. While the present book is by no means the last word on the subject, it is an important study which will be required reading for any specialist in late 17th- and 18th-century politics.—James A. Casada, Dept. of History, Winthrop College, Rock Hill, S.C.

Hunt, William. Alaska: a bicentennial history.

Norton. (States & the Nation). 1976. 216p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-4442. ISBN 0-393-05604-X. $8.95. HIST

This non-scholarly volume attempts to summarize what an average citizen might be interested in knowing about the past and present of the state. Since objective, readable studies of Alaska are just beginning to be published, this work is a step in the right direction. Although apparently limited in scope because of space constraints, it contains a sweeping survey of the development of the major resources of the state (furs, seafood, gold, timber, and oil) and the impact of such major events as the invasion of Alaska during World War II, the Cold War, the 1964 earthquake, and the Native Land Claims Settlement Act. Missing are both an emotional feel for the uniqueness of the Alaskan life style and a discussion of the Alaskan stereotypes, which both attract and confuse those "outside."—Elizabeth Page Kennedy, Alaska Dept. of Law, Anchorage

Luttwak, Edward N. The Grand Strategy of the Roman Empire: from the first century A.D. to the third.

Johns Hopkins. 1977. 256p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-17232. ISBN 0-8018-1863-X. $12.95. HIST

The Roman Empire as an idea was firmly rooted in the souls of its subjects; so long as that idea held vitality, the Empire endured, despite great social upheaval. Luttwak gives this view of the Roman Empire form and substance by analyzing the Romans' strategic use of military resources. From the Republican era originated an imperialistic view of martial and political priorities; this gradually became a benevolent view of Empire manifested in long-term maintenance of existing borders. By the third Century, A.D., the system of security spoke too little to the protected, and loyalty to the idea of Empire perished. Luttwak's treatment is full and learned, but heavy-handed use of the jargon of social science makes reading difficult to the uninitiated.—James S. Ruebel, Dept. of Classics, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis

HISTORY

Ogilvie, R. M. Early Rome and the Etruscans.

Humanities. 1977. 187p. illus. maps. index. LC 76-18964. ISBN 0-391-00644-4. $13. HIST

Ogilvie starts with the arrival in Rome (c.625–600 B.C.) of the Etruscans and leaves off with the Gallic sack of Rome in 390 B.C. This period is vexatious and controversial, for written accounts by Greek and Roman historians are sometimes contradictory and often mingle myth, legend, and folklore with fact. Furthermore, there is not much archaeological material to go on. Ogilvie, however, has sifted and evaluated evidence carefully, giving interpretations which are persuasive and logical. Numerous unusually helpful maps are scattered throughout the text; and the suggestions for further reading include the latest research. Recommended.—Francis D. Lazenby, Dept. of Modern & Classical Languages, Univ. of Notre Dame, Ind.

Percival, John. The Roman Villa: an historical introduction.

Univ. of California Pr. 1977. (Batsford Studies in Archaeology). 230p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-7766. ISBN 0-520-03233-0. $18.50. ARCHAEOLOGY/HIST

This very attractive book is rich in information about the origin, history, and nature of the villa in the Roman and early medieval worlds. Percival treats the villa as an economic and social phenomenon, and always provides ample references to carefully assessed literary and archaeological evidence. Though the topic may seem narrow, Percival's treatment is not. Much can be learned from this study not only about villas, their economy and society, and their agriculture and tenure patterns, but about their continuing influence on modern Europe. A chapter on villas, churches, and monasteries is especially interesting. Illustrations are well chosen, and the select bibliography is excellent. Recommended for academic and large libraries.—Jackson P. Hershbell, Dept. of Classics, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis

Pick, Robert. The Last Days of Imperial Vienna.

Dial. 1976. 261p. bibliog. index. LC 76-5386. ISBN 0-8037-4682-2. $10.95. HIST

The breakdown of the Habsburg Empire during the years 1916-1919 is described here as viewed from the imperial capital. Reports of the shifting fortunes of the last campaigns of World War I, the rival claims of left- and right-wing successors to the pre-war political formations, the aggravation of social tensions by wartime austerity and shortages, and the fears aroused by the secession of national groups from the moribund Habsburg state are combined to evoke something of the atmosphere of Vienna in this twilight period. Many of the difficulties of the short-lived first Austrian Republic were foreshadowed by the political and social impasse left by the abrupt dissolution of the Danubian monarchy. While overly impressionistic in places, this is an interesting account of an important phase of Austrian history.—John R. Broadus, Dept. of History, Univ. of Chicago

Roberts, Andrew. A History of Zambia.

Africana: Holmes & Meier. 1976. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-40923. ISBN 0-8419-0291-7. $17. HIST

Here is an up-to-date introduction to Zambia's past by a well-qualified historian who takes care to emphasize African rather than European activities. The survey extends from prehistoric times through the mid-1970's, with two-thirds of the book devoted to the period before 1900. There are difficulties inherent in writing the history of a nation which did not have real boundaries until the end of the 19th Century; nonetheless, Roberts manages to present a well-balanced account of the region. The author details how the copper industry played an important role in Zambia's colonial and postcolonial development, and he also discerns distinct patterns of production and trade in precolonial Zambian history. An excellent annotated bibliography of secondary works adds to the value of this work. Primarily for undergraduates, but useful for most Africana collections.—Paul H. Thomas, Hoover Institution Lib., Stanford, Calif.

Tholfsen, Trygve R. Working Class Radicalism in Mid-Victorian England.

Columbia Univ. Pr. 1977. 332p. index. LC 76-43323. ISBN 0-231-04234-X. $20. HIST

This volume is far less restricted in scope than its title suggests. Tholfsen energetically traces working class radicalism from the early 19th-Century roots, through the upbeat years of Chartism and Owenism, and on into the mid-century period of consensus—when shifting liberal values removed much of the radical sting. In every conceivable instance, the author skillfully juxtaposes the evolving socioeconomic disposition of the working class with that of the middle class ascendancy. To lead the reader in among the intricate underpinnings of Victorian society and to remain both scholarly and readable demands a rare talent—one which Tholfsen convincingly displays. Working Class Radicalism is history at its finest. All serious collections must have it.—Mark R. Yerburgh, SUNY at Albany Lib.

Trout, Charles. Boston, the Great Depression, and the New Deal.

Oxford Univ. Pr. (Urban Life in America). Apr. 1977. 416p. illus. bibliog. $15.95. HIST

Local history is at its finest when the historian not only studies the nation at the grass roots, but also relates the locale to the larger context of the national experience. At the other pole, local history can be strictly provincial, shedding very little light on national history. This study of Boston during the 1930's falls between these two extremes. According to Trout, Boston's social and political structure was not radically altered during this period: local officials frequently impeded the implementation

The Jews of Palestine

A Political History from the Bar Kokhba War to the Arab Conquest

MICHAEL AVI-YONAH

"Meticulously researched, thoroughly documented, well written and well translated, this is a standard volume for any Judaica library or department. Students of the Byzantine Empire in general will find it packed with important data. Everyone interested in the philosophy of nationalism will need to be aware of the intellectual trend represented by the distinguished author. Indispensable in these many fields."
—Choice

$16.50 hardcover (3580-9) CIP

SCHOCKEN
200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

"Careful, intelligent writing."—Publishers Weekly

Books That Changed the South

by Robert B. Downs

A discussion of the twenty-five books that have had the greatest impact on the history and culture of the South. Selections include Twain's Life on the Mississippi, Booker T. Washington's Up from Slavery, and W. J. Cash's The Mind of the South.

310 pages, illus. $10.95 Tr

The University of North Carolina Press
Box 2288 Chapel Hill 27514

WALLENSTEIN
HIS LIFE NARRATED
by GOLO MANN

"A mannerist history of the Thirty Years' War and of the dominant role played therein by Albrecht von Wallenstein. Scholarly deference and academic speculation combine with a stylistic re-creation of seventeenth-century prose as Mann drifts through the multitude of historical events which formed Europe's future and Wallenstein's character."

—THE BOOKLIST, 12/1/76.

Maps. Bibliography, index.
LC 76-4721 ISBN 0-03-091884-7 $22.50

Holt, Rinehart & Winston HR&W
383 MADISON AVE., NEW YORK, NY 10017

"THIS SUPERB LANDMARK BOOK..."

"...should be read, and it will be, for its analysis of the way things are and as a baedeker to the changes that must come.... [The author] points out that changing our food habits is necessary for nutrition, health, economics, survival. The problem is worldwide; what he proposes is a food revolution to start with the reader. . . . Hard facts serve as illustration.... Its scope is enormous Publishers Weekly

MANAGING YOUR PERSONAL FOOD SUPPLY
Edited by Ray Wolf
Illustrated. Index.
LC 76-50569 ISBN 0-87857-121-3 $11.95

RODALE PRESS
Emmaus, PA 18049

of progressive New Deal programs. However, according to the author, "For all of Boston's peculiarities, the city's course was, indeed, inextricably tied to the national experience." Although a traditional, workmanlike piece of scholarship, the book as a whole is generally unexciting and breaks little new historical ground. Yet, it is one of only a few case studies of cities during the 1930's and does succeed in describing Boston's reaction to the Great Depression. It will be of interest to Bostonians, urban historians, and students of the New Deal.—Kevin M. Rosswurm, Akron P.L., Ohio

Travel, Exploration & Adventure

Alaska: high roads to adventure.

National Geographic. 1976. 199p. color photogs. by George F. Mobley. maps. index. LC 76-692. ISBN 0-87044-193-0. $4.75. PHOTOG/TRAV

A bargain for the pictures alone. This book is divided into five sections covering the Highway, the Southeast, the Southwest, the Interior, and the region north of the Brooks Range. Each chapter is written by a different National Geographic staff member who describes the land, the climate, and the basic economic activities, and discusses the changes occurring as a result of development, most particularly the impact of the discovery of oil and the building of the Pipeline. Each author also tries to convey the sense of independence and the love of the land that keep people in Alaska in spite of the hardships they encounter. Although the treatment is necessarily brief, a balanced overview of the land and the questions involved in conservation and development is presented.—Judy Mimken, Geophysical Inst. Lib., Univ. of Alaska, Fairbanks

Bonington, Chris. Everest, the Hard Way.

Random. Mar. 1977. 320p. illus., some color. $12.95. PER NAR/ADVENTURE

And still the Everest climbs go on and the books come out. Most satisfying are those accounts which climax at the summit, especially if a new route is pioneered, as in this 1975 British expedition's successful scaling of Everest's South West Face. Bonington has made a career of climbing and writing, and this is one of his better productions. An excellent planner and team organizer, he manages to create a sense of excitement and suspense even while detailing the endless support work necessary to place a few members on top. Eleven appendixes, comprising the last third of the book, deal with such matters as food, equipment, medicine, and photography—excellent references for any expedition outfitter. Recommended for people who like survival stories.—Helen J. Stiles, NOAA-ERL Lib., Dept. of Commerce, Boulder, Colo.

Conn, Herb & Jan Conn. The Jewel Cave Adventure: fifty miles of discovery under South Dakota.

Zephyrus Pr. (Speleologia Series). Mar. 1977. 240p. illus. maps. index. LC 76-41281. ISBN 0-914264-19-2. $10.50; pap. ISBN 0-914264-20-6. $5.95. NAT HIST/EXPLORATION

The authors, expert rock climbers, have devoted most of the last 17 years to the intensive exploration, discovery, and mapping of a "small" cave in western South Dakota. At first thought to be 2000 feet long, Jewel Cave has been found to have an extent of 56.1 miles—and it has not yet been fully explored. The cave is now well-known for the beauty and variety of its formations as well as the intricacy and difficulty of its passages, crawls, and levels. All this is described here with humor and a sense of adventure, and complemented with 89 interesting photographs, 15 maps, and a large folding map. Recommended for college and public libraries.—Stuart F. Baptista, Salt Lake City P.L., Utah

Holm, Donald. Cruising the Northwest: a practical guide for the Pacific coast boater.

Prentice-Hall. Apr. 1977. 252p. photogs. bibliog. LC 76-44213. ISBN 0-13-194944-6. $12.95. PER NAR/ADVENTURE

The author, an outdoors writer for a Portland newspaper, has tried to meld two books, neither of which is a guide in the usual sense of the word, into one. The first is a description of the agonies of building a boat and the ecstasies of sailing it from the Columbia River up the coast to Puget Sound. This is a personal narrative of a lifelong dream fulfilled, and it is nicely laced with historical vignettes of ports and waters encountered. The last 90 pages are appendixes offering (and too often repeating) in essay form sound advice on boating matters ranging from financing to fishing overboard. Pacific Northwest libraries serving weekend sailors will want this book.—Harold M. Otness, Southern Oregon State Coll. Lib., Ashland

Maclean, Fitzroy. To Caucasus: the end of all the Earth; an illustrated companion to the Caucasus and Transcaucasia.

Little. Mar. 1977. 203p. photogs., some color. index. LC 76-26823. $17.50. HIST/TRAV

From ancient myths through Soviet rule, the story of the Caucasus is complex and intriguing, and it is unfamiliar to most readers. The second volume of a trilogy which began with To the Back of Beyond (LJ 5/1/75), this beautifully illustrated part-history, part-travelogue of the Caucasus is a delight. Maclean devotes considerable space to the history of this fascinating region that the ancients considered the end of the world, where Prometheus lay chained and Jason sought the Golden Fleece. Maclean goes on to describe his travels through present-day Georgia, Armenia, and Azerbaijan. There are many photographs and a detailed index. Highly recommended for general collections.—Gail R. Haar, Prosser P.L., Bloomfield, Conn.

Rasky, Frank. The Polar Voyagers. Vol. 1.

McGraw. Mar. 1977. 320p. illus. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-07-082405-3. $17.95. HIST/EXPLORATION

Canadian journalist/author Rasky here covers the history of Arctic exploration from the time of the Vikings to the late 18th Century, including an introductory chapter on the Eskimos. True to his determination "to portray the entire pantheon of major Arctic explorers as people," Rasky emphasizes characterization: the tragically flawed Henry Hudson, the buccaneer-cum-explorer Sir Martin Frobisher, the charlatan Sebastian Cabot, etc. This has its limitations, since we possess only the scantiest personal information about most of the early explorers; consequently, the author is often forced to rely upon his own intuitions. The narrative is episodic and selective rather than inclusive, but it is consistently interesting and readable. The illustrations are divided between reproductions of contemporary pictures and romanticized 19th-Century "reconstructions." A second volume bringing the story up to the present is planned. —Jonathan F. Husband, Boston State Coll. Lib.

Home Economics

Cobb, Hubbard H. Woman's Day Homeowner's Handbook.
S. & S. 1977. illus. index. ISBN 0-671-22395-X. $8.95. HOME ECON

Cobb acknowledges at the outset that much of the material for this book first appeared in his column in Woman's Day magazine. The book has four main sections: on home safety; on home improvements; on economizing on repairs, services, utilities, and heat; and on buying real estate. The coverage, however, is generally shallow and undocumented. It is never made clear if the information is merely opinion or if the results claimed have been adequately demonstrated elsewhere. Most of the ideas presented for making your hearth and home safe, happy, and economical are matters of common sense which should have already occurred to his intended audience (if not, they've probably read them in Woman's Day anyway).—Ellen L. Turner, Eastern Michigan Univ. Libs., Ypsilanti

Hand, Jackson. Walls, Floors and Ceilings: how to repair, renovate and decorate the interior surfaces of your home.
Popular Science, dist. by Harper. 1977. 231p. drawings by Carl J. De Groote. photogs. index. LC 74-33574. ISBN 0-06-011772-9. $9.95. TECH/HOME ECON

If you could have but one title on this aspect of home improvement, Walls, Floors and Ceilings is it. It is basic enough to inform the beginning handyman yet advanced enough not to embarrass the professional contractor. Most of all, it reflects the last word on the final finishing of each structural element. One valuable section for the do-it-yourselfer is a well-illustrated unit on hanging wallpaper. The weekend handyman will also find professional shortcuts and installation tips sprinkled liberally throughout each section. Recommended for most collections, especially the smaller variety.—William M. Potts, Bryan P.L., Ohio

Books of Considerable Interest to Your Readers

Scott French
THE BIG BROTHER GAME

"French has brought a lot of disparate material between covers and if you want to know how F.B.I. and C.I.A. security officers find out what they find out, The Big Brother Game will serve as a short course."—The New York Times $14

Robert Courtine
GUIDE COURTINE

"There isn't a food critic in France more widely respected and certainly none more widely quoted than Robert Courtine. Now his guide to Paris restaurants is being published in English for the first time by Lyle Stuart, and Stuart has produced a fascinating and useful volume for anyone on a visit to the City of Light. The book is concise and easy to read. It offers all the essentials of the critic's favorite and not-so-favorite restaurants including addresses, telephone numbers, plus his personal choices of dishes to order. Handy and useful."—Craig Claiborne in The New York Times $7.95

Yvonne Young Tarr
THE NEW TEN MINUTE GOURMET COOKBOOK

"A classic since 1965, establishing author Tarr as one of the finest of the latter-day cookbook writers. After the ingredient assembly, all of these preparations really come together in 10 minutes or so. What Tarr has done is to isolate quick recipes for all courses, including lunch, brunch, snacks, leftovers and freezer food. Additional material covers menu preparation, tips on cooking quickly, reminders, staples to have on hand, etc. One of the best sections is on soups (10 recipes including bouillabaisse) especially a delicious French onion soup recipe we have used for the past 12 years! 147 recipes; intermediate level."—ALA Booklist
299 pages, illustrated. (O-8184-0236-9) $10

David Mason & Fran Dyller
BITTER PILLS

A book for everyone who ever takes medication. It brings skill, clarity and authority to the subject of prescription drugs—telling the reader what they are, what their effects (and side-effects) may be and what combinations to avoid. $10

James Spada
THE FILMS OF ROBERT REDFORD

Newest in the exciting Citadel Press "The Films of . . ." series, The Films of Robert Redford was written after hundreds of hours of interviews with Redford and his closest associates. A complete anthology of everything he has ever done professionally, together with a perceptive, honest biography—illustrated with more than 400 photographs. $14

At your library jobber or order directly from
LYLE STUART INC., 120 Enterprise Avenue, Secaucus, N.J. 07094

(Ask for our listing of more than 1,000 Lyle Stuart, Citadel Press and University Books books in print.)

Cookery

Candler, Teresa Gilardi. The Northern Italian Cookbook.

McGraw. May 1977. index. $8.95. COOKERY

By now, spaghetti and pizza are as American as apple pie, but the more delicate and refined cuisine of northern Italy is not very well known in the U.S. Candler grew up in northern Italy, where her family owned a restaurant. She has gathered together recipes from her family and the restaurant's chefs, choosing them for "simplicity, ingredient availability, and compatibility with American taste." She has succeeded admirably in achieving those aims and has produced a book that will surprise and please cooks who know little of the subtleties of Italian cooking. Marcella Hazan's The Classic Italian Cook Book (Knopf, 1976) is more comprehensive and explains techniques more carefully. But this good book will appeal both to admirers of northern Italian food and to those cooks who only want recipes that are different and good.—Ruth Diebold, Finkelstein Memorial Lib., Spring Valley, N. Y.

Cradock, Johnnie. Wine for Today.

Transatlantic. 1976. 198p. intro. by Fanny Cradock. illus. index. $9.75. BEVERAGES

Written for a British audience, Cradock's book introduces wine to the uninitiated. It gives short descriptions of some wine-producing countries of the world (the U.S. is not included) and of specific drinks like port, sherry, Madeira, and vermouth. The author's style is chatty and he tends to be a name-dropper, referring to his friendship with a wine expert many times. This is a pleasant book to read but it isn't the answer for the American who is interested in learning more about wine.—Christine Bulson, SUNY at Oneonta Lib.

Pépin, Jacques. La Technique: the fundamental techniques of cooking; an illustrated guide.

Quadrangle, dist. by Harper. 1976. 470p. photogs., some color by Léon Perer. index. LC 76-9733. ISBN 0-8129-0610-1. $20. COOKERY

La Technique is an important cookbook event. The fundamental techniques of cookery are presented with a clear, concise text and lavishly illustrated with black-and-white photos. Each technique is broken down into a series of steps, each of which is accompanied by a photograph—and herein lies the book's main value. La Technique is divided into six sections, ranging from the basics (cutting and mincing vegetables, tying a roast, whipping egg whites) to the very special (making "angel hair," preparing sea urchins). Indexing is by technique, ingredient, and name of dish. In addition, advice is given on what can go wrong and how to correct it, e.g., how to save mayonnaise that separates; and reasons are given for preferring one technique or ingredient (sweet butter rather than salted) over another. As the title implies, recipes are secondary and are included only as demonstrations of how the techniques are employed. Highly recommended for public libraries.—Carol Zajchowski, Bay Area Reference Center, San Francisco P.L.

"FIRST CHOICE"

"The current interest in wood heating, with its potential hazards, makes a wood-stove book a necessity for most libraries.... This delightfully illustrated book would be my first choice.... There are precise instructions on building chimneys and fireplaces; on rehabilitating old stoves; and on wood-range or open-flame cooking. There is even a discussion of the 'fringe benefits' of wood heat—such as wood ashes."
—Library Journal

WOOD HEAT
by John Vivian
Illustrated. Bibliography. Index.
LC 76-28539 ISBN 0-87857-131-0 $8.95
paperback ISBN 0-87857-149-3 $4.95

RODALE PRESS
Emmaus, PA 18049

Language Arts

Bright, William. Variation and Change in Language.

Stanford Univ. Pr. (Language & Science National Development Series). 1976. 283p. sel. & intro. by Anwar S. Dil. bibliog. LC 76-23370. ISBN 0-8047-0926-2. $10.95.

ANTHROPOLOGY/LINGUISTICS

Eighteen papers, all but one originally published between 1952 and 1973, have been collected in this volume. Bright, the editor of Language, has an anthropological approach to linguistics. His studies are both descriptive and historical, and all his observations are accompanied by commentary on what linguistic phenomena may mean about the larger society. These papers are extremely interesting and informative and will be of interest to students of linguistics and anthropology generally and to those specializing in the South Asian and Amerindian cultures that Bright analyzes in some detail. However, one must question the need for libraries to purchase material already available in bound periodicals or congress proceedings.—Joan M. Friedman, Yale Center for British Art

Literature

Cardinal, Roger, ed. & intro. Sensibility and Creation: studies in twentieth-century French poetry.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. Mar. 1977. 252p. bibliog. LC 76-40876. ISBN 0-06-490957-3. $17.50.

LIT

This collection of 12 critical studies provides a panoramic view of a dozen major poets chosen because they "offer a variety of significant profiles and a reasonably representative sample of styles." Although the relation of sensibility to creation is a major critical perspective throughout the collection, each of the essayists approaches his subject in an original and sound way, relying primarily on thematic, stylistic, semantic, and syntactical analyses. The valid generalizations offered throughout make these essays complementary without minimizing the authenticity of the individual poets. This volume is clearly aimed at the learned reader who has a sound knowledge of French (the numerous citations are not translated) and who is well acquainted with the poets discussed.—Anthony S. Caprio, Dept. of Foreign Languages, Cedar Crest Coll., Allentown, Pa.

A Century of Commentary on the Works of Washington Irving, 1860-1974.

Sleepy Hollow. 1976. 504p. ed. by Andrew B. Myers. illus. bibliog. index. LC 74-7843. $20.

Irving, Washington. Astoria, or anecdotes of an enterprize beyond the Rocky Mountains.

Twayne. (Complete Works of Washington Irving). 1977. 500p. ed. by Richard Dilworth Rust. illus. index. LC 75-44202. ISBN 0-8057-8507-8. $25.

LIT

Bringing Astoria out in a new, scholarly edition is obviously a deed of literary piety, yet Rust makes a good case for it as history of the American West written as objectively as Romantic sensibility desired or could manage it. Nevermind that Irving wrote it for John Jacob Astor because he wanted money for his big new house: he was also infatuated with Western adventure, and he turned out a fairly readable, generally informative work. Detailed notes and textual apparatus invited the Irving scholar's new zeal for the book. [Astoria is the fourth volume in the series. The first three—Journals and Notebooks, Vol. 1: 1803-1806 and Vol. 3: 1819-1827, and Mahomet and His Successors—were published in 1969 and 1970 by the University of Wisconsin Press. Twayne will publish the remaining volumes in the 27-volume series.—Ed.]

Collecting critical responses to authors has come to be one of the least attractive and oft-repeated scholarly enterprises of our time. In the case of Irving, however, almost the whole span of American literature is involved. Thus Longfellow and Bryant celebrate their venerable elder colleague with Victorian decorum, whereas Parrington and Mencken demur. Myers has chosen his critical exhibits with an eye to illumination as well as to balance.—John R. Willingham, Dept. of English, Univ. of Kansas, Lawrence

Dauber, Kenneth. Rediscovering Hawthorne.

Princeton Univ. Pr. Apr. 1977. 250p. index. $13. LIT

Developed from a dissertation, this work belongs in manuscript form on a library shelf, or should be used as the basis for articles in learned journals. As an attempt to set up a new Hawthorne "poetic" in selected short stories and in The Scarlet Letter, The House of Seven Gables, The Blithedale Romance, and The Marble Fawn, it is of no value to most readers; they will find its first 150 pages far too abstract and esoteric, opaque and clumsy. In the Blithedale and Marble Fawn chapters, having done with his muddy psychoanalytic interpretations, Dauber begins to add to what previous Hawthorne critics have written; and the nine-page conclusion is excellent. But few readers will ever get that far. Not recommended.—William White, Journalism Program, Oakland Univ., Rochester, Mich.

Donoghue, Denis. The Sovereign Ghost: studies in imagination.

Univ. of California Pr. 1977. 229p. LC 75-27923. ISBN 0-520-03134-2. $10. LIT

Donoghue lucidly chronicles the evolution of the concept of the creative imagination from Romanticism to its contemporary rival, structuralism, to discover its meaning to poets, critics, and poet-critics. Several of the seven scholarly essays, of which four were previously published or delivered as lectures, inspect imagination as a topic itself, while most examine particular writers, usually modern, English-language poets, and their relationships to imagination. Donoghue is at his most vivacious and interesting in the later essays; examples supporting his commentaries are never restricted to any genre, period, or language. Although notes are appended to each essay, the lack of an index will hamper the reader.—Jim Elledge, Mundelein Coll. Lib., Chicago

Jaccottet, Philippe. Seedtime: extracts from the notebooks, 1954-1967.

New Directions, dist. by Lippincott. Mar. 1977. 64p. prose selections tr. by André Lefevere. verse tr. by Michael Hamburger. $8.50; pap. $2.95. PER NAR/LIT

Ably translated, these selected prose pieces and poems contain some of the more powerfully lyrical and vibrant images in the work of this contemporary French author. Each of the monthly entries in the notebooks reflects moods which are clearly conveyed and expressed in a multitude of different ways through both stylistic and textual means. Thoughts of the poet as observer of the universe and of his own art abound. Richly personal and varied in content and in expression, these excerpts will provide reading pleasure to a diverse public, particularly to those eager to read some of the literary creation of a distinguished poet whose reputation is firmly established in France.—Anthony S. Caprio, Dept. of Foreign Languages, Cedar Crest Coll., Allentown, Pa.

LITERATURE

McClung, William Alexander. The Country House in English Renaissance Poetry.

Univ. of California Pr. May. 1977. 172p. illus. index. LC 75-27928. ISBN 0-520-03137-7. $10.95. ARCHITECTURE/LIT

Rural life has always been idealized in pastoral literature, which extends to a small group of English country-house poems. McClung examines the literary, social, and architectural context of this genre, formalized in the early 17th Century by Ben Jonson and his contemporaries Herrick, Carew, and Marvell. The author shows how these poets regarded the very structure of the manor estate as an embodiment of traditional feudal ideals and as a contrast to the ostentatious palaces of a newer architectural style and changing social order. Larger in scope than the title suggests, the book brings to life the stylized conventions of this genre and its broader cultural setting.—Alison Heinemann, International Office, Univ. of Texas, Austin

Mercier, Vivian. Beckett/Beckett.

Oxford Univ. Pr. Apr. 1977. 272p. $10. LIT

Beckett has, in Mercier, a person who obviously has a deep understanding of his works and also a great knowledge of his Anglo-Irish heritage and education. Even though Beckett became famous after the premiere of Waiting for Godot in Paris in 1953 and later won the Nobel Prize, there is not an abundance of material on him. Mercier points out the differences between the French and English versions of his works, and also analyzes the writings quite astutely. Essential for academic and large public libraries.—Charles M. Lonnberg, Indiana State Univ. Lib., Evansville

Nurmi, Martin K. William Blake.

Kent State Univ. Pr. 1976. 175p. bibliog. index. LC 76-25476. ISBN 0-87338-191-2. $10; pap. ISBN 0-87338-192-0. $5.50. LIT

Written as an introduction to Blake's poetry and some of his major critics, this short work begins with a brief sketch of the poet's life and then in chronological order summarizes and analyzes his major works. Nurmi does a fine job of explaining the composite art of Blake's illuminated printing, and he makes some interesting observations on the poetry's connection with music. For example, Nurmi finds that the metrics in many poems from "Poetical Sketches" are most effective when analyzed in terms of musical rhythms. However, for a more basic and unified introduction to Blake's works and thought, Victor Paananen's William Blake (LJ 2/1/77) is recommended.—Joseph J. Branin, Kent State Univ. Lib., Salem, Ohio

The Pushcart Prize #2: best of the small presses.

Pushcart Pr., P.O. Box 845, Yonkers, N.Y. 10701. Apr. 1977. c. 475p. ed. by Bill Henderson & others. LC 76-58675. ISBN 0-916366-02-2. $12.50. LIT

In this excellent successor to the first Prize (LJ 4/1/76), Henderson and his team of distinguished editors once again cull some of the best new writing from the small presses and little mags.

New Books

A Century of Commentary on the Works of Washington Irving

edited by Andrew B. Myers

Forty-five selections of commentary, dating from 1860 to 1974, on the life and works of America's first internationally successful author. Compiled and introduced by noted Irving scholar Andrew B. Myers. The first modern collection of its kind, indispensible for students and libraries.

544 pp., illus., chronology, bibliography, index . . . cloth, $20.00

●

Life Along the Hudson

by Allan Keller

Extensively illustrated history of the Hudson River Valley, from the time of the earliest explorers to the present.

"a highly interesting and readable account"—Library Journal

288 pp., 98 illus., index . . . cloth, $10.00

●

The Van Cortlandt Family Papers

edited by Jacob Judd

VOLUME I: The Revolutionary War Memoir and Selected Correspondence of Philip Van Cortlandt

Continental Army Colonel Philip Van Cortlandt's firsthand account of major battles of the Revolution and correspondence with important figures of the period.

208 pp., illus., maps, index . . . cloth, $12.00

VOLUME II: Correspondence of the Van Cortlandt Family of Cortlandt Manor, 1748-1800

Accounts of the Revolutionary War and early national period by members of this influential family of American patriots.

appx. 750 pp., illus., maps index, bibliography

Available June 1977, cloth, $19.00

Information on Standing Orders available from:

Sleepy Hollow Restorations

BOX 245
TARRYTOWN, NEW YORK 10591

Please write for our new catalog.

Sixty presses are represented, more than three dozen new to this year's collection. There are 70 writers here (more than 3000 nominations were received), and none, with the exception of Octavio Paz, appeared in Prize #1. The book offers the traditional and the experimental, the big guns (Henry Miller, Paz) and—here's the unique value of the project—the unknown, writers we rarely get to read, but who deserve attention and support.

The quality of the writing varies; how could it not? Among the poets Carolyn Forché, John Ashbery, and Philip Levine are predictably up to par; Reg Saner, Douglas Crase, Kathryn Terrill, and Paul Zimmer have strong, moving poems; Richard Kostelanetz' page of numerals (a poem?) is downright silly. All the fiction is at least interesting, and there are gems by John Irving, Paul Goodman, and John Sanford (Goodman's first appeared in a little mag in 1932). There's a bit of erotica (not always successful), and three fine, sensitive variations on a theme by Kelly Cherry, Maxine Kumin, and Meredith Steinbach. The essays range from Christopher Lasch's cogent dissection of the family to Miller's enjoyable reminiscence. Many other selections are noteworthy, but suffice it to say that if you care at all about new writing you have to get this book. Let's hope there are many future Prizes and that they are as good as the first two.—Robert R. Harris, "Library Journal"

Sources and Analogues of Old English Poetry: the major Latin texts in translation.

Rowman & Littlefield. 1976. 235p. tr. by Michael J. B. Allen & Daniel G. Calder. LC 75-2240. $19.50. LIT

Calder and Allen have done their work well. Beowulf and the Battle of Finnsburg were intentionally omitted, but sources for most of the rest of Old English poetry are here. Translations of biblical and liturgical materials are likewise excluded as readily accessible elsewhere. Latin saints' lives, homilies, religious poetry, history, and apocrypha are rendered into plain, readable prose. The introduction to each section provides a good review of the Old English poem's relation to the source or sources. The book contains 22 sections, each devoted generally to a single poem, the riddles and elegies being exceptions. Appendix 1 gives helpful brief notes on additional Latin sources and analogues for the other Old English poems not given full consideration in the previous sections. Appendix 2 gives a translation of the Old Saxon Genesis, the single non-Latin source. This should prove a very useful book for graduate students and scholars. Sadly, today many would-be scholars find themselves ignorant of languages other than English. The translators are to be commended for offering these guides for those who wish to follow the trail they have marked with competence and good will. Highly recommended.—Hugh T. Keenan, Dept. of English, Georgia State Univ., Atlanta

Ziolkowski, Theodore. Disenchanted Images: a literary iconology.

Princeton Univ. Pr. Apr. 1977. 275p. index. $12.50. LIT

Ziolkowski's unique vision here (his method—iconographic analysis—is familiar to art history but has far-reaching implications for other arts as well) is tripartite. He analyzes walking statues, haunted portraits, magic mirrors—the "images representing the human body, and, by extension, the human soul"—in their culturohistoric dynamics, from late 18th-Century through contemporary American and European fiction. The paradigm for the "disenchantment" of these images is initial acceptance, to rationalization and psychological interpretation, to parody and fantasy. A vividly narrated yet immaculately analytic touch of magic for our oft-disenchanted world of literary criticism. Highly recommended.—Marcia G. Fuchs, Free Lib. of Philadelphia

MUSIC

Fischer-Dieskau, Dietrich. Schubert's Songs: a biographical study.

Knopf. Mar. 1977. 352p. ed. & tr. by Kenneth S. Whitton. bibliog. index. LC 76-45385. ISBN 0-394-48048-1. $12.50. BIOG/MUSIC

Fischer-Dieskau, the great interpreter of German lieder, has recorded some 500 of Schubert's approximately 600 songs. In this book, he traces their origin and development and places them within the context of the composer's life. The biographical approach is sometimes illuminating, but it also contributes to a feeling of choppiness as the author shifts back and forth between biography and musical description. Heavy use of block quotations and occasionally awkward translation also impede the narrative flow. In spite of these difficulties, one gets a sense of the composer's remarkable ability to enhance the meaning of the poetry he chose—much of it by poets such as Goethe and Schiller—through the nuances of his musical settings. Two older books, Maurice Brown's Schubert: a Critical Biography (LJ 8/58), and Richard Capell's Schubert's Songs (Basic Books, 1957. rev. ed. o.p.), are most accessible introductions to Schubert and his songs, but the student or singer of German lieder will find fascinating insights in this remarkable performer's descriptions, analyses, and impressions. Recommended.—Beth Macleod, Central Michigan Univ. Lib., Mt. Pleasant

Headington, Christopher. History of Western Music.

Schirmer Bks: Macmillan. 1977. 383p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-20883. $10.95; pap. Collier. $7.95. MUSIC

Headington concentrates heavily on composers' lives and on the affective content of their music, an approach having some merit for a book so plainly aimed at readers without technical knowledge; also in its favor is the smoothness with which the book reads. Even for his intended audience, however, Headington seems exaggeratedly reluctant to deal with observable aspects of musical style, and thus he seldom provides much idea of what the music is like in terms of sound and structure. Another flaw is that the discussion of pre-Bach music is too compressed to be successful. The study of early music sets special problems for novices, and requires greater elaboration, rather than less. This presentation seldom provides enough clarification to assist the inexperienced, and it skims over or ignores highly significant historical developments. The book as a whole rates as just passable for untrained readers and is not suitable for others.—John Conyers, Jackson State Community Coll. Lib., Tenn.

Philosophy

Sartre, Jean-Paul. Critique of Dialectical Reason: theory of practical ensembles.

Humanities. 1976. 835p. index. ed. by Jonathan Ree. tr. by Alan Sheridan-Smith. $30.

Sartre, Jean-Paul. Life/Situations: essays written and spoken.

Pantheon. Apr. 1977. 224p. tr. by Paul Auster & Lydia Davis. index. LC 76-54561. ISBN 0-394-40845-4. $8.95. POL SCI/PHIL

Sartre has passed the age of 70, and these two books will help English-speaking readers assess a lifetime's work. This first English translation of the Critique is an intellectual occasion. A translation of the book's introductory essay, Search for a Method (LJ 5/1/63), preceded the full treatise by many years, and the entire 1960 work that revises existential philosophy from a Marxist perspective has been eagerly anticipated. Sartre aims to provide a historical foundation for dialectical reason through man's practical relation to scarcity. Drawing on history, economics, and anthropology, he pursues his grand theme, freedom, as it develops through revolutionary movements. Although Sartre does not completely succeed in establishing dialectical reason as the intelligibility of history (a concluding second volume remains unwritten), his refinement of Marxist thought yields fascinating analyses of many complex social problems. The essays and interviews in Life/Situations make Sartre's most recent views accessible. The wide-ranging interviews cover Sartre's personal as well as public life; the essays reveal his philosophy as lived through political involvement, with papers on Basque separatism, Maoism in France, and the futility of the electoral process.—Daniel Levinson, "Newton Times," Mass.

Speeth, Kathleen Riordan. The Gurdjieff Work.

AND/OR Pr., P.O. Box 2246, Berkeley, Calif. 94702. 1976. 114p. illus. ISBN 0-915904-19-5. pap. $4.95. PSYCH/PHIL

A contemporary of Freud, Gurdjieff gained access to Eastern esoteric technologies and formulated from these a way of working for present-day seekers of self-realization. His system today is generally taught in groups surrounded by an aura of secrecy, exclusiveness, and high dedication. Past students and disciples have produced an impressive body of writing about their experiences and interpretations of his teachings. These books usually fall into one of two types—memoirs expressing love and admiration for a great teacher, or rambling and fundamentally incoherent attempts to systematize his complex esoteric information. Speeth provides a concise, intelligent, and very informative guide to this intriguing and obstreperous territory. She gives the flavor of relevant authors by quoting their writing, annotates a directory of the major Gurdjieff groups, and outlines the nature and "feel" of the exercises involved. She succeeds in demystifying much of the work and in showing why some of it must be experienced personally and in a group setting. Speeth is the child of Gurdjieff students and herself took up the work, and so is able to speak with authority.—Rosemary Feitis, Member, Rolf Inst., New York

POETRY

Brown, Rosellen. Cora Fry.

Norton. Mar. 1977. 96p. ISBN 0-393-04455-6. $7.95; pap. ISBN 0-393-04461-0. $2.95. POETRY

Over the past few years, poets have been rediscovering the various uses of persona in the book-length poem. Cora Fry works because Brown has found a persona close to herself: the spirit of a woman in a small New England town, half pioneer, half modern. Brown is secure enough as a poet to let the words stand on their own, to know when she's said enough, not to explain or justify what she's said. She's strongest where she's most alone, working from the primitive parts of herself. The poems leave a lot unsaid, they make us stop and think, relate them to our own life. At times some of the modern images seem a little surface, but they also serve to show the reader this isn't really grandmother's old days; the poet still has to exist right here. Feminists will enjoy the book on one level, lovers of poetry on another. Brown knows what she's doing, and she does it well.—Rochelle Ratner, Poetry Columnist, "Soho Weekly News," New York

Genser, Cynthia. Taking on the Local Color.

Wesleyan Univ. Pr. (Poetry Program: Vol. 84). Mar. 1977. 68p. $7.50; pap. $3.45. POETRY

Genser's poems are sharp and neat: their images line up on top of one another like vertebrae in a spinal column. Many of these phrases are well-turned: "A smile breaks from the brush/ a poem of nerves/ she greets the doorway/ like glass." Yet many are interesting only as interesting images: "Her waking is a release of stairs,/ a mint, a mosquito." The poems purport to render intimate experience, but they do so in such an oblique fashion that frequently the reader forgets to notice. The poem seems to come between the poet and her subject, the reader and the poet. My response to this book is too often like what happens in a poor writing class: "that's a nice image" or "a good line" or "that one doesn't work." I like a poem to be more than an exercise of the intellect.—Suzanne Juhasz, Dept. of English, Univ. of Colorado, Boulder

Koch, Kenneth. The Duplications.

Random. Apr. 1977. $6.95; pap. $3.95. POETRY

Ottava rima is so much fun as a form that readers probably will not notice that nothing in these two cantos about "outer space . . . grief, solemnity, and mirth" makes much clear sense. The duplications referred to involve a kind of Ovidian cloning: when people make love, a "temporary" city appears somewhere. Thus, Venice pops up in Peru. There are also some more nearly standard transformations of girl-into-lark, guy-into-statue, and so on. Among the major characters are Mickey Mouse and Clarabelle Cow. The minor embellishments provide more enjoyment than the plot. Koch is sublimely inventive when wringing the humor out of unexpected combinations of people, places, and things: this reviewer had no idea prior to reading The Duplications what matzohs, banjos, John Ruskin, the Packard auto, sauerkraut, the household orange, and Tucson, Arizona had in common, and is probably a gladder but wiser man for having found out.—Rowe Portis, New York

McHugh, Heather. Dangers.

Houghton. Mar. 1977. ISBN 0-395-25180-X. $6.95; pap. ISBN 0-395-25175-3. $4.50. POETRY

"I agree that something greatens us/but intelligence does not enter into it," she writes, but McHugh's poems intelligently, often wittily, argue for instinct, strokes of insight, the heart's two-timing, the seen, specific world whose dangers love illumines. "A body is seduced by damages," she tells us in acerbic, exact language. Dangers break us past protections, and McHugh often speaks through a variety of personae who show how perilously close love is to hate. She takes clichés and transforms their dead letters. Consistently she shows the warp and risk of vision, ways of knowing ourselves and others reflected in the "black glass" of hate or in the "looking glass that scars and heals." Poems both bleak and lush, defiant and vulnerable—alive.—Margaret Gibson, New London, Conn.

Plumly, Stanley. Out-of-the-Body Travel.

Ecco Pr., dist. by Viking. Mar. 1977. 48p. ISBN 0-912946-35-0. pap. $6.95. POETRY

Plumly's second book of poems reinforces the impression of him as a patient craftsman, a visionary of remarkable psychological intensity. His father's house, the nights when his father came to talk, seasons and persons of his childhood are recurring themes. Wind, sun, ocean, windows, empty rooms, ghosts, and songs of the dead are part of his imagery. Most of his lines are short and open, his stanzas are visibly organized. Vowel sounds and alliterations work: "So this is the air in the attic in August," or "The fields in fog, the low, dull resonance of morning." Definitions are clear: "Poor is cold feet in the morning, cold floor." Plumly's world is always on the edge of reality. It leaves "nothing you could know, or name, or say/ in your sleep, nothing you'd remember. . . ." It is what he seems to say to himself "in the little litany/ of breathing . . . ." "The whole house shakes—or seems to. At intervals,/ the ghost smoke fills/ all the windows on the close-in side." But we are enchanted.—Inge Judd, Queens Borough P.L., New York

Ritsos, Yannis. The Fourth Dimension: selected poems.

Godine. Mar. 1977. 176p. tr. by Rae Dalven. LC 75-11463. ISBN 0-87923-181-5. $12.50; pap. ISBN 0-87923-182-3. $5.95. POETRY

Ritsos, a popular poet and cultural hero in Greece who is now in his 60's, has a compelling voice that seems to me typically Greek—enduring in spite or because of what he believes is wrong. The poems are more than that, though: the struggle has been less a self-glorification than an affirmation of the triumph of conviction about truth. Spanning 40 years, the selections are both long and short, lyrical and political, verse paintings in free verse, moving reflections on what it took to stay alive in prison and in exile. "I exploit every nightly and daily nightmare." Included are some powerful dramatic monologues, some of which marry the themes of ancient epic to contemporary Greece without violating classical legend. Ritsos's tone is set by his careful observations and asides, and he suggests idea or mood concretely through perceived objects, his credo: "Every word is a way out/ for a meeting frequently canceled,/ and then it's a true word, when it insists on the meeting." It is no wonder that Ritsos' verse is sung and celebrated in his native land where "My heart is now a wide clay pot/ that went into the fire many times."—Rosaly DeMaios Roffman, Dept. of English, Indiana Univ. of Pennsylvania

Wakoski, Diane. Waiting for the King of Spain.

Black Sparrow. 1976. 157p. LC 76-44512. ISBN 0-87685-294-0. $10; pap. ISBN 0-87685-293-2. $4. POETRY

In Wakoski's latest collection old themes are "viewed and reviewed/ viewed over and over." Surreal images illuminate past loves the poet relives, laments, and yearns for again, to realize finally that "loving is/ the secret; not/ being loved." The mythical figure of the King of Spain, "as usual mysterious, but letting me know his connection with fire," roguishly appears in various guises; as the sun "climbing through the nasturtiums/ in my window box" to the final rendering of him "not properly dressed for a blizzard,/ in his gold shoes, thin silks and frozen mustache." An interesting blend of magic, wit, and banality, artfully used to restate some old truths in a contemporary idiom.—Andrea Kowler, "Library Journal"

Political Science & International Affairs

Breitman, George & others. The Assassination of Malcolm X.

Pathfinder, New York. Mar. 1977. 190p. ed. & intro. by Malik Miah. illus. LC-76-47347. ISBN 0-87348-472-X. $8; pap. dist. by Whirlwind Bk. Co., 80 5th Ave., N.Y.C. 10011. ISBN 0-87348-473-8. $1.95. HIST/POL SCI

The official version of yet another assassination is challenged in this collection of articles reprinted from various Trotskyist periodicals. Malcolm X apparently died at the hands of three Black Muslims, a victim of internecine conflict. The authors argue instead that local and federal police may have been involved in his murder, but neither hard nor new evidence is offered to support this theory. Much of the book merely analyze Malcolm's politics. Mostly written in the 1960's, it seems to be an attempt to capitalize on the current doubts surrounding other assassinations of that period. This is not to say that the original investigation was especially thorough or that the full truth has been revealed, but readers seeking answers here will be disappointed. For the most exhaustive Malcolm X collections only.—Gregor A. Preston, Pennsylvania State Univ. Libs., University Park

Cocks, Paul & others, eds. The Dynamics of Soviet Politics.

Harvard Univ. Pr. 1977. 427p. bibliog. index. LC 76-21667. ISBN 0-674-21881-7. $17.50. POL SCI

The editors of this Festschrift, dedicated to the late Harvard political scientist Merle Fainsod, have compiled 17 provocative essays dealing with a variety of issues: the legacy of Stalin, the succession problem, the emergence of bureaucratic pluralism, modernization and its impact upon minority nationalities, and foreign policy. There is much to ponder here. Those who, for example, are curious about the prospects for "convergence" will be struck by Cocks's observation that Soviet officialdom is making increasing use of systems management theory as well as program planning and budgeting techniques (borrowed from the U.S.) to curb troublesome pluralistic influences within the party and state apparat. Written in a crisp, incisive manner and well-organized thematically by the editors, this book is most suited to the interests of specialists and knowledgeable laymen in the field.—Fred E. Friedel, Dept. of History, Bellevue Community Coll., Wash.

Colbert, Evelyn. Southeast Asia in International Politics, 1941–1956.

Cornell Univ. Pr. Apr. 1977. 384p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-8014-0971-3. $17.50. HIST/INT AFFAIRS

This is a chronological study of the relations between the countries of Southeast Asia and the major powers, beginning with the varying approaches to the colonial issue in World War II and ending with the formation of SEATO, the Bandung Conference, and the beginnings of American involvement in Indochina. The book is a descriptive survey with little analysis of the social and economic forces underlying political developments. Based on secondary sources and published primary sources in English and French, it covers familiar ground, although the publication of the Pentagon Papers has enabled the author to offer some new insights into early American initiatives and responses. This authoritative and well-written account is recommended for most collections.—Charles R. Bryant, Yale Univ. Lib.

Hart, Henry C. ed. Indira Gandhi's India: a political system reappraised.

Westview Pr. 1976. 313p. index. LC 76-5433. ISBN 0-89158-042-5. $18.95; pap. ISBN 0-89158-109-X. $6.95. POL SCI

An excellent collection of recent and hitherto unpublished essays by recognized specialists on Indian politics, this book may be useful both as a text for classes on contemporary Indian politics and as library reference material for South Asian studies. Its focal point is India's June 1975 shift from a "quasi-democratic" state to a "quasi-dictatorship," and it develops this topic exceedingly well. Between Hart's introductory essay on the background to recent developments and India's new political rules of the game and his concluding analysis of Indira Gandhi and her actions, there are essays on such affected institutions as the "New Congress," the civil service, and the industrialists, as well as such passive observers as the rural poor and the military. There are also very useful notes. Recommended for graduate and undergraduate libraries.—Joseph R. Rudolph, Jr., Dept. of Political Science, Univ. of Tulsa, Okla.

Hill, Larry B. The Model Ombudsman: institutionalizing New Zealand's democratic experiment.

Princeton Univ. Pr. 1977. 411p. bibliog. index. LC 76-3258. ISBN 0-691-07579-4. $18.50. LAW/POL SCI

The institution of the ombudsman was conceived and nurtured in the Scandinavian countries with the aim of guarding the citizenry from bureaucratic restraints on liberty. How this concept fared when grafted into a different political framework is the subject of this book. Hill studied the 12 years of the New Zealand experiment (begun in 1962) with 18 months spent in firsthand observation. In this work he uses a field-report approach, which separately evaluates factors such as numbers and type of complaints made to the ombudsman, clientele, and impact on government agencies. He concludes that while appeals to the ombudsman were surprisingly few (partly due to a generally responsible civil service), the ombudsman was successful in helping many of those who had recourse to him. Because of the increasing interest in the ombudsman in Western countries, including the U.S., this book, with its extensive bibliography, should prove valuable.—Joseph R. Sakmyster, Attorney-at-law, Dallas

POLITICAL SCIENCE

Horn, Linda & Elma Griesel. Nursing Homes: citizens' action guide.

Beacon, dist. by Harper. Mar. 1977. 192p. LC 76-7745. ISBN 0-8070-0870-2. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-8070-0871-0. $2.95. POL SCI

The subject of nursing homes is usually approached in a polemical or sociological manner. Here is a book that picks up where others leave off. This practical manual for citizen action answers every question local groups might possibly ask. Is it a question of organizing a group? The book's first section gives chapter and verse of how to go about doing it. How then to get action? The second section offers a detailed guide on how to develop effective strategies and tactics. Want to find out about the experience of others? The final section gives brief accounts of 20 organizations active in nursing home reform that have successful track records. The authors have managed to keep their material straightforward and uncomplicated, despite the mass of detail within the book. Individuals as well as groups concerned with current problems of nursing homes should find this volume a useful tool.—Mary J. Mayer, New York City Dept. for the Aging

Ismael, Tareq Y. The Arab Left.

Syracuse Univ. Pr. 1976. 204p. index. LC 76-48136. ISBN 0-8156-0124-7. $15; pap. ISBN 0-8156-0125-5. $5.95. POL SCI

A descriptive analysis of the origins, development, and orientation of the nationalist Arab left as it has been influenced by the problem of Arab unity, the Palestinian question, and the issue of domestic social transformation. The author emphasizes "the radicalization and polarization of ideologies in the Arab World" after a detailed discussion of four leftist parties and their leadership (the Ba'ath, the Arab Nationalist Movement, Nasserism, and the Progressive Socialist party of Lebanon). The book is well documented and draws on materials available only in Arabic. Five appendixes list the Constitution of the Ba'ath party, the political manifesto of the Ba'ath Tenth National Conference, Nasser's statement on the inevitability of the Socialist solution, the political report of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, and material on the Organization of Communist Action in Lebanon. Informative if not necessarily imaginative, The Arab Left is primarily intended for a scholarly and specialized audience.—Jacques Fomerand, Center for European Studies, CUNY

The Lawless State: the crimes of the U.S. intelligence agencies by Morton H. Halperin & others.

Penguin. 1976. 328p. illus. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-14-004386-1. pap. $2.95.

Rositzke, Harry. The CIA's Secret Operations: espionage, counterespionage, and covert action.

Reader's Digest Pr., dist. by Crowell. Mar. 1977. 274p. index. ISBN 0-88349-116-8. $12.95. GOVT

Watergate and its aftermath have keenly focused America's attention on the abuses of government intelligence agencies: the CIA masterminded foreign assassination attempts, conducted covert operations in Chile, and spied upon Americans; the FBI compiled security lists, carried out smear campaigns such as that against the late Martin Luther King Jr., and became the personal domain of J. Edgar Hoover. These and other misdeeds, carried out with Presidential knowledge and, in many cases, approval, are examples of the lawless activities discussed in these two books. Rositzke, a retired CIA agent, traces the development of the organization and stresses the importance of national security, pointing out that the Russian KGB has many agents working in the West. He discusses espionage, counterespionage, and covert operations, showing the abuses and misdirected activities of the CIA.

POLITICAL SCIENCE

Halperin et al. discuss the CIA, FBI, NSA, and IRS, documenting past abuses and suggesting reforms such as tighter organization and control of the agencies and strict judicial control of activities such as wiretapping, mail opening, and searches. Both books are well written and are highly recommended.—William C. Cooper, Laurens County P.L. System, S.C.

Stockholm International Peace Research Institute (SIPRI). Armaments and Disarmaments in the nuclear age: a handbook.

Humanities. 1976. 308p. bibliog. index. LC 76-27299. ISBN 0-391-00652-5. $18. INT AFFAIRS

This important book is a compilation of the conclusions of previous SIPRI publications, together with summaries of other significant papers and books on the subject. Much statistical information is included, and abbreviations and acronyms are defined in a separate section. The writing is clear, and reference is always made to the full studies that are summarized. This is the best collection of the facts and issues involved in disarmament efforts. Since this handbook gives access to so much information, most libraries should have a copy.—Edward Gibson, Washington Coll. Lib., Chestertown, Md.

Terrell, Paul with assist. of Stan Weisner. The Social Impact of Revenue Sharing: planning, participation, and the purchase of service.

Praeger. (Special Studies in U.S. Economic, Social, & Political Issues). 1976. 114p. bibliog. LC 76-12882. ISBN 0-275-23470-3. $12.50. ECON/GOVT

This book examines the effects of general revenue sharing on social programs by describing seven case studies which illustrate potentials for systematic social service planning and participation. The cases also demonstrate the various obstacles and constraints facing those proponents of the use of revenue sharing to advance social welfare. The chapter on comparative revenue sharing provides useful hypotheses concerning the social, political, and economic preconditions for successful action. As this volume is primarily descriptive, it can be easily read by anybody interested in social revenue sharing, while academic libraries may find it useful because some of the hypotheses generated may be appropriate for further empirical testing.—Raymond L. Raab, Dept. of Economics, Univ. of Minnesota, Duluth

Wilson, Harold. The Governance of Britain.

Harper. Apr. 1977. 240p. index. ISBN 0-06-014076-1. $10.95. POL SCI

Wilson, who resigned as Britain's Prime Minister in March 1976, reflects here on the practice of the political office he twice occupied between 1964 and 1976. The result is an uneven book, characteristically bland and factual, but containing insights into how Wilson perceived his role as P.M. Britain's economic crisis is given slight attention, while the relationships of the Prime Minister to Cabinet, Parliament, and Labour Party are examined in some depth. Wilson denies that recent Prime Ministers have so overshadowed the Cabinet as a whole that a British "presidential" system has developed, and instead stresses Asquith's maxim that the office is whatever its holder is able to make of it. The work ends with an interesting comparison of the British system of Cabinet responsibility to Parliament and the American system of separation of powers between Congress and President. Not surprisingly, Wilson is happy with the system within which he operated so skillfully.—Donald J. Murphy, Dept. of History, Chabot Coll., Livermore, Calif.

Psychology & Psychiatry

Ahsen, Akhter. Psycheye: self-analytic consciousness.

Brandon House. 1977. 279p. bibliog. index. LC 76-45271. ISBN 0-913412-47-3. $7.50 PSYCH

An eidetic image is an unusually vivid form of pictorial recall common to children, less so to adults. Ahsen takes this "inner seeing" as an imagistic language of the mind that under disciplined inquiry can provide ready access to positive and negative aspects of the past for adults as well as for children. The latter third of the book presents Ahsen's Eidetic Parents Test containing 30 imagery exercises designed either for use with a therapist or for self-use. The therapeutic aspect of this method is asserted, although it has not yet been demonstrated by extensive empirical studies; however, it seems promising because controlled eidetic reenactments of problematic experiences seem to naturally provide a therapy process model of great effectiveness even for individuals with frozen ideation, and because the process involves a "natural gift" present in each of us. It is a spontaneous but repeatable technique of self-observation which bypasses the

The Book Review is in need of qualified people to review titles in Political Science, including reference works and books on political theory. Contact Philip Mattera, The Book Review.

WOMEN AS WINNERS

Transactional Analysis for Personal Growth
Dorothy Jongeward
(co-author of BORN TO WIN)
and Dru Scott

"Effectively uses TA techniques to reveal how women adapt to early influences . . . and provides exercises and exhortations to confront entrenched opinions."
Library Journal

320 pp. LC 76-421
$9.95 hardcover ISBN 0-201-03386-0
$4.95 paperback ISBN 0-201-03435-2

ADDISON-WESLEY
Reading, Massachusetts 01867

PHILOTHERAPY By
I. E. BREITNER M.D.

"a new revolutionary approach to Psychotherapy by a L.I. Psychiatrist"—Mass Physician.

"an important message"
—Psychiatry.

"a new method and technique"
—Adolescence.

$12.00 ISBN 0-914252-003

THE LIFE OF THE VICTIM
by I. E. BREITNER M.D.

All of us are victims, struggling with external and internal forces through the Three Phases of Human Life
Prepub . . . $9.50 ISBN 0-918066-07-7
IMIBOOKS PUBLICATIONS
Box 9 New York 11548.

use of abstract and thus corruptible forms of conscious memory or defense-laden dream images. This volume represents a philosophical summary of Ahsen's three earlier books on eidetics, with updated bibliography. Despite awkward syntax and digressive intellectualizing, it would be appropriate for psychology collections, especially those lacking Ahsen's earlier works.—William Abrams, Portland State Univ. Lib., Ore.

Higbee, Kenneth L. Your Memory: how it works and how to improve it.
Prentice-Hall. 1977. ISBN 0-13-980144-8. $9.95; pap. Spectrum. ISBN 0-13-980136-7. $3.95. PSYCH

This book provides a reasonable balance between the oversimplified popular books about mnemonics and the empirical research on learning and memory. Following a general introduction concerning the nature of memory and techniques for studying it, Higbee (a psychologist at Brigham Young University) discusses some basic principles of memory improvement, strategies for effective learning, some general rules for improving memory, and four specific memory systems (link, loci, peg, and phonetic). In addition, these are related to some practical situations to illustrate their effectiveness. The writing is clear; technical references are cited but do not bog the reader down in technical jargon or unnecessary detail. The author is commendably cautious in repeatedly emphasizing that improving one's memory is hard work.—Charles L. Brewer, Dept. of Psychology, Furman Univ., Greenville, S.C.

Kennedy, Eugene. On Becoming a Counselor: a basic guide for non-professional counselors.
Crossroad: Seabury. 1977. $12.95. PSYCH

This is an excellent and refreshingly lively guide to dealing with adolescents and adults in a helping capacity. Kennedy's emphasis in the counseling-therapy situation is on eliminating stress in the relationship and on the importance of the counselor's knowledge of self. Descriptions of classical definitions of personality types are impressively updated and presented in a style suitable for the lay counselor and student. The end of the book, dealing with situations such as grief, suicide, drug abuse, and "emergencies," lacks the authority of the chapters on personality, but as a whole the book should be useful to clergy, educators, and other non-professional counselors as a lively, practical introductory text with many fine basic bibliographies. For undergraduate and graduate education, psychology, and social work libraries, and for large cosmopolitan public libraries.—Anne F. Dykstra, Brooklyn P.L.

Luria, A. R. Cognitive Development: its cultural and social foundations.
Harvard Univ. Pr. 1976. 175p. fwd. by Michael Cole. bibliog. index. illus. LC 76-24817. ISBN 0-674-13731-0. $12.50. PSYCH

This work, which appeared in its original Russian in 1972, describes field work conducted during 1931 to 1932 with the intent of studying the psychological differences resulting from the impact of the socialist revolution on the remote and ancient Islamic culture of Uzbekistan. Luria, a professor of psychology at Moscow University, is renowned for his work on the development of language and thought. The unique conditions of this investigation allowed the author to compare from the same culture both underdeveloped groups and groups already beginning to be involved in modern life. Luria studied differences in conceptualization in terms of perception, abstraction, reasoning, and imagination, and the resultant analysis clearly shows the socio-historical shaping of these higher mental processes. Luria's procedure of observation and carefully structured questioning is elegant in its simplicity and naturalness and represents a significant advance in clinical field methodology. An interesting treatise on cognition, having definite implications for cultural anthropology and for the developmental psychology of cultural minorities.—William Abrams, Portland State Univ. Lib., Ore.

Ward, Alan J. with contribs. by H. Allen Handford, M.D. & Virginia M. Leith. Childhood Autism & Structural Therapy: selected papers on early childhood autism.
Nelson-Hall. 1976. 222p. index. LC 76-23171. ISBN 0-911012-56-7. $12.50. PSYCH

This collection of 16 papers (all previously published) acknowledges only lightly that the psychological nature of autism is very much in question. Ward's and his colleagues' bias is clearly a psychodynamic one. Though he appears to accept the neurophysiologic basis for many of the autistic symptoms, his treatment approach is based on an ego developmental theory which has, at best, an uncertain support in the data on autism. Ward's book describes structural play therapy as an ordered incremental program for addressing the observed developmental deficits of the autistic child while at the same time intuitively responding to his emotional needs. He reports some success. However, the articles documenting this success are exasperatingly redundant in their discussions of etiology and definition, and in the repeated descriptions of the technique and rationale of Ward's structural therapy. Readers would have been better served with a more concise, freshly written treatise.—James Charney, M.D., Dept. of Psychiatry, Yale Univ. Sch. of Medicine

Parapsychology & Occultism

Targ, Russell & Harold Puthoff. Mind-Reach: scientists look at psychic ability.
Delacorte. 1977. 280p. intro. by Margaret Mead. illus. index. ISBN 0-440-05688-7. $8.95. PARAPSYCH

Since 1972 physicists Targ and Puthoff have been carrying out parapsychology experiments at the Stanford Research Institute. Mind-Reach, a review and summary of their research to date, reports the results of "remote viewing" experiments, in which the experimenters asked subjects to describe their in-

Recommended by The Booklist
MADELEINE L'ENGLE'S NEW BOOK,
The Irrational Season
"L'Engle's spiritual exercises over a year of seasonal changes and the Christian church calendar are shared in these reflections from her personal journal. As the author's beliefs inform everyday joys, frustrations, and conflicts, L'Engle determinedly comes to grips with herself, mankind, and her faith."—ALA, The Booklist
" ... The most compelling parts of this sensitive book describe the author's periods of atheism and her fight to recover from 'cold isolation,' the terror of believing in nothing."—Publishers' Weekly
LC 76-46944 0-8164-0324-4 $8.95
Recommended by Library Journal
JOHN COGLEY'S AUTOBIOGRAPHY
A Canterbury Tale
Experiences and Reflections, 1916-1976
"In this gentle, low-key autobiography, a longtime editor and columnist for the Catholic weekly Commonweal vividly recalls one of the most turbulent periods in our nation's religious history ... his lively narrative captures the reader's attention and holds it fast. This is American cultural history in the best sense of that term: colorful, interesting, and full of insights."—Library Journal
"A gem ..."—New York Times Book Review
LC 76-21864 0-8164-0322-8 $8.95
Catalogs on complete publishing program are available from
THE SEABURY PRESS
815 Second Avenue
New York, N.Y. 10017

ternal imaging of a target location, usually the destination of a third party. The researchers' competent experimental technique and impeccable integrity, combined with the obviously positive results of their experiments, provide unquestionably powerful evidence for the reality of parasensory perception. Targ and Puthoff demonstrate with this work that given proper conditions, anyone can obtain perceptions traditionally considered paranormal or impossible. In addition, they prove the facility of a positive setting for paranormal activity, and they demonstrate again and again the interference of the conscious mind with paraperception: only when confidence was inspired and analytical activity suppressed or ignored, were reliable results forthcoming. Targ and Puthoff do more than present laboratory observations. They describe the uncanny elusiveness of psychic phenomena, as again and again attempts to design controlled experiments were frustrated by unexpected, seemingly miraculous coincidences. Yet though the most convincing events took place outside the experiments, the authors consistently regarded only controlled experimental results as valid scientific data. Their book is highly recommended.—Edward H. Russell, New York

religion

Comay, Joan. The Hebrew Kings.

Morrow. 1977. 168p. illus. maps. index. LC 76-44606. ISBN 0-688-03139-0. $8.95. HIST/REL

This well-written introduction to the Hebrew kings spans the period between the election of Saul (c. 1020 B.C.) and the fall of Jerusalem to the Babylonians (c. 587 B.C.). The text includes a short section dealing with the authorship of the Bible and a discussion of the nature of prophecy. Also useful are maps of the Holy Land illustrating tribal and enemy boundaries; a chronology of kings, prophets, and general history; black-and-white reproductions of several historic works of art depicting the kings; and photographs of several of the archaeological sites presently known to be related to biblical places of interest. Comay has written other books of Jewish interest (among them The Temple of Jerusalem, LJ 11/15/75, and Israel, LJ 6/15/69), and was an editor of Encyclopedia Judaica. This short text would be useful in religious schools and in YA collections.—Moshe H. Spero, Sch. of Applied Social Sciences, Case Western Reserve Univ., Cleveland al-Ghazali. On the Duties of Brotherhood.

Overlook, dist. by Viking. 1977. 94p. tr. from Classical Arabic by Muhtar Holland. LC 76-8057. ISBN 0-87951-046-3. $6.95. REL

Al-Ghazali (d. 1111) was one of Islam's most important theologians. His seminal Revitalization of the Religious Sciences was a comprehensive, fundamental treatise which integrated orthodox Islam with Sufism. This volume presents one chapter of that work, a manual on being "thy brother's" spiritual and material "keeper": lofty ideals expressed in down-to-earth fashion to guide the reader in his daily life. Al-Ghazali's lucid style and the readable translation render the contents accessible, despite difficult passages. However, the entire Revitalization is available for $12. from Books on Islam, Ltd., 240 W. 72nd St., N.Y.C. 10023. (The same company's Catalogue and Guide to Books on Islam, 68p., $1.50, in which Revitalization is listed, is a fully and thoughtfully annotated, wide-ranging, extremely useful sales catalog and bibliography which every collection on Islam should have on its shelves.)—David W. Littlefield, Library of Congress

Internat. Symposium on the Holocaust, Cathedral of St. John the Divine, 1974. Auschwitz: beginning of a new era? reflections on the Holocaust.

Ktav. Mar. 1977. 469p. ed. by Eva Fleischner. LC 76-53809. ISBN 0-87068-499-X. $17.50; pap. $8.95. HIST/REL

Nearly three years ago Jewish and Christian intellectuals met in New York to reflect upon the meaning of Hitler's Holocaust. The 26 papers given at that international symposium make up this large book. Their authors analyze fundamental questions raised by the organized murder of six million Jews, an evil of such unprecedented magnitude that the world prefers to forget it. Approaching the challenge from almost any perspective, it is plain that neither an easy hope nor an easy faith is possible any longer, for Jew or Christian. So accustomed have we become to violence since Auschwitz that indifference is again the common response. This is not a book for the casual reader, but it is indispensable to any serious student of Holocaust history. The voices raised are often at odds, but they bear witness to "the chief counter-testimony of the Holocaust: the preciousness and uniqueness of every human being."—Milton Meltzer, New York

O'Connor, Elizabeth. The New Community.

Harper. 1976. 121p. illus. LC 76-9964. ISBN 0-06-066337-5. pap. $3.95. REL

O'Connor has written a thought-provoking book on the various aspects of Christian community as it is lived in her Church of the Saviour (Washington, D.C.). She shows that one cannot sustain community without both inner, personal transformation—through giving up "safe" ways of acting and thinking—and transformation of the outer world—through joining the struggle of the oppressed by positive action, while avoiding both racism and condescension. Emphasis is on the need to communicate and on the worth of all of God's children. Suitable for church and public libraries.—Judith R. Forester, Lansing P.L., Mich.

Otwell, John H. And Sarah Laughed: the status of women in the Old Testament.

Westminster. Apr. 1977. 260p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-664-24126-3. pap. $6.95. REL

Otwell demonstrates that women of the

"No other handbook on the market today includes such a thorough and knowledgeable examination of each book of the Bible."
—Christian Bookseller

Three easy-to-read, comprehensive sections, "The Bible Today," "The Bible in History" (including the Apocrypha), and "The Bible and Faith and Life;" many maps and photographs; and a beautiful sixteen-page color insert that portrays the Holy Land—its people and archaeological treasures, all add up to a complete, nontechnical interpretation of the scriptures.

The Abingdon Bible Handbook certainly belongs in your reference section! Edward P. Blair $15.95

"The value of such a book as this depends upon its scholarship, objectivity, religious depth, and clarity of statement. And in each of these aspects the Handbook meets the highest standards."
—Religion in Life

abingdon

Old Testament had a high relative standing, contrary to the nearly universal assumption that they were considered personally and functionally inferior. The very primacy of the family and the singular respect for procreation as always reflecting divine influence are the overlapping tenets Otwell uses in his enlightening study. His approach is thematic and thus lends itself to extensive (and in this case, very effective) use of Old Testament texts. One of the most informative chapters deals with the hitherto neglected consideration of the role played by women in the religious rites. The final chapter discusses female personification: the designation (and the implications thereof) of cities, virtues, and the spirit of God as feminine. This work is careful, balanced, and overdue. Extensive notes and bibliography. Recommended for the general reader and as supplementary reading for college students and seminarians.—Barbara Gannon, St. Anselm's College Lib., Manchester, N.H.

Wolhorn, Herman. Emmet Fox's "Golden Keys to Successful Living" and Reminiscences.

Harper. Mar. 1977. 224p. ISBN 0-06-069670-2. $6.95. REL

Emmet Fox died in 1951 but religious services based upon his teachings are still held regularly, and his books and pamphlets are widely read today. Few of his followers, therefore, will need this summary of his metaphysics, but they may be interested in Wolhorn's recollections of trips he and his wife took with Fox to many of the world's most colorful places. Other readers, however, who may be curious about the magnetism which Fox must have possessed to attract so many thousands of people to his lectures to hear how to change their lives, will be disappointed in this book. Some will not get beyond the "Seven Day Mental Diet" which can help one to be born again. Those who do read further may find inspiration in other Fox teachings, but they will learn very little about the man from this hurried, superficial account of 20 years of Fox's vacations. A brief, tantalizing chapter on Fox's psychic beliefs is included. Expansion of this subject would have broadened readership for this book a good deal, one surmises.—Eleanor Touhey Smith, New York

THIS VERY DAY

David F. Barr

Author Barr recreates the last six days in the lives of Dismas and Caleb, the two thieves who were crucified with Christ. He brings the well-known Passion Week events to life in a fresh and powerful way.

The author spent three years studying the Bible, other historical books, and folklore related to Dismas being the "good thief" in preparation for this exciting novel. Clothbound, ISBN 0-8361-1803-0; $7.95.

HERALD PRESS
Department LJ
Scottdale, PA 15683
Kitchener, ON N2G 4M5

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

Belanger, Jerome D. Raising the Homestead Hog.

Rodale. Mar. 1977. 224p. illus. index. LC 76-55010. ISBN 0-87857-158-2. $7.95.

ANIMAL HUSBANDRY

"Don't expect to be very successful with pigs unless you sort of like the critters," Belanger advises. Assuming that the homesteader who raises his own lettuce and tomatoes organically now contemplates raising his own bacon organically, Belanger sets forth reasons for liking pigs and directions for raising them on a small piece of land. U.S. Department of Agriculture county agents might smile at some of the suggestions—e.g., tethering a pig and moving it from place to place for optimum use of limited pasture—but probably would go along with most of Belanger's ideas on swine management. After a general discussion of organic hog production he gives particulars for feeding, housing, preventing disease, avoiding nutritional deficiencies, and the expenses involved for the one-hog family and for more ambitious swine producers. A good guide for the small-scale, inexperienced farmer who is ready to advance from vegetables and chickens to pork production.—Louise B. Hodges, Amherst County P.L., Va.

Coleman, William & Camille Limoges, eds. Studies in History of Biology.

Johns Hopkins. (Historical Studies in the Life Sciences, Vol. 1). Mar. 1977. 256p. ISBN 0-8018-1862-1. $14. HIST/BIOLOGY

This first volume of a new annual series contains three major essays and one lengthy book review. Arnold Ravin's essay, "The Gene as Catalyst: the Gene as Organism," explores the scientific preoccupation with causative agents of organic growth and differentiation—genes, enzymes, and other catalytic explanations—that characterized theoretical biology in the second half of the 19th Century. This piece is a major contribution to the historical appreciation of the steps leading up to the acceptance among scientists of the gene as a physical reality. The second and third essays, William Albury's study of Marie Bichat and François Magendie and the rise of experimental physiology and Ruth Schwartz Cowan's analysis of the interplay of science and politics in the work of Sir Francis Galton, are also principally grounded in the 19th Century. The concluding book review praises François Jacob's La Logique du Vivant (1970) and its English translation, The Logic of Life (Pantheon, 1974). Scholars working in the history of biology will want to consult the series on a regular basis; historians of science specializing in 19th-Century biology will find this first volume particularly engaging.—Frances Groen, McGill Univ. Lib., Montreal, Canada

White, William J. Airships for the Future.

Sterling. Mar. 1977. 160p. illus. index. LC 76-19768. ISBN 0-8069-0090-3. $8.95; lib. ed. ISBN 0-8069-0091-1. $7.89. AERONAUTICS

The aeronautical oddities of blimps, balloons, and dirigibles have had a small but colorful part in aviation history and, according to the author of this book, they're going to be coming back. White contends that the lighter-than-air concept will regain popularity as a result of new technology and increasing energy costs. Airships, he claims, consume far less energy because of their inherent ability to overcome gravity; the use of airships would thus reduce air pollution and noise. For background, the author offers an illustrated tour of airship history from the earliest balloons to the World War II submarine patrol blimps. In the sections on the future of airships he presents the latest developments in hot-air ballooning plus short descriptions and artists' renderings of proposed airship designs. Readers seeking a technical analysis of airship design will be disappointed, but those interested in a general coverage of what's happening in this corner of the aviation world will be fascinated.—Gerald Cullen, Datapoint Business Computers, San Antonio, Tex.

Botany & Horticulture

Bianchini, Francesco & Francesco Corbetta. Health Plants of the World: atlas of medicinal plants.

Newsweek Bks. Mar. 1977. 275p. color illus. by Marilena Pistoia. English adaptation by M. A. Dejey. bibliog. index. LC 76-46692. ISBN 0-88225-250-X. $19.95; until Jun. 30 $16.95. MED/HORT

Originally published in Italian, this modern herbal has been created in the spirit of the ancient herbalists. Although the plants considered are mainly European, most of them will be familiar to North American readers as weeds (dandelion, shepherd's-purse), cultivated garden plants (foxglove, comfrey), or imported tropical products (cinnamon, clove). The plants are arranged two or three to a page, and are grouped by the part or system of the human body the ailments of which they are intended to treat. The text is both readable and informative, with discussions of the history of medicinal use, active chemical ingredients, and folklore or mythology associated with the plants. Each plant is illustrated by a large full-color painting as accurate and lifelike as it is beautiful. Glossaries of botanical and pharmacological terms follow an appendix which lists range, habitat, and growth forms of the plants. A severe shortcoming is the bibliography, which makes no mention of references on phytochemistry and ethnobotany, and which lists recent reprints of several very old herbals without mentioning their original publication dates. There is an index to both common and scientific names. A beautiful book.—Annette Aiello, Harvard Univ. Herbaria

Scheller, William. Successful Home Greenhouses: building, stocking, using.

Successful Bk: Structures Pub. 1977. 136p. color illus. $12; pap. $4.95. TECH/HORT

Planning, building, and equipping a greenhouse for home use involves determining the home gardener's needs and what limitations his climate, home, and pocketbook place on these needs. Scheller brings his experience with home gardening in New England to bear in this very practical book on greenhouse building. I think he could have included more information on how to conserve heat, on the problems of fumigation and enriched atmospheres in the home greenhouse, on details beyond just blueprints for the steps in building the houses and cold frames. In general, though, Scheller provides a level-headed, introductory presentation of what is really quite a complicated subject.—Margery Read, formerly with Bergen Community Coll. Lib., Paramus, N.J.

Earth Science

The Geology of Mars by Thomas A. Mutch & others.

Princeton Univ. Pr. 1977. 400p. illus, some color. bibliog. index. LC 75-30199. ISBN 0-691-08173-5. $35. ASTRONOMY/EARTH SCI

This is a profusely illustrated résumé of current knowledge and interpretation in the style of Geology of the Moon (LJ 8/70) by Mutch. There is a short history of our great interest in Mars, but the bulk of the work consists of Mariner photographs and data together with geologic interpretation. Many explanatory drawings enhance the text, an extensive bibliography is included, and a supplement offers a selection from the more recent Viking photographs. Astronomers and, especially, geologists will appreciate the concise and authoritative material in this highly recommended work.—R. G. Schipf, Univ. of Montana Lib., Missoula

Heintze, Carl. The Biosphere: earth, air, fire and water.

Thomas Nelson. Apr. 1977. 160p. illus. index. ISBN 0-8407-6498-7. $6.95. ENVIRONMENT/EARTH SCI

Heintze gives the reader a glimpse at the "elements" of the biosphere—earth, air, fire, and water—and shows how each is related in a "delicate balance" to each other and to man. A temperature change, which could result from a new, man-made "element"—pollution—could drastically upset this balance, and could cause havoc on Earth. Fortunately, Heintze feels there is still time to correct man-made abuses. His book lacks the technical terminology that is found in so many works on this subject. Recommended.—Edward Schultz, Dover P.L., N.J.

Health & Medicine

Columbu, Franco with George Fels. Winning Bodybuilding.

Regnery. Apr. 1977. 128p. ISBN 0-8092-8110-4. $8.95; pap. Mar. 1977. ISBN 0-8092-8109-0. $4.95. SPORTS/HEALTH

The techniques of body building are simply explained here, with an enthusiasm that even the casual reader may catch. Recommended exercises for all levels of ability and experience are well illustrated and, with a chapter devoted to each body area, a comprehensive body-building program can be readily set up. Unfortunately, the coverage of topics other than the body-building process and training techniques is of much lower quality: statements such as "the sun adds to my strength" and "protein is good for the body, but the brain needs carbohydrates" are examples of numerous inaccurate or misleading statements found in these sections of the book. Also, the claims made for

FIRST CLASS!

Complete line of over 70 automotive, photography and sporting "How-To" manuals!

Simplified text and concise organization for beginning or advanced students!

Step-by-step instructions packed with text-coded diagrams and photos!

Available from any of these Petersen Book distributors or your local wholesalers.

THE BAKER & TAYLOR COMPANY
50 Kirby Ave
Sommerville NJ 08876

Gladiola Ave.
Momence IL 60954

380 Edison Way
Reno NV 89502

Mt. Olive Road
Commerce, GA 30529

Industrial Park
Clarksville TX 75426

GORDON'S BOOKS, INC.
4280 Columbine
Denver CO 80216

INGRAM BOOK CO
347 Reedwood Drive
Nashville TN 37217

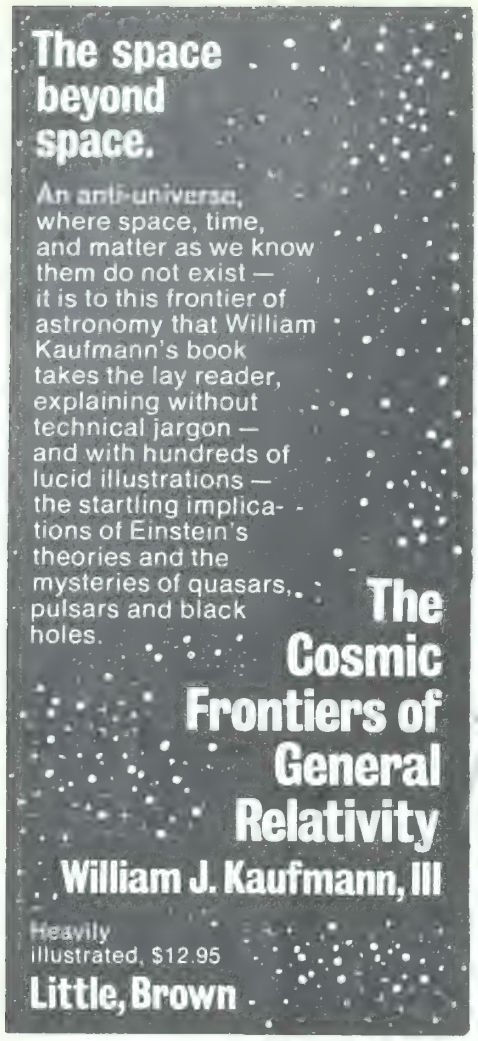
PAXTON-PATTERSON
5719 West 65th St.
Chicago, IL 60638

45 Samworth Road
Clifton NJ 07012

MERIT BOOK
1 Commerce St
Bayonne NJ 02002

ATLANTIC BOOK CO.
3748 10th St. NE
Washington D.C. 20012

PETERSEN BOOKS
PETERSEN PUBLISHING COMPANY • 6725 Sunset Boulevard, Los Angeles, CA 90028



The space beyond space.
An anti-universe, where space, time, and matter as we know them do not exist — it is to this frontier of astronomy that William Kaufmann's book takes the lay reader, explaining without technical jargon — and with hundreds of lucid illustrations — the startling implications of Einstein's theories and the mysteries of quasars, pulsars and black holes.
The Cosmic Frontiers of General Relativity
William J. Kaufmann, III
Heavily illustrated, $12.95
Little, Brown

"A GOOD GUIDE"
DAIRY GOATS
By Diana Gregory
Written from considerable experience and with great affection, this is a good guide to dairy goat farming for the layman. Chapters cover buying, varieties, housing, feeding, milking, cooking with goat's milk, breeding, raising kids, and coping with illness. An appendix lists breed registry associations, publications, and organizations. The author, while demonstrating that raising goats can be fun, never loses sight of the attention that must be paid to the health and welfare of the family dairy goat. For the novice goat owner her book is probably more useful than David Mackenzie's Goat Husbandry (Transatlantic, 1957), which is highly comprehensive and includes a good deal of theory, and it also may be an improvement over Helen Walsh's many times reprinted Starting Right With Milk Goats (Garden Way Pub., 1972, pap.). Rural and small city public libraries should consider adding this title.—Louise B. Hodges, Amherst County P.L., Va.
—Louise B. Hodges
Library Journal
127p. photos
LC 76 235
cloth $7.95
paper $3.95
arco PUBLISHING COMPANY, INC.
219 Park Avenue South, New York, N.Y. 10003

the value of chiropractic treatment and adjustments have not been substantiated through medical research.—Kenneth Tillman, Dept. of Health & Physical Education, Trenton State Coll., N.J.

DeSmedt, Evelyn & others. Lifearts: a practical guide to total being—traditional wisdom and the new medicine.

St. Martin's. Mar. 1977. 250p. tr. by Lowell Blair. illus. by Valerie Catherine Richez. LC 76-10550. ISBN 0-312-48510-7. $15; pap. ISBN 0-312-48545-X. $5.95. HEALTH

This rambling discourse describes many popular systems of self-awareness and health care, such as yoga, zen meditation, folk traditions in nutrition, and healing with plants and minerals. The traditional wisdom presented is of questionable value, and there is no new medicine included. The ongoing philosophical commentary and a final section on cosmology are pedestrian.—Roger Thies, Depts. of Physiology & Psychiatry, Univ. of Oklahoma Health Sciences Center, Oklahoma City

Gifford-Jones, W., M.D. What Every Woman Should Know About Hysterectomy.

F. & W., dist. by Crowell. Apr. 1977. 208p. LC 76-45747. ISBN 0-308-10275-4. index. $8.95. MED

A pseudonymous gynecologist has written this refreshingly honest presentation of the pros and cons of hysterectomy so that women can avoid needless surgery. Clearly explained are the reasons for necessary hysterectomy; factors to consider when choosing a gynecologist; types of hysterectomies; estrogen and cancer; and sterilization. Information is reviewed in question-and-answer format at the end of most chapters. The presentation of many case studies helps make real and personal the consequences of various gynecologic disorders. Recommended for public and medical libraries.—Ellen R. Paterson, SUNY at Cortland Lib.

Hooker, Susan. Caring for Elderly People: understanding and practical help.

Routledge & Kegan Paul. 1976. 165p. illus. index. ISBN 0-7100-8376-9. $8.95. HEALTH

It is a sad fact that the older one becomes, the greater the chance of having a chronic illness or disability. With the increase in the numbers of community-based elderly has also come growing recognition that older people's health problems are different from those of younger ones. For those who are coping with such problems, either assisting relatives or friends or working in an institutional setting, this book provides a wealth of solid practical help. The author explains the major illnesses and impairments of old age and offers very good advice on bed care, daily activities, and exercise. A particularly useful chapter describes a wide variety of gadgets and aids enabling the elderly patient to achieve a degree of independent functioning. Although the author is English and some of her suggestions may, therefore, be unfamiliar here, her approach toward helping the chronically ill older person live as happily and actively as possible is an essential concept for anyone to employ in caring for the elderly.—Mary J. Mayer, New York City Dept. for the Aging

Johnson, Tom & Tim Miller. The Sauna Book.

Harper. Apr. 1977. 224p. illus. bibliog. ISBN 0-06-012219-6. $12.95; pap. $8.95. HEALTH

This comprehensive, well-illustrated handbook has something for both current and potential devotees of the sauna. It has basic information on how to take and enjoy a sauna, a compilation of physiological data, and a fascinating chapter on the historical development and ethnic uses of saunas and sweathouses around the world. More than half the book concentrates on designing and constructing one's own sauna complex (dressing room, stove room, cooling tank, and relaxation area). There are fairly detailed instructions for building from scratch using scrap or new materials, but for the less handy there is a list of major manufacturers and suppliers of sauna equipment (from stoves to prefab units) with helpful discussions of the quality, price range, and reliability of each. Recommended.—Frances S. Worthington, formerly with P.L. of Nashville & Davidson County, Tenn.

Lance, Kathryn. Running for Health and Beauty.

Bobbs. Mar. 1977. 224p. LC 76-45576. ISBN 0-672-52252-7. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-672-52314-0 $4.95. HEALTH

An enthusiastic book on the benefits of running as an exercise program. Lance tells how at the age of 30 she went from total slob to track star in nine months. Writing for nonathletes, she takes a common-sense approach in describing how a woman can start her own running program. She also discusses special situations—running during pregnancy, for different age groups and lifestyles, etc. Aerobics for Women by Mildred Cooper and Kenneth Cooper (Evans, dist. by Lippincott. 1972; Bantam, 1973. pap.) covers the same subject in a context of other aerobic problems, and has a more clinical approach. Recommended for general collections.—Alyce Bowers, Rockaway Township Free P.L., N.J.

Soyka, Fred with Alan Edmonds. The Ion Effect: how air electricity rules your life and health.

Dutton. 1977. 181p. bibliog. index. LC 76-40956. ISBN 0-525-13480-8. $7.95. ENVIRONMENT/HEALTH

Soyka, a mechanical engineer, discusses his investigation of the theory that the air we breathe contains an ideal ratio of ionized particles. When this natural equilibrium is upset, the effect is damaging to human physical and mental well-being. Soyka reaches this conclusion on the basis of experimental results reported by a few selected scientists and common folk wisdom which attributes certain ill effects to warm dry winds that periodically blow in various areas of the world. He suggests that both climatological conditions and man-made technology (e.g., air conditioning and central heating) deplete the atmosphere of negative ions, thus creating an unhealthy environment. Although Soyka admits that the medical establishment does not as yet accept these controversial ideas, he recommends further research in this field. This title, while interesting, need not be high on a library's priority list.—Beatrice Sichel, Western Michigan Univ. Libs., Kalamazoo

Natural History & Zoology

Beadle, Muriel. The Cat: history, biology and behavior.

S. & S. May 1977. 160p. drawings by E, John Pfiffner. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-671-22451-4. $9.95. ZOOLOGY

Beadle's purpose is to provide the reader with more detailed information on cat biology and behavior than is usually available except in scholarly journals and textbooks. She is very competent in translating scientific complexities into lay language, and has drawn material from the work of eminent zoologists, veterinarians, and animal behaviorists. This results in accurate descriptions of feline anatomy and sensory systems, social and sexual behavior, and such interesting sidelights as the controversial topic of cats' homing powers. Unfortunately, the profusion of referrals to various sources becomes tedious and will probably discourage most general readers.—Mary Blackwell, Detroit P.L.

Cowles, Raymond B. in collab. with Elna S. Bakker. Desert Journal: reflections of a naturalist.

Univ. of California Pr. Mar. 1977. 250p. illus. index. LC 74-22959. ISBN 0-520-02879-1. $10.95. MEMOIR/NAT HIST

Few, if any, naturalists know the deserts of southern California better than the late Raymond Cowles (d. 1975), who spent the greater part of a long and productive career in that forbidding biotic province. Desert Journal presents the high points of his years with his chosen field of study and is both autobiography and popular science. The book traces in quasi-episodic fashion Cowles' initial exposure to and subsequent scientific and personal "affair" with the California desert. It touches on a remarkable range of subjects from climatic, topographical, and ecological variation through tail-shedding lizards, mesquite bushes, and tree frogs. All of the many vignettes are effectively linked to the theme of survival, and the entire book presents an eloquent, if somewhat depressing, view of man's progressively more destructive impact on the desert environment. In the final chapter, Cowles articulates his view of human overpopulation and its effects on the diversity and integrity of the Earth's flora and fauna. Desert Journal is a well-written series of insights not only into an ecologically complex region but into a sympathetic and eminently humanistic scientist. As such, I recommend it enthusiastically.—James M. Adovasio, Dept. of Anthropology, Univ. of Pittsburgh

CORRECTION: The price of George Lear's Motorcycle Mechanics (LJ 1/15) is $14.95.

SCIENCE

Technology

Adams, Jeannette T. Metalworking Handbook: principles and procedures.

Arco. Mar. 1977. 480p. illus. index. LC 75-23577. ISBN 0-668-03857-8. $12.95. TECH

The metal worker needs a knowledge of the properties of different metals and of how to use a variety of tools as measuring devices, clamps, files, shears, etc. As the metalworking becomes more complex, there is a need for using machines which range from folders and brakes through drills and grinders to milling machines, shapers, and lathes. Metal work can also require a knowledge of soldering, riveting, and layout from blueprints. All these areas are covered in this book, through a combination of a well-written text and numerous illustrations. There is very brief information on plastics which sometimes behave like metals. Useful for libraries having calls for metalworking materials, this title is especially recommended to collections serving vocational-education students.—W. T. Johnston, Coastal Plain Regional Lib., Tifton, Ga.

Gunston, Bill. Night Fighters: a development and combat history.

Scribners. Mar. 1977. 192p. illus. LC 76-24140. ISBN 0-684-14842-0. $8.95. HIST/TECH

Beginning with the very perilous night-flying antics of World War I, Gunston tells the fascinating story of an important military art. Topics include the development of radar and other electronic devices used to seek out the prey (and to safeguard the hunter), as well as the modification of aircraft for the task. World War II gets most of the attention, of course, with Europe the primary stage. The war in Korea and modern jet fighter progress conclude the text. There are numerous explanatory drawings and an appendix which lists the important aircraft types with their characteristics and performance. A fascinating story, expertly told. Highly recommended.—R. G. Schipf, Univ. of Montana Lib., Missoula

Hardy, Robert. Longbow: a social and military history.

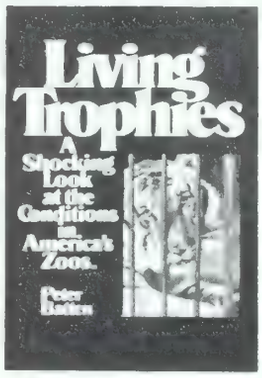
Arco. Mar. 1977. 216p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 76-25029. $19.95. HIST/TECH

This might well be considered a labor of love, for when Hardy discusses the longbow there is no mistaking his affection for the subject. As the title suggests, this book touches on the social and military history of archery and the longbow, tracing the development of the bow from prehistoric times to the rise of firearms. There is a discussion of how in Great Britain archers were recruited, trained, encouraged, and used as a national resource in time of war; later chapters deal with sporting uses and American development of this venerable tool; and the book concludes with descriptions of the handcrafting of the longbow. There is also an excellent appendix dealing with some technical aspects of the subject. Hardy's attempt to touch so many bases precludes any serious discussion: the appeal here is mainly popular.—George F. Scheck, SUNY at Oswego Lib.

THE CROWELL CORNER

Selected by Library Journal as three of the Best Scientific-Technical Books of 1976



LIVING TROPHIES
A Shocking Look at the Conditions in America's Zoos
by Peter Batten
former director of the San Jose Zoological Gardens

"A sobering look at present practices and problems of many of the nation's public zoos... describes the poor environmental conditions, the ignorance of zoo officials, vandalism, and mutilation of animals by visitors. Highly recommended."
—Library Journal

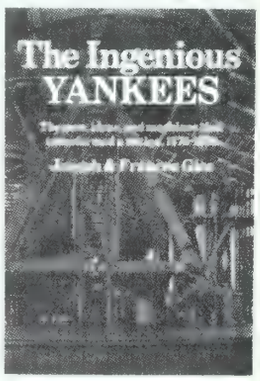
68 photos
0-690-01096-6 $9.95



THE INGENIOUS YANKEES
The men, ideas, and machines that transformed a nation, 1776-1876
by Joseph & Frances Gies

"A history of American inventions from 1776 to 1876... from the typewriter to the cotton gin to Roebling's bridges. Well researched... Recommended for libraries of all sizes."
—Library Journal

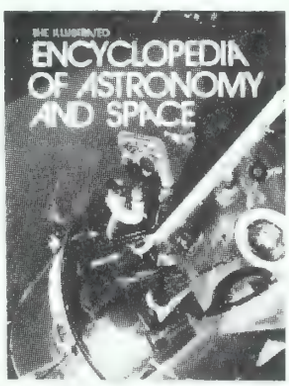
More than 100 illustrations
0-690-01150-4 $12.95



THE ILLUSTRATED ENCYCLOPEDIA OF ASTRONOMY AND SPACE
Ian Ridpath, General Editor

"More than 1,000... articles, interspersed with over 100 tables, charts and photos... a good buy for libraries of all sizes."
—Library Journal

0-690-01132-6 $24.95

T. Y. CROWELL
666 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10019

"Offers practical suggestions in clear, down-to-earth language, and includes many helpful line drawings ... Many public libraries may wish to include it as a service to their patrons." —Library Journal

Cloth $10.95 ISBN 0-395-24898-1
Paper $6.95 ISBN 0-395-25147-8

Maggie's Back Book

Healing the Hurt in Your Lower Back

by MAGGIE LETTVIN

author of
Maggie and the Beautiful Machine
Illustrated by Ruth McCambridge

Houghton Mifflin Company
2 Park St., Boston, Mass. 02107

The Human Life Center of St. John's University, Collegeville, MN 56321, an international educational center involved with marriage enrichment, family planning and population studies, hereby announces its new 100-page quarterly review: INTERNATIONAL REVIEW OF NATURAL FAMILY PLANNING. All natural methods and programs of family planning worldwide will be treated without neglecting chemical and mechanical means, including sterilization and abortion. Advantages of the natural, human fertility control will be highlighted, such as: self-knowledge, sexual maturity, husband-wife cooperative responsibility for fertility control, enhanced spousal communication, solution of infertility problems, etc.

Among the authors included in the first issue will be: Maureen Ball (Australia), Hanna Klaus, M.D. (USA), Daniel Ch. Overduin, M.Th., D.D. (Australia), Rudolf Vollman, M.D. (Switzerland), Josef Roetzer, M.D. (Austria), Professor James B. Brown, D.Sc. (Australia), and other authorities.

The cost for the INTERNATIONAL REVIEW will be $3.00 per issue, or $12 per year. For those subscribing before April 1st, the rate will be $10.00.

For ordering the International Review or for information concerning the above, write Mr. William D. Molitor, Assoc. Dir., The Human Life Center, St. John's University, Collegeville, MN 56321.

The Human Life Center

Workshop on Alternative Energy Strategies. Energy Demand Studies: major consuming countries; analyses of 1972 demand and projections of 1985 demand.

M.I.T. Pr. 1976. 553p. ed. by Paul S. Basile. illus. LC 76-26933. ISBN 0-262-23076-3. $20. ECON/TECH

This work provides cross-national policy analyses and future projections and is a welcome addition to the literature of the energy field. The book examines national energy demands in Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, West Germany, Italy, Japan, Mexico, the Netherlands, Norway, Sweden, the U.K., and the U.S. It presents, country by country, the energy consumption for a base year (1972) and the projected energy demand for 1985, under common alternative assumptions of oil price, economic growth rate, and government policy. Five different scenarios are projected for each country. (A scenario which is not included but which would have been a welcome addition is one assuming low economic growth, rising world oil prices, and restrained national policy responses.) The data are carefully presented, easy to read, and well summarized in the text. Energy Demand Studies will probably have a limited readership but it is recommended for research-oriented libraries.—Stephen M. Lowry, Dept. of Political Science, St. Joseph's Coll., Philadelphia

Social Science

Boot, Adrian & Michael Thomas. Jamaica: Babylon on a thin wire.

Schocken. Apr. 1977. 96p. photogs. LC 76-41756. pap. $6.95. SOC SCI

Boot and Thomas use many striking photographs, some poignant reggae lyrics, and a forceful text to convey a sense of the explosive situation on the island. Avoiding both the insipidity of social science and the insensitivity of the travelogue, they vividly depict the intense spirit of the black Jamaican population as exhibited in their music and in the peculiar presence of the Rastafarians, as well as in the widespread violence (both among blacks and against whites). Boot and Thomas are perhaps the first observers of Jamaica to abandon the depiction of Prime Minister Michael Manley as a raving Third World revolutionary and, by looking at measures such as the Gun Court Act (which mandated indefinite detention for anyone caught with firearms), to show him to be a leader desperately trying to regain control of an increasingly uncontrollable people. The authors also succeed in communicating the enormous tension that is mounting between the U.S.-based corporations that are stripping the island of its main resource, bauxite (the raw material of aluminum), and a population that is not interested in development but is tired of poverty. As a nonacademic yet profound look at what is brewing among a people, this volume is almost in a class by itself. Highly recommended.—Philip Mattera, "Library Journal"

Leigh, Wendy. What Makes a Woman G.I.B.?* (*Good in Bed).

Penthouse Pr. Ltd., 909 3rd Ave., N.Y.C 10022. 1977. 202p. $7.95. SOC SCI

Aside from being tasteless, sexist, and coy, this could be an interesting question, right? Leigh's embarrassingly effusive comments string together the remarks she wrung from assorted medical people, "celebrities," prostitutes and "glamor professionals." After many too many pages, she concludes that it's still "a terrible question for women to answer" and that there's no formula answer, after all. There are a few sensible replies, such as Germaine Greer's: "You can't really be serious about this question. I suspect you're suffering from 'California brain.' " A recent coherent collection of celebrities' sexual self-disclosure was Karl Fleming and Anne Taylor Fleming's The First Time (LJ 9/1/75). G.I.B. is unfocused, unenlightened, and unnecessary.—Mary Pradt Ziegler, Brooklyn P.L.

Morath, Inge & Arthur Miller. In the Country.

Studio: Viking. 1977. 191p. photogs., some color. LC 76-53842. ISBN 0-670-39678-8. $14.95. PHOTOG/SOC SCI

Miller moved to rural Connecticut in the late 1940's "before all the land became real estate," and over the years he has watched it evolve into a "workless suburb of strangers." Morath is Miller's wife and her photographs of pastoral scenes and old-fashioned people are both lovely and provocative, but it is Miller's text that makes this book more than just another nostalgic coffee-table item. In 12 short impressionistic sketches he describes his neighbors, both past and present, and such events as a farm auction and the painting of a center-line down his once lightly traveled road. The past is not glamorized nor is the present condemned in its entirety. There is no sermonizing or rage; just sadness and perhaps a touch of quiet desperation. This book is for all libraries trying to document the changes that are taking place in our society.—Harold M. Otness, Southern Oregon State Coll. Lib., Ashland

Printz, Peggy & Paul Steinle. Commune: life in rural China.

Dodd. Mar. 1977. 142p. photogs. by the authors. ISBN 0-396-07420-0. $6.95. PER NAR/SOC SCI

This is a journalistic report of a 1973 visit to Kwang Li People's Commune in Kwangtung Province. The authors, who were able to observe rural Chinese life to a much greater extent than most Western visitors, describe activities on the 43,000-member model commune in a matter-of-fact, reliable manner. They cover its founding and early agricultural improvements, crops and industries, administration and work groups, salaries, education, medical care, and politics. The authors attribute the efficiency and stability of the commune to the fusion of Communist policies and traditional Chinese values, while they contrast the advances in food production with the scarcity of bicycles and wrist-watches. An interesting firsthand account.—Elizabeth A. Teo, Moraine Valley Community Coll. Lib., Palos Hills, Ill.

Provence, Sally & others. The Challenge of Daycare.

Yale Univ. Pr. Mar. 1977. bibliog. index. $15. ED/SOC SCI

Research and establishment of the "Children's House" demonstration day care project in New Haven which generated this volume is part of a larger study on child development in low-income families financed by a grant from the U.S. Children's Bureau. At a time of rising demand for day care, with minimal concern for its effect on the children, the authors emphasize the importance of providing the kinds of services which will best support the positive development of everyone involved. They stress the necessity for a carefully administered, competently staffed day care program of individualized services to parents as well as children, of maintaining a responsive physical and emotional environment in which communication is actively encouraged between staff and child, staff and parents, staff and staff. Case studies enliven and buttress their argument for knowledgeable professional day care services supported by a society which realizes that the well being of present and future generations is ultimately at stake. Of interest to layman and student as well as professional, this well-written book includes an annotated bibliography, a brief list of sources of information about child care and programs for children, and an excellent model outline for evaluating a child's progress through a preschool curriculum.—Suzanne W. Wood, SUNY Agricultural & Technical Coll. Lib., Alfred Sarason, Seymour B. Work, Aging, and Social Change: professionals and the one life–one career imperative.

Free Pr. Mar. 1977. "The Santa Fe Experience" by David Krantz. bibliog. index. $14.95. ED/SOC SCI

The author, a widely known psychologist, promulgates a theory that is, in turn, irritating, questionable, and yet undeniably provocative. Arguing that social changes experienced in the decades since World War II have drastically altered attitudes toward work and that, as a result, less and less are personal satisfaction and fulfillment found in one's occupation, even among professionals committed to a lifelong career, he calls for a reexamination of our educational policies and goals for greater flexibility. Because the book's thesis is built on a highly personalized view but very little hard data, it is certainly open to challenge. Is the process of making a career choice really one's first significant confrontation with a sense of aging, as the author claims? A myriad of such intriguing ideas crowd the pages of the book. One wishes, however, that the author's writing style were less repetitious. Although not likely to have wide appeal among general readers, the book is recommended to those in professional fields, not excluding business and industry's upper echelons.—Mary J. Mayer, New York City Dept. for the Aging

Sorenson, E. Richard. The Edge of the Forest: land, childhood and change in a New Guinea protoagricultural society.

Smithsonian Inst. Pr. 1976. 280p. fwd. by Margaret Mead. illus. maps. index. LC 76-608117. ISBN 0-87474-875-5. $18.50. ANTHROPOLOGY

This specialized study of the Fore tribe of New Guinea by the current Director of the National Anthropological Film Center is an important contribution both to the methodology and theory of ethnographic film and to the growing literature on the peoples of New Guinea. In a series of technical chapters which ably combine still photography and selected series of frames from film footage, Sorenson argues that the Fore represent a protoagricultural stage of development which "supersedes hunting-gathering and precedes settled agriculture." More generally, the study examines the impact of economic development on Fore culture. The analysis is insightful and arresting. In the appendixes Sorenson fully describes his unique sampling and processing procedures. Libraries with large anthropology collections will consider this an important purchase.—William E. Tydeman, Mars Hill Coll. Lib., N.C.

Law & Criminology

Ackerman, Bruce A. Private Property and the Constitution: an essay in philosophy, economics, and the law of just compensation.

Yale Univ. Pr. Apr. 1977. index. $12.95. PHIL/LAW

This conceptual analysis of the law of just compensation brings to bear certain philosophical and economic considerations in the construction of two models of judicial reasoning. The "scientific policymaking" model relies on legal technicalities and tends to be systematic, whereas the "ordinary observer" model relies on social expectations and institutions and tends to be intuitionistic in resolving the issue of the taking of private property by the state. Ackerman's analysis reveals that the incoherent state of the law of just compensation arises from the grounding of the traditional legal doctrine in ordinary observation, while the sophisticated writings of legal scholars and judicial opinions are expressed in scientific policymaking terms. In an area of the law where darkness has lingered for so long, this book sheds new light.—Wesley Teo, Dept. of Philosophy, Chicago State Univ.

Cunningham, Barry & Mike Pearl. Mr. District Attorney: the story of Frank S. Hogan and the Manhattan D.A.'s office.

Mason/Charter. Apr. 1977. 281p. illus. index. ISBN 0-88405-465-9. $10.95. BIOG/LAW

This is not, as the authors would have it, the story of the career and role of America's most esteemed prosecutor; it is a collection of stories, most of them fascinating and breezily recounted. Hogan's personal and professional integrity and the congeries of Exploring the region of high romance.

The author of the much-acclaimed To the Back of Beyond transports you to one of the most exotic regions on earth—the vast mountain barrier of the Caucasus, and beyond it to the sunlit uplands of Georgia and Armenia. Eminent historian Fitzroy Maclean traces the history of this kaleidoscopic jumble of races and nations from ancient times to the present. "Fascinating." —Publishers Weekly. "Many rare photos . . . Maclean is an unfailingly entertaining guide."—Library Journal

TO CAUCASUS
The End of All the Earth
Fitzroy Maclean

96 pages of color and black-and-white photographs. $17.50

Little, Brown

"ANOTHER IMPORTANT PITHY BOOK..."

"...from Rodale Press that may point the way to new attitudes toward food and serve, too, as a manual on putting new ideas to work successfully. Anne Moyer's concern here is institutional food. ...Of great value are the practical instructions on serving natural foods at the institutional level. Included is information about kitchen equipment, storage, costs, staff, foods and preparation, menus, quantity recipes. ...Food consciousness-raising at its best." —Publishers Weekly

BETTER FOOD FOR PUBLIC PLACES
by Anne Moyer

Appendix. Resources. Notes. Index.
LC 76-54336 ISBN 0-87857-155-8 $8.95

RODALE PRESS
Emmaus, PA 18049

pressures upon a big city district attorney's office are vividly described. Particularly noteworthy is the contrast between the unassuming Hogan and his predecessor, the flamboyant, politically ambitious (and overrated) Thomas E. Dewey. How wise were Hogan's judgments, particularly toward the end of his more than 30-year tenure? There is little analysis of this and related issues. The book does stimulate speculation about urban disorder, the role of the prosecutor in society, and the linkages between politics and crime (Hogan's honesty in an environment where official corruption has been a virtual norm was remarkable). The appetite, though whetted, will only be sated by a more serious, less adulatory study.—Isidore Silver, Dept. of History, John Jay Coll. of Criminal Justice, CUNY

Levin, Martin A. Urban Politics and the Criminal Courts.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. Apr. 1977. index. $20.
POL SCI LAW

Levin's analysis breaks new ground in the study of the criminal justice system. Confronting many of the untested assumptions about criminal courts, Levin examines the consequences differing political systems have had for the behavior of criminal court judges in Minneapolis and Pittsburgh. He also analyzes the consequences judicial selection procedures have upon a judge's sentencing practices and his comparison of criminal court judges' values in both cities offers a new perspective on the issue. Levin goes on to examine critically such questions as plea bargaining, and in the course of showing the problems of implementing innovative policies in the criminal courts, he prescribes new policies aimed at achieving the dual goals of crime reduction and crime prevention.—Steven Puro, Dept. of Political Science, St. Louis Univ.

Morris, Norval & Gordon Hawkins. Letter to the President on Crime Control.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. 1977. 120p. bibliog. ISBN 0-226-53998-9. pap. $1.95.
POL SCI LAW ENFORCEMENT

This is a useful update of the authors' Honest Politician's Guide To Crime Control (LJ 2/1/70) and of the reports of various commissions on the subject. Its brevity and appearance (only in paperback) indicate that its greatest value is to serve as a continuing reminder that previous reform proposals (gun control, decriminalization or civil regulation of many "victimless crime" activities) are as relevant in 1977 as they were in the late 1960's. Given the current climate, the book's recognition of inevitable judicial discretion in plea bargaining and sentencing practices and its disapproval of rigid schemes of minimal sentences may be more controversial. The book was published well after the election in order to acknowledge the fact that "there are no votes to be gained by adopting a rational approach" to crime control. Perhaps Carter's Justice Department, in a show of heretofore elusive rationality, will follow the authors' salutary advice by, for instance, suspending those million-dollar prosecutions of such social menaces as Harry Reems. Perhaps.—Isidore Silver, Dept. of History, John Jay Coll. of Criminal Justice, CUNY

Sheresky, Norman. On Trial: masters of the courtroom.

Viking. Apr. 1977. 250p. $8.95. BIOG/LAW

Sheresky has written a highly readable, if at times overly subjective series of sketches on five prominent trial attorneys: Edward Bennett Williams, Vincent Hallinan, Barnabas F. Sears, Alfred Julien, and Melvin Belli. Though one might question the how and why of selecting these particular "masters," they, according to the author, exemplify the trial lawyer breed. Through interviews, anecdotes, and lengthy excerpts from trial records, Sheresky lets each lawyer speak for himself, and each is shown to be "a fascinating mixture of genius and fraud, of healer and medicine man, of evangelist and devil." A too short introductory essay provides some practical and historical background and mentions several great trial lawyers of the past.—Ronald W. Self, Attorney-at-law, Columbus, Ga.

SPORTS & RECREATION

Bearse, Ray. Sporting Arms of the World.

Outdoor Life: Popular Science, dist. by Harper. 1977. 461p. illus. index. LC 75-31062. ISBN 0-06-010291-8. $15.95. REF/SPORTS

Did you know that the Winchester M94 Carbine is the most popular sporting arm ever manufactured? This kind of information is mixed in with full technical data on sporting rifles, shotguns, and handguns made in the U.S., plus those foreign-made arms that are imported. In addition, Bearse presents the history of types and specific models; chapters on cartridges, optical gear, and accessories; dealer addresses; and ballistics charts. He also describes currently available replicas and indicates foreign manufacturers of many American arms. Especially valuable are the author's comments that follow each description. They are opinionated but, based on years of experience, the more useful for their subjectivity. Not every library needs such a work, but those with an interested clientele will find this a valuable addition to the reference collection for identification work and also of interest for browsing. One minor drawback—the beginner would benefit from a glossary.—Roland Person, Southern Illinois Univ. Lib., Carbondale

Brister, Bob. Shot Gunning: the art and the science.

Winchester, dist. by Scribners. 1976. 321p. photogs. index. LC 76-48642. ISBN 0-87691-184-X. $10. SPORTS

Brister is shooting editor of Field & Stream and has obviously invested a tremendous amount of personal research in this work. He downplays the scientific aspect, preferring to rest his conclusions on what he labels "indications." Whatever, a wealth of information on shotgun and shot-shell design and behavior is presented in such detail that it might overwhelm the weekend bird hunter. Much of the book is technical: physics without formulas and test results sifted from thousands of experimental firings using all imaginable shot and gun types. Yet the writing is lucid and the advice sound, backed up by scores of photos depicting technique and pattern. A fascinating account of the shot-string debate is presented in its historical context. This alone, plus the general nature of the book, requires a bibliography, which does not appear. For the advanced (or inquisitive) shotgunner.—Joseph Drazan, Whitman Coll. Lib., Walla Walla, Wash.

Dempsey, Jack with Barbara Piattelli Dempsey. Dempsey.

Harper. Apr. 1977. 288p. illus. index. $12.50.
AUTOBIOG SPORTS

Not a bad book, as sports biographies go. Despite the flat, artificial dialogue, forced transitions, and other failings of the genre, Dempsey holds the reader's interest. In a career that spanned the better part of the 1920's, Dempsey was truly a product of the era. Major portions of the book are devoted to the personal aspects of his life—his three marriages, his money troubles, his public image—and Dempsey emerges as a man who blends machismo and self-honesty in even proportions. He is one of our last heroes.—Matthew Hartman, Univ. of British Columbia Lib., Vancouver, Canada

Fillingham, Paul. The Balloon Book: a complete guide to the exciting sport.

McKay. Mar. 1977. 226p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-41056. ISBN 0-679-50594-6. $14.95.
SPORTS

This book provides a good, but not complete, introduction to ballooning. A question-and-answer section answers many of the questions a beginner might have, and the novice will also be interested in the discussion of flight techniques and license requirements. Weather, navigation, and radio procedures are given only superficial treatment; but an interesting history of ballooning, in addition to a listing of where to find flight training, is included. The aspiring balloonist must pass a written FAA exam. Unfortunately, this book lacks the detailed information that would be necessary to prepare for that exam, and $14.95 seems a bit expensive.—Jerold M. Bernstein, Wickliffe P.L., Ohio

Gerber, Dan. Indy: the world's fastest carnival ride.

Prentice-Hall. Apr. 1977. photogs. by Heinz Kluetmeier. LC 76-28812. $8.95. SPORTS

A light, frothy report on the 1975 and 1976 Indianapolis 500's by a man who doesn't seem to really like either the city or the race. Gerber has no original insights, just the same tired old comments about blood spectacles, Roman circuses, hidebound traditionalists, and dull midwestern towns. There are also ome elementary factual errors, but ace fans will enjoy the entertaining onversations with various drivers and fficials, particularly Mike Mosley, ich Muther, Billy Scott, and chief teward Tom Binford.—Susan Eberhoff Coles, Indianapolis-Marion County P.L., Ind.

Hellekson, Terry. Popular Fly Patterns.
Peregrine Smith. 1977. 180p. illus. by Scott Geary. illus., some color. index. LC 76-49452. ISBN 0-87905-066-7. $15.95; pap. ISBN 0-87905-065-9. $9.95. SPORTS
This is one of the larger and better balnced collections to come along in reent years even though professional ly-tier Hellekson concentrates on both iew and traditional flies of interest to Western fishermen. Tying instructions nd/or brief histories are included for nany of the approximately 700 patterns isted; except for minor variations on a heme, all are illustrated with pen-and-nk drawings. Easterners will notice missions, but new techniques (e.g., Hellekson's "WaterWalkers") more han compensate. Well-designed and learly printed, this would be an excelent purchase not only for libraries in he West, but for all others catering to ly-fishing enthusiasts.—David J. Paniera, Adams Lib., Chelmsford, Mass.

Hoyt, Edwin P. Coins, Collectors and Counterfeiters.
Thomas Nelson. Apr. 1977. 160p. index. ISBN 0-8407-6537-1. $6.95. HIST/HOBBIES
The author offers a concise and interesting account of coins and coin collecting, especially through unusual historical anecdotes. The book is well written. The section devoted to counterfeiters s hilarious, and the passages concerning the hobby's great collectors and heir enigmatic personalities are also noteworthy.—Henry T. Hettger, FAA, Washington, D.C.

Jordan, Pat. Broken Patterns.
Dodd. 1976. 224p. ISBN 0-396-07387-5. $7.95. PER NAR/SPORTS
Jordan's book is a collection of profiles of living female athletes who excel in such sports as weight lifting, wrestling, and volleyball, and whose lifestyles separate them from the main fabric of society. The author tries to explore the determinism, the motivation, and the tenacity of these women who reach the top. Unfortunately, the book disappoints because it lacks insight and feeling; the portraits are cold and flat. Yet, the subject is interesting, and there is little else available. Purchase where necessary.—Hannelore Schueler, Monmouth County Lib., Freehold, N.J.

Lee, Bruce & M. Uyehara. Bruce Lee's Fighting Method.
Ohara Pubs., 1847 W. Empire Ave., Burbank, Calif. 91504. 1976. 125p. photogs. LC 76-51476. pap. $5.50. SPORTS
Photographs (in sequence) of staged street situations showing self-defense measures fill this book; brief captions accompany the photos. The standard situations are shown: how to subdue assailants (including those armed with gun and knife) with fast and decisive action. Although it may have been true that those nasty evildoers would have become docile at the hands of Lee, most people just do not have the speed or the skill to perform most of the actions shown. Some serious martial arts students might give this volume a passing glance to see if some technique can be adapted to practical tournament or defense use. But the largest audience will be youngsters looking at the neat moves they won't be able to perform. Knowing this, libraries will have to decide whether such a book is needed, considering it is a 125-page paperback with a perfect binding costing $5.50.—Harold L. Bogart, Lake Havasu City Lib., Ariz.

Obitz, Harry & Dick Farley with Desmond Tolhurst. Six Days to Better Golf: the secret of learning the golf swing.
Golf Magazine Bk: Harper. 1977. 192p. drawings by Dom Lupo. fwd by Jackie Gleason. pref. by Ken Venturi. ISBN 0-06-013203-5. $9.95. SPORTS
The "swing's the thing" method taught by Obitz and Farley offers sound advice for all golfers. They cover every aspect of the swing, starting with the practical idea of using a seven-iron quarter swing. They describe how the blending of arm swing and body action combine to produce the "true swing," and cover how to correct slices and hooks, sand play, putting, practicing, etc. Their chapter "Advance Course in the Swing" is definitely not for beginners. Recommended for complete golf collections.—Walter H. Roeder, California State Polytechnic Univ. Lib., Pomona

Palmer, Arnold with Bob Drum. Arnold Palmer's Best 54 Golf Holes.
Doubleday. Mar. 1977. color photogs. by Ernest Baxter. illus. by Jim C. Johnson. LC 74-18822. ISBN 0-385-05259-6. $12.50. PER NAR/SPORTS
The title of this book is slightly misleading in that the 54 golf holes described by Palmer are not necessarily what he considers the "best" or the "greatest." In his own words he considers them as "interesting" or "exceptional" holes that he has played and where something special happened to him or the world of golf. The setting of each hole and course is briefly described, and then Palmer reminisces on an event that occurred at that particular hole. The book grew out of the television series that featured Palmer playing some of these courses. The physical descriptions of the holes become tedious and a bit abstract. The book's value for many readers will be Palmer's nostalgic remembrances of games played when he was at his peak.—David B. Walch, SUNY at Buffalo

Uston, Ken with Roger Rapoport. The Big Player: how a team of blackjack players made a million dollars.
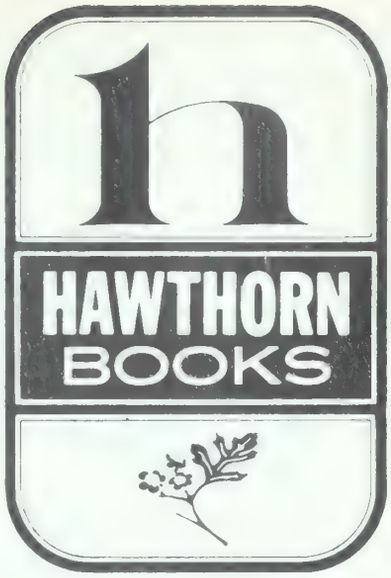
Holt. May 1977. LC 76-29919. ISBN 0-03-016921-6. $7.95. PER NAR/GAMES
If you are into card-counting blackjack, you will be excited by this story as the author colludes with teams of counters against Las Vegas casinos to win large sums of money. After detection by a casino manager, Uston sues the hotel for denying his right to play at the Dunes. Uston is an admitted Revere counter,



AVAILABLE IN PAPERBACK

•

TOYS FROM THE TALES OF BEATRIX POTTER
by M. Hutchings
ISBN 0-8015-7857-4 $7.95

UNDERHANDED BACKGAMMON
by A. Prager
ISBN 0-8015-8125-7 $4.95

THE OFFICE GARDENER
by Jacqueline Hériteau
ISBN 0-8015-5482-9 $5.95

INSIDE AMERICAN BALLET THEATRE
by C. Barnes
ISBN 0-8015-4050-X $6.95

28 DAYS TO A BETTER JOB
by Tom Jackson
ISBN 0-8015-8013-7 $5.95

COLLECTOR'S GUIDE TO DOLLHOUSES AND DOLLHOUSE MINIATURES
by M.M. O' Brien
ISBN 0-8015-1405-3 $8.95

TENNIS DRILLS
by R.F. Greene
ISBN 0-8015-7527-3 $6.95

SONGBIRDS IN YOUR GARDEN 2nd edition
by John K. Terres
ISBN 0-8015-6945-1 $4.95

THE MINUTE MEN: A Compact History of the Defenders of the American Colonies 1645-1775
by Major John R. Galvin, U.S.A.
ISBN 0-8015-5083-1 $4.95

BASIC GUIDE TO FLYING
by Paul Fillingham
ISBN 0-8015-0526-7 $4.95

•

For your copy of our complete catalog, please write to: Department of School and Library Programs, Hawthorn Books, Inc.

HAWTHORN BOOKS
260 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

able to beat the house when as the "big player" he goes on signal from table to table to the deck which is at that moment turning "hot." The book is well written, although at times dates, places, names, and action do not always blend into a coherent whole. The story may be true or not; let the courts decide. But usually blackjack writers make their money on best-selling books, not at the casinos.—Jack I. Gardner, Clark County Lib. Dist., Las Vegas

THEATER

Benedetti, Robert L. Seeming, Being and Becoming: acting in our century.

Drama Bk. Specialists. 1977. 127p. illus. by the author. calligraphy by Barbara Wampole. bibliog. LC 76-26668. ISBN 0-910482-77-2. $6.95. THEATER

This book is concerned with acting as a spiritual act. It traces the roots of acting—its mythic and transformational power—in rituals, festivals, minstrel shows, etc., and it offers brief accounts of the major acting theories of this century. The cursory historical discussion has a tendency toward oversimplification. The book also attempts to distinguish between "seeming, being, and becoming" in acting, and it is not fully successful because of the difficulty in discerning among these elements. The book's final section is more inspirational than useful, and consists of lyrical ramblings, aphorisms, poems, drawings, etc. It is a trendy albeit rhapsodic meeting of Eastern consciousness and acting theory. The danger in this stress on the spirituality of the actor—well intentioned to be sure—is in its encouragement of theater as therapy.—Bonnie Marranca, "Performing Arts Journal," New York

Berry, Ralph. On Directing Shakespeare: interviews with contemporary directors.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. Mar. 1977. 135p. photogs. LC 76-46833. ISBN 0-06-490377-X. $15. THEATER

This is an intimidating book to anyone who maintains "purist" notions about the presentation of Shakespeare's plays. In a series of interviews with well-known contemporary directors, Berry (in great part through the persistent ingenuity of his questions) has made artistically coherent a set of seemingly divergent views on how to serve or swerve the texts of many of the plays. The sticking points have much to do with choice of play, cutting and revision, utterance and (too often, I think) with décor, especially costume. The need for "contemporaneity" of spirit is stressed throughout, but the means of its achievement appear to be many. Yet all disparities fuse into an intuition of what Shakespeare is about—us. What Shakespeare was doesn't matter. We may go on staging purist productions, but we'd better tune in to today. The directors interviewed include Konrad Swinarski, Trevor Nunn, and Peter Brook.—J. H. Crouch, Dept. of English, Univ. of Colorado, Boulder

Hodgson, Moira (text) & Thomas Victor (photogs.). Quintet: five American dance companies.

Morrow. 1977. 191p. pref. by Richard Howard. LC 76-26881. ISBN 0-688-03095-5. $15. DANCE

Hodgson and Victor explore five American dance companies that have emerged from the tradition of George Balanchine and Martha Graham. The companies of Paul Taylor, Alvin Ailey, Merce Cunningham, Arthur Mitchell, and Eliot Feld are good choices since each group has its own distinctive style. Hodgson's introductory remarks about each company vary in content and tone. Occasionally she talks down to her audience, while at other times she offers fascinating insights into the world of dance. The photographs are uneven. Notably the lack of light obscures the lines of the dancers. But Victor more than succeeds in visually showing how each company is unique in its style. Some of the photographs also reveal the agony and ecstasy of the dancer at work. All in all, a rewarding addition to the quickly growing number of books on dance.—Norma Feld, Rochester Sch. Dist. Libs., N.Y.

Richards, Stanley, ed., pref. & intro. The Tony Winners: a collection of ten exceptional plays, winners of the Tony Award for the most distinguished play of the year.

Doubleday. Mar. 1977. 332p. illus. ISBN 0-385-11380-3. $12.50. THEATER

The Tony Awards are roughly equivalent to Hollywood's Oscars. Richards has collected ten plays, each of which he says, "reflects dramatically, the high standards and 'distinguished achievements' as originally established by the American Theatre Wing." Well, maybe so, but I find his ten choices rather odd. Included are such items as The Fourposter, a charming play, but it can't compare with Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?, which is conspicuously absent. Arthur Miller received Tony Awards for Death of a Salesman and The Crucible; neither is included. Instead we get Mister Roberts, The Teahouse of the August Moon, and The Subject Was Roses, all nicely crafted plays, but do they really deserve the appelation "distinguished"? Each play is accompanied by a preface that includes an account of the critical reaction and some brief biographical information about the playwright. Maybe a future volume will include some of the truly distinguished Tony winners such as Long Day's Journey into Night and A Man for All Seasons.—Alan C. Hochberg, SUNY at Farmingdale Lib.

Ritual, Play, and Performance: readings in the social sciences/theatre.

Continuum: Seabury. Mar. 1977. bibliog. ed. by Richard Schechner & Mady Schuman. LC 76-6910. ISBN 0-8164-9285-9. $14.95. SOC SCI/THEATER

Developed through the Performance Theory Seminar at NYU, this is a reader of the social science and aesthetic

Provoked beyond endurance

Nash, Mary. The Provoked Wife: the life and times of Susannah Cibber.

Little. Apr. 1977. c.300p. illus. bibliog. ISBN 0-316-59831-3. $12.50. BIOG/THEATER

According to Brigid Brophy, "The two most fascinating subjects in the universe are sex and the eighteenth century." This biography of Garrick's great leading lady, Handel's protégée, and the victim of one of the great scandals of her day captures the London and Dublin of Fielding, Richardson, Sterne, Swift, and Johnson in lively proof of Brophy's thesis. Without going beyond the bounds of recorded history and documents, Nash sensitively reconstructs an exciting, believable, breathing woman who acquiesced to the men in her life until provoked beyond endurance by a brutish husband who pushed her into the arms of a rich lover for his own remuneration. Fascinating reading for anyone interested in theater, the 18th Century, the history of women's rights (or the lack of them), sex, love, and/or scandals. Essential for theater history and women's collections; highly recommended for general biography collections—Helen Gregory, Albion P.L., Mich.

"I don't see how anyone with the slightest interest in the musical theatre can allow himself to be found without this fine work."
—Richard Rodgers

An alphabetically arranged, fact-crammed reference volume on the musical theatre both in New York and London. Included are entries devoted to over 2,000 performers, writers, composers, directors, productions, and songs. Also sections covering awards, long runs, bibliography, and discography.

ENCYCLOPAEDIA OF THE MUSICAL THEATRE
Stanley Green
$17.50

DODD MEAD

heories which support Schechner's performance group. Most are drawn from leading social scientists: Konrad Lorenz, Claude Levi-Strauss, Ray Birdwhistell, et al. The arrangement, with introductions and lists of suggested further reading, is topical: ethology; play; ritual performance in everyday life; shamanism, trance, meditation; and rites, ceremonies, performances. Some of the selections are abridged, and only three appear here for the first time. An original interview with Jerzy Grotowski is illuminating. The extensive bibliography is excellent; the illustrations were not seen. Recommended.—Chuck Broadbent, Ursinus Coll. Lib., Collegeville, Pa.

Cinema

Heider, Karl G. Ethnographic Film.
Univ. of Texas Pr. 1976. 166p. bibliog. index. LC 76-10454. ISBN 0-292-72020-3. $9.95.
SOC SCI/CINEMA

This book is a basic introduction to the subject of films of anthropological interest and is aimed primarily at educators likely to use these films in the classroom, although it could be useful for film programmers as well. Heider provides a general overview of the subject, including a history of enthnographic films, a discussion of their usefulness as tools for gathering ethnographic data, some production considerations for the anthropologist-filmmaker, and a detailed, critical discussion of specific films. His chapter on the attributes of the ethnographic film provides guidelines for evaluation and selection based on ethnographic considerations. The appendix contains selected film synopses and rental information. Highly recommended for any school or college library where such films are likely to be shown.—Evelyn Ehrlich, Dept. of Cinema Studies, NYU

Monaco, James. How To Read a Film: the art, technology, language, history, and theory of film and television.
Oxford Univ. Pr. Apr. 1977. 496p. illus. index. $12.95; pap. $6. CINEMA

How To Read a Film is so fresh and sophisticated an introduction to film study that a brief review can only begin to suggest its richness. In six concise chapters Monaco examines film in relation to the other arts; provides a history of film technology keyed to the aesthetic issues raised by developments in sound, color, and film stock; and traces the economic, social, and artistic determinants that have shaped film production over the years. Monaco avoids the usual numbing recitation of titles and dates so common in most recent film histories, and he also provides an overview of film theory, a clear and useful introduction to the assumptions and terminology of structuralism and semiotics, and a broadly interpretive history of radio, television, and recordings. The result is a remarkable achievement that for its range of argument, clarity, and inclusiveness, deserves a wide audience. Highly recommended.—Marshall Deutelbaum, Film Dept., George Eastman House, Rochester, N.Y.

THEATER

Thomas, Bob. Bud & Lou: the Abbott & Costello Story.
Lippincott. May 1977. 224p. photogs. index. $10. BIOG/CINEMA

Prolific Thomas has cranked out another highly personal and dubiously tasteful biography. The book is a tiresome stream of repetitious anecdotes of a partnership that seems to have thrived on selfishness, antagonism, and simple stupidity. Tracing their careers from burlesque, through radio and film, to television, the author offers little critical or analytical appraisal of Abbott and Costello's output and seems unaware of the flatness of their talent when compared to their predecessors and prototypes, Laurel and Hardy. Trivial fluff, this, containing a modicum of usefulness in a complete list of their films, with credits, and the script for their most well-known sketch, "Who's on First?"—Donald McCormick, N.Y.P.L.

fiction

Ball, John. Phase Three Alert.
Little. Mar. 1977. 232p. ISBN 0-316-07937-5. $8.95. F

During World War II a B-17 crashes on an ice cap in Greenland. Thirty years later Scott Ferguson spots the old plane while he is flying a routine mission. The plane has been almost perfectly preserved by the Arctic cold. Back at the air base in Thule, Ferguson and buddies formulate a plan to dismantle the B-17, bring it back to Thule piece by piece, and reassemble it. The meticulous task of gathering parts and lovingly putting the plane together culminates in the plane's utilization in a rescue during a storm. Ball succeeds admirably in conveying the mood and routine of an Arctic air base. The characters are thinner than cardboard, but the action is fast and suspense is sustained. And the B-17 is just great. A superior adventure story recommended for public libraries and for YA collections.—Robert H. Donahugh, Youngstown P.L., Ohio

Casey, John. An American Romance.
Atheneum. Mar. 1977. 318p. $10. F

In a sensitive, densely textured, sophisticated, allusive work, Casey tells the tale of two young people and their growth toward each other from their first extended meeting on a mountain-climbing outing to a theatrical commune in Iowa and finally to their involvement in a kind of "off-Hollywood" moving picture. Characters are carefully drawn: the two principals, Anya, a brilliant, artistic, occasionally waspish orphan, and Mac, a physical, ruminative, stable person with hidden depths; Henniker, a spoiled, bitter intellectual; Rafferty, a philosophical, impractical overgrown leprechaun; Mercks, artist manqué and maker of pornographic movies; Peewee, an amoral runaway farm girl and the subject of Anya's movie; and others—all alive and most of them articulate. A se-

Bosley Crowther takes movie fans on "a rewarding nostalgic journey"*
Vintage Films
50 ENDURING MOTION PICTURES
By the author of GREAT FILMS: Fifty Golden Years of Motion Pictures
"The distinguished former New York Times film critic takes his readers...through some 50 landmark films made since the advent of sound. Including foreign as well as American films, he ranges from 'The Broadway Melody' (1929)...to 'Last Tango in Paris.' Crowther's recollections ought to get his readers watching for reruns in theaters.... His commentaries are forthright and reflect his feelings about the world we live in."—Publishers Weekly.* 8½" x 11". Illus. with 175 photos. SBN: 399-11637-0.
YA. $15.00
G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

"Heads and shoulders above the competition"*
THE RAPIST
Daniel Forbes
"A rapist with a penchant for raping women while he is wearing a rubber movie character mask terrorizes a small town in the South of Ireland. ...The investigation is in the hands of the provincial police ...they uncover all kinds of subsidiary wrongdoing...full of atmosphere and careful observation of an unfamiliar locale."—Library Journal.*
SBN 698-10803-5 $7.95
COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.
200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

rious, capable first novel, for collections of modern fiction.—L. W. Griffin, Univ. of Wisconsin Lib., Madison

Chais, Pamela. Split Ends.
Lippincott. Apr. 1977. 252p. ISBN 0-397-01197-0. $8.95. F
This is a modern Valentine of a book, an up-to-the-minute love story with a happy ending, warm and tender without being sweet and cloying. Thirty-seven-year-old Franna Cooke catches husband Ezra flagrante delicto with his secretary and drives aimlessly, weepingly away, smashing into the car—and life—of Jerry Hochman. Jerry, a loving, giving person, soon adores Franna and her two young sons—and he also gives the best frostings in Beverly Hills at the beauty salon which he doesn't even own. And love can overcome all: the stigma of "Jerry the hairdresser" (Franna won't take her sons to watch him work), Jerry's lack of money and ambition, even one last visit by Ezra to Franna's bed. Dialogue is bright and snappy, pace is brisk, and even a plot occasionally too pat doesn't matter. For in the end Franna Kimmel Cooke, modern woman, wife, and mother, loaded with self-doubt and guilt, finds something very good and hangs on to it—and that may be the best thing of all about this book.—Michele M. Leber, Virginia Beach P.L.

Chaix, Marie. The Laurels of Lake Constance.
Viking. Apr. 1977. tr. by Richard Seaver. $8.95. F
An elegant, wistful, and compassionate first novel that chronicles the increasing misfortunes of a French collaborationist family from 1936 until 1956. The young author artfully guides her characters through the morass of crumbling Axis Europe. The narrative voice switches from father to daughter (Chaix was born in 1942, like the fictional daughter whose narration closes the novel) but always stays in the present tense, giving the story immediacy. Actual events and places are interwoven so closely with the thread of the story that you feel everything you are reading really happened. An excellent book, highly recommended.—Craig H. Little, Orleans, Mass.

Cradock, Fanny. Shadows Over Castle Rising.
Dutton. 1977. LC 76-11893. ISBN 0-525-20128-9. $8.95. F
This sequel to The Lormes of Castle Rising follows the family's fortunes from 1910 to 1914 and is, I think, much more interesting and better written than its predecessor. We follow Lord and Lady Aynthorp, their children, and the myriad aunts, uncles, and cousins who inhabit the castle and whose characterizations seem to expand in this book. The splendors of Edwardian upper-class life become more fascinating because we know of the horrors to come. We experience a delightful "country" wedding, a London season, the despair of the Family over a wayward suffragette daughter, and finally the lowering clouds of the Great War, which all were assured would be "over by Christmas." A well-done look at how the other half used to live, which makes us mourn a way of life that has vanished forever.—Jane Belon Shaw, Lisle P.L., Ill.

Cullinan, Elizabeth. Yellow Roses.
Grossman: Viking. Apr. 1977. $8.95. F
Although her name changes, the protagonist in most of these stories is the same person: a self-conscious, deferential young woman surrounded by individuals more vigorous than herself. She's invariably Irish Catholic, sometimes has a good-natured mother rooted in her convictions, sisters who lead conventional lives, and an older lover who has other commitments. Whatever her name, she lives at one remove from her family's traditions and her own emotions. While these stories are written with professionalism, the author tends to theorize about human nature rather than making her points through plot action. Should Cullinan rework this material into a novel, she could give full play to her main interest, the psychology of her reflective heroine. With a unified story line, moreover, the reader would accept the sameness of the background rather than becoming bored with the ubiquitous Catholic ambiance. In its present state, a minor collection.—Frances Esmonde de Usabel, State Reference & Loan Lib., Madison, Wis.

De Jourlet, Marie. Windhaven Plantation.
Pinnacle. 1977. 564p. ISBN 0-523-40022-X. pap. $1.95. F
This paperback original chronicles the life of Lucien Bouchard, youngest son of a French count, in Mobile during the period from 1789 to 1832, as he carves a plantation from the wilderness. In spite of being a bookish scholar, Lucien kills the Indian sent to capture him, fights and kills a bear, and becomes a blood brother of the local Indians. He also loses three wives—an Indian, a bonded servant, and a genteel lady—in tragic accidents. His whole family in France is killed during the Terror. His only son turns out to be a carbon copy of Lucien's arrogant, selfish older brother. Presenting a macho hero and addlebrained, stereotyped females against a historical backdrop that is not always accurate, this belongs with the paperback novels of Jennifer Wilde and Rosemary Rogers.—Mary Jo Eyth, Houston P.L.

DeMarinis, Rick. Scimitar.
Dutton. Mar. 1977. LC 76-41228. ISBN 0-525-19805-9. $8.95. F
There is a deceptively simple air about Scimitar for the first half of its length. Arjay Ponce, a technical writer for an aerospace company and the canonical stereotype of the middle-aged man in a marital and occupational rut, finds himself accused of murdering a neighborhood vamp to whom he has turned for sexual excitement. Evading the law, he sets out to track down the real killer—which brings us to the second half of the book. From here on in, the story is a masterwork of complexity; it jerks from one outrageous scene to another with such rapidity that it becomes difficult to follow what the devil is going on. Anyone who tackles the book should know that much of it is vulgar and that many of the characters are afflicted with some strange dementias, but also that DeMarinis has the makings of a powerful writer. Recommended to those who like to apply their knowledge of Freud to what they read.—A. J. Anderson, Sch. of Library Science, Simmons Coll., Boston

Denker, Henry. The Starmaker.
S. & S. Apr. 1977. 250p. ISBN 0-671-22431-X. $9.95. F
Presumably the starmaker is H. P. Koenig (=king, get it?), whose funeral in 1953 opens and ends the book, with six years' flashback in between. Koenig manipulates and menaces everyone he deals with, including his sheltered daughter Sybil and hot young director David Cole, whom Koenig seeks to groom as his "crown prince." Cole placates nervous starlets and rehabilitates an expensive, otherwise-doomed movie. He wins both control of the studio and the studio head's daughter before the final footage. The characters are mostly unpleasant and incredible, the plot hackneyed, and the writing sloppy (Cole accuses Sybil of always "putting him down"—in 1947?). We know who reads it, but who needs it?—Mary Pradt Ziegler, Brooklyn P.L.

Dixon, Stephen. No Relief.
Street Fiction Pr. 1976. 126p. LC 76-16004. ISBN 0-914908-28-6. pap. $4.95. F
Meet Mac and Rose and Buddy and Marlene and Dolly and Rose and Jack and Jill and the author, Stephen Dixon, who is a brilliant writer, whose prose closes the gap between fiction you can read with pleasure and fiction you can admire from a respectful distance. All the characters in this book of stories are "looking for someone else. Some other kind . . . One they think they can feel more comfortable with. . . ." "Mac in Love" is a powerful, sad story which won a 1977 O. Henry Award. Dixon's style is clean, realistic, with surrealistic effects. I was reminded of Gertrude Stein's continuous-present technique and her method of reinforcing things by repeating them. Dixon does this well. He makes it his own. Meet Ruth and Jane and. . . .—Clarence Major, Dept. of English, Univ. of Washington, Seattle

Eden, Dorothy. The Salamanca Drum.
Coward. May 1977. 288p. LC 76-56143. ISBN 0-698-10823-X. $8.95. F
Eden's newest combines rich characterizations, plenty of action, lush locales (London, Vienna, Ireland), war, love, madness, a mysterious disappearance, thwarted romance. Quite a lot for one 288-page novel, and Eden knows how to bring it all together. Basically a family history, The Salamanca Drum centers on powerful Matilda Duncastle, last of many generations of Duncastles who had fought, and died, for the British Empire. With varying success, Matilda spends 50 years trying to instill the ighting family spirit in her children and grandchildren. Readers will find Matilda one of Eden's most admirable, disturbing, and unforgettable heroines.—Carol K. Carey, formerly with Dept. of Film, Museum of Modern Art, New York

Hardwick, Mollie. The Duchess of Duke Street.
Holt. Apr. 1977. $8.95. F
This adaptation of a BBC television series follows several novels which Hardwick based on the Upstairs-Downstairs series. The setting is 1900 London. Heroine Louisa Leyton sets out to be the best cook in England and ends up running a residential hotel and a catering service. The cast includes: Edward, Prince of Wales, whose interest in Louisa goes beyond her culinary skills; Augustus Trotter, who becomes Louisa's husband for propriety's sake and assists her as butler; and the Honorable Charles Tyrrel, who befriends Louisa in her post-Edward days. Although the episodic format is still evident in this novelization, it does not impair readability. There is enough adventure and humor here to entertain the reader willing to settle for a light-hearted if slightly unbelievable story.—Ellen Kaye Stoppel, Drake Univ. Law Lib., Des Moines, Iowa

Horwitz, Julius. Landfall.
Holt. Apr. 1977. LC 76-29904. ISBN 0-03-014926-6. $7.50. F
Horwitz's eighth novel is set in the affluent Westchester community of Larchmont on Long Island Sound, where upper-middle-class Elaine and Philip and their 15-year-old son Michael play out the consequences of a son's seduction by his mother. Elaine attends to help Michael recapture the sensory joy of sheer experience which he believes children are taught to forget at an early age. Philip doesn't see it that way. The alternating consciousnesses of the three characters and the omniscient voice of "the whirlwind" (read: the author) speak in self-defense. Unfortunately, the several voices are almost indistinguishable. This novel doesn't have the weight its author thought it did. The sailing scenes are fine, but as a whole, it is slight. An additional purchase.—Virginia L. Fetscher, Katonah Village Lib., N.Y.

Kanin, Garson. One Hell of an Actor.
Harper. Mar. 1977. 228p. ISBN 0-06-012249-8. $8.95. F
A writer (patterned on Kanin himself) has assembled all his notes on John J. Tumulty, a California stage actor in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Informing us at the start that he has abandoned his "play, movie, history, short story? What?", the disorganized narrator foists upon us his aborted project. And a dreary one it is, this quest to learn the truth about Tumulty. Encountering Rashomon-like contradictions, the narrator tries to build a suspense story. But too many facile coincidences fill the quasi-detective plot, and Kanin's arch dialogue sticks out like ribs from a carcass. The characters talk in a false-cheery way, as though they were in TV commercials. Kanin never convinces us that Tumulty was a great or even an interesting actor, and so we are finally left with a whole novel as flat as its title.—Sammy Staggs, Columbia Univ. Libs.

Lavender, William. Flight of the Seabird.
S. & S. Apr. 1977. c. 264p. ISBN 0-671-22662-2. $8.95. F
Young Meg Hannah is two years into an unsatisfying marriage (her high school hero husband is now a coarse, demanding rancher with a streak of meanness) when Lonnie Hayward appears one morning as she's painting. Lonnie is gentle, bird-loving, and Shakespeare-quoting—and a fugitive with a history of memory lapses during periods of violence—and he involves Meg in a brief, romantic episode (with dreams of running off on his boat, the "Seabird") and a police chase. The characters here tend to be caricatures—like sexy, raucous Rita, Bart Hannah's old flame, and her meek lamb of a husband Herbie—and the outcome is predictable. Still, this is a smooth evening's entertainment with occasional moving moments; nonessential but rather nice.—Michele M. Leber, Virginia Beach P.L.

Lowry, Beverly. Come Back, Lolly Ray.
Doubleday. 1977. LC 76-22895. ISBN 0-385-12243-8. $7.95. F
Hypocrisy is the rule in the class-conscious town of Eunola, and ultimate ruin is the fate of those who will not order their lives to fit the pattern which custom, birth, and social pressures require. Lolly, Eunola's finest baton twirler, the most daring and inventive, is able to live free of the unspoken rules because her skilled perfection in the art wins the townspeople's respect and adulation. But even Lolly disappoints and outrages them when, home from college, her pregnancy is obvious to all, and she is shunned for flaunting precious convention. There is more here than Lolly's story. There is also a deep look into the lives of the members of Eunola's oldest and wealthiest family, and a powerful rendering of the alcoholism and suicidal escape which Lady Cunningham takes to quit the only existence she has ever known. Rich or poor, the author's smooth prose illuminates both with haunting vividness.—Lisa R. Bankoff, Guadalajara, Mexico

Mackintosh, May. Balloon Girl.
St. Martin's. 1977. 242p. LC 76-16685. $7.95. F
Art theft and forgery is a huge business and serves as a lively backdrop for Mackintosh's latest tale of romantic suspense. As in Highland Fling (LJ 5/1/75), a legitimate business (the Balloon Girl antique shops) is used as a cover for illegal activities. Kati Nickleby, a young art restorer, is invited to Rome to assist an aging collector. Once there, her London roommate makes an appearance, and Kati slowly realizes that she is being used as a scapegoat in the art swindle scheme. She joins forces with Dr. Sam Frame, a Canadian muse-

"Fascinating and convincing"
—Library Journal

HIGH PLACES
PAUL FERRIS

"The head of Operational Intelligence in the Metropolitan Police finds evidence of scandalous conduct by Home Security Sir Harry Blancagnell, but Scotland Yard does not want to know about it. Commander Crocker is even offered a promotion if he will drop the investigation. The story of Crocker's personal conflict . . . is a convincing portrayal of one man teetering on the brink of disaster."—Booklist.
SBN 698-10799-3 $7.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.
200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

"Ebullient, precise, Rabelaisian, witty... a remarkable debut."
—ANTHONY BURGESS

The Last Cattle Drive
By ROBERT DAY

"The place is the American Midwest. It is the age of jet travel and custom-painted pickup trucks. Along comes Spangler Tukle, determined to get his cattle to market sans help from high-priced truckers or trainmen....Getting there is half the fun....Call it a midwestern. Call it cowboys and urbanites. Call it well-written entertainment."—The Booklist
SBN: 399-11883-7. $7.95
G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

um curator in search of stolen treasures. What follows is a fast-paced tale of avarice, envy, and deception. Fun escapist reading.—Barbara J. Mitchell, Medford P.L., Mass.

MacRauch, Earl. New York, New York.
S. & S. Mar. 1977. 256p. ISBN 0-671-22366-9. $7.95. F
This novelization of a film script (the movie is to be released in May) stars Johnny Boyle, a talented jazz musician who lacks, not soul, but a soul. Francine Evans costars as the big band singer with a soft spot in her heart for no-good Boyle, and their relationship is as trite as it is unconvincing. MacRauch may be presenting an accurate picture of road life in the late 1940's, but however successful the film may be this version is no bargain.—Diane Haas, Howe Lib., Hanover, N.H.

Mayer, Robert. Superfolks.
Dial. Mar. 1977. 236p. $7.95; pap. $3.95. F
No real belly laughs. A hearty chuckle about every five pages. A story line that remains mildly interesting for about two-thirds of the trip. Most important, more than a takeoff of old Woody Allen or Mel Brooks shticks. What more can one reasonably demand of a first, surreal comic novel about Superman's last battle against the forces of evil? A few of the characters: Holden Caulfield as a proctologist to high society; Norman Mailer as Aquarius, the chronicler (interminable) of the relationship between adolescent sex fantasies and comic book heroes; Bella Abzug as a New York cabbie. Sidebars about a gay Peter Pan and T. S. Eliot. In throwing in everything but the kitchen sink and Norman Cousins, Mayer even evokes some nostalgia about the lost world of the 1940's when both we and the world were a bit better, and better off.—Isidore Silver, Dept. of History, John Jay Coll. of Criminal Justice, CUNY

Morrell, David. Last Reveille.
Evans, dist. by Lippincott. Mar. 1977. 252p. ISBN 0-87131-228-X. $7.95. F
Miles Calendar—old soldier, scout, and expert at survival in the wilderness—is the ideal teacher for aptly-named young Prentice, as the two serve in 1916 with the U.S. Cavalry engaged in pursuit of Pancho Villa across the Mexican border. In such a dangerous enterprise, a trooper will not live long unless experienced and unsentimental. The novel's basic conflict is between human feelings and the cold, lonely objectivity required for survival. The rich characterization is enhanced by a point of view which shifts between the main characters, bringing their father-son type relationship into sharp focus. An action-filled, historically accurate novel with the potential to attract a wide audience.—Robert D. Welch, Dept. of English, Wayne County Community Coll., Grosse Pointe, Mich.

Osborn, John J., Jr. The Only Thing I've Done Wrong.
Houghton. Mar. 1977. 174p. ISBN 0-395-25174-5. $6.95. F
A light but nicely written story about the summer love affair of two upper-middle-class Californians, Robert and Kate, recently graduated from high school. What Robert has "done wrong" is to impregnate Kate. Robert's father, a doctor, is unforgiving, as is Kate's mother. These parents are balanced by Kate's father, who is at least willing to receive Robert, and by Robert's mother who is, finally, the means by which the difficulty is resolved. For Robert it wasn't just a case of carelessness but of an overwhelming series of temptations, and he daydreams about telling this to his father. "I wanted to throw a good large crowd of ghosts at him: lawns, legs, liquor, cars, cloth, hot decks, the head of the sun, crying, yelling, screaming, cars that wouldn't start, white sand, meetings, eyes." Realistic dialogue set against a background of sailing, swimming, and sunning. Shallow but pleasant waters.—Milo G. Nelson, Univ. of Idaho Lib., Moscow

Reiter, B. P., M.D. The Saturday Night Knife and Gun Club.
Lippincott. Apr. 1977. 200p. ISBN 0-397-01141-5. $8.95. F
Medical novels are notorious for being clumsily written, melodramatic, and preachy; and this effort by a New York physician suffers from each of these faults. In seriocomic style, Reiter chronicles one year in the life of Gypsy, a brash young intern in a "typical" big-city hospital. Gypsy is a pot-smoking, girl-chasing, Rolling Stones aficionado who is determined to practice the idealized form of medicine that can only exist in the scripts of Marcus Welby. He is repeatedly frustrated by the inefficiency and professional hypocrisy of the medical world, and his disillusionment almost leads him to forsake his chosen vocation. Almost—but not quite; and Gypsy struggles through to the story's end trying to cope with a tiresome series of paper-thin characters and ludicrous situations which cannot be taken seriously at any level.—Philip M. Fragasso, Lucius Beebe Memorial Lib., Wakefield, Mass.

St. John, Nicole (pseud.). Wychwood.
Random. 1977. 215p. $8.95. F
St. John's newest novel falls into the same trap as did her earlier The Medici Ring (LJ 5/15/75)—the plot becomes so entangled in historic detail that what could have been an entertaining mystery-romance becomes a not-so-entertaining history lesson. The stodgy heroine of Wychwood, Camilla Jardine, leaves her Civil War-torn home for England. There she joins her crippled younger sister and travels to Wychwood, their ancestral home. This Tudor shelter can be theirs forever—if Camilla can locate a mysterious unnamed treasure. Camilla's search is complicated by devil worshippers, two suitors, murder, hostile townsfolk, skinned cats, hidden gardens, hidden rooms. It's heavygoing for Camilla, and often heavygoing for the reader.—Carol K. Carey, formerly with Dept. of Film, Museum of Modern Art, New York

Sarraute, Nathalie. Fools Say.
Braziller. Apr. 1977. 175p. tr. by Maria Jolas. LC 76-16696. ISBN 0-8076-0837-8. $7.95. F
Since her first fictional work appeared in 1939, Sarraute has been concerned with "tropisms," psychological movements caused by one's surroundings and other people. Here, more than ever, the conventional novelistic furnishings—plot, setting, character—are absent, to make room for precise, almost clinical recording of those actions which take place behind deliberate actions and words. The result is a progression, by a sort of Brownian movement, as words ricochet and set other words moving, through observations and a shifting conversation. The point seems to be that whatever is spoken is foolish; words lie and cheat. Sarraute is a critic's novelist, a theoretician who often proves tedious for the average reader to whom she makes no concessions. Jolas has already translated 11 of Sarraute's works and knows her way through the labyrinthine nuances.—Elaine F. Palencia, formerly with Harvard Univ. Lib.

Savage, Elizabeth. The Girls from the Five Great Valleys.
Little. 1977. 207p. ISBN 0-316-77140-6. $7.95. F
Savage has written several novels which have been popular with readers of light fiction. However, those who enjoyed Summer of Pride will be disappointed with her latest. The coming of age of five girls in a Montana college town in the 1930's holds little excitement. The girls themselves are stereotyped (the social climber, the one who's boy-crazy) and lackluster. The minor characters—a bored wife, a doomed mother, a ruined professor—are much more interesting. Unfortunately, neither the time period nor the setting was used to good advantage. Young adults will find little in common with the characters, but middleaged readers may approach the book with feelings of nostalgia.—Betty Page, Guilford Public Schs. Lib., Conn.

Slosberg, Michael. The August Strangers.
Dial. Mar. 1977. 243p. ISBN 0-8037-0449-6. $7.95. F
Eleven-year-old David August needs a kidney transplant. Since the chance of a successful transplant is much greater when the donor is a biological relative and David cannot psychologically tolerate the dialysis treatments he must have until and unless he get a new kidney, Mike August institutes a frantic search for his adopted son's biological parents. As legal channels dry up, he resorts to such measures as hiring a thief to steal information from closed files. When the biological parents and, miraculously, a biological sister are found but no feasible arrangement is forthcoming, Mike in his anguish and desperation kidnaps the girl and tries to substitute her for David's adopted sister for the scheduled transplant. The story is totally convincing up to the point that these melodramatic elements enter, but the tension that has been built up and the sympathy for the characters that has been aroused carry the reader to ıe satisfying ending of this first novel ıat puts forth some views of both doptive and biological parents without assing judgment.—Marion Amdursky, Albion, Mich.

tein, Toby. All the Time There Is.
Random. Apr. 1977. 158p. $7.95. F
Easy to dismiss as "ladies' magazine ction," this first novel is also easy to ead, and to like. Stein's style is as iendly as her heroine, Anne Durham, 43-year-old widow in New York. Her est friend with whom she runs an anque silver shop and her married aughter both want Anne to marry gain, but her prospects are either availble and boring or interesting and unvailable. Anne pursues a "safe" iendship with Charles, a homosexual rofessor who lives across the hall, but either is prepared for the sexual turn ıeir relationship takes after months of oncerts and scrabble tournaments inocently shared. Will they take the sk, and will it work? Yes they will, nd it does. Unabashedly romantic, but ood escape reading with comfortable ısights—and more details than you ıay need about culinary arts, including ıe recipe for a perfect daiquiri.—Janet Viehe, P.L. of Cincinnati & Hamilton ounty ruffaut, François. Small Change.

Grove, dist. by Random. Mar. 1977. 189p. tr. by Anselm Hollo. photogs. LC 76-44660. ISBN 0-394-17921-8. pap. $1.95. CINEMA/F he translation of a film into a novel ırely succeeds. Truffaut's novelzation of his film Small Change is occaonally successful as a novel; however ıe overriding temptation is to look at ıe stills (of which there is an abunance) and to reconstruct the scenes in ıe mind's eye. It is the utter ingenuusness of the children that makes the lm so appealing, and the stills capture ome of this appeal. The book can only e recommended for the pictures; the xt though pleasant is slight.—Ann ook, Prince George's County Memori' Lib. System, Greenbelt, Md.

Welcome, John. Grand National.
S. & S. 1977. 336p. LC 76-41682. ISBN 0-671-22452-2. $8.95. F
Myles Aylward, a racing reporter, is in ompetition with Pat Colby, a leading eeplechase jockey, for the favors of velyn, daughter of a dictatorial racehorse owner, a man determined to win ıe Grand National. The story ends appily for Myles and Evelyn after the lot meanders to involve a crooked ainer, a desperate bookie, thugs, and ıe nymphomaniac wife of a Jockey lub steward. The racing scenes are ome of the best I have read—espeally the Grand National itself. Not as ood as Dick Francis, but will appeal to ıe same audience.—William R. Chamerlain, Virginia State Lib., Richmond

Wilson, Jeanne. Troubled Heritage.
Evans, dist. by Lippincott. Mar. 1977. 276p. ISBN 0-87131-231-X. $8.95. F return to 18th-Century Jamaica and e three great plantation families met ith in the author's Weep in the Sun. hen a law is passed in the assembly excluding "all free blacks and coloureds from employment on plantations," the rights of succession on these massive coffee and cane empires seem threatened because of the owners' "mixed blood." So a voyage is made to England to find suitable marriage partners to "purify the line," thus securing inheritance rights. The tempestuous plot weaves in and out through a large cast of characters whose identities are difficult to keep straight without frequently referring to the lineage chart provided. A violent chronicle of slave uprisings, piracy, rape, murder, torture, and abduction under the blistering Caribbean sun.—Eleanore Singer, London P.L., Ontario, Canada

Science Fiction

Benford, Gregory & Gordon Eklund. If the Stars Are Gods.
Berkeley, dist. by Putnam. Mar. 1977. 204p. ISBN 0-399-11942-6. $7.95. F
The life of Bradley Reynolds is here recounted in four episodes, beginning with his experiences as a young man on the first manned Mars flight and culminating with his achievement of a kind of immortality at the age of 127. Reynolds' path is a mystical ascending one; he is first a disinterested scientist, then a skeptical student of a race of aliens who claim they talk to stars, then a monk in a monastery, and, finally, he reaches a kind of satori on a moon of Saturn. This novel's science and mysticism are certainly interesting, and its characterization is better than usual for sf. The novel would have been better, however, if Reynolds' experiences had been placed into a more vivid context. The abstraction of both the quest and the social context detract from what is otherwise an ambitious and well-imagined sf tale.—Peter Dollard, Alma Coll. Lib., Mich.

Dann, Jack. Starhiker.
Harper. Apr. 1977. 176p. bibliog. ISBN 0-06-010958-0. $8.95. F
Technology, mathematics, poetry, and philosophy mix into a stimulating brew that drives the reader into research, further encouraged by an impressive bibliography. The story, which defies summary, is about Bo Forester, a hobo on an Earth ruled and exploited by aliens. His dream is to travel among the stars, and so he does—a seeker of his human destiny, sometimes locked by fear into his own mind, again free with a mind open to the thoughts and dreams of his strange companions. There is a message in this book for readers who do not expect it to be plastered conspicuously on the surface. The style reveals the skill of a true poet who can create pictures with a few perfect words. Recommended.—Sister Avila, Acad. of the Holy Angels Lib., Minneapolis

Goulart, Ron. Crackpot.
Doubleday. Mar. 1977. 150p. ISBN 0-385-11640-3. $5.95. F
An overweight, paraplegic inventor with ESP; a gosh-golly gee-whiz Boy Scout type who thinks torture is terrific; a swishy cardinal of the Gay Pen-

Recommended
—LIBRARY JOURNAL

THE SEADON FORTUNE

a novel by
LEONARD St. CLAIR

"This interesting historical novel takes place in California... the Seadon fortune was made in oil — founded by Val Seadon and enlarged by his sons Owen and Ross. Oil prospecting, strikes, dry holes, society in San Francisco and Los Angeles, and a threatened takeover of the family business . . . A novel that will hold your attention and engage your imagination."
—Library Journal

$9.95 ISBN: 0-671-22369-0
LC: 76-27373

SIMON AND SCHUSTER
630 Fifth Ave.
New York 10020

"Compelling"*

Hermana Sam

PAUL KING

"Sister Samantha leaves her convent in the east to establish a hospital in the New Mexico Territory of the 1850's. On the way west her nurse's training saves the wounded Apache chief, Mangas Coloradas.... There's plenty of historical detail...when the Pueblos erupt in violence Mangas Coloradas saves the nun from a fate worse than death...the author finishes off his first novel with a good love story."—Library Journal.*
SBN 698-10795-0 $8.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.
200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

tecostal Church; a mob of obsequious androids programmed for various ethnic stereotypes: these are some of the bizarre characters in this satire. Its Candide is Rafe Santana, a Mex-Am war correspondent sent from the Republic of Southern California to Guaymas in Annexed Mexico. There he is to be the unwitting agent of destruction for the leaders of the radical Mexx guerrillas. "Crackpot," the crippled genius inventor, saves the day with a little help from his invention, "the Gadget," and electronic whoosis disguised as a pingpong ball which is used to bollix up the workings of the ever-present androids. Goulart pokes fun at a little of everything: the media, religion, war, pornography, ethnicity, automation, and sex. The book does contain some very funny vignettes, but I was left with the feeling that he tried too hard.—Judith T. Yamamoto, Illinois Regional Lib. Council, Chicago

Green, Martin. The Earth Again Redeemed.

Basic Bks. 1977. 320p. LC 76-54834. ISBN 0-465-01762-2. $9.95. F

Green, who has in previous writings looked at British mores and manners, here presents his first novel, a rather overblown, pretentious contrivance that posits two Earths. Ours, the unredeemed primordial planet, spins off a near-copy in 1665, the year of the Portuguese colonial war in the Kongo (Green's spelling). On that world, the war gives rise to a new Christian redemption that successfully neutralizes scientific and industrial progress in Europe, progress that on our world leads to a nuclear war and a post-holocaust Gehenna populated by a cyborg and very little else. However, the redeemed Earth faces a threat from the Moslems, who are ready to do battle to take over and restore science to the world. Contact between the archbishop of the Kongo (the Christian center of the redeemed world) and the cyborg and the archbishop's relationship with the book's other two major characters, a British diplomat and his wife, provide most of what little there is of interest here. Green is fascinated with things in opposition—black/white, right-wrong/good-evil, faith/reason, progress/nature—and with the British character displaced in time and space, and he raises some provocative questions. He has, however, laid his ideas out like a young child showing off a toy collection, and the result is an undisciplined, confusing, largely unredeemed work.—Carey A. Horwitz, formerly with "Library Journal"

Martin, George R. R., ed. New Voices in Science Fiction: six stories by Campbell Award nominees.

Macmillan. 1977. 288p. ISBN 0-02-580870-2. $7.95. F

Although these are new writers, the stories hew to fairly familiar themes and styles. All save one, however, manage to demonstrate enough "personality" of mood or plot line to raise it above the crowd. Lisa Tuttle's "The Family Monkey" is a nicely done "alien on Earth" story, and Robert Thurston's "Kingmakers" is a time travel tale with a twist. George Martin, in "The Stone City," looks at a future wanderer; Ruth Berman's "To Ceremark" is more fantasy than straight sf, and George Alec Effinger's "Mom's Differentials" is, well, peculiar, and interesting. The only really weak story is Jerry Pournelle's "Silent Leges," which is pedestrian, predictable, and highly derivative. All in all, a collection worth having.—Charles A. Seavey, Univ. of Northern Iowa Lib., Cedar Falls

INDEX: BOOK REVIEWS & PROFESSIONAL READINGS

Ackerman, B. A., 723
Adams, J. T., 721
Ahsen, A., 715
Alaska, 708
Annual bibliography of British and Irish history, 697
Archer, W. G., 698
Askari, H., 703

Ball, J., 727
Baro, G., 698
Beadle, M., 721
Beale, W. H., 697
Bearse, R., 724
Belanger, J. D., 718
Belz, H., 705
Benedetti, R. L., 725
Benford, G., 731
Berry, R., 726
Bianchini, F., 718
Blaise, C., 700
Blake, N. F., 700
Blandford, L., 696
Bonington, C., 708
Boot, A., 722
Boston Society of Architects, 699
Bowman, L. G., 705
Breitman, G., 714
Breslau, A. J., 700
Bright, W., 710
Brister, B., 724
Brown, R., 713
Business of publishing, 703

Candler, T. G., 710
Caplan, H. H., 697
Cardinal, R., 710
Carson, G., 696
Casey, J., 727
Century of commentary on the works of Washington Irving, 710
Chais, P., 728
Chaix, M., 728
Cobb, H. H., 709
Cocks, P., 714
Colbert, E., 714
Cole, C., 699
Coleman, W., 718
Columbu, F., 719
Comay, J., 717
Conn, H., 708
Cowles, R. B., 721
Cradock, F., 728
Cradock, J., 710
Crisp, O., 706
Cullinan, E., 728
Culliney, J. L., 696
Cunningham, B., 723

Dann, J., 731
Dauber, K., 711
Decker, A. F., 704
De Jourlet, M., 728
DeMarinis, R., 728
Dempsey, J., 724
Denker, H., 728
DeSmedt, E., 720
Dixon, S., 728
Donoghue, D., 711

Eden, D., 728
Eisler, C., 699
Exposure, 700

Fass, P. S., 706
Fillingham, P., 724
Fischer-Dieskau, D., 712
Flemming, J. S., 703
Foner, P. S., 706
Fryer, D. W., 696

Garitee, J. R., 706
Geanakoplos, D. J., 706
Genser, C., 713
Geology of Mars, 719
Gerber, D., 724
al-Ghazali, 717
Gifford-Jones, W., 720
Goldemberg, R. L., 699
Goulart, R., 731
Green, M., 732
Gunston, B., 721

Haliburton, G., 698
Hand, J., 709
Hardwick, M., 729
Hardy, A., 700
Hardy, R., 721
Hart, H. C., 714
Headington, C., 712
Heider, K. G., 727
Heintze, C., 719
Hellekson, T., 725
Henry, R. A., 703
Heymanns, B., 701
Higbee, K. L., 716
Hill, B. W., 706
Hill, D. O., 700
Hill, L. B., 714
Hodgson, M., 726
Hoffman, H. H., 692
Holm, D., 708
Holmes, N., 696
Hooker, S., 720
Horn, L., 714
Horwitz, J., 729
Hoyt, E. P., 725
Hunt, W., 706
Hyman, S., 701

Imperato, P. J., 698
Internat. Symposium on the Holocaust, 717
Ismael, T. Y., 714
Iversen, N., 698

Jaccottet, P., 711
Johnson, M. E., 699
Johnson, T., 720
Jordan, P., 725
Josefsberg, M., 701

Kanin, G., 729
Kennedy, E., 716
Klaeser, B. M., 705
Koch, K., 713
Koss, S., 701

Lance, K., 720
Langridge, D. W., 692
Läsić-Vasojević, M. M., 701
Lavender, W., 729
Lawless state, 714
Lebeaux, R., 702
Lee, B., 725
Leigh, W., 722
Levin, M. A., 724
Litvag, I., 702
Lowry, B., 729
Luria, A. R., 716
Luttwak, E. N., 706

McClung, W. A., 711
McHugh, H., 713
Mackintosh, M., 729
Maclean, F., 708
MacRauch, E., 730
Magnotti, S., 692
Martin, G. R., 732
Matthews, J., 704
Maxa, R., 704
Mayer, R., 730
Mee, C. L., 702
Mercier, V., 711
Metzger, N., 696
Milstein, M. M., 705
Monaco, J., 727
Morath, I., 722
Morrell, D., 730
Morris, N., 724

Nash, M., 726
Nies, J., 702
Novotny, A., 700
Nurmi, M. K., 711

Obitz, H., 725
O'Connor, E., 717
Ogilvie, R. M., 707
Oil, the Arab-Israel dispute, and the industrial world, 703
Osborn, J. J., 730
Otwell, J. H., 717

Pages, 704
Palmer, A., 725
Pépin, J., 710
Percival, J., 707
Percy, T., 702
Pick, R., 707
Plumly, S., 713
Printz, P., 722
Pritchett, V. S., 702
Provence, S., 723
Puschcart prize #2, 711

Quester, G. H., 697

Radwin, G. E., 698
Rand McNally atlas of the body and mind, 698
Rasky, F., 708
Reiter, B. P., 730
Rejnis, R., 703
Richards, S., 726
Ritsos, Y., 713
Ritual, play, and performance, 726
Roberts, A., 707
Rositzke, H., 714

St. John, N., 730
Sarason, S. B., 723
Sarrante, N., 730
Sartre, J.-P., 712
Savage, E., 730
Scheller, W., 719
Schiavone, J., 705
Schiff, H. S., 702
Shaw, I., 702
Sheresky, N., 724
Shimmon, R., 692
Skurka, N., 700
Slosberg, M., 730
Sorenson, E. R., 723
Sources and analogues of Old English poetry, 712
Soyka, F., 720
Speeth, K. R., 712
Stein, T., 731
Stockholm International Peace Research Institute, 715

Targ, R., 716
Temple, D. M., 703
Terrell, P., 715
Tholfsen, T. R., 707
Thomas, B., 727
Tittler, R., 703
Trout, C., 707
Truffaut, F., 731

Uston, K., 725

Wakowski, D., 713
Ward, A. J., 716
Welcome, J., 731
White, W. J., 718
Willwerth, J., 703
Wilson, H., 715
Wilson, J., 731
Winn, M., 697
Wolhorn, H., 718
Women and literature 698
Workers' struggles in Puerto Rico, 704
Workshop on Alternative Energy Strategies 722

Yellowitz, I., 704

Ziolkowski, T., 712

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

All advertisements for the Positions Open and the Positions Wanted classifications will be edited to exclude direct or indirect references to race, creed, color, age, and sex as conditions of employment. Positions open and positions wanted, $1.80 per line, minimum charge, $5.40, all other types of ads, $2.75 per line, minimum charge $8.25. If voucher forms are required for billing, please send them at the time advertisements are submitted for insertion. Copy for ads and requests for cancellations must be received at the LJ office 45 days preceding date of issue. Write: Classified Advertising Department, Library Journal, 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, New York 10036.

OUT-OF-PRINT

EXCLUSIVE WANT LISTS get prompt attention, wide search, reasonable prices, from International Bookfinders, Inc., Box 1-LJ, Pacific Palisades, Calif. 90272.

COLONIAL "out-of-print" Book Service, Inc. Want Lists invited, 23 E. 4th St., New York City 10003.

EXCLUSIVE WANT LISTS advertised & searched plus 150,000 vol. indexed stock. PAB 2917 Atlantic, Atlantic City, NJ 08401.

WE FIND BOOKS. Free International Search. Exclusive want lists invited. Realistic prices. Eva Davis Books. 108 Prince Charles, Williamsburg, VA 23185.

OUT OF PRINT books located. Send in title, author to: Free Search Service, Dept. LJ, 41 Union Square West, New York, NY 10003.

OP BOOKS in literature; social sciences, humanities. EGLI; Lamont; BCL, etc. Book Lande, 8926 National Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90034.

SEARCH SERVICES are one of our specialties. Foreign books and periodicals, current and out-of-print. Albert J. Phiebig Inc., Box 352, White Plains, N.Y. 10602.

MAGAZINES—BACK NUMBER

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC: (1888-1977). Free quotes and discounts. Price guide for appraisal. $5. Don Smith, 3930 Rankin St., Louisville, KY 40214.

REPLACEMENT ISSUES of recent subscriptions. Subscribers to journals listed in Science Citation Index have a good chance of immediately locating lacking issues for years 1970-1975 with the Replacement Serials Section of M.S.I, the worldwide back-issue house. Please address your queries to Maxwell Scientific International (now a Pergamon Press, Inc. division), Fairview Park, Elmsford, New York 10523.

BACK ISSUE MAGAZINES, general, scholarly, technical. Designed to serve high school and jr. college libraries. Please send want lists to Back Issues West; P.O. Box 5688, Tucson, Arizona 85716.

OVER 2,000,000 backdate magazines. Send want lists. Magazine Center, Room 406, 145 West 29th, New York, NY 10001.

INTERNATIONAL UNIVERSITY Booksellers, Inc., 101 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10003. We buy: Would like to hear of periodical backfiles of scholarly significance, individual titles or entire collections, surplus to your present needs. We sell: We carry one of the most comprehensive inventories of periodicals in all fields and langauges and are a major supplier to academic libraries in all parts of the world. Call or write Mr. Becker.

MICROFORMS

MICROFORMS. Good second-hand microfilm of periodicals of established micropublishers bought and sold. Write or call Microforms International Marketing Company, Fairview Park, Elmsford, New York 10523. (914) 592-9141.

FOR SALE

BOOKMOBILE: 1955 6-cylinder, 3-speed Ford truck w/Pioneer body. Not driveable due to defective brakes. 47,000 miles. Estimated value $800. Highest bid by April 20. Each bid must be accompanied by a certified check made payable to Minot Public Library equal to five percent of total bid. Unsuccessful bidder's checks returned. Board retains right to reject any or all bids. Minot Public Library Board of Trustees, 516 2nd Ave. S.W., Minot, N.Dak. 58701.

NUC: Register of Additional Locations. 1963-1974 (27 bound volumes). Excellent condition, $100. University Librarian, University of the South, Sewanee, TN 37375.

SERVICES—PERSONNEL

THERESA M. BURKE Employment Agency, 8 West 40th St., N.Y., N.Y. 10018. Specializing in the recruitment of library and information personnel for special, academic, and public libraries.

SERVICES

LIBRARY MOVERS of America, Bloomington, Ind. specialists in moving library contents without disruption of cataloging systems; highly experienced, references available. Have moved libraries as small as 14,000 volumes up to one and one half million books, manuscripts, reference materials, office furniture and equipment. Available to construct special equipment to handle complete, professional moves, 312 W. 7th St., Bloomington, IN 47401. (812) 339-9781.

POSITIONS WANTED

EXPERIENCED LIBRARIAN seeking a position preferably in public library. B.S. ed., library science major and sociology minor. Experienced in all aspects of library work. Worked in large high school library and headed A/V department. Set up a school library in a reformatory. Worked as student assistant in university library reference department. At times when no professional was on duty I was put in charge of the department. I learn quickly and want to serve. G 95.

M.L.S., Univ. of Ala., 1977, desires entry level position in circulation, acquisitions or reference. 6 years' experience in acad. lib. in acquisitions and circulation. Enjoy working with the public and variety in job. Will relocate. M. C. Wright, 10 Abrams Court, Tuscaloosa, AL 35401.

POSITIONS OPEN—MIDWEST

DIRECTOR OF Library system: Provide service to 9 counties and 18 member libraries in northwest Kansas. The director is responsible for planning and administering overall library operations. ALA accredited M.L.S., minimum of 2 years' library administration experience. Starting salary from $15,000; fringe benefits include retirement, medical health insurance, and generous vacation allowance. Position open February 15, 1977. Send résumé to: Mrs. Pat Berry, Chairperson, Executive Board, Northwest Kansas Library Systems, 408 North Norton, Norton, KS 67654.

POSITIONS OPEN—MIDWEST

ASSOCIATE UNIVERSITY Librarian. Newly created position in urban university library serving student body of 20,000 on campus with doctoral programs in eighteen fields. Responsible for assisting university librarian in all managerial, budgetary, and personnel matters, including recruitment, placement, and development of library staff and budgetary preparation, justification, and control. Evaluates overall effectiveness of library operations, together with the assistant university librarians in charge of public and technical services, and recommends necessary policy review. Serves as deputy director, performing related administrative duties and conducting special projects as assigned. Minimum qualifications: At least ten years' administrative experience in major libraries. Two graduate degrees, one from an ALA accredited library school. (A Doctorate in library science or a subject field will be given strong weighting in consideration of applicants). Demonstrated managerial experience and ability in handling complex library operations. Ability to meet general university requirements for promotion and tenure in addition to specific library assignment. An understanding and first-hand knowledge of academic scholarship and research. Conditions of appointment: Rank and salary commensurate with qualifications and experience, associate professor or professor at not less than $25,000. Twelve month appointment. Usual fringe benefits, including sick leave, hospitalization, and state retirement system participation. Position available immediately. Deadline for applications is April 1, 1977. Send applications, or nominations, together with supporting documents (résumé and references to be contacted) to: Robert J. Adelsperger, Acting Personnel Officer, University of Illinois at Chicago Circle, P.O. Box 8198, Chicago, IL 60680. The University of Illinois at Chicago Circle is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

LIBRARY DIRECTOR. Creighton University Alumni Library, Omaha, Nebraska. A private, Catholic university of approximately 4,500 students. Library director for library programs serving undergraduate and graduate needs of students. Qualifications: M.L.S. from an accredited library school plus a minimum of five years' administrative experience. Doctorate preferred. Twelve month appointment. Faculty rank. Salary dependent upon qualifications and experience. Candidates should be capable of overseeing a program that utilizes available technology in meeting the information needs of the university community. Appointment date: June 1, 1977. Closing date for applications: April 1, 1977. Résumé and three reference letters should be sent to: Dr. Margaret J. Ferrell, Chairman, Search Committee, Library Director, Creighton University, Lifelong Learning Center, 2500 California Street, Omaha, Nebraska 68178. An equal opportunity employer.

ART & MUSIC (A/V) department head for central library subject department in urban county public library serving 170,000. New building open in 1974. Starting salary $13,000. M.L.S. plus 2 years' of library experience in a supervisory capacity. Apply: Brown County Personnel Department, Brown County Safety Building, 125 South Adams Street, Green Bay, Wisconsin 54301. Include résumé, transcript of library school grades, and three references. An equal opportunity employer. Position open March 1, 1977.

CONSERVATORY LIBRARIAN for readers' services, Oberlin Conservatory of Music. Major responsibilities: assist in the development and administration of a new program of readers' services; supervise circulation services; assist in the cataloging of music materials. Qualifications: M.L.S. or equivalent; degree in music; strong commitment to serving the library user; library experience and knowledge of OCLC desirable. Salary: $10,800-$16,200, depending upon qualifications and experience. Position available July 1, 1977. Send letter of application, résumé, and supporting materials to Herbert F. Johnson, Librarian of Oberlin, Oberlin College, Oberlin, OH 44074. Telephone: (216) 775-8285. Oberlin College is an equal opportunity, affirmative action employer.

CHILDREN'S LIBRARIAN. ALA accredited M.L.S., 2 yrs. related experience. $10,000. Blue Cross, Blue Shield. Month's vacation. 10 professional leave days. State retirement. Scenic Southern Ohio. Contact: Jonathan E. Louden, Librarian, Gallia County District Library, 3rd & State Sts., Gallipolis, Ohio 45631.

TECHNICAL SERVICES HEAD for medium-sized public library located in suburb near state capital. Coordinates acquisitions and cataloging operations for central library and three branches with materials budget exceeding $100,000 annually. Supervises three clerical assistants. Duties also include regular evenings and Saturdays on reference desk. Qualifications: ALA accredited M.L.S., plus two years of acquisition and/or cataloging experience preferred. Salary range: $10,692-$17,416. Position open around April 1st. Send résumé to: William S. Cramer, Director Grove City Public Library, 35 E. Park Street, Grove City, Ohio 43123.

ADMINISTRATIVE LIBRARIAN. Public Library, City of Crystal Lake, Illinois. Position requires an M.L.S. degree and a minimum of 5 years' increasingly responsible administrative experience. Salary range: $12,000-$17,000. Fringe benefits. Send résumé by April 15, 1977 to Frances Manteuffel, 630 Woodland Drive, Crystal Lake, IL 60014.

DIRECTOR of Library Services for the Schools of Theology in Dubuque, Iowa (Aquinas Institute of Theology, University of Dubuque Theological Seminary, Wartburg Theological Seminary) to develop and administer a unified management system for the three seminaries with a collection of 230,000 volumes. Graduate degrees in librarianship and theology, administrative experience, and ability to develop non-print resources. Salary negotiable. Address: Library Search Committee, Walter F. Peterson, University of Dubuque, Dubuque, Iowa 52001. Telephone (319) 557-2222.

POSITIONS OPEN—WEST

CIRCULATION-REFERENCE. M.L.S. from accredited library school. Two years' supervisory experience desirable. Salary: $10,154-$12,037 depending on experience. 10-month schedule. Starting date: August 1, 1977. Applications and résumés by April 15, 1977 to: Elizabeth Williams, Library Director, Armacost Library, University of Redlands, Redlands, CA 92373. An affirmative action/equal opportunity employer.

ASSISTANT LIBRARIAN, Curriculum Materials Department in a new learning activities resource center incorporating library and non-print media services. Under the general direction of the department head will assist with the operation of the department and will have responsibility for the juvenile literature collection. Other duties include: answering reference questions, giving orientations, assisting with the cataloging and classifying of learning materials in a locally devised system, and other professional work as required. Qualifications: ALA accredited degree. Librarians with teaching experience at the elementary or secondary level or with experience working with students preparing to become teachers will be given preference. Salary: $11,556-$15,924 (Assistant Librarian). A tenure track position. Position available August 1, 1977. Send letter of application, résumé, and credentials by May 1, 1977 to: Robert G. Brennan, Director of Public Services, California State University, Chico, Chico, CA 95929. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

VISITING REFERENCE Specialist/Reference an Collection Development Department in new learning activities resource center incorporating library and non-print media services. Seeking an experienced professional with skill in general reference practice who also can provide leadership and direction in at least one of the following areas: (a) conceptual foundations of academic reference service, (b) academic library collection development, especially as a reference staff function, (c) instruction in the use of academic libraries. The ability to suggest and communicate new ideas and techniques is particularly important. The visiting librarian shares reference duties with other members of the department and is involved in the department's participatory form of governance. In addition to an ALA accredited degree, the candidate must have a second Master's in a subject area, or equivalent academic or professional achievements, and must have at least four years' responsible experience appropriate to the above assignment. Salary range: $17,304-$20,856 (Associate Librarian-12 month salary). Position available July 1, 1977 (a one-year appointment). Send letter of application, résumé, and credentials by May 1, 1977 to: Robert G. Brennan, Director of Public Services, California State University, Chico, Chico, CA 95929. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

REFERENCE SERVICES Librarian: Will be part of the user services department. Responsibilities will include library instruction in the classroom, liaison with academic departments and general reference duties. Candidates must have a minimum of a Master's degree from an ALA approved library science program. This is an entry level faculty position with minimum salary level of $11,000 for twelve months with 22 days per year vacation and health insurance. TIAA-CREF available in the second year of appointment. Applicants should supply a résumè, a copy of their placement papers, the names of three individuals able to supply detailed references and a letter covering what the candidate might be able to bring to the position in terms of library instruction background, subject training and other special qualifications. Applications must be postmarked no later than April 8, 1977. Position available July 1, 1977. Apply to: Michael Herbison, Director, Library, University of Colorado-Colorado Springs, Colorado Springs, CO 80907. The University of Colorado is an equal opportunity affirmative action employer.

SCHOOL LIBRARY Media Director. The director will be responsible for planning, developing and directing a district-wide school library media program. An M.L.S. degree from an ALA accredited library school & 5 years' experience required. Salary range: $13,000-$19,000 depending upon qualifications. Application deadline: April 15, 1977. Please send application & credentials to: Mrs. Lee Buchanan, Aspen School District, P.O. Box 300, Aspen, CO 81611. An equal opportunity employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHEAST

HEAD OF ADULT Services for a regional library serving a population of 211,000. M.L.S. from accredited school with concentration in reference and a minimum of 5 years' professional experience, to include at least 2 years in a responsible supervisory position. Must be able to coordinate, direct and supervise reference services and programs for adults and young adults. Salary range $12,070-$14,490, depending on experience. Position open May 1, 1977. Send résumé, references and letter of application to Wanda J. Calhoun, Director, Augusta Regional Library, 902 Greene Street, Augusta, GA 30902.

HEAD, TECHNICAL Services, Tennessee Technological University. Duties: Supervise acquisitions and cataloging operations. Requirements: 3-5 years of administrative experience in technical services in an academic library. Experience with library computer applications and OCLC, or a similar network. M.L.S. from an ALA school. Evidence of ability to create and maintain a positive work atmosphere among staff members. LC cataloging experience. Experience in cataloging print and nonprint media. Evidence of commitment to the profession. Salary: $11,000-$16,000, 12 months, faculty status. Vacancy dependent upon budgetary approval. Closing date for applications is April 30, 1977. Position open July 1. Send résumé and have three references sent to: Mrs. Kay Reeder, Administrative Assistant, Jere Whitson Memorial Library, P.O. Box 5066, Tennessee Technological University, Cookeville, TN 38501. Tennessee Tech is an affirmative action/equal opportunity employer. We comply with Title IX of the Educational Amendments of 1972.

TWO POSITIONS, Auburn University libraries, Auburn, AL 36830: (1) Cataloger: Accredited M.L.S. cataloging competence; working knowledge of one or more foreign languages, familiarity with OCLC. Available: September 1, 1977. Inquire to: Miss Minnie Wall, Chairperson, Cataloger Search Committee, Auburn University Libraries, Auburn, AL 36830. (2) Documents (U.S.) and Microforms Librarian: Accredited M.L.S., second Master's in one of the social sciences beneficial. Develop and maintain recently organized documents and microform center. Competence in microforms, documents work, reference service, supervision, and management is essential. Available: October 1, 1977. Inquire to: Mr. Gene Geiger, Chairperson, Documents and Microform Librarian Search Committee. Address above. Both positions: Application folders must be completed by May 15. Salary: Librarian II (equivalent to assistant professor) $12,000-$13,500. Faculty status but not professorial title; eligible to be considered for tenure. State retirement plan is mandatory, TIAA optional. Sick leave benefits; annual vacation of twenty working days. Auburn University is an equal opportunity employer.

LIBRARY DIRECTOR. St. Lucie-Okeechobee Regional Library. Headquarters, Ft. Pierce, Fla. Two branches, bookmobile. Budget $275,000, 18 full-time equivalent employees. Salary $12,000-$15,000, M.S.L.S. from ALA accredited library school. At least 2 years' public library experience. Attn: Board President, St. Lucie-Okeechobee Regional Library, 124 North Indian River Drive, Fort Pierce, FL 33450.

IMMEDIATE OPENING: Public Librarian, Lancaster, SC. Director of county library with budget upwards of $96,000, serving population of 43,000+. New building located near two major metropolitan areas. M.L.S. degree from ALA accredited school and one or two years of library experience. Salary range $10,000-$10,900. 20 days vacation; health insurance. Contact: Miss Elizabeth Wilson, Chairman, Lancaster County Library Board, Box 839, Lancaster SC 29720.

STATE LIBRARIAN of Florida. Responsible for providing the leadership for development of library services in Florida; coordinating the work of all interested persons; and, preparing and supporting necessary legislative action. In addition, the state librarian is responsible for administration of a top-rated state library agency program in a new $12.5 million facility. Administers state and federal library grant programs. Minimum qualifications: ALA accredited M.L.S. degree; 8 years' library experience of which 5 years must have been in administration of complex library programs; expertise in dealing with the political system and legislative process. Salary: $25,000. Résumés by May 1 to: Bruce A. Smathers, Secretary of State, The Capitol, Tallahassee, FL 32304.

POSITIONS OPEN—NORTHEAST

ADULT SERVICES Consultant for 64 member libraries in 5 county area of picturesque Mid-Hudson Valley. Advise on all phases of public library service. Must have at least two years' experience in adult services and/or administration. Minimum starting salary, depending on ability and experience, is $11,500. Position open April 1st. Send résumé to: Leon Karpel, Director of Mid-Hudson Library System, 103 Market Street, Poughkeepsie, NY 12601.

HEAD LIBRARIAN. Wellesley College, a liberal arts institution: to direct and oversee the college library which consists of a main library, art, music and science libraries (holdings exceed 500,000), a member of the Boston Library Consortium. New facilities. Highly experienced person of intellectual breadth with demonstrated leadership ability whose principal responsibility will be to direct the growth and improvement of the existing collections through interaction with faculty and staff. Reports to the dean of the college. Experience with modern computer library technology needed. M.L.S. from ALA accredited library school required. Salary commensurate with qualifications. Position available September 1, 1977. Deadline for application: March 31, 1977. Send letter of application with curriculum vitae and names of three references to: Dr. Helen A. Padykula, Chairperson, Librarian Search Committee, Office of the Dean of the College, Wellesley College, Wellesley, MA 02181. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHWEST

UNIVERSITY OF Oklahoma announces the following positions: 1) Assistant reference librarian. Duties include responsibility for operations of the current periodicals room and supervision of clerical and student assistants. Partial responsibility for reference service including library orientation, instruction in the use of the library, compiling bibliographies and study guides and some interlibrary loan services. The Master's degree in library science from an ALA accredited program is required, and library experience, preferably in public services is desirable. Professional flexibility, the ability to work with a diverse clientele, and supervisory skills are also very important. 2) Assistant serials cataloger. Duties include full cataloging of serials in LC classification and daily revision of public catalog filers under the direction of the serials cataloger. The Master's degree in library science from an ALA accredited program is required, and working knowledge of at least one foreign language is essential. Russian would be especially useful. Familiarity with OCLC would be beneficial but not necessary. 3) Business-economics librarian. Duties include reference and other public services in business, economics, and home economics. Coordination of book selection in the three areas, supervision of one FTE library assistant and student assistants. The Master's degree in library science from an ALA accredited program and at least a Bachelor's degree in business or economics are required. Library experience is desirable. Professional flexibility and the ability to work with a diverse clientele are also very important. 4) Western history librarian. Duties include reference and other public services in the library division of the western history collection, assisting the curator in book selection and supervision of student assistants. Master's degree in library science from an ALA accredited program and at least a Bachelor's degree in history with a specialization in the history of the American southwest or a closely related area are required. Library experience is desirable. Professional flexibility and the ability to work with a diverse clientele are also very important. The minimum salary for 12 months for each of these positions is $9,500 and it is anticipated that they will be filled at the opening level. All these positions carry full academic status and privileges including faculty rank, 21 days annual leave plus academic holidays, free hospitalization and life insurance, state retirement plan, and TIAA-CREF. Letters of application, résumés, and names and addresses of references should be submitted by April 15, 1977 to: James K. Zink, Director of University Library, University of Oklahoma, 401 West Brooks, Norman, OK 73019. The position for which application is being made should be indicated. The University of Oklahoma is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

LIBRARY SYSTEM Director wanted. M.L.S. degree. Salary from $15,000. Responsible for library program in 6 county area. 13 community libraries, rural books-by-mail service. Land of mountains, lakes and forests. System is organized into supervisory/management regions because of geographical extremes. Supervisory and administrative experience. Budget: $310,000. Staff: 50 full and part-time. Duties: budget, programming, in-service training, project proposals and preparation to sustain an informed 18 member board. Send résumé and reference to: Bill Strain, Director, Choctaw Nation Multi-County Library System, 401 North 2nd, McAlester, OK 74501.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHWEST

DIRECTOR, Brazoria County Library System. Responsible for administration & development of county & library system consisting of central library, 8 branches, bookmobile, & staff of 44 serving 130,000 population. Formulate annual & long-range plans of service including grant-funding proposals. Required: M.L.S. From ALA accredited school, & 5 years' public library experience including administrative. Experience in PR & building planning preferred. Salary $18,000. Contact: County Judge, E. E. Brewer, Brazoria County Court House, Angleton, TX 77515.

POSITIONS OPEN—NORTHWEST

COUNTY LIBRARIAN: Applications are invitied for the position of county librarian for Laramie County Library System, Cheyenne, Wyoming. Population 75,000; 107,000 volumes; 3 branches and 2 bookmobiles. Applications accepted until April 15, 1977; position vacant June 1, 1977. Applicants should have a Master's degree in library science from an ALA accredited library school, plus 5 years' progressively responsible public library administrative experience. Salary negotiable. Liberal fringe benefits. Application, with résumé, and transcript should be made to: Andrew S. Pappas, Chairman, Board of Directors, 1500 E. 22nd St., Cheyenne, Wyoming 82001.

POSITIONS OPEN—NATIONWIDE

LIBRARY SALESPEOPLE. Long-established publisher with good lines of reference books seeks commission people for direct sales to libraries and schools. Excellent commission. Protected territory. In reply, please state publishers you now represent, and include personal names to whom we can apply to for reference. Box G 96.

POSITIONS OPEN—OVERSEAS

MEDICAL LIBRARIAN, Senior Assistant Librarian Grade 1. The University of Papua New Guinea (Port Moresby). Applications are invited for the position of medical librarian. The successful applicant will be responsible to the university librarian for the organization and management of the medical library branch. Applicants should possess a university degree, a professional qualification in librarianship and appropriate experience, and will be required to take up the position as soon as possible in 1977. Salary: K9,854-K13,528 per annum, in addition, an allowance of K1,300 per annum if single is payable. An extra K1,000 marriage allowance and K156 per child child allowance may also be payable. Applications should include detailed curriculum vitae, a recent small photograph and the names and addresses of three referees. Previous applicants need not re-apply as their applications are already on file. Conditions include provision of housing, annual leave fares and FSSU superannuation, and may include provision of study leave. Further details and the conditions of appointment are available from the Secretary, Box 4820, University P.O., Port Moresby, Papua New Guinea, with whom applications close on April 29, 1977.

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS

Abingdon Press	717
Addison-Wesley Publishing Co.	715
Arco Publishing Co.	720
Baker & Taylor Co.	667
Berkshire Traveller Press	705
R. R. Bowker Co.	644, 656, 657-664 670, 674, 693
The California State University and Colleges	697
Comprehensive Video Supply Corp.	671
Coward, McCann & Geoghegan	727 729, 731
Thomas Y. Crowell Co.	721
Current Co.	666
Dodd, Mead & Co.	726
Dow Jones-Irwin	703
F. W. Faxon Co.	671
G. K. Hall & Co.	652-655
Hawthorn Books	725
Hearst Books	647-650
Herald Press	718
Highsmith Co.	666
Holt, Rinehart & Winston	708
Houghton Mifflin Co.	722
Human Life Center	722
Hunter Publishing Co.	699
Imibooks Publications	715
Little, Brown & Co.	720, 723
3M Co.	2nd Cover, 641
McGregor Magazine Agency	672
Macmillan Co.	4th Cover
Marc Applied Research Co.	673
Petersen Publishing Co.	719
G. P. Putnam's Sons	699, 701, 727, 729
Rodale Press	708, 710, 723
Schocken Books	704, 707
Seabury Press	716
Simon & Schuster	731
Sitler's Supplies	672
Sleepy Hollow Restorations	711
Lyle Stuart	709
Universe Books	701
University Microfilms International	642 669, 676, 3rd Cover
University of North Carolina Press	707

Sales-Business Offices

NEW YORK:
R.R. Bowker Company
1180 Avenue of the Americas
New York, New York 10036
Dominick Ciarletti 764-5246
Carlton H. Thiele 764-5135
Business & Production Manager, Maureen J. Rose 764-3363
Classified Advertising Manager, Frieda Johnson 764-3362

MIDWEST:
Walter Freed and Associates, Inc.
1720 Algonquin Road
Mount Prospect, Illinois 60056
Walter Freed 312 593-5255

WEST:
James K. Levitt and Associates, Inc.
13208 Saticoy Street
North Hollywood, California 91605
John Bolduc 213 875-1517

SOUTH:
Metropolitan Publishers Representatives, Inc.
2045 Peachtree Road, N.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30309
Marvin Arnsdorff 404 352-2173

If you work with children's books... use SCHOOL LIBRARY JOURNAL to work with you.

SLJ reviews over 85% of all books published for children and young adults. It's the one and only magazine that serves your special needs. Best news of all, the cost is only $13.00 for a year's subscription, and we'll gladly bill you later. To start service, simply send your name and address to:

SLJ SCHOOL LIBRARY JOURNAL
1180 AVENUE OF THE AMERICAS
NEW YORK, N.Y. 10036

3/15